so faithfully served have our sympathy. You will miss his kind and mature counsel and advice. Will you remember it all now, and not forget it, and live according to it? May the Lord help you to do so, is our humble prayer. So many of our loved ones and dear friends are passing away. But it will not be long until the time shall come that we hope to meet them in that better country. May the Lord help us, and may He send true and faithful servants to fill the ranks as they are thinned out by the passing away of those faithful ones who have been called home to that better land.

Merry Christmas

---December 24, 1931

You are now reading the fifty-second issue of The Primitive Baptist for the year 1931. About one thousand and four hundred letters during the year from home folks. Some of these letters have been of praise to our heavenly Father, some instructive and wonderful messages from His bountiful storehouse, some of grief and sorrow. All of which reminds us, "Mixtures of joy and sorrow, daily we pass through." Yet, after all, if we would stop and count a few of our blessings, we have much to be thankful for. All of us have drunk the dregs of the great financial depression throughout our country. Even yet the old saying holds true: "From the day you were born till you ride in a hearse, things are never so bad that they couldn't be worse." Let us try to forget the heartaches and sorrows of 1931 and press on, ever looking unto Jesus and the merciful Father, our All in All. Merry Christmas to all. Mrs. C. H. C.

---December 24, 1931

This issue of The Primitive Baptist closes the forty-sixth volume of the paper. With the close of the volume comes the close of another year. We are all one year nearer to our eternal home than we were one year ago. During the past year many of our brethren and sisters and kind friends have been called to their long sought home. There have been many sorrows, trials and conflicts during the past year. Much suffering has been endured by many. Yet we have much to be thankful for. Many who were without food and feed stuff now have a bountiful supply for another year. Yet we know that money matters are close. Sometimes during the year we could not see how we could possibly pull through the year and meet expenses and keep the paper going out every week in its full size. Many other papers skipped a number of issues, and many others came out only half size. So far we have not missed an issue, nor has the size been reduced. Besides, we promised just fifty-one issues per year when we made the paper a weekly again, but this year you get fifty-two issues, as there are fifty-three Thursdays in this year. So, as there are fifty-three Thursdays in 1931, there will be no paper next week. We have had a "hard pull" for the last two years. Everything still looks dark and gloomy to us. But, the Lord willing, we hope to greet our readers again in the issue for January 7, 1932. Until then, farewell; and please do remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 47

---January 7, 1932

With this issue we begin the publication of the forty-seventh volume of The Primitive Baptist. During the past forty-six years there have been many changes. There have been "wars and rumors of wars;" there have been earthquakes and famines and pestilences. It seems that crime has been on the increase-especially during the past few years. Graft and wickedness seem to prevail in high places-as well as low. Business enterprises are going bankrupt; taxes are on the increase; city, county, state and national governments seem to be on the very verge of bankruptcy. It seems to us that upon very slight provocation, under existing conditions, there might be a mighty and wholesale overthrow and crumbling of governments. It seems, too, there is still a great spirit of unrest in religious circles. Graft and wickedness not only prevail in matters of state, but also in religious circles. Crime and wickedness are winked at and condoned and hidden and wrapped up. It is a wonder to us that the Lord is so good as to let this old world continue to stand. Surely He is longsuffering. The drouth in 1930 and the shortage of crops were distressing. People had been living too fast. In 1931 bountiful crops were made, and farmers have plenty to eat and to feed on for another year or more. Yet there are cries of distress all over the land, as well as all over the civilized world. It seems that starvation is staring millions of people in the face-and that, too, in the midst of plenty. The farmers can get very little for what they have to sell, or for their surplus crops. It seems that we have all forgotten God, and have been unthankful to Him for our many and wonderful blessings. The end is not yet. Covetousness and hoarding will not bring relief. But we must stop here along this line. We now begin a new year. We are still marching on nearer to the end of the tiresome and troublesome journey. We need new strength and courage to fight the battles which lie before us-if our life may still be spared. We desire to look to Him from whom all blessings come. We still see no reason why this paper should not continue to advocate the same principles which have been advocated through its columns during the past forty-six years. There is no reason we can see why there should be any change along that line. May the good Lord bless, sustain and keep us and all the readers, is our humble prayer. Please pray for us and help us all you can. C. H. C.

Biographical

---January 7, 1932

For some time we have been considering the matter of printing in The Primitive Baptist a picture of some of our ministers with a biographical sketch of each one. We have thought to put something like this in the paper at least once each month. We would like to have a picture and an article of this kind from one of our ministers in each issue of the paper, but the cost may be too much. Our companion has been attending to the details of this matter for us. So, now, here she comes to the editor, and says, "I want an article from you for the next issue of the paper to start this thing off. I already have the picture." Now, what can I do? I just cannot write a sketch of my life that will be worth a thing in the world to anyone-living or dead. I cannot go into detail regarding my "ups and downs." I need not recite the incidents, or accidents, or occurrences that have come to pass in my life. Since I have been connected with this paper in 1886, and since I united with the church in 1889, and since I was ordained to the work of the ministry in 1896, my life has been an open book. Many of the things I have witnessed and have been engaged in and have passed through are already matters of record. What must I do? What can I say? I am the oldest son, and the oldest child, of Silas Fleming Cayce. He was ordained to the work of the ministry November 9, 1878, by Elders Wm. Howard, N. G. Phillips and H. Gilbert. He began the publication of The Primitive Baptist January 1, 1886. He was the oldest son of James Hardy Cayce, who was a Primitive Baptist and the oldest son of Elder Fleming Cayce, a Primitive Baptist. If we have the record correct, Fleming Cayce was the oldest son of Shadrack Cayce, a Baptist-of the old sort; and he was the oldest son of J. F. Cayce, who was also a Baptist before the modern sort were born. We do not certainly know, but have reason to believe that he was a minister. I have in my possession a walking cane which belonged to J. F. Cayce, which has been handed down to the oldest son from generation to generation. It has been in the Old Baptist family all along, and in the hands of the oldest son each time. We trust it may be the will of the good Lord that it may still be handed down in the same way to generations following. My mother was Flora Magdalene Beasley, a daughter of Elisha Beasley, who lived and died about Clinton, Ky. He and grandmother Beasley were buried at Mil-burn, Ky. According to what my dear old mother and father told me while they were yet living, I was born into this troublesome world on June 1, 1871, on a little hill in the town of Moscow, Ky. In the summer of 1879, I saw myself a ruined and condemned sinner in the sight of a just and holy God. I was just eight years old then; yet the agonies which I endured are fresh in my memory. Many times I heard father and mother praying for their poor boy; but their prayers did not bring peace to my soul. I tried reformation of life; but that gave no relief. Many times in secret, as well as in secret places, the very breathing of my poor heart went out in supplication to the God of all grace, begging Him to have mercy upon me, a poor sinner. I went thus bowed in sorrow and distress till about the spring or summer of 1885, perhaps just before I was fourteen years of age. One afternoon, though the sun was shining, yet all looked dark and gloomy to me. I went off to a secluded spot to try to pray one more time for mercy. It seemed that my pleadings for mercy were no better than mockery. I arose and started to the house. Before I got there I looked toward the sun, as it was just above the western tree tops. It seemed to me that I was there sinking into eternal despair-that I would never see the sun rise again. In my heart I felt to say, "Farewell; before you rise in the east in the morning, I will be suffering the vengeance of eternal torment." As I turned to take another step toward the house the burden was gone. I did not know how nor where it went. I felt to be at perfect peace and perfect ease. I then thought to go to the house and tell mother what a blessed Saviour I had found, but something seemed to whisper, "You might be deceived, and you might deceive her." Then I began to beg, "Lord, if deceived, undeceive me." "Lord, what shall I do?" Then the impression came to be baptized and to proclaim the riches of His grace. I tried many times to get that old burden back again, so I might know how and where it went. But I was never able to get back into that condition any more. Since that memorable day I have had many sore trials and conflicts, but the sweet hope I there received in the crucified and risen Redeemer has never yet been entirely obliterated. True, sometimes it seems that the evidences I have are so little and so dim that I can hardly claim that I have a sweet hope in Jesus; but in all the sorrows and heartaches and distresses through which I have come, it has been sweet and precious to me. I would not give it now for all this poor world. On the second Sunday in August, 1889, I went to the church in Greenfield, Tenn., and told them some part of the reason of my hope and asked for a home with them. I confessed my sins, as did those who went to John for baptism. I remember how that they kindly took me into their sweet fellowship, with tears freely flowing down their cheeks. I did not tell them of any impression I had to try to speak in public. I thought perhaps that might leave me. The home and place they gave poor me with them was delightful to me. That dear old church and place will be precious in my memory as long as I retain the faculties of my mind. No matter where I may go, nor where I may roam, that dear old church, and those precious loved of God, who so kindly gave me a resting place with them, will be precious in my memory. On Thursday before the second Sunday in September, 1889, a dark and cold and cloudy and gloomy day, the church assembled at the water-a pond near the town of Greenfield-and my sainted father led me and my sister (Meda, who passed away in May, 1911) down into the water and laid us beneath the yielding wave. When he raised me up from under the wave, the clouds overhead were divided and the sun shone brightly over the scene. There I left a burden which I have never felt since. Once more sweet peace and joy filled my poor soul. When I turned my eyes toward the congregation on the bank, it was seemingly as glorious to me as though the very gates of heaven had been thrown open wide, and the angels had been beckoning me home to glory. Many times in my sorrows and heartaches my mind goes back to that time, and I yet sometimes feel a consolation in meditating upon that scene and that time, and the sweet feeling I then enjoyed. I may never reach that heaven of eternal rest beyond, but I had a little taste of heaven there. It may be that all the heaven I will ever enjoy is what little rejoicing I get here in this life-but I still want to seek that peace and ensue it, even if there should be no hereafter. On Saturday night, January 4, 1890, I made my first effort to speak in the name of Jesus. That was at the home of a Brother Morris in Wayne County, Tenn. A few years back I was passing that place with my dear wife and children. We stopped and I took a look at the place, and my mind went back in meditation. It was solemn to me. On Saturday before the second Sunday in October, 1890, the church at Greenfield liberated me to speak in the name of the Master at any place my lot might be cast. Sometime after this, circumstances making it more convenient for us, our whole family moved our membership to the church at Ralston. On the sixth day of December, 1896, I was ordained to the work of the ministry at and by the authority of this church. The presbytery was composed of Elders W. W. Sammons, S. F. Cayce and K. M. Myatt, and Deacons W. I. Tucker and T. P. Rawls. These were all precious and dear servants of the Lord to me. They are all gone now to that better home beyond, but I hold them in sweet and precious memory. I loved them all. I love their memory yet. I have traveled many miles, by day and by night, through heat and through cold, to try to tell the Lord's humble poor of the riches of the Master. I have tried to "count all things as loss" to try to serve the Lord and His people. I am well aware that I have made many mistakes. I have had many trials to endure. Some of the hardest trials a poor mortal could be called on to endure have been mine. When I now look back I feel that I have been able to accomplish so little that it seems my life has been almost, if not altogether, in vain. I am now past sixty-older than many of my ancestors lived to be. I realize that I am now nearing the end of the journey. My trials and troubles will soon be over. I no longer look forward to joys and pleasures in this life. I find myself now sometimes looking forward to joys beyond the river of death, beyond the grave. How will it be with me when I reach the end of the way? I do not know; but that sweet hope still lingers, and is dear to me as I pass on nearer to the end. When mother passed away she said, "Son, I will meet you over yonder in that better home." I said, "Mother, I do not know that I will be there, but I hope so." I am still hoping. Sweet hope; precious hope; glorious hope. Will it fail me in the end? It will not be long until I shall try it. I am willing, I trust, to risk it. Now, I must quit. Perhaps I have written too much. Please throw the mantle of charity over and around me, and please do remember poor me and my dear loved ones in your prayers. Will you love and cheer and care for my dear companion and children when I am gone- the dear good woman and children who have helped me to bear the many burdens for the cause of the Master? C. H. C.

Things Appreciated

---January 7, 1932

We (Elder Cayce and I) wish to thank each one who so kindly remembered us with Christmas greetings. The kind words of encouragement, the many wishes for our happiness, and invoking the Lord's blessings upon us and ours, and the tokens of love are highly appreciated. The many words fitly spoken to Elder Cayce are as "apples of gold in pictures of silver;" make him feel perhaps his efforts in his Master's service have not all been in vain. A number of you are taking advantage of the Great Subscription Offer. This offer has been extended. We trust many will take advantage of this great offer. We wish to buy enough paper to do during this year. Had we not done this last January we do not know what the outcome would have been. The object in making this Great Offer is to buy enough paper now to do during 1932. By having the paper in our office we believe that we can keep the paper a weekly. We want it to keep going each week. Some of our ministers and members are trying to get the paper in each home of the membership of their church. We think that is a good plan. We believe that each reader will be benefited in some way by reading the paper. In this paper you see Elder Cayce's picture and biographical sketch. In February fourth paper we will have Elder Webb's picture and biographical sketch; in March third, Elder Newman's picture and biographical sketch. We intend to have a biographical sketch and picture in the paper once each month this year. We would like to have one each issue. The cost in getting the plates made makes us fear to try to have a picture in each issue. Will you tell your brethren, sisters and friends about this new feature, so they will send in their subscription so as not to miss any copies? We trust that you will continue to write for the paper. Please do not ask us to publish church trouble. If our own fleshly brothers or sisters err, we want to keep that to ourselves, and talk about it as little as possible. Then should not we be more cautious, and not broadcast the faults of our kindred in Christ? Write of your good meetings; of the mercies and wonderful love of our God. Praise Him in words and actions. Make your articles short and to the point. Many ask concerning Elder Cayce's health. For the last several months his health seems much improved. His general condition is much better. However, he is now (January 1) confined to his room with a slight attack of flu. Our wish for you is that the year 1932 will bring you and me closer to God, and that you may bask in the sunlight of His love and mercy. Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

The Outlook

---February 4, 1932

We feel that it is due our readers that we tell them frankly what the prospect is now for us to be able to continue sending The Primitive Baptist out weekly during this year. During the last two years our subscription list has fallen off considerably, and unless our subscribers put forth extra effort right now and send us a lot of new subscribers we do not see how we are going to be able to continue the paper as a weekly through this year. We must raise enough money to meet a few outstanding bills and to buy enough paper to run through the year, if we continue as a weekly- and we must do this immediately, or within the next few weeks. Right now is the time we have to make our plans for the year -and then we have to work through the year according to those plans-unless we are able to do better or have to do worse, as unforeseen circumstances may require. Surely most of our subscribers could take advantage of the offer that is running in the paper. Surely many of our subscribers could get some new subscribers at one dollar for this one year-just half price for the paper. Will each one of you go to work right now and see what you can do during the month of February? What you all do this month will, in all probability, decide as to whether the paper may be sent on as a weekly during this year. Will you help us to continue it weekly? C. H. C.

Elder Hutchens Complains

---February 18, 1932

In the Lone Pilgrim (Lone Pilgrinder, as Brother Copeland calls it) Elder Hutchens, the editor, makes some complaint against a number of his subscribers. In the January issue he says: "As stated sometime ago, I have sent each subscriber who was in arrears a statement of their account. Less than half of them have answered this statement. I must say I cannot understand why so many will not answer. If I owed you, what would you expect me to do when you wrote me about it? Ignore you entirely, or tell you if I could not pay?" Well, Brother Hutchens, according to your doctrine, it is very evident that the Lord absolutely predestinated and fixed in eternity that you should send those statements out, and that less than half of them should answer. Of course, if your doctrine is the truth, God absolutely predestinated from eternity that those subscribers should be in arrears, and that they should not pay you. They could not help getting in debt to you, according to your doctrine; and then they could not help not paying you, because, according to your doctrine, God absolutely predestinated from all eternity that they should do that way. Of course, according to your doctrine, the reason why they will not answer is because God predestinated that they should not do so. We do not see why you cannot understand that-it is as simple and plain as can be. If God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated from all eternity everything that comes to pass, and unalterably fixed that all things come to pass just as they do come to pass, then God unalterably fixed that those persons should not answer your statements. But he says he cannot understand why they do not answer. Evidently he does not understand the doctrine he says he believes. It seems to us that if he believes what he says he does he would understand just why everything is the way it is. He says he believes God predestinated and fixed everything to be just as it is. If He did, then He predestinated and fixed that his subscribers should not answer his statements, and that is the reason why they do as they do. Of course. But Elder Hutchens says he cannot understand it. Of course not-who could? Elder Hutchens also says: "If each one had paid their subscription promptly I could have kept the paper in book form, and 64 pages." Certainly. But according to his doctrine, it is evidently true that God unalterably fixed it in eternity that he should not continue his paper in book form, "and 64 pages." Why complain at the subscribers about it? God is the one who so fixed and arranged and predestinated it, and now Elder Hutchens is complaining at what he says he believes. But he is complaining at the ones who had nothing whatever to do with the fixing of it, and who could not help the way it is fixed, nor could they change it if they were to try. But according to the doctrine advocated by Elder Hutchens, they could not even try, because if God fixed it that they should do what they do, then He must have also fixed it that they should not do any other way-He so arranged and fixed it that they should not even try to do any other way. If we believed as Elder Hutchens says he does, and he owed us something, and we should write him about it, we would expect him to do just as God has absolutely fixed and predestinated and arranged for him to do. That is the way your subscribers have done-if your doctrine is the truth. Elder Hutchens also says: "I cannot continue to send the paper to those who are behind indefinitely. So there must be something done about it, and to you who have not written me, I ask what you expect me to do?" We did not know that subscribers for a paper who are in arrears ever get behind indefinitely. We suppose Elder Hutchens means that he cannot continue to send the paper on indefinitely to those who are behind. Of course he cannot, unless it should be so that God has absolutely fixed and predestinated that he should do so -and in that case we are inclined to think he would do so, whether he can or not! But he asks those who have not written to him what they expected him to do. Of course, if they believe as Elder Hutchens says he does, they expect him to do just as God did in eternity predestinate, fix, and arrange for him to do. He thinks that honesty would suggest that if they cannot pay him they would write and tell him so. Then, if they do not write and tell him they cannot pay, they are not honest. But if God so predestinated and fixed that they should do that way, then God fixed it that they should not be honest. Then God is "accessory" to the fact! They would have been honest, and would have paid the elder, if God had so arranged in eternity for it to have been that way; but He arranged it to be as it is! Therefore, the dishonesty and the stealing and lying comes from God's arrangement and fixing! That's their doctrine! C. H. C.

Did Not Like It

The Primitive Baptist:

Your paper came to me some time ago, and I felt glad and thought I enjoyed reading it, insomuch I wrote a few lines of thanks for the same. So much was said about peace, I felt maybe the Lord was working through you all for peace. But, alas, when February 18 reached me and I saw how Mr. Cayce bounced on Elder Hutchens, even throwing slugs at the name of his paper, I read the piece through, and, I am sorry to say, I saw nothing like a sheep hunting a quiet pasture, but, instead, a wolf, ready to bounce on anything that is food for his pen. So I am sorry this confidence I had in you all working for peace is so soon killed. So please stop the paper. I do not care for the family to read it. Yours, H. H. Phillips. Ladell, Ark.
REMARKS

All right, Brother Phillips. According to Elder Hutchens' doctrine, we could not help it-we had to say what we did say-and you can't help it either. There is no peace to be had with the doctrine Elder Hutchens advocates. Many good brethren have been blinded and deluded by such teaching but we are glad to work for peace with any who are ready to abandon that doctrine. C. H. C.

Thirty Missionaries Waiting To Go

---April 28, 1932

We are in receipt of a clipping from a paper called The Other Sheep, which reads as follows: Thirty missionaries waiting to go to the needy fields. Why cannot they go? No money. Twelve fields calling frantically for reinforcements. No help can be sent. Why? No money. Ten missionaries who ought to be furloughed home. They cannot come. Why? No money. Ten thousand souls waiting for the salvation of Christ. It cannot be carried to them. Why? No money. Souls moving toward hell; the workers in foreign lands too few to rescue them; the missionaries at home anxious to go, yet cannot do so. Why? Lack of money. Is the money here in America? Yes. Why will not our people give it? Lack of deep interest. Sixty thousand Nazarenes omitting one meal a week for a year, at a cost of 20 cents a meal, would, if that small amount were devoted to missions, send in $600,000 in a year. Don't say "we cannot," but say rather "we will not." Poor missionaries! It is so bad that they want to go to the fields-that they are so anxious to go-and stop some of those souls who are so fast moving toward hell, and yet they cannot go. "Why? NO MONEY." What a pity that salvation is so scarce. Why is salvation so scarce now? "No money." We wonder if anybody had salvation before money was invented. Just think! The depression has been on now since 1929. The common people, and people generally, have no money. The poor "Nazarenes," as well as other poor, many of them, no doubt, have to miss more than one meal a week, even if that meal would cost no more than ten cents-and yet no salvation! What a pitiful plight we are in! If such as the above is the fact in the case, it looks to us as though the whole combined world is on the downward road to an eternal hell-and that all are going at lightning speed. The great majority have no money to give, and not many meals, either; the few who have the money are hoarding it, and will not give it, and will not turn it loose so that others might give it. The poor benighted heathen rushing toward an endless hell-and they are utterly helpless to stop; and God Himself cannot stop them. They are all going to hell on account of the fact that a few are hoarding the money. If the throne of God shines forth in justice in the ages of eternity, and the above effusion is the truth, then these hoarders, and those who will not give, will all be landed in hell with the benighted heathen. It is absurd to say that the poor heathen will suffer in an endless hell on account of this covetousness and stinginess of the American people, and the American people go free. The whole "fraternity" will go down to an eternal hell together. Thank the Lord, salvation is not hinged on such as that. "Ten thousand souls waiting for the salvation of Christ." "No money." Poor things. It seems that somebody has the salvation and the money, too. Why? Because, "Don't say 'we cannot;' but say rather 'we will not.'" There you are. If we say we cannot, then we lie, because we just "will not." Lord, help us! What blasphemy! Such as this is enough to make the angels blush! Did ever the devil himself invent a more deceitful and lying scheme to get money? It is no better than hijacking or bank robbery. It is nothing other than a scheme to beg money and to get money under false pretense. "For thus saith the Lord, Ye have sold yourselves for naught; and ye shall be redeemed without money." - ((2:3) (Isaiah 52:3)) "They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches; none of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him; (for redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth for ever;) that he should still live for ever, and not see corruption." -((9:6) (Psalms 49:6-9)). If these passages of Holy Writ do not prove that men and money have nothing whatever to do with the redemption and eternal salvation of sinners, then language does not mean anything at all. "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot: who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you, who by Him do believe in God, that raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God." -((Pet 1:18) (I Peter 1:18-21)). This tells the truth about the whole thing. Sinners are redeemed by the blood of Christ, and it is by Him that they believe in God; and it is by Him that they are saved. The works of men and their money are all left out of the work of salvation and deliverance from sin and its ruinous consequences. Your faith and hope are in God, and not in men and money. When will men cease to pervert the truth and to teach such blasphemous heresy? C. H. C.

Soupy Salvation

---July 7, 1932

There will be hundreds who shall appear in the Judgment who will bless Brother Cox for this wonderful work. Much of the money to carry on the work is now coming from those who have been saved at these free lunch services. We sometimes sing, "There is power in the blood," and there is, but there is power in SOUP to get men to the blood.-Ben M. Bogard, in Baptist and Commoner, June 24, 1932. If the above does not teach a "soupy salvation," then what does it teach? "Power in SOUP to get men to the blood!" If that were not so ridiculous it would be real funny! "There will be hundreds who will appear in the Judgment who will bless Brother Cox for this wonderful work." Wonder how Parson Bogard found that out? It is not in the Book. By revelation John saw the finally redeemed in heaven, and heard them singing. Wonder what they sang? Was it this: "Unto the name of Cox be glory, honor, majesty, might and dominion, because he brought salvation to us through the SOUP route?" But we suppose John did not know about the soup business. The Lord did not reveal to him the fact that sinners could be brought to the blood of Christ and made the recipients of the merits of that blood by pouring soup into their bellies-so it seems. Perhaps these modern fellows have taught the Lord something that He did not know when John was on the Isle of Patmos. If the Lord would give us another Book it would have all these modern "scientific" ways of getting sinners to the blood of Christ set forth in it -perhaps. Of course, until the Lord does give us another Book having such blasphemous tomfoolery in it, those of us who are "old-fogy," and who rely on the teaching of the Book God has given us, will have to still go on believing that the Lord does not need to have Cox, or Bogard, or others, to feed SOUP to people in order that He reach them with the blood of Christ. It seems to us that a man can get to the blood of Christ just about as easy through the water of baptism as though a bowl of SOUP. If this does not put things together "for your whiskers," we never saw it done! SOUP and salvation connected together! Get salvation down the poor fellows by feeding it to them in their soup! Several years ago, at the time of the Boxer uprising in China, the missionaries in that country called for help from the "home lands" asking for their soldiers to be sent to China. We suppose they wanted the soldiers to subdue the unwilling Chinese; and if they would not be subdued, then shoot holes through them to let in the light of the gospel, or to shoot salvation into them with their guns. Of course that would be a severe way of saving those heathen Chinamen. But over in Memphis, Tenn., according to Mr. Bogard, the Rt. Rev. Mr. Cox, D. D., has a more humane way of saving the "down and outers." Mr. Cox just feeds salvation to them in their SOUP. We have been aware, for years, that properly made and prepared soup was pleasant to the taste, and was good to fill the stomach-but, wonder of wonders!-here is a new use for soup! Feed 'em SOUP, and thereby give 'em eternal salvation and save 'em from eternal perdition! What will these fellows say next? C. H. C.

The Lone "Pilgrinder"

---September 15, 1932

The "Lone Pilgrinder" has suspended publication, having been consolidated with "Sovereign Grace," a paper recently being published in California. We note in that paper for August this statement, in part: "Because of financial conditions of the Lone Pilgrim Elder Hutchens has seen fit to combine our two papers. A more detailed article will appear (D. V) in the September No." From this notice it seems that the "Pilgrinder" will grind no more pills. We saw some complaints in the "Pilgrinder" before it suspended publication about the subscribers not paying up. We suppose, according to their doctrine, that God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated from all eternity that the subscribers should take the paper and not pay for it, and that Elder Hutchens should complain about it, and that the said paper should suspend publication. Brother Hutchens, you have our sincere sympathy, and may the good Lord have mercy on all who advocate such doctrine. C. H. C.

Remarks To Geo. W. Langford

We are of the opinion that sometimes people may lay too much stress on some of the exercises mentioned by Brother Langford in the foregoing article. A Christian experience does not necessarily mean that the person agonizes for perhaps months or years, and then has a miraculous deliverance from his troubles. One does not have to have such an experience and be able to remember and tell all about it in order to be a child of God, or to be born from above. To be a child of God is to have been born of God, born from above. Brother Langford, you do not remember when you were born into this natural realm. The very first natural thought or emotion you ever had, you had already been born into this natural realm. Natural emotion springs from the natural life. Spiritual emotion springs from the spiritual life. Just as sure as you have ever had a spiritual emotion, just that sure you already had the spiritual life. You may not remember when you were born into the spiritual realm any more than you can remember when you were born into the natural realm. Remembering and knowing these things is no more necessary in the one case than in the other. John the Baptist was given to leap for joy by the overshadowing of the Holy Spirit before his natural birth into this world. Brother Langford, do you suppose John the Baptist could tell such an experience as some tell in their writings? We are sure he could not. But he could love the Master and could love the truth and righteousness just as well as the Apostle Paul could. And he was a child of God, and heaven was his home; all the joys of heaven are his. God is as able to regenerate an unborn infant as an adult, and to plant His love in their hearts. He regenerated John the Baptist before he was born into this world. So with one of the prophets. When the children of Israel were delivered from Egyptian bondage there were many men able to bear arms, besides women and children, brought to the Red Sea. The enemy was in pursuit, and there seemed to be no way of escape. The sea was before them, and a mountain on either side. They were entirely hedged in. The Israelites began to complain at Moses, and to say, "Why did you not leave us in Egypt to die, where we might have had graves to be buried in? Why did you bring us into the wilderness to die?" Moses answered, "Stand still, and see the salvation of God; for the enemy that thou seest today, thou shalt see no more forever." Then Moses stretched his rod over the waters and they were divided, and the Israelites marched through as by dry land. The waters went back together and drowned the Egyptians who had essayed to follow. Then the children of Israel sang the song of deliverance on the other side of the sea. They journeyed forty years in the wilderness before they crossed over Jordan into the promised land. When they had journeyed thirty years in the wilderness those who were in their infancy and in their mother's arms when they reached the Red Sea were grown to manhood and womanhood. They could not remember when they came to the Red Sea; they could not remember the complaint made to Moses; they could not remember seeing the enemy in pursuit; they could not remember seeing the waters divided; they could not remember the march through the sea; they could not remember the song of deliverance on the bank of the sea-they could not remember any of these things and tell about them. But there was something they could do. They could praise God for their deliverance just as well as those who could remember those things and tell all about them. They could love the Lord as well as the others could. So, you, dear brother, if you cannot remember and tell all about these things-you can love the Lord as well as those who can tell the things you speak of them telling. Do you love the Lord? This is an unmistakable evidence for you that you are born from above-heaven-born and heaven-bound. "Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." - (I John 4:7). Do you love the Lord's children? This is the very best evidence one can have that he is a child of God. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." - (I John 3:14). Does the gospel come to you in power, and in much assurance? "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God. For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." - ((Th 1:4) (I Thessalonians 1:4-5). How much better evidence do you want than these? May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you. C. H. C.

---December 22, 1932

This issue closes the forty-seventh volume of The Primitive Baptist. Another year is drawing to a close -and another New Year will soon usher in. The passing year has been one of much distress. Thousands are suffering for food and shelter, and yet we are in the midst of plenty. Our legislative authorities are dillydallying in matters which concern money lenders and the money powers, instead of doing the things necessary to open up markets for our surplus products, and thereby give relief, and open work for the poor producers and unemployed. Crime is still on the increase. Governments-county, state and national-are on the verge of bankruptcy. Many of the professed followers of the lowly Jesus are careless and indifferent about the service of the Lord. They let the service of the Lord and the things which concern their spiritual welfare and well-being come in as a matter of the last and least concern. Many of them "cannot afford" a few pennies for reading matter for their spiritual comfort and benefit-but do they let worldly matters be of more concern? Should we economize in church and spiritual matters first? Or, should that be the last? Well, things still look dark and gloomy to us in many respects. But with us the battle will soon be over. We have been "in the field" a number of years now, and the end of this present year is just one more year's battles fought, trials endured, sorrows ended, and difficulties surmounted or gone around, and brings us that much nearer to an honorable discharge from the warfare. Our wife has been confined to her room and bed with an attack of flu for a little more than a week, but is now better and able to sit up some. Please remember her and us in your prayers. There will be no paper next week, as we always skip one week at Christmas time. We now bid you all adieu for the year 1932, praying the Lord's richest blessings may rest upon every reader, and desiring an interest in your prayers when you go to the throne of grace. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 48

---January 5, 1933

We now begin the forty-eighth volume of The Primitive Baptist. We are facing another new year, with its joys and sorrows, its pleasures and disappointments. We need renewed energy and strength for the battles of life, just as much as we ever did. Although these are trying times-such times as try men's souls-yet we have all been wonderfully blessed. Our hearts should be filled with gratitude and thankfulness to God that matters are as well with us as they are. We have been blessed to send this paper out during the past year without missing a single issue, and without reducing the size of the paper for any one issue. Just as we promised at the beginning of the year, we sent out 816 pages of reading matter during the year 1932. We cannot promise that for this year. Many of our subscribers during the past two years have had their names dropped from the list. Many have written us to stop their paper, as they were not able to pay for it. We wish we were able to give the paper to all who are really not able to pay for it, but we cannot do that. We do give it to many-a great many-and would be glad to give it to many more. When we have done all we can, we can do no more. If we have no subscribers for the paper during these hard times, we will have no paper to send out when times do get better-and they surely will get better some day. We do not believe that these hard times are altogether the work of Satan. We believe the Lord is suffering these times as a chastisement for some people. He scourges His people for their sins and wickedness, and He scourges nations for their wickedness. It seems that almost the entire civilized world is in distress-the depression is almost world-wide. When the chastisement has been sufficient then it will stop. We do not know when that will be. Do you? Let us try to trust the Lord and mend our ways. Let us all be more devoted to Him and to His service. Let us try to serve and help one another. He will not forsake His humble followers. "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." - (Psalms 37:1) and (II Corinthians 6:17), they excluded from their fellowship those guilty of immoral, unscriptural or disorderly conduct. They debarred or excluded from fellowship persons who sold spirituous liquors; those who drank to excess; those who borrowed money and did not repay it; those who married irreligious and disorderly companions; those who did not treat their companions with proper love and kindness; those who told lies; those who swore; and those guilty of unchastity. Upon thoroughly satisfactory proof of heartfelt repentance, the churches were rejoiced to restore excluded members again to fellowship. They silenced preachers for improper conduct which was not thought to be so gross as to demand their exclusion; and, upon proper repentance, restored to them the privilege of exercising their gifts in public.

Some of the churches observed the Lord's supper weekly, but most of them monthly. Singing was not commonly practiced; and when engaged in, it was only at the close of the meeting, so that all opposed to it could freely go out, and the church would not be offended. * * * A very few churches observed the washing of feet; but this was placed among the things indifferent, and was never made a bar to fellowship. Some churches had a love feast before the Lord's supper. On page 845 we find the following: As to feet washing-This appears to be an open question among Baptists, some approving and others disapproving the literal observance as a church ordinance or rite, and all getting along harmoniously together. * * * Some of the Kehukee churches have never observed it at all; others have occasionally observed it upon motion of someone in conference, and attended to it during some week day at the meetinghouse, or at some private house at night, and this at long intervals. Others observe it annually, and connect it with communion or the Lord's supper; while others repeat it quarterly, and in every instance connect it with communion, which almost invariably occurs on Sunday, after the preaching services are ended. In a footnote at the bottom of the same page Elder Sylvester Hassell says: It is the final result of all my researches among the Old School or Primitive Baptists of the United States that about one-half do, and one-half do not, practice the washing of feet as a church ordinance or rite. On page 846 we read: This irregularity, we must confess, shows more difference among orthodox Baptists than all other practices or observances adhered to by them put together. Some are ready to conclude on the account of this diversity that they are not one people; that they are divided and cannot walk together. But this is a wrong conclusion; they are one people still, and do not allow the observance or non-observance of this rite to affect their fellowship with each other. The churches composing the Kehukee Association will perhaps represent, on this subject, all the churches in the United States, some engaging in the practice of feet washing more or less, and others not at all. We conclude, therefore, if the discordant views on this subject have not broken fellowship among the dear children of God for the last hundred years, that they never will; and that the faithful in Christ Jesus will continue to press onward, hand in hand together, "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus," through the remaining portion of the Christian dispensation. It would be deplorable and contrary to ancient usage among Baptists if any one or more should at any time hereafter, on either side of the question, set up a bar of communion between themselves and those who differ with them on this subject. Such a dogmatical or dictatorial spirit should not be encouraged or even tolerated in the household of faith. It would look selfish and out of place. We would be glad if all our brethren could see this matter alike and all would engage in the practice of it. But it would look bad for us to set up a bar of non-fellowship against brethren who have been fellow-shipped and loved and esteemed in the Baptist family all the years of the past. We are not ready yet to say that we are "the standard," and that all must come to our view or be read out of the denomination. May the Lord lead us all to have forbearance and to love one another. C. H. C.

How To Organize

---October 19, 1933

We have been requested to say through the paper how churches should proceed to organize an association. As we understand the matter, there is not much to do. A church may invite sister churches to meet with her by messengers to consider the advisability of organizing an association. If the churches see proper to go into such an organization they may meet at a place and time agreed on for the purpose. The constitution, if they wish to have one, may be submitted to the several churches for their approval, with the articles of faith and rules of decorum. Then when they assemble for the constitution, they may adopt the constitution, articles of faith and rules of decorum which the churches have approved of, proceed to elect their officers and proceed with their business. It seems to us that this would be all that would be necessary. Some associations have too much of a constitution, we think. It seems to us that the different churches meeting by messengers with another church for mutual worship, and have as little business as possible, would be for the best. C. H. C.

Papers Missed

---November 30, 1933

Circumstances over which we had no control made it necessary for us to skip several issues of this paper. We failed to get out any paper for October 12 and 26 and for November 9. We have mailed the issue for November 19. This writing is being done the 21st. We will get out no paper for the 23rd. This writing will be in the issue of November 30. Circumstances are such that we will have to skip every other week for the remainder of the year. It is possible that we will have to continue on this way through next year. From the time that the NRA proposition began to be put before the public, we have been carefully studying its workings and the propositions for the codes, and so on. It soon became very plain to us that we could not observe the code and continue to publish The Primitive Baptist. Some of the requirements were such as to make it impossible for us to get the paper out weekly, as we had been doing, and to observe the code. The code required a reduction in work hours to forty hours per week for all employees. We were working the employees only forty-five hours per week. We were paying most every employee the same rate per hour that we paid in 1929. The only reduction we had made was a reduction in the number of hours per week to forty-five. As we had five employees, besides ourself and wife, a reduction in work hours to forty per week would leave us short twenty-five hours per week. The code also required a raise in the rate of pay on some of the employees. We were sure we could not get a printer to move here to live when we could give him only twenty-five hours work each week. This was a problem we saw facing us. This condition made it seem impossible to us to continue to get the paper out every week. So we have skipped the weeks as above stated. It is simply impossible for us to cut down the number of hours and increase salaries and continue to get the paper out. It could not possibly mean anything else but failure, and for the paper to go down. It caused us no little worry and anxiety. The only thing we could see to do was the one step we took. We laid off every employee after the issue for October 5 was mailed. Since then we have had our type set on a machine in an office in another town and your editor and wife have been doing the work of getting the paper out, except that a few times we have had Brother Webb to run the press and some others to help do the mailing. The editor and wife will have to get the paper out. We have been getting out another edition of the Good Old Songs, and have been giving the employees some extra work on that job. We have been working code hours and paying them what we understood to be the code price, though we have not signed any code. We saw no alternative only to put our work where the code would not apply. The owner may work as many hours as he pleases; but his hired help in the plant must work only eight hours a day and only five days a week. This is making the books cost us more than they would have cost us otherwise. We are sure that every employee we had would be glad to go back on the regular job at the same rate of pay they were getting; but we are afraid to do that. The government steps in and says we shall pay so much and work so many hours. If this is not dictatorship, then you may give it what name you please. It seems to us that the probabilities are that we will have to continue as we are doing next year—at least, for a part of the year. We are sorry this is so, but we see no other way now. Our subscription list has been falling off for three or four years. It is less now than it has been for years. Not only so, but we have been offering the paper at greatly reduced prices. Many of the subscribers have renewed at the price of only one dollar for the year. How in the world could we increase the pay to the employees, and reduce the price of the paper-or take subscriptions at reduced rates-and continue to send the paper out weekly? We feel sure that our subscribers will see the utter impossibility of us doing so. If those who have been working with us in the office are not employed elsewhere we would be glad to put them back to work as soon as conditions will permit. We regret to give any of them up from the work. But we have been forced to take this step by reason of the existing conditions. We trust the subscribers will bear with us, and all will put forth an extra effort right now to help us increase the list, and get it back to where it has been, so we can get back to a weekly again and put these people back to work in the office. And do not forget that your renewal and new subscriptions will be appreciated. C. H. C.

---December 28, 1933

This issue of The Primitive Baptist brings us to the close of another volume-volume forty-eight. For forty-eight years the paper has been published, without any suspension or change of hands or ownership, except from father to son. The way has sometimes been rough and rocky. There have been trials and conflicts, and many dark and dismal scenes. Yet in the midst of them all, the Lord has been good and kind and merciful; and by His help we continue to this day. There have been many changes during these years. Many changes have come even during the past year-the year that is now just drawing to a close. The future still remains dark. We cannot tell what the future holds in store for us. We trust that we can adopt the sentiment contained in this quotation from Paul: "And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there; save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." -((0:22) (Acts 20:22-24). The past few years have been severe. These are times that try men's souls. The "depression" has been as trying on us, perhaps, as on many others. We tried our best to keep the paper going weekly; but it finally came to where we could see no possible way to continue to do that. The NRA codes put requirements in them that we could not possibly meet or comply with and get the paper out every week. We have already made some explanation of that. The way things look to us now it seems that we will have to continue as we are now- sending the paper out every other week, or perhaps, twice a month. In connection with the increase in cost which compliance with the codes would bring us, our subscription list has continued to fall off for the past three or four years, and it is now less than it has been for twenty years. We have tried during the past year or two to hold the subscribers on the list at most any price they felt able to pay, and still they have continued to drop off the list. We have tried to be hopeful that things would be better, and we still hope-rather, we are wishing they be better. The next issue of the paper will be due January 11, 1934, when we hope to greet you with the beginning of another volume and in the new year. We wish for all our readers a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. May heaven's richest blessings be yours to enjoy, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 49

---January 11, 1934

We now begin the publication of the forty-ninth volume of The Primitive Baptist. The past forty-eight years have wrought many changes. Perhaps there are very few subscribers on our list now who were subscribers when the first issue was sent out from Fulton, Ky., by our sainted father. If there is one on the list now who was on the list then, we would be glad to hear from him. Let us hear from every one of you who were on the list then. Have you seen any change in the doctrine contended for in our columns now and then? Is the paper not advocating the same principles now that it was then? There have been great improvements in some things, but there has been no improvement in, or on, the doctrine of God our Saviour. The principles of truth are the same now that they have ever been. Why should we turn from those principles now? We greet you with renewed hope and trust and confidence in the Lord in this, the beginning of a new volume of The Primitive Baptist. Other things fail; but the Lord has never failed. All His precious promises are sure. Although there have been trying times during the past few years, yet the Lord has promised to never leave nor forsake. "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee." --(3:2) (Isaiah 43:2). This is God's promise, and it is as sure today as when it was first made. We have been passing through some trying times, but we feel that the Lord has preserved and kept us to the present. We feel that we are under renewed obligations to Him for His rich and wonderful blessings; and we are under renewed obligations to our subscribers for the help they have been in the past in supporting the paper. We have made mistakes in the past. We do not promise that we will do better in the future; but we will promise to try. We now promise to try to do more writing for the paper this year than last. We have had so much more good matter for the paper than we had space for, and still have many good articles that we do not have room for, that we felt like it would be better to give preference to the writings of others than to take space for our own poor writings. But many have asked us to write more ourselves. Well, we will try to do that this year. Now, brethren and sisters, we need your co-operation to make the paper what we desire it to be. The way we are having to work in the office ourselves to get the paper out, it is impossible for us to get out among the brethren and ask them to subscribe for the paper. Our brethren can be a great help to us in this way. Will you please not forget to ask the brethren and friends where you go to subscribe for the paper? Will you offer to take the subscription and send to us? We will appreciate this, and you have no idea how much help it would be. At present we will have to continue getting the paper out only every other week. We do not make this as a permanent change; but it is at present only temporary, and is the very best we can promise to do. As soon as circumstances will admit, and as soon as we can do so, it is our desire to again send the paper out every week. Please do all you can to help to that end, and remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Looking Backward

We suppose that when one begins to look backward he begins to go backward; he does things backward- begins at the wrong place and in the wrong way to get the thing done that he tries to do. So, here we begin this little article in the wrong way. It is all backward. Sometimes we wish we could never look backward. Then again we wish we could spend all our time looking backward. Jesus said, "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." --(62) (Luke 9:62). We have no desire to look back in that way. That is not the kind of looking back we sometimes desire to do. We do sometimes desire to look back and meditate upon some of the things we have experienced and some of the delightful seasons we have had in the journey through life. Many things we have experienced and many seasons we have passed through we wish we could forget. We have no desire to look back upon them or to meditate upon them. They bring sorrow and sadness to our poor heart. For about a year, or nearly a year, our wife has been wanting us to write a little article about the time and place when and where we made our first effort to speak in the name of the Master. We suppose we have to look back a little to do that. And we have made the start at last to comply with her request-and have begun backward-the wrong way. As evidence that we have begun in the wrong way we have given you evidence of how hard it is sometimes for her to get us to do what she wants us to do. Well, sometimes it just seems everything we go at is done in the wrong way. If you get nothing out of this, perhaps it will satisfy the good wife, who is always alert to look after our welfare, and who does everything in her power to help us along in our struggles. That is worth while-to give her satisfaction-if no other good comes from our little effort. She has our picture in this issue, made from a photograph which was taken when we were about eighteen years of age. We were eighteen years of age on June 1, 1889. If we are not mistaken the photograph was taken during the year 1889. Our first effort to speak in the name of the Lord was on Saturday night, January 4, 1890, at the home of an old Sister Morris, near Waynesboro, in Wayne County, Tenn. The ministers present were Elders S. F. Cayce, our sainted father, J. P. Pilkington, and M. L. Rhodes. Elder Pilkington is still living. At that time he lived near the home of the Sister Morris. We do not know what became of Elder Rhodes, but think he passed away several years ago. As most of our readers know, our dear father passed over the river in August, 1905. We believe there are very few living who were present there that night. In this paper is a picture of the old house where we made this first effort to preach. We stood in the corner of the room to the right. Notice the old-fashioned "porch." There is a hall between the two front rooms. Going into the hall, the service was held in the room to the right. We stood in the corner of the room between the window and the door into the hall. Notice in the picture the window near the shadow from the porch. We stood near that window. Our father and the other ministers were seated near that window. With great fear and trembling we arose to introduce the service and to try to speak. While we live and retain our memory we will not forget the song we selected and the text we tried to use. The song was a favorite with us then, and is yet. It was that good old song, which is always new, "Amazing Grace." The Scripture we read, and from which we tried to speak for a few minutes, was this: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." --(Eph. ii. 8, 9). The doctrine of salvation by grace was loved by us then, in our youth, and it is the doctrine we yet love. We realized and knew then that aside from salvation by grace there could be no salvation for us, and we yet know the same. We learned this in our youth-when about eight years of age; and, if not deceived, at about thirteen years of age, we were blessed with a good hope, through grace, that we would be enabled, prepared and permitted, by grace, to meet the dear Lord in peace beyond this life of sin and trouble. We were satisfied then with the doctrine of grace. We were satisfied with the goodness of God's house. We wanted nothing in the house of the Lord which He did not place there; and we wanted nothing left unused which He had placed there. We were satisfied with the church and her principles and practices then; and we are satisfied with them yet. There is a brother now living, who is a deacon indeed -a precious brother to us; a faithful and devoted member of Fuller's Chapel, in North Little Rock, a church we have been trying, to serve for several years-who was present at the home where and when we made this first effort. It is Brother G. L. Pilkington, a son of Elder J. P. Pilkington. He heard this first poor effort. He has heard us many times since at the little church in North Little Rock. When we made that first effort we thought we had ruined everything, and that we would never try again. We felt that this was not only our first, but that it was also our last. But we could find no peace or satisfaction without trying again. Much against our will in the matter the church at Greenfield, Tenn., liberated us on Saturday before the second Sunday in October, 1890, to exercise our gift at any place where God, in His providence, might cast our lot. If we remember correctly the motion was made by Brother J. W. Tillman (Uncle Joe, as he was familiarly called). He was a faithful and true man of God, and a faithful deacon. Brother F. M. Campbell was clerk of the church. We do not remember whether he had been ordained to the office of deacon at that time or not; but he has been a true Primitive Baptist, we think, and has filled the office of deacon well. Brother Tillman has long since gone to his long eternal home. Brother Campbell is still living and is still a member of the same old church. Not many who were living and members then are living now. Most of them are gone to a better country. Brother Campbell, we know you are older now than you were then. We are both getting old now. It will not be long until the battles and struggles and trials and conflicts will all be over. You will soon enjoy that sweet and eternal rest for which you have been hoping through all these years. We still love you, and you will have a warm place in our heart while this life lasts. May the good Lord manifest His sweet presence to you in your last days, is our humble prayer. We often think of the sweet delights we had in those days of the long ago. Sometimes there are a few of those days we wish we could live over again. Much of our life has been in sadness and trouble. We have no desire to live over that part of it. Well, we have written what we have written. If you get any good from it, you are welcome to it. May heaven's richest blessings rest upon each of you, is our humble prayer. The day is far spent. Will you all please remember us in your prayers? Pray the Lord to help us to remain true to the principles that characterized His church as being different from and not of the world when we made our first effort to speak in His precious and glorious name, and which have been the same in all ages of the world. C. H. C.

ANOTHER ARTICLE

In the same issue of the paper with the foregoing article was another article written by Brother G. L. Pilkington, who was then a deacon in Fuller's Chapel, North Little Rock, under the same heading. Wife had told him about the above article, and asked him to write some in connection with it, as he was present and heard our first discourse. Since January, 1934, Brother Pilkington has been ordained to the work of the ministry. Wife wishes his article to be in this book, following the above article; so we insert it here. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Elder C. H. Cayce:

My Precious Brother-Looking back over my life I sometimes wonder that I have not been consumed with its cares; and then I can truthfully say, as did one of old that "surely goodness and mercy hath followed me all the days of my life." I will not take up space in this letter to try to tell you of my travels from nature's night and darkness into the marvelous light of the children of God-if indeed I have ever traveled that road; but will say that there came a time in my life when I felt to be a poor lost and justly condemned sinner in the sight of God; felt that I had sinned away my day of grace, and that there was no hope in heaven and immortal glory for me. But, to my great joy, there also came a time in my life when this burden of sin was rolled away, and, if not deceived in the whole matter, Jesus was revealed to me as my personal Saviour, and I was enabled to rejoice in a Saviour's love. Since that time my hope has seemed so small at times that I would think of laying it aside and not claim it any more. But about the time I would get ready to cast it aside my mind would go back to the spot where I first felt that God, for Christ's sake, had pardoned my sins, and I would again be enabled to rejoice in the love of God my Saviour. So I have been first in the valley, then on the hilltop; in the valley, and on the hilltop all these years. But I would not exchange the sweet hope I have, which reaches beyond the grave, for all the wealth of this world. Looking backward I so well remember that while laboring under this great load of sin I heard you preach your first gospel sermon, to the joy of the children of God assembled for worship. No doubt you had preached in your mind before this. I know you remember the occasion better than I; but it was at the home of old "Grandma" (Polly) Morris, in Wayne County, Tenn., on Saturday night, January 4, 1890. Three Primitive Baptist preachers were present-your sainted father. Elder S. F. Cayce; my father, Elder J. P. Pilkington; and Elder M. L. Rhodes. I remember while you were so sweetly preaching Jesus how the tears of joy were running down the cheeks of those there assembled; and I remember thinking, "Oh, if I was as good as that boy." Dear brother, I can say something just here that no other living person can say-I heard your first sermon, and I heard your last, to date, which was Sunday, January 21, 1934, and you preached the same doctrine in your last sermon that you preached in your first, giving God all the power and all the glory for the eternal salvation of poor sinners, and admonishing those who are thus eternally saved to walk in humble obedience to the commands of their Lord and Master, thereby missing many pitfalls in this life. And by the power of those glorious truths you have preached, by the power of that God you have been proclaiming for over forty-four years, we will be brought from the grave, and be wafted on the wings of God's eternal love to that home where there will be no more sad partings. And when you have preached your last sermon, and prayed your last prayer, I know you can say, as did Paul, "I have finished my course; I have fought a good fight; I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day." I could write on and on, but will close by saying, may the Lord spare you many more years to speak, from pulpit and press, comfortably to Jerusalem; "cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned, and that she hath received at the Lord's hand double for all her sins." Written with a feeling of weakness and unworthiness, by one who dearly loves you for the truth's sake. Give our love to Sister Cayce and the children, and the brethren and sisters at Thornton. In humble hope, G. L. Pilkington. 1510 Chandler St., North Little Rock, Ark.

Going To The "Bowwows"

---January 25, 1934

When you hear an Old Baptist preacher talking as if he thinks the old church is going to the "bowwows," you can put it down in your book that he is getting ready to go somewhere himself. Such men usually "go to the dogs" themselves. Remember the case of Strickland, Hackleman, Todd, and the Kirklands. They went to the Missionaries. C. H. C.

Getting Mixed

---February 8, 1934

It seems to us that some brethren are getting some things rather mixed over east of the Mississippi River. It seems that nearly a year ago Elder W. A. Bishop introduced some practices into his church in Jackson, Tenn., which Primitive Baptists have never endorsed and have not been accustomed to, which resulted in his withdrawal, with some others, who met at Elder Bishop's home and organized a church on a more "liberal" plan. Some of the things objected to were the use of a Campbellite song book and a Sunday school. Of course, Elder Bishop and those with him did not call it a Sunday school. They never call the thing that when they first introduce it. It is usually called a Bible class, or some other name thought to be less offensive; but it always turns out to be the same fox. It appears from a clipping from the Weakley County Press, Martin, Tenn., of March 17, 1933, that Elder Cayce Pentecost, of Dresden, assisted in the organization of this church. A statement from Elder Bishop in a Jackson paper of March 20, 1933, says: The minority of the members that attended church brought certain charges against the majority and demanded that certain practices must be stopped and removed. The objections were set out as practicing Bible study at the church on each Lord's Day, singing religious hymns from a little song book called "Wonderful Songs," and passing the collection plates, when receiving the Lord's Day offerings. We were not satisfied to separate ourselves from these practices and rather than be in confusion and continue strife in the church we asked for letters of dismissal in order that we might organize ourselves into a church where we could worship our Lord according to the dictates of our own conscience and in the light of God's revealed word. This shows, of itself, what brought their trouble and the division. All people who know anything about Primitive Baptists know that they do not have Sunday schools, and that they are opposed to them. They are foreign to God's word, and the thing is an invention of men. The first Sunday school was instituted by Robert Raikes, in Gloucester, England, as all historians know, for the purpose of teaching the children of the poor to read and write. Some years later it was adopted by the churches of the world as a nursery for the church, and to teach and train children so that they might be made children of God-to bring them into a higher order of life by training and teaching. Some have claimed that they may be so taught from their infancy that they may never become sinners, but be saved without the necessity of regeneration on account of such training and teachings. The introduction of such a thing in the church is clearly a flagrant departure from the principles and practices of the Primitive Baptists. Well, from another Tennessee paper we see under date of August 1, that "Elder Harry Todd, the noted Dresden preacher, is preaching for the Primitive Baptist meeting at Greenfield. Also Elders Cayce Pentecost and A. B. Ross are to be present. Large crowds and fine interest." This item is dated from Brock's Chapel, August 1. We also have a clipping from a Tennessee paper stating that a Primitive Baptist revival will begin in Dresden, it seems, "on the fourth Sunday in August, and Elder Harry A. Todd, well known and popular evangelist, will assist the pastor." Another clipping, headed "Meeting at Palmersville," says that "the days of meeting at the Palmersville Primitive Baptist Church will begin the third Sunday in August. Elder Bishop, of Jackson, will assist the pastor, Elder Miller." Before we left Tennessee this church was not recognized as being an orderly Primitive Baptist Church-if this is the same church which was there when we left there, and we have not heard of it going down or being moved or getting in line with the churches in that section. That church was in line with the Kirklands in their departures from Primitive Baptist doctrine and practice. The Elder Todd is the noted Elder Todd who went to the Missionaries several years ago, along with the Kirklands, Strickland, Hackleman, and others. Instead of being restored where he lost his identity he was received by South College Street Church, Nashville, Tenn., and that church has been dropped from the roll of churches in the Cumberland Association on this account. We understand that Elder Harry has a son who was also with the Missionaries, and that he was also received by that church in Nashville. Wonder if he has been ordained yet? We understand that he is also a preacher. Elder Todd stayed with the Missionaries a long time. Wonder if he is satisfied now with the old doctrine and order of the Primitive Baptists. We see, also, that one of our exchanges still has the name of Elder Bishop on the editorial staff. Wonder if the editor approves of such a mixture as this? It seems to us that it is about time for somebody to call a halt. The Primitive Baptists, long ago, spoke out against these progressive measures. Such things are a departure from the order of God's house. If allowed to spread they will only cause the more trouble. It is strange to us that preachers will try to introduce such departures in the Old Baptist Church. If a man endorses such things it would be commendable for him to leave the Old Baptists and go where they are, and where they are endorsed, and then stay there, and let the Old Baptists alone. Why trouble them with such "progressive" measures? Why introduce such things among them as they have never practiced, and which they have always condemned? We wish the brethren would let such things alone, and let the old church go on in peace. Remember that when there is a division in the church that the party who is responsible for the division is the party who has the things that caused the division. Progressive measures and things foreign to the original doctrine and practice of the church being introduced by Wm. Carey and Andrew Fuller caused a division then, and from those measures sprang the Fullerites, commonly called Missionary Baptists. Such will always bring strife, confusion and division in the church. If you do not want a division, and do not want to be responsible for one, then let those things severely alone which the church has always rejected. May the good Lord help us all to continue in "the good old way," to "ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein," is our humble prayer. We have not written this with any feeling or degree of malice or with a view to strife, but from a feeling sense of duty to give the cry of alarm, and to utter a note of warning. C. H. C.

Perverse Rulers

---February 22, 1934

For quite a while we have felt that it was our duty to make some reference to the new publication appearing from Birmingham, Ala., called The Independent Primitive Baptist, and some few things contained in the copies we have seen. The sheet is being sent out by Elder N. P. Vandiver, who is excluded from Beulah Church, in the Birmingham district. Elder Z. C. Hull has been connected with the paper, but we have the information that he has severed his connection with it and also severed his connection with Elder Vandiver. It is painful to us to refer to these matters, but it seems to us that the cause demands that we make mention of the same. We have before us a copy of this paper of September 15, 1933. On page 3 is an article from Elder J. H. Veach, from which we wish to make a quotation, as follows: I was born and reared by Old Baptist parents, but "tradition and custom," together, caused by unruly and ungodly men and women caused my mother and father many days and years of deep sorrow and grief; and that being the history of most true, honest people among the Old School or Primitive Baptists, I have come to a complete halt between two opinions; if the Lord be God, serve Him! if Baal be God, serve him. My experience with the Primitive Baptists in the six states where I have been connected with them in a church way, is that they are and will be ruled by men of perverse minds, who have risen up in our own ranks (Primitive Baptist). The main leaders are men of supposed pre-eminence, and I have come to this conclusion, that there is no use to try to reform the church back to the apostolic doctrine and practice under such leadership. There are several charges in this little space above which we wish to notice and to call attention to. 1. The deep sorrow and grief brought to the father and mother by the traditions and customs among the Primitive Baptists. 2. These traditions and customs were caused or brought by unruly and ungodly men and women. 3. Hence, the traditions and customs among the Primitive Baptists are ungodly, as coming from ungodly men and women. Their customs are not of God, and are unauthorized by the Scriptures. This follows as a conclusion and result of the charges made by Brother Veach. Next: The above is the history of most true and honest people among the Primitive Baptists. This necessarily means that not many people among the Primitive Baptists are true and honest; and that most of those who are true and honest are not satisfied, but are grieved and in deep sorrow on account of the conditions which prevail with the church and in the church as a whole. It is true that untrue and unfaithful men creep in. It is true that some come in to "spy out our liberty." It is true that some get among us who are not satisfied with "the good old way," and bring trouble and distress among us. But such men are not the body as a whole. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which He hath purchased with His own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." --(0:28) (Acts 20:28-29,30). Brother Veach, will you let us kindly admonish you to take heed to the admonition and instruction given in this by the inspired apostle? Will you take heed? This quotation from the apostle tells us that men of our own selves will arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. They draw away disciples from the church. But the church stays on the same old "traditions and customs." The unruly and ungodly men are not the church. They are the few who creep in and destroy the peace and fellowship of the brotherhood, as much as is in their power. But Brother Veach charges that his experience with the Primitive Baptists in six states is that they are ruled by men of perverse minds. We beg to differ. The Primitive Baptists ARE NOT RULED BY MEN OF PERVERSE MINDS. Occasionally some men of perverse minds get among us and TRY TO RULE; but they fail. Their disposition is to rule or ruin. As it is impossible for any man or set of men to rule the church of God, then they try to ruin. They usually succeed in drawing away some disciples after them. When they succeed in doing that, then the church is left in peace for a season-until another man of like character gets among them and begins his nefarious work. Elder Veach says the main leaders are men of supposed pre-eminence. We wonder if he did not get mixed on his words in that expression. Perhaps he meant to say "men of supposed prominence." We may have some good and true men among us who are men of prominence-and we do have them. But we do not have men of pre-eminence. That word means "superiority in rank, position, excellence, etc.; distinction above others in quality, rank, etc." We do not have any among us who are above others in rank. "All ye are brethren." - (Matthew 23:8). Primitive Baptists acknowledge only one as having the pre-eminence. "And He is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things He might have the pre-eminence." -(Colossians 1:18). Diotrephes would love to have the pre-eminence. {((Jn 1:14) (III John 1:14)} Diotrephes prated against the apostles and brethren with malicious words. Be careful, Brother Veach, about the words you have used and that you may use. We think you have overstepped the matter somewhat. We trust you will retract. But Brother Veach says there "is no use to try to reform the church back to the apostolic doctrine and practice." This is a charge that the church has departed from the apostolic doctrine and practice. If she has, pray tell us where the church is to be found today? That is the doctrine of the Campbellites and Mormons-that the church departed. Joseph Smith claimed to restore primitive Christianity. Alexander Campbell set out to restore the ancient order of things- to restore primitive Christianity. Now, Brother Veach, do you want to restore the church to the primitive order of things? If the church has departed, and the whole thing is gone, so far as the Primitive Baptists are concerned, should we not leave them alone-not bring disturbance among them-but go to the people who practice the primitive order in doctrine and practice? From time to time some men have risen up among us who have tried to reform the old church. But they undertake an impossible task. The good Lord will reserve to Himself, always, a few that He will not suffer to be deceived and led astray. To reform the old church would be to draw her away from the original doctrine and practice as given by her Head and Founder. "She shall not be moved." There may sometimes be only a few who will contend for the true order of God's house and the ancient order of things, the same old "traditions and customs," but there will always be enough for the truth of God to be maintained in the earth. Brother Veach, we have not written this because we do not have Christian love for you; but your writing was public and demanded public exposure. Will you reconsider and retract, and make amends? May the Lord help us all to contend for the "good old way." C. H. C.

Changed to Semi-Monthly

Since the first of October, as our readers know, we have been sending The Primitive Baptist out only twice a month-or, rather, every other week. We had hoped that this was only a temporary matter. Finances were such that we were not able to get the paper out every week. The readers will remember that we had to let all our helpers in the office lay off on October 5. The code business was such that we could not meet the requirements, which were to reduce the working hours and also increase the pay of the employees. This at a time when our subscription list was falling off instead of increasing; and we had been taking subscriptions at any price the subscribers felt they could pay. Many of the subscribers during the past year or two have been given credit for a whole year when they paid not more than one-fourth of the regular price, and many were having their names dropped from the list. Of course we could not continue to send the paper out every week under such conditions as these. There was nothing left to do but to let the employees all off and have the type set in another place on a machine. Having to go to the other town for the type when it was set up involved a lot of trouble and loss of time. We and our companion had this extra work to do. Well, as we say, we had hoped that this would be only temporary and for a short time. We have now managed to get arrangements made to have the type set in our own office, and this will eliminate the making of trips to another place to get the type. Outside of that we and our wife will still do the work we had others to do-only that we cannot do enough work to get the paper out more than twice a month. We will have to use the same type we were using before we had the type set on a machine. This will give more reading matter than the machine-set type. But now the postoffice department requires us to resume the sending of the paper out weekly or to change the publication to conform to the way we are sending it out. To change so as to make it semi-monthly requires a re-entry as second-class matter, and this requires a payment of $10. There was no entry fee until the present administration of affairs. It costs $10 now to make a change; but we have to make the change. We cannot get The Primitive Baptist out every week under the present conditions. Our publication days will be the first and third Thursday in each month. Usually papers published twice a month are dated the first and fifteenth, but the first and third Thursday will divide the work up better for us, and will give the same number of papers for each month and for the year. If conditions ever admit of it we will go back to a Weekly again. If you want a weekly it is up to the subscribers-or up to the brethren, sisters and friends. 'Having your name dropped from the list will not help to put the paper out weekly, nor will it help us in any way. If you want The Primitive Baptist to come to you weekly, go to work and get new subscribers for it-persons who are not now taking the paper. The list of subscribers is smaller now than it has been for perhaps twenty years. Last month we dropped a hundred more names from the list than were added to it. What are you going to do about it? Are you going to go to work to help stop this decrease, and to help make it increase instead of decrease? Do you have enough interest in the cause The Primitive Baptist advocates and stands for to arouse you to put forth some extra effort now in this time of special need? Or, will you just think or say, "I am in sympathy with this cause, and greatly deplore the condition the paper is in?" Sympathy is all right, and we appreciate it; but for the paper to continue to go forth in defense of the cause we love, it is necessary for us to put forth some effort right now. As we have had to reduce the frequency of the issues of the paper, we have also reduced the regular price of same to $1.50 a year. Now, let us repeat what we have frequently said before, that the object in the publishing of The Primitive Baptist is not to make money. That was not the object of our father before us, and it has never been our object. The object and desire has been, all along, to publish the truth as it is taught us in the Holy Bible; to comfort and benefit the Lord's humble poor; to advance His cause and kingdom in the world; to honor and glorify His precious name. The effort all along has been to give as much reading matter as possible for the money. That is still our desire. Will you help us? Read our special offer in this issue, and then please respond to it at once; and, above all, will you please remember us in your prayers? C. H. C.

God the Cause of Sin

---April 5, 1934

In order that our readers may see for themselves what Absoluters advocate and contend for, we copy the following from Sovereign Grace and Pilgrim, a magazine published occasionally, and edited by W. J. Berry. The Lone (some) Pilgrim was consolidated with this magazine sometime ago, and' that is where the name Pilgrim comes in on the paper. Here is what the writer says: Limited predestination is also foolish; for limited predestination surely leads directly to limited foreknowledge.

How could anyone who presumes to believe in God possibly charge Him with limited knowledge! Yet some say that God's foreknowledge is unlimited, but predestination is. Such an argument will not even stand in the light of human logic. I like to think of the subject in this way: We find in a modern factory an intricate machine which is fed raw material at one end and ejects a finished part at the other end. This machine is made up of hundreds of working parts. Each part of it is put in for a definite purpose. The engineer who built the machine did not incorporate a single part that was not needed, nor did he omit a single necessary part. Each part of the whole does the work for which it was intended. For a given length of time the machine works perfectly, every part performs the function for which it was intended. We can say that the machine works perfectly because each part is doing exactly what it was predestinated to do by the engineer. The machine working perfectly represents the predestinated events of the world. Now suppose while the machine is running smoothly we were to throw in a handful of sand (unpredestinated events). How long would the machine continue to do its work? Only a few moments would be required for the machine to be wrecked. Is it not the same with the world? How long would God's machine continue to do what He intended, if He had not planned and provided ALL things. God is the first cause. {((0:11) (Exodus 20:11))} I believe He is the first cause of sin as well as the first cause of good. {((7) (Isaiah 45:7))} Amos I wrong? tell me. If I sin, it is not a surprise to God. Sin is as much a part of the eternal plan as anything else. God had and has a purpose for sin. {((26) (Acts 4:26-28))} It is one of the parts that make up the complete structure of His creation. To say that God foresaw but did not predestinate sin, is to say that He foresaw something that He did not create; but the Scriptures teach that there is only one creator. {((6) (Colossians 1:16))} I cannot understand the mystery, but I believe God causes all things. I have not been able to accept the word "permit" as expressing God's attitude toward anything. Moreover, I cannot find any logic in time salvation. If the Bible teaches the doctrine of second blessings, that is, that we are blessed FOR good works as well as in them, it also teaches a second curse-that we are cursed here in a time-state FOR our evil deeds as well as IN them. { (Deuteronomy 28)} Who would find any comfort in such? If my works are not good enough to earn me eternal blessedness, how can I think that I can merit time-blessedness? The very facts of life and history will not support the idea of second-blessing. Who are the people who seem to enjoy the most time-blessedness? Are they not those who have been willing to lay honor, charity, and brotherly love away? Are they not those who have trampled their fellow-men in the dust? The very men who live comfortably and are honored by the world are, for the most part, men who have no good works to have earned them time salvation. On the other hand God's chosen few are, and always have been poor and dishonored. The history of the church of God is written in blood. The children of God walking in good works have always been trampled under foot, while the evil men have triumphed in this world. Where, oh, where is the second blessing? The above is signed by R. C. Bumb. As he asks the editor to tell him if he is wrong, and we find no comment from the editor, we take it for granted that the editor indorses the sentiment expressed and contended for. On another page in the same paper we find this statement over the signature of W. J. Hocutt, of Berry, Ala.: "When I joined the Old Baptists over fifty years ago this conditional salvation was not known among them, and it has caused much strife and division among them." This refers to what is termed by some as "conditional time salvation," though we seldom hear that expression used among our people today.' Fifty years ago would take us back to 1883. Time salvation is not a new term among the Primitive Baptists. In another column in this paper is an article copied from the Zion's Advocate of May 15, 1858. It was written by M. Hodges, of Fountain Head, Tenn., March 11, 1858. In that article he says, "there is a time salvation to be enjoyed in obedience only. * * * As before hinted, our own salvation here mentioned is a time salvation, and we must work it out or go without it." This was written long before Brother Hocutt joined the church, and was generally believed and advocated by the Primitive Baptists then. True, then as now, there were a few who did not believe it, and who advocated the same things that the Absoluters advocate now. Elder Beebe introduced the term "absolute predestination of all things" among the Primitive Baptists, and that doctrine was, and is, a departure from the original Baptist doctrine-just as much so as Arminianism. Limited predestination does not lead to limited foreknowledge. Take the case of the parable of the talents; (Matthew 25:14-30). The Lord gave to the servants according to their ability. To one He gave five talents; to another He gave two talents; to another He gave one talent. He gave to each according to his ability. The one who received five talents had ability to improve five talents; the one who received two talents had ability to improve the two; and they used the ability which they had. The one who received one talent had the ability to improve the one talent. The Lord said so; to each was given according to his ability. The Lord gave them the ability which they had. Ability means "quality or state of being able; power to perform, whether physical, moral, intellectual, conventional, or legal; capacity; skill or competence in doing; sufficiency of strength, skill, resources, etc." -Webster. A man can do what he has the ability to do. Hence, the servants could improve their talents, for they had the ability. The Lord knew that they could improve their talents, and He also knew that one would not do so. To say they had to do what they did do because the Lord knew they would do that way is to deny the foreknowledge of God and to say that He knew only one side of the question. These Absoluters thus deny the foreknowledge of God while charging us with doing that very thing. But the writer of the above makes the whole affair the matter of a machine, and that God made the machine, and has it running just as He made it to run. According to that, as some of the race are running into hell, God made them for them to run there. This is not the old doctrine of the Baptists. The old London Confession of Faith, Chap. III, Sec. 3, says: "By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels are predestinated or foreordained to eternal life, through Jesus Christ, to the praise of His glorious grace; others being left to act in their sin to their just condemnation to the praise of His glorious justice." These Old Baptists did not believe that God worked wicked men and devils, but that they were LEFT to act in their sin. God did not act them-they acted. A machine is not active. It is acted upon by another. If the machine goes to pieces by a "handful of sand being thrown in," the machine is not blameworthy. What sensible man would think of such a thing as punishing the machine on account of the "blow up?" The machine is not responsible. If a man is slain with an ax, the ax is not responsible. The responsible party, the party that is to blame, is the person who wields the ax. According to such reasoning and logic, the men who are guilty of all the crime that has been committed, and that is being committed, in the world, such as robbery, theft, murder, rape, seduction, incest, and every crime that men are guilty of and that Satan can invent,-are not responsible and are not to blame, and are not to be punished for their crimes, in this world nor in the world to come. God is the maker of the whole machine, and He is running it just as He designed it to run. Men nor devils have not been able to, nor can they ever, do a thing that is displeasing to God. They are a part of the machine-and God is running it as He pleases for it to run! This is worse blasphemy than to say that Jesus cast out devils by the prince of devils. The above writer says he believes God is the first cause of sin, as well as the first cause of good. Again, he is not a Primitive Baptist. The old order of Baptists said, in the London

Confession of Faith, Chapter V, Section 4, "the sinfulness of their acts proceedeth only from the creatures, and not from God, who, being most holy and righteous, neither is, nor can be, the author or approver of sin." If God is running the whole universe, and every act and transaction is run by Him, then He approves of all the wickedness and crime that is committed. When a wicked brute ruins and rapes an innocent girl, according to this blasphemer, God is the cause of it. When those negroes raped and killed that innocent girl near-----, a year or two ago, they did what God caused them to do-according to this blasphemous doctrine. How any man who is not a wicked devil himself can charge such as this to the good and merciful and holy and righteous God, is beyond us-it is something we cannot understand. One who makes such a charge is terribly wrong somewhere-either in the head or in the heart. Our Bible teaches no such blasphemous heresy. Elder Hassell says, in a footnote on page 415 of his history, "The Mohammedan principle, says Neander, derived sin and holiness alike from the Divine causality, and denied the distinction between a permission and an actual efficiency on the part of God. It is Mohammedanism, and not Christianity; it is the most wretched perversion of Scripture and the most awful imaginable blasphemy, to identify God with Satan, the source of holiness with the source of sin; to maintain that the Holy, Holy, Holy Lord of hosts, the Holy One of Israel, He whose nature is holy and reverend, who is of purer eyes than to behold evil, and cannot look on iniquity, who is the Father of lights, and in whom is no darkness at all, who does not tempt or seek to seduce any man, to maintain that the Holy Spirit, who is God, inspires sinful thoughts or purposes in any of His creatures. He foreknows, and permits, and controls all things, not instigating, but bending the wickedness of men and devils into that channel that shall enhance His own glory and His people's good. The Divine Spirit is the author of all holiness, and not the author of any unholi-ness. No Baptist, no Christian, believes that God is the cause or author of sin." Elder Hassell says that no Baptist, no Christian, believes that God is the cause or author of sin, and we are inclined to agree with him. What do you Absoluters say, now, who have been denying all the time that you believed such damnable heresy? Your names, some of you, are on the editorial staff of the paper sending out and teaching that heresy. What do you elders say about it now? Will you stay on the editorial staff of such a paper and still claim that this is not your doctrine and that you are a Primitive Baptist? If you do not indorse and believe it, then prove it by coming out from it. There is no way for a man to show his faith only by his works. We have before us a copy of Backus' History, volume 1. The author wrote his preface to that volume and dated the same July 9, 1777. On page 97 he quotes from Hubbard, page 343, as follows: "Nicholas Easton * * * used to preach at Newport. * * * He maintained that man had no power nor will in himself, but as he was acted by God; and seeing that God filled all things, nothing could be or move but by Him, and so must needs be the author of sin, and that a Christian is united to the essence of God. Being shewed what blasphemous consequences would follow therefrom, they seemed to abhor the consequences, but still defended the position. * * * Mr. Coddington, Mr. Coggshall, and some others, joined with Nicholas Easton in those delusions; but their minister, Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Lenthal, and Mr. Harding, with some others, dissented and publicly opposed; whereby it grew to such a heat of contention that it made a schism amongst them." The advocating of such a blasphemous doctrine always has and always will bring division among true Baptists. On the same page the author says that "Mr. Coddington and Mr. Easton afterward joined the Quakers. Mr. Clark and his friends formed the first Baptist Church on Rhode Island." On page 125 Mr. Backus gives the probable date of the formation of this church as 1644, and possibly as early as 1638. On page 526 Hassell gives the probable date as 1638. The first Baptist Church formed in the United States and its founder rejected such teaching as blasphemous, and true Primitive Baptists do the same today. The teachers of such doctrine are not in line with the first Baptists of the United States, nor are they in line with the inspired writers of the Bible. David, the sweet singer of Israel, and a man after God's own heart, said, (Psalms 69:4) "They that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away." In (John 15:25) the Saviour said, "But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause." The prophecy of David was concerning the Lord, and the Saviour tells us the same was fulfilled. If the Lord is the cause of all things that come to pass, including sin and wickedness, as these Absoluters contend, then the Lord was the cause of them hating Him, and they did not hate Him without a cause. But the Lord said they hated Him without a cause. Therefore, the Lord was not the cause of this. These Absoluters deny the plain statement of David, the inspired man of God, and they deny the plain statement of the Son of God Himself. It is no better than rank infidelity. The writer in the above article denies that any are punished for their wrong doing. Hear the word of the Lord concerning that matter. (Ezekiel 33:13) "When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousness shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it." Here the Lord says "he shall die for it." These Absoluters say it is not true. "Let God be true, and every man a liar." We have no fellowship for their doctrine. It is not the doctrine of God our Saviour. May He deliver us from such, and help us all to teach such things as are an honor to His glorious name. C. H. C.

What Shall We Do?

---April 19, 1934

Frequently when we warn against departures from the principles and practices that have characterized the Primitive Baptists as a separate and distinct people from the world, there are some who are displeased. They sometimes have us stop sending the paper to them because we speak out against such departures. A few days ago we received a letter from a brother who told us in the letter that a number said they were going to have their paper stopped because of the way we had written recently about some things that are being advocated and practiced. Some brethren have written us highly commending what we said. But what some may say is not so much concern to us as the question as to what the Lord would have us do. What some of the brethren may do does not concern us as much as what is pleasing in the sight of God. What does the Lord require of us? That is the question we desire to have answered. In meditating over these things our mind has been called to what the Lord said in (Ezekiel 33:1-11). Here is what the Lord said: Again the word of the Lord came upon me, saying, Son of man, speak to the children of thy people, and say unto them, When I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman: if when he see the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul. But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel; Thus ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live? Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel? Here we have it plainly and clearly taught that the Lord requires His servants to warn Israel against every false way. The Lord has made it his indispensable duty to give warning of every approach of error and every false way. No man can be a true and faithful servant of God and fail to do that. He must warn against every innovation. He must warn against every departure from the way the Lord has marked out in His blessed Book. The Book teaches everything that the Lord's people should believe or practice religiously. It teaches that they should sing spiritual songs. They cannot sing spiritual songs and sing songs that contain false sentiment, or false doctrine. Unsound sentiment is not spiritual but fleshly, of the world, worldly. Thus, when they sing songs containing Arminian sentiment, they are violating the command of God. They are disregarding what the Lord has taught in His blessed Book, and which Book is given to thoroughly furnish them unto all good works. The Lord does not instruct, in His Book, that His people in His worship and service, are to use an organ, or any man-made instrument. He made the organ which He requires them to use in His worship-the vocal organs. To use any other organ than what He made and authorizes to be used in His worship, is an affront to Him. It is a disregarding of His teaching, and is treating His teaching with contempt. Do we know better how we should serve and worship God than He does? If we say yes, then we are guilty of the sin of presumption. If we say no, then let us leave alone everything which He has not commanded-leave everything severely alone for which we do not find precept or example. Do we find any precept or example in the Book for a Sunday school? If it is there it must be in the twenty-third chapter of Revelation. See if you can find it. It is not to be found between the first verse of the first chapter of Genesis and the last verse of the twenty-second chapter of Revelation. It is outside the Book. Then why organize such a thing? Why practice it? Is it to be like the world? "Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the Lord." -Isa. xxxi. 1. The Sunday school is a thing of the world. It is an institution of the world. If the Primitive Baptists practice such, they are only going down to Egypt for help; they are not trusting in the Lord. But someone may ask, Is it wrong to meet together on Sunday, or the Sabbath day, and study the Bible? Is it wrong to have classes in Bible study? We answer by asking, Is it wrong to organize a ladies' aid society, a junior league, a senior league, a Christian endeavor society, a Baptist Young People's Union, or any other of the numerous societies the world has? That is the same argument the Burnamites made when they introduced the thing years ago. Usually when the thing is started it is not called a Sunday school. The Old Baptists would "catch on" to the "racket" at once, and spurn the thing. Every time that little brat is born into an Old Baptist Church it is called a Bible class, or a Bible study, Bible hour-or some such little "no harm" name. And it usually catches the fancy of some. The little imp makes its appearance at first in some such unpretentious way. Beware! Such things are a departure from the original Baptist principles and practice. If you do not want trouble, quit your departures. Let the whole brood of Arminian inventions alone. Stay out of the mire of Arminian doctrine and practices on the one hand, and stay away from the icebergs of "can't-help-it-ism" on the other hand. Stand fast and faithful and firm and true for the original doctrine and order of God's house; then the Lord will bless and prosper Zion, and peace and happiness will be enjoyed by her inhabitants. By the help of the Lord we expect to try to contend for the truth and for the original and old-time practice of the church, if every subscriber we have quits. Will you quit on that account? Will you do that, or will you lend a helping hand? We are willing to trust the Lord, and try to be true to Him. May the Lord help us. C. H. C.

Should Be Truthful

---April 19, 1934

We are in receipt of a letter from a dear brother renewing his subscription. He tells us he has tried to get some subscribers for the paper, but has not been able to do so. He says: I have tried to get some more subscribers, but can't. I know several Old Baptists who take a daily paper that costs 20 cents a week, but say they are not able to take The Primitive Baptist. I hate to doubt an Old Baptist, but I doubt this statement. I want to take it as long as I am able, for many times I am about ready to give up. I get my paper and one article cheers me up and I am encouraged to press on. Many times I have some Scripture on my mind that I do not understand, and some brother or sister takes it up, and I am made to rejoice. So, dear brother, do the best you can in getting the paper out, and I will be satisfied, and will do all I can to send you some more subscribers. If any of your readers have a heart to pray, please pray for poor me. Well, dear brother, please tell us who can believe that a man is not able to pay $1.50 a year (a little less than three cents a week) for his church paper, or for a religious paper, when he is able to pay 20 cents a week for a newspaper? In the newspaper he will read about murder, theft, kidnapping, hijacking, bribery, robbery, bootlegging, highway robbery, and all other sorts of crime that Satan can invent. In The Primitive Baptist he may read the good news from the heavenly home of the Lord's humble poor. In this paper he may read about what the Lord has done for poor sinners, what He is doing, and what He has promised to do for them; and may read about what the Lord teaches in His word that His children should do in honor to His blessed name. But you know the blessed Master said, while He was here on earth, that "where your treasure is, there will be your heart also." May the good Lord bless you, dear brother, and keep you by His grace. God the Cause of Sin

---May 17, 1934

In our issue of April 5 we copied a lengthy quotation from an article written by R. C. Bumb and published in the Sovereign Grace and Pilgrim, by W. J. Berry, of California, and replied to the same. We did not say all that could be said in reply to the blasphemous doctrine R. C. Bumb advocated, and perhaps did not say all that should be said. We called attention to the fact that Bumb asked the editor to tell him if he was wrong, and that the editor offered no objection to the article or any sentiment therein, and we took it for granted that the editor indorsed the sentiment. Of course he believes and accepts the sentiment, for he advocates the same sentiment himself. On page 510 of the same issue of that paper the editor says: But if he will say that Christ indeed merits all praise for our eternal salvation, but that we are rewarded for our good works in time,-we deny it. The editor used this expression in referring to our people-true Primitive Baptists, or those who advocate what true Primitive Baptists have always advocated. What part of the statement does the editor mean to deny? Does he mean to deny that Christ merits all praise for our eternal salvation? Or, does he mean to deny the whole-both that Christ merits such praise and also that God's people are rewarded in time for their good works? Or, does he mean to deny only the latter part? It is the whole thing which he says he denies. But we will be liberal and lenient toward him, and grant that he does not really mean to deny that Christ merits all praise for the eternal salvation of all the redeemed, and that he really only means to deny that God's children are rewarded here in time for their good works. Of course we were and are aware of the fact that these advocaters of this doctrine of the "absolute and unconditional predestination of all things that come to pass" deny the truth of God. Let us see what God's word says about the matter: And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.-((Num 18:31) (Numbers 18:31). Here it is plainly stated that this is a reward for the Lord's servant for his service rendered in the tabernacle of the congregation. God said this to Moses. This doctrine of reward in and for service rendered was true in ancient time. That was God's way and promise in the days of Moses. If God has not changed since then, the same doctrine is true now. What about it, Mr. Berry? Has God changed? Did Moses tell the truth when he put it on record that God said this? But let us now pass over a long period of time, and see how it was at a much later date: But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be called the children of the Highest: for He is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.-((Luke 6:35). Here the Saviour emphatically tells His disciples that their reward shall be great for doing the good things He here tells them to do. This was positively stated by the Saviour while He was here on earth tabernacling in the flesh. But these Absoluters do not believe it. They positively deny the plain language of the Son of God. But let us have another statement: Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eye service, as men pleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God: and whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ. But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.-((22) (Colossians 3:22-25). In this place the inspired apostle, the apostle to the Gentiles, the eminent Paul, most positively affirms that they should, of the Lord, receive the reward of the inheritance. Paul clearly taught the Colossian brethren that they would receive a reward for right doing; and that they would receive a reward for wrong doing. Evidently the reward for right doing was a blessing and joy from the presence of the Lord manifested to them; and the reward for the wrong doing was a chastisement and punishment for their wrongs. Paul was inspired of God to teach this doctrine. But these Absoluters do not believe the inspired writings; they flatly deny this teaching and call it heresy. But let us have another statement: And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.- (Revelation 22:12). Here is the promise of the Saviour that He comes quickly, and that His reward is with Him to give every man according as his work shall be. If his work is good, the reward is a blessing; if his work is bad, the reward is a curse, punishment for his evil doings. This is being fulfilled now, every day, every week, every month, every year. The sorrows and sufferings and dreadful state of affairs today in the nation and in the churches is nothing else than punishment for wickedness and wrong doing. Will you please get your Bible now and read the plain statements of God's word recorded in the following places: ((8) (Proverbs 11:18); ((9) (Ecclesiastes 4:9); ((0:42) (Matthew 10:42); ((9:41) (Mark 9:41); (I Corinthians 3:8,14); (Deuteronomy 32:41); ((Sam 3:39) (II Samuel 3:39); ((21) (Proverbs 25:21-22); ((Hos 4:9) (Hosea 4:9); (Matthew 6:3-4,6,17-18); (16:27); (II Timothy 4:14); ((Sam 22:21) (II Samuel 22:21); ((Chr 15:7) (II Chronicles 15:7); (Jeremiah 31:16). In all these places the doctrine is plainly taught that there is a blessed reward for those who lovingly and humbly obey the Lord and do His commandments. But these Absoluters absolutely cannot come to the Lord. They do not believe in Him. They do not believe His word. They do not believe that He is a rewarder. Hear what the inspired apostle says: But without faith it is impossible to please Him: for he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him.-(Hebrews 11:6). Here the Apostle Paul not only teaches that God is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him, but he also teaches that in order for one to come to God, to come to the Lord, one must not only believe that God is, but he must also believe that God is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. These Absoluters do not believe that God is a rewarder of any for seeking Him. It is, therefore, impossible for them to come to God. We are not the author of this; Paul so wrote it-and that by inspiration. He was moved by the Spirit of God to write it. Poor fellows. We are not mad with you. We do not glory that you are in such a deplorable and hellish state that you cannot come to God. Rather, we are sorry for you. We are sorry that you are so deluded by the devil and the demons of the lowest hell that you are such infidels and such devil-lovers-or such lovers of doctrines of devils-that you cannot come to God and enjoy the sweetness of His blessings and truth here in this world. May the good Lord have mercy on your souls. More later on. C. H. C.

Was Mother Right?

---May 17, 1934

We copy the following article from the Banner Herald for April, 1934. It was not signed, but we presume it was written by Brother Crouse, the editor. We copy the whole article because it contains much food for thought. Here is what Brother Crouse says: When I reached my twenty-first birthday, I decided to join the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and did. Mother warned me against it. I was teaching school and working my way through college and argued that it would be a great help to me to belong to some of these orders. Mother said it was wholly unnecessary; I had a hope in Christ, and if I was a member of the Primitive Baptist Church I needed no other affiliation. She said these worldly brotherhoods could not compare with her church-Primitive Baptists would stick together, they would stand by you and help you when all others had "passed by on the other side." It was her firm conviction that if a young man or young lady wanted to travel around the world, it was better to be known as a member of the Primitive Baptist Church than to hold membership in ALL the institutions of the world. Her implicit faith in her people made a deep impression on me, although I did not take her advice in this matter at that time. I closely observed her brotherhood and compared it with this brotherhood with which I was actively and zealously affiliated. I saw such love manifested among her brethren, such loyalty to each other, that I finally decided mother was right. Most forty years have rolled by since mother gave me that advice. A great change has come in mother's denomination. Time and again her brethren have been at each other's throats, striving to destroy each other. I have seen brethren so prejudiced against each other that they would have no dealings with each other. They would give their influence and support against their own brethren. I have seen them liberal in helping others when good and faithful nearby brethren were sorely neglected. I have seen them raise much for "foreign-mission" work and they made no effort to meet the needs of brethren at home, in their own church. I have known good brethren to seek some position and Primitive Baptists gave their support to others wholly unfit for the position rather than help their own brethren. Fred told us, at the last Bible Conference, of his experience in the insurance business. It was amusing, and yet it was serious. In his effort to make something on the side to help him to preach the gospel and serve our people, he had, at times, been turned down by the brethren he served; they had given their business to one who cared nothing for our cause rather than give it to their brother in the church and their pastor. I had an experience recently which was interesting, and a little humiliating. I had three marble prospects. Two were Primitive Baptists, and "Progressives." One was a Methodist. I did my dead-level-best (as Hendricks says) to sell them. I needed the help. I was trying to get Mary through college and to pay my obligations and save my home. I had two competitors on these jobs, neither was a Primitive, and I doubt if they had ever been inside of one of our churches. Well, I sold the Methodist brother and LOST both of the Primitive jobs. And it just happened that the Methodist was also an Odd Fellow. I thought of Fred's experience, and of mother's advice and wondered what she would think if she were now living. There are some of our brethren who have left no stone unturned in helping our young people to get positions. (I feel I may be allowed to make special mention of J. Walter Hendricks and Geo. D. Godard.) But very many of our brethren have been indifferent. When our boys and girls have graduated from college they have had to turn to other orders for real support. A hint to the wise is sufficient. Wake up, brethren, and give these young people the help they so much deserve. In the above Brother Crouse gives some of his experiences, and tells of how the Primitive Baptists were loyal to each other in his young days and in his mother's section. Well, so far as our knowledge extends, they were loyal and true to each other, generally, in our young days. They would help each other. They would patronize each other, and as a rule they were willing to patronize each other, even if they could do a little better in a financial way—a little better price from some others—they would give the preference to their brethren. As a rule we confess that they are not as true and loyal to each other in this way as they once were. But they are not all that way. We have had some of the same kind of experiences. We have had, in our time, some experience just like Fred had. Not only by members, but preachers, the ministers—some. Yes, we have been along the road, too. Not only in lines like you mention, Brother Crouse, but in the printing line, too. Most of the time for about forty-seven years we have tried to make our living by doing printing. Many have had their minutes printed by others, by some who care nothing for the Primitive Baptist cause, when we needed the work. What has brought about these changes? May it not be partly caused by introducing into the church some things the Lord has not commanded? Might not that course cause a coldness and indifference in the brotherhood in a general way? If we would all return to the "old paths" in practice, as well as doctrine, might not this cause the membership to live closer together and to be more loyal to each other? Let us consider, and then let us try to serve the Lord and do the things He has commanded, and leave all things else alone. Though we have trials to endure, and though some may patronize the haters of the cause of the Master, rather than patronize us, when we are devoting our whole life to the cause the best we know how, yet we are determined, by the help of the Lord, to "stay in the ship," and to continue to fight for the principles of truth while the good Lord lets us stay here in this old world of sorrow. Our heart may be made to bleed, and the wounds may be deep, that are made by brethren who thus show favors to the world, rather than to us; but the fight is almost over. The end is almost in sight. The armor will soon be laid by. May the Lord help us to "bear all things" and to "endure all things," until the final summons comes. C. H. C.

They Wash Feet

---May 17, 1934

Yes, the churches in our association all engage in feet washing. They all engage in it at the conclusion of the communion supper, or sacramental supper. Our home church-Cane Creek, here in Thornton-practices it. Bethel Church, Oak Grove, La., which we serve, practices it. Fuller's Chapel, in North Little Rock, in the Mountain Springs Association, which we try to serve as pastor, practices it. Elizabeth Church, near Marvell, Ark., which we try to serve, practices it. We do not know of a Primitive Baptist Church in the state but what practices it, and we have never heard of one that does not. All the churches in Tennessee, where we came from in 1919, practice it. We have never had membership in a church that did not practice it, and we united with the church in August, 1889, and we were baptized on Thursday before the second Sunday in September, 1889, at Greenfield, Tenn. Why will some put out a report that we are non-footwashers? Old Baptists should tell the truth. Is it not a pity but what everybody would have the same motto we once saw at the masthead of a newspaper? That motto was, "Tell the truth, and shame the devil." Brethren, we have done you no harm. Then why do you want to injure us unjustly? C. H. C.

God the Cause of Sin

---June 7, 1934

In our last issue we gave a little quotation from the pen of W. J. Berry, the editor of the Sovereign Grace and Pilgrim, and replied to same. We concluded that article with a promise to write more later on. Here is another expression from the editor, on page 510 of that paper for November and December, 1933: Does the Conditionalist admit that God is a sovereign God, and that He "works all things after the counsel of His own will," -so we believe. But if he vacillates, and says that God is indeed a sovereign, and foreknew all things, but did not predestinate all things or that He works only all good things,-we deny such sophistry. If it has pleased God to move men to do His will in not only good deeds, but the murder of His only Beloved Son and the slaughter of millions of Christian martyrs so that their blood ran in the streets as water, and all this to His eternal praise,-O vain, wretched, depraved and finite man, keep your mouth shut-" Let God be true and every man a liar guilty." But they will not shut their mouths, for they must "foam out their own shame." The above are two paragraphs copied from the article by the editor. Did you ever read more blasphemy in the same amount of space? In the first paragraph quoted above the editor most positively denies that God works only all good things. He declares thereby that God also works all evil, devilish, corrupt, hateful and hellish things. A few years ago a brutal negro in Little Rock, Ark., enticed an innocent young girl into a church and brutally murdered her and hid her body in the tower of the building. According to the devilish doctrine of this man

Berry, God worked that crime. He worked in the negro to do that. Not so very long ago some wicked brute crept into the home of Col. Lindberg and stole the infant child of Mr. Lindberg and wife, and brutally murdered that baby. According to Berry, and his ilk, God worked that hellish crime! Berry declares that God not only works all good things, but that He also works all the hellish crimes of the devil and all the imps of hell! Berry says that God moved men to slaughter millions of Christian martyrs, so that their blood ran in the streets as water. Here is the charging of the very meanest of crimes of the lowest demons of hell to the thrice holy and eternally righteous and perfect God! This teaches that God delivered these demons of the lower regions to do these devilish and hellish deeds. Could any person who loves God and holiness and righteousness thus charge upon the holy and spotless Jehovah the moving of men to such diabolical crimes? Is such doctrine the truth? Does it come from God? Or is it really one of the blackest and meanest of lies, emanating from the prince of devils? The devil is a liar, and the father of it. Please read (Jeremiah 7:8-9,10): Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit. Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not; and come and stand before me in this house, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations? Those people claimed that they were delivered to do all those abominations; but God said such were lying words. Berry and his cohorts claim that people are delivered to do such abominations. If such claims were lying words in the days of Jeremiah, they are lying words yet. We did not put this in the Book. It is God's Book where this is found, and the words quoted were written by inspiration. The Holy Spirit of God moved the prophet to write just what He did write. If the doctrine of these Absoluters be the truth-that God delivered people to commit such abominable crimes- then the Spirit of God moved the prophet to write a lie. Does the Spirit of God move men to lie? Yes, God moves men to lie, if the doctrine advocated by these Absoluters be the truth-for Berry says God moves men to do all the devilish things they do. But God does not move men to lie. When they make such claims as Berry has made, and that Mr. Bumb made, and when they charge that such crimes emanate from men being moved by the Spirit of God, they are not moved by the Spirit of God to advocate such doctrine. Ye are of your father the devil, and the lust of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.- ((4) (John 8:44)). A lie is from the devil, and not from God. The devil was a murderer from the beginning, and is a murderer yet. He is the "chap" that moved men to murder millions of Christian martyrs until their blood ran in the streets. Yes, we can understand that it pleases him to have men charge this to God, and for them to say, as Berry has, that God moved them to murder His saints until their blood ran in the streets. Such a charge cannot, by any sort of means, be honoring and glorifying to God. The devil never wants God honored or glorified. If he can but get men to believe and teach that God moves men to lie, and to steal, and to commit adultery, and to murder, and to do all such heinous crimes as men do commit, he could not get them to believe and teach a doctrine that could possibly be more dishonoring to God. May the Lord deliver us from such teaching and from men who would advocate and teach such a blasphemous, black, devilish, lying, devil-invented doctrine. C. H. C.

An Explanation

In our article headed "God The Cause of Sin" we have used some very rough language, and some of our readers have thought we used the language with reference to all who claim to believe in the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things. We had no such thought in mind. Many who claim to believe that doctrine most positively and emphatically deny believing that God is the author of sin, or that He moves men to sin. They claim to believe the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things, but deny believing in the consequences of the doctrine. We had no reference to them. The language was used with reference to those who say that God is the author of sin and that God moves men to sin. If we could we would get all those who deny believing the consequences of the doctrine to also renounce the doctrine as well as the consequences of it. We want them to see how ugly it is, if possible. We love many good brethren we know who claim to believe that God absolutely predestinated all things, but who deny that God moves men to sin, and we would rejoice for them to be saved from the error. But we confess that we have little hope for one being saved from his error who boldly advocates the idea that God is the author or cause of sin, and that He moves men to sin. May the Lord's dear children be delivered from such doctrine, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Light Shines Better

Dear Brother Cayce: I am glad you are contending for the truth and exposing error. I am young, and have received some criticism for being firm and contending that our blessed Lord and the apostles' had a complete church. I think the church shines better and gives a better light without the world's institutions being mixed with it. I wish you a happy future life while you may live, and after death may you enjoy all that heaven's richest blessings contain. I very much desire that you will be firm and let the Lord's humble poor know your views as long as you have breath. When in the dust of humility, please remember me. Yours in hope, D. Spence. R. 2, Bexar, Ala.

REMARKS

We appreciate the above, dear brother, and all that your letter contained. Yes, indeed, the church shines without the institutions of the world and the inventions of men. Such institutions and inventions obstruct the light, and will finally cause the light to go out. God's people are commanded to come out from the world and to be separate. The very things that are necessary to keep the churches of the world alive would destroy the identity of the Lord's church-the Primitive Baptists. In love, C. H. C.

What Next!

---September 6, 1934

In the Sovereign Grace and Pilgrim (Pilgrinder) for May and June, the following effusion may be found, beginning on page 142, under the above heading: In May 17, P. B. Elder Cayce has virtually come forth with conditional eternal-salvation in trying to refute the old doctrine. We first wish to call attention to his trickery in quoting only the latter part of our statement on P. 510 of Nov.-Dec. S. G. and P. B., and pretends ignorance but later explains exactly what we do mean, and then begins to ridicule the same. Here is the statement in full: Does the Conditionalist observe that many shall receive a reward according to their works, and that that reward of the new creature in Christ, is effected and merited by the effectual working of the Spirit in the same,-so we contend. But if he will say that Christ indeed merits all praise for our eternal salvation, but that we are rewarded for our good works in time,-we deny it. On page 148 he says certain ones are accusing his brethren of not washing feet; he replies that Old Baptists should tell the truth. Elder Cayce, if you greatly desire to do right and "shame the devil," you will publish our statement in full. We thot it base presumption for a child of God to claim any merit for one of the least blessings freely bestowed on him here in time. But now we are greatly surprised to hear one claiming to be an Old Baptist, virtually hinging our eternal inheritance on our good deeds. The elder quotes (Luke 6:35) and says "Here the Saviour emphatically tells His disciples that their reward shall be great for doing the good things He tells them to do." The parallel text to this is (Matthew 5:44-45) "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, etc. That you may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good." Would you contend that they were made children because they did these things? (you have argued to the contrary in other days). And for what reason does He make His "sun to rise on the evil" as well as the good? Furthermore, does He not also say in another place that after we have done these things "We are unprofitable servants," and have no thanks for doing what we should? {See ((0) (Luke 7:10))} Why do you people not emphasize that vital truth? You next quote ((22) (Colossians 3:22-25)) in defense of the same theory. "Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance." The reward of what?-" Of the inheritance." "Ye are bought with a price." Christ did that. He is our reward. He that is the Lord's freeman is also Christ's servant, does a servant merit anything for his service? How then do you say it is by creature works? As to verse 25 none would presume to say that we do not merit far more chastisement than we receive. You next quote (Revelation 22:12) "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." I am astonished that such a text should be brought forth in defense of the do-and-live system. Do you really mean it? (Continued) PROPOSITION-You have falsely accused, misrepresented, and made the old doctrine look hideous to your people; now will you dare to publish to them the exact truth? Will you dare to publish just what we do believe? I say, will you print or tell a full exposition of the old doctrine without bombast or ridicule? If so, we offer this proposition: That you print our testimony verbatim and in a regular issue of your paper. We will reprint your remarks in full, provided they are not unreasonably long. This is open to any one of the Conditionalist papers. You should thoroughly sustain your position or forever close your mouths and columns of any word against the absolute sovereignty of the I AM THAT I AM. We give above a verbatim copy of what the wonderful blasphemer says. The above is the whole thing he said. Now, let us see if he will do what he said he would-see if he will publish our reply in his pilgrinder. Put it in there, old man, and grind to your heart's content. But we are made to wonder if the eternal and sovereign and holy God did absolutely and unconditionally predestinate from all eternity that Parson Berry should lie as he did in the above blather? Note that he said we "have virtually come forth with conditional eternal salvation," and that we are "virtually hinging our eternal inheritance on our good deeds." The parson absolutely knows that in these statements he has maliciously falsified. That is the way with these fellows who will charge that wickedness and iniquity and sin comes from the pure and holy God. He is without iniquity. See (Deuteronomy 32:4). He is "a God of truth, and without iniquity." No lie comes from Him, either directly or indirectly, because He is a God of truth. Iniquity does not come from Him, either directly or indirectly, for He is without iniquity. Lying comes from another source. "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it." -Jesus, in ((4) (John 8:44)). Say, parson, why did you not give our article as we published it? If you had done that, your readers would have seen that you falsified and misrepresented what we said. You know very well that we did no such thing as to argue, or even intimate, that eternal salvation depends in any degree upon the work of the sinner. Our first citation was ((Num 18:31) (Numbers 18:31)). This was a positive promise of a reward for the Lord's servant for services rendered. In (Luke 6:35) the Saviour positively tells His disciples that their reward shall be great for doing the good things He there tells them to do. ((22) (Colossians 3:22-25)) teaches the same truth-that the Colossian brethren should be rewarded for right doing as well as for wrong doing. The reward for right doing is evidently a blessing, and the reward for wrong doing is punishment or chastisement. No such thing, as you well know, as an intimation that eternal salvation depends upon what they do or do not do. The first was to Israel, a type of spiritual Israel. The others, to those who were already children of God. Why thus misrepresent? The answer is in ((4) (John 8:44))-is it not, parson? But the parson says: "As to verse 25 none would presume to say that we do not merit far more chastisement than we receive." If you merit more chastisement than you receive, then you merit it for carrying out God's eternal decree-for no matter what you do, according to your doctrine, you are only doing what God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated from all eternity that you should do. You could not help doing the meanness you have done, according to your doctrine, for God so arranged it that way. Those things were only links in the chain of events which God forged in eternity. Hence, according to your doctrine, God punishes His children for carrying out His predestination and decrees. Does God punish them for doing His will and pleasure? If God predestinated the said acts, was it not His pleasure to predestinate them? Did He do that which was not His pleasure to do? If He did do that which was not His pleasure to do, then He does not always do His pleasure, does He? If He always does His pleasure, and He unalterably predestinated the wicked acts His children do, as well as all wicked acts of men and devils, then it must be His pleasure for them to do those wicked acts, or else it is not His pleasure for His predestination to be done. So, you merit chastisement for doing what it was God's pleasure for you to do! Shame on such a blasphemous heresy! That doctrine is as black as the regions of hell-from whence it came. Give this to your readers, and then we will give you a little more. You may say that this is unreasonably long. We do not expect you to publish all we say. Why did you not publish our article in our issue of May 17? You do not intend for your readers to see your devilish heresy exposed-that's why. Come on, parson. C. H. C.

Will You Escape?

---September 6, 1934

We live in an age of spiritual adolescence. "Take thine ease" has been preached well by the enemy, and believed well by the human race, not excluding Christians. The world rolls on to judgment, and many Christians have their eyes closed to the appalling need of the unsaved. God's word is very plain in its teaching that the unsaved will be forever banished in outer darkness and Christian men and women close their eyes to those facts and never try to "pluck a brand from the burning." What will be the shame of our guilt when we go to be with the Lord?- Baptist and Commoner, page 1, August 10, 1934. "The world rolls on to judgment, and many Christians have their eyes closed to the appalling need of the unsaved." "What will be the shame of our guilt when we go to be with the Lord?" According to this teaching the Christians have the wherewith and the means in their hands whereby unregenerate sinners (the unsaved) may become the children of God, and thereby be prepared for eternal glory, and yet they have their eyes closed to the appalling need. They will not, or do not, use the means in their hands for the salvation and final glorification of poor ignorant sinners of Adam's race. Sure enough, if that doctrine be true, what will be the shame of the modern Missionaries when they "go to be with the Lord?" Is it possible that the just and holy God, of whom it is said, "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne," {(9:14) (Psalms 89:14)} will send the poor ignorant sinners to hell on account of the wickedness of these modern Missionaries, and then let the Missionaries go free? Is it not possible that, if your doctrine is the truth, you will be very sadly disappointed when you "go to be with the Lord?" C. H. C.

---October 4, 1934

He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name; which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.-(John 1:11-12,13). If language means anything at all, the above Scripture teaches that it is the sovereign work of God for one to be born of God, or to be born from above. It is not of the will of the flesh that one is born of God. This being true, the will of the sinner has nothing to do with his being born of God. His will is not consulted in the matter. He has no will in that matter whatever. Neither is it of the will of man. The will of any man, or set of men, has nothing in the wide world to do with a sinner being born of God. It is not of blood that one is born of God. Hence, the works of men have nothing in the world to do with one being born of God. As it is not of blood, it is not by the doings of men. The things that men may do, or have done, or can do, have nothing to do with being born of God. It is of God-not of man or men. It is God's own work, God's own doing, by which a sinner is born of God. All works of men are excluded, and have nothing to do with the bringing about the spiritual birth. Not only is it God's own work, His own doing, but it is of His own sovereign will. He regenerates, or borns again, or from above, those whom He sovereignly wills to regenerate. "For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom He will." -(John 5:21). It is of the will of God, not of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, that sinners are born of God, or quickened into divine life, or raised up out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ. This is clearly and unmistakably taught in the text. But "He came to His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him." Many of His own received Him not, but some of them received Him. To those who received Him He gave power, authority, right, privilege to become the sons of God. Those to whom this power, right, privilege, was given were those that believe on His name. They were not given power, or right, or privilege, to become the sons of God in the sense of regeneration, or of being born of God; for they were already born of God-" which were born, not of blood, but of God." They were born of God-in the past tense. "Even to them that believe on His name" -in the present tense. It is not possible that the present could be in order to the past. Believe is in the present, and were born is in the past, in the text. Were born must, therefore, necessarily, precede and come before the believing. The "were born" is something which was done, fully accomplished, at some time in the past, or in the long ago; and the believing is in the present, as something which is the effect of that which was done in the past. Were born was the cause, and the believing is something which follows as the effect. One must be born of God, then, in order to believe. It cannot be true, then, that one must believe in order to be born of God. But God gives to those who have been born of God, and who believe on His name, the power, the authority, the right, the privilege, to become the sons of God. If He does not give them this power, right, or privilege, to become the sons of God by birth, or in the sense of regeneration-which He does not, for the simple reason that they were already born of God before they believe -then it must be true that. He gives them this power, right, or privilege, to become the sons of God' in some sense other than by regeneration or birth; In what sense, then, or in what way, do they have the power to become the sons of God? He gives them the power to become the sons of God in what sense, or in what way? It cannot possibly be in any other way than in the sense of obedience to His laws and commandments-thus in a manifest way, manifesting by their obedience that they are the sons of God. He gives them this authority, this power, this right, this privilege. It is not only a duty that one obey the Lord who has been born of God; it is a gracious heaven-given right or privilege. God gives them that right, that privilege, that authority, that power. The Lord's dear children should esteem this as a great privilege-to render service, and praise, and adoration, to the God of all grace, for His unspeakable mercy and grace bestowed upon them. In nature, one is first born of his parents; and the will of the one born is not consulted in the matter; his will has nothing to do with that work. He has no will before being born. He must first be born in order that he have a will concerning or pertaining to the natural realm. Even so, it is also true in grace, that the will of the one born of God is not consulted in that work; his will has nothing to do with his being born of God, or born into the spiritual realm. He has no will concerning or pertaining to spiritual things until he has been born of God, or born into the spiritual realm. A will pertaining to natural things springs from, and is a product of, the natural life. Even so, a will for spiritual things springs from, and is a product of, the spiritual life. Hence, in nature, one becomes a child of his parents first by birth; then he begins to hear about his parents, as his parents; then he begins to believe on them as his parents; then, if a dutiful child, he begins to obey his parents. This all being self-evidently true, it follows that one is first a child of his parents by birth; then a child by hearing; then a child by belief, or by faith; then a child by obedience. This is just as true in grace as in nature. One is first a child of God by birth; then he begins to hear about the Lord as his heavenly Father; then he begins to believe on the Lord as his heavenly Father; then, if a dutiful child, he begins to obey the Lord as his heavenly Father. This being true, one is a child of God by birth before he is or can be a child of God by faith. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." -(Galatians 3:26). They were children of God by birth before they were children of God by faith, or by belief. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." -(Galatians 3:27). In putting on Christ* in baptism, they put Him on, as one putting on a coat. A man has no right to put a coat on and wear it if the coat does not belong to him. But it is the right and privilege of one to put on and wear a coat which belongs to him. Even so, if Christ is yours, and you are His by regeneration, or by you having been born of God, then you have the authority, the power, the right, and the privilege to put on Christ in baptism. You have been born of God, and as a result of having been thus born, and hearing the testimony of the witness, and thus being a believer on Him, you have the right, and the privilege, of putting on Christ in baptism. It is not only your duty; it is your heaven-given, your God-given, right and privilege. Thus you become a child of God by obedience, which God has given you the authority, the power, the right, the privilege, to do. This is the teaching of God's holy and blessed word. The Arminian world may reverse the order in their teaching, and the Absoluter may deny the teaching; but it remains the same blessed and eternal truth, and will stand amidst the wreck of nature and the crash of worlds. The eternal God is the author of it; and He is the author of all truth. Principles are eternal, and never change. The Lord's children and His servants should be bold and faithful and true to contend for these precious heavenly truths. May the Lord help us thus to do. C. H. C.

Eternal Hell

---October 4, 1934

We have recently been requested to give our views through The Primitive Baptist as to whether the Scriptures teach that there is any such thing as eternal punishment. We gave our views on this question in The Primitive Baptist of August 18, 1914. The same article was also published in pamphlet form, and all have long since been sold. For the benefit of the brother making the request, as well as for the benefit of other readers, we will reproduce the article below, leaving out the name of the party making the request in 1914. We will add here, for the brother making the recent request, that there cannot possibly be such a thing as punishment in the absence of suffering, and there can be no such thing as suffering without knowledge of the same. Hence, as there is eternal punishment, there is of necessity a consciousness of suffering. C. H. C. Note-The article referred to above published August 18, 1914, is on page 262 of Volume II, and it is not necessary to reproduce it here.

More Help

---October 4, 1934

Elder J. D. Holder, of Tupelo, Miss., has agreed for us to put his name on our editorial staff. We are glad to have Elder Holder associated with us. We esteem him as an able and humble gift from God to the church, though he is comparatively young in the ministry. The good Lord has wonderfully blessed him to speak in His glorious name to the comfort and instruction of many of His loved ones. We trust the Lord may bless his labors with us in writing for the paper, and that our readers may be benefited much by his writings. We sincerely believe that Brother Holder is a faithful and true servant of the Lord, and that he is satisfied with the goodness of God's house. He wants none of the inventions of men in the Lord's kingdom. He is satisfied to "stand ye in the ways, and see; and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein." We hope to hear from him from time to time, and beg the Lord to bless his labors for and among His humble followers. C. H. C.

Our Association

Our association (the South Arkansas) met in the ninety-third annual session on Friday morning, September 14, with Friendship Church, El Dorado, Ark., and closed on Sunday. Elder T. L. Webb is the beloved and faithful pastor of the church. The association last year agreed that the pastor of the church where the association was held this year should preach the introductory sermon. Brother Webb did this, and the good Lord blessed him to preach a wonderful discourse, to the great comfort and joy of the saints and to the honor of His glorious name. The visiting ministers present were: Elders R. F. Pierce, R. 2, Quitman, Ark.; C. E. Coward, McCall Creek, Miss.; A. H. Garner, Searcy, Ark.; C. M. Monk, Jonesboro, La.; W. L.

Phillips, Blooming Grove, Texas; C. M. Mills, 133 W. First St., Charlotte, N. C.; J. R. Wilson, Martinsville, Va. These brethren all filled the stand, from time to time, as arranged by the committee on preaching; besides which they had Elder W. H. Lee, of our own association, to preach one time, and the writer to close the meeting. The Lord wonderfully blessed every speaker, as well as the hearers. We have never heard better preaching than was done during this meeting-if we have we have forgotten it. The home ministers present were Elders Jacob Sandage, Malvern, Ark.; T. L. Webb, El Dorado, Ark.; John R. Harris, Thornton, Ark.; E. W. Hargett, El Dorado, Ark.; W. H. Lee, R. 2, Arkadelphia, Ark., and the writer. By unanimous voice of the association Elder John R. Harris was made clerk and the writer was made moderator. On Sunday after the preaching thirteen willing souls came forward asking for a home in the dear old church. As they came forward many were made so glad that their cups ran over. There were many shouts of praise went up to the Lord for His goodness and wonderful blessings. We were told the name of each one, but some of them we cannot now recall; but among the number were the wife and mother of Elder Hargett. Well, Brother Hargett could hardly "stay on the ground." We rejoice with him, as well as with all others. You never saw a happier crowd of people. All were rejoicing. From the very start to the finish there was only one thing that we have had the least intimation of that could mar the feelings of any of the brethren or sisters present, and that was something said by the writer concerning some of the committees, or to them. We confess that we are full of mistakes and shortcomings. We here make this public confession, and beg any and each and every one to forgive us. We are deeply grieved and sorry that anyone is wounded at what we said, or the way we said it. We are sorry we said it. We had no thought of seeming abrupt. Please forgive us, if you can find it in your heart to do so. The Old Baptists have all been too good to us for us to intentionally wound the feelings of one of them in the very least. Will you forgive us, and forget it? We never attended a sweeter or more enjoyable meeting in life, and we have been attending Old Baptist associations for more than forty-five years-in fact, we have been attending them and enjoying them for forty-nine years. How thankful we should be that the Lord remembers us. Praise be to His holy name. Let us try to serve and honor Him-walk by faith and He will take care of us. Now, please bear with us, and let us still have a little place with you. May heaven's richest blessings rest upon each one of you, is our humble prayer. Pray for us. We need your prayers. Please take us by the hand, and help us to go along with you. We feel to be so unworthy of your love and sweet fellowship. Please forgive all our mistakes and wrongs, and let us still share a little place in your hearts and in your fellowship. The next session is appointed to be held with Elizabeth Church, five miles south of Marvell, Ark. This is a church of small membership at present. They have gone through severe trials, and they need all the help and encouragement they can get. Let us all now begin to make our plans to go and to be all the help and encouragement to them that we possibly can. Let us all try to go, and make them glad of our presence. C. H. C.

Elder J. R. Wilson, of Martinsville, Va., has agreed for us to put his name on our editorial staff. We are glad to have this dear brother associated with us again as one of our corresponding editors. We have been acquainted with Brother Wilson for about thirty years, if we are not mistaken in the time. We have never known him to advocate a single thing that was not in harmony with the doctrine and practice our people have contended for all along the line. He has no use for the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things, and that no matter what a man does he could not have done otherwise. Neither does he have any use for any new means or measures to be introduced in the house of God. He has no use for organs, Sunday schools, or any other invention of the world in the church of God. May the Lord bless his efforts in the service of the Master, and bless our labors together for the good of His people. An article will be found from him in another column in this paper. C. H. C.

More Help

---November 15, 1934

We have obtained the consent of Elder G. W. Lewis, of Auburn, Miss., to place his name on our editorial staff. Brother Lewis is the good and efficient moderator of the Amite Association. He is a man that is highly esteemed by the brethren of his own association, as well as by the brethren in other associations where he is known. He is highly esteemed as a man and as a citizen by other people who are not Primitive Baptists. He certainly does possess in outstanding degree the qualification the apostle says the minister must have- "Moreover, he must have a good report of them that are without." Brother Lewis has the full confidence of his brethren and of the people in his section of the country. Not only this, but we esteem him highly as an able minister of the gospel of the grace of God. He is sound in the faith and order of God's house. We have talked with him, and associated with him, and the more we are associated with him the more we love him. We are glad to have him associated with us, and humbly pray that the Lord may bless his labors to the good of His cause. We trust we may have an article from his pen for our readers as often as he may feel impressed to write. We trust, too, that he will watch over us for good, and help us to conduct The Primitive Baptist in such a way as to be of benefit to the Lord's dear children and to the building up of His cause. C. H. C.

Efforts Commended

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-I heartily commend your design in selecting good songs, and in making a hymn book, about the size and price of Lloyd's hymn book; that the words of the hymns should be sound in doctrine, to the glory of God; that the songs should be devotional and spiritual, to the joy of the soul of the saints. All know that a number of the songs in Lloyd's selections are not sound in doctrinal sentiment, and that a number of songs sung in our public worship selected from other song books in our church are not spiritually edifying to the saints or to the praise of their Lord. For saints to sing in public worship songs not sentimentally sound and devotional would be more hurtful to the church's good and unity than for the pastor to preach a little levity and some false doctrine. Now, as hundreds of new books of Lloyd's hymn books are in Primitive Baptist Churches, besides thousands of old shabby ones, may I suggest the ultimate interest of your book and the financial interest of our people that you place the number of Lloyd's song along side of the same song in your book. While I have ordered hundreds of Lloyd's books for the churches, I would far rather order a sound book, and I am sure that all other true and faithful pastors would prefer to do so, and in this way yours would gradually displace Lloyd's. I think that such a book as you propose will be a godsend to our churches, and to that end I pray for the success of your purpose.

Yours to serve, M. L. Gilbert., Dade City, Fla.

REMARKS

We appreciate the above letter very much, and thank Brother Gilbert for the kind words of approval contained in the same. We also appreciate the suggestion to give the No. of the song as they appear in the Lloyd collection; but it is too late now, as we already have nearly all the plates already made-just a few of the last pages have not yet been sent to the foundry to have the plates cast. We are sorry we did not think of this before it was too late. We could not afford the additional expense now, as it would cost almost as much, if not as much, to have those numbers inserted in the plates as another set of new plates would cost. It is our desire to get books introduced among our people, and to get them to use such books, as have no unsound sentiment in them. It is just as important to sing songs that are sound in sentiment as to preach sound sentiment-so it appears to us. Many songs that our people are accustomed to sing have some unsound sentiment in them. As an example, take the song, "There is a fountain filled with blood." As usually sung in the books generally found among our people, as well as among other people, the second stanza says, The dying thief rejoiced to see That fountain in his day; And there may I, though vile as he, Wash all my sins away. In this language the pronoun I is the subject of the verb wash. This says we wash our sins away in His blood, which is not the truth. It is a rotten Arminian sentiment, and contrary to (Revelation 1:1-5) "Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood." We do not wash away our sins in His blood; but He washes His elect, His chosen ones, the objects of His love, in His own blood, and cleanses them from their sins, and makes them kings and priests unto God. This is just one of a number of others we might call attention to. C. H. C.

Greenfield Association

---December 6, 1934

Elsewhere in this paper is an article from Elder J. W. Hardwick, of Smithville, Miss., concerning some matters which transpired at the meeting of the Greenfield Association, which was held at Sandy Branch on Friday, Saturday, and third Sunday in October, 1934. The following account of this meeting was given in the Weakley County Press of October 26, 1934, under the heading of "Dresden Items:" At a meeting of the Greenfield Primitive Baptist Association that met at Sandy Branch Primitive Baptist Church near Ruthville last Friday for a three-day session, eight of the churches withdrew from the association. These churches were Little Zion, Fulton, Martin, Greenfield, Sandy Branch, Matheny's Grove, Bethel and Rock Springs. Four remained in the association as follows: Blooming Grove, Union City, Concord and Brush Creek. Elder Henry Ross was elected moderator of the association, while Elder Bun Ross delivered the introductory sermon. When the association convened on Sunday for the last day session, two ministers delivered sermons, Elder Neal Graves from Bedford County, and Elder Beshears. A large crowd attended every service. The fellowship that prevailed was very fine. The churches that withdrew will not be affiliated with any association but will continue as independent sovereign churches. Under the same "Dresden Items" in the same paper we find the following announcement: It has been announced that Elder H. M. Sanders, of Dickson, will fill the pulpit for the Primitive Baptist Church in Dresden next Sunday morning and at night. Brother Sanders is rated a very fine preacher and the public is cordially invited to hear his able discourse. 'Squire R. R. Wright, president of the Weakley County Singing Convention, has been asked to lead the singing at this service. He will have other singers to assist him with the songs. We have been informed that the Dresden Church uses an organ in their song service. We suppose they also had an organist. Brother Wright once had membership in Blooming Grove Church. We were present with that church at their centennial meeting on Friday, Saturday, and first Sunday in August, 1932. There were complaints lodged against Brother Wright by the church in their conference during that meeting, on account of him advocating the use of an organ in the church. In that conference Brother Wright said they would have an organ in the church if it were not for ignorance and superstition; that if it were not for some ignorance and superstition they would have an organ. If ignorance and superstition is the reason why Old Baptists do not have organs in their churches, then they have always been ignorant and superstitious; for they have never had them, only by a few when they would depart from the original practice and order of the church. The introduction of such new things as organs and Sunday schools in Old Baptist Churches has always brought trouble, confusion, discord, and division among them. They have always been so ignorant and superstitious as to believe the Lord put everything in His church that He wanted there. They have always believed, and believe yet, that God meant what He said in (Deuteronomy 4:1-2): Now therefore hearken, O Israel, unto the statutes and unto the judgments, which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live, and go in and possess the land which the Lord God of your fathers giveth you. Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you. What applied in this language to national Israel, and it was addressed to them, applies with equal force to spiritual Israel today. It was necessary for them to do just as here instructed in order that they live and enjoy the blessings in the land of Canaan. It is also true today that it is necessary to do exactly this in order to enjoy the blessings of the gospel Canaan and in order to live in a gospel church capacity. The very things that are necessary for the churches of the world to do and to have in order that they live would destroy the Old Baptist Church, and cause her to lose her identity. An Old Baptist Church may go down on a common level with the world by taking and using the things the world has invented, and thus lose her identity; but she can never raise the world up on a level with the church. She may become enveloped by the world, but the world can never become enveloped by the church. We wish the brethren would all be satisfied with the goodness of God's house, and not try to revolutionize or reform the church of God. It is good enough as established by our Lord and handed down to us by our ancestors. May the Lord help us. C. H. C.

---December 20, 1934

This issue brings volume forty-nine of The Primitive Baptist to a close. We have now rounded out nearly a half century in the publication of this paper. Our readers know that the paper was established by our sainted father, and that the first issue was printed at Fulton, Ky., on January 1, 1886. He continued as editor of the paper until his death on the fourth Sunday in August, 1905. In the latter part of August, 1886, we moved from Fulton, Ky., to Martin, Tenn. On the first day of September, 1886, we began working in the office. Our father had bought an interest in a printing office at Martin from Mr. J. B. Gilbert, who was the prior owner of the office, and who was editor and publisher of the Martin Mail, a weekly county newspaper. Later on our father purchased the entire interest of Mr. Gilbert, and he then owned the entire plant. From the first day we went to work with our father in the office we have been almost continuously connected with the publication of The Primitive Baptist. There was a short while, during father's lifetime, that we did not work in the office, though we still had an interest in it. For awhile our health was not good, and he and our physician advised that it would be a help to us to work outside the office for awhile, which we did. Our health improved, and it was not long until we resumed our work and duties in the office. All these years it was the desire of our father and ourself to conduct the paper in such a way as to advance the cause of truth. We have had no desire to go off after new things. The "good old way" is still good enough for us. It is still our desire to make the paper a medium of correspondence for the Lord's humble poor. It has been our earnest aim for the paper to be conducted in such a way as to be of comfort and benefit to the Lord's dear children. It has been our sincere desire to contend earnestly for the principles of God's eternal truth. How well we have succeeded in this remains for our readers to judge and to say. We have come through many sore trials and afflictions. We have had enemies along the way. Not only have we had enemies from without, but we have had them from within. We know what it means to be in perils of false brethren. We know, too, that the world has never loved the doctrine of God our Saviour, as it is taught in His Book. All along the line men have arisen among us who were not satisfied with the goodness of God's house, and have endeavored to modernize and to reform the church of God. We have been satisfied with the church as we found it when we asked for a home with them in 1889. We were tired of the world then, and have had no desire to go to the world. If we wanted the things of the world, we would leave the church alone and go to the world, where the things of the world may be found, and where those things are. We have been satisfied all these years that when the Lord organized His church, He knew just what would be needed in the church in every age of the world from that time until the final windup and consummation of all things. We were satisfied then that He put everything in His church that would be needed in every age, and we are sure of that same thing today. For us to try to put something in the church that the Lord did not put there is no better than the sin of presumption. We would thereby declare that we know better what should be in the church than the Lord knew when He organized it. The Lord has forbidden the adding of anything to His teaching, and has also forbidden the taking of anything therefrom. To add one thing in His church which He did not put there is to add to His teaching. We have made our mistakes during these years. We are free to confess this. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." -(I John 1:9). We can only beg Him to forgive our many sins and transgressions. We also beg the brethren and sisters to forgive our many sins and mistakes, and to continue to bear with us, with our many imperfections, and to help us to serve the Lord in a way that is acceptable to Him. Help us to do as Paul said, in ((3) (Philippians 3:13-14) "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The year 1934 is now drawing near to a close. Another year of history is about made. It has been a year of joys and sorrows-" Mixtures of joy and sorrow, I daily do pass through." So said the poet. It has been that way with us during this year of 1934, as well as during the other years which we have lived. Yet we have much to be thankful for. "And having food and raiment let us be therewith content." -1 Tim. viii. 8. We now bid you farewell for this year. We hope to greet you again in the new year. The next issue of The Primitive Baptist will be dated January 3, 1935. May each and every reader enjoy a merry Christmas and a happy new year, and may heaven's richest blessings be showered upon each one of you, is our humble prayer. Please do not forget to remember us at the rich throne of grace. We feel to be poor and needy. C. H. C.

PREFACE

We have received many words of indorsement of the previous volumes of our Editorial Writings. We have also had some words of criticism. Every reader has not indorsed everything that each volume contained. We could hardly expect that they should. But we are trying to faithfully reproduce what we said in our editorial writings in The Primitive Baptist during the years since we began the work of trying to edit the paper. Our dear companion insisted for several years that we undertake this work, before we could "muster up the courage" to undertake it. Her opinion was that it would be of benefit to the cause of the Master. This volume, with the previous volumes, will show that our people-the Primitive Baptists-are still standing where they have always stood. They will also show, conclusively, that we have occupied the same ground during all our public life. Some things herein will be of value, from a historical standpoint, in the years to come. If we know our poor heart our desire in the publication of these volumes is the glory of God and the advancement of His blessed cause, and the benefit of His humble poor. The price we have been selling the books for is clear proof of the fact that the making of money is not the object in view. We desire that the Lord's dear children who are blinded by false teachers may be enabled, by the reading of some of these pages, to see where the true church is, and where the truth may be found. May the blessings of our Lord rest upon the reader, is the humble prayer of The Author Thornton, Arkansas, August 16, 1939

Introduction to Volume 50

---January 3, 1935

We now begin the publication of the fiftieth volume of The Primitive Baptist. Forty-nine volumes have been completed, and this issue is the first of the fiftieth volume. We are beginning the labors of the new volume and the new year relying alone on the good Lord for strength and courage to perform the tasks and labors as we come to them. We do not know what the year has in store for us. We have never known what was in store for us in the beginning of any of the many years in which we have been engaged in the editing and publishing of The Primitive Baptist; but by the grace and mercy of God we have come thus far. Through many dangers, toils and snares, I have already come; 'Tis grace has brought me safe thus far, And grace will lead me home. The Lord has promised good to me, His word my hope secures; He will my shield and portion be As long as life endures. Since the Lord has been so wonderfully good to us during these past years, why should we not trust Him and confide in Him? The way may often seem dark and gloomy, and our way may seem to be all "hedged in," but it is not our business to open up the way to go. The Lord has told us in His word what is well pleasing in His sight, and has directed us as to what He would have us do. His children are under law to Christ, {(I Corinthians 9:21)} and God's will concerning what we should do is expressed in His law. It is our bounden duty to put forth every effort to do what He has commanded in His word, as His children, and rely upon Him for strength and ability to do the same, and then leave the result with Him. The Lord God promised His chosen people Israel that when they walked in His commandments and did those things which were pleasing in His sight, He would go before them, and would fight all their battles for them. It was necessary for them to often go in obedience to God when the "odds" all seemed to be against them, and when it seemed to be impossible for them to do what was commanded or required. To refuse or fail to make the effort would have been rebellion. This would result in their destruction and overthrow, for God had said, "if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword." -((0) (Isaiah 1:20). To go forward they had to walk by faith. They could not see how they could ever accomplish that which was required or commanded of them. They could not see the way. It was their business to press forward, and to do their best to go on in the way the Lord had marked out for them to go, and it was the Lord's business to open up the way and to preserve and keep them. What was true concerning the Israelites in the prophetic age is also true with us today, if we are the Lord's children. In Paul's day he said, "For we walk by faith, not by sight." - (II Corinthians 5:7). It is just as true now as it was then, and as it was in the prophetic day. If we get anywhere in the service of God we have to walk by faith. Israel's God is the same today that He was in Abraham's day. Abraham walked by faith. He went out from his own kindred and from his own country, not knowing whither he went. God told him to go, and he went by faith, trusting the Lord to care for him and to care for the consequences and the result. May we not thus rely upon God today? He has not changed. He is the same "I AM" that He has ever been. We enter the new year and begin the task and the labors of editing and publishing this fiftieth volume of The Primitive Baptist, feeling to put all our trust and confidence in the Lord, that He will take care of us and our loved ones. Let us all look unto Him for protection and preservation, and strive to do the things that are pleasing in His sight; let us all "strive for the things that make for peace, and the things wherewith we may edify one another." Let us be satisfied with the goodness of God's house. Let us leave all the things of the world and the inventions of men in the affairs of religion severely alone. Let us try to use all forbearance the Lord requires. This does not require that we should indorse departures from His word or should fellowship the works or inventions of men in the church. Let us try to lay aside the things that bring disturbance and distress among the Lord's dear children and in His church. If we will live this way, the Lord will bless and prosper us. He has promised, and is faithful. May the Lord help us thus to do. C. H. C.

Crime Increasing

---January 17, 1935

A brother has sent us a copy of the Gospel Advocate of March 8, 1934, published in Nashville, Tenn. In that paper is an article concerning a report of the United States Senate committee appointed to investigate crime in our country. It seems that the committee put the blame for the enormous increase in crime on our schools, in part, at least. The writer in the Gospel Advocate seems to put much of the blame there. He also puts much blame on the moving picture shows, and the churches, or denominations, as well as on the home. There is little doubt in our mind that some of the blame may be rightly placed upon each of these different agencies. It is a serious fact that the home life of the average family is not what it once was. There has gradually developed a great looseness in discipline in the homes of our land. Years ago the young people, as a rule, were not gallivanting around all over the country in cars, day and night, as many of them are in these days. In our youthful days, it was a very seldom thing that a young man and a girl would go over the country at night alone. How is it now? If you travel much on our highways at night, how often do you find a car parked along the roadside and some young man and girl sitting in the car with their arms around each other? It is a common occurrence. Is it any wonder there are so few virtuous girls to be found? Is it any wonder so many young girls are ruined? Who is to blame for this? No one but the fathers and mothers. Do you allow your daughters to car ride at night? Do you know where your daughters are when they are not under your own roof at night? Are you teaching "the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed?" {(Titus 2:4-5)} Are you teaching the young men as the apostle directs in that chapter? It is true, and we are glad it is true, that there are some families yet where this teaching is observed and enforced. And these few are the "salt of the earth" in a moral point of view. Were it not for the few who yet stand for the principles of righteousness in the moral realm, it would be so bad in truth that decent people could not stay here. It is bad enough as it is. Right here we find much of the reason for the sad state of morals, or lack of morals, as we know they are today all over the land. Then there are the movies. These things constitute one of the greatest curses in the nation today. They are a curse from a financial standpoint. Many people who claim that they are unable to pay the debts they owe will go to the picture show and spend money which rightly belongs to their creditors. Perhaps they owe the money for food and clothing. But when they have thus spent the money, what do they get in return? Anything of benefit? It is certain they get no financial gain. Are they benefitted from a mental standpoint? Not in the least. Are they any better off from a moral point of view? Far from it. Seldom it is that a picture is put on the screen which teaches a good moral lesson. We are sure that fully ninety per cent (if not more) have a degrading influence. They cater to the sensual and to the baser instincts. Of what moral benefit can it be, for instance, to put on the screen the life of the base criminals, which all decent people know are a menace to our country? Such pictures can do nothing else than to excite in the young, especially, a craving for excitement and romance of the vulgar and base sort. It would be a God-send to our country if every picture show in the whole Union were forced to close their doors today. They are a menace to the good morals of the country. If you want your boys and girls to grow up in good morals and right living, for your own sake, for their sake, and for the sake of all that is good, keep them away from the movies. They may think you are too hard on them now, but in later years they will thank you and thank God that you kept them away from such influences. Next, as to our educational system. That is wrong from start to finish. The rule has been to start wrong. The first thing is to instill in the mind of the child the idea of obtaining an education in order to live without work-without producing anything. Then, the idea is to educate for the professions. The idea is to educate the girls and boys all along the same line. Both boys and girls are required to pursue the same course of studies, from the lowest to the highest grades. In order to graduate from the high schools the boys and girls are both required to complete practically the same course of studies. Either boy or girl may omit a study-there is no difference. In order to graduate from college, they are both required to go through the same course of study. No matter what they may follow through life-it is the same course. In order to graduate, and get a diploma, the boy and girl must have completed the same course. Remember, too, that the course required is to educate the pupil for some of the professions. When the girl has finished her course of study in the schools, has she been educated to make a home? Has she been educated to be a wife and companion for a husband? Ten thousand times, no. In few instances does she know the first principles of home making. If she knows, even the first principles, it is in spite of the schooling and not because of it. It is an indisputable and incontrovertible fact, which all sensible people know, that deep down in the heart of every normal girl, in her young womanhood, is a desire to have a home of her own some day, and to be mistress and "queen" of that home. She hopes that some day she will meet her "ideal" of a man, and that they can be united in one, and have a little home of their own, in which she will be "mistress and queen." All right. She finishes her education, according to the requirements; she starts out in life in some of the professions-just any place where she may find a position. But in the course of time she meets with her "ideal." She and the young man "fall in love," if they have not imbibed too deeply of much of the modernistic idea of "free love," and they become united in the holy bonds of matrimony, in which they are to forsake all others and cleave to each other and live in the holy state of matrimony until death. They start out to make their home. But the girl has not been educated for that. Instead of having been educated to stay at home and to be a home maker, she has been educated away from home. Both are disappointed. Their lives are blighted. They separate. The courts are filled with divorce cases. They feel that the whole system of home and morals are a myth. Why should a man who is to be a farmer be required to study foreign languages in order to complete the course of study which he will need during life? Why should a man who is going to be a physician be required to take the course required in all the studies laid down in the curriculum of the school? Why not pursue the course of study and finish in the branches which will be of service and use to him, and not require him to spend the time and money now required? Some of us would fail to get the money we now get. "The love of money is the root of all evil." "Another thing wrong with our schools is the introduction and teaching of "modernism." The young and rising generation are taught to sneer at and to disrespect the faith of our fathers. It is true that in the lower grades this teaching is veiled, and approached lightly. The teaching is such that the Bible account of creation is set aside, and evolution is taught in its beginnings. Thus they begin to instill infidelity in the minds of our children. Then in the higher schools the same thing is more clearly and more strongly instilled. Thus many of the "educated" of the younger generation are infidels and atheists. Many of them are that at heart, and yet do not openly deny the Bible as being the word of God. Yet they do not accept it unqualifiedly. They profess Christianity, and at the same time deny the fundamental fact of Christianity. They are generally free to deny the miraculous conception and birth of our Saviour. Thus they deny that He is "God manifest in the flesh." If Jesus was not "God manifest in the flesh," then the Bible is not the truth; and if the Bible is not true, then there is no God; we do not know where we came from, nor where we are going. Hence, they usually deny any such thing as future existence, and claim that when a man dies that is the last of him. But this idea of evolution did not originate, really, in or with the literary schools. Preachers advocated that idea before it was introduced in our text books in the schools. They advocated the idea that the sinner of Adam's race could be cultivated and trained up into the higher order of life-the spiritual or divine-and that this could be brought about by teaching; by selection or choice on the part of the sinner. This is nothing short of the doctrine of evolution-the sinner just" evolves" up into the higher order of life. After a time the educators, who believed this teaching of the preachers, applied the same principle to the realm of nature. They began to teach that men" evolved" up from the lower animal; that the lower animal" evolved" up from something still lower. Thus they embraced the teaching of the preachers, and applied the principles to the preachers, and began to teach that the preacher "evolved" up from the monkey. When this was done, and was pressed pretty strongly, and was made plain, then some of the preachers began to raise objections. No use to "kick" and raise objections, unless you repudiate your whole theory, and come over to the principles of truth as taught' by the Primitive Baptists, which have been taught by them all along the line-that life is given by a direct implantation of life; that the higher order acts sovereignly of its own will upon the lower; that the lower is passive in being raised up into the higher order; that eternal life is the direct and immediate and sovereign gift of the eternal God, who is the great and all wise Creator of all worlds. The truth needs to be preached. Then we need to practice the same and in harmony with it. We need to reduce to practice in our lives what God has taught in His blessed Book. Our people as a nation need this in the home life. Churches need it. The schools need to be conducted in harmony with the same, and the teaching in the schools needs to be according to the teachings of the Book from a moral point of view. We need a sentiment created among the people against crime and immorality, and for the principles of truth and honesty and honorable living and dealing with each other, both in the church and in the home. God only knows how much we need. C. H. C.

We trust that all who have written articles for The Primitive Baptist which have not been published will please bear with us. Our readers all know that every issue of the paper is full-all the space is filled. Yet we have many good articles on hand which have not been published. We would be glad to publish more of them, if we had the space. If we could get the paper out weekly, as we once did, of course we would have space for much more reading matter. But this is impossible, under existing circumstances. The code authority says how many hours we may work an employee each week, as well as how much we shall pay. We have not signed the code, but the law makes it apply to us in this respect, whether we sign it or not. This being true, we had to dispense with much of the help we had, and the editor and wife do much of the work we once employed others to do. In order to do this, and keep the paper going at all, we could get it out only twice a month. This is the very best we can do. The subscription list, seemingly, continues to drop off, and we see no prospect as yet of being able to get the paper out every week again soon. As matters stand, we are giving all the reading matter possible, and publishing all the articles we possibly can. As stated above, we have many good articles we would publish if we had space for them. If you have written an article (one or more) for the paper which has not been published, you need not conclude that it is because we find fault with the article that it is not published. We do the best we can to select what we think is best of what we have on hand-best for the cause, and best under all the circumstances for publication. We may make mistakes along this line, but we try to do what seems at the time to be for the best. We ask that you keep on writing-do not quit because we have not published an article you may have sent already. The more we have on hand, the more we will have to select from. We try to give as much variety as possible, and still try to select what seems to us to be good. We need and relish a variety of natural food, and the same is true spiritually. Bear with us, please, and help us what you can. C. H. C.

Brotherly Advice

---February 7, 1935

In another column in this paper is an article under the above heading copied from the Banner-Herald for January, 1935, from the pen of Elder Wm. H. Crouse, the editor. It is a splendid article, and we unqualifiedly indorse the sentiment contained therein, with a very little exception. We have written Brother Crouse a private letter indorsing the article. One expression we might modify is in the following: "I have prayed and hoped that I might live to see all our people united. I have given up that hope and am convinced that a union cannot be effected and am of the opinion that further agitation along that line is unprofitable." If it is right that all true Primitive Baptists be together, or if all true Primitive Baptists should be together, then it is not unprofitable to agitate such a matter. It is right to lend all encouragement to that end. It is right to labor for peace, and to strive for the things that make for peace. It is right to teach the brotherhood, as Paul taught in (I Corinthians 1:10), "that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." True, we may labor long and not see any benefit or good result of our labor; but "let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." -(Galatians 6:9). See also (Th 3:13) (II Thessalonians 3:13). In the warfare for the principles of truth and righteousness there is no place to quit. A soldier enlisted in the Lord's army, under the banner of King Jesus, is enlisted for life. If we are not traitors or deserters we must keep contending for the principles of truth and righteousness. But we should do this in the right way. No doubt many of us have contended for the principles of truth and righteousness in the wrong way. When we "lose our temper," and manifest a spirit of madness and revenge, we may be contending for the right thing, but we are doing so in the wrong way. We should not forget that "the servant of the Lord should not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth: and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will." -(II Timothy 2:24-26). Perhaps it is true that in the war with the Progressives, against the measures which those brethren introduced, extreme and harsh expressions were sometimes used. Perhaps some things were said which should not have been said. In some cases is it not possible that extreme steps were taken, and perhaps sometimes some steps taken hastily? We do not mean to intimate that the principles the "Old-liners" contended for were not right. Our readers know very well that we stand unalterably and unequivocally against the introduction of new measures among the Primitive Baptists, and against all so-called progressive measures. Yet it is possible for us to manifest the wrong spirit in contending for the "old paths." We fully agree with Brother Crouse that it is "sinful to introduce anything among our brethren, not commanded in the word of God, which will disturb and divide our people." It is not what the Bible teaches that divides the Primitive Baptists; it is what the Bible does not teach. Then why should we not be willing to lay aside those things which we may have that are not expressly commanded, and which divide our people, and come together and live together on the things the Bible does teach? Why can't true Primitive Baptists do this, and leave severely alone all things and everything the Bible does not teach, which may be calculated to bring trouble among us? Surely this would be commendable in the sight of God; and if we would do so, surely the Lord's rich blessings would rest upon us. May the good Lord give us all the spirit of true repentance and forgiveness, and help us to have the cause of the Master uppermost in our hearts and lives, and lay aside all selfish interest and selfish motives, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

For twenty-eight years I have been identified with the so-called "Progressives" of the South. All this time I have been either editor or associate editor of their paper. I have pastored quite a number of their churches and have traveled extensively among them. I was pastor at Graymont-Summit for twenty years, Statesboro twenty years, Metter sixteen years and Tifton sixteen years. I am now pastor of four good churches. They have honored me far above anything I have deserved and I love them. They are a fine body of Primitive Baptists. They have a number of ministers as able and as sound in faith as any in the United States—ministers of whom the world is not worthy. My companion is a member with me and into this body of Primitive Baptists I have received and baptized all of my six children. During all these years I have labored to bring about a union of the "Progressives" and the "Old-line" brethren of the United States. I have prayed and hoped that I might live to see all our people united. I have given up that hope and am convinced that a union cannot be effected and am of the opinion that further agitation along that line is unprofitable. Nearly all the churches identified with the Progressives now use an instrument in their song service. To remove them is impossible. To get the great body of our Old-line brethren to fellowship those who use them is equally impossible. I think there are some among the Old-line brethren who would be willing to fellowship those who use them, while at the same time protesting their use, but such a basis of union would divide the Old-line brethren throughout the entire United States and thus make bad matters worse. I love the Progressives, but I love our denomination throughout the Union and I would rather see the great body of our people united than to see such a union effected as would bring widespread division among the brotherhood and churches now united. I have never felt, and do not now feel, that the use of an organ in the song service is any sin within itself. But it has always been my judgment, and is now, that our brethren made a serious mistake when they introduced them and brought about a division of our forces. I urge our brethren everywhere who do not have them to leave them alone. My observation has been that they are unnecessary. Any help which they may have been in places has been more than over-balanced by the evil effects which have followed their use. Our people have become so accustomed to the instrument that it is difficult to have singing when there is no one present to play for us. In many instances, congregational singing has been destroyed and only a select few sing. Certainly spirituality has not been increased by their use. The condition of our churches prove that their use does not insure union, peace and prosperity. It is not worth while to argue the question as to the unscriptural-ness of their use. I hold that it is sinful to introduce anything among our brethren, not commanded in the Word of God, which will disturb and divide our people. It is not worth what it costs. I am sorry I have not followed this course. It is of much greater importance that the great body of Primitive Baptists throughout the Union be united than that they should affiliate with the Progressives. The Progressives have chosen their course. By the introduction of the organ and their continued use, they raised the barrier. Let brethren everywhere treat them kindly and leave the future to the good Lord, but let the Primitive Baptists everywhere get together and stand united leaving severely alone those things which have so sadly disrupted the brethren of Georgia and Florida. This is my advice to my brethren everywhere. I would not cast any reflection upon the able and godly men among our ministry or the many sound and faithful ministers and brethren identified with the Progressives, nor am I ungrateful of the extreme kindness shown me by these people. I cannot, however, forget the battles I have had to wage against an attempt from certain sources to remodel our faith. The "bedbug" theory of election, the "power-plant" illustration of atonement, the "Means" doctrine, so boldly advocated by tongue and pen, we uncompromisingly opposed, and received all too little support, and the advocates of these false doctrines are still represented in the high councils of the Progressives. Whether or not they will be able to put these theories over on our people in the years to come remains to be seen. Just now our people are carried away with the movement to do a "big" thing in combing the denomination clean to take care of old women of other denominations and of the world while our own cause suffers and the clouds thicken for another battle sure to eventually come. Many of us oppose these things but the only consideration we have received has been the charge of "jealousy" and a desire to lead. I am not in any sense a Progressive. My heart and soul is with all those who are satisfied to be old-time Primitive Baptists, true ever to our faith, and who regard the fellowship and union of our people as worth vastly more than all that the world can give or promise. Primitive Baptists would do well to stop and consider and get together on that faith and practice which through all the centuries has been the glory of our denomination ere the judgments of the Lord utterly consume them.-W. H. C, in Banner-Herald, January, 1935.

Church Rights

---February 7, 1935

We have recently been asked these questions: Is a church a sovereign?-has it the right to discipline its own members? Does the church have a right to receive excluded members? It has been a principle of Primitive Baptist teaching all along the line that each church has the sovereign and God-given right to discipline her own members. Each church has the right to say who shall not have membership in her body. Of course she may make mistakes in that, and refuse membership to some who may really and Scripturally be entitled to membership. But no other church has any authority or right to say the church shall receive or hold one in membership which she does not esteem to be entitled to the same. The church is not such a sovereign that she has a Scriptural right to hold one in membership whose life is such as to bring shame and disgrace on the cause. If a church does so, the sister churches have a right to complain, because they are injured thereby. If the church still persists in the course, the sister churches have a right to cease affiliation with her until she corrects the wrong, or until she ceases holding such member in her body. This, however, does not unchurch her. The Lord is the only one who can remove the candlestick. To the next question we would say that no church has the right to receive a member into her fellowship who has been excluded by a sister church. The only place in the world to get an account squared is where the charge is made, or on record. This thing of receiving a person into one church when they have been excluded from a sister church without satisfaction and reconciliation being made where the party was excluded has been the cause of no little trouble among our people. They should quit it. It is wrong, and there is absolutely no authority for it in the word of God that we know anything about. As long as a church exists as a gospel church where one has been excluded, that long should that excluded person not be received by another church until that excluded person has made satisfaction where he was excluded. This is our view of the matter. C. H. C.

Another Helper

---February 21, 1935

At our earnest request Elder A. D. West, of Wayne, Okla., has allowed us to put his name on our editorial staff as one of our corresponding editors. We are glad to have Elder West associated with us. We have heard him preach, and esteem him as an able minister of the gospel. We understand that he is highly esteemed among the churches and his brethren at home, as well as "those that are without." We are glad to have such men associated with us. We are glad to have the association and the fellowship of such faithful servants of the Lord. We trust that he will write for the paper, and that his writings may be blessed to the comfort and benefit of our readers. And we pray the Lord to continue to bless his labors in the Master's vineyard as he proclaims the riches of God's grace. C. H. C.

Tract Salvation

---February 21, 1935

In the Baptist and Commoner, of Little Rock, for February 5, 1935, is a little ad offering some tracts for sale. The ad says they put 75 tracts in an envelope and sell the whole bunch for 25 cents. The ad says that a tract may save a soul. Let's see- 75 tracts for 25 cents, and one tract may save a soul. These fellows are advertising salvation pretty cheap these days. The operation of the code has raised the price on most commodities; but it seems that these fellows are peddling salvation at a lower price than it has been advertised in recent years. Wonder what's the matter with their goods, seeing the price is so low these days. Let's see; 75 tracts for 25 cents; that would be one-third of a cent for one tract; and one tract may save a soul. If so, that would be a soul saved at the low cost of one-third of a cent! Blowhard's paper has these tracts for sale. There certainly must be a wonderful power in these tracts. In ancient times it took the work of the Holy Spirit to regenerate a sinner. In olden times the Holy Spirit made the application of the blood of Christ to the heart of the sinner; and in those days nothing short of that would save a soul. But these modern fellows have invented something the Lord knew nothing about, which saves souls at the low price of one-third of a cent each! In Paul's day sinners were redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. The Lord said in ancient times that His people should be redeemed without money. Well, these fellows have their system down pretty cheap- only one-third of a cent for the price of a little tract that may save a soul. God's people were redeemed long ago, and the price was paid in full; and the Holy Spirit does not forget to do His work in making the application of the blood. This tract salvation is unknown to the Book of books, and is nothing but the invention of a disordered mind-men making merchandise of the people-selling tracts under the pretense that souls may reach heaven by reading them which might otherwise suffer the torments of an eternal hell. They simply sell the tracts under a false claim when they make such pretensions. May the Lord pity them. C. H. C.

Hymn Book

---February 21, 1935

By the time this reaches our readers we expect to have the Good Old Songs Hymn Book ready to mail out. Of course it is possible for some unforeseen circumstance to intervene to hinder the work; but if no unforeseen trouble comes up, we will have some of them ready to mail out by the time this reaches our readers. It is in order now for you to send us your orders, if you want a good hymn book which we think contains nothing but sound sentiment. Of course some unsound sentiment may have escaped our notice, but we have tried hard to eliminate all unsound sentiment. The book contains 764 songs; 649 pages. It has the same songs as the Good Old Songs, the large size hymn and tune book we have been publishing for years. It is on the same order as the Lloyd hymn book. The print is good and clear, from new plates, which we have just had made. The price is only $1 for a single book, or $10.20 for a dozen. Postage paid. Your order will have prompt attention. We feel sure you will be pleased with this book, if you prefer a hymn book-a book without notes. The binding is an imitation of leather-stronger than sheep binding. C. H. C.

It Is Funny

---February 21, 1935

We had a name on our list which was marked paid to May, 1930. We marked the subscription paid free up to December, 1930. Then about December, 1930, somebody requested us to send the paper on; so it was sent on to the brother until January 1, 1932-a year on time. We sent two or three letters about that time, but had no response. A short time ago we wrote him a letter proposing that we forget the old subscription and offering to send him the paper another year if he would send us one dollar. Well, we got a good letter from him, which is funny. He says, "I never wrote you a line in my life. Take your paper and go to thunder and let me alone." Nice letter, that! We have had orders to go to a place, and we do not know which way to start, nor where thunder is to go to, unless we go to that brother, where he is. Thanks, brother; we will try to let you alone. Pardon us; we had been taking for granted he loved the truth. If we have judged him wrongfully, we are sorry, and beg his pardon, and we will try to "do so no more." C. H. C.

Church Harbors Crime - Minister Won't Reveal Name of "Confessed"

Kidnaper

---February 21, 1935

Fort Lee, N. J., Feb. 13 (AP).--To the Rev. Vincent G. Burns his dramatic outburst during the Hauptmann trial yesterday was but an episode-he has resumed life in his peaceful parsonage as if nothing had happened. Fort Lee and neighboring communities are abuzz, however. They heard reports that he would name the man who, he told the court at Flemington, had confessed the Lindbergh killing to him. "No," said Mr. Burns, "I will not make the name public. The man came to my church for protection." Told that he had been quoted as saying the man resembled Hauptmann, the clergyman expressed surprise. "I went to Flemington to help Hauptmann," he said. The above Associated Press dispatch of February 13 is copied from the Arkansas Gazette of February 14. In the report of the trial of Hauptmann as given in the papers of February 13 may be seen some account of this minister speaking out in the court room, saying the man who kidnaped the Lindbergh baby had confessed to him, and the preacher was put out of the court room. The Rev. Mr. Burns says he "will not make the name public. The man came to my church for protection." The reports of the affair given in the papers of the 13th as well as those of the 14th do not give the name of the denomination of which the Rev. Mr. Burns is a member, or with what church he is affiliated. It seems from what was reported in the paper on the 13th that he is a minister at some kind of mission; but the report does say what denomination the mission is of. It is clear to us that the statement of the Rev. Mr. Burns reveals at least one startling fact. That fact is this: Here is an institution posing as a church, a Christian society, a church of God, a church of Christ-or whatever name it may go by-it is posing as a Christian institution; yet it harbors criminals of the lowest and basest sort. This preacher says the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby confessed to him. But he would not make known the name of the criminal because the guilty wretch-if he confessed the truth, and if the preacher told the truth-went to his church for protection. Here is a public avowal that his church will and does protect criminals. Protecting a man who confessed to him that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby! What can such a church be but a body of "hoodlums;" a band of robbers; a band of kidnapers; a band of hijackers; a band of whoremongers; a band of murderers; a band of highwaymen; all sailing under the protection of a society posing as a body of Christians-a church! Good Lord, what may we expect next! Here is another fact revealed: All you kidnapers; you bootleggers; you murderers; you devils clothed as men and women-just come and enlist with us! You are assured of protection under the cloak of Christianity with us! Here is a city of refuge, where you may hide and be protected from the civil laws, so you may be guilty of all the dastardly deeds the devil may be able to invent, and yet be shielded from the punishment due under the laws of the land! This reveals another fact: The foregoing being true, then here is a society of anarchists, defying civil law. This under the name of the church! Good Lord, we again exclaim! Have the whole people of the nation gone to sleep? Are we dead-utterly dead to all that is good and right, even from a moral standpoint-to say nothing of Christianity? Wake up, ye sleeping, slumbering, sluggards! Wake up to the peril by which we are surrounded! With all this, state legislatures considering the legalizing of gambling on races, the legalizing of liquor, and some even suggesting that the states go into the manufacturing of such hell-brew and selling so cheap that the bootlegger will be put out of business! Thus the state go into the business of making drunkards, manufacturing the stuff and selling it so cheap that more folks can buy it; thus putting more drunken drivers on the road; thus more automobile accidents; more orphans; more broken-hearted wives; more crimes; more prisoners; make more liquor; make more crimes! Yet such men in our law-making departments posing as moralists! Such is enough to make the devil blush! Is it any wonder crime is on the increase? C. H. C.

The Man of Sorrows

---March 21, 1935

We have before us a book bearing the above title, by Rev. Henry Beets, published by Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, Grand Rapids, Mich. We have read the same with interest. We find much in it that is worth while. It contains many sublime and beautiful thoughts and sentiments; many precious gems of truth. Yet, we have found some thoughts expressed therein which are incorrect, we think, and which are really contradictory to the truth the book contains in other parts. From page 30 we quote the following paragraph: Let us notice now the four-fold lesson our text contains. In the first place let us guard against abusing God's house, as Israel did. And it seems there is reason to remind ourselves of this. The devil is always going about trying to desecrate the holy things of God. In our days he is endeavoring to do it. I think if our Saviour were on earth at present, and would enter many a Protestant church building and see some of the things carried on in them, He might make a scourge and in indignation drive from the places of worship, solemnly dedicated to the service of the triune God, persons who endeavor to carry on practices which cannot stand the test of the Word of God. How true this is. How many things are now engaged in under the cloak and pretense of Christianity that are unknown to the Book! How many things are engaged in, making the house which is supposed to be God's house, erected for the professed object of meeting together to engage in the worship and service of God, a house of merchandise. Such as this is enough to cause alarm, and should be a matter of shame. On pages 59 and 60, concerning the thief on the cross, who cried unto the Lord to "remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," we read: But this we know, that man to the right of Jesus became a glorious example of redeeming mercy and sovereign grace; a wonderful example of the power of God's Holy Spirit working unto salvation. When that criminal to the right of Jesus was first nailed to the cross, he was evidently just as bad as the one at our Lord's left hand, for we read in another gospel, Matt, xxvii. 44, that both the thieves cast words of taunting challenging to come from His cross, in the teeth of Christ, thus mocking the blessed One. But while he was hanging there, the Spirit of God took hold of that one man's soul, and in the twinkling of an eye, gave him a new heart. The impenitent wretch became a penitent sinner, and the unsaved criminal became redeemed, a child of God. Oh, friends, if you want to see a triumph of the grace of God, if you desire to see a proof that God's Spirit is able to save unto the uttermost, then think of that man at the right of the Saviour, saved in such a short time and transformed in such a wonderful way. On page 67, referring to the same thing, the author says: Doesn't it show the sovereignty of God's grace also? One man left, the other taken; and both criminals? In the foregoing we find especially two glorious truths of the gospel set forth in words which it seems to us should appeal to every child of grace, and cause his heart to glow with love to our blessed and holy Redeemer. One of these thoughts is God's great and everlasting and omnipotent power to SAVE. Surely the Lord's arm is not shortened, that He cannot save. He not only had the power to save the criminal, the thief on the cross, but He had power to save a persecuting Saul, and to make him a praying Paul. He had power to save the saints at Ephesus- He saved them and made them to be saints. Read (Ephesians 2:1-6) and see what the Ephesians were, and what they were doing, until the Lord saved them. Thank God, He has power to save. The next precious thought is God's sovereign grace and electing love. The Lord, in His boundless love and sovereign grace and mercy, made choice of the poor wicked wretch at His side, and by the work and power of His Holy Spirit, quickened him into a higher order of life-regenerated him, and gave him to see, to realize, and to know his own depravity; and thus caused him to cry out, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." God's grace in the heart, the work of the Holy Spirit in the heart, always makes the poor sinner cry, because that work, when performed, makes the sinner alive from the dead. God chooses to do that work, and has made choice of the sinners in whose hearts He performs the work. Hence, God's sovereign grace, His choice, His electing love, His power to save. Wonderful and blessed truths. But in the next paragraph on page 67 the author says: Notice also the wonderful riches of God's mercy, to hear a man as quickly as he cries, and to offer him Paradise with all of its beauty and glories. Here we think the author has missed it. Why, in the face of what has gone before, and in the face of what follows, which we do not deem necessary to quote here -why say the Lord offered the poor thief Paradise? Brother, it was not an OFFER of Paradise. It was a plain and positive and unequivocal PROMISE of Paradise. God had regenerated the poor criminal; He made atonement for his sins; God had made choice of him; and now, in harmony with all this, and to finally carry out all that this embraces, He makes a sure and everlasting and a blessed promise of Paradise with all its beauties and glories. This same promise of Paradise, this same promise of heaven, with all that heaven means, reaches to every heir of promise, to every redeemed sinner, to every sinner embraced in God's electing love and mercy, to every regenerated soul in all the wide world. Thanks and glory be to His matchless name, now and for ever. There are a few other inconsistent statements in the book, to us; but we forbear. It is a neat book, good clear print, on good paper, 131 pages, and the price is only one dollar. It can be had from the publishers at the address given above. C. H. C.

The Lord Is Faithful

God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord.-(I Corinthians 1:9). The Lord is not only faithful, but He is not slack concerning His promise. He is sure to do everything He has promised. He will keep every promise He has made. Many times we fail to do what the Lord requires of us, and what He has commanded us to do, because our faith is weak, and we are afraid to risk it. We may be impressed with a duty to perform, which would require some sacrifice on our part. We may fail to do what we are impressed to do, for fear that we cannot afford to make the sacrifice. If we have membership in the church we have covenanted with the same that we will not forsake the assembly of the church, especially in the regular conference meetings, which meetings are usually held on Saturdays. We may feel when those days come around that we cannot afford to lose the time. We may be behind with our work, and we see so much which it seems to us needs to be done, so we try to excuse ourselves and fail to keep our promise, as we have covenanted. We feel that we cannot afford to make the sacrifice. It would involve a loss, and we think we cannot afford to take the loss. Thus, when we fail to do what we have covenanted to do in the service of God, we make a sacrifice of that service for the sake of worldly gain. We make the service of God a secondary matter. We are not seeking "first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." We seemingly forget that all our labors for worldly gain will amount to nothing, unless the Lord blesses our labors, and gives the increase. We may feel an impression of mind, and there may be a case where someone needs our help in a financial way. But we may feel that we, ourselves, are poor and "hard run," and it is hard for us to "make ends meet." So we may fail to lend the helping hand to the one in need. We are afraid if we contribute to that cause, the Lord will let us suffer need; and that He will not supply our needs. We are afraid to risk what God has promised. We are afraid to make the sacrifice which we must make in the case in order to do what we really should do. We try to excuse ourselves on the ground of our own poverty. We have just been reading some in the life of William Gadsby, an able minister in his day, and for a long time editor of the Gospel Standard, of England. He was born in January, 1773, and died January 27, 1844. On page 25 we find the following circumstance related: One day, in the year 1800, he was going to Nuneaton to purchase provisions for the family. All the money he had in the world was 2s, 6d about 62 cents in our money. He had left nothing at home with his wife. As he was going along, he was joined by a man, who began to tell him a pitiful tale of distress. He walked with his hand in his pocket, and, to give his own words, "I first took up sixpence, and I thought I would give him that; then I took up a shilling, and thought I would give him that; but the devil told me it was too much; I could not afford it; but at last I gave him the whole 2s, 6d two shillings sixpence. Then the devil set at me with passages of Scripture, that I was worse than an infidel, for I had neglected my family. But I kept walking on towards the town (Nuneaton), just as if I had the money still in my pocket. When I got there, I met a man that I had not seen for some years. We entered into conversation, and when he went away, he shook hands with me, and left half-a-guinea in my hand about $2.50. Then it was my turn; and I set to, and gave it to the devil well." This he used to call being a match for covetousness. Here was a verification of the certainty of a promise of God. The Lord has said, "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He pay him again." - ((9:17) (Proverbs 19:17). Why can't we take God at what He says, and do what little He requires of us? Brother, are you afraid to risk it? "O ye of little faith." - (Matthew 6:30). "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." -((9:24) (Mark 9:24). May the good Lord help us to trust Him, and to rely upon Him for all He has promised, and help us to be more faithful and true to Him and to His delightful service. C. H. C.

Christianity To Export

To our everlasting shame as a nation it must be recorded that 5,068 persons have been lynched in the United States during the last 52 years. Asked once what he thought of Christian Missions, Sir Rabindranath Tagore of India replied: "So long as such things go on in your country, do you think you have any Christianity to export?" The above is taken from Our Dumb Animals, of March, 1935. This shows what the so-called heathen think of our great so-called Christian nation. Here we are posing as a Christian nation, the modern religionists "compassing sea and land to make proselytes," and yet crime more rampant, probably, in this country than in any heathen nation on earth. The missionary fanatics leave no stone unturned to get money for foreign missions, telling us that the heathen, poor benighted human beings, are going down to eternal perdition in their ignorance, and yet in our own country there have been a little more than an average of ninety-seven lynchings every year for the past fifty-two years. In the name of reason, in the name of all that is holy, if their theory, their doctrine, their claim, is true, why do they not go to work more zealously, more earnestly, on our own people here at home, and first make the United States a safe place in which to live? Talk about saving the heathen! And here we are going into the business of legalizing gambling, encouraging the making and selling of intoxicating liquors, encouraging more drunkenness, more crimes, more lynchings-more of everything that is contrary to Christianity or morality! The plea is that people will gamble and drink liquor, then why not the state get some revenue from it? Yes, and people will carry pistols; they will run and visit houses of ill fame; some will be guilty of public swearing; some will be guilty of stealing; some will engage in the "white slave traffic." Why not, upon the same parity of reasoning, put a tax on these things, and let the state get some revenue from the emissaries of the devil who engage in all the diabolical crimes? For heaven's sake, we would be ashamed to advocate the idea of legalizing any of the inventions and practices of the devil and his hell-crew. To do so, is to simply advocate the idea of "playing into the hands of the devil." But this is only the production of devil-taught and devil-instigated doctrine, which these modern fanatics are teaching, and yet sailing under a cloak of Christianity. We were told years ago that if they could get money enough they could take the world for Christ. The so-called "Laymen's Movement" was inaugurated for that purpose. Yet crime is on the increase.. The so-called Christianity is a failure-from every standpoint. It does not even promote morality, much less Christianity. The doctrines they teach and promulgate are no kin to the doctrine of God, the doctrine of the Bible. Their teaching is that the sinner can quit his devilment when he gets ready-just repent, by turning from it and quitting it, and that he will then sail right into heaven and enter eternal joys and heavenly felicity at death. The doctrine is that God has done His part, and that now it is left up to the sinner; it is just optional with him. This doctrine is precisely suitable to the depraved nature of humanity. The unregenerate sinner loves sin. He does not love God, nor holiness and righteousness. Hence, he is encouraged to go on in the commission of murder, theft, robbery, rape, drunkenness, white slavery, hijacking, and every other diabolical crime that the devil and his cohorts can invent. But just before he leaves this world he decides to repent, turn away from, quit, his devilment, and sail right on into glory. Witness the case of Mark H. Shank, who wilfully and deliberately killed four members of the Alvin Colley family in the summer of 1933. He was sentenced to the electric chair, to be executed at the Tucker farm, Arkansas, the date set for March 8, 1935, early in the morning. At the last, when his lawyers gave up, and acknowledged they could do no more to save him from execution, just about two days ago he called for a priest. What for, we wonder? Of course, to make his good confession; repent, accept the Lord, and his spirit sail right into glory, leaving his body in the electric chair! There you are! "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." - ((0)) (Matthew 7:20). Such persons as this man Shank, and others of like ilk, have given absolutely no evidence of anything else but an evil and wicked and devilish disposition by their fruits. If they are transported into glory upon the principle of the so-called Christianity of the day, hell is a misnomer-there is no such thing; there is no such place. If there is such a place, it will be empty, and will be for rent finally. Export Christianity! Good Lord; you fanatics better get to work to mend the morals of our own country, and quit so much of this devil doctrine and making merchandise of the people. C. H. C.

Romans 9:13 and Future Identity

Dear Brother Cayce: Please give your views on (Romans 9:13) in regard to God's love and His hatred; and also your views on future identity. Subscriber. REMARKS The text referred to reads as follows: "As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." By reading the connection you will see that this was before they were born, "the children having done neither good nor evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand. It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger." Then comes the language of the text: "As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." The primary meaning of the word here translated hated means to hate, regard with ill-will, to detest, abhor. That is the sense in which the word is here used. Sometimes the word, by extension, means to regard with less affection, love less, esteem less. The word is used in that extended sense where the Saviour says, "If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple." -((26)) (Luke 14:26). This last text is the one Arminians run to with the plea that God only loved Esau less than He loved Jacob, just as a man must love father and mother less than he loves the Lord in order to be a disciple of Jesus. But that is not the sense in which the word is used in (Romans 9:13). God loved Jacob and did not love Esau is the sense in which the word is used; hence God loved Jacob and bestowed the blessing upon him and passed Esau by. Why? Because He did not love Esau. As to future identity, brethren have differed on that question. Some few have held the idea that we will know each other in heaven just as we know them here. But we hardly think so. Earthly ties and relationships will be done away there. I do not think I will know S. F. Cayce there as my father. It will be one family there. God is the Father; Jerusalem (the covenant) is the mother; the redeemed are the children; Jesus is the Elder Brother. It will be a spiritual and heavenly relationship, and spiritual and heavenly knowledge. Yet we will know that we have been redeemed from sin and its ruinous consequences to God, out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue and people. That will be enough. What's the use of fussing here about what and how much we will know in heaven, if we are so fortunate as to be there? We cannot know here as much as we will know there. We have to walk by faith here; over there faith will be swallowed up in knowledge. No use trying to find out here how much we will know there-it can't be done. C. H. C.

Sunday Schools

---April 4, 1935

On page 57 of Time, a weekly magazine, of March 11, 1935, we find the following: In 1780 a pious Gloucester man named Robert Raikes formed the first Sunday school. His purpose was to keep the children off the streets while teaching them their letters, "the truths of the gospel" and "moral restraint." As time passed a further objective appeared-to lead children into church membership. This tells a historical fact-that Robert Raikes founded the first Sunday school in the world in 1780. Jesus never established a Sunday school. Paul did not establish one. The Apostle" Peter did not establish one. Not one of the Lord's apostles ever established one. When Paul left instruction to Titus to set in order the things that are wanting, {(Titus 1:5)} he gave no instructions for the organizing of a Sunday school, a Ladies' Aid Society, a Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., a B. Y. P. U., a Junior League, a Senior League, a Ladies Auxiliary, a Mite Society, or any other society, such as the worldly churches have today. Robert Raikes organized the first one. The Lord did not do it, nor did He authorize it. If His church had needed it then, or would ever need such an invention, He would have organized it, or gave instruction for it. The devil may need all those things for his churches, but the Lord does not need them for His church. Robert Raikes did not organize the first Sunday school as a church matter at all. In those days there were no free schools. No child had any schooling only those whose parents were financially able to pay tuition, buy books, etc. The consequence of this was that the children of the poor factory workers of the town roamed the streets, without any opportunity of schooling. To help that class of people, Robert Raikes organized his school for Sunday and employed and paid the teachers. The object was to teach the children to read and write. The object was a worthy one; and if the Sunday school had been let alone and allowed to stay where the originator put it at first, it would have been a blessing to humanity. But not so. Later it was adopted as an adjunct to the church, and, as stated above, used to lead children into church membership. Does the Lord's church need such as that to lead children into church membership? If so, the Lord did not tell us about it. Was He ignorant of what would be needed? If He knew, did

He care so little that He would fail to tell us of a thing that is so much needed - as the world today thinks? Worldly churches may need that, as well as the "thousand and one" other things they have; but the Lord's church does not need any of the inventions of men. What the Lord's church needs to lead people into its membership is for the Lord to regenerate poor sinners by the direct work of His Spirit in their hearts, and then for them to hear the truth of the gospel proclaimed by true and faithful men, who will not shun to declare any part of God's blessed and eternal truth; men who will not court the world for popularity; men who will not try to be like the world; but who will have the courage of their convictions, and who will "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." If that will not lead people into the church for membership, God knows the church does not need them. Here is one great reason for the disrepute into which the church has been brought and the disrespect toward the church today-a catering to the world-efforts to bring the world up to the church. The world cannot be raised up to a level with the church. Such efforts only tend to lower the church in the esteem and respect of reasonable minded people, and brings the church into disrepute. God give us men who will dare to stand against every false way, and against every innovation of men. On page 58 of the same magazine the article quotes from a Mrs. Bro, "mother of four, lecturer, onetime Disciples of Christ missionary," "Parents pack their children off to Sunday school, feel no further responsibility. And most children who go to Sunday school do not go to church afterward." On page 57 she says the Sunday school has fallen short of its aims. Here you have it from one who should be in a position to know that the Sunday school is a failure-it has fallen short of its aims. But an even worse thing-" Parents pack their children off to Sunday school" and "feel no further responsibility." The eternal God has put the responsibility of the proper training of the child upon the parents. But these Sunday school parents shift the responsibility off on the Sunday school. Thus they disobey God's moral requirement, and do irreparable injury to their own offspring. The children are deprived of the training and care they are entitled to from their parents; they do not get it. What is the result? The deplorable condition the world is in today is partly the result. God pity us. Christianity seems to be at a low ebb. Thousands of sober minded people are turning away from the organized societies, called churches, in disgust. They are no more in attendance. They see nothing but commercialism, a cloak to wear to gain standing in the world, a thing to "profess" in order to get worldly gain and popularity. "Those who attend Sunday school do not attend church afterward." What is the tendency then? Evidently, instead of increasing church attendance, it detracts therefrom. Better "junk" the thing, and return to the original simplicity in the service of God, and leave off the sideshows and inventions of men. Say, you Old Baptists who "bring up" your children to go to Sunday school, do you not think it is high time you were taking back on your own shoulders the responsibility God has placed upon you, when He gave you your children, and keep them away from such things as the foregoing? Remember that "God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." When you bring your children up to go to Sunday school, you bring them up to attend a thing, the avowed object of which, as above, is to lead them to church membership. What church membership? Membership of the church of said school, of course. Do you want your children thus taught, thus led, and thus brought up away from you; away from God's church; away from God's blessed truth? If not, for the love you have for your own flesh and blood, for the love of your heavenly King, train them away from the Sunday school, instead of "bringing them up" to attend it. C. H. C.

Compulsory Military Training

---April 4, 1935

The Supreme Court has decided that any university known as a "landgrant institution" can compel every student to take military training whatever his religion or conscientious convictions may be. So the two young men, Hamilton and Reynolds of the University of California, will have to give up their college course or their ideals of what duty demands of them. Furthermore, the Supreme Court has gone on record as affirming that military service is obligatory upon every citizen, man or woman, and each must resort to force of arms to defend the government when called upon. This liability to military service decision appears far more extreme than anything "ever established by Congress." Doubtless the Court's decision is in keeping with the Constitution, but let the Government get into another war and it will be surprised to find the number of citizens who will refuse to obey its mandate, Constitution or no Constitution. Wars, some day, will not be made without the consent of the people who will have to do the fighting, if fighting is to be done. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana is, we are confident, no false prophet when he says, "In the first World War which we like to think was the last World War, the common people were forced to listen to the voices of the politicians, the war makers, the munition makers, the bankers. Before the next World War the bankers, the munition makers, the politicians will have to listen to the voices of the common people, to the voices of the workers, to the voices of the younger generation. They will find that those whom they would use as cannon fodder will no longer be willing to make arms, to transport arms, or to bear arms that are going to be used against their fellow workers in other countries." The above article is copied from Our Dumb Animals, for March, 1935. The heading in that magazine was "Compulsory Military Training in America." As to military training this clearly and unmistakably shows the trend of things at the present time. When the universities all adopt this measure, then it will be extended to the colleges, and then to the high schools, and one will be compelled to take military training in order to attend any of our schools. It is surely a bad omen. It looks bad to us. How does it look to you? But even worse than that is the fact that "the Supreme Court has gone on record as affirming that military service is obligatory upon every citizen, man or woman, and each must resort to force of arms to defend the government when called upon." Here we have it that military service is obligatory upon our women. Brother, sister, how does that "taste" to you? Are we to come to the pass that our women folk are to be drafted to go to the front and fight on the bloody battlefields at the call of the government, when that government is brought into war as the result of agitation and propaganda put out by the war lords, the munition makers, the profiteers-as most every war is? If our representatives in Congress would have had to go to the front, and their wives and daughters would have had to go to the front in France, as our boys had to do in the World War, we are confident they would have been much slower in declaring war than they were. It is usual that the "brunt" is borne by the "common people" in such as that. Well, if the signs of the times do not change, the world is getting ready fast to plunge into another conflict. When that day comes it will be much worse-far worse-than the last. All nations are appropriating billions for war preparation-battleships, submarines, airships for bombing and other fighting. The so-called world court is doing nothing-not functioning. The powerful League of Nations is no longer "leaguering." Our own country is in the race, appropriating more, perhaps, than any other nation; and the Supreme Court has already said that our women as well as men should answer the call to arms. What do you say? We believe it is right for every man who is physically able to do so to be ready to take up arms and go to the battle in defense of our country. We believe it right for us to be ready to defend what has been handed down to us by our forefathers, who laid down their lives on the bloody battlefields that we might have the form of government and the freedom they fought for. But we do most solemnly and sincerely protest against our women being called upon to bear arms. Now is the time to speak out on this question. Now is the time for our churches to speak. We, as citizens and as members of the kingdom our Lord left for us here on earth, should speak out on this all-important matter. It will be too late after the fire comes. It will be too late after the call has been made. We sincerely believe every Primitive Baptist Church-as well as every other church, who oppose the sending of the women to the battlefield -should right now pass resolutions declaring their position on this momentous question. We would suggest a resolution similar to this: Whereas, It has been published that the Supreme Court has gone on record as affirming that military service is obligatory upon every citizen, man or woman, and each must resort to force of arms to defend the government when called upon; and Whereas, We do highly prize and esteem and love the principles of the government which have been handed down to us by our forefathers, and for which many of them laid down their lives on the bloody battlefields; and Whereas, We do deem it to be our bounden duty, as well as a great privilege, for us to maintain and defend those unspeakable blessings and privileges thus handed down to us; and we here declare our allegiance and loyalty to these principles; but we do hereby protest against the idea that our women, our wives and daughters, should answer a call to arms. Therefore, be it Resolved, That we enter this solemn protest against such a measure; and declare that it is contrary to our understanding of our Lord's requirements, as given in His Book, the Holy Scriptures; and further, be it Resolved, That we hereby state that such a thing is a violation of and contrary to our conscientious religious views; and we therefore could not sanction such a course, on account of such conscientious scruples. Be it further Resolved, That we have sent to our representatives in Congress a copy of this protest and these resolutions. Please do not censure us for calling attention to this serious matter. Our people in the past ages have spoken out on such matters as concerned the welfare of the people as a people and as a nation. Now is the time to let it be known that we conscientiously oppose our women being called upon to bear arms and go to the bloody battlefields. May the good Lord help us in these dark and trying times. John Newton

Somewhere, some time, last year we heard some brother say that John Newton, who wrote Amazing Grace, was a Methodist. We thought the brother was mistaken, so we made a note in our memorandum book to look the matter up, which we have just done. We find the following information in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, ninth edition: "John Newton was born in London July 24, 1725, and died Dec. 31, 1807. He was a prominent evangelical clergyman of the Church of England. He was ordained priest at Olney in June, 1765. About three and one-half years later Cowper, the poet, settled in the parish. An intimate friendship sprung up between them, and they published together the Olney Hymns in 1779. In that year Newton left Olney to become rector of St. Mary Woolnoth, London, where he labored with unremitting diligence in visiting and preaching till his death. He held strongly Calvinistic views, although his evangelical fervor allied him closely with the sentiments of Wesley and the Methodists. His enduring fame rests on certain of the Olney Hymns, remarkable for vigor, simplicity, and directness of devotional utterance, which have passed into almost universal currency throughout the Reformed churches of English speech." This is sufficient to show that Newton, as well as the Church of England in his day, as well as other Reformers, held to fundamental principles of doctrine very much the same as the fundamental principles of the doctrine the Primitive Baptists still hold to until this day. Thanks, Brother

Brother Cayce: Amos enclosing the $1. Please let my subscription begin Nov. 1st, 1934, as I want to get all of the articles that have appeared. I don't want to miss any of the FUSS. You know the Lord wants us to keep up our fussing, if we have to leave off some of our peace.

Yes, thanks, brother, for calling our attention to what the Lord wants. Of course He wants some folks to continue to advocate the introduction of new means and measures into His church, into His kingdom, into His service. But of course He does not want anyone to say a word against that. Of course He wants all and each and every one to "keep mum" and never utter a word against any departure from what He has given in His word. The reason we know He does not want anyone to sound a note of warning against any departure or against any approaching danger is because He has said, (Ezekiel 3:4,11): Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them. And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear. It is very clear here that the Lord's ministers are required to warn the people of God of any approaching danger, and against departing from the teachings of His word. Of course it is also true that many will not be pleased with the warning. They were not pleased with such in Isaiah's day. Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever: that this is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not hear the law of the Lord: which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophecy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophecy deceits.--((0:8) (Isaiah 30:8-9,10). Then as many, or some, of the children of Israel will object to the truth, of course the Lord wants no FUSS about the matter; hence the Lord excuses His ministers under such circumstances, and they should, for these reasons, keep quiet and utter no protest against any new measures that may be introduced among the followers of the Lord! We have tried to warn against any departures from the plain and simple commands which the good Lord has given us in His blessed word. It seems that this brother thinks the one who raises an objection against a departure is raising a "fuss." Brother, let us kindly suggest to you that if any person brings anything into the Old Baptist Church which has not been clearly recognized as their usual practice, and which is not authorized by the good Book, that person is responsible for the "fuss." If you have been advocating something, publicly or privately, for which you do not find a thus saith the Lord, just quit it, if you think the Lord does not want the Primitive Baptists to fuss. The man who advocates something the Book does not authorize is the man who is a disturber of the peace. We repeat, we have tried to warn against the introduction of progressive measures into the old church. If no one has tried to introduce such, then there is no one for us to "fuss" with. When a man warns against such as that it does not disturb us. It does not cause us any alarm, and we have no fear that he will raise a "fuss" or a disturbance with us on that score. It does not make us think there will be a disturbance on that account, or because of his contending against such things. Perhaps if we were a little guilty we might be disturbed and fear that there will be a "fuss," and that we might forget about peace, unless he would leave off opposition to our proposed departures. If we want peace in the old church, let us quit our departures, and contend faithfully for the things the Lord commanded, leaving all else alone, and then we will have peace. As long as some will introduce new measures into the church of God, just that long will God have somebody in the world to raise a cry against those departures. May the Lord help us all to stand in the good old way and walk therein, and then we shall find rest to our souls. C. H. C.

Work Appreciated

---May 16, 1935

During the past two months, while we had on a special effort to add new names to our list, and were offering the paper at one dollar a year, several brethren sent us a lot of new subscribers, as well as renewals. Brother S. E. Copeland, Guntersville, Ala., sent us over a hundred names, some new and some renewals. Several other brethren sent a goodly number. We appreciate their efforts and the work they did. They helped us to add quite a number of new subscribers to the list. If a hundred others had taken hold and had done as well as some of those who did work, we could have had many more names on the list now than we do have, no doubt. We know that a great many are so situated that they cannot do much, if anything, in the way of procuring subscribers for the paper, being isolated from the brotherhood; but perhaps several could have helped if they had only picked up the courage to try, and were not too easily discouraged. But we sincerely thank each one who did lend a helping hand, and again we say we appreciate it. May the good Lord bless you, is our prayer. Your work was an encouragement to us. It stimulated us to keep on trying to press forward. Perhaps the Lord is in the matter of our labors. He has blessed us much. To Him be praise and honor. We still desire to serve Him, and to contend for His truth. C. H. C.

Fairchild, Hardy, Todd, and Bishop

Several days ago-in May-we received a letter from Elder W. C. McMillon, of Newport, Tenn., in which he enclosed a letter he had received from Elder J. W. Fairchild, and asking us if we could give him any information as to his state or standing among the Old Baptists. We wrote Brother McMillon under date of May 8 and told him the last we knew of Elder Fairchild that he had caused trouble in Mississippi and went to the Missionaries. We told Elder McMillon we thought the letter from Elder Fairchild should be published, that we felt like the cause demanded it. We received a letter from Elder G. W. Lewis, Auburn, Miss., dated May 18, in which he told us that Elder Fairchild had asked for restoration at Providence Church, where he had caused the trouble. He wrote a letter to that church asking for restoration, stating that the Baptists of Tennessee wanted him to be with them. Brother Lewis asked for our counsel and advice regarding the matter, stating that the church rejected him. We have written him that our advice would be to let him alone and to let him stay out. The letter he wrote to Elder McMillon will show for itself what kind of movement and effort is on foot among a few, at least. The following is the letter: Whitesburg, Ky., Apr. 14, 1935. Dear Brother McMillon: Seven years have passed since I enjoyed the hospitality of your home, the fellowship of your churches and the companionship of your ministry. Those were blessed days and my mind often reverts to them with pleasure. But many changes have come since those days. The work of strife and division continued, the wounds of Zion were not healed but opened wider. It looked like all was lost. I gave up the struggle to unite and harmonize Baptists, for every effort was but sewing new cloth on an old garment. It seemed the Lord had cast off Primitive Baptists as He did the Jews and for the same reason. But I have hope the "seven thousand" have been reserved. Some of us ministers are getting together with the determination to go on, preach the truth in love, try to strengthen the churches that will work with us, and organize new churches where possible. The field is limitless, God's children are everywhere, starving for spiritual food, yearning for the simplicity of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and ready to be gathered into the fold. They are tired of trying to fill themselves with husks, and when the truth is brought to them in love they are ready to receive it as a thirsty man to drink cold water. They are in all denominations and no denominations. I know how deep most of them are in tradition, but the Spirit of Jesus will reach them. I tried to get Baptists to stop fussing over non-essentials and gather in these scattered sheep, but most of them seem to want them measured on their own bedstead. I could do nothing. But now a few of us ministers, including Elders J. B. Hardy, H. A. Todd, and a number of others have agreed to go into this work, work with all who will work with us, and those who will not, we will simply leave alone. We will love them, if they fight us we will not fight but turn the other cheek. We have no fuss with them, but love for them. We are getting-or trying to get a nucleus in Tennessee. Elder Hardy is at Hohenwald, Elder W. A. Bishop at Jackson. Elder Todd is going to do a lot of work in Chattanooga, and may locate there. My mind is leading me toward Knoxville. I would like to locate in Knoxville and work with the Primitive Baptists in that section. Knoxville is large enough for two Primitive churches if the work is properly done. And the territory around Knoxville is unlimited for our work. I hope you can find it agreeable to work with us. You know what I preached when I was with you. I have not changed in doctrine. And while the others who work with me would probably not agree with me on everything-I know of no two persons who do-we are all agreed on fundamentals and do not make a brother an offender for a word. We have no bars up against those who are in harmony with the fundamentals held by all true Primitive Baptists. Please let me hear from you. I want you to give me the names of some of the leading Primitive Baptists in Knoxville. I remember some of the ministers, but not initials and address. If you can send me a minute of their association I will highly appreciate it. I have been down with flu for two months and not able to work yet. I hope you and yours are well. Primitive Baptists here are beyond recognition by doctrine and preaching. One side is rank Arminian, the others are such extreme Predestinarians accountability is lost. No, they are not Predestinarians at all for they do not know what predestination is. They claim to be Absoluters, but they are skeptics. No reality about anything, Jesus Christ, according to some, never was a human being. With highest regards to you, Sister McMillon and children, I am, in love, J. W. Fairchild. Now, there you have the matter in a nutshell. Elders Fairchild, Bishop, Todd, Hardy and some others are banding together, thus forming a nucleus to begin the labors along the line that seemeth good to them- regardless of whether it suits the time-honored principles of the church or not. No matter how our fathers have stood. Elder Bishop is excluded from the Primitive Baptists in Jackson, Tenn. He has formed a church of his own, with a Sunday school, and using Campbellite song books. We do not know what else. Elder H. A. Todd was excluded years ago from a Primitive Baptist Church, we think at Rushville, Ind., for joining the Missionaries. He was received by South College Street, Nashville, Tenn.,

without his going back to the church that excluded him for restoration there. We think we have received the information that South College Street has rescinded the act of receiving him. In our issue of May 3, 1934, is an article from Elder Earl Daily stating that Elder Todd had located at Indianapolis and had organized a church, mostly from Progressives, who have had no affiliation with regular Primitive Baptists for years, and that those people have no standing with the regular Primitive Baptists whatever. Now Elder Fairchild says Elder Todd is going to do a lot of work in Chattanooga. We wonder who will work with him there. Elder Raulston, can you tell us who? Elder H. P. Houk, who lives at Gurley, Ala., is pastor of the Chattanooga Church (or was). Brother Houk, can you tell us who will work with Elder Todd? Elder W. J. Harwood, Dunlap, Tenn., preaches at Chattanooga. Brother Harwood, can you tell us who will work there with Elder Todd? We think Brother D. M. Raulston is clerk of the church. Brother Raulston, can you tell us who will work with the elder? Perhaps he can get some of the Progressives in that country to work with him; but we do not believe any of the regular Primitive Baptists, who stand on the old principles, in that country will work with him. What about Knoxville? Elder Hurst is pastor there. Brother Hurst, do any of our brethren in that section wish to have anything to do with such measures? Perhaps Elder Fairchild can have some workers with those in that country who left the old line practices years ago, about the time the Kirklands, Todd, Hackleman, and others left the old landmarks. What about any of you brethren in West Tennessee working with Elder Bishop? Are there, some of you who will do that? Will any of the brethren in the Predestinarian Association do so? Will any in the Forked Deer do so? Will any in the Big Sandy do so? Will any in the Greenfield do so? Will any in the Obion do so? Wonder if Elder Fairchild would be willing to tell what other preachers are expected to work with those he named? He said there are others, but did not give their names. Elder Fairchild says, "The work of strife and division continued, the wounds of Zion were not healed, but opened wider." Remember that the preaching of the truth and practicing what the Lord has taught in His Book has never brought strife or division in the Old Baptist Church. What does cause that? No one can deny that it is the teaching and practicing of things not authorized in the Book. Then who has been causing the strife and division to continue? No one only those who have been teaching and practicing the things that caused the trouble. If you brethren are sincere when you say you want peace in Zion why do you not leave off the things that cause the trouble? He says farther that "every effort was but sewing new cloth on an old garment." What do you want to be trying to patch up the old garment the Lord gave for His church with your new cloth (new things) for? Are you not satisfied with the old garment? Are you fellows afraid the old garment will wear out? The clothing the Israelites wore in the wilderness did not wear out; their shoes did not wear out. The Lord has told us the result of sewing new cloth to the old garment; and He has furnished everything His people need in His church and in His service. Leave your new things alone and let them stay out in the world where they belong, and then the trouble in the church would cease. Yes, there is "at this present time also a remnant according to the election of grace." There may not be seven thousand, but there is a remnant who will not yet have anything to do with your sewing of new cloth, your new measures. We are still satisfied with the "good old way," and we still have the courage to raise our voice against the bringing in of any of the new ways and means and measures. What the Lord has given in His word for us to teach and practice in His kingdom is enough. That is the only way to have peace-leave off everything else. There is no use to cry peace, peace, when there is no peace. Quit your ungodly departures, and then we will have peace." Most of them seem to want them measured on their own bedstead." It seems that one of the Lord's old prophets had some idea of the right sort of bed, too. "And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it. From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and it shall be a vexation only to understand the report. For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it: and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." -(8:18) (Isaiah 28:18-20). Elder Fairchild says some of them are getting together and trying to get a nucleus-some of them covenanting together. They are going to work along their own lines-not the old lines the church has traveled. But the old prophet says your "covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand." When men agree to stand together in the church in things the church has not always practiced, and in things the Lord has not authorized, it is an agreement with hell-according to Isaiah-and he says it shall not stand. The Lord will take care of His church. He will have enough faithful and true witnesses reserved for His church and truth to be maintained. Yes, we want things measured by the bed we rest on; for the Lord has prepared and furnished the resting place for His children; and the covering thereof is wide enough for the hungry-hearted and wayworn pilgrim to wrap himself in it. Thus, and thus only, he may rest and find protection from the things of the world. Your bed and covering may be too short and too narrow. Yes, some of us still desire the Lord's way. You may go on with yours, if you desire; but for God's sake, if you desire those things, stay out of the Old Baptist Church and let the Old Baptists alone. That would be the commendable thing to do. If the things the Baptists fuss over are nonessentials, then leave those things off. If they are not essential then one can afford to let them alone. If one cannot afford to let them alone, then he should stay away from the Old Baptists and go where he can advocate them without causing trouble. It does not cause trouble so much among the Missionaries to advocate new things among them. Why do you not stay with them where you can advocate your "new cloth" without causing them so much trouble? One other point right here. This will inform you brethren in Middle Tennessee very plainly as to where Elder Hardy stands. It will also give the brethren elsewhere that information. We are not publishing this to injure anyone, but for the protection of the cause. We think the cause demands that the brethren generally be informed as to what this letter contains, and as to the movement on foot, and who the promoters are. Our kind advice would be to just let such promoters severely alone. May the Lord help us to "stand in the ways, and see; and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein." C. H. C.

Ministerial Qualifications

This is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous, one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; (for if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?) not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil.-(I Timothy 3:1-7). It seems to us that the above language is as plain and clear and positive as it is possible for language to be. The apostle here tells what a bishop MUST BE. That is, a man is to have the qualifications here laid down, or else he is not to be put into that office. He MUST have these qualifications. He must meet these requirements. He must be blameless. That is the first thing the apostle puts down in the catalog. To be blameless is to be free from blame or fault. Not to be blameless is to be guilty of that which is worthy of blame, or deserving of censure or disapprobation; culpability; fault; crime. His life must be above reproach. Unless his life is above reproach, and yet he is ordained to the work of the ministry, the church utterly disregards the plain requirements of God's inspired word. It is true that every man who makes anything makes mistakes. No man reaches a state of sinless perfection here in this life. There has never been but one who lived a life of sinless perfection here, and that was Jesus, the God-man, the anointed Saviour. But He was God as well as man; He was God manifest in the flesh. While it is true that no man can or does reach a state of sinless perfection here in the flesh, yet God's children can and should "through the Spirit mortify the deeds of the body." They should keep the body under subjection, and thus live a life above reproach; and unless one does this he is not to be ordained or set apart to the office of an elder or bishop, or to the work of the ministry. To go contrary to this is a flagrant violation of the word of God, "The husband of one wife." This does not necessarily mean that he must be married. The Apostle Paul, who wrote this letter to Timothy, was not married. But he must be the husband of one wife only-or the husband of only one wife. That is, he may have a wife; but he must not have more than one wife. This does not mean that if he has a wife and the wife dies he must not marry again. If the wife dies, then he does not have a wife. He did have a wife, but the wife died and then he has no wife. There is no law of God forbidding a man having a wife, so he may marry again, since he has no wife after the death of the one who was his wife. There is another point here which we shall not discuss at length in this place, as it has been "threshed out" heretofore; and that is in the case of fornication or adultery. If a wife commits adultery or fornication she breaks the marriage bond and thereby becomes dead to her husband. Being dead to him, he is left without a wife. As there is no law of God forbidding a man having a wife, but the marriage state being honorable in the sight of God, the man, in such a case, is free to marry again, and is no adulterer-no more so than if the first wife should die and be put under the ground and he then marry again. But no man is to be set apart to the work of the ministry who has more than one wife. He must not be an adulterer. He must not be living in adultery. This is God's law, and we cannot disregard it without bringing trouble and distress upon ourselves and upon the church. He must be vigilant. To be vigilant is to be alertly watchful as one keeping vigil; circumspect; alert; attentive to discover and avoid danger, or to provide for safety. See Webster. The true minister-the one the Lord has made-is a watchman. "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me." -(Ezekiel 3:17); (33:7). As a watchman he must be vigilant. He must be alert in watching. He is not to be "asleep on the job." He must be attentive to discover and avoid danger, and he must give the alarm when he sees danger approaching. If there is, some departure from the principles of truth in doctrine or practice making any sign of approach, it is the business of the watchman, the minister, to detect it, and he must give the cry and warn the house of Israel of the threatened danger. It is dangerous to the Lord's house to depart from what God has authorized. If one does not possess this qualification he has no business being set apart to the work of the ministry. He must be vigilant; he must be watchful. This does not mean that he must be watching for an opportunity to find fault with his brethren, but he must be watchful to warn the brethren against every false way. He must be sober. Sober means, 1. Not so influenced by alcoholic liquors as to have one's faculties materially impaired; not drunk; also, habitually temperate in the use of liquor. 2. Temperate or moderate in thought or action; exercising cool, dispassionate reason; self-controlled. 3. Characterized by dispassioned reason or judgment; rational; as sober judgment. 4. Serious or subdued in demeanor, habit, appearance, color, etc.; solemn; grave; sedate. See Webster.

How important this requirement is. How disgusting for a man professing to be a gospel minister to be under the influence of intoxicating liquor. Even if he is not so drunk but what his legs will walk straight, yet it is disgusting in the extreme, to us, for his breath to be smelling like an old rotten whisky barrel. The filthy smell of whisky on the breath of any professed follower of the Lord is bad enough, and much worse on the breath of one professing to occupy the sacred desk as a minister of the gospel of the grace of God. It is enough to "turn the stomach" of any decent person on earth, much less a poor hungry child of grace, who longs for the way to glorify God. Lord, deliver thy kingdom and thy poor saints from such professed leaders! But there is more than one way for one to be drunk. "They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink." -(9:9) (Isaiah 29:9). When one staggers he does not walk straight; he is drunk; he is not sober. But the minister must be sober. He should be sober in his demeanor-that is, in the way he conducts himself. If he is not living that way, to begin with, he should not be set apart to the work. If he has already been set apart, and ceases to be sober, gets drunk, and begins to stagger, or walk crooked, he should be deposed from the office by the church. The church should remember, and not forget, that the minister MUST BE SOBER. And they should act accordingly. Thus much serious trouble in the church may be averted. Let us be faithful and true to our Lord, and not have the favor of men to control our actions. But what we do in the service of God should be in love and tenderness and humility, having the good of the cause at heart and in view. Do nothing in the spirit of malice, hatred or revenge. He must be of good behaviour. "These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly: but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." -(I Timothy 3:14-15). The apostle wrote Timothy that he might know how he ought to behave himself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God. He was given proper instruction. We find that instruction in the Book. If we follow the teaching, or instruction, given therein, we will behave ourselves in the church of God. If one does not behave it is because he is not observing the instruction given. But the apostle tells us the minister must be of good behaviour. He must behave himself. If he does not, he needs to be "taken to task," if he has already been set apart to the office. If he does not behave before being set apart, the church has no Scriptural right to set him apart. How careful the church should be in this matter of ordaining men to the work of the ministry. We feel satisfied that much of the trouble that has come in the church has been on account of the failure to observe and take heed to the plain and positive instruction the Lord has given concerning this all-important matter. We have just begun to hint at some of the things concerning this subject, but our space is taken up for this time, and we will have to continue the subject, and will try to write more for the next issue. In A Sad Plight

Everywhere there are souls "drifting helplessly" toward eternity without any prospects of a heavenly anchorage. Shall we stand back and ignore those who do not know their own awful plight? Or turn deaf ears to those who recognize their peril and desire to know how to be saved? Let us be up and doing. There are souls being lost because of our lack of concern. It is vital concern of all who belong to the Lord Jesus Christ and who rejoice in His great salvation. The above is copied from the Baptist and Commoner of May 28, 1935, and appears under the name of E. E. McMurry, under the heading, "Hear Ye!" That sure does put all those who belong to the Lord Jesus Christ and who rejoice in His great salvation in a sad plight. He says, "there are souls being lost because of our lack of concern." Then he tells us that "it is vital concern of all who belong to the Lord Jesus Christ," etc. If it is vital concern of all who belong to the Lord Jesus Christ to tell the people how to be saved, and they are being lost in an eternal hell because of a lack of concern on the part of those who belong to the Lord Jesus Christ, then pray tell us what will become of those who belong to the Lord Jesus Christ? The writer would have us believe that it is the business of those who belong to the Lord to tell the people who are not saved how to be saved, and that they are lost in an eternal hell because we do not tell them how to be saved. "When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand." - (Ezekiel 33:8). If God requires their blood at your hands, and they are eternally lost on account of your neglect, then what will become of you? Will you not meet the same fate as those you fail to warn? If you do not meet the same fate as those you fail to warn, and they go to an eternal hell on account of your failure, then God does not require their blood at your hands, does He? Here is a dilemma for you. If your doctrine is the truth, and people go to an eternal hell on account of your neglect, then so will you go to an eternal hell. On the other hand, if you do not go to an eternal hell on account of your neglect to warn them, then your doctrine is not the truth. Which horn of the dilemma will you take? Verily "the legs of the lame are not equal." C. H. C.

Words of Approval

Dear Brother Cayce: Enclosed is my renewal to The Primitive Baptist for another year. I am glad to do this for two reasons—for the enjoyment and instruction I get out of it and also as an expression of my well wishes for your encouragement and continued successful operation of the work you are in. I would be glad that you should lose no subscriptions, but that they should increase. You have other publications that are my desire to order sometime. I do not suppose I am any busier than anybody else, but I find it hard to get around to things I would like to do, such as reading, writing and visiting, except at the expense of needed rest. It has been my desire to write you personally and to contribute an article to your paper, if it was worthwhile. You have heard from our admired and loved pastor here (Brother Duncan), and you may remember the remarks made in appreciation at the close of your sermon here last summer. I may be classed as the younger generation, but you can expect no new things out of me. I want to avoid even the appearance of them, much less have them exist. I think if you do not have the appearance of them you will not be troubled with their creeping in. This appearance in my opinion should be avoided, both in remarks and practice. I joined the Old Baptists and the church, and realize the Old Baptists and the church did not join me. But I have no desire to live with them except as I found them. I will defend them as they stand, and not try to make them more acceptable by catering. I appreciate the information you have given to the Baptists through the columns of your paper, and feel that all should who wish to keep their house in order. The course you have pursued does not constitute tale bearing or strife making, and in my opinion has been entirely ethical. I would not consider the publication of a quarrel as ethical, but it is right for God's servants to give the warning, as shown in one of your previous articles, so they can "choose this day whom you will serve." I refer to the unadulterated cause, not men. By being warned they can be saved from destruction in happiness if they are disposed to obey. We are a unit in Memphis. We want everyone whom a cloud is over to stay at home, and we don't propose to go a visiting under clouds. Our church here has responded nobly to leadership and counsel, and we have had some good preachers come and say fine things for our good. I feel that if it is possible for something to pass by and disappear it is not wisdom to mention it, as it kindles and adds fuel to fire and if it persists, it is prudent to give the warning, but distasteful to engage in quarreling. I am heartily for your paper and the way you have managed it. It has not been vague in any way. I believe it is worthy of outspoken encouragement and I want to see it prosper, read and circulated, as advocated by Brother J. H. Fisher, Newcastle, Texas. Wife and I visited with Brother Duncan after supper last week and sat up until late talking over interesting and enjoyable things. Among the things that were said that interested me was the prospects of your coming to visit and preach to us. Was sorry of the conflict that existed at the time you thought of coming, but hope you will include us at another time, and early at that. It has been my plans to invite you, and I am glad that you have also thought of coming. We would love to hear you more than once or twice, and would be glad to have you and your family in our homes. Come and preach to us on Friday and Saturday nights before some Sunday and then on Sunday. Brother Claud, I just wanted to let you know where I stood and to speak for my church, and to write words of encouragement to you. If I should try to contribute an article to your paper it would be along the trend of thought as outlined in this letter. I don't think warning and protesting is trouble making. Remember me and wife in your prayers, and I pray God's blessings upon you and yours. Your brother in hope, S. W. Dearing. 996 Galloway, Memphis, Tenn.

Dear brother, we are taking the liberty of publishing the above letter, and trust you will not think hard of us for doing so. Write again, and especially for the paper, if you feel so impressed. We appreciate the above letter more than we have words to tell. Brother Dearing is a son of Brother W. P. Dearing, Covington, Tenn., and a grandson of the late Elder B. O. Dearing. He is an efficient and faithful deacon of the church in Memphis, and his dear father is a faithful and true deacon at Indian Creek, near Covington. His grandfather was a faithful and true minister. If all the Old Baptists were like these dear men there would be no departures, and no trouble in the old church. May the Lord continue His blessings with you and your dear companion, and continue to give you grace to sustain you as you go on in the good old way. Yes, we want to visit your church and be with you in more than one service. Make a suggestion as to the time, and we will see if we can work to it. Pray the Lord to keep and to sustain us, and to help us to be faithful. C. H. C.

---July 4, 1935

In our last issue we promised to try to write farther on this subject for this issue. The text we were using was (I Timothy 3:1-7). We wrote on the several qualifications as "blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour." Before proceeding farther we wish to correct an error made in the print in the last line of next to the last paragraph in the article in last paper. That sentence reads, "If he does not behave before being set apart, the church has no Spiritual right to set him apart." It should read, "the church has no Scriptural right to set him apart." The next qualification the apostle gives is that he must be "given to hospitality." To be given to a thing is to be disposed to it, or disposed that way; inclined that way; addicted to it. Such is the habit or custom; it is his way of doing or being. Hospitality means the kind and generous reception and entertainment of strangers or guests. We once knew of a minister being on a trip visiting churches, which he had been requested to visit, his wife accompanying him. At one church on that trip two home ministers were present. They were members of that church. That visiting minister and his wife did not receive a single invitation to go home with those preachers, or with the members. To our mind, this is not "given to hospitality." The minister, if he fills this qualification, is glad to have brethren, sisters, friends, to visit in his home. He is glad to entertain them in his home-be that home ever so humble-as well as glad to have them visit his churches. "Apt to teach." Some people may know things, but are lacking in the ability to impart instruction to others. This is true in nature as well as in the gospel. We have met some literary teachers who are not a marked success because they do not possess the ability to impart instruction to others. They know the things all right; but do not have the necessary ability in order that they be successful teachers. They are not "apt to teach." There may be many who are well informed as to the teaching of the Scriptures; they are sound in doctrine and practice; they know what the doctrine and practice of the church is; but they are not "apt to teach." They know what the truth is when they hear it, but they cannot tell it in such a way as to make it plain to others; they cannot impart instruction; they are not "apt to teach." The one who is set apart to the work of the ministry must be "apt to teach." He must be able to instruct. He must be able to teach others. Here brings in the necessity of study. "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Note the word rightly in this expression by the inspired apostle. The minister must not only study to divide the word of truth, but "rightly dividing." He must study to know what the right division is. He must study to know where each Scripture belongs which he uses. He must rightly apply it. This is necessary to be done in teaching. He must be apt in that line. To be apt is to be fit or fitted; suited; suitable; appropriate. Hence, for one to be apt to teach he must be fitted to teach. How is one to be fitted to teach the doctrine and practice and order of God's house unless he makes such things a study? If one does not read and study the Scriptures he is not "apt to teach," in the sense of our text. How necessary that the church observe this requirement, to see that one possesses it before he is set apart to the work of the ministry. The fact that one can make a noise with his mouth is no evidence that he is "apt to teach." Some folks seem to think that if a man can stand on his feet and make a great noise with his mouth that he should be ordained to the work of the ministry at once. That is a great mistake, and the church has suffered much on account of it. "Not given to wine." To be given to a thing is to be disposed, inclined, addicted. This is very clear to us that the minister is not to be in the habit of drinking. He should not be inclined that way. For him to be otherwise is to set a bad example, and to put forth a bad influence. If he is the kind of man the Lord requires him to be he MUST let wine alone. "No striker." By common usage the word striker now has a variety of meanings. Webster gives it as one that strikes, in any sense; and one who, especially in politics, attempts a strike. Under that definition he refers to the word strike used as a noun, note 15, under that word. There we are told that a strike is an act of obtaining or attempting to obtain money by importunity or any form of blackmail. If this is forbidden-absolutely forbidden that a man shall occupy as a minister of the gospel of the grace of God who is guilty of this, how much worse for the church to tolerate and harbor a man in that position who is guilty of robbery! The word in the original also means quarrelsome. The minister must not be quarrelsome. He is to be faithful (or should be), and this requires that he speak out against false doctrines and wrong practices, things not authorized by the Book; but he should not be always trying to "pick a quarrel" with someone. "Not greedy of filthy lucre." Greedy is, 1st, having a keen appetite for food or drink; ravenous; voracious; very hungry. 2. Having, or characterized by, eager or keen desire; eager for wealth. See Webster. We gather that one may have a keen appetite for money, or wealth, as well as for food or drink. One may be very hungry for filthy lucre. One may be eager for wealth. It appears to us that it is just as possible for a man posing as a minister to be eager for wealth as for one occupying the pew. Is it not possible for a preacher to become covetous as well as other members of the church? We think that in our life we have seen some of that sort. If the preacher is greedy of filthy lucre he might allow himself to engage in some questionable practices, which would be calculated to bring reproach upon the cause. Besides, if he should be successful in gathering worldly wealth, according to his greed, he is liable to be lifted up with pride and haughtiness. He might forget God. He might forget from whence his blessings come. He would be more than likely to neglect the service of God. In fact, he is most sure to do that if he is greedy of filthy lucre. Or he might do some things in or as service to God to get gain. One greedy of filthy lucre is likely to think of self. We once knew a preacher to say a reason why he would not make announcement at his appointments that he would take subscriptions for an Old Baptist paper was this: One might be there who left home with a dollar in his pocket expecting to give it to the preacher; if he should announce that he would take subscriptions for the paper the party would give him the dollar for the paper, and thus he would not get the dollar the man brought there expecting to give to him. It looks like we cannot get through with this text. We will have to quit for this time, and try to write more for next issue. C. H. C.

Our readers will remember that in our issue of June 20, 1935, we had an article under the above heading, in which we published a letter written to Elder W. C. McMillon by Elder Fairchild. In that letter from Elder Fairchild, the reader will remember that he said, "But now a few of us ministers, including Elders J. B. Hardy, H. A. Todd, and a number of others have agreed to go into this work, work with all who will work with us, and those who will not, we will simply leave alone." In our article we said, "Wonder if Elder Fairchild would be willing to tell what other preachers are expected to work with those he named? He said there are others, but did not give their names." Since our issue of June 20 came out we have learned the names of some of the others these brethren are working with, although Elder Fairchild did not give them to us. We have before us a part of a newspaper published in Jackson, Tenn., the home of Elder Bishop. That paper is dated June 28, 1935, and in that paper we find the following news item: The Bishop Memorial Church of Jackson will be host to the Primitive Baptist Conference which opened here today and closes Sunday. The conference opened this morning with Elder W. A. Bishop delivering the address of welcome. Elder J. J. Kirkland responded while the principal address of the day was delivered at noon by Elder J.

E. Stewart on "Co-operation of Church and Pastor." Tonight's session will open at 7:30 p. m. with a 30 minute song and devotional service. This will be followed by an address, "Unity of the Saints," by Elder Cayce Pentecost. The Saturday session convenes at 10 a. m. with Elder W. O. Miller speaking at 11 o'clock on "Prayer." The noon address will be delivered by Elder J. B. Hardy on "Scriptural Teachings as to Women's Work in the Church." The evening address will be by Elder W. A. Pinkstaff on "Inward Essentials to Outward Growth of the Church." The main address at the conference Sunday morning will be by Elder T. W. Mitchell on "Church Discipline." At the noon hour, Elder H. A. Todd will speak on "Church Sovereignty." The address Sunday night will be by Elder A. M. Towry on "Christian Experience." The above tells the names of some of the preachers they are working with. Note their names: J. J. Kirkland, J. E. Stewart, Cayce Pentecost, W. A. Pinkstaff, T. W. Mitchell, and A. M. Towry. Now, let us see a little about what kind of line-up this is. J. J. Kirkland was lined up with the other Kirkland brothers in the disturbance they caused the Baptists in the years 1905 and 1906. The other three went to the Missionaries, and died holding membership there. J. J. remained out where the other three left him, with what few followers they had in the whole country. Since that time he has had no identity whatever with the regular old order of Baptists. W. A. Pinkstaff went with the Progressive element along the same time, and has not been recognized by the Old Line Baptists since. He has been a part of the time in the Elk River Association, which has not been recognized by our people in twenty-five years or more. T. W. Mitchell is in the same line-up. A. M. To wry was excluded several years ago from Pleasant Grove Church in the Flint River Association. If you wish to verify this statement write W. G. Monks, Fayetteville, Tenn., clerk of the church, or to Elder J. M. Walker, Hazel Green, Ala., the pastor, or B. B. Lawler, Brownsboro, Ala. Elder J. E. Stewart is excluded from Shiloh Church in the Mt. Zion Association. We wrote a little article in regard to this some time ago when we saw he was mixing some with our people, which we withheld after writing it. Now is the time for us to give space for at least a part of what we then said. Here it is: It becomes our duty to notify our brethren generally that Elder J. E. Stewart stands excluded from the church. He united with Shiloh Church, in the Mt. Zion Association, and was baptized by authority of that church. In their conference in November, 1917, a committee was appointed to investigate his standing in the vicinity of Flint River Church, in the Flint River Association, where he had been living for some time, though his membership was still with Shiloh Church. Brethren V H. Copeland and H. Thrasher were appointed as the committee. Their report was not very good. In the March, 1918, conference he was charged with affiliating with a disorderly church and refusing to pay his just debts, and excluded from the church on said charges. Elder A. Whitworth, of Arab, Ala., was moderator of the conference, and H. Thrasher was clerk. Brother S. E. Copeland, Guntersville, Ala., wrote Brother Stewart on January 29, 1928, trying to get him to see the error of his way. Brother Stewart answered the letter. We have the letter before us as we do this writing. It is not dated; but on page one we find this sentence: "I have told public that I was excluded, never denied it in my life." Of course, he goes on in the letter and tries to justify himself. But this is evidence from his own pen that he was excluded, and the records of Shiloh Church show it to be a fact that he was withdrawn from. We understand the faction he now stands identified with is in or recognized by the Elk River Association, and they have no correspondence with our people. Elder James Duncan, 2053 Young Ave., Memphis, Tenn., wrote us on Dec. 11, 1934, that Elder Stewart told him he was in the Sand 'Mountain Association. He is not a member of any church in that association. If you wish a copy of the minutes of the meeting when Elder Stewart was excluded we are sure you can get the same by writing V H. Copeland, R. 3, Guntersville, Ala. He is clerk of the church. Or you can get it by writing S. E. Copeland, Guntersville, Ala. Now note the fact that the above so-called "conference" met with Elder Bishop's church in Jackson, Tenn. And we see that Elder Cayce Pentecost was to deliver an address; thus it seems that he is also one of the number who will work with Elders Fairchild, Todd, Hardy and Bishop. We note the above article says "the main address at the conference Sunday morning will be by Elder T. W. Mitchell on 'Church Discipline.'" From the way matters are going it seems that some of them need a little instruction on the matter of discipline. This way of recognizing and affiliating with excluded parties is no better than the very grossest of disorder. This sort of practice destroys every principle of church discipline. It treats the churches with downright contempt, and utterly ignores their right to withdraw fellowship from those they consider to be disorderly in their walk. ' It destroys the right of any church to discipline her members for anything. We call attention again to the expression quoted above from the letter written by Elder Fairchild, "a number of others have agreed to go into this work, work with all who will work with us," etc. Well it does seem like they will work with anyone who will work with them. We have heard such a remark sometimes about some parties as this: "He is just anybody's dog that will hunt with him." But we are thankful that there are some who will not work with them in the work they are doing. We are sorry they are engaging in this, and that they are not content to let the old church alone. C. H. C.

We promised in our last issue that we would try to write more on this subject. We were using (I Timothy 3:1-7). Last issue we wound up on the expression, "not greedy of filthy lucre." We will begin this article with the next expression in the text, "but patient." Here is a qualification that most of us, or many of us, at least, need to take heed to. Patient means, 1. Undergoing pains, trials, or the like, without complaint; bearing or enduring with equanimity; having or exercising patience. 2. Being indulgent to the shortcomings of others; lenient to others' deficiencies; forbearing. 3. Expectant with calmness, or without discontent; not hasty; not overeager; composed. See Webster. It is so easy for us to complain when we have trials to undergo. But the minister of the gospel should bear trials without complaint. He should be willing to suffer without complaining. He should be indulgent to the shortcomings of others. He should be kind to those who err from the right way. He does not need to encourage them in wrongs by being indulgent, or patient. He should not be ready to declare non-fellowship for every brother who may step aside from the right way. He should be ready to bear with the wrongs of his brethren. Yet he should not be willing to fellowship or bear with disgraceful practices and heretical doctrines in the church. He should patiently teach against and warn against every false way. He should do this in the right spirit, not manifesting a spirit that is overbearing. He must patiently labor for that which is right. He must do this calmly. He must not "lose his head." He should not be too hasty. Patient labor will frequently accomplish that which is right, when hasty action would destroy instead of save. He should not "make haste." Let us patiently labor for the things that are right. "Not a brawler." A brawler is one that brawls. To brawl is (1) to quarrel noisily and outrageously. 2. To complain loudly; to scold. 3. To make a loud confused noise. Two synonymous words are to wrangle, squabble. The minister must not engage in such practice. That is, he should not engage in such. It sure would look bad for a minister of the gospel to engage in a noisy and outrageous quarrel. It would not look well for him to complain loudly and to scold. One can reprove without scolding. This is a very nice point, and one that the minister should be very careful about. He might administer reproof and some might think he is scolding. Hence he needs to be very careful about that. He should not wrangle. It is better to hush and say nothing than to wrangle over a matter. Let the other fellow "cool off," as well as "cool off" yourself. Do not wrangle or squabble. Here patience needs to be exercised some more. "Not covetous." This goes back somewhat to the expression, "not greedy of filthy lucre." They are almost just alike in meaning. Covetous is, 1st, very desirous; eager to obtain. 2. Inordinately desirous; excessively eager to obtain and possess (especially money); avaricious. See Webster. From Cruden we quote the following: "This word is sometimes taken in a good sense, as in (I Corinthians 12:31), 'Covet earnestly the best gifts.' This covetousness is good and commendable, when spiritual blessings are earnestly desired and sought after. But most commonly it is taken in a bad sense, for an eager and immoderate desire after earthly things. Covetousness is called idolatry, because the covetous man places the love, delight, and confidence in riches, which are due to God alone. This sin is condemned in all sorts of persons, and is expressly forbidden by the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet.' Such as are addicted to this sin, are hated of God. They are cruel and oppressive. The riches they are so eager in the pursuit of prove but poison to kill them, and thus they are miserable. The inordinate love of wealth does likewise betray men to manifold sufferings; both from themselves, in denying themselves the comfort of their estates; and from others, as extortioners, thieves, and the like." We have omitted the citations which he gave; that is, the Scriptures referred to. Covetousness is classed with very grievous sins by the inspired writers. "But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat." -(I Corinthians 5:9). Here the sin is classed with fornication, idolatry and drunkenness. In (I Corinthians 6:9-10) the apostle says, "Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." Horse stealing is no worse than covetousness. If you would not ordain a horse thief to the work of the ministry, neither should you ordain a covetous man to that office. Would you ordain a drunkard to the eldership? If you would, we would say God pity you. If you would not, but would ordain a covetous man, we wonder why. If you have a man in your church who has been ordained as an elder, and he should be a thief or a drunkard, would you continue using him as an elder? Perhaps some would; but if they would, it is very evident they have very little regard for right living. If you have regard for right living, and your preacher should be guilty of thievery or drunkenness, you would deal with him. There is no more Scriptural authority for dealing with him for those grievous sins than there is for dealing with him for covetousness. Do you know of one posing as a preacher who is guilty of the heinous crimes-any of them-here enumerated? God pity the people who will harbor such. They are sure to reap the vengeance of God for such wickedness. In (Colossians 3:5) we read: "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry." We are here plainly told that covetousness is idolatry. It is no worse for one to make an image of wood, or of stone, or of metal, and worship that as a god, than to be covetous. To be covetous is just as bad as to worship a star, or the moon, or the sun, or a bush, or a stump, or a graven image. To be covetous is just about as bad as the greatest heathen idolaters in the jungles of Africa, China, Burma, or the Hindoos. If you would not ordain and keep a Hindoo idolater in the ministry, then neither should you retain a covetous man in the ministry. The next qualification would require too much space for us to take that up in this issue. We will have to stop now, and will try to continue the subject in our next issue. C. H. C.

Ministerial Qualifications Article No. 4

---August 1, 1935

In our last issue in writing on the above subject, embraced in (I Timothy 3:1-7), we promised to try to write more for this issue. The last thought we gave attention to was, "not covetous." We will try now to take up the next qualification the inspired apostle laid down. One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; (for if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?) "One that ruleth well his own house." If a man does not do this he is not to be set apart to the work of the ministry. The man is supposed to be the head of the family. "But I would have you know that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man." -(I Corinthians 11:3). Paul wrote this by inspiration of God. It is God's order; and Paul would have you to know this fact. Yet, how few people seem to know it in this day and age of the world. So far as mankind in general is concerned times have changed and the order is reversed. Frequently, in this day, the head of the man is the woman. The woman, usually, in this day, rules the house-including the ruling of the man. We think we have met with a few women of that sort in our life. All they lack being "the man of the house" is wearing the breeches. Figuratively speaking many of them do wear the breeches. But in the very morning of time God said concerning the man and woman, "He shall rule over thee." -(Genesis 3:16). Many in this age of the world have reversed' God's order. No man who has reversed God's order is to be set apart to the work of the ministry. One to be set apart to the office of a minister in the Lord's kingdom must be one "that ruleth his own house." He must be one who has not and does not reverse God's order. When the Lord made the woman he did not take the dust of the ground to make her. Out of the ground He "formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air." -(Genesis 2:19). But Adam was without a help meet. Note that the woman was to be a help meet-not a ruler over the man. "And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made He a woman, and brought her unto the man." -(Genesis 2:21-22). Here is a surgical operation no human being can perform. But we must not "branch off" on that question. God made the rib a woman which He had taken from the man's side. He did not take a bone from his head and make a woman. She is not to rule over the man. God did not take a bone from the man's foot and make a woman. She is not to be trodden under foot-no more than she is to be a ruler over the man. The man is as much wrong if he treads his wife under his feet as the woman and man are both wrong if she is the ruler of the family. The woman was taken from the man's side, from near the heart, and from under his arm. He is to protect her, and is not to rule over her as a tyrant. But he is to rule in love. If they have children, he is to rule them also. This does not mean that he is to treat them as brutes or as slaves.- But he is to have control over them. The man who does not rule or control his children, if he has children, has no business being set apart to the work of the ministry. In the olden times the parents "raised the children;" but frequently in the present day the "children raise the parents." In the family where this is the case, the church has no right to ordain the man to the ministry. He must be "one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity." The house means his family. He is the head of the family. If the head is weak, so that he cannot rule well his own house, then he is too weak for the work of the ministry, and has no business to be put in that office, or in that place. He will not fit there. If a man allows his children to be gallivanting over the country instead of going with him to the house of God he is not ruling well his own house. If he has his children go with him to the house of God, and yet they stay out on the grounds during the service, perhaps in some mischief, he is not ruling well his own house. If he allows his children to attend the Arminian Sunday schools, thus encouraging them in learning false doctrines, the doctrines of men and devils, he is not ruling well his own house. "If a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?" Here is a question asked by the inspired apostle, and the form of the question allows but one answer. He cannot take care of the church of God if he does not know how to rule his own house. This question is what is called an affirmative question, which is the very strongest way of stating a proposition. Hence, in that question the apostle makes the statement in the very strongest way of stating the proposition, that a man cannot take care of the church of God if he does not know how to rule his own house. We are of the humble opinion that the church has often in the past "eased over" this matter, and lightly regarded it. "Not a novice." A novice is one newly come to the faith. This should be a caution to the church not to be in a hurry about setting a man apart to the work of the ministry. "Lest being lifted up with pride he' fall into the condemnation of the devil." This brings reproach and shame and trouble upon the church. Here is where and how a man may be spoiled-ruined, absolutely, when otherwise he might be a benefit to the cause. The "big head" is a bad disease for a man to have who is posing as a preacher. How does it look for a young man to presume to advise an old man, who has spent years in the service, to dispense with and throw away his dictionary and his books that tell him what words mean, and reprove him for using them? Would it not be more befitting for such a young man to allow his head to "shrink" a little, and to learn something-at least enough to learn that he has much yet to learn? Is he not "lifted up with pride" just a little, you think? If the church puts a novice into the office of the ministry, she does him an injustice and an injury, and also does the church an injury. "Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without." Then the apostle assigns the reason why. "Lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil." We do wish we could so emphasize and sound out this requirement that it might never be forgotten or overlooked by the church when they consider, or even think, of having a man ordained to the work of the ministry. The apostle places great emphasis upon this point. He starts out in giving the qualifications by saying he must be blameless; then enumerates or lays down the other qualifications, coming on down to this last one named; and places great emphasis upon this by saying, "Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without." He must not only have a good report of them that are within-those who are members of the church-but of them which are without. He must have a good report of them who are not members of the church. He must have a good report of them that do not love the doctrine he advocates. Those who even despise the doctrine must give him a good name as a man and as a citizen. His life must be such that the haters of the truth, the haters of the doctrine believed and cherished by the true church, will say of him, "He is a good man." We once heard a man say that he had lived in a community of Primitive Baptists, and that they were good people and good neighbors, but the doctrine they advocated is as bad as the devil wants it to be. He MUST be of good report of them which are without. To set a man apart to the work of the ministry who is not of good report of them which are without, is to bring shame, disgrace and disrespect upon the church. What man of good morals can respect a church that will set a man apart to the work of the ministry who is not of good report of them which are without? What respect can they have for a church that will put a man in the ministry that the world cannot, or does not, speak well of as a man? His life must be above reproach, if he is to occupy the sacred desk as a minister of the gospel of the grace of God. Shame on the church that will harbor a man in the ministry who is of ill repute. What's the matter with you? Do you not have the Christian courage or fortitude to object to such? Do you love such as that, too? When you condone such, and pass up such without objection, by your act and conduct you say you approve of it. What will you do? Will you be true to your God and to His cause? May the Lord help us, and give us courage to contend against every wrong. C. H. C.

Requests For Views

---August 1, 1935

For several years we have been receiving requests for views which have not been complied with. There have been different reasons why we- have not complied with these requests to give our views on different matters and different passages of Scripture through the paper. But we are now going to try to answer some of them- all that we can, as fast and as soon as we can get to them. We have had requests for views on many passages on which we feel to have no light. We may have requests for views on some things that we may feel could be of no general interest to our readers. Such matters as these we will have to pass by. These requests have been put on file by our wife, and we are now going through them, and will do the best we can with them. Most of the comments will have to be very brief. Bear with us, please, and we will try to do our best with these matters. C. H. C.

Sheep and Goats

---August 15, 1935

We were requested quite awhile ago to give our views on the latter part of (Matthew 25), concerning the sheep and the goats. We do not have space to quote here the language contained in (Matthew 25:31-46). Turn and read it. (Matthew 25:31-33) tells us how the Son of man will come in His glory and will divide the people, or separate them, as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats, and that He will put the sheep on His right hand and the goats on His left hand. Then He will say to those on His right hand, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Here is a kingdom that was prepared from the foundation of the world. It is not being prepared now; but the preparation of the kingdom was done from the beginning of time, or even before time. That work is not going on now. It is too late now to work in order to have a place prepared for you in that kingdom, or in order to have the kingdom prepared for you. The kingdom was not prepared for the whole race of mankind. He will place a portion of the race on His left hand, and He will say to them, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Those He will place on His right hand are those He calls His sheep. His people are given the appellation of sheep. "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." -(John 10:11). "I lay down my life for the sheep." -(John 10:15). They were His by gift. The Father gave them to Him in covenant before the world was; and He calls them His sheep. The Father did not give Him all the race; but gave Him all that He wanted. David, in impersonating, or representing, the Son, said, "I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." - (Psalms 2:7-8). Here the Father is represented as saying to the Son, "Ask of me, and I will give thee." Surely the language conveys the idea that "I will give thee all that thou askest for." The Father gave some to the Son. "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which He hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." -(John 6:39). The Father gave some to Him. How many did the Father give to Him? All that He asked for. How many did He ask for? He asked for all that He wanted. He asked for all that He wanted; the Father gave Him all that He asked for; He shall lose nothing the Father gave Him, but shall raise them up again at the last day; He will place them on His right hand; not one of them shall be forgotten or left out; then He will say to them, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." To those on the left, those not given to Him, those for whom He did not die, He will say, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Those on the left "shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." Those on the left are not injured by the Lord. He leaves them where they are placed by reason of sin. Those He calls His sheep were His by choice; they were chosen out of the lost race of Adam to be heirs of glory; the kingdom was prepared for them; and they were given to Christ for an inheritance and for a possession; they were predestinated by the Lord to be conformed to the image of Jesus; they were chosen to be heirs of eternal glory. They are heirs according to God's promise-not according to their works or doings. This is all of grace, from first to last; and to the Lord belongs all the praise. Here in time these heirs of promise are brought into divine relationship with Christ by the direct and immediate work of the Holy Spirit in the heart. This is an internal work. It is a work of the Spirit of God performed on or in the spirit of man. It is not a head work, or a work on the head, or in the head, but in the heart. The heart is the seat of affection. This work of the Spirit gives the sinner a new life, and with that new life comes new affections, new desires, new aspirations, a new love. No sinner of Adam's race ever truly cries unto the Lord for mercy until this work has been done in his heart. In this work God shines in the heart. This gives the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. Then he has a new life, and has the light within. This gives him to see the depravity of his own heart and the corruption of his very life and nature. Then he begins to cry for mercy. A child never cries before it is born. The fact that a child cries proves that a living child has been born. The cry of the sinner unto the Lord proves that he has been born from above. He is a new born babe in Christ. Here is one of the Lord's sheep, one of His lambs. He will carry His lambs in His bosom. How lovingly and kindly and tenderly He cares for them. He preserves and keeps them; and He will finally place them on His right hand, and will say to them, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." How is it that these do the things the Lord says while here in the world? Doing of those things is bearing good fruit. The tree does not bear good fruit in order to be made a good tree. The tree must be made good first in order that it bear good fruit. The fruit the tree bears shows what kind of tree it is. The fact that a tree bears good fruit proves that the tree was good before it bore the fruit. The bearing of the good fruit here in the world proves that one is a child of God, and it does not make him a child by birth. It manifests what he is. When we see one doing the righteous works enumerated by the Saviour in this chapter, it manifests the fact to us that the person doing these things is a child of God. He does not claim heaven on account of these things. He feels his poverty; he feels his unworthiness; he is depending alone upon the work of the Lord, the mercy and grace of God, for a home in heaven. And he is not saved in heaven on account of having done those things. Those on the left will claim a right to heaven on account of the good works they claim to be doing and that they have done. But their works will not save them. The goats, those not given to the Saviour, are not depending on the grace of God for salvation, or for a home in heaven. They are depending upon their own righteousness. But sinners are not saved on their own works. The grace of God brings salvation, and the grace of God saves from sin. It is alone the work of the Lord by which a poor sinner is saved in heaven. There is no end to this. The more we write the more beauty we see in the glorious doctrine of grace, and the more we feel to praise and adore the Lord of glory for His wonderful works to the children of men. Our poor heart feels to be filled with His love and praise. To Him be glory for ever and ever. Remember us in your prayers, and help us to love, serve, praise, honor, and adore His matchless name. C. H. C.

1 Timothy 5:9

---August 15, 1935

In this passage the apostle is giving instructions concerning the widow who may be taken under the care of the church—that is, he describes the widow that the church should care for in a temporal way. The church is not obligated to care for a widow who has children or nephews who are able to care for them. See (I Timothy 5:4). But if she has no children or relatives who are able to care for her, then the church is under obligations to see after her welfare—if she comes under the description the apostle gives; if she is well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children; if she have lodged strangers; if she have washed the saints' feet; if she have relieved the afflicted; if she have diligently followed every good work. If the church has a member who is a widow coming under this description, then the church should see that she does not suffer and that she is cared for. C. H. C.

Faith and Belief

---August 15, 1935

Several years ago J. E. Tate, Rutherford, Tenn., asked us to show or explain the difference between faith and belief, and referred to (Ephesians 2:8) "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." If we had time and space we might write a long article on this subject. The word faith is sometimes used in Scripture in the sense of belief; sometimes it means doctrine or teaching; sometimes it means trust or confidence; sometimes it means fruit of the Spirit; {(Galatians 5:22)} sometimes it is used in the sense of evidence. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." - (Hebrews 11:1). Here it is described as evidence and also as substance. Sub is a Latin prefix, meaning under. Stance is from the Latin sto, which means to stand. Hence, substance is something which stands under. "By grace are ye saved through something which stands under." What stands under? "Neither shall any pluck them out of my hand." -(John 10:28). The hand of Jesus stands under. "By grace are ye saved through the hand of Jesus Christ." The poor sinner is saved from his sins by the grace of God through Jesus Christ, not through his belief. "He that believeth on the Son hath the witness in himself." -(I John 5:10) "Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us." -((0:15) (Hebrews 10:15). Belief is based upon testimony. The Holy Ghost brings the evidence by testimony, which produces the belief. If one truly believes on Jesus as his Saviour it is because the Holy Ghost brought testimony, evidence, that Jesus is his Saviour. If the evidence is true, Jesus was his Saviour before he believed, and before the evidence was brought to him. The belief, then, does not procure the salvation, but follows after being saved. These are just a few thoughts on this line. C. H. C.

Todd's New Paper

---September 5, 1935

A brother sent us a copy of a new paper, Volume 1, No. 1, dated August 1, 1935. The name of H. A. Todd appears in the paper as editor and manager, and the name of W. A. Pinkstaff as book and circulation manager. There is a department for women edited by Mrs. H. A. Todd, and a department for young people edited by Mrs. W. A. Pinkstaff. They have for a motto (Jeremiah 6:16) "Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths," etc., which will serve pretty well for a blind or a camouflage, to deceive the unsuspecting. We note a few things said in this new venture which we think should be noticed and exposed and attention called to them, for the good and benefit of the cause. Of course these men are posing as Primitive Baptists. This only makes it the more necessary that their utterances should be examined and exposed. On page 2 Elder Todd says: We will contend for the sovereignty of His churches under Him and that they owe no allegiance to any lord or over-head authority on earth or in heaven. That each church has perfect freedom of action without let or hinderance from any other church or federation of churches or pastors or preachers or boards or synods or coterie of men, nor are they answerable to other churches or associations of churches for any faith or practice they may elect; nor can other churches unchurch them by declaring non-fellowship for them. One church is not and cannot be under jurisdiction of any one, or of another body, but is wholly under jurisdiction to its head and Lord. They are not sovereign to do or believe anything, as a church, their Lord forbids, nor are they free to leave undone things He has commanded them to do. We suppose the gentleman means hindrance by saying hinderance. It is true that a church of Christ is under jurisdiction to no one but to the Lord Himself, and the Lord is the only one who can remove the candlestick. He does this when a church departs from the faith or practice He has given. But to contend that a church is in no sense answerable to any other church for any faith or practice she may elect is as far from the truth as hell is from heaven. If that contention or statement be true, then the churches have no authority or way under heaven to preserve and keep themselves pure and free from the introduction of corrupt doctrines and practices. The Catholic party introduced corrupt doctrines and practices in the church in about the third century. According to Todd's statement the party then contending for purity of doctrine and practice had no right to declare against or to withdraw from those corruptions; and that being true, then the Roman Catholic party was and is as much entitled to the claim of being the true church of Christ as the party that opposed those corruptions. The only way under heaven for the church to protect herself from those corruptions was to declare non-fellowship for and withdraw from these heresies. About 1792 Andrew Fuller, William Carey and others departed from the original doctrine and practice of the church, by advocating a universal atonement, that Christ died for all mankind, and introducing the mission system among the Baptists. According to Todd the churches which embraced those heretical departures had a right to do so, and no other church had a right to call them in question, or to protest against the departures, or to declare against them, or to withdraw from them. If Todd is correct in this, then the Missionary Baptists are as much entitled to the claim that they are the church of Christ as the Primitives are. Perhaps Elder Todd thinks they are as much entitled to this as our people are, as he remained with them so long. We wonder why he did not stay with them; we wonder why he would try to come back to our people in an irregular way and start out again with the claim of being a Primitive Baptist in such a direction as to cause more trouble among us and to stir up more strife among us. He certainly knows that the course he is pursuing will cause trouble among the Old Baptists if they allow his measures introduced among them again. On page 3 of the paper we see this statement: Revival season is coming on now among the churches and let us all earnestly pray that the Spirit of the living God shall be present in His power to convict of sin, to release mourners, strengthen saints and add to His churches the saved. Does that sound like Old Baptist reading? "Revival season is coming on!" That sounds to us as though there is a certain season of the year that the Lord may revive us. Then, too, we must get up and have a revival, and this is about the season of the year for us to work at it. If we do not have our revivals the Lord by His Spirit may not convict of sin. And we must pray for the Lord to do that or He might forget about it, or He might go to sleep on the job. "Cry aloud: for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is on a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked." -((Ki 18:27) (I Kings 18:27). On same page and in same paragraph we see the following statement: Good works are not conditions between the soul and heaven, nor are they evidences that a soul is born of God, but they are the accompaniment of salvation and the flowering out of a willing mind in humble obedience to God. In this is a flagrant contradiction of the doctrine Primitive Baptists have always held to. Primitive Baptists have always contended that good works are evidences of regeneration. The London Confession of Faith, Chapter XVI, Section 2, says, "These good works, done in obedience to God's commandments, are the fruits and evidences of a true and lively faith," etc. This section was unanimously adopted, with the rest of the Confession, by the ministers assembled at Fulton, Ky., in November, 1900. H. A. Todd acted as reading clerk in that meeting. Now, if good works are the fruits and evidences of a lively faith, they are evidences of regeneration; they are evidences that the one who performs them has been born of God. Elder Todd accepted that as truth in November, 1900. But he disputes it now. If he was a Primitive Baptist in what he then accepted as truth, he is not a Primitive Baptist now. In 1898 A. M. Kirkland published a pamphlet called "Cause Defended." That pamphlet contains an article on each of the articles of faith of the Philesic Association. Article 6 says: We believe that God's elect are regenerated by the Holy Spirit, and that good works follow justification and are evidences of faith. Elder J. N. Wallace, at the request of Elder Kirkland, wrote a chapter on this article of faith. In that article, or chapter, Elder Wallace said: Paul, to the Ephesians, ii. 10, "Created in Christ Jesus unto good works" -not by or for good works; showing that good works follow the creation in Christ Jesus, and by no means precede it. This is sufficient to show that the position then taken in this work was that good works were evidences of one having been born of God. The Primitive Baptists occupied that ground then. That was Primitive Baptist doctrine then. If it was Primitive Baptist doctrine then, it is so yet. As Elder Todd and those with him do not now occupy that ground, they are not Primitive Baptists. On same page we see this expression: If they can bring "forth fruit unto repentance," then, and not till then, should they be baptized. Any letting down at this point will endanger His work and will deceive those who have been urged to join the church, while they are dead in sin. The Scriptures teach something about bringing fruits meet for repentance, { (Matthew 3:8) } which verse is translated, in the Interlinear, to read, "Produce therefore fruits worthy of repentance." This certainly teaches that those who are to be baptized should be required to produce evidence of repentance. But Elder Todd has the matter reversed, and he would require them to produce fruits unto repentance-they may produce the fruits first and then repent, according to the teaching of these men in this article. Well, here is another thing we never knew until these new-fangled fellows brought it to our attention: "Any letting down at this point will endanger His work." They have capitalized the pronoun His, thus making the word refer to Deity. Thus they set forth the idea that the work of the Deity may be endangered by the failure of men, or by the doings of men. If this is not the rankest Arminianism we would not know where to find it. And such men proposing to band together with a few others to save the old church from utter ruin and destruction! Wonder who appointed these men to accomplish such a wonderful work! On same page we see yet another statement to which we call attention: In these blessed doctrines rest the hope of the real Christian and the only cure for the sin-weary world. Here is another new thing under the sun. We never knew before that the world was sin-weary. The good Book teaches us that the wicked unregenerated world are all in love with sin. "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." -(John 3:19). The Lord Himself has here told us that men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. This does not sound to us as though it was or is a sin-weary world. Verily, this elder has become wise above what is written. And here is another wonderful revelation we find on the same page: We do not think it quite true to facts in the case when we say, "The people do not like the Old Baptists because they preach salvation by grace." Perhaps it would not be true to facts to say the people do not like Elder Todd, and others like him, because they preach salvation by grace. He and others can "so wrap it up" that they can remove the offense from their preaching, and the world will not dislike them on account of the doctrine they preach. But why did those wicked men hate the Martyr Stephen? Why did they stone him to death? Nothing else under heaven only on account of the doctrine which he preached. Why did the wicked Jews despise our Lord? Why did they try to destroy Him time and again during His ministry? And why did they finally deliver Him to the Roman soldiers and they crucify Him on Calvary's cross? For nothing else under heaven than the doctrine He preached and the eternal principles of truth which He so boldly and fearlessly advocated. And if they hated Him on account of the doctrine He preached and advocated, so will they hate and despise all those who faithfully and boldly teach, advocate, and contend for the same principles. Why did the wicked enemies of truth persecute, stone, beat with stripes, and imprison the great Apostle Paul? For the doctrine he preached-salvation by grace. That doctrine in its purity and simplicity has always been despised by the world. And the world has always hated those who faithfully contend for that doctrine. "As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed. For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." -Gal. i. 9, 10. We find there has been a deficiency all along by reading the following statement on the same page: Our young people have left us in numbers because there was nothing for them to do in His churches. There has been nothing for any person on earth to do in His churches from the day He established the same in the top of the mountains until this good day, only the things He put in there to be done by His humble followers. Neither has anything been taken out of the kingdom which the King and Lawgiver put there. If there has been nothing in the church for the young people to do, it can be for no other reason than that those same young people had no business in the church. There has been something to do in the church for every person under heaven whose duty it has been to be in the church. The trouble about that matter has been, and is yet, that such fellows as Todd & Company are not satisfied with what the Lord has put in His kingdom. They want some new furniture brought in which the Lord never authorized to be put in there. The furniture He put in the kingdom beautifully decorates that kingdom, and the stuff these fellows want brought in would only litter up and defile the kingdom of our Lord. But one more statement we find (on page 4) gives the whole thing away. Read it and ponder it well, you Old Baptists: Herein lies the marshy bogs in which we have floundered for many years and the price paid is the loss of prestige among men and going away of our young people. Have the Primitive Baptists been floundering in such "marshy bogs" all these years? Fuller thought so. Hence he introduced means and measures to lift the old church from the dung hill into society and the respect of the world. Such men always look down upon the old church. The reason why they look down upon the old order of things and upon the good old way our fathers trod is because they are very high and exalted in their own estimation. When one can really see the deplorable state of the inventions of men and their own true condition, and the exalted place where the Lord has placed His church, they then look up to see the kingdom, and can then realize the fact that they cannot raise the church up so as to have it look beautiful to the world, and so that the world will love and admire the true church of God. They may bring the church down by their inventions and contaminate it with the world, so that the world will admire the same. But when they do that they depart from the principles of truth and righteousness, as marked out by the Lord of glory, and bring upon themselves shame and contempt. The true followers of the Lord will not go after them. The Lord will reserve witnesses to Himself, and the old church will continue to stand aloof from the inventions of men, and will not entirely be swallowed up by the devil and his cohorts. C. H. C.

---September 5, 1935

Several years ago Sister F. I Stockton, Greenwood Springs, Miss., requested us to give our views on the text cited above, which reads, "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." This was said by the Saviour to the unbelieving Jews. They thought they had eternal life in the Scriptures. Some people think the same way today. But eternal life is not in the Scriptures. The Scriptures testify of Jesus; they tell where eternal life is. The Scriptures testify that eternal life is in Jesus Christ. If God's people, those who have been born again, and who have been taught that eternal life is in the Scriptures, would search the Scriptures for themselves, they would find they have been taught wrong, and that eternal life is in Jesus and not in the Scriptures. Several Questions

---September 5, 1935

Mrs. Annie Lester, of Shobonier, Ill., several years ago asked us what Paul meant by unknown tongues in (I Corinthians 14:2-4); what he meant by letting the women keep silent; that is, in what way; why did Peter say be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, in ((25) (Acts 2:25)-or did they baptize in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost; and what did Peter mean by the expression, "save yourselves from this untoward generation," in ((0) (Acts 2:40). The expression, "unknown tongue," means an unknown language. Tongue means language. It does not mean such senseless mumbling noises as some practice and call it an unknown tongue. The women are to keep silent in the churches in the sense that they are not to engage in preaching or teaching, or in the public discussions of matters that pertain to the church business. It has no reference to them telling the dealings of the Lord with them, or giving a reason of their hope, when they ask for a home in the church, nor in engaging with the congregation in singing hymns in the service. Read the verses just before and you will see what the apostle is giving instruction concerning. As proof that no woman is to be a preacher, the apostle says the bishop is to be the husband of one wife. Can any woman fill that measure? The command to those on the day of Pentecost to be baptized in the name of Christ is the same as to be baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The command there recorded means to be baptized by His authority; or in the name of that One who was anointed to remit your sins. The command to save yourselves from this untoward generation, as given to those on that same day who were pricked in their hearts, is to be accomplished by doing what he had already instructed-by coming out from among the crooked generation and being baptized in the name of the Lord-obtaining membership in His church and living separate from the world in a religious way. C. H. C.

---September 5, 1935

In 1928 Brother J. E. Willis, Saltillo, Tenn., requested our views on this text. It reads, "For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he." There was no greater prophet than John. But he was not in the church. He made ready a people the Lord had prepared. He made them ready for the organization of the Lord's kingdom, or church, by baptizing them. Jesus took the material John baptized-such of them as He pleased-and organized His kingdom. Jesus was baptized by John. Hence Jesus Himself was a member of that church or kingdom; and He was greater than John the Baptist. John said, "He must increase; but I must decrease." Jesus placed Himself as servant-as least -in the kingdom; and He was greater than John. C. H. C.

The Last Judgment

---September 5, 1935

The general judgment at the last day is not a day in which mankind will go before, or be brought before, the great Judge of the universe and be examined or tried. The Lord's children and the other folks will be separated, and the Lord's children will hear the blessed announcement made to them, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Those on the left will hear the awful denunciation, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." God's people do not come into judgment. (John 5:24). The word translated condemnation in that verse primarily means judgment. C. H. C.

Sabbath Question

---September 5, 1935

In the law given Moses on Sinai was a command for the observance of the seventh day as a sabbath day. Of course some of the things commanded in that law should be kept, obeyed, or done, even if the command had never been written. One such command is, "Thou shalt not kill." Another is, "Thou shalt not steal." There are other commands in the law like these. It would have been wrong to kill or to steal if these commands had never been written in the law. But some of the things written in the law should be observed because they were written, and because God commanded them. One such command was the one concerning the sabbath, which was the seventh day. There were many other things which the Lord commanded to be done and to be observed under the law. But the law and all the ordinances connected therewith belonged to the Jews. The Gentiles were never under that law, and were never required to observe the ordinances connected with it. But it is wrong for a Gentile to kill or to steal, even though he was never under the law given by Moses. Now, when Jesus came and died on the cross He fulfilled the law, and all the ordinances under it were finished. The sabbaths under the law were typical of rest under the gospel-just as the offerings and sacrifices were typical. The real Christian sabbath is his rest in Christ and His finished work. Also there is a rest for the child of God in the service of God. The Sunday sabbath was first instituted by Constantine about the year 321. That was the first sabbath law after the death of Christ. But it should be observed because it is the law of the land. We should obey the law when there is not a matter of conscience violated. C. H. C.

Are Agreed

Dear Brother Cayce: I have just been through Big Sandy Association-Hollow Rock, Mud Creek, Zion's Rest and Antioch. Spent some time with Elders T. M. Hampton, J. L. Puller, T. M. Phillips and-----Phillips. We talked over conditions as they prevail at present among our people locally, and we are one hundred per cent agreed; and were it not for a little misunderstanding as to the motives in the course some of us have pursued to try to warn and save the brethren that have departed there could not have been any difference among us. When we saw that we could not save these brethren we then made it plain to them we would not tolerate their departures. We did what we felt was best for the cause. Yours in hope, Z. Stallings.

REMARKS

We are glad that you brethren agree. We saw this matter coming, and felt the obligation resting upon us to warn the brethren of the approaching danger. We had to do this or be untrue and unfaithful. It was not pleasant to do that. We were well aware of the fact that to give the warning would bring down the wrath of some upon our head. "But none of these things move me," said Paul. To be true, as he was, we must not let these things move us from the path of duty; we must not fail to utter the warning. Sure enough, it brought forth the wrath of some brethren upon us. Some accused us of falsifying; some accused us of having "it in for them" all along the line. We are grieved that the brethren would thus accuse us. But, by the help of God, we trust we may be enabled to endure all the afflictions that may come our way what few days we may yet have to stay in this old world. It will not be long until we shall receive the discharg'e from the warfare; and we trust it may be an honorable discharge. We pray the Lord may forgive the brethren who have thus accused us, and who have persecuted us. We trust we are bearing these things for Jesus' sake. C. H. C.

More Absolute Doctrine

---September 19, 1935

On pages 143 and 144 of the so-called Sovereign Grace and Pilgrim, the issue for July-August, 1935, we have the information that one of their preachers (Elder J. B. Bowden) had his car stolen, which had his suit case in it. The suit case contained his Bible, Concordance, 40 pages of manuscript (some of his writings), his credentials, and other items. In his car was also eight dollars worth of honey belonging to one of his brethren. It appears that a detective agency was employed to work on the case. Elder Bowden says, "It has left me stranded, no way to go to church or anywhere else. I have no clothing, and am badly crippled in my nervous system. I have worried so much over it that I have not slept much the last three nights." He exclaims, "Oh, what is the world coming to!" Then in closing the letter he says, "I want to go home as soon as possible. I have been away so long, and to think that I was on my way, and some of Satan's bunch had to take away from me what little I had is hard, but the Lord will take care of His own." In a later letter Elder Bowden informs the editor that "the police found part of the car but could not get anything for it as most of the glass was broken." In a still later note, appearing on same page (144) it seems that he had obtained another car and had more trouble. It seems that he was run into while on the way home. He says, "Now to have a man of poor principles to try to go around me, turn too quick and hang the wide long truck into my car door, rip the body open and run me off into the ditch. It was my first of such an experience; several saw it and said I was in no way to blame." We agree that the brother has had some trials. Pretty tough. But if his doctrine is the truth, those fellows could not help stealing his car and the things that were in it, and smashing the car to pieces, for according to his doctrine, God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated from all eternity that they should do just what they did do. That was just a link in the chain of events, which chain was forged and welded by the God of heaven before time began, and that link in the chain could not be broken by any power in heaven, in earth, or in hell. Of course, according to their doctrine, those thieves would not have stolen the car and its contents, had not God predestinated, fixed and unalterably decreed for them to do so. Neither would that fellow have run into him with his truck, had not God unalterably decreed for him to do so. The witnesses who saw the affair said Elder Bowden was in no way to blame. Of course they put the blame on the driver of the truck. But, according to the doctrine of these Absoluters, the truck driver was no more to blame than Elder Bowden, because he was only doing what the eternal God unalterably fixed and decreed that he should do. The witnesses, of course, did not see that. That part of the affair was not done in a way to be seen by those witnesses. The witnesses, perhaps, could not exonerate the truck driver; but according to Elder Bowden's doctrine, the doctrine of these Absoluters, Elder Bowden could exonerate the truck driver, and could put all the blame where it belongs-on the predestination and decree of God, the forging and welding of such a link in the chain of events. That was the way God fixed and arranged and decreed and unalterably predestinated that the thing should be. The driver could not help doing that. The channel had been made by the eternal God for him to travel in. He had to go that way. Had he done otherwise he would have thwarted God's predestination and decrees, and of course no little truck driver can do that. Perhaps God will be sorry He so arranged the matter, as Elder Bowden complains about it. Elder Bowden says he has worried over the matter. He is just worrying over what he and his brethren claim is God's predestination. He says he is badly crippled in his nervous system. No doubt but what a man is crippled somewhere who will advocate the doctrine these fellows advocate. Let us hope it is in the nervous system, or in the head, and not in the heart. But Elder Bowden says "some of Satan's bunch had to take away from me what little I had." If they had to take away from him what they did take, then they could not help, it. They did it because God had so predestinated and arranged for them to do it. They were carrying out God's will and predestination and His plan in doing what they did as much as Elder Bowden and his brethren are when they are preaching the greatest discourses; and they were carrying out God's will and predestination just as much as Jesus did when He ascended to His Father in glory. That is the doctrine of these Absoluters. The men who did that stealing were only doing what was God's will for them to do. They were just as much God's bunch as Elder Bowden or his brethren can be in their preaching, according to his doctrine. According to their doctrine God Himself made them all -the thieves and the truck driver-just what they were and what they are. Hear ye the following statement made by D. K. Caldwell, Hamburg, Ark., on the next page of the pamphlet (page 145): If I rejoice it is in an all wise and sovereign God who before determined all things. And in making all things He so made and fitted them with a nature that compels them to do the things He before determined they should do. There is no power in heaven, in earth, or anywhere else that can make, them do otherwise. There it is. God made those thieves and the truck driver just what they are. God so made them that they could not do otherwise. No power in heaven, in earth, or anywhere else, can make them do otherwise. God Himself cannot make them do otherwise, for there is no power in heaven that can do so, the writer says. God has made them that way, and He cannot change them. That's their doctrine. You have it right there, in black and white. God made those thieves that way. The devil or Satan had nothing to do with it. The only job Satan has, according to the doctrine these men teach, is to do dirty little tricks that God is ashamed to do Himself, so He has Satan to do them. We cannot see it any other way than that this doctrine came from the devil. He invented it so as to shift his dirty work, and the dirty deeds of his cohorts and emissaries, off on the Lord; and these fellows are helping the devil out by advocating that doctrine. May the Lord help us that we may never be deceived by such teaching. C. H. C.

Instrumental Music

---September 19, 1935

Regular preaching Sunday morning at 11 o'clock by the pastor, Elder Cayce Pentecost. You are most cordially invited to attend, hear the discourse and enjoy the music, both instrumental and vocal. The above is copied from the Dresden Enterprise of Sept. 6, 1935. The heading of the article was "Primitive Baptist Church." The item needs very little comment. It very plainly tells us that they have instrumental music in that church. The only question we are wondering about is as to whether other churches and ministers in that section affiliate with them as being a true old line Primitive Baptist Church in the using of instrumental music in their church service. How do you stand on this, brethren? We know how the brethren and churches of the Greenfield Association once stood, and the Forked Deer, and the most of the Big Sandy, if not all, and the Predestinarian, and perhaps all the Obion. How do you stand now? C. H. C.

Rich Man and Lazarus

---September 19, 1935

In 1930 Brother J. L. Dearing, Iredell, Texas, asked us the question, "Who are the five brethren of the rich man?" This is in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. The five brethren were his Jewish brethren. Notice (Luke 16:31) "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." This was literally and actually fulfilled and verified as true when Jesus rose from the dead. The Jews still rejected Him as being the Messiah. And they reject Him to this day. But they may be brought in again some day, and that day may not be very far in the future. C. H. C.

Matthew 9:16-17

---September 19, 1935

Mrs. A. D. Hodges, Carnegie, Okla., asked us for our views on this text. It reads, "No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment, for that which is put in to fill up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse. Neither do men put new wine into old bottles: else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved." The Saviour is here teaching that the old order of law worship and service is not brought over into the new or gospel dispensation. The new cloth of gospel worship and service is not tacked on or sewed on or simply added to the old law worship and service. The gospel day is a new dispensation, a new garment, and old cloth is not to be mixed with it. In that age bottles were made of skins. Old bottles would not stretch. If new wine should be put in them the bottles would burst-the fermenting and working of the wine would burst them. To put new worship-gospel worship and service-in the old bottle of the law dispensation would be to cause the bottle to burst, and the whole thing would come to destruction-all would be lost. There is to be no mixture of law and gospel. The old bottles served their usefulness in the first use they were put to. The law served its purpose, and it is passing out now. A new bottle-a new gospel day-is coming in, and the new wine of gospel worship and service is in it. Are you using old bottles, engaging in law worship and service? If so, you suffer loss. Since writing the above we find we gave our views on this same matter of new wine in old bottles, as mentioned in ((21) (Mark 2:21-22), in our issue of May 14, 1907, in which we gave the same views, though expressed in different words. C. H. C.

---September 19, 1935

Sister M. O. Lucas, Albertville, Ala., asked us in 1930 to give our views on ((Jude 1:25) (Jude 1:25), and asked if these persons under consideration were disobedient children of God or were they unregenerate. Jude says they are clouds without water. God's preachers are rain clouds -not "thunder heads." Jude says they are wandering stars. God's preachers are "fixed stars." Jude says "to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever." That is a long time. That seems to us that the darkness is too long for a child of God. Go on down to ((Jude 1:25) (Jude 1:25) and you will see that Jude says concerning them, "Having not the Spirit." Paul says in (Romans 8:9) "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." It seems to us this should settle the matter as to what sort of folks such people are. Jude warns the Lord's children concerning them, and they should be marked and avoided. The church does not need them. Keep them out. C. H. C.

Matthew 19:27-28

---September 19, 1935

In 1930 Brother J. T. Fannin, Corsicana, Texas, requested our views on the language there recorded. Get your Bible and read it, as we must use limited space. We suppose the main expression on which our views are wanted is, "That ye which have followed me in the regeneration," etc. This expression has no reference to the work of regeneration called the new birth; but refers to the new order of things; the bringing in of a new order of worship and service. The "ye" were the apostles. They were appointed as judges by the King, and they passed on and explained all the laws and rules and regulations which He gave to govern His kingdom. C. H. C.

Another Corresponding Editor

---October 3, 1935

In this issue of The Primitive Baptist we have the privilege of adding another name to our list of corresponding editors. For several years we have been reading some of the writings done by the brother whose name we now add to the list. We never had the privilege of meeting him until at our association at Elizabeth Church, near Marvell, Ark., which was held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 13, 14, 15, 1935. He was named for us. This brother is no other than Elder Claud E. Webb, Carthage, Ill. For some time we have had a mind to ask him if he was willing to be placed on our editorial staff, but did not write him in regard to the matter, although we have had correspondence with him, as we preferred to talk with him face to face. We desired to hear him preach. This would give us a better opportunity to know that we were of one heart and one mind. We were made glad in our poor heart when we learned that he arrived at the association ground Thursday night. We had the pleasure of being associated with him, and others, for three days, and of hearing him preach. The good Lord blessed him to preach in the good old way to the comfort and consolation and instruction of His dear children who were present. So before we separated we asked him about allowing his name to go on our editorial staff, and we talked the matter over freely; then he gave his consent. In another column will be found his article giving his consent to be put in the list with our other corresponding editors. We have confidence in him, and believe him to be sound and true to the principles our people have loved and stood for through the ages. May the good Lord bless our labors together for the good of our beloved Zion. We feel thankful to have such able and faithful and true men of God on our staff as those whose names appear there. We are sure no truer set of men can be found. May the Lord's blessings rest upon them, and help us all to labor together and to strive for the peace of Jerusalem. C. H. C.

Revelation 20:12

We were requested some time ago to give our views on (Revelation 20:12). (Revelation 20:12-15) reads as follows: And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire. Notice that first the books were opened, and then another book was opened, and this other book was the book of life. Notice, also, that none of those whose names were written in the book of life were cast into the lake of fire. Those who were judged out of the things written in the books, according to their works, were cast into the lake of fire. Every person who was judged according to his works, or who was judged out of the things written in the books, was cast into the lake of fire. God's children were not judged out of the things written in the books. Their names were written in the book of life. Jesus said, in (John 5:24), "He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." The literal rendering of the text in our present day English is, "into judgment comes not; but has passed out of death into life." God's children, those whose names are written in the book of life, do not come into judgment. Other folks do, and will be cast into the lake of fire. If you class yourself with the number who are to be judged out of the things written in the books, then you class yourself with the number that will be cast into the lake of fire. C. H. C.

---October 3, 1935

Some time ago Brother Clinton Bradford, Primm, Tenn., asked us about the above text, and wanted to know if the word is is future tense, and says he has been arguing that it is in the past tense. The verse reads, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." The language "and is baptized" is not future tense. The word is in connection with another word is never in the future tense. It cannot possibly denote something in the future. There is no such thing in the English language as is being in the future. The expression in our English language is the present perfect tense. But the word in the Greek translated "is baptized" is in what is called the aorist tense in Greek. That tense "is strictly the expression of a momentary or transient single action, being thus distinguished from the imperfect; and in the indicative mood it ordinarily signifies past time. It is, however, used of a prolonged action, if there is no positive need to make a direct expression of that circumstance. It is thus of constant use in the narrative of past transactions." See page xlii., Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon. You are right in saying it is past, although the English has it in the present perfect tense, which denotes an action finished or completed in the present. Yet the very expression frequently carries with it the idea of something already done. "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God;" {(I John 5:1)} is born-already born-not will be born. C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 11:33

Brother J. L. Callaway, Manassas, Ga., asked us quite awhile ago if this text means for a church to put off the communion when there is a private offense between two members, which has been brought to the knowledge of the church generally, but has not been brought before the church. The text reads, "Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another." No, the text does not mean to put off the communion under the circumstances or conditions named. It simply means to wait until all the brethren who are in attendance are gathered together. Do not begin the service while the brethren are still gathering together. Let the service be engaged in quietness and order and due decorum. As to the matter of trespass, one member against another, the instruction given is, "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone." This is in (Matthew 18). He is not to tell others, but the brother who trespassed. "If he neglect to hear thee, take with thee one or two more." Still he is not to tell others. "If he neglect to hear them, tell it to the church." If one has been telling others, so that the membership in general are informed about the matter, somebody has violated the instruction given by the Lord. If a brother trespasses against us, we should either bear it in silence, and say nothing to a living soul about it, or tell the brother; and if this fails, then take one or two more. If reconciliation is obtained, then no one else should ever know about it. If we fail to get reconciliation, then tell it to the church. It is a violation to tell it to more than the one or two witnesses until this time. May the Lord help us to follow His teaching. C. H. C.

---October 3, 1935

In 1930 we received a request from Brother S. H. Garland, Henryville, Tenn., to give our views on the language recorded in (Revelation 12:7-8). We gave our views in a short way on this text in The Primitive Baptist of January 9, 1917. The war therein mentioned, we think, took place in the Jewish heaven, when the woman mentioned in the first verse had made her appearance. She appeared in the end of the Jewish age, or Jewish economy. The woman appeared in heaven, and there was war in the same heaven; and the dragon was cast out. Then persecution of the woman (the church) began; then the woman fled into the wilderness, where she remained in seclusion for 1260 years. C. H. C.

---October 3, 1935

In 1930 T. L. Parnell, then at Cuba Landing, Tenn., asked us if the destruction mentioned in (Genesis 19) is eternal. He said, "Some say it is and some say it is not." It was a literal destruction. The city was literally destroyed. Nothing said in the chapter about an eternal hell or eternal punishment. C. H. C.

Where Was Judas?

---October 3, 1935

In 1930 Sister Cora Absher, Pressman's Home, Tenn., asked us where Judas was when Jesus washed the disciples' feet, and did Jesus wash Judas' feet? No, Jesus did not wash Judas' feet. He went out while they were eating the passover supper. While Jesus was eating the passover supper with the disciples, He gave the sop to Judas, and Judas went immediately out. After he was gone out, Jesus took the bread and wine and instituted the sacramental supper; and then when supper was ended He washed His disciples' feet. C. H. C.

Our Association

It was our intention to write a little account of our association for our last issue, but after we got home from the meeting we were sick for several days, part of the time confined to our bed, so we did not write. The date we are doing this writing is October 3, and we still do not feel as well as we would like to. This will also explain why some other matters have been delayed, which need our attention. The associational meeting (South Arkansas) was held with Elizabeth Church, five miles south of Marvell. Service was held at the church Thursday night, but the associational meeting began at 10 o'clock on Friday and continued until Sunday noon. Then they had preaching Sunday afternoon and night. We had service Friday morning, afternoon and night; Saturday morning, afternoon and night. The home ministers present were Elders John R. Harris, J. M. Burch, W. H. Lee and the writer. Other ministers present were Elders Claud E. Webb, Carthage, Ill.; J. W. Hipp, Prim, Ark.; W. H. Eubanks, Newport, Ark.; F. M. Russell, Pangburn, Ark.; T. E. Ellzey, Harrisburg, Ark., and W. M. Alley, Hot Springs, Ark. All the ministers present occupied the stand at some time during the meeting, except Elder Alley, and each one seemed to be blessed of the Lord to preach in such a way as to comfort, strengthen, build up and edify the Lord's dear people. One brother had joined at the regular meeting the fourth Sunday in August, the baptism to be attended to during the association. Then during the association three united with the church by letter and two more by experience. The writer had the pleasant duty of baptizing the three on Sunday morning. Then on Sunday another dear brother came forward asking for a home, and he was joyfully received, his baptism to be attended to on the fifth Sunday, the church having agreed to hold their regular meeting at that time instead of on the fourth Sunday. We have been informed that another one came to the church on Sunday night. We cannot say whether the baptism has been attended to or not as we are doing this writing, as we were sick and not able to go to the meeting. Elder Garner is the assistant pastor, and we have not received word as to whether he was there or not. Wife wrote him we were sick and not able to go, but we have not yet heard from him. The meeting was a pleasant and enjoyable one. May the Lord be praised for His mercies. Remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

To Our Exchanges

---October 17, 1935

We feel that the good of our beloved cause demands that we say something to our readers and to our Primitive Baptist exchanges in regard to W. D. Griffin, Fayette, Ala. We published a request from him some time ago, in which he wanted to get a minute of all the Primitive Baptist Associations. We have noticed the same request from him in some of the other Primitive Baptist papers that we exchange with. We had no idea when we published that request that he would pursue the course that he did in at least one instance. To at least one brother he sent a copy of the minute of his association and also a pamphlet which contains more false doctrine than anything we remember to have seen of the same size. He has taken this way, evidently, of getting names of brethren to whom he sends this blasphemous pamphlet. We intend, the Lord willing, to expose the heresies contained in the pamphlet, as soon as we can possibly do so. We would suggest to our readers that you send no more literature to W. D. Griffin, if you do not want the blasphemous doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things circulated among our people and that, too, in a deceptive way, as this pamphlet does. C. H. C.

Galatians 4:22-31

---October 17, 1935

Brother S. P. Taylor, formerly at Thomasville, Ga., now at Albany, Ga., requested us in 1930 to write on (Galatians 4:22-31). Our space is so limited that we will not quote the language contained in those verses. Get your Bible and read the chapter. Neither can we write at length. There is much contained in the language; but we will have to do no more than just hint at some of 'the subject matter. The two covenants are brought to view. Agar (or Hagar) was a type of the covenant given on Sinai. This covenant gendereth to bondage, and was a type of national Israel, or the Jews, or national Jerusalem, which the apostle says is in bondage with her children. Sarah, the wife of Abraham, the free woman, was a type of the covenant of grace, called in some places the new covenant, because it was brought out and manifested after the covenant of works, or the Sinai covenant. Ishmael was the son of Hagar, by Abraham. Hagar was a bondmaid of Sarah. She was in bondage. Of course, as she was in bondage, she could not give birth to a free child. Her son was, therefore, born in bondage. And he was born after the flesh. God had before made a promise to Abraham and to Sarah. But Sarah began to doubt the promise ever being fulfilled. So she gave Hagar to Abraham. This is the first record we have of a ladies' effort society to help fulfill a promise He had made. But the effort did not bring about the birth of the promised heir, nor did it help to bring that about. At the proper and right time Isaac was born unto Abraham and Sarah. Isaac was the promised child. Isaac was the child of promise. "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." -(Galatians 4:28). Sarah typified the covenant of grace, and Isaac typified all the heirs of promise. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." - (Galatians 4:29). The children of God were known and embraced in the covenant of grace before the world was. It was and is an everlasting covenant. It does not grow. It is ordered in all things, and sure. Not one has ever been added to it, and not one has ever been, or ever will be, taken away. The promise is sure to all the seed. The efforts of Sarah and Hagar did not help to bring about the birth of the promised heir. Even so, the efforts of all the men and women and the societies that have ever been organized have not helped to bring about the birth into the spiritual realm, or into the family of God, one heir of promise, or child of promise. That human effort in that day resulted in the birth of Ishmael, and not the birth of Isaac, the promised child. So the efforts and labors of the so-called religionists of the day do not, and cannot, and will not, help to bring about the spiritual birth of a single son or daughter of Adam. All they can do by their efforts is to bring about the birth of an Ishmaelite. Ishmael was a mocker. It is even so in this day, the Ishmaelites are only mockers. And as it was then, even so it is now, "the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free-woman." The works of the flesh, the works of men, will not make one an heir of God. "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but the children of the promise are counted for the seed." - (Romans 9:8). Read several verses there in the Book. God is the Father of His children, and Jerusalem, which is free, and which is above, is the mother. This Jerusalem is the covenant of grace. They were conceived in that covenant, and at "the set time" they are born from above. God foreknew them in that covenant. He is not surprised or taken unawares when one is born into the heavenly family. He has never been put to the necessity of calling for help in order to get one of them brought forth. We could write a lot more on this question, but our space is limited, and we must stop here. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the good of every reader. C. H. C.

Non-Attendance

---October 17, 1935

We were requested some time ago to give our views in regard to members not attending the services of the church-. If they are providentially hindered, the church should bear with them. If they are in need of help, and that is the real reason why they do not attend, then the church should help them. If they are simply drifting into a careless or indifferent state, they should be encouraged. If they are simply rebelling and refusing to attend the service when there is no good reason for not doing so, they should be dealt with accordingly. When one unites with the church he covenants with the church, or enters into a covenant with the church, that he will attend the services of the church when not providentially prevented. If one does not attend, the church should know the reason why. If A and B have entered into a covenant with each other, and A fails in some part of the covenant, B is entitled to know the reason of A's failure. It is B's business to know, and it is A's business to give B the information in regard to the matter. C. H. C.

Who Crucified Christ?

---October 17, 1935

In 1930 Brother B. A. Caddell, Brent, Ala., said, "I have always been taught that the Jews crucified Christ. It looks like the Gentiles did the actual work." He refers to ((0:33) (Mark 10:33-34), which reads, "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem: and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn Him to death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles; and they shall mock Him, and shall scourge Him, and shall spit upon Him, and shall kill Him: and the third day He shall rise again." True, He was crucified by the Roman soldiers, and they were Gentiles. Pilate was a Gentile. But the Jews cried out unto Pilate, "Crucify Him; crucify Him." The Jews delivered Him to the Gentiles, and the Gentiles crucified Him by the authority and upon the demand of the Jews. Hence the apostle said, "Ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." - ((23) (Acts 2:23). If a man is hung or electrocuted by the authority of the state, the high sheriff springs the trap or turns the switch, but it is the state which takes the man's life. The Jews crucified the Saviour, but they did it by the hands of the Gentiles. C. H. C.

---November 7, 1935

Miss Nannie Sewell, Winchester, Ky., asked for an expression from us some time ago on the language recorded in (Psalms 37:25) "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." The righteous are those who do right-that is what it here means. When one does right-does as God commands him-he will not be forsaken. The Lord has promised to not forsake him. His seed are his offspring who also do as the Lord requires. One will never be brought to the state of having to beg for bread because of doing as the Lord requires. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." -((24) (Proverbs 11:24). C. H. C.

Administration of Baptism

---November 7, 1935

In 1930 S. Buckingham, of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, asked us "What kind of baptism did the disciples baptize with?" We suppose he means by this question to ask if they administered water baptism. They baptized in or with water. The baptism they administered was water baptism. Jesus authorized the apostles, in What is called the commission, to administer baptism, and this could be none other than water baptism. Baptism is an ordinance of and in the church. The ordinances were delivered by the apostles to the church for administration and for keeping. See (I Corinthians 11:2). In 1933 the same brother asked us were the prophets, evangelists and teachers mentioned in (Ephesians 4:11) ordained, and did they have the care of churches, and did they baptize, and did they pass the sacrament? We are sure that the pastors had the care of churches, of course. Yes, they baptized. Paul baptized a few at Corinth, though he said, "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." The church gave him the authority to baptize, as the ordinances were in the hands of the church for keeping. Yes, they were ordained. See ((2) (Acts 13:2) for authority for ordination. These ordained, and authorized by the church to do so, administered all the ordinances. They administered the sacramental supper as an ordinance, just as they also administered baptism as an ordinance. C. H. C.

Easter and Christmas

---November 7, 1935

In April, 1931, Elder O. K. Sheffield, Ft. Pierce, Fla., asked for our views concerning Easter and Christmas. The word Easter is found only once in our Bible, and that is in (Acts 12:4). But the word there translated Easter is found in many other places in the Book, but is translated Easter in no other place. The word is pascha, and has reference to the passover. It means passover. It has reference to the paschal lamb, and is applied to Christ as our paschal lamb. He is our passover. The Easter observance is a Roman Catholic invention, and they set the time as having to do with full moons. Hence Easter Sunday comes on different Sundays. The Catholics established the observance of Easter Sunday in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ, and yet it is not at a fixed time. It is heathen in its origin, the Catholics borrowing it from heathenism. The same thing is true of Christmas-it is of Roman Catholic origin. It was instituted by Constantine the Great. He brought different heathen customs with him when he professed to embrace Christianity. The Pagan idolaters, which Constantine renounced, observed mass in regard to different things. So Constantine brought "the mass" with him. So he ordered mass to be observed in commemoration of the birth of Christ; hence the name Christmas, or Christmass. He also set apart the day in winter. No one knows when Christ was born; but it was not in the winter. The shepherds were keeping watch over their flocks by night, in the fields, which they would not be doing in winter. Personally we have nothing to do with either of those feast days. To observe and keep them is to follow Rome. C. H. C.

Elder Webb Withdraws

---November 7, 1935

In another column will be found an article from Elder Claud E. Webb withdrawing his name from our editorial staff. We regret very much for him to do this, though it may be best for the cause for him to take this step, but we fear not. For several years there has been some variance and misunderstanding between many brethren north and south. We had hoped that this might all be removed and overcome by having Elder Webb's name on our editorial staff. We hoped that this might have a tendency to bring them all closer together. Elder Webb fears it might have a tendency otherwise. He may be right. We do not know. Anyway, it is our desire, and the desire of Elder Webb, to do all that we can to bring all the brotherhood closer together. We ask the prayers of all the brethren and sisters, that the Lord would direct us in the way that would be best for the cause of the Master. C. H. C.

Galatians 4:27

---November 7, 1935

In 1930 B. N. Sullivan, now in Mississippi, asked for our views on (Galatians 4:27). It means that there are more Ishmaelites than children of promise. C. H. C.

Restoring Excluded Persons

---November 7, 1935

We doubt very much if one church has the right to restore a person who has been excluded from a sister church, labor or no labor. True, if a church excludes a person unrighteously, sister churches have the right to labor to show the sister church her error. We truly believe this is as far as they have a right to go. We mean to say that a church has no right to restore such a one as long as the identity of the church remains that did the excluding. Such a course always widens a breach and makes it much harder for peace to be restored. A church has the God given right to say who shall not hold membership in her body. She may err in her procedure in such cases; but she should not be non-fellowshipped because of such error. We believe such acts as an exclusion by a church should be recognized by every sister church, and by so doing much trouble would be avoided. No church or set of churches can unchurch another church. This is our humble opinion on such matters. C. H. C.

Some Additional History

---November 21, 1935

We had an article under the heading of "Valid Baptism and Some History" in the issue of January 15, 1931, which may be found on page 330 of Volume V The same article was reproduced November 21, 1935, with the following "Additional History." Since the above was written, and having been requested to republish the same, we think it might be of some benefit to the brotherhood and to the cause for us to add a little additional historical facts, as follows: It appears that Little Flock Church in Killeen, Texas, was organized about the year 1848 in Bell County. The church was in Killeen in 1906. The church first joined the Lower Concord Association, with which it remained till the Lower and Upper Concord settled their trouble in October, 1880. The church was then in the constitution of the Primitive Association. In 1888 the church joined the Little Flock Association, of which it was still a member when the history was written, from which we get the facts here stated. The Concord Association divided in 1864. In 1880 the Concord Association met with Bosque Church in August. At that meeting in August the association passed this act: "We, the association, advise the churches to meet the brethren that went off from us (in 1864) and called themselves Concord Association, by messengers at Salem Church, Coryell County, on Friday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1880." After the division in 1864 the two contending parties were known as the "Lower Wing" and "Upper Wing" of the Concord Association. Both factions met by their messengers at Oglesby, Coryell County, in October, 1880. Both parties confessed their wrongs. Then the "Lower Wing" dissolved, after which the churches in that wing, and perhaps others, organized the Primitive Baptist Association. The above facts are gathered from "A History of the Primitive Baptists of Texas, Oklahoma and Indian Territories; by Elder J. S. Newman;" published in 1906, by the Baptist Trumpet, at that time published at Tioga, Texas, and now published at Killeen. It seems to us that if two factions burying their differences and coming together, both sides confessing their wrongs, and thus adjusting matters, and each receiving the work of the other, would throw the whole thing in disorder, so that they could not administer gospel baptism, then the editors of the Trumpet are already in that disorder, and cannot themselves administer gospel baptism-for that is what the church of that editor's membership did in 1880. Have we made an incorrect statement, brother? If so, cite us. C. H. C.

One Talent Man

---November 21, 1935

If the one talent man always buries his talent, then the others always improve their talents. According to this, we do not see where any disobedience ever comes in. We have understood that God's people frequently disobey the Lord's commands. C. H. C.

Building The Home Christian

---December 5, 1935

The above is the title of a book published by Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., 142 pages; price $1. Like most every book we have seen, it contains some things with which we cannot agree. On page 44 we find this: "The Sunday school is the church at work, gathering the young a little more closely about, for the purpose of instructing them more thoroughly. Here, too, is a wonderful help, if it is properly employed." We will just state here two objections to this. First, there is no authority in the Book for the church to organize a Sunday school. Another objection is that a false doctrine is almost always, if not always, taught in Sunday schools. Unregenerate persons, who know nothing of spiritual things, are often engaged in teaching the Sunday school classes. They are no more qualified to teach spiritual things than an outlaw is qualified to teach morality. It is outside of his realm. Page 55: "The child needs to be brought into a personal saving knowledge of Christ. Until he arrives at the period of personal responsibility, he is in the kingdom, and it is only by sinning his way out that he gets outside of the kingdom." Jesus said (literal translation), "Except anyone be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom." "Except anyone be born of water, even Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom." -(John 3:3,5). The way one is brought into the natural realm is by being born into it. Just so, the way one is brought into the spiritual realm is by being born into it. One who has been born into the natural realm cannot be unborn and thereby get out of it. Even so, one who has been born into the spiritual realm cannot be unborn and thereby get out. True, a child of God may be rebellious; but that does not unborn him, or put him out of God's family. One who has been born into a natural family may be rebellious; but that does not cause him to be unborn, or put him out of relationship with the family. Page 56: "It is an evangelism which seeks to direct the child from a state of childhood innocence where there is no condemnation upon him because of the absence of a sense of personal guilt, to a state of childhood where a sense of personal sin and guilt is beginning to be experienced, but where surrender to, and faith in, Christ has brought the testimony of saving grace." "According to this, it is not sin which brings condemnation but a sense of personal guilt. It is not the personal guilt which brings condemnation, but the sense of it. If this is correct, then there could be no condemnation upon a being unless he has a personal sense of it. If he is made aware of it, then it would be so; otherwise not so. This does not seem to us to be very good logic or reasoning. It is simply an incorrect principle. Saul had no personal feeling or knowledge of guilt when persecuting the saints until the Lord, by the direct power of His own speech, made him to know his guilt. He was doing that wicked work "in all good conscience." But he was guilty just the same; and condemnation rested upon him before he knew it. He was made acquainted with the fact after the fact existed. The knowledge of the fact did not make it a fact. Though we have to take issue with the author on this teaching, yet there are many good things in the book. Here is a statement that is especially good, page 41: "Reverence for, and obedience to, the Bible has been one of the secrets of the greatness of the American nation, and the security of the American home, in the past. In the measure that there has been a neglect, or a reversal of this attitude, has the home been impoverished, and the nation morally and spiritually reduced." How true this is. This book has a chapter on the text in ((2:6) (Proverbs 22:6) "Train up a child in the way he should go, and (even) when he is old, he will not depart from it." It is in treating upon this text that the author brings in the Sunday school. Let us call attention to the fact that the obligation of training up a child is resting upon the parents of the child. The parents are not instructed to send the child to others to be "trained up." To do that is to shift the responsibility upon others than where God has placed it. No promise in the text in that case that the child will not depart from it. The parents who follow the course of sending the child elsewhere for the training thereby become transgressors themselves. The training up of the child is required of the parents. Here is where there has been a great falling down in our nation. Parents have tried to shift the training of the children to others instead of doing the training themselves which God's Book requires., Page 63 is a relation of a story of a father going to sleep and his child wandering in the forest and falling over a precipice, and when the father awoke he found his dead child. This may be a good illustration of parents going to sleep, instead of being awake and doing the training of the child. The child is left to wander around in the teaching done by others. The parent may awake some day and find his child in the vortex of immorality. Better stay awake, and keep your child under your own roof and under your own personal supervision and training, and see that he is not brought under the influence of the inventions of men in the affairs of religion, gotten up under the professed object of "bringing souls to Christ." Worldly religion and so-called Christianity has made more infidels than any other thing. Chapter six in the book is especially good. So is chapter seven. We quote this from chapter seven, page 107: "As this manuscript is being prepared, the people of the United States are trying to find their way back to prosperity. Surely some of the efforts to solve the economic ills of our people have been mere gestures, while others have been absolutely false. Booze has led millions of people from prosperity into poverty, and how can a nation find its way back to prosperity drunk? When, and if, we are able to return to prosperity, it will not be because of strong drink, but despite it." How true this is. Drink never has brought righteousness or prosperity. Instead, it brings debauchery and crime. Dram drinking makes drunkards; and drunkards make widows and orphans. It brings murder, insanity, degredation and shame. It makes paupers, and brings innocent women and children to poverty, rags and starvation. Yet we are told that moderate drinking and the selling of legalized booze will bring prosperity. We are on the downward road to ruin. Nothing but a return to the strict observance of the teaching of God's Word, from a moral point of view, will save our nation from destruction. Lord, help us. C. H. C.

---December 5, 1935

Mrs. B. Martindale, of Texas, asked our views on (Matthew 4:16-17), in March, 1931. The text reads, "The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up. From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." If you will read beginning with (Matthew 4:12), you will find that here is a fulfillment of a prophecy of Isaiah. Get your Bible and read ((9:1) (Isaiah 9:1-2)), in connection with (Matthew 4:12-16) here, and you will find that this is the prophecy of Isaiah concerning the land of Zebulon and Nephthalim. Those lands were in darkness, but when Jesus was there light was there. Then "from that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." This shows that the time was then immediately present when the Lord was to establish His kingdom on earth. The church was set up or established during His personal ministry. He set up the kingdom, just as Daniel prophesied that He would. C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 7:15

---December 5, 1935

Brother W. T. Morrisett, Edmond, Okla., asked our views of (I Corinthians 7:15) in March, 1931. The text reads, "But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us to peace." The apostle does not mean by this expression that a brother or a sister is not under bond of the marriage vow in such a case. If he meant that, then he contradicted the teaching of the Saviour, who plainly taught that fornication is the only cause for which one may put away a companion and marry again. In (I Corinthians 7:11) the apostle plainly says for them to be reconciled. If one departs, then the other is not bound to follow; but they are bound under the law of God to remain in such a state as that they may be reconciled. C. H. C.

Genesis 2:15-17

---December 5, 1935

Virgile Harris, Lindsay, Okla., asked for an explanation of (Genesis 2:15-17), and asked, "Does Eve's eating of the fruit of the tree represent natural death or spiritual death?" and "Did God foreordain or know that Eve would eat of the fruit? and does it represent any free moral agency on that course of hers?" (Genesis 2:15) says, "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and keep it." This plainly tells what God put the man into the garden for. He did not put the man into the garden to violate His law. This answers the question as to whether God foreordained that Eve should eat of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. God knew what they would do; but He did not foreordain or predestinate that they should do what they did. (Genesis 2:17) says, "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." If God foreordained or predestinated that they should eat and then commanded them not to eat, it would be what would be called double dealing. God does not deal that way. Hence, He did not predestinate or foreordain that they should eat of the fruit of that tree. As to free moral agency, we do not know what you mean by that. There is no such thing that we know anything about. It is only a term men have invented. They acted (both Adam and Eve) freely, without any compulsion from the Lord, in the violation of the law. The death was not spiritual, for they had no spiritual life to lose. They lost all moral standing with God, and the life they lived became poisoned and contaminated with sin. C. H. C.

Elder Newman Gone

---December 19, 1935

On Tuesday, December 3, just as we were ready to go to press with the last issue of The Primitive Baptist, we received the sad news of the death of our dear brother, Elder J. S. Newman, who passed away on Friday morning, November 29. It was sad news to us, and we are sure it was sad news to many-yes, a great many, of the Lord's dear children. A great and good man is gone. He endured much and bore much for the cause that we all love. He has been maligned and persecuted, but he bore it without murmuring or complaining. He went on faithfully declaring the truth, and was able and bold in defense of the truth, even in face to face combat with men of standing and learning in the world. He was a strong man in public debate, and has routed many champions of error in public discussions. Our cause has lost much in the passing of Joseph Sylvester Newman. We grieve for him. Lord, help us to be submissive. We knew that he was growing old, and that he could not stay here many more years; yet we were not prepared for the stroke. He remained active in the service until the end. He returned home from a trip in the service on Monday before his passing on Friday. He traveled and preached and engaged in debates in many states. We will hear his voice no more on earth. He has been on the editorial staff of The Primitive Baptist most of the time for many years. He has sent us many subscribers. He has written much for our columns. His work will be missed. He was a great historian. Perhaps we do not have a man in our ranks now who is better read in church history than he was. May the good Lord bless and sustain the bereaved, is our humble prayer; and may He give us more such true and devoted and faithful men to fill up the ranks. C. H. C.

Jeremiah 2:13

In April, 1931, J. D. Rinehart, Rienzi, Miss., asked for our views on (Jeremiah 2:13), which reads, "For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." The Lord said His people had done these things. They forsook the Lord; they departed from His teachings. They forsook His commandments. This is certainly a great evil-for His people to forsake Him. His tender mercies had been extended to them; His rich blessings had been showered upon them; and they forsook Him. As did Israel in ancient times, so do many of His children in this present age of the world. Not only did they forsake the Lord, but they hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns. The Lord was a fountain of living waters. A fountain never runs dry. A fountain is self-sustaining. It needs no outside power or force to sustain it. It is continually springing up, and flows on without cessation. It never ceases to flow. But a cistern must be supplied from an outside source. Then it will go dry; but a broken cistern will not hold water at all. The water is all wasted that may be put into it. How different from a fountain! Yet, God's people often turn from the living streams and from the fountain, and will hew out for themselves broken cisterns that can hold no water. The things they turn to can give them no benefit whatever. To turn from the true service of God is to forsake the fountain of living waters, where there is joy and peace and blessed consolation, and the soul can drink of that water that comes from heaven, and have the spiritual thirst assuaged and quenched. Then to turn to the inventions of men, and engage in the things in pretended service of God which men have invented, is to hew out broken cisterns that can hold no water. It is a great evil thus to do. May the good Lord help us all to let the cisterns severely alone and to be faithful to Him and to His cause and to His service. C. H. C.

---December 19, 1935

With this issue we close volume fifty of The Primitive Baptist, and once more it falls to our lot to write a little article in closing the volume. We have now rounded out the half century mark in the publication of The Primitive Baptist, Fifty volumes of the publication are completed with this issue. During these fifty years many changes have taken place. Many friends have come and gone. How many of those who were the old folks then are on the stage of action now? Those who are living and old now were the young ones then. We doubt if we have a single subscriber on our list now who was a subscriber when the first issue of this paper was printed and sent out fifty years ago. If there is one, we would be glad that person would write to us. Is there one on the list who has been a subscriber during all these fifty years? While there have been many changes, yet the principles of the doctrine of grace are the same now that they have ever been. Principles are eternal and never change. Many have forsaken those principles; but the principles are the same. Men have despised and endeavored to overthrow and destroy the doctrine of God our Saviour; but it remains the same unvarnished and untarnished truth. Truth may be crushed to earth, but it will rise again, and will continue to shine in effulgent glory throughout all ages. We have tried to contend earnestly for the principles of God's eternal truth, not only during this year of our Lord, 1935, but all along the line. We do not believe that any person on earth can present any article we have ever written that will contradict any other article we have written. We do not feel to deserve any praise for this. We have only tried to stand on the principles of truth all along; and we very well know that truth does not contradict itself.' Truth always harmonizes with itself. We are free to confess that we have made mistakes. It is human to err, and we are only human - just a poor sinner. We trust that we are a saved sinner-a sinner saved by the grace of God. Our only hope of rest when the toils of this life are over is in the free and sovereign and unmerited grace of a crucified and risen Redeemer. Our only hope of a better place beyond this life is in the mercy and grace and love of God. We have believed that the Old Baptists would do their best to maintain and support a publication which stands without fear or favor for the principles upon which the church has stood through all the ages of the past, since our Lord organized His kingdom during His personal ministry while here on earth. That kingdom, or church, we are sure is the Primitive Baptist Church. It is here to stay. He put it on earth to stay until He comes back to earth again in person. He is coming back to gather His jewels home. And when He comes, He will take them all to heaven, in body, to live with Him in eternal glory. He will raise the bodies of all His sleeping saints, and will change them from natural to spiritual. The bodies will then be spiritual bodies. No more suffering or sorrow then. No more darkness; no more distress; no more tears of sorrow to be shed then. No more troubles and sad divisions then. Is such peace and joy ours to have in the sweet by and by? We are hoping for this, if we are not deceived. We beg the Lord still for His mercies, and that He will forgive all our mistakes and the wrongs which we have committed, and to help us to continue to strive for the better things while we are permitted to stay on earth. If we have done anything which wounded the feelings of any of the Lord's little children, it was unintentional on our part, and we humbly beg their forgiveness. Do not cast us aside because we have not always done as you think we should have done; but please bear with our many imperfections, and help us to strive for better things. May the richest blessings of heaven rest upon each one of you, is our humble prayer. The next issue of the paper will be dated January 2, 1936. Farewell in the Lord. Please remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 51

---January 2, 1936

Once more it falls to our lot to try to write a few lines by way of introduction to another volume of The Primitive Baptist. This time it is volume fifty-one. Now, what shall we say? We feel to be at an utter loss as to what we should say, or how we should say it. If we knew how, we would just try to re-consecrate ourselves anew to the service of God and to the service of His people. It is still our desire to continue the publication of The Primitive Baptist in defense of the same principles for which it has contended through all the past fifty years. We are sure that the same principles have been advocated and set forth in the columns of this paper from the beginning of its publication by our sainted father. The principles of truth are the same now that they were then, and they were the same then that they were during the personal ministry of the blessed Saviour while He was here on earth. If we are not deceived in our poor heart, we love those principles, and it is our sincere desire to continue to advocate and contend for them. We desire to do this in the right way. We desire to advocate the truth in love. It is our desire to be faithful and true to the Master and to His blessed cause. We are well aware of the fact that in doing this we will incur the displeasure of some. One reason why we are aware of this fact is that we have incurred the displeasure of some in the past. We are sorry to incur the displeasure of any of the Lord's children; but we must confess that we would rather displease them than to displease our loving Saviour. Some have not been pleased, and have censured us, because we would speak out plainly and sound a warning at approaching danger. We could not do otherwise and be true to our Lord. Why will brethren censure us and become offended at us because we give the warning when we see such things? We regret that brethren have done this, but we do not regret trying to be true to our Master. We may not have many more days to spend on earth. Our labors may be almost done. We have no more knowledge of the future than we had one year ago, and we could not look into the future then. The only way we can judge the future is by the past. While we do not know how much longer the Lord may spare us to stay in this old world, or how much longer we may have to labor in the Master's cause here in the world, we are aware of the fact that there are troubles and trials to be met and encountered while we do live. "In every city bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." -\(\(0:23\) \(Acts 20:23-24\)\). It is our desire to shun no part of the truth. To shun any part of the truth is to be unfaithful to the trust. It is our desire to earnestly contend for the things that make for peace in the Lord's kingdom-the Old Baptist Church. The truth-what the Bible teaches-does not divide the Old Baptists. If every minister in the ranks of the Primitive Baptist Church would "behave himself" in the house of God, and live as the Bible teaches that he should live, and advocate nothing only what the Bible plainly teaches, we would have less trouble in the church. There would not be so many factions and divisions. We humbly pray the Lord to give us faithful and true men, men who are open and frank, and such men as that we may know where to find them and where to place them-men who are not deceivers. We need such men, and we need more of them. Let us pray the Lord to send them. May the good Lord help us, and sustain us by His grace. In conclusion, we humbly ask an interest in the prayers of our readers. And will you help us to conduct The Primitive Baptist in such a way as that it may be for the comfort and benefit of the Lord's dear children, and the advancement of His blessed cause? C. H. C.

Our Special Offer

---January 2, 1936

From time to time during the past we have been making some special offer for subscriptions. One time we sent out a circular letter to persons who had been taking the paper, but whose names had been dropped- many of them having written us that they just did not have the money to pay for the paper. That circular letter asked them to send just what amount they could, and that we would send them the paper for a year. We remember now one poor widowed sister sent us a dime in answer to that circular. We sent her the paper for a whole year for that dime. We have made these special offers for the sole reason that we did not want one of the Lord's dear children to be deprived of reading The Primitive Baptist on account of poverty or misfortune. We were willing and glad to bear the expense and the loss of sending the paper to them in order to try to be of benefit and comfort to the Lord's humble poor. It was our desire to do all we possibly could for their benefit and for their help and for the benefit of the cause of our heavenly Master. We find that we have frequently been imposed upon and wrongly treated on account of the special offers which we have made. This may have been unthoughtedly done by some who have thus injured us. Some have even used some of the propositions, or spoken of them, in such a way as to discourage others and to cause them to not subscribe for the paper. We do not understand why they would do this, as it could not possibly be of any benefit to the one who would thus do. But it has been done. In doing this, they have unwittingly done some injury to the cause-if it is a benefit to the cause for the Lord's little children to read our paper and to have the benefit of the letters of comfort and instruction that go out in its columns every issue. They have hurt the cause and been of more hurt to those poor children of God thus deprived of the privilege and benefit of reading the paper than they have hurt us. Every paper we have sent out on the reduced prices has been sent out at a financial loss. We do not publish the paper for the purpose of making money. All we have ever tried to make is just a living for our family. We have not tried to lay up any estate for them, and do not expect to do so. We have tried to be and do as the apostle admonished, "Having food and raiment, be therewith content." We have done without luxuries and even many necessities trying to do all in our power to send comfort and encouragement out for the Lord's dear children. If we know our own poor heart we love the Lord's dear children, and we love the Master's blessed cause. His service has been our meat and drink for many years. We now realize that our race is nearly run. We do not regret one single sacrifice we have made. We do not regret the spending of a single penny we have used in trying to get some comfort and encouragement to one of the Lord's little ones. We only trust that when we shall have reached the end of the way we may be able to say with the eminent apostle, "I have fought a good fight; I have kept the faith." But, considering the facts as here stated, that some have used these special offers in a wrong way, we have finally come to the conclusion that it is best for us to not make any more offers of a reduced subscription price after the present offer, as appears elsewhere in this paper, is withdrawn. We cannot afford to publish the paper at a lower price than $1.50 a year, under present conditions. We furnish more reading matter, for the money, at that price than any other religious paper published. We are thus doing all that we can do, without people using these special propositions to make it appear that we could afford to publish the paper at such a ridiculously low price. It seems that if the paper were published free, some would expect to be paid something to get them to take the paper then. When this special proposition is withdrawn, you need not look for any more offers of a reduction in the price of the paper. Now is your last opportunity to get the benefit of such an offer. We have no idea now that we will ever make such a proposition again. Once again we ask the prayers of our dear brethren and sisters. Pray the Lord to direct us in the right way, and to give us Christian courage and fortitude to walk in that way, and to sustain us by His grace, and enable us to bear all the trials which we may encounter during the few remaining days we have here on earth. May His blessings be showered upon each one of you, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Holiday Remembrances

We would be glad to write a personal letter or card to each one who remembered us during the holidays, but we cannot do so. We appreciate every expression of love and fellowship and friendship which we received, and we received a great many. It fills our poor heart with gratitude and thankfulness to God that we have so many true and faithful and loyal friends. We do not know how we could get along in this old world without friends, faithful and true, and brethren and sisters in the Lord. We do not feel worthy of their love and fellowship and friendship and esteem; but we love them all and appreciate them. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon each one of you, is our humble prayer. Let each one take this as a personal note of friendship and appreciation. Words cannot be found by us to fully convey to you our appreciation of your kind remembrances. With love to all, we remain, yours in love and fellowship, C. H. C.

Matthew 5:40 AND 1 Corinthians 6:1

---January 2, 1936

We have been requested to give our views on (Matthew 5:40) and (1 Corinthians 6:1). The verse in Matthew reads: "And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also." The teaching of the Saviour in this language is that if one should take from you your coat by force or by unjust means, let him have your cloak also. His humble followers should rather suffer wrong than to do wrong. The expression, "sue thee at the law," implies force or violence. Better let one have the coat and the cloak also rather than engage in force and violence. Turn and read beginning with (Matthew 5:38), and you will see that violence is the matter under consideration. In (I Corinthians 6:1) the apostle says, "Dare any of you, having a matter against a brother, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?" Get your book and read on down to and including (I Corinthians 6:8). The apostle here most positively and plainly condemns such a thing as a brother going to law with a brother. It is here described as a shame. It has always been contrary to and against the rules of the Primitive Baptist Church for any brother to go to law with another brother without the consent of the church. The rule, then, evidently has in it the idea that every other means of settlement should be availed of and used before taking such matters into the courts of the land-and not even then until permission is had from the church. When any brother takes a matter into the civil courts against another brother, he has flagrantly violated the teaching of the apostle in this text and the connecting verses, and has gone in direct opposition to what has always been the rules of the Primitive Baptists. We suppose this is enough for us to say on this line. C. H. C.

What Should Be Done?

---January 2, 1936

A brother has asked us this question: "What should be done in the case where the church ordains a man to preach and he does not preach, but his life is upright?" Well, in the first place a church has no right nor authority to ordain a man to preach unless he does preach. The church cannot make a preacher by ordaining him. Some people seem to think the one and only thing necessary to make a preacher is for the church to ordain him. Ordination does not make a preacher. It only sets a man apart to the work whereunto God has called him-if God has called him to the work. If God has not called him, ordination does not help him any, nor does it help the church. Instead of helping the church, it is an injury to the church and to the cause. It is an effort to put a man into a place where God does not require him to be. God has not made a place for him there, and he will not fit that place. It is an effort to have him stand in some other place than his own. God's requirement is for every man to stand in his own place round about the camp. When you thus put a man in the wrong place by ordination, you are going in flagrant disobedience to the command of God, and you are sure to suffer the consequences. You not only do yourself and the church and the cause of the Master an injury, but likely to do an injury to the man thus ordained. You may make him think God has called him to the work of the ministry, when He has not, and thus you deceive him; and this may cause him to desire to stand in a place other than his own place. If and when a church makes such a mistake as this, it is her indispensable duty to confess her error, confess the mistake, and ask for the return to her of the man's credentials, and withdraw from him the liberty of using the authority the church gave him when she tried to make a preacher of him by ordination. Not every man can preach whose walk is upright. No man can preach the gospel of the Son of God, in the spirit of the gospel, unless God has called him to the work, and bestowed the gift upon him. If a man is "running for preacher," it is usually pretty good evidence that he is mistaken in his thoughts. C. H. C.

W. T. Stegall

---January 16, 1936

We have before us a little paper called Baptist Examiner, published at Ashland, Ky., bearing the name of W. T. Stegall as associate editor. We suppose this is the same Stegall whose post-office was Pontotoc, Miss., and who once had membership with a Primitive Baptist Church somewhere in that part of Mississippi. He was excluded from the Primitive Baptists. We think Elder J. W. Hardwick was pastor of the church. In two of these papers we have before us are articles by Elder Stegall. He makes a challenge to our people, whom he is pleased to call "Hardshells." His whole effort is to prove that no one is saved unless that one has faith in Christ. His contention is that no one can be saved without hearing and believing the gospel. He bases his whole contention on (Romans 10:14-18). He contends that one must believe in Christ, or have faith in Christ, in order to be born again, or in order to be saved. This is the doctrine he was advocating when the Primitive Baptists excluded him. Let us try his contention a little. First, we will quote the language of the apostle, upon which Elder Stegall places so much stress to prove his contention: We begin with (Romans 10:13): "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." - (Romans 10:13-17). If Elder Stegall's contention be true that one must believe in Christ, or believe on the Lord in order to be born again, or in order to be saved, it is also true that one must also call on the Lord in order to be born again; for the apostle says, "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." It is just as necessary for one to call on the name of the Lord in order to the saving under consideration by the apostle here as it is for him to believe. The saving the apostle is here considering does not come until one calls on the name of the Lord; and no one calls until after he believes. This is true in the sense of the apostle's teaching here, or the lesson he is teaching. So, Elder Stegall needs to tack on another condition for the sinner to perform in order to be regenerated. Elder Stegall makes the word of God in (Romans 10:17) the written or preached word. This is not correct. The Greek word is ramah, and means the speech of God. The faith the apostle is here treating of comes by hearing. But how does hearing come? How does one get the ability to hear? The unregenerate do not have that ability. In speaking to unregenerate sinners Jesus said, "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word." - (7) (John 8:47). Such persons who are not of God do not hear (understand) God's words; they cannot hear, and therefore cannot understand. "How can ye believe, which receive honor one of another?" - (John 5:44). This is a stronger way of saying that persons in such a condition cannot believe, and it is the language of Jesus. If they must believe in order to be regenerated, and the Son of God told the truth, then it is impossible for an unregenerated sinner to ever be regenerated. How does one receive the ability to hear, or how does hearing come? It comes by the power of God's speech. God speaks, by the power of His Holy Spirit, to the dead faculties of the soul, and thus He imparts life to the sinner who was, before that, dead in trespasses and sin. In the same way that the Father will raise the dead in the resurrection at the last day, even so the Saviour raises poor sinners now from a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ. See (John 5:25) and (John 5:28). Does Elder Stegall expect the Father to send him out on the morning of the resurrection to preach to those who are in their graves, in order that they be resurrected from that dead state? If the Father will not do that, then neither does He send Elder Stegall, or any other preacher, to preach to unregenerate sinners in order that they be raised out of that state of death into a state of life in Christ. It is the voice of the Son of God that raises out of death into life; it is not the voice of Parson Stegall, or any other Softshell preacher, or any other man or preacher. Being raised out of death into life is the how that hearing comes. They then have the ability, the power, to hear the preacher, and to believe the gospel of Christ, the good news of salvation by the power of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. The gospel message is a spiritual message. One can no more hear a spiritual message without first having spiritual life, than he can hear a natural message without first having natural life. Parson Stegall's doctrine will exclude every infant from the portals of glory who dies in a state of infancy. He would necessarily leave them out, or else he must say that the hour-old infant is capable of believing what he preaches. If one must believe what he preaches in order to be regenerated, then the infant dying at one hour of age would be eternally damned, unless that infant could hear and believe the preaching of Parson Stegall. Or, will he say that God has another plan for the infants, different from that of the mature and sane adult? Parson Stegall is simply advocating the same blasphemous heresy that was invented by Rome and has been advocated by her and her kinsfolk all along the line. It is contrary to God's Word, and is not the original Baptist teaching or doctrine. Rome invented it, and from that doctrine sprang her inventions in missions and machinery for the conversion and salvation of the world. It is the teaching of Romanism. C. H. C.

From Belshazzar to Roosevelt

---January 16, 1936

The above is the title of a book published by the Rail Splitter Press, Milan, Ill. It is the last production of William Lloyd Clark, who spent many years of his life as a publisher and lecturer. He was editor of the Rail Splitter, which paper was, and is, devoted to exposing Roman Catholicism. He was a man who spoke against Romanism, without fear or favor. This book, his last production, contains 207 pages, good clear type. He has not "minced" words in this book. No matter what your political preferences are, this book is worth your reading, and the facts stated and proven are worth considering. If you will but give the work a careful reading, and at the same time endeavor to make the application of things found in the Book of books, it might be worth your while. You may not agree with the author in all that he says, but you may get something worth while. The price is reduced to $1. Send your order to the Rail Splitter, Milan, Ill. C. H. C.

Radio Sermon

---February 6, 1936

A few nights ago we listened to a sermon over the radio. We did not get the name of the speaker. If we correctly understood the announcement, the broadcast came from some other church by a hookup through Frank Norris' church in Fort Worth. The preacher was strongly urging the unregenerate to get right with God, and to get saved before it is everlastingly too late. He told a number of things which might happen to one who is unsaved so that his salvation would be utterly impossible-it would be everlastingly too late for him to ever be saved. One thing he told his listeners that would make it absolutely impossible for them to ever be saved was that they might lose their right mind; they might become insane; their reason might be dethroned. And he said, "When reason is dethroned your opportunity for heaven is gone." We do not know what denomination this man is identified with, nor do we know his name. We failed to get his name. But as we understood he came through the church of Frank Norris, we suppose he is of the Missionary Baptist or Fullerite persuasion. He is not a Primitive Baptist-of this we are fully aware. But from his discourse and statement we get the idea that he holds that God cannot save an insane person; God cannot save a person whose reason is dethroned. What a poor idea this man has of the God of the Bible; the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob; the God of Israel. We thought of the two who were possessed of devils that we read about in (Matthew 8:28)," And when He was come to the other side into the country of the Gergesenes, there met Him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass that way." Here were two persons who were so fierce and so insane that "no man might pass that way." Here were two fellows that no preacher could get to. The preacher could not get to them by radio in that day. They had no radios then. They were in a deplorable state-so deplorable that they could not be reached by the preachers or any of the devices of men. And according to what the preacher said over the radio, the Lord Himself could not save them. Their reason was dethroned, and their opportunity for heaven was forever gone. It is true that so far as the efforts of men are concerned they had no opportunity for heaven. So far as the works and efforts of men are concerned, no man would have any opportunity for heaven. "With men this is impossible." With men it is impossible to be saved. "But with God all things are possible." It is not impossible with God for men to be saved. While, with these two lunatics," no man might pass that way," yet the Lord was equal to the occasion. Jesus passed that way. He did not do so accidentally. He passed that way on purpose. He always did His work on purpose. He intends to do what He does before He does it. He intended to pass that way. He had a work to do there which men could not do. It was a work that the preacher could not do. "No man," not even the preacher, "might pass that way." But they were not beyond the reach of the Lord. Though they were in such a deplorable condition, and they were so wild that "no man might pass that way," yet their "opportunity for heaven" was not "forever gone." The God of the Bible is able to save the idiot; He is able to save the poor beggar; He is able to save the poor heathen; he is able to save the infant, even the youngest; He is able to save the old man, the young man, the old woman, the young woman; He is able to save in every age and in every clime; He is able to save in every station and every condition of life, even to the uttermost parts of the earth-in all the habitable parts of the world. If God could not save the poor heathen, the condition of that poor preacher we heard talking over the radio would be deplorable indeed. What ignorance displayed over the radio! But such rot suits the world, and they pay a big price for it. The truth does not suit their taste. Lord, pity such ignorance. C. H. C.

Pool Halls

---February 6, 1936

We have been asked what we think about a member of a Primitive Baptist Church playing pool, or having anything to do with the running of a pool hall. Well, we do not think it very becoming in a professed follower of the Lord to engage in pool playing, or to frequent pool halls. Neither do we think they should own or operate one, or have one operated. It has an appearance of evil. In our young days pool rooms were almost always run in connection with saloons. Such places were not considered as the best in those days. The influence is not good. The world expects better of the Old Baptists than they do of other people, and we should not disappoint them. The members of the Lord's kingdom are instructed to "abstain from every appearance of evil," and we should strive to do that. C. H. C.

John 13:14-15,17

---February 6, 1936

In October, 1931, Brother J. H. Hamrick, Unadilla, Ga., asked us to give our understanding of the signification of the words ought and should in (John 13:14-15), and to explain what things are referred to in (John 13:17). Turn and read the verses. We will not take space to copy them here. The word ought means to be bound in duty or by moral obligation. The word should has almost the same meaning as there used. It is given in Webster as a synonym of ought-that is, the words may frequently be used as synonymous, or as meaning the same thing. They both express obligation. Ought commonly suggests duty or moral constraint. Should usually expresses the obligation of fitness, propriety, expediency and the like. In (John 13:17) the things meant are the things the Lord commands or requires. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." That is, if you know and do the things the Lord commands and has commanded, happiness follows as a result. Happiness is here promised to those who do the things the Lord requires of them. Read (James 1:25) in connection with this. C. H. C.

First Baptists in Mississippi

---February 20, 1936

We have before us a copy of the Baptist and Commoner, edited by Ben M. Bogard, of Little Rock, dated January 27, 1936. This seems to be a special Mississippi edition of that paper. On page 3 there appears some history of the early Mississippi Baptists, by Elder E. C. Gillentine, of Laurel, Miss. The author tries hard to make it appear that those early Baptists of Mississippi were identical with the present day anti-Board Missionaries-the Bogard stripe of Missionaries. The writer states the matter correctly that those early Baptists did not affiliate with boards and conventions. There were none to affiliate with. He states correctly that the first Baptist Church constituted was called Cole Creek, and was near Natchez, Miss. He states that the first association was the Mississippi Association, organized in 1807, which is also correct. But he took particular pains not to tell the readers the doctrine that the association stood upon in its organization. We find by consulting Griffin's History of the Mississippi Baptists that this church was called Salem, and was located on Cole's Creek, in Jefferson County. Elder Gillentine says the church was later called Salem. This history by Griffin was published in 1853-eighty-three years ago. Pretty old book. On page 74 we find the following language: It will be necessary, here, to take some notice of Dr. James Mullen, a Baptist preacher, who moved into the territory about 1797. The Doctor preached and contended for the general atonement system, which was so contrary to regular Baptist doctrine, and the articles of faith, on which the Baptist churches in the territory had been constituted, that he was unable to obtain membership. He, however, succeeded in drawing away from the churches some followers. But, after an unavailing effort for several years, not being able to realize his expectations, he left the territory, without ever constituting his adherents into a church. How did our author (Griffin) know about this matter? Was it hearsay with him? Let us see about that. On page 75 he says: The foregoing information was obtained principally from the writings of Joseph Erwin, who was born in Rowan county, N. C, in 1774, and emigrated to the vicinity of Natchez, in 1783. He was a member of the first Baptist Church ever constituted in the Mississippi territory, and was a delegate for forming the first association. He has been a member ever since, and is now living in Holmes county, and enjoying as good health as is usual for his age. What information do we gain from this? Here was an eye witness that a preacher who advocated the doctrine of a general atonement could not get membership in this first church that was organized on Cole's Creek, near Natchez, Miss., in 1794. Joseph Erwin moved to that country from North Carolina in 1783, eleven years before that first church was organized or constituted. A man preaching the doctrine of universal atonement could not get membership with that first Baptist Church, organized in the state, or the other churches which were soon after that also constituted in that territory. Who ever heard of such a thing as a man not being able to get membership with these modern so-called Baptists because he preached the doctrine of a general atonement? That general atonement doctrine among the regular order of Baptists was an invention of Puller, Carey & Co. But this man could not get membership in these old churches of that day and section because he advocated that doctrine. We wonder why Elder Gillentine did not tell his readers about this? If he knew about it, he knew it would not do to tell it. That would disprove the very thing he wanted the reader to believe was the truth. Joseph Erwin was still living, at the age of 79 years, when Griffin's History was published. Griffin had a living witness to the truth. Those early Mississippi Baptists were not modern Softshells. But here is something more from the pen of Joseph Erwin, written in 1839. On page 76 he says: Well, another Babel or Castle built in the air, was the Mississippi Baptist State Convention; when and where all the churches belonging to the different associations must annually send up their delegates, with their pecuniary remittances to support theological schools, for the purpose of educating young men in and for the ministry. After the same had progressed a little, and got so it looked like it might stand on its legs, its features and forms could be more minutely discovered. And then the old Regulars, or some of them, did not like its shapes. They saw the impropriety of such a line of conduct-that it was not congenial with or to the gospel plan-believing that God called and qualified His ministers for and to the work. And now down comes the building to the ground, because it could not live without money. The Old School boys being now twice bit, began' to be a little more on their guard, and to stand aloof to things which they did not understand. Well, from some part of the state in pours the general atonement doctrine, with its multifarious doctrines, that Christ tasted death for every man equally alike, that all mankind are in a salvable state. The old Regulars opposed that doctrine strenuously, believing it to be false when weighed in the balance of the sanctuary. The Missionary System with all its multifarious train, were pressed upon the churches. But the old Regulars cannot submit to such measures, not believing them to be apostolic. My remarks turn particularly on the above mentioned associations. There are others ' of recent date, where the isms prevail abundantly, with their gigantic strides. The Primitive Baptist Association to which I belong has closed her doors against the above train of speculative notions, or moneyed institutions of the day; and I hope the day is not far distant, when all God's children will listen with attention to that solemn and pathetic invitation, "Come out of her, my people." Here we have it plainly that these original Baptists of Mississippi would not have the doctrine that these modern Softshells advocate. Are these "Blowhard" Softshells the same as those old Baptists of Mississippi? They are no more alike than swamp mud is like pure gold or a diamond. Yes, the Mississippi Association was organized in 1807 -the first Baptist Association organized in the State. Joseph Erwin was a member of the first Baptist Church organized in the State and was a delegate for forming this first Baptist Association organized in the State in 1807. We already have from his pen above that these Baptists would not have the doctrine these modern Softshells now advocate. That doctrine was advocated by a man who came among them at that early date, but he could not get membership in any of the churches. But what was the doctrine upon which this old association was organized or constituted? The fourth article of their faith reads as follows: We believe in the everlasting love of God to His people; in the eternal unconditional election of a definite number of the human family to grace and glory. How does that article of faith agree with these modern money-hunters? Do they preach that doctrine? Do they preach anything that even sounds like it? No; a thousand times, no. They ridicule and vilify and slander the Primitive Baptists today because they do preach the sentiment and the doctrine contained in and set forth by that article of faith. The Primitive Baptists stand today upon that same eternal truth. The Missionary so-called Baptists will assert that if that doctrine is the truth it bids a premium on sin and makes God meaner than the devil. But let us have another article of the faith of these old Baptists. Article 6 reads: We believe all those who were chosen in Christ, before the foundation of the world, are in time effectually called, regenerated, converted and sanctified; and are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation. These modern Softshells tell us that this doctrine that God chose persons or people in Christ before the foundation of the world is heresy; that it makes God unjust; that it does not give everybody a chance; that it makes God meaner than the devil. Shame on a people who will so denounce the doctrine those old Baptists advocated, and then have the brass and the gall to try to make it appear to the readers in this day that they are the same people! You need not say that these modern Softshells have not so denounced this doctrine. We have it in, black and white from their own papers. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron." -(I Timothy 4:1-2). "And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." - (Revelation 18:2-4). May the good Lord help His little children to see the truth and to come out from error. C. H. C.

Five Smooth Stones

---February 20, 1936

In June, 1933, Brother M. R. Kuykendall, of Fulton, Miss., asked what we think the five smooth stones represent, which David took from the brook when he went to meet Goliath in battle. We think they represented the five fundamental principles of the doctrine of God our Saviour-eternal, personal, and unconditional election and predestination to salvation of all who will ever be saved; special atonement; direct and immediate and effectual work of the Holy Spirit in regeneration; final preservation of all the saints in grace to glory; and the final resurrection of the dead at the last day. In combatting error one needs to keep and have all these truths together; he may not use them all, but he needs to keep them all in mind. David did not use all of them on Goliath; he used only one, but he had all of the truth. This is the way we have thought to apply this, though we may be wrong about it. C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 11:19

---February 20, 1936

We have received a request twice, quite a while ago, from Brother J. T. Monfort, then of Buena Vista, Ga., now of Columbia, Ga., for our views of (I Corinthians 11:19), which reads, "For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." This text has been used to endeavor to prove that God determined or predestinated that there should be heresies introduced and advocated among them in order that His true disciples be made manifest. This is not the teaching of the apostle at all in this text, nor does he teach that idea in any other place. The true and correct meaning of the word translated heresies in this text is strictly a choice or option; hence, a sect, faction; by implication, discord, contention. See Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon. There is no better authority on the definition of the words used by the inspired writers in the original language. Now, the question arises why must there be a choice or option, a sect or faction, or discord or contention among them? Read the preceding and some of the following verses and you will see that there had been and were departures from the true teaching of the Lord, especially in regard to the Lord's Supper. Some true followers of the Lord must oppose all departures. The introduction of departures in the Lord's kingdom, either in doctrine or practice, must always result in discord and contention, and hence result in divisions and factions. C. H. C.

2 Kings 20:1-7 AND Job 14:5

---February 20, 1936

In July, 1933, Brother R. A. Ford, of Harrisburg, Ark., asked us to harmonize ((Ki 20:1) (II Kings 20:1-7) with ((Job 14:5) (Job 14:5). The text in Kings reads, "In those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And the prophet Isaiah the son of Amos came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order; for thou shalt die, and not live. Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord, saying, I beseech thee, O Lord, remember now how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore. And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle court, that the word of the Lord came to him, saying, Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus saith the Lord, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee: on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the Lord. And I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake. And Isaiah said, Take a lump of figs. And they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered." The text in Job reads, "Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass." This expression of Job cannot be construed to mean that each man has just so many days to live on earth, because the Lord has determined that each man shall live just so many days, and no more. That construction upon that language could not be harmonized, as we see it, with the language above in Kings regarding Hezekiah. But man's days are numbered in the sense that the bounds are set so that man cannot pass over the bounds. Let us read, just here, David's language in ((0:10) (Psalms 90:10) (90:10), "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." Here we have it that "the days of our years are threescore and ten." This does not mean that no man can live longer than that, or that no man does live longer than that. Not many do live longer than that. We may say that is the average old age. But some live to be a number of years older. We received a note recently from Elder John M. Thompson, Tipton, Ind., a man who is much loved among our people, that he was 91 years old last September. By reason of strength, which the Lord mercifully gave him, he has lived twenty-one years more than the average old age already. So the Lord gave strength to Hezekiah, and healed him, and his days were prolonged. Without the Lord's intervention, and healing, and giving strength, he would not have recovered. Sometimes we have seen people so low in sickness that no one could see how in the world they could ever recover, and yet they did. The Lord in mercy intervened, gave strength. But the old human machine will wear out and finally go to the grave. But the Lord knows where the bodies of His saints lie, and the Lord Jesus will come back to earth again some day for them, and He will raise them and change them and make them immortal, and they will see Him as He is and be like Him. We are hoping for that. C. H. C.

Elder Stegall Heard From

---March 5, 1936

In our issue of January 16 we commented on an article in the Baptist Examiner from Elder W. T. Stegall. The elder seems to be somewhat ruffled at our comments, or at us. We have a letter from him in regard to it. The following is his letter in full just as he wrote it: Pontotoc, Miss., Route 1, Box 60, Feb. 9, 1936. Dear Brother Casey: I did not know, until last Thursday, through a letter, forwarded to me, from J. H. Keaton, Huntington, W. Va., of, to say the least of it, your seemingly unkind sarcastic attack on me on the front page of "The Primitive Baptist" of Jan., 16, 1936. I went to Pontotoc (8 miles from my home) yesterday, and borrowed a copy of it, from a sister up there. On consulting with some fine Old Baptists up there about it, who know that your attack on me therein is false, and a misrepresentation of what I have been preaching and writing; suggested that I first write you, and give you an opportunity to correct it in "The Primitive Baptist," which it seems to me you ought to be willing to do, before I replied to you in the "Baptist Examiner. So as there is sometimes so much room for misunderstanding, I have taken the time, and gone to the trouble and taken special pains, to copy an extract from an essay that I have recently written, which I hope to have published in tract form, entitled: "The Absolute Sovereignty of God's Holy Will and Abject Bondage of Man's Carnal Will Versus Free Moral Agency and Accountability of Man in or as to His Own Eternal Salvation or Damnation," also an extract from a letter I wrote to Eld. Lytle Burns, 406 Viola St., Florence, Ala. dated Jan., 30, 1936, which, it seems to me, ought to show you clearly, that I do not believe that an unregenerate sinner has to hear the gospel of Christ and believe it, in order to induce God to born him again, and that I do not believe at all in conditional salvation. All of my writings, fairly construed, certainly prove beyond a doubt that your accusations against me in said attack, are false, and a misrepresentation. If you have been informed by anyone that they are true, they have simply falsified to you. I feel sure that Elders J. D. Holder and J. W. Hardwick, will not affirm that they ever heard me preach conditional salvation on the part of the unregenerate sinner. If you wish to know the facts, if you do not already know them, read my articles that have been published in The Messenger of Zion and The Advocate and Messenger.' Elders N. T. Easley of Stewart, Miss, and J. M. Palmertree of Walnut Grove, Miss., two of the oldest ministers among Old School Baptists and great and good men, who sincerely desire in their hearts, to be fair and just, will, I feel sure, tell you, or write you, if asked, that I never in their presence preached, or argued any such heresy as you accuse me of. I denounce it as a falsehood, and now you certainly ought, since you have thus attacked me, to be interested enough to investigate the facts to see if your accusations against me is true, and if not, be man enough, and honest enough to retract them in "The Primitive Baptist" in which they were made. I will wait a few days, to see what you will do about it, before replying to you in "The Baptist Examiner." I would be glad you would write me a personal letter about it if you wish. If I know my heart, I want to do right, and be fair and just with you, as I desire you to be with me. God certainly will not bless us in slandering and butchering each other to the detriment of His bleeding cause. Yours in good hope behind the blood of the everlasting Covenant. W. T. Stegall. Pontotoc, Miss. Route 1, Box 60. P. S. As much as I have written in The Messenger of Zion for the last seven years, against conditional election and salvation, I was astounded when I read your attack on me. Surely you did not do it ignorantly, if you did, then you are to be pitied, and if I knew that you did, I could feel much better toward you. W. T. S. Elder Stegall, as the reader will observe, is wrought up because we charged that he advocated a conditional system of eternal salvation. Perhaps he does not intend to advocate such a system. We are sorry that we did not keep the article upon which we based our comments. In that article, as well as other articles which he has written, he has contended that no one is born again where the gospel is not preached. His contention is, if we understand him, that divine life is imparted through the proclamation of the gospel; that no one is regenerated where the gospel is not preached; that gospel preaching is necessary in order to a saving faith in Christ Jesus. If this does not involve the idea of a conditional salvation, then we do not know what would involve that. We may be as ignorant as Elder Stegall intimates. But whether we be as mean or as ignorant as he intimates, if none are saved where the gospel is not preached, then no infants or idiots can be saved, for they cannot be reached through the gospel. That is what got Elder Stegall tangled up with our people when he had membership with them, as we understand it. Elder Stegall sent us a copy of some of his writing, as mentioned in above letter. If we know what words mean he has said some things in this writing which cannot be harmonized with what he advocated in the article we replied to. Not only so, but there are some statements in this writing sent us which are contradictory with themselves, if we can understand simple language. Here is one: "A man naturally dead to natural things cannot possibly hear, believe in and accept any natural truth whatsoever; just so, a person spiritually dead to spiritual things cannot possibly hear, believe, or accept any spiritual truth whatever, and all Scripture confirms it as true." If this is true, and it is, then it follows that no sinner can be regenerated through gospel preaching. Gospel preaching has nothing whatever to do with regeneration, or being born again. In order that one be regenerated through gospel preaching, it would be necessary for that person to hear the gospel before he was regenerated. But Elder Stegall says one dead in sins cannot hear it-and truthfully, too. Then, if the unregenerate cannot hear the gospel, they are not regenerated through the gospel-they are regenerated without the gospel, if regenerated at all. But Elder Stegall continues right on with this expression: "That is why one must be born again, and given eternal life, and be effectually and irresistably brought by the drawing and bringing power of the Holy Spirit and divine truth, into the saving knowledge of Christ, as effectually revealed in the gospel to the one thus being operated upon, before they can truly believe in and accept Him, because of, and not in order to; all of which is the work of God on them and in them, and, entirely and altogether of His super-abounding sovereign grace and mercy." Here he has truth, connected with the gospel, tacked on to and in connection with the work of regeneration. He makes both the work of the Spirit and divine truth necessary in regeneration. Then he quotes the Saviour's language in (John 6:47) and inserts comments as follows: "He that believeth hath (not going to get it, provided he as a dead man will not shut his eyes and ears to it, and will decide to hear and believe, and receive it when he believes) eternal life." The text here proves that one who hears the gospel is one who has already been born of God. He was born of God before he heard it. If he was born of God before he heard it, he was born of God without it. Then he quotes (John 5:24), and inserts comments as follows: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him who sent me, hath (not is dead and will receive it when he believes) everlasting life, and cometh not into judgment, but has passed out of death into life." According to this text the man or person who hears the gospel is one who has already been regenerated, has already been born of God. Then why try to mix the gospel up in this work of regeneration? One must be regenerated in order that the gospel reach him. If one must be regenerated in order that the gospel reach him, as this text, as well as others, proves, then God does not use the gospel in regenerating persons. A saving knowledge and faith in Christ does not come through the gospel; but one must have that before he can be reached through or by the gospel. God does not reach them in the work of regeneration through preaching. If He does, then that involves the idea that their eternal salvation is conditional. Elder Stegall may not argue that it is conditional, as he did not in this writing sent; yet he involves himself in this dilemma, as we see it. We could quote a lot more from this writing, but this is sufficient to show that while he argues in this writing that salvation is not conditional, yet he involves himself in inconsistency. When we received the above we involuntarily thought of some experience we had soon after we moved to Thornton. There were some goats wandering around town every day and night, getting into yards and bothering folks. They would get into our yard, too. One night just before we retired we heard them in the yard. Wife ran out the back way to frighten them away. We said, "Wait, I will scare them away." We turned and went through the house, picking up a gun as we went. We went on out on the front porch, raised the gun and fired, thinking to frighten them away. Immediately we heard the loudest and worst squalling we ever heard "in our born days." We do not say Elder Stegall is a goat, for we believe he is a deluded child of God. We just thought of that incident. Well, that goat business was funny to our wife-the way we did, but it was not funny to us then. May the Lord bless you, Elder Stegall, and we pray that you may be able to see the whole truth more clearly. But, please do not bother our people with your idea that the gospel has any place in God's work of regeneration. C. H. C.

Elder Fisher Passed Away

On the morning of February 15, we received a card, which will be found elsewhere in this paper, from Elder O. Strickland bearing the sad news of the passing of Elder J. H. Fisher at 5 o'clock on Thursday morning, February 13. It was a sad stroke to us. We dearly loved Elder John H. Fisher. For several months we had entertained a special desire to go to see him. At different times we stopped our work and looked up train and bus connections as best we could from our place to Newcastle, desiring to make a trip just to see and visit Brother Fisher. At last we wrote him he might make some appointments for us for a few days, that we wanted to go to see him. He responded at once with a list of appointments for three weeks, or a little more, the appointments to begin in about two or three days after the last hearing from him. It seemed to be impossible for us to leave home that quick to be gone that long. Some things had to be done in the way of preparing manuscript for the paper, and such like work, before we could leave for that long a stay. So we just moved the appointments up for a month, and let them stand as Brother Fisher had arranged them, with that one exception. We had to do this or fail to meet some of them-make the trip shorter. So, after much thought, this is what we did-just moved the dates up. But now, we are sorely and grievously disappointed. We will not get to see Brother Fisher. We are just heartbroken. Perhaps the last thing this dear servant did in the way of service was to arrange this list of appointments for us. Before this paper gets to the readers, we will, if not providentially prevented, be on the trip trying to fill the appointments this dear servant of God arranged for us. We expect to start on the journey with a heavy heart and a bowed down head. It is some comfort to us to believe that when he arranged the appointments he prayed to God to bless our going to the comfort of His children and to the good of His cause. Lord, grant it. Brethren, especially the brethren in the ministry, will you be with us as much as you can on this trip-as many of you as possibly can? And each one please pray the Lord that we may be enabled to speak in such a way as to be a blessing to the cause of the Master. Elder Fisher was a true man. He was not a meddler. He was plain and quiet and unassuming. We will miss his writings in the paper, and we will miss the work he did for the paper. May the Lord grant to give us more such men. Many of our old faithful soldiers are being called home. Not long until others of us will go. Farewell, precious brother. And may the Lord bless and comfort and sustain his dear wife and all his loved ones, is our prayer. C. H. C.

A False Accusation

On September 24, 1935, a clipping was received in our office from the Bel Air Times, published in Bel Air, Md., which was an article signed by W. W. Linkous, under the heading, "Discusses the Baptist Religious Denomination and the Split." We were requested to pay some attention to the statements contained in the article. Our wife opens all the mail coming into the office, and such as requires our personal attention is laid aside for us to attend to it as we can get to it. We are just now getting to this. We do not know really that the writer of the article is worth the attention and the space in our paper that it will take for his article and a reply to the same; but for the satisfaction of some Primitive Baptists in that section of the country, as well as elsewhere, we will copy the part of his article just as it appeared in the paper, capitalization, spelling, punctuation, and all, which has special reference to the Primitive Baptists, and will pay some respects to the same. The gentleman says: My father was a primitive Baptist Preacher and my brother also, and I was born among Baptists and raised up among them, therefore I should know something about them. There are several kinds of Baptists too numerous to mention here and I wish to say to all Baptist people that should read this article that if I make any mistakes I want them to correct me. Of course, it is a well-known fact that almost all the Baptists in this county are from the south either

North Carolina or Virginia and, as far as I'm concerned, proud to be numbered among them. The primitive Baptists or hard shells as they are nicknamed believe in Election and predestination, that is that each and every individual that is born into this world is born for Hell or Heaven and those that are born for Hell, will go there, worlds without end, no matter how much praying they may do or how good they may live. And those born for Heaven will get there no matter how much meanness they may do. Almost seventy years ago or shortly after the war between the states some good people began to think better and conceived the idea that men and women went to Heaven or Hell, according to the way they lived in this world and that Christ gave his life for all who was willing to give up their sinful lives and follow him and that not a single soul was left without a chance to be saved if they would only look to him as their savior. So there was a division among them and a split followed. The old side still keeping their name of primitive Baptists and the new side naming themselves regular or union Baptists, this being the same group who held this meeting. The little group of believers began to prosper and grow until now by reading the minutes of proceedings of their work we find there are several different associations corresponding with each other. REMARKS The first thing we wish to call attention to is this statement: "I wish to say to all the Baptist people that should read this article that if I make any mistakes I want them to correct me." Does the gentleman mean that? Was he sincere when he made that statement? If so, why did he not stand corrected when he was corrected? Now, do not deny that you were called on, and that you were corrected, and that you still insisted that you correctly stated matters. If you do, we might prove it on you-we have the proof all right. After being told, you still contended that the Primitive Baptists preach and advocate what you accuse them of in that article. But you misrepresented them. They do not preach what you say they do. They never did preach it. You say your father preached for them until he died. Then you have slandered your dead father; for your father never preached what you say Primitive Baptists preach. Not only has the gentleman slandered his father, but he has made a grand display of his ignorance. Poor soul! He wants folks to think he is intelligent and smart; but we would not miss it far if we were to say that he is as ignorant as a Hottentot. Here is a sample of his wonderful intelligence: "The Primitive Baptists or Hardshells, as they are nicknamed, believe in predestination and election" -but what is election and predestination? Sure, the Primitive Baptists believe in election and predestination. But what is election and predestination? Here is what this great "Solomon" says it is: "That is, that each and every individual that is born into this world is born either for hell or heaven, and those that are born for hell will go there, worlds without end, no matter how much praying they may do or how good they may live. And those born for heaven will get there, no matter how much meanness they may do." Now is that not a wonderful definition of election and predestination? We wonder if this great and wonderful Linkous has begun the little task of making a new dictionary-one just for his own use! Shades of Demosthenes, Cicero, Solomon and Paul! What a wonderful scholar we have over in Maryland! Is it not a wonder of wonders that he has remained in such obscurity for these years! Is it not passing strange that the people have not learned about such a wise man being so near the seat of government of the Union, and all marched together and had him placed at the head of the government? It is a wonder Roosevelt has not called him in long before now and put him at the head of his great "brain trust!" Surely if some "wise guy" will get an audience with Mr. Roosevelt and get him to read the wonderful production from the pen of this great "fountain of wisdom" he will go at once to interview this great man, and get him into his cabinet at once-and put him up as "head over all things" to this great nation of ours. Well, say, it is funny. Primitive Baptists do not believe people are born into this world for either heaven or hell. Man was not put here in this world for either heaven or hell. Primitive Baptists believe on this just what the Bible says about it. "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." -Acts xvii. 26. Man was created and placed here to dwell on the earth, and not for either heaven or hell. This one man, one blood, brought death and ruin upon himself by his own transgression. He violated God's just and holy law, and he did that without compulsion; he did it of his own will; he was not deceived. Eve was deceived, but Adam was not. "And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression." - (I Timothy 2:14) "For the wages of sin is death." -(Romans 6:23). Sin is the transgression of the law. {(I John 3:4)} Wages is what one gets for what he does. What man did was that he transgressed the law; he sinned; what he got for it, and what he gets for it, is death. Man is not only a transgressor of God's law, but he is a wilful transgressor; he transgresses willingly or wilfully. One command of God is that "thou shalt not bear false witness." - (Matthew 19:18). A false witness is one who testifies that a thing is true which is not true. This fellow Linkous testifies that a thing is true which is not true, and we suppose he has no desire or inclination to correct the statement. The reader may judge the rest of the matter, without it being necessary for us to mention what these facts show. In a state of nature, as all men stand related to Adam and under the law, all are condemned by and under the law. They are justly condemned, for the law was just. "Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God." -(Romans 3:19). "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." -(Romans 3:23). "For we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin." -(Romans 3:9). Here we have it very plainly taught that the whole race is under sin, and justly condemned under the just law of God, and for the plain and simple reason that the just law of God was and is wilfully violated; and man is the transgressor. Without the intervention of divine mercy and grace without the intervention of the work of the eternal God - all are eternally lost. Man could not remove his own guilt; and his guilt must be removed, and satisfaction rendered to divine justice, if man is ever saved, or if he ever lives with God in heaven. Not one sinner of all the race could ever enter heaven without that. What is election? Linkous says Primitive Baptists believe in election. What is it? It is the act of choosing; choice; selection. See Webster. Did God elect anybody? Did He choose anybody? Did He make a selection? Linkous denies that God made any selection or choice, and contends that the whole thing rests-not upon what God does or has done, but-solely upon the work and choice the sinner makes. What he advocates is either what the inspired Book teaches, or else it is not. If it is what the Book teaches, then it is the doctrine of God. If it is not what the Book teaches, then it is a doctrine of men or devils. Now, let us see what the Book teaches about this matter. Did God elect, select, or choose anybody from among the posterity of Adam? Answer: "According as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love." -(Ephesians 1:3). Here the inspired apostle most emphatically states that persons were chosen before the foundation of the world. The expression, "before the foundation of the world" literally means, in our present day English, "before the ages of time began." Hence, before the ages of time began, and before persons existed, God chose persons; He selected them; He made choice of them. He did this that they might be holy and without blame before Him in love. He did not choose them because they were holy and without blame; not because they made a good choice, as Linkous teaches; but the end and design of His choice of them was to make them holy and without blame before Him. They are made holy and without blame before God as a result of God's choice. Without that choice not one would ever be made without blame before God in love. "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God." -((Th 1:4) (I Thessalonians 1:4)). Paul here said, "Knowing * * * your election of God." Did he know it? He either did, or he did not. If he did not, then he was either mistaken or deceived, or else he falsified. Did he lie about it, and say he knew it, when he did not? Was he mistaken about it? If he was mistaken, he was not inspired to pen the language. If he knew they were the elect of God, did he not also know that the doctrine of election is the truth? "Knowing your election of God." They did not do the electing, the selecting, the choosing; but they were the ones elected; they were the ones chosen; they were selected. God did the choosing; the electing; the selecting. Their election was of God, not of themselves. Paul knew that this doctrine of election was the truth, and the Primitive Baptists teach it. Linkous and his stripe do not teach it. We, therefore, teach the doctrine of God, and the other fellow is teaching the doctrine of the devil. What Linkous (and his stripe) teaches gives the lie to the doctrine of God, to the doctrine taught by Paul, as plainly left on record by him, and as now taught by the Primitive Baptists. Well, we prefer to be on the Lord's side, rather than lined up with Linkous and his theological daddy-the devil. Elect means chosen; taken by preference from among two or more; chosen as the object of mercy or divine favor; set apart to eternal life. See Webster. Does God have a chosen people? Does God have a people whom He has taken by preference from among others? Does He have a people who were chosen by Him as the objects of mercy or divine favor? Does He have a people whom He has set apart to eternal life? Answer: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" -(Romans 8:33). Here the inspired apostle tells us that God has an elect; they are God's elect. They are God's chosen ones; God took them by preference from among others; He has made choice of them as the objects of His mercy or divine favor; He made choice of them and set them apart to eternal life. Yes; Primitive Baptists believe and teach what God has said by His inspired penman. But they do not believe or teach what Linkous, and others of the devil's cohorts, say they teach. What about predestination? Linkous says Primitive Baptists believe in the doctrine of predestination. Is that doctrine the truth? It either is, or it is not the truth. How about it? And what does predestination mean? It means to "limit or mark out beforehand; to design definitely beforehand, ordain beforehand, predestine." -Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon. It means "to appoint or ordain beforehand by divine purpose or decree." -Webster. Did God purpose beforehand to save anybody? If He did, the doctrine of predestination is the truth. If the doctrine of predestination is not the truth, then God did not purpose beforehand to save anybody. Linkous contends that the doctrine of predestination is not the truth. If his contention is the truth, then God did not purpose beforehand to save anybody. If God did not purpose beforehand to save anybody, then He does not save anybody -or if He does, He does it without any intention beforehand of doing so. If He saves without intending beforehand to do so, and yet does save somebody, He does it accidentally or against his will or intention-one or the other. If Linkous believes God saves anybody, we wonder which way He thinks He saves them- whether accidentally, or against His will or intention! Did God predestinate anybody unto the adoption of children, or unto eternal life? "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself." -(Ephesians 1:5). Here were some people whom the Lord marked out beforehand to the adoption of children; they were appointed beforehand by divine purpose or decree to be adopted into the heavenly family. Yes, if the Bible is true, the doctrine that God predestinated to save a portion of the human race is true; and the Bible is true. Any doctrine contrary to that is false, no matter if Linkous does deny what the Bible teaches. To deny the Bible or its plain teaching is infidelity. Linkous denies the plain teaching of the Bible. Then what is Linkous?

Linkous admits that the doctrine of the Primitive Baptists is the old doctrine; but a few fellows, like Linkous, got wise above what was written; they learned better. Hence, they learned that the teaching of the Bible is not true. Wonder where they got the information. Did they get it from an almanac? How wonderfully smart and intelligent such fellows are-in their own estimation. The poor fellow says some conceived the idea that men and women went to heaven or hell according to the way they lived in this world. They conceived an idea, then, very different to the inspired idea the Apostle Paul had. He said, "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." -(II Timothy 1:9). Paul had an inspired idea that people were saved, not according to their works; but Linkous says some conceived an idea that they are saved according to the way they live while here in this world. We wonder which idea is the truth. We are inclined to believe Paul had the right idea about it. These poor deluded folks conceived a lie; so they teach a lie, and believe a lie; and seemingly they take pleasure in it. See ((4) (John 8:44)). Linkous also says that Christ gave His life for all who were willing to give up their sinful lives and follow Him. Where did he get that? He did not get it in the Book, for it is not there. Jesus said, "I lay down my life for the sheep." -(John 10:15). To some people He said, "But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep." -(John 10:26). We presume Jesus knew better than these self-important Pharisees whom He laid down His life for. He said it was for His sheep, and the record in the same chapter tells us He told some folks they were not of His sheep. If He laid down His life for the sheep, and those folks were not His sheep, He did not lay down His life for them. To some people Jesus said, while here on earth, "And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. * * * But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you." -(John 5:40-42). People who do not have the love of God in them do not will to come to Christ; their will is to not come. That being their will, if they have to will to come, as Linkous says, then not one would ever be saved. These poor dupes advocate a system that will not reach a single one of all the race of Adam. According to their teaching hell will be running over and heaven will be empty and to rent out for a calf pasture-if you will excuse us for using slang. But the poor fellow says not a soul was left without a chance to be saved, if they would only look to Him, etc. How under heaven could they ever look to Him unless they first hear about Him? The doctrine of these dupes says they must first hear about Him in order to look to Him. But multiplied millions have lived and died without hearing about Him. They never saw a preacher, nor heard one preach; they never saw a Bible. The teaching of these folks is that multiplied thousands are dying every day and going down to eternal and irretrievable woe and misery because they do not have the gospel preached to them. And they do not have the gospel, so they tell us, because the people who do have it are too proud and too covetous and too stingy to give of their money to send the preachers who are ready and willing and anxious to go. Thus, multiplied millions are dying annually and going down to an eternal hell-not because of something they have or have not done, but because these hypocrites who claim to have and to preach the gospel are too stingy to give the money to send the gospel to them. Their doctrine is fathered by the father of lies. It came from hell, and will go back there. We understand Linkous had a brother that preached for the Primitive Baptists. So he says. But his brother was excluded. Perhaps this is one reason why this fellow would make such false charges against them. He may be trying to get revenge. Perhaps so. Judge for yourself. Well, some may say we have been rough. Perhaps so. Dogs have slick tongues. An oxen has a rough tongue, and God's book represents His servants as oxen. We do not know whether they are mulley or have horns. If they are mulley, they can butt such things as Linkous out of the way, and go on pulling the load. If they have horns, they can easily gore to death such varmints as wrote that article in the Bel Air Times. Requiescat in pace. C. H. C.

Make The Paper A Weekly

---March 19, 1936

Elder C. H. Cayce: I do love to hear my husband read our paper. I was just thinking of our good paper coming just twice a month. I want to make a suggestion through the paper. Why can't we have a weekly paper? It does look like we could all send dear Brother Cayce 25 cents each. If 1,000 would do that it would be $250, and I believe Brother Cayce could then make it a weekly paper. I don't know what about this. Dear saints, pray for us; we feel so little. Your little sister, if one at all, Callib McDow. Dilley, Texas. REMARKS We appreciate Sister McDow's suggestion, and we would be glad to send The Primitive Baptist out every week if we could possibly do so. The good sister seems to think that if the readers would send us 25 cents each that we could get the paper out weekly. She says if 1,000 would do that it would amount to $250, and she thinks we would then send the paper out every week. Perhaps a great many others may have an idea like that. We are sure that very few of our readers really know just what it costs us per issue to get the paper out and mailed to the subscribers. We are going to tell you, here, candidly, just what it cost us on an average for every issue of the paper last year-twenty-four issues mailed out during the year 1935. Now, let us ask you to brace yourself for "a jolt," and do not let the "lick" knock you down. The average cost of each issue for the year 1935 was just $236.55-a total of $5,678.30 for the year. How far would $250 go toward getting out a weekly paper? How about what so many say, that the price is too high? We just say this because we want the readers to know the fact in the case. C. H. C.

Romans 8:1

---April 2, 1936

In May, 1933, we received a request from Elder John R. Whitfield, Salida, Calif., for our views of (Romans 8:1), which reads, in our King James translation, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." We hesitate to write on this text, because our view of it is different from the view held by so many of our good brethren. They may be right, and we may be 'wrong. If we differ as to what this text teaches, the brother who holds a different view from ours has as much right, in one sense of the word, to his view as we have to ours. If a brother does not look at this text as we do, we do not think any the less of him on that account. Brother Whitfield asked for our views, and we will try to give what little we have. We are aware that many brethren think this text teaches that there is a condemnation which we escape by walking after the Spirit. We believe the Bible teaches that there is a condemnation which God's people escape by living after the Spirit. It is taught in (Romans 8:13): "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." There are conditions in this text, and the living there mentioned depends upon the child of God mortifying the deeds of the body through the Spirit. By the help of the Spirit he can mortify the deeds of the body, and he should do that. But we do not think that is what the apostle was talking about in (Romans 8:1). In (Romans 7:25) the word then is translated from the same word as therefore in the text. "So then" (therefore) "with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.'Therefore," for this reason; what he has previously said being true; for this reason" with the mind I myself serve the law of God," etc. Then in verse 1 of chapter viii. he again refers to what he has already set forth by again using the word therefore. The original word translated therefore "denotes, first, transition' from one thing to another by natural sequence; secondly, logical inference; in which case the premises are either expressed, or to, be variously supplied. Therefore, then, consequently." See Bagster's Analytical Lexicon. The language, then, is a conclusion drawn from a previous premise-it is not a looking forward to something that will result in consequence to be laid down hereafter; but a consequence of a premise previously stated. In order to fully get the premise the expression rests upon it is necessary to go back far enough to get the matter the apostle starts out with. To do this begin with the first of chapter vii. There he starts out with his reasoning on the matter of law. That was something which the Romans knew something about-and it is something we know a little about-" how that the law hath dominion over a man so long as he liveth." Then he illustrates the principle he is starting in to set forth by the fact that a woman is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth. Then he tells us that "ye are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to Him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. For when we were in the flesh," (that is, in an unregenerate state-before this work of grace was performed in our hearts) "the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter." Now, here we have the key to the matter. Here is the premise laid down, and his reasoning through the remainder of the chapter is based upon this, as well as also the first part of the next chapter is based upon the same. The word therefore brings us back to this premise. This premise being true, then what he says after using that word follows as a consequence of this. The Lord's children in regeneration are delivered from the law. The law has been killed; its strength against them has been taken away by the body of Christ. He has satisfied the law for them; He has met all its demands, and so far as they are concerned the law has been killed. The application of the benefits of this is made to them in the work of regeneration. In regeneration they are killed to sin and the love of it, and are made alive unto God. In this work of the Spirit in regeneration, which is an inward work, called giving a new heart and a new spirit, a washing, a purifying, etc., there is given a new and higher order of life-the spiritual, divine life, and a new nature which belongs to that life. In this work the old or natural life which we have by reason of the natural birth is not taken away. The child then has two natures, and a disposition still remains in him which belongs to the old sinful nature. While he still has, that old sinful nature and disposition, he also now has a divine nature and disposition. The apostle shows in the remainder, or most of the remainder, of the seventh chapter how these natures or dispositions are at war in him, and how that he is often brought into captivity by the sin which still remains in him in that old nature. This is where the warfare continues in and with the little child of God while he lives in the world. There is a warfare within, which will not end until we come to the end of the way. Though this be true, yet we have been made free from the condemning power of the law, which law without the work of grace in our hearts, and without the work of Christ, held dominion over us. We have now been delivered from the law. See (Romans 7:5). Hence, having been delivered from the law, and having received this divine life, having received a new heart and a new life, a new seat of affection; having received the mind of Christ; all this being true, it follows as a consequence, as a "therefore," "with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." This law of sin, this sinful disposition and nature had not been taken away from Paul. See (Romans 7:23). This sinful nature and disposition still remained in his flesh. And it remains in all of us. That is why you are so often in trouble and sorrow about yourself. You often feel that if you were a child of God you would not have so many sinful and wicked thoughts, or so many times do the things you would not or should not do. Instead of this being an evidence that you are not a child of God, it is clear evidence that you are the Lord's child. The unregenerate do not have such a warfare. You did not have the warfare until a change was wrought in you. But, the foregoing mentioned work having been done for you and in you, "there is therefore," (for this reason; following as a consequence of it) "now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." The next clause," who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit," is not in many of the ancient Greek manuscripts. It is in some of them, but not in all of them. Anyway, there is no change in the teaching of that verse and the connecting verses, for that expression comes farther down, in (Romans 8:4)," that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." To our mind the expression is descriptive, and does not express a condition to be performed. We are aware that good brethren think that clause in verse 1 expresses a condition, and they make some good arguments that way; and we do not fall out with them because we do not see this text alike. If we are wrong, they are right. There is nothing in it for brethren to "fall out" about. C. H. C.

Ephesians 5:25-27

In 1932 a request was received from Elder S. A. Dawson, Kansas, Ill., for our views on (Ephesians 5:26) Poor health has been the main reason for the long delay in answering these many requests which we have received. We are trying to answer them now as fast as we can, and as best we can. (Ephesians 5:25-26,27)read as follows: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it; that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." We quote here both verses 25 and 27 so that we may have the connection. It may be necessary to know what is referred to by the word it in verse 26, and we find that in verse 25. It is the church. Christ gave Himself for the church. Those He gave Himself for are here denominated as the church-the whole family of God. These are they which will form and compose His complete body in the heavenly world. They are the whole number, the complete number, of the redeemed. Hence, He gave Himself for a definite and complete number. He did not give Himself for the race of mankind; but He gave Himself for the church- those that He saves. And He saves those He gave Himself for. He gave Himself for it-for the church; for those the Father had given Him; for the objects of His love. "But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." -(Romans 5:8). He did not give Himself for them with no definite end in view. The final end of it was" that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." He gave Himself for it" that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word.'By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." -(0:10) (Hebrews 10:10). To sanctify is to set apart to a holy or religious use. They were all set apart through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once. He made just one offering, and will not make another; for the one offering which He made is sufficient for all time, and was sufficient to accomplish the object for which it was made. He gave Himself for it that He might also "cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." When He was crucified and the Roman soldiers pierced His side," forthwith there came therefrom both blood and water." The blood was to satisfy for the sins of His people; to satisfy for the sins of the church; and it was sufficient for that end. The water was to purify and cleanse. Water is to use in washing. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." -(Titus 3:5). He regenerates, by the work of His Spirit, and cleanses and purifies, all that He gave Himself for. He does this by speaking to them by the power of the Holy Spirit. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." - (John 6:63). It is by the power of His speech that sinners are regenerated, and in this work there is 'an inward washing and cleansing. In this the Lord begins a good work in them, and He will carry it on to perfection. He will finally land them on the sunny banks of sweet deliverance, where they shall be fully and finally glorified, and enjoy eternal bliss and happiness, and be like Him. They will then be without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing. We have just given a few thoughts in a brief way. May the Lord bless the same to the good of our readers. C. H. C.

We left home on Wednesday night, February 26, to fill the appointments which had been made and published for us in Texas. Appointments were filled at the following named places: Dallas, Fort Worth, Joy, Wichita Falls, Munday, Throckmorton, Median Chapel, Harpersville, Cisco, Deuteronomy Leon, Bosque. Also one night at a place near Deuteronomy Leon, the name of which we cannot recall just now. We never left home with a sadder feeling than when we left for this trip. When we agreed to make the trip we expected to meet and to see Elder J. H. Fisher, but he passed away, so we could not get to see him. The first appointment was in Dallas on Thursday night, February 27. We had a very pleasant meeting at this place, and there was one addition to the church, a sister, whose baptism was to be attended to at a later date. Elder Fowler is pastor here. Elder W. L. Barrett met us and conveyed us to his home after meeting, where we spent the remainder of the night and the next day. On Friday night we enjoyed a very pleasant service with the church in Fort Worth. Elder Barrett is their good pastor, and they esteem him highly. They are counting on building a new meetinghouse at an early date, and we wish them success in the undertaking. May the Lord bless their labors and efforts. Elders Fowler and Paine were present at this service. Saturday morning we went to Bellevue, where we were met by Brother Hammond, son of Elder T. C. Hammond, who conveyed us to the church. Elder Hammond was sick and confined to his bed, and was not able to be at the meeting. He had been real sick, but was some better. The last word we had from him he was improving. We trust he may soon be fully recovered. We enjoyed a very pleasant meeting at Joy, Saturday and Sunday. On Sunday Brother S. H. Holt conveyed us to his home in Wichita Falls. We had service in Wichita Falls Monday and Tuesday nights. At that time Elder H. L. Collings was living in that town, and it was agreed on Monday night to hold the service on Tuesday night at the home of Elder Collings, as he was sick and not able to attend the meeting. Tuesday Elder O. Strickland came in and was with us there that night. Wednesday morning Brother Holt conveyed us to Munday, where we had a pleasant service that day. Thursday morning Elder Strickland conveyed us to Throckmorton, where we enjoyed another very pleasant service. Elder V F. Lowrance met us here. Elder Strickland went on with us to the home of Elder Lowrance. Friday afternoon we went to see Elder Broom for a little while. He is staying at Eden Home, near Graham, and he seems to be well cared for and contented. Saturday afternoon we held a little service at the home for Brother Broom's benefit, which he and others seemed to enjoy. On Saturday and Sunday we were with the church at Median Chapel, which church was so well and efficiently served for so many years by Elder J. H. Fisher. Elder Lowrance is the pastor there now. He is a devoted brother, and the brethren there seem to esteem him highly, which they should do, and should care for him, and this they seem to do with delight and pleasure. Elder Strickland left us here and returned home, and we were sad to separate from him. We love the man. Elder Jackson met us here from Cisco, and conveyed us to the home of a Brother Roberts on Sunday afternoon, near Harpersville, and was with us at Harpersville on Monday. At Median Chapel there was one addition by relation. On Monday we had a very pleasant service at Harpersville. Elder Jackson conveyed us to Cisco Monday afternoon, and here we met with Elder J. W. West, who is pastor of the church in Cisco. He had an appointment at the home of a Brother Akers for Monday night, and we were there with him and heard him preach a sweet discourse. Elder J. W. M. Pharr was living there, or staying there, at that time. Sister Akers is his daughter. The dear old brother seemed to enjoy the service. Since we came home we have received word that he has gone to his long-sought rest. May the Lord bless and sustain his bereaved loved ones.. We enjoyed a pleasant service at Cisco on Tuesday. Several brethren in the ministry were present, but we cannot give their names, as we failed to note them down. Wednesday we were at Deuteronomy Leon. The appointment was supposed to have been for that place both Wednesday and Thursday, but there had been a change made. Instead of having meeting there Thursday an appointment had been made for another place (the name of which we cannot recall at the time we are doing this writing). Several brethren in the ministry were present Wednesday. We may not be able to recall the names of each one, so we will not try to name any of them. Elder E. P. McNeill is pastor, and he was present, as also Elders S. L. Rives, S. W. Short, and others.

There was a good crowd present here, as well as at the night appointment. We were met here (at Cisco) Friday morning by Elder J. L. Collings and wife, who conveyed us to Bosque Church, near Hico, where we had service Friday, Saturday and Sunday. A good crowd was present Saturday, but a much larger one on Sunday. On Sunday a brother united with the church; his baptism is to be attended to later. This was a delightful meeting. Sunday after service Elder Collings and wife conveyed us to Dallas. Elder Collings expected us to meet Dr. Fowler at Cleburne, and for us to be brought by him on to Dallas, but when we reached that place we received word that Dr. Fowler did not show up there as he was sick with mumps. We have not heard from him since, but trust he is getting along all right. So Brother and Sister Collings came on with us to Dallas. We left that place at 6 o'clock and arrived home at about 2 o'clock in the night. Our whole family met us at the train, and we feel thankful that we found all well. We had good congregations and good attention where we went, and the Lord was good to us, and permitted us to enjoy some pleasant seasons, although we were sad at the passing of Elder Fisher, so that we did not get to see him. We saw Sister Fisher at the Chapel on Sunday. The brethren and sisters were good to us- far better than we feel to deserve. May the good Lord bless them, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

We have been requested to give a definition of the word souls in (Revelation 20:4). That is, we have been asked to tell through the paper what that word means. The expression containing that word says, "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them; and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God," etc. The word soul in this text is the same word as is used for the word soul in (0:28) (Matthew 10:28), where the Saviour said, "and fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." This is sufficient to show that the soul is something which is separate and distinct from the body-that the body is one thing and the soul is another. This is evidently and emphatically true when simply the body or the soul is spoken of or referred to. It is true that the word soul sometimes means living beings or persons-such as "man became a living soul;" or "the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." But when the body, in the abstract, is spoken of, it does not mean the soul; or when the soul is spoken of, in the abstract, it does not mean the body. The word soul in (Revelation 20:4), means breath, the principle of animal life, the life; the immortal soul; the soul as the seat of moral and religious sentiment; the soul as a seat of feeling; the inner self, and so on. See Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon. Thayer's Greek Lexicon gives it as "the soul freed from the body, a disembodied soul," and cites (Revelation 20:4). The word cannot possibly mean anything else. For a person to try to twist it to mean the body is to twist into our Lord's teaching something the Book does not contain. C. H. C.

Andalusia Peace Meeting

May 7, 1936

We attended the peace meeting in Andalusia, Ala., on the first Sunday in April, and Saturday before. On Saturday a committee was appointed to draw up a statement, resolutions, etc., as a basis for settlement and adjustment of the matters concerning the disturbances which had existed for several years. Two brethren were appointed from each "side," and then by unanimous vote they requested us to serve with the committee-that is, by unanimous vote of all the brethren concerned in the matter-which we tried to do. The committee met together Saturday afternoon and drew up the following, which was presented to the meeting on Sunday morning, and was read three times: We, your committee, appointed by you, or requested by you, to draw up a statement, resolutions, etc., looking to a full settlement and adjustment of all the differences which have recently existed, do hereby submit the following: Recognizing the fact that when troubles and divisions come in the Old Baptist Church that it is almost, if not altogether, always true that there is more or less wrong on both sides; therefore, we who were, or have been, involved in the recent trouble in this section, do hereby, as individuals and churches, forgive and ask forgiveness for all wrongs committed, whether by word or deed, realizing, too, that some of the trouble may have been, and probably was, on account of misunderstanding. But, be that as it may, we hereby mutually agree to forgive all errors, wrongs, or mistakes, and to bury the past in oblivion. We also agree, so as to avoid friction and to straighten out any "kinks" that might arise on account of this adjustment and coming together, that the same shall embrace the following, namely: That this means a restoration to fellowship any who may have been withdrawn from, such person or persons to retain membership where the same is now, who may have their membership transferred by letter as though the trouble had never existed. This part of our confession and act to be put on our records, with the foregoing and following, in order that all records may be straight, and showing a full and complete settlement to have been made.

We hereby reaffirm our belief in and adherence to the articles of faith and principles upon which our churches were constituted, and we desire to beg the Lord to help us to be faithful and true and steadfast in the same, and that we may have His help to walk the good old way, and to bear with each other's weaknesses, and to strive for the things that make for peace. May the Lord help us so to do. Respectfully submitted for your adoption or rejection. C. H. Cayce, W. R. Walker, J. K. Everett, W. R. Cross, D. W. Nall, Committee. Read and adopted by Union Church, Andalusia, Ala., Sunday, April 5, 1936, by unanimous vote, and approved by unanimous vote of every Primitive Baptist present. After the third reading and adoption by unanimous vote, as above stated, some of the good old songs of Zion were sung and the hand of fellowship extended to each other. While this was going on shouts of praise and thanksgiving to God went up from different parts of the congregation by brethren and sisters. Hearts were made glad, and the love of God was plainly and visibly manifested, as brethren embraced each other who had been estranged. May the Lord be praised for His goodness and wonderful mercies and blessings to His humble poor. It is delightful to see brethren and sisters bury and forget their little differences and come together in peace and fellowship and love. Troubles can be settled when brethren want to settle them. "How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." May the Lord's richest blessings continue with those good people, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Who Died in Adam?

A brother asks us if all who died in Adam will be made alive in Christ, and refers to (I Corinthians 15:22). He says someone is advocating the idea that all are made alive in Christ that died in Adam, and refers to this text as proof. If the text proves that, it will prove the doctrine of Universalism. But it does not come within a thousand miles of proving it-it does not even begin to sound like proof of it. In the first place the apostle is treating in this chapter of the resurrection of God's people. The Bible teaches that there will be a resurrection of all the offspring of Adam, the just and the unjust, the righteous and the wicked, the sheep and the goats, at the last day; but in this chapter the apostle is treating upon the resurrection of the bodies of the saints only. Now let us read (I Corinthians 15:21-22,23), "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at His coming." It was by man that death came-the one man Adam; the first man; and it is by the one man Christ Jesus that the resurrection came. By virtue of the work of Christ all His children will be raised in His likeness and in His image. "But every man in his own order." What every man? "Christ the firstfruits." He was the first to rise from the dead as the firstfruit of the harvest. Then what about the others? "Afterward they that are Christ's at His coming." The text here does not say that "as in Adam all died - but "as in Adam all die." "All died" and "all die" are two different expressions altogether, and do not mean the same thing. "All died" is in the past tense-something which transpired in the past. "All die" is in the present tense, and denotes something that is going on now, in the present time. They are dying in Adam every day and every hour; they are dying naturally, physically, corporeally, now-every day and hour. They are going down in death all the time. But they-the same people he is talking about in this chapter-all God's children, will be raised again at the coming of Christ. He is coming back to this world, not as a sin bearer, but without sin unto salvation; and He will raise the sleeping bodies of all His saints, all His children, and fashion them like unto His own glorious body. Precious promise, and glorious hope. C. H. C.

Kind of Death Adam Died

May 7, 1936

Brother D. R. Loyd, Arkoma, Okla., asks us to give our views as to the kind of death Adam died when he transgressed the law in the garden, and asks, "Was it a corporeal death, or was it a spiritual death, or did he die to the stewardship of the garden?" It was not a corporeal or physical death, for he lived a physical life for several hundred years after that; but the Lord said he should die in the same day he transgressed. It was not a spiritual death, for he was not a spiritual man-he did not have spiritual life. He was simply a good natural man, a good man from a moral and physical or natural standpoint. It is true that he was driven out of the garden in the same day that he transgressed, and was deprived of the privileges and blessings of the garden. But the death that he died was a moral death. He lost all moral standing with God. He lost all moral uprightness. He lost his innocence. He became guilty before God. It was a moral death. C. H. C.

The First Man

---May 7, 1936

We have a letter from a brother asking us if there were any people before Adam; that a certain brother is advocating that there were another people before Adam and that Cain married one of them. If there were any people before Adam, then the Bible is not the truth, for it says, "And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit." -(I Corinthians 15:45). Here the inspired apostle plainly says Adam was the first man. If he was the first man, there was no other man before him; and if there was no other man before him, then there were no people before him. Again, the same inspired man said, "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth," etc.-(Acts 17:26). If there were any people before Adam, and Cain had a wife from among that people, then they are not all of one blood; some of them would be of the blood of Adam combined with the blood of that other people. It could not, then, be true that God made all nations of men of one blood. If the man believes the Bible he should quit such speculation and stop contradicting the Book. C. H. C.

Trip in Alabama

We attended the peace meeting in Andalusia, Ala., on Saturday and first Sunday in April, and then filled appointments as arranged for us by Elders R. W. Cross and R. D. Dodgen, except two appointments. We were billed to be at New Home Church on Monday and Tuesday after the first Sunday, but were rained out on Tuesday.. We were billed to be at Consolation Church on Thursday, April 9, but were rained out at that place. Besides at Andalusia and one day at New Home we filled all the other appointments, as they were published. A large crowd was at the peace meeting, especially on Sunday, at Andalusia. We had good congregations at all the other places, or most of them. We met several brethren in the ministry, most of whom we had met in days gone by. We enjoyed good meetings at each place. The brethren were good to us, and were much better to us than we feel to deserve. We would be glad to give a more extended account of the trip, but time and space forbid. We are due to leave home again in a few days for another long trip, and we have to be in a hurry to get ready to go. May the Lord help us to speak such things as will be to the good of His people and to the advancement of His cause and to the glory and honor of His holy name. Brethren, pray for us, to that end, and pray the Lord to keep our loved ones while we are away from them. C. H. C.

Tour in Alabama

---July 2, 1936

We left home on Friday morning, May 1, for Frisco City, Ala., to fill appointments which had been made for us by Elder J. W. Jones in the Antioch Association, and by Elder S. W. Etheredge in the Choctawhatchee Association. We arrived in Frisco City Saturday morning at about 5:30. Elder J. W. Jones met us at the train. We filled appointments every day, as they had already been made, and as they were published in The Primitive Baptist of April 2 and 16. Appointments were made at the following places in the Antioch Association: Mt. Pisgah, New Home, Ramer, Gravel Hill, Sardis, Corinth, Pine Level, Spring Hill, Union, Little Flock, Pensacola, Concord, Pleasant Grove, Antioch, Elizabeth, Bethel. The weather was fine, and we were able to fill the appointment at each place. We had the pleasure of meeting and being with the following brethren in the ministry: Elders J. W. Jones, W. N. Ether-edge, G. B. Nail, S. A. Nail, Jas. H. Jones, A. J. Parrish and J. C. Davis. These brethren are all in the Antioch Association. At the meeting at Pine Level on Sunday, May 10, Elder W. A. Shutt and wife, who have recently moved to that section, were present, and placed their membership there by letter. Elder R. W. Cross, of Andalusia, was with us at Bethel, the last appointment in this association, as was also Elder Parrish, who is the pastor there. We appreciated all these good brethren in the ministry named above being with us, and enjoyed associating with them. At Bethel we were met by a son of Sister Farris and conveyed to her home, where we tried to talk for just a few minutes that night. Then Wednesday morning, May 20, he conveyed us to Ozark for our first appointment in the Choctawhatchee Association, as arranged by Elder S. W. Etheredge. Brother Etheredge baptized a brother there that morning, just before we reached the place. We filled appointments in this association, as arranged by Brother Etheredge, as follows: Pleasant Grove (Ozark), Bethel, Antioch, Ramah, Mt. Enon, County Line, Piney Grove, Union and Little Vine. In addition to these, Brother Harrison met us at County Line and conveyed us to his home, near Bluffton, Ga., in the neighborhood of Mars Hill Church, where he had an appointment for us and Elder Etheredge that night, and then conveyed us to Piney Grove next morning. In this section we met and were with the following named brethren in the ministry: Elders S. W. Etheredge, W. I. Kelly, A. A. Garrett, T. E. McGowan, T. R. Crawford, R. K. Blackshear, L. Z. Folmar, J. K. Everett, R. D. Dodgen and R. W. Cross. We are giving these names from memory, and if we have left out any it is wholly unintentional. We enjoyed being with all these good brethren. On Saturday, May 23, Sister Winnie Hardin came to the church at Ramah asking for a home with them. She was joyfully received; and at her request and the request of the church and pastor we baptized her on Sunday morning. Brother Etheredge is the pastor here, and they all love and esteem him highly-as do the other churches which he serves. Brother Etheredge baptized a brother on Thursday morning, May 28, at Union Church (Midland City). We did not put the brother's name down, and cannot recall it now while doing this writing. The last three days we were at a union meeting at Little Vine, near Dothan. It was a delightful meeting. All the meetings were pleasant to us. The Lord was good to us, and we were able to meet each appointment. The brethren were all good to us. We were never more kindly received or more heartily endorsed. The brethren gave evidence all the way around that they heartily endorsed our little efforts in trying to preach peace by Jesus Christ and to encourage the Lord's dear children to walk in the good old way, where we may find rest to our souls, for so hath the Lord promised. May the good Lord bless those good people. We beg an interest in their prayers. Many of them we will never see again in this world of sorrow and trouble, but we hope that by the grace of God we may meet in that blessed home above, where sorrows never come. We left Dothan on Sunday afternoon, May 31, at 4 o'clock, and arrived at home on Monday afternoon at 2:30-our wife and all the children meeting us at the bus station-and found all well at home, for which we trust we are thankful to the good Lord. Obituaries

In the last issue of this paper we had sixteen obituaries and resolutions of respect. We are doing this writing on June 17th and the paper is dated (last issue) June 18th. Today we have thirty-five obituaries and resolutions of respect on hand for the paper. Some of them are rather long-as some of them were in last issue, and as some have been all along. Now, please tell us what we can do about this? We have repeatedly requested that these things be short, but it seems that our requests are little regarded. There is only one thing we can do about this, as we see it-and that is simply this: We will have to "boil them down" -cut out a lot of words, and make them shorter, in order to get them in. the paper. That is what we will have to do with these we have on hand. We will be compelled to limit obituaries and resolutions of respect to 300 words. Hereafter, you can put no more words than that in an obituary. You know what you want to say most of all, and what you would rather have left out. Govern yourselves accordingly. If you put more words in than that, we will have to do the culling ourselves, and we might leave out something you would prefer to go rather than something else you have said. So, please remember that these things are limited to not more than 300 words. We are sorry to have to adopt this rule-but something must be done, and this is the best we know to do. C. H. C.

Church Sovereignty

When Fuller, Carey & Company introduced their new doctrines and new measures among the Baptists about the year 1792, and then in the years following advocated those new measures, and pressed them to the division of the Baptist family, they did so under the plea of church sovereignty. If one will read the history of the church during those times, he will see that the followers of these men claimed that each church was a sovereign, and had the right to engage in those new-fangled measures, and that no other church had a right to object. Their claim was that if one church desired to engage in such practices, she had the sovereign right to do so, and that no one had a right to interfere or to object. When Burnam, Pence &

Company introduced their new departures among the Baptists they made the same plea. They made the same claim-that each church had the right for herself to have a Sunday school, and the other new measures they introduced, and no other church had any right to object or to interfere. Their claim evidently was that each church is a sovereign. When the Progressives introduced the organ and their other measures, they made the claim that each church is a sovereign, and had a right to do as she pleased, and no other church had a right to call the matter in question. Their claim was that each church had the right to decide the matter for herself as to whether she would have an organ in her worship or not, and that no other church had a right to object, or to say a word against it. If there is any such thing as the church being a sovereign, then the claim of all these people was right, and the old-fashioned Baptists who protested against these new measures were in the wrong. If that doctrine is the truth, then we better go, "boot and baggage," the whole "pile of us," over to the Missionaries, and confess to them that our people were wrong; that they had no right to object; that the Missionaries were right in contending that they had a right to introduce their new measures; that each church had a right to decide for herself; and that we departed from the Scriptures in denying that right. What do you say? Are you ready to give up what our fathers contended for? We are not -we can only speak for ourselves. No church has a right to disregard the rights of her sister churches. Each church has rights of her ownbut she does not have the right to disregard the rights of her sister churches. No church has a right to do that which is injurious to the cause in general. No church has a right to retain in her body that which is detrimental to her sister churches or detrimental to the cause of Christ. The church has no right under heaven to do anything else only what the Lord has taught and commanded in His blessed Word. The Lord is supreme, and the only Lawgiver in Zion. The church has no right to make or to enact laws, and she has no right to do anything else but to administer the laws the Lord has given. The apostles themselves did not enact laws. They explained and told how to administer and to execute the laws the Lord had given. They were judges-not legislators. There is a sisterly relationship between churches. This is a fact which has been recognized by the Old Baptists all along the line. Sisters in a family are not sovereigns. They have rights which are theirs by reason of the relationship which exists. But one has no right to do a thing that is grievous to another. One does not have a right to do a thing that is disreputable, for that injures the other sister, because of the relationship which exists. Hence, a church does not have a sovereign right to do as she pleases, regardless of her sister churches. The Lord has given no such right, that we have been able to find. It is true that each church is responsible to the Lord for her conduct. But so is a minister responsible to the Lord. While the minister is responsible to the Master, so is he responsible to his church for his conduct and for what he teaches. Hence, the fact that a church is responsible to her Lord does not release her from the responsibility she is under to the sister churches. If a church does not act according to the commands of the Master, the sister churches have rights, too, as well as she does. They have a right to cease affiliation and association with her until she sets herself in order -and they should do that. One good way to bring a church to consider her course and her conduct is to leave her alone- cease recognizing or affiliating with her, and leave her to herself until she reforms and sets herself in order. If all would observe this, and simply "keep hands off" when a church oversteps her bounds and fails to do as the Lord commands and requires in His Word, troubles would be kept at home, where they belong. If you have a dirty thing among you, remember that others have some rights too-keep your dirty business at your own home, if you want it. Others have a right to reject your dirt, and to not receive it. If one church has the right to have something, and no other church has a right to object, then the other church has the same right to reject, and you have no more right to complain about it than you say the others have to complain about you having the dirt. Each church has the God-given right to say who is not entitled to membership in her body. But God has not given her the right to retain that in her body that is a disgrace to the cause. She is commanded to withdraw from every brother that walketh disorderly. If a church has a disorderly member in her body and she will not, or refuses to, withdraw from him, then it is the duty of orderly churches to withdraw from her. To persist in retaining that which is a disgrace to the cause, is to walk disorderly; and the command is to withdraw from such. If all churches would strive as hard at all times to do what the Lord requires and to obey His requirements, as they sometimes strive to justify themselves, and to hide behind "church sovereignty" in order to retain something that they should not retain, or to retain some man whose walk has not been orderly, and to justify themselves in so doing, there would be less trouble among the Old Baptists. We are too apt to "have men's persons in admiration." God's servants should be esteemed, and appreciated as such; but they should not be upheld or shielded in ungodly conduct. May the Lord help us to observe His laws and to administer them, as we are taught to do in His blessed Word. There is no appeal from that. C. H. C.

Galatians 6:7 AND Ephesians 5:6

---July 16, 1936

Sister Alma Pate, Avant, Okla., has requested our views on (Galatians 6:7) and (Ephesians 5:6); (Galatians 6:7-8) reads as follows: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." This language was written to the church at Galatia. It is not addressed to alien sinners. But it is true in nature, that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." We know that this is true in the vegetable kingdom. If a man sows wheat, he will reap wheat, if he reaps anything. If he sows oats, he will reap oats. If a young man or a young woman sow their "wild oats," they will reap the same. It is sure to bring sorrow to them some day-when the reaping time comes. A person cannot sow something he does not possess. He must have wheat in order to sow wheat. If he sows wheat, he will reap wheat. He not only reaps what he sows, but he reaps from the same field where the sowing was done. If he "sows to his flesh," he "shall of the flesh reap corruption." He does the reaping from the same field where he does the sowing. In order to do the sowing, he must first have both the seed and the field, to which he does the sowing. If one sows to the Spirit, he must first have the Spirit. It cannot be true, then, that he must do the sowing in order to obtain the Spirit; but he must have the Spirit, first, in order to sow to the Spirit. One reaps the same thing that he sows. In this case, "he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." As one reaps what he sows, if he reaps life everlasting he must have life everlasting and sow that. That is what he sows, if he reaps life everlasting, because he reaps what he sows. Hence, one must have life everlasting in order to do the sowing and reaping here mentioned by the apostle. The sowing here mentioned is the doing of the things the Lord has commanded, for the ninth verse says, "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." The sowing to the Spirit is doing the things the Lord commands-" well doing." (Ephesians 5:6) reads, "Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." To see what "these things" are, get your Bible and read, beginning with the first of the chapter. Here is a plain warning that the wrath of God will be poured out upon His children who walk after and engage in the things that the apostle mentions in the preceding verses. It is a sowing to the flesh, and they will sure reap corruption. They will reap what they sow. May the Lord help us turn from the weak and beggarly elements of the world, and help us to live in such a way as to honor and glorify His name while we live in the world. C. H. C.

An Absoluter

---July 16, 1936

We had an article clipped from the News and Observer, of December 9, 1935, printed in Raleigh, N. C, and signed by Elijah F. Pearce, in which he advocated the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things that come to pass, and that man does what God tells him. We did not know who the writer could be. So we sent the article to Elder R. H. Pittman and asked him who this E. F. Pearce is. Elder Pittman wrote us he was not sure as to who he is, and sent our letter, with the clipping, to Elder B. S. Cowin, Williamston, N. C, with the request that he write us. Elder Cowin wrote us under date of March 31, 1936: "Elder E. F. Pearce is moderator of the Little River Association, and I am well acquainted with him. He was at the last session of our (Kehukee) association, and preached on Sunday; and his writings show that he is in line with Wyatt and all other Absoluters, but I never mistrusted such a thing from listening to his preaching." We give this information to our readers, so that they may know what is what in regard to the matter. We think our brethren should have such information given to them. C. H. C.

1 Peter 4:18

---August 6, 1936

We have been requested by Sister P. E. Meelear, of Texas, to give our views on ((Pet 4:18) (I Peter 4:18)). ((Pet 4:17) (I Peter 4:17-18) reads as follows: "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" This judgment is at and in the house of God, the church. There is no reference to the unregenerate. The whole thing is evidently dealing with gospel worship and service. There is a certain punishment to be meted out to God's people for their disobedience and wickedness. "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know Him that said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge His people." --((0:28) (Hebrews 10:28-30). There is no scarcity in the grace of God. By His grace His children are more than conquerors. His mercy and grace are abundant, though we may not always feel and realize it. But there is a scarcity in our service and in right doing. Sin is mixed with all that we do. Evil is always present, so that we cannot live a life of sinless perfection, as we desire to do. When we have done the very best that we can, then "we are but poor unprofitable servants; we have only done that which was our duty to do." When we have done the very best that we know how and can do, we barely or scarcely "get by." We are then just scarcely saved from the chastening rod, the punishment that is sorer than death. Some things are worse than death. The disobedient cannot escape that severe punishment. May the Lord help us to serve and obey Him. C. H. C.

The Holy Calling

---August 6, 1936

John D. Tate, Rutherford, Tenn., asked us in April, 1935, what is the holy calling, in (II Timothy 1:9), and when does it take place? It is the calling out of nature's night and darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God. It is the calling out of a death in sins to a state of life in Christ. It is the hearing of the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live. It is the quickening of the dead sinner into a state of life in Christ. It is done by the Lord, by the power and work of His divine Spirit; and, hence, a "holy calling." He also asked, "Is the highway mentioned in (Isaiah 35) the gospel way?" We think it is Christ. He is the way, the truth, and the life. He is the way that poor sinners are saved. No others are saved by Him, only those the Father gave to Him. C. H. C.

Tour in Mount Zion

---August 20, 1936

We left home on Tuesday afternoon, June 30, to fill appointments in the Mt. Zion Association in North Alabama, as arranged by Brother S. E. Copeland, of Guntersville. Our train was late, so we missed connection at Memphis, and on this account we failed to reach the first appointment, which was at Rocky Mount on Wednesday, July 1. We met all the other appointments, as arranged. On account of missing this first appointment we agreed to stay one day longer than was arranged for and to be at Rocky Mount on Monday, July 27. Elder R. O. Raulston, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was with us several days on the trip. We were glad to be with this dear old servant those several days, and felt sad when he left us on the 15th and returned to his home. If we are not mistaken we met the following named brethren in the ministry who are in this association while on the trip: Elders G. E. Graves, W. B. Talley, J. D. Putman, W. L. Kitchens, H. P. Copeland, F. B. Moon, W. T. Cook, J. J. Herring, M. O. Lucas, J. L. Burk, M. Sparks, R. J. Holcomb and J. N. Bobo. Some of them were with us several days. They are all sound and humble ministers, and seem to be of one mind. At Harmony Church, on the 18th, Brother H. M. Reid joined by letter, and his wife joined by experience and baptism. She was baptized Sunday afternoon by Elder Talley. We were in three communion meetings. One at New Clear Creek; one at Liberty, and one at Gum Pond. They took the bread and wine in commemoration of the broken body and shed blood of the blessed Redeemer. Then they engaged in washing each other's feet, following the example given by the Master. These were especially good meetings. Tears of joy were shed, and they all seemed to desire to continue on in the good old way. There were none, and are none, in that association who desire to leave off the following of this example; and they are satisfied to continue on just as our fathers have in the past. They see no use of having trouble over a matter that all the Primitive Baptists in the South are practicing. We had good congregations at most every place. The congregations were good, considering all the circumstances-weather, crop conditions, etc. They were good and kind to us-much better than we feel to deserve. May the Lord continue His blessings upon and with them. We love the good brethren of the Mt. Zion Association, and trust we may have an interest in their prayers. Our father-in-law, Brother B. B. Lawler, and wife, Brownsboro, Ala., with Brother Dave Jett, met us at Rocky Mount on Monday, July 27, and we went home with them. His son and wife (Ben W. Lawler) conveyed us to Huntsville that night, where we took a train at 1:40 for home. We arrived home at 1:10 p. m. on Tuesday and found all well, for which we trust we are thankful. We felt that the Lord was good to us. We are doing this writing on Wednesday, August 5, at home. We are due to leave tomorrow to fill other appointments that have been made, expecting to close the trip at the Indian Creek Association at Princeton, West Va., on Sunday, August 30. Please pray the Lord to bless our labors to the good of His cause and people, and to care for our loved ones at home while we are away. C. H. C.

---August 20, 1936

In January, 1935, Brother J. R. Nichols, Booneville, Miss., requested us to write on (1 Timothy 4:1-3). Get your Testament and turn to it and read it, as we do not have space to copy it here. The expression, "latter times," refers to a later time in the gospel dispensation. Some shall depart from the faith, or from the true doctrine of God. They will give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. The seducing spirits are evil spirits which seduce the Lord's children and deceive them, thus leading them away from the truth. And many of the Lord's children give heed to them. Doctrines of devils are doctrines that men and devils invent. Such doctrines are always contrary to the doctrine of God. The teachers of such doctrines speak lies in hypocrisy. They are hypocritical teachers. They teach for hire and divine for money. They make merchandise of the people. They teach for filthy lucre. Papal Rome is evidently clearly brought to view in this, for they forbid their priests to marry, under a pretext of great purity and sanctity. They command to abstain from meats. With them it is a great sin to eat meat on certain days. This is but Rome's invention. False doctrines are borrowed from Rome. Rome led the way in modern missions. Rome invented sprinkling for baptism. Rome invented the practice of infant baptism. Rome invented the doctrine of eternal damnation without water baptism. Rome invented the doctrine that the preacher or priest is an instrument in eternal salvation of sinners. Many of the Lord's children have been deceived by the false teachers of the world. C. H. C.

Future Identity

---August 20, 1936

In May, 1935, we were asked to write an article on future identity, the person making the request stating that some were advocating the idea that we will know each other in heaven just as we know each other here, even by the same name, etc. If that be correct, we wonder how the different John Joneses and the different Sam Smiths will be distinguished there? Wonder if some will be called the young John Jones, or little John Jones, or old John Smith, etc. Such is simply speculation. We do not know now how much we shall know hereafter. Why people desire to speculate on such things we cannot understand. For speculation is all it is. The Bible does not tell us plainly about this. What difference does it make? If it is any comfort or consolation to one for him to believe this, let him alone. After all, he does not know any more about it than we do, and we do not know anything, for the Lord has not told us. We shall know God as our heavenly Father, and know Jesus as our Elder Brother, our Saviour, our Prophet, Priest, and King; and shall know the Lord's children as the redeemed. If we know that when we get there, it seems to us that is enough for us now. Let us be content with the things the Lord has revealed in His Word that are for the comfort and consolation of the Lord's humble poor here in the world. C. H. C.

Matthew 18:8-9,15-17

---September 3, 1936

We have been requested to give our views on (Matthew 18:8-9,15-16,17). We gave our views on this language, therein recorded, in The Primitive Baptist of April 15, 1923. We do not suppose it is necessary for us to publish that article again. The language recorded in (Matthew 18:8-9) is as follows: "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire." The question was asked as to the meaning of the word offend, as here used. The word offend is translated from a word that primarily means to scandalize. If one commits a scandalous act, which is a disgrace to the body, or to the church, the plain and unequivocal instruction of the Master is to cut such a one off. This simply means to amputate the member-no matter how important that member may seem to us to be; no matter how influential the member may be; no matter how important an office he may hold -if he commits an act that is a scandal and a disgrace to the cause, the plain instruction of the Master is to cut that one off. In (Matthew 18:15-16,17), the matter of trespass is a matter of difference between persons or individuals, and is not a matter of scandal and disgrace to the cause and to the church. Now, these are the facts of the Saviour's teaching here, and to disregard this teaching is simply to go the road that leads to trouble, strife, discord, confusion, distress and division. Such a course as disregarding this teaching and distinction and dealing has always brought trouble in Zion, and always will. C. H. C.

Ephesians 2; 6:24

---September 3, 1936

For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast.-(Ephesians 2:8-9). Here is text enough for a long article, but we will make just a few remarks. In this the apostle emphatically tells us that we are saved by grace. That expression positively excludes all works of the creature in his salvation. But the apostle does not stop at that, but says, most emphatically, "Not of works, lest any man should boast." To suit modern theology, the theories taught by worldly religionists, the apostle would have said, "For by works are ye saved through the act of the creature; and that of yourselves: it is not the gift of God: it is of works, therefore let every man boast all he can." The reason why the apostle did not say that is because salvation from sin is God's gift through what Christ has done and does do for poor sinners. All boasting is thereby excluded. C. H. C.

Missions

---September 17, 1936

Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the Word. The heathen must hear before they can call on the Lord; but they cannot hear without a preacher, and a preacher cannot preach that does not realize God has sent him and is with him. (Romans 10). Yea, he goes because the Lord says "Go" ((Matthew 28:19-20)), and because the blood of the heathen will be required at the hands of the church and preacher if they fail to go. God has said," The wicked shall be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God." -(Psalms 9:17). This should make missionaries out of every church in the land, and cause fathers and mothers to pray God to send their sons and daughters to the lands of darkness. About one million die in China each month and probably not more than 5 per cent of this number are saved. God is going to bring America and England, with all the other nations that have the gospel, to account for their neglect. "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not to him it is sin."

REMARKS

The above is copied from the Baptist and Commoner of December 18, 1935, and appears to be from the pen of Elder W. L. Randall, of Somerset, Ky., who is a missionary in China, and who was in the States at the time. If "about one million die in China each month and probably not more than 5 per cent of this number are saved," and the "blood of the heathen will be required at the hands of the church and preacher," is it not a foregone conclusion that the church and preacher will go to hell with the Chinks? The very doctrine of the Missionary fanatics condemns them. If their doctrine and teaching is the truth, the whole pile of them will land in an eternal hell. There is no escape for them, if the above statements and teachings are the truth. On the other hand, if the "church and preacher" are saved in heaven, then the doctrine is not the truth. If their doctrine is not the truth, then it is an invention of men and devils. Hence, they must be advocating the doctrines of men or devils if they ever enter heaven. Poor fellows! We are glad their doctrines are not the truth. God can and does save poor sinners in China, and in all the habitable parts of the world, without the help of these false teachers and blind guides. These Missionary Baptists profess to teach the doctrine of the final preservation of the saints-once in grace, always in grace. Yet, if the preacher-a child of grace-does not do all in his power to get the gospel to the Chinaman in order that the Chinaman may be saved, then God will require the blood of the Chinaman at the hands of that preacher. So, if the Chinaman is sent to hell because he did not hear the gospel, he is sent to hell for something he could not help, and the preacher will be sent to hell with him. Wonder if that will be any comfort to the poor Chinaman in hell? Will these Missionary fanatics please tell us upon what principle of justice God will damn the heathen Chinaman in an eternal hell on account of the failure and neglect of the so-called Christian preacher and church? Is it a sin for the Chinaman to not believe the gospel, since he never heard the gospel, or had an opportunity of believing it? Are people sent to hell for rejecting the gospel? Can a person reject a thing that he has never heard tell of? If so, how? Then the heathen Chinese have not rejected the gospel, have they? Is it a sin for a person not to believe a thing he has never heard tell of? If so, how? Is not sin a transgression of the law? What law requires one to believe something he never heard tell of? Citation, please. Is not the "rich man in hell" the first case on record of one wanting persons to be warned to keep them from going to hell? Where is any case on record prior to that? Did not your doctrine have its origin in hell, then? Did God's doctrine have its origin in hell? "It is, however, a very remarkable circumstance, that in modern missions Papal Rome has led the way." Minutes Philadelphia Association, 1806, page 429. This mission business is an invention of Rome, and is not from God. It gets money from the people under a false pretense. We are sorry for the poor deluded children of God who are blinded by these false teachers. C. H. C.

Another New Bible

---November 5, 1936

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.-(AP)- The Holy Bible will look different after next October. At least the edition being published by one of New York's younger publishers will look different. Their product will be, it is said, a completely "rethought" presentation of the ancient text, designed to make reading the Bible once more a popular diversion. The publishers remark that although the Bible is esteemed as literature more highly today than at any time in the past, it is read less. Part of this neglect is traceable, they believe, to the somewhat forbidding form in which the text normally appears. Forty years ago Richard G. Moulton attacked the same situation with his "Modern Readers Bible." The new edition will go still farther than Moulton, however, and will try to use every device of modern typography and design to make the product seem readable and attractive. The Book of Job, for example, is headed "A Philosophical Drama." There follows a cast, as in an ordinary published play, two in fact. One is headed "Characters in the Prologue and Epilogue," and the other "Characters in the Drama." The voice out of the whirl-wind is one of the latter. The text itself is paragraphed without particular regard for the plan of the original. In the Book of Job, as well as Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon of Songs, the revised version is used. For the rest, the editors have chosen the King James version. All the books have been placed in chronological order, with punctuation modernized, and genealogies, repetitions and some of the minor epistles omitted. The whole of Chronicles also is left out. Ernest Sutherland Bates is credited with developing the editorial plan, and Phillip Van Doren Stern designed the book. Bates' latest book is a biography of William Randolph Hearst, written in collaboration with Oliver Carlson. The above, from the Atlanta (Ga.) Journal of August 5, 1936, was sent to us by E. B. Steadman, of Fort Valley, Ga. It was in that paper under the heading, " 'Rethought' Bible to Be Offered To Popularize Its Reading." Evidently it is a "rethought" affair-and, at that, a thought emanating from the lower regions-a thought prompted by the very devil himself. It is simply another effort to detract from the beauty and the worth of the Bible-the inspired Word of God. Note that the effort is to make "reading the Bible once more a popular diversion." It is not to inspire or to encourage reverence for the Book as the Word of God, but simply to read as a diversion-simply for pastime and recreation-just to idle away time, Note that the getter-up of this new outfit thinks that our Bible appears in a "forbidding form." Hence he must make it all over. The things which he does not like are to be eliminated, and it must be made over to suit the devil and his cohorts. It is to be made to seem readable and attractive to the generality of mankind- to the world. In order to do that, it must be made over. The world has never been pleased with God's teaching, and never will be. Professed religionists have always despised God's blessed truth, and the effort has always been made by the world to destroy the good Book, and to "turn the truth of God unto a lie." Note, also, that the Book of Job is to be brought down on a common level with filthy opera house plays, and that some of the books of the Bible are to be left out entirely. Were it not for the fact that our God is long-suffering, it seems to us that this wicked world would have long since been destroyed. What blasphemy and brazen effrontery, that men will thus avowedly tamper with the inspired Word of God. The Bible is not simply a book-it is a whole library. No better code of moral laws have ever been written than it contains. It is a complete guide for human kind in all their dealings. If a man wishes to know how he should treat his wife, the Bible tells him. If a woman wishes to know how she should treat her husband, the Bible tells her. If the parents wish to know how they should bring up their children, the Bible tells them. If children wish to know how they should treat their parents, and how they should honor and respect them, the Bible tells them. If young folks wish to know how they should respect the older folks, the Bible tells them. If old folks wish to know how they should treat the younger ones, the Bible tells them. If one wishes to know how he should treat his neighbor, the Bible tells him. If one wishes to know how to make of, himself a good citizen, the Bible tells him. If we wish to know how we may have a good community in which to live, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know where mankind came from, and how they got here, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know where we go when we leave this world, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know how nations and governments may be perpetuated, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know what things are bad, and where they came from, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know why everything produces after its kind, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know why one loves God and holiness and righteousness, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know how to honor and serve the God that we love, the Bible tells us. If we have sorrows and trials along the way, and wish to know where and how we may obtain sweet rest and comfort, the Bible tells us. If we desire more evidence that we are the Lord's children, and that sweet rest awaits us beyond this life, the Bible gives it to us. If we wish to know some of the evidences of a gracious state, the Bible gives them to us. If we wish to know what we should be engaged in doing, as good works, the Bible tells us what the good works are. If we wish to know how to follow the blessed Master, the Bible tells us how and what to do, in order to be the followers of Him. If we wish to know whether there is anything to be gained in this life by following the Lord, by walking in obedience to Him, the Bible tells us. If we wish to know if there is anything lost by walking in disobedience, the Bible tells us. In fact, the Bible is a thorough furnisher. In that Book the Lord has given everything we need. Everything good, as to how we should live, either as citizens, in the moral realm, or as His children, in the spiritual realm, is laid down and furnished in that Book. It also contains ample warnings as to what will be the result of wickedness and walking contrary to the teachings therein given. Let us beware of tampering with the Holy Book. If translators have made some little errors in translating it, let us not, on that account, fall in with and follow after such blatant tampering with the blessed old Book, which has been a guide and comfort to the Lord's humble poor all along the past ages. It has been sufficient on the above lines during the past ages, and will be sufficient through the ages to come. May the Lord help us all to respect it, and to observe and follow its teachings. C. H. A Delightful Trip

It is late now to write about our last trip East, but "it is better late than never" -so we have heard it said. But we will have to make another apology, which is nothing new for us to have to do. When we returned home from the trip we were completely worn out, and for a few weeks we were barely able to be up and stay on our feet. We had expected to attend the Mountain Springs Association at Little Rock, embracing the first Sunday in September, and the Salem Association, embracing the second Sunday in that month; but we did not feel well enough to attend them-not having regained our strength. So we have delayed writing anything about our trip. It was not on account of not enjoying the trip, nor because we were not well treated. We first attended the Sequatchie Valley Association on that trip, which was held in Chattanooga, Tenn., embracing the second Sunday in August. Then we filled appointments in the section around Knoxville, visiting and filling an appointment near Cleveland, Tenn., on the way, until the meeting of the Powell's Valley Association, embracing the third Sunday in August. Then we filled appointments for a few more days in that section, then attended the North District Association, held this year in Casey County, Ky., embracing the fourth. Sunday. Then we filled two appointments in Kentucky-one at Richmond and one at Goshen, near Winchester. Then we went from there to Newark, Ohio, and filled an appointment there, and one at Hebron and one at Thurston. Elder J. H. Keaton, of Huntington, W. Va., met us at the North District Association, and conveyed us from there on through the remainder of the trip. From Thurston, Ohio, we went to Brother Keaton's home, where there was an appointment for us, for the night of August 26. From there we went to Little Vine, near Beckley; and from there to the Indian Creek Association, embracing the fifth Sunday in August. It was our intention to write about this trip some time ago, and to give the names of all the ministers we met on the trip; but it has been so long, we will omit that now. Thirteen ministers were present at the Sequatchie Valley Association, including their home preachers. Twenty preachers were at the Powell's Valley Association, including their home preachers. Seven ministers were at the North District Association, including one licentiate. In Ohio, besides Elder Keaton being with us, we met Elders T. W. Osborne, Corvin Dove, M. O. Curp and U. G. Porter, and we think we had met all of them years ago. There were forty-two ministers and four licentiates at the Indian Creek Association. We never enjoyed a trip better in life, and never have we been more heartily received, and never have our feeble efforts in trying to preach been more heartily endorsed than on this trip. We met many dear brethren whom we had never met before, and many others whom we had met in the years gone by. Many of them we will never meet again in this world of sorrows, but we have a blessed hope of meeting them in that land where there is no night. May the good Lord bless them for their great kindness to us. They were so much better to us than we feel to deserve. Especially do we desire to mention the great kindness of dear Elder Keaton in meeting us at the North District Association and staying with us until we had to separate at the Indian Creek Association, when the time came for us to return home. We shall not forget him and his good family and home. We trust those who may feel an interest in this matter will not think for a moment that our delay in mentioning this trip is because we felt slighted in any way, for we never felt that way. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon and with each one, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Whiskey Drinking

---December 17, 1936

If there is a member of the Old Baptist Church who spends his money for intoxicating liquors and his family, perhaps, half clad, and neglects his church, he is not fit for membership and should be excluded unless he will quit it at once-and no delay. Such folks are not fit to associate with decent folks of the world, much less fit to have membership in the Lord's kingdom. Now, reader, get mad at us for saying this and somebody will think you are guilty. C. H. C.

Close of Volume 51

---December 17, 1936

One more year is gone. Another milepost in the path of life is reached, and we are one more year nearer to our eternal home. One more year's work is done. The trials and conflicts of another year have been met and encountered. The trials have been varied, and the conflicts have been trying at times. But, thank the Lord, these things are not the only things we have had to meet and encounter during the year. There have been some joys and pleasures, too. Sometimes we have been discouraged, but we have not felt like we wanted to ground arms and quit. Sometimes we look back over the life we have lived, and the efforts we have made in trying to serve the Lord and His dear people, and we can see so little accomplished, if anything at all, that we feel discouraged and cast down. Our whole life has been given in trying to speak in His blessed name and in trying to publish the truth in the columns of The Primitive Baptist. We have endeavored to let these things be first in our whole course of life for nearly fifty years. We united with the Primitive Baptists in August, 1889, and began trying to speak in the name of the Master on January 4, 1890. We have been connected with the printing and publishing of The Primitive Baptist since September 1, 1886-our father having begun the publication of the paper January 1, 1886. We do not wish to quit the field (be a deserter) until the time comes to receive an honorable discharge. During the past few years, especially, we have come through some trying times-and they are not done yet. The N. R. A. was hard on us, and would have been almost absolutely destructive to our carrying on the paper had we not been fortunately situated so that we could put the little business at least partly out of the jurisdiction and reach of the code affair. But now we are facing another measure that is going to cripple or put many a little fellow out of business-the so-called Social Security Act. This puts another tax on us and on our workers, if we shall have any workers. All steps of our government are pointing toward a religious persecution. The time may be nearer than some of us think when we will have to go to jail for the principles of justice and freedom which our fathers stood for and which have been handed down to us. When we consider the trend, and consider the history of the past, we cannot help shuddering. May the Lord help us, and give us grace for our day and trial. Yet, in the face of all these things, brethren continue to bite and devour one another. Brethren have asked us to give our views in regard to matters in the Scripture, or in regard to church affairs, and we have tried to give our understanding of the matters asked us about. Then some brethren have been pleased to shoot at us through the columns of some other paper. No, they did not call our name; but they were careful to be plain enough for us to know who they were shooting at. We wonder if they got any pleasure out of doing such a thing. Do you think the Lord will bless you, or bless His kingdom and followers, because you pursue a course like that? Brethren, we pray the Lord may enable you to see the evil of such a course, and give you grace to enable you to turn from it. We have no desire to shoot back at you. May the Lord be our judge, and take care of the situation, is our prayer. Our year's work for 1936 is ended. We have tried to be faithful and true. We are free to still confess that we have made mistakes; but they were errors of the head and not of the heart. In the midst of it all the Lord has been good to us. His mercies still endure. Will you who read this please remember us in your prayers, that the Lord may direct us in the right way, and give us grace for every trial? May His richest blessings rest upon each of you, is our humble prayer. For the present and for this year we bid you farewell in the Lord. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 52

---January 7, 1937

Another new year has now been ushered in, and with it we begin on another volume of The Primitive Baptist. The fifty-first volume was completed with the last issue, and this begins the fifty-second volume. What shall we now say by way of introduction to this volume? The present editor may not live to finish the volume'. No human being knows about that. And yet we may be spared to live several years yet. We are not as strong physically as we once were, but we believe that we believe the truth as strongly as we ever did. We are just as confident now that the principles contended for in our columns are the principles of truth as we have ever been. It is our desire now to earnestly and lovingly contend for those principles, as much so as ever before. We have no desire to forsake those principles now. The principles for which The Primitive Baptist has stood, and which have been contended for in the columns of this paper, ever since the paper was started by our father on January 1, 1886, are contained in and set forth in the Abstract of Principles which have appeared in most every issue of the paper from the beginning. The article in the Abstract of Principles which is really the keynote and the foundation of all the others, as we see the matter, is the second article. The article reads as follows: That the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are a revelation from God, written by inspiration, and that they are the standard of faith, and the only rule divinely authorized for Christian practice, teaching, as they do, all that we ought to believe, know, or practice religiously. By the help of the Lord, if our life is spared through the year 1937, or even more than through this year, we expect to continue to stand on what is contained in that article of the faith. In the past we have opposed the introduction of things and measures not authorized by the Word of God, and we expect, by the grace of God, to do the same thing during this year, if the good Lord spares our life and blesses us with a sound mind. What the Bible teaches is enough, and is good enough. It was good enough for our fathers, and is good enough for us and for our children. The Lord was wise enough to know what would be good for His children in every age of the world when He inspired His chosen servants to write what is contained in His Book. Circumstances, customs, conditions, improvements in living, have never arisen to make it necessary or better to adopt something unauthorized by the Word of God. It contains a rule sufficient for all time, and sufficient for all conditions and circumstances of life. It is a perfect rule of faith and conduct for all time-whether past, present or future. Contending for what the Bible teaches has never brought trouble or distress among the Primitive Baptists. Practicing what the Bible teaches that the Lord's children should practice has never brought distress or disturbance in the church of God. It is what the Bible does not teach that brings trouble among them. When there is strife, confusion, trouble, distress and division among us, you may know, for a certainty, that it is because somebody has brought something other than what the Bible teaches. And it is a universal fact that the fellow who is responsible for the trouble is the fellow who has brought in what the Bible does not authorize. Some folks will talk about and cry loudly that they want peace, and yet continue to advocate things that the Bible does not authorize. Some of them will try to bring those things in on the sly. Some of them are not so very open and free. They will talk those things up in private which they desire to introduce. If you find it out on them and raise a warning cry, as the Lord requires you to do, then you are denounced as an alarmist and as a disturber of the peace. And those fellows are sure to "have it in for you." If they have the opportunity, they are sure to "stab you in the back." And if they do not have the opportunity otherwise, they will make the opportunity. There are such persons living, and we know it, for we have had experience with them in the past; and we expect them to keep up their nefarious work, unless the Lord works in them in a way that He has not yet done. Boys, we know who some of you are. But, we again say that, no matter what men may do or say, by the grace of God, we expect to continue to stand just where we have stood during the years that are now in the past. If you want peace, quit your departures and behave yourselves. If our days are about ended, by the grace of God we can say, "I have kept the faith." May the Lord help us to still "fight the good fight," while He spares us to stay upon earth. To those who love the principles of truth which have been contended for in our columns during the past fifty-one years, we say, please remember us in your prayers, that the Lord will give us grace for our day and trial. C. H. C.

Holiday Remembrances

During the holidays we have received a great many remembrances. Many sent us Christmas cards. Many sent gifts and presents-some of them extremely nice and valuable. Words fail us to tell how much these things are all appreciated. It is so much encouragement and consolation to us to know that we have so many good and true friends and brethren and sisters who remember us. These things all show to us that we have your Christian love and fellowship and confidence and esteem. We feel unworthy of it all, but we trust that we appreciate it. Please let this little note be a personal message to each one of you, and be assured that we appreciate your remembrance, whether it be a card, or whatever it may have been. May the good Lord bless you according to His loving kindness and tender mercies, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Barn Burned

---January 7, 1937

On Thursday afternoon, December 24, while the editor and wife were in Fordyce on some business, our barn caught fire and burned down. It was totally destroyed. We had a little more than enough hay therein to run us through the winter, and a lot of good lumber stored therein. All were destroyed. It was a total loss. But we felt thankful it was no worse. We felt thankful it was not our dwelling or office, and that none of the children were in the fire. The boys were left at home, and we felt thankful they were not hurt or burned. In the midst of misfortunes and hardships the Lord has been good to us. The little troubles we have to encounter are insignificant in comparison with the Lord's mercies and blessings. C. H. C.

Wonderful Order

---January 21, 1937

On another page in this paper will be found an article from Brother J. T. Foster, West Blockton, Ala., containing a brief statement of affairs in that section, and some of the proceedings of Elder S. F. Moore. We happened to know just when the trouble started at Cluster Springs Church, for we were present. It started over a person being received. * * * * No church can receive a member without a unanimous vote of the members present. The course pursued * * * * was like throwing ice on a hot fire. The meeting had been good-just fine-up to that time. It was communion time, but that matter blocked the communion, and the meeting was dismissed in coldness, as though the north pole had been suddenly moved into their midst. * * * * Elder Streetman contended, * * * * and divided the church and destroyed the peace and fellowship of the body. * * * * So, now, Elder Moore and the Trumpet folks have some more of that sort lined up with them. They are welcome to them, so far as we are concerned. But the ridiculousness of the matter is that they will cry "ORDER, ORDER, ORDER," in the ears of the brotherhood, and pose as simon-pure, while going over the country and scraping up everything they can gather together that orderly Old Baptists have excluded, and recognize them as orderly, and then refuse to recognize orderly folks in the southwest under the pretense of "ORDER." Their cry of "order, order, order," reminds us of a lot of frogs in wet weather alongside of ponds and creek banks. It seems to us that our people have gone on bearing with them in their nefarious work about long enough. It seems to us that it is about time for us to recognize the bars they have put up, and treat them as their conduct deserves. May the Lord have mercy on their poor benighted souls. C. H. C.

Explanation Wanted

---February 4, 1937

Dear Brother Cayce: My brother is a subscriber to your paper, The Primitive Baptist, and I have access to its pages and read most of each issue. I have become very much interested in the doctrine of predestination as taught by you. I have not been able to understand clearly what you teach; nor can I understand Paul's teaching in (Ephesians 1:5) and ((9) (Romans 8:29-30)). What I want to know is: a plain and concise interpretation of these Scriptures. Do they harmonize with (John 3:16-17,18); (5:24), with (Ephesians 1:5) and ((9) (Romans 8:29-30)), in an article in the next issue of your paper, or as soon as it is convenient thereafter. I am writing this for my own desire for truth and a knowledge concerning these things which have interested me for sometime, but have not been able to find a satisfactory conclusion. Thanking you in advance for this favor, I remain, yours in search for truth, W. P. Miller. Boise City, Okla.
OUR ANSWER

Since the writer of the above says he is asking the above for information and with a sincere desire for the truth, we will try to offer some remarks on the matters he mentions. We will take it for granted that he is honest and sincere in this statement, and will try to explain some of the things mentioned, as best we can. We do not promise to answer his questions to his satisfaction. They might be answered correctly and according to truth, and yet he might not be satisfied with it. To begin with we will say that the Scriptures do not contradict themselves. If one statement therein seems to us to contradict another statement therein, the trouble is that we are making a wrong application of one or both of the statements. If each statement in the Book is applied where it belongs, then there is no contradiction, but a perfect chain of harmony, beauty and truth, all the way through. There is nothing wrong in or with what the Book says, or what it teaches. The wrong is with us, in making a wrong application of what it says. Now, the brother admits that he cannot harmonize the Scriptures referred to. No man on earth can harmonize them and make the application of (John 3:16-17,18), that the brother does. The trouble is that he makes a universal application of the word world in that text, as well as in many other places, where it must have a limited meaning, or else there is a contradiction, and no man can thus harmonize the Book, or show the harmony therein. As evidence that the word world is often used in the Bible in a restricted sense, let us read (Luke 2:1) "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed." Evidently the word world here does not embrace all mankind-it is used in a restricted sense. Again, read (I John 5:19) "And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness." Here it is very plain in the text itself that the word world does not embrace all mankind; for "we," a part of the race of mankind, "are of God," and are not lying in wickedness, or in the wicked one. Here it is very evident that there is such a thing as the world of the godly, or the godly world, and the world of the ungodly, or the ungodly world. Keep this fact in mind, please. There is no disputing it. With that fact in mind, which is proven in the foregoing paragraph, we can make an application of (John 3:16-17,18), which harmonizes with other Scriptures. The word world therein is used in a restricted sense, and has reference only to the world of the godly, the elect world. Another fact is this: God does not, and did not, love all the race. Read (Romans 9:13) "As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." God did not love Esau; but Esau was a part of the race. Then God did not love all the race. God loved Jacob; but He did not love Esau; so He passed Esau by, and bestowed the blessing upon Jacob. This was said before they were born-notice the context in (Romans 9). So, your application of (John 3:16-18) is wrong. That is the reason you cannot harmonize that with the other places. You just cannot harmonize your application with other plain statements in the Book. The Book is right, but the application is wrong. Some covenants are conditional, but some are not. God made a covenant with Noah that He would never again destroy the earth by water. That was not a conditional covenant, depending upon the obedience of Noah or any of his descendants for its fulfillment. It depends alone upon the power and faithfulness of God for its fulfillment. Read (Genesis 9:11). Then we will read (Jeremiah 52:34) "For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." Here the Lord tells us that the covenant of His peace is like the covenant He made with Noah. As the covenant made with Noah and all flesh that the earth should never again be destroyed by water was an unconditional covenant, and the covenant of His peace was like it, then the covenant of His peace was an unconditional covenant. The covenant of His peace is the covenant of grace. In it His mercy is promised; grace is promised. And the promise was like the promise to Noah-unconditional upon the part of humanity. In (Romans 8:28-29), we have this language, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren." That there is a sense in which God foreknew all persons, actions, and things, we do not suppose the writer of the above letter will deny. If that is admitted, then we have only to say that the language itself shows very plainly that there were some persons foreknown by Him in a peculiar way in which others were not foreknown. Those who were foreknown in this peculiar way were predestinated to be conformed to the image of Jesus, His Son. As those thus peculiarly foreknown were predestinated to be conformed to the image of Jesus, others not thus foreknown were not thus predestinated. Now, there is the Bible doctrine of predestination; and every place you find the word in the Book it has reference to the redemption, salvation, and final glorification of those the Lord thus foreknew. In what peculiar sense were they foreknown? They were known beforehand, before they existed, before time was, in the covenant of His grace. That covenant was an everlasting covenant. See (Hebrews 13:20-21). This is just one plan or way that God saves poor sinners from eternal ruin. There is no other way. The Lord has made conditional covenants, it is true, but the obedience of the parties of the second part in the conditional covenants did not procure eternal life. One conditional covenant God made with Israel, in ancient times, was, "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land: but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." --(9) (Isaiah 1:19-20). Here is a conditional covenant or promise, in which the Lord covenanted that they should eat the good of the land; but it depended upon their being willing and obedient. He did not promise eternal life on the condition that they be willing and obedient; but that they should eat the good of the land. They did not have to be willing and obedient in order that they become Israelites; for they were Israelites already; but they had to be willing and obedient in order to eat the good of the land. In (John 13:17), Jesus said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Here is a happiness promised by the Saviour which depends upon doing the things He has taught. It is a happiness to be enjoyed here, and is not a promise of eternal life or of happiness hereafter. Of course, this belongs to the children of God--belongs to Israel. There is a happiness and peace in the moral realm which is enjoyed by those who walk uprightly in that realm; and there is a happiness and peace enjoyed by the children of God who walk uprightly in spiritual service. Our happiness and well being here in this world depends much upon the way we live; but our home in heaven does not depend upon that. That is something which depends alone upon the work of the Lord. It is dependent upon what the Lord does for us, and is not dependent upon what we do for the Lord. This is a great subject, and we have only hinted at it here, and the article is growing too long. We must stop here. We suggest to Brother Miller that he get hold of a copy of the Cayce-Penick debate and read and study that work. We have one copy, second hand, which he can get for the small sum of $1.50. They are scarce and hard to get hold of. May the Lord bless these thoughts herein written to the benefit of all our readers. C. H. C.

Unionism

---February 18, 1937

There has been some question in the minds of some of our brethren as to the members of our churches holding membership in trade unions. Up to the present time we have had but little to say in regard to the matter. Yet we have had our own opinion as to whether we, ourselves, would operate a union shop. We believe we should inform our readers as to what, at least, some unions require of their membership. We have before us a blank application for membership in a certain kind of union. Here is the obligation one signs who makes the application for membership in that union: I hereby solemnly and sincerely swear (or affirm) that I will not reveal any business or proceedings of any meeting of this or any subordinate union to which I may hereafter be attached unless by order of the union, except to those whom I know to be members in good standing thereof; that I will, without equivocation or evasion, and to the best of my ability, abide by the Constitution, By-Laws and the adopted scale of prices of any union to which I may belong; that I will at all times support the laws, regulations and decisions of the Union, and will carefully avoid giving aid or succor to its enemies, and use all honorable means within my power to procure employment for members of the-----

Union in preference to others; that my fidelity to the union and my duty to the members thereof shall in no sense be interfered with by any allegiance that I may now or hereafter owe to any other organization, social, political, or religious, secret or otherwise; that I will belong to no society or combination composed wholly or partly of printers, with the intent or purpose to interfere with the trade regulations or influence or control the legislation of this union; that I will not wrong a member or see him or her wronged, if in my power to prevent. To all of which I pledge my most sacred honor. That is the obligation one signs in making application for membership in that union. We do not presume this to be radically different from others. There are some things in this to which we wish to call particular attention. One is that the applicant signs a pledge that he will belong to no society or combination composed wholly or partly of printers, with the intent or purpose to interfere with the trade regulations or to influence or control the legislation of the union. In this the person signs away all his right of having a word to say about any legislation the union may make. The person thereby signs away all his liberties, and solemnly obligates himself to be governed and controlled absolutely, without any voice or objection, by those who are the "higher ups," or by the head officers of the union. What liberty-loving child of grace wishes to thus surrender all his rights and privileges as to his own working conditions? No person on earth can do what he obligates himself to do in this and at the same time do as the Lord requires in His blessed Book. In fact, when he signs the above pledge, he absolutely signs a pledge that he will not do what God has commanded in His Book. Here is what the Book says: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." -(Galatians 6:10). Here the express command is to do good "especially unto them who are of the household of faith." God's Book requires the first obligation be to the brotherhood-the brethren and sisters in the church. But the obligation above requires the first obligation to the members of the union. The obligation places the union above everything else in the world, "social, political or religious." To every member of the church our Lord has set up here in the world for the comfort and benefit of His humble poor, we would propound this question, and would have it sink down deep in your heart: What is higher, what is above the church our Lord has set up? True Primitive Baptists have always claimed that the church of Christ is the highest institution in the world, and that it is above everything else in the world. We think so yet. Will you belong to and affiliate with any institution where you have to sign away that belief and fundamental principle of our faith? Will you sign a pledge that you will procure employment for another in preference to your brother in the church? Do you think more of those who belong to the union, and who may not be as moral and upright as they should, than you do of your brother in the Lord? Which do you think should be given preference in the matter of procuring employment for-your brother in the "household of faith" or the member of the union? Both cannot have the preference. God's Book says, "especially to them who are of the household of faith." Let us try to do our duty as best we can, and as the Lord has commanded, and let such things of the world alone. You may rest assured that none of them are or can be for the betterment of the Lord's dear children. As for what we think about such things, we are free to say that we absolutely would not run a union shop. From the Bulletin of the Employing Printers' Association of America, the January-February, 1937, number, we copy the following concerning the strike in General Motors Corporation: Revolution by physical force is what we have witnessed in the "sit-down" strike of employees in the plants of the General Motors Corporation. The strikers have forcibly seized machinery, equipment, and buildings, which they refuse to relinquish except on condition that they receive certain supposed gains. Their plan and action plainly constitute a form of extortion.

An injunction issued by a Michigan court to protect the constitutional rights of the property owners has not been enforced by local authorities. General Motors thus has not been able to avail itself of the legal protection to which it is entitled under our government. The constitutional right of the great majority of the employees to continue in their work, as they wish, for the corporation that desires to employ them, has been flagrantly violated. Law and property rights have been flouted, the judicial system of the state defied, and citizens have been subjected to a reign of anarchy. If the labor-union forces win the present strike, the "check-off" will be instituted. The employer will have to deduct union dues regularly from the pay envelopes of all workers and remit the deducted funds to the racketeers who have the industry under their heels. The employing corporation thereby will be compelled to coerce its employees into becoming and remaining members of the union controlled by a union dictator. For many years we have published warnings that labor unionism's ultimate objective is a labor-union political dictatorship! To many who have read them, these warnings may have seemed farfetched, but not so in the light of the latest developments! Unless the American people awaken to what is going on and rise in righteous wrath to put down the revolution, they will soon live, not as citizens, but as subjects of the labor-union leader who is engineering the present strike. We copied quite at length above, but it was necessary in order to get the full force of the matter in this article. Read carefully, ponder well, and if you prize your liberties, then humbly serve the Lord and pray and labor for the peace of Jerusalem. C. H. C.

Mutual Rights

---March 4, 1937

It seems that some of us "old teachers" have had some very "apt" scholars in our day. It seems that some of our young students are very "apt" to take something which we have said and apply it to anything they want to, whether we applied it there or not. Perhaps our cause would get along a little better if some of our pupils were not quite so "apt." We have said, for years, and yet say, that if our church should withdraw fellowship from us, no other church, no council, no association, no tribunal on earth has any right to call the matter in question, or has any right to restore us, or to take us into the fellowship of the Primitive Baptists. Each local church or congregation has the God-given right to say who is not entitled to membership in her body. If our church should wrongfully exclude us, other churches have the right to endeavor to labor in love with her to show her the error—but they have no right to go any farther than that. The reason why this is so is because our church is holding to and harboring nothing that is injurious to the great and general body of Baptists, and is staying within her own God-given rights. But if our church should hold us in her fellowship when we are guilty of a thing that is a shame and disgrace to the cause of the Master, and which is, therefore, a disgrace upon her sister churches, then she is going beyond her God-given right. God has not given her the right to hold, and to harbor, and retain, in her body, anything that is a disgrace to her sister churches or a disgrace to the cause. In such case the sister churches have a right to enter their complaints to our church, and if she persists in retaining in her membership that which is a disgrace to the general body, they have a right to withdraw affiliation with her, and have a right to refuse such affiliation until she corrects her wrong, or ceases such practice. If our church here in Thornton has the right to retain whom she pleases, regardless of the conduct of such person retained, and regardless of the cause in general, then the sister churches also have a sovereign right to reject. Once upon a time a notice was sent to us for publication that a certain person had been restored to fellowship in a certain church. We returned the notice with the statement that we did not care to publish to the world that such a person had been restored to fellowship in a Primitive Baptist Church. And we told them this, also: If you folks want him, we are not going to dictate to you as to what you shall do in regard to the matter. If you want him, you are welcome to him; and for God's sake, keep him, and do not send him down this way, for we do not want him. While they may have had some rights in the matter, we had some rights, too. Unless these principles are recognized and observed, there can be no such thing as union and fellowship to abound among our people in general. Otherwise than the recognizing of the bond of fellowship and sisterly and brotherly relationship that exists, or should exist, between and among the churches, each local congregation would be a denomination within itself. May the Lord help us to observe and to contend for the things that make for peace in our beloved Zion. C. H. C.

Questions on Scripture

We have seen and heard so many things advocated by brethren along the line that we have felt, for quite awhile, it might be profitable for the cause and for some of the brethren for us to write a lot of questions, and put them in the paper for our readers to consider. We do not feel inclined to answer the questions ourselves, but feel it would be best for us to leave each reader to answer each question for himself. Perhaps this may cause someone to think about and to study some points they have not considered before. We are not putting these questions in the paper for them to be answered through the paper, but for each reader to study the questions for himself, in the hope that it may help some individual reader to arrive at the truth upon some point about which his mind may not be entirely clear. Can any person of the race of Adam, whether a child of God or not, make an atonement for one sin of his own, or even one sin of another person? Is it necessary that blood be shed in order that atonement be made? Will the blood of a sinner make atonement for one sin of that sinner? If there is one sin for which a person can, himself, make atonement, why could he not make atonement for all his sins? Which is the worse sin—one which is committed wilfully or one which is committed ignorantly? Did not the Lord make provision, under the law, in the cities of refuge, for His people that sinned ignorantly? Was any such provision made for those who sinned knowingly? Does it not appear, then, that the Lord, in dealing with His people under the law, made a distinction; and that the ignorant sin was not so grievous as the sin committed knowingly? If it is worse to sin wilfully or knowingly than to sin ignorantly, and one must atone for his own sins that he commits knowingly, why could he not atone for the lesser sins, or for his sins committed ignorantly? When Paul said, in (Hebrews 9:22) "And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission," did he not mean the same as to say that "without shedding of blood is no atonement?" Is it not a fact that atonement is made by the shedding of blood, and that there can be no atonement made for sin except by the shedding of blood? See (Leviticus 17:11). Can one enter heaven without one sin being atoned for by the shedding of blood? If one must atone for his own sin, how can he do it, seeing that atonement is made by the shedding of blood? Does not the making of atonement require a spotless sacrifice? Then how can a sinner make atonement for his own sin, seeing his sin is a spot on him? Is a child of God in danger of eternal damnation? If a child of God is in danger of eternal damnation, then how can he be in any better condition than an unregenerate sinner? Is there not a difference between chastisement and atonement? If chastisement is atonement, then are not some sins put away by chastisement? If some sins can be put away by chastisement, why could not all sins be put away by chastisement? If sins can be put away by chastisement, then why was it necessary for Christ to die in order to put away sins? These are just a few questions we felt like submitting for the benefit of our readers, and we trust you may study them in the light of the teaching of God's blessed Book, and meditate upon the same. May the Lord bless them to your good. C. H. C.

The Organ Question

---March 18, 1937

The following article was published in The Primitive Baptist of December 17, 1912. It was copied from the Messenger of Peace. It is a letter written by Elder Walter Cash, who was then the editor of the Messenger, to a brother in Georgia, and was dated May 3, 1912. It was written especially concerning the question of organs in Old Baptist Churches, but the principles Elder Cash contended for in that letter are just as true and just as good on any matter of Scriptural doctrine or practice. We heartily indorse the sentiment of that letter then-nearly twenty-five years ago-and we still indorse it. We recommend that all our readers prayfully study and consider the contents of the article now. May the Lord bless the same to the good of Zion. C. H. C. The article (The following is a copy of a letter written to a brother in Georgia, who asked us to propose something for the settlement of the trouble there over having organs in the churches. We are not privileged to give his name.) May 3, 1912. Dear Brother-I have been thinking over your letter asking me to suggest something that might help your condition in Georgia, but with my present understanding of the situation, the outlook is anything but bright. I shall not attempt to discuss the matter from a Bible standpoint, except to say, If there is no Bible commandment for it, then to seek to introduce it at the sacrifice of the peace of the church is wrong. There is no passage of Scripture which leads to the conclusion in any direct way that instrumental music was used in any New Testament church. Fact 1. Instrumental music cannot be introduced among Primitive Baptist Churches without making trouble and division. (This fact has been demonstrated.) Fact 2. The supposed benefits are superficial and not spiritual, and do not justify making trouble among churches. A church that can sing well with the organ, with the same practice, can sing well without it. The only difference is the sound (noise) of the organ which may serve to drown possible discord. Fact 3. With other denominations the tendency has been to choir singing instead of congregational. What reason is there to suppose that it would be different with us? I preached in a town where there were few of our people and a choir furnished the music. I said at the close of the sermon, "I would like to have the congregation sing the last hymn and I will lead it." I spent the night with a Presbyterian. He asked me: "What is the objection of your people to instrumental music in the churches?" I said in reply: "Which hymn did you enjoy most tonight-the singing of the choir or the last hymn by the congregation?" "Oh," said he, "there is no comparison; the last by the congregation." I asked: "Do you remember when your church first put in an instrument? and what has been the tendency since?" He said in reply: "I had not thought of it, but the tendency since has been to replace congregational singing with the choir. There are quartets, and solos, and new pieces, and this part is an advertised feature calculated to draw a crowd, but it is not as much like worship as congregational singing." I said: "Really, is not that answer enough to your question?" and he agreed with me. It may be said in reply to this that our people who use the organ still maintain congregational singing. So did others for a while, but the desire to "feature" the music grows and grows, until a service I attended a short time ago employed a full orchestra, consisting of organ, piano, violins, wind instruments and drum. And why not? If the organ is an improvement, why not the other instruments? Fact 4. If there is no Scripture arguments against it, in my mind, and evidently in the minds of a great majority of our people, it would be a blow at spiritual service and congregational singing, and lead in greater or less degree to "featuring" that for an attendance, rather than to preach Jesus and Him crucified. In my mind and in the minds of many others, for the above reasons and for reasons based on Scriptural reference as to the nature and character of the church service, and the manner in which it was carried on in the first churches as nearly as can be ascertained, there ought to be a firm, and yet positive, stand taken against the introduction of instrumental music in our churches: First-Because it will tear them up and make division. Second-Because it is in no manner necessary, as the expression by individuals embodies the true sentiment of praise. The praise is in the words, properly, and not in the tune, though harmony in expression is not barred by the Scriptures. Third-Because the tendency among other people who have gone into this practice is to please a worldly and sensual congregation rather than to uplift the spiritual element, and to lift up Jesus crucified. It is an open question whether our people could withstand this tendency. And after a trial, if it proved they were not, it would be too late to save them. Now as to the present situation. Can we get along and let each church do as it pleases about this matter? I feel that this would be a dangerous attitude indeed. Though we take the stand that the "organ" is not a matter for a declaration of non-fellowship, the persistence and determination of the minority against the great majority as to the prudence and wisdom of this practice is. A minority of a church might want a fence built around the church house, while a majority thought it not necessary. Fence or no fence is not a matter of fellowship, but this minority might show such contempt for the majority, and such determination to have their ideas prevail that it might become necessary to exclude them. The real situation is likely to be lost sight of in the struggle, and the minority might seek to have it appear that the majority excluded them because they believed in a fence-had non-fellowshipped the fence in fact, when it was not the fence, but the action of those who are for the fence. What is the situation of our people now as to the organ? I will be real plain with you, Brother-----, so that there will be no misunderstanding. I will not undertake to justify all that has been done by those who have opposed the organ in Georgia, but only speak of the situation as it is right now without regard to how it became so. Our people out here see so much danger, disruption and final division in the introduction of the use of instrumental music in the churches that they are likely to take a stand against all persons who encourage it in any way. There is no use in arguing over how we reached the condition we are now in, but at this time I see no indication that churches using instrumental music can be treated as in good standing. I have studied the matter carefully since receiving your letter, but I can think of nothing to suggest that would have any show of adoption by the churches generally, which would put those churches in favor with our people while they still persisted in a course that our people believe and know will cause trouble and division. To recognize them is a tacit indorsement of their course, if nothing more. Then if one church may be recognized as pursuing a right and proper course for the good of the whole cause that uses instrumental music, no limit can be placed on the number of churches, and so the advocates of instrumental music are free to work and increase. But this condition can never continue (that is the multiplication of churches) and have peace, so there is no use to try to settle on a proposition of that kind. All this talk of churches being sovereign in such sense that they may take any kind of course, and other churches may not protest, and show their protest in withdrawal, is the merest drivel. This can never be true in doctrine or practice. No church may control another church, but it may protest against the action of another church, and if there is no amendment may refuse to walk with such church in fellowship. Especially is this true in case a church took such course as would by its influence affect other churches by leading to division of sentiment among them. Frankly I do not know what could be done now to bring about peace, since the introduction of the organ has become a well defined dispute. You say there is no hope that all the churches will abandon instrumental music, and as plainly say that other churches not using instrumental music will stand by those who do and affiliate with them. From what I can see of the situation I think that it is as well made out on the other side to show disapproval of the movement by not walking with those who use instrumental music, nor with those who encourage them by walking with them, because the result would be to spread the cause of trouble and draw other churches into the discussion of it, resulting in friction. After studying your letter I see you firmly take a stand that instrumental music in churches is Scriptural and right, which is putting it too high, I think, and I do not see how you - could do much against a movement that you really thought Scriptural. I have never written as much before upon this subject to anyone. If we have anyone in this state advocating the use of instrumental music in the churches I do not know of them, and I hope there will never be any movement in that direction. If you brethren in Georgia love peace and fellowship with the great majority of Primitive Baptists better than you do instrumental music I think you will find a way out, but if you think more of instrumental music, I think you will keep the instruments. I have written very plainly so that you would understand, because when you write me you have a right to expect that I will do that. Sincerely yours, Walter Cash.

Land, A Trust and Must Be Preserved

I don't know whether any of you get the implication carried in the model soil law passed by the Legislature at the request of the president or not. The- law passed as a method or means of the state and the farmers of the state participating more fully in the national soil conservation program. But it goes further than that. The time is not far distant when if a man lives on a piece of land it will be his duty to himself and it will be a duty imposed by the state to follow sound farming practices and methods so as to preserve and build up the fertility of that soil. There is as much constitutional authority and legal right to force a man to conserve his soil as there is to force an oil company or a lumber company to preserve and protect those resources. Courts have held in many instances that a state has a right to force people under penalty of law to preserve the oil and timber rights of a state or a community. Civilization existed for centuries without oil or even coal and such resources. The soil is one resource without which no civilization can exist. It seems logical then that the time is not very far off when you as a farmer will be told to terrace your land, you will be told to plant soil building crops and you will do just those things or you will not farm. That sounds drastic, does it not? Well, read the law we have just passed here in the Legislature and you'll see that the state of Arkansas is just about in position to do that thing right now. We are pretty independent, ourselves. We do not like for folks to tell us we have got to do anything, but the police department of our city can make us clean the ditches in the ravines in front of our house; it can compel us to cut weeds on a vacant lot which belongs to us. It can do many things that would have been outrageous years ago. And as I said before, we suspect when we get a farm, and we are going to buy one some of these days, and they go to telling us what we must do on that farm to preserve the soil, we'll kick like a bay steer. On the other hand, when we drive across places in Arkansas and some other states and we see whole sections actually destroyed and desolate just because some fellow insisted on farming the way he wanted to and neglected that soil we are not so sure but what this new way of making us do things we should do is not so bad. At any rate, we're going to see a lot of things new in this farming scheme in the next decade. The above is an article copied in full from the Arkansas Farmer of March 15, 1937, under the large heading of "The Editor Speaking." We feel that the obligation rests upon us-and it does rest upon us if the Lord has put us in the ministry-to sound again the alarm. It may be too late now; but we sounded the alarm before it was too late. If the people did not take warning, then their blood rests upon their own heads and not upon us. If we fail to give the alarm, then the Lord would hold us responsible. Stop right here, please, and give the above article another careful reading before you proceed farther in reading our "little say" in regard to it. Let what it says "soak in" real good. Think about it; ponder it well. Note carefully that the law referred to, the editor says, was passed by our State Legislature at the request of the president. Just here let us say that we do not intend to make The Primitive Baptist a political sheet. We do not desire to take stock in politics, especially through the columns of this paper; and we are not going to do so. But when we plainly see a trend in matters of state and the nation toward the destruction and overthrow of our liberties, for which our people have always stood, and for which our ancestors laid down their lives on the bloody battlefields, it is our indispensable duty to raise the alarm. Our ancestors came to this country and founded this government to escape the oppressions and deprivations of the old countries. There many of them were deprived of the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of their own conscience. They fled from their native lands on account of religious persecution and the oppressions of their governments. Under God they founded this government upon the principle of freedom, and wrote in the constitution the fundamental law and principle which guarantees this right to every man in the nation-no matter how poor, nor what may be his station or condition in life. Under this government the church has prospered; and in many places and at times they "have waxed fat, and kicked," as Jeshurun, of old time. In a great measure, and perhaps in different parts of the country, we have sometimes forgotten God. We have grown to feel secure, and to be confident that the privileges which have been ours to enjoy for the past hundred and fifty years (approximately), will not or cannot be taken from us. The land of Canaan belonged to the Jews-God's chosen people. God gave that land to Abraham and to his seed after him "for an everlasting possession." They lived in and enjoyed the land as long as they remembered and obeyed the Lord. But on account of their unbelief and rebellion they were driven out of the land, and have been deprived of its blessings and comforts for about nineteen hundred years. Does it not seem like this should be a lesson for us? May we not well remember these things "were written for our learning," and that "all these things happened unto them for ensamples to us?" The trend of affairs in this government of ours for a number of years has been toward depriving the common people of their rights and privileges which are and were vouchsafed to us in the constitution. Take the history of every nation under the sun that has gone down and been destroyed; read and study their history and you will see clearly and plainly that as their rights were gradually encroached upon, and laws enacted dictating to them what they might or might not do, or what they must or must not do, with their own personal property which they had acquired by hard labor under that government, so surely were those things followed by the establishment of laws governing and controlling their religious activities. Religious persecution has always followed. This has been a universal end. There is not an instance on record where the matter did not terminate that way. Take Russia, Germany, Italy, and Spain today. First they told their subjects what they could and could not do regarding their own property. Then they by law put an end to their religious privileges. You could not erect an Old Baptist meeting house and hold services in it in Russia today; nor in either of the other countries mentioned, we are sure. Consider how the Jews were persecuted and driven out of Germany. Consider how the churches were burned in Spain; and now consider the bloody rebellion that is in progress in that country. Do you want that to occur in this country of ours? Just as sure as matters go on for a few more years the way they are going now, and as sure as God reigns in glory-just that sure these matters will end with just such a rebellion and great bloodshed in this land. It is fast coming. But few of our people, few of our countrymen, realize or seem to comprehend the trend of the times. The storm will break in all of its terrible fury over their heads before they are awake to the approaching danger. We do not dread it so much for ourself. If it comes in our lifetime, which it will likely do if we live just a little while longer, it will soon all be over with us anyway. We know we do not have many more days to stay in this old world of trouble, anyway. Our race is nearly run. Our battles to fight are nearly all ended already. But our poor heart does bleed for our children, and for your children, if you are growing old, and for you if you are young and not far past middle life. May the good Lord look down upon us and our poor children in pity and compassion, is our humble prayer. Now consider the law above mentioned. It gives those in authority under the law the right and authority to tell you what you must or must not plant on your little spot of ground. Thus the government absolutely will control and does control you, if you are a farmer, in all you do. You can do, and must do, what they say, or else not farm. The government now requires us to collect one cent out of every dollar we pay our employees to get this paper out, and then to remit that to the collectors who are appointed by the government. Later the amount we are to collect from them will be increased. Then when we remit, each month, to the collector what we have collected from the employees, we must remit a like amount out of our own pocket. Thus, if we collect two dollars from the employees, we must also pay two dollars. This is claimed to be for the purpose of providing an old age pension when the worker reaches the age of sixty-five. Here we are, already past age sixty-five, and never will be eligible for the pension; we are getting old; our health is broken, and we cannot stand the hardships we once did. But no matter about that; we must take our hard earnings and send it to the tax collector for the benefit of fat-salaried office holders, and to pension somebody in the far distant future, when perhaps they have been as able to work, and will be as able to work, as we have been all along. Where are our rights? Where is there the slightest semblance of justice in any such procedure as this? If the government has a right to tell you what you shall or shall not plant and grow on that little spot of land of yours, they have a right to tell us that the doctrine we promulgate in our little paper is detrimental to society and to the country; and that we must not wear out the steel, and lead, and iron, and the antimony, and must not use the paper we use, which depletes our forests, because the forests are destroyed to make the paper. They have the same right to stop us, for the purpose of conserving the resources of the country, and for the good of society and the nation. Already bills have been introduced in legislative halls curbing the freedom of press and speech. But, thank God, they have not passed and become laws yet. But, look out! Yes, it is as the editor of the Arkansas Farmer says, we are going to see a lot of changes and things new, not only in this farming scheme, but in many other things in the next decade. We are right now face to face with the hardest trials and the hardest things to endure that any man now living in this nation has ever had to pass through. The time is close at hand when the two witnesses will be killed and their dead bodies will be seen lying in the street for three days and a half. The time of the worst persecution on account of religion that the world has ever known is right now close upon us. Lord, help us, and give us grace for our day and trial. We have not said a thing in this article with malice in our heart for any person on earth, living or dead. What we have said has been said with love for the truth and for the Lord's humble poor, and we have written with tears in our eyes, and because we felt that the time is near for us to lay our armor by, and we do not wish to come to that hour with a feeling that we have shunned to do what the Lord requires of us. May He bless, sustain, keep, and preserve each reader, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

History of Walker County, Alabama

---April 1, 1937

We have recently finished the printing and binding of a book of three hundred and eighty-two pages, a "History of Walker County, Alabama," by J. M. Dombhart, of Parrish, Alabama. It is printed in good clear type, on good eggshell paper, and is well and strongly bound in a green cloth cover, with title printed in gold. It is a neat book, if we did do the work. It gives some history of the early days of the state, and the founding of the county, and then of the towns in the county. It gives quite a history of the early settlers, and some of the hardships they underwent, as well as some history of the prosperity of the section. It is a valuable and interesting work. It tells us that Robert Guttery joined the Primitive Baptist Church at Holly Grove in 1824, and that in 1826 he was ordained a minister in that faith, and served as such for fifty-one years. This is on page 212. On pages 38 and 39 we find that "While authentic records are not available, it would appear that as early as 1840 the Primitive Baptists had established churches at Holly Grove, at Old Zion on the Jasper-Russellville road, at Old Sardis on the Warrior River below Lynn's Park, and at other places." On page 38 we are told that "In 1842 the first Missionary Baptist Church in the county was constituted at Pleasant Grove." The book contains some interesting reading and some valuable information. Especially is this true with people whose ancestors lived in that section. The book sells for $2.50. Any who are interested should write to J. M. Dombhart, Parrish, Ala. C. H. O.

Should Have Peace

---April 1, 1937

We have observed for some little time that some efforts have been made by some of the brethren for peace to be restored among the brethren and churches in North Carolina and Virginia. And though we are some distance away, yet we are, of course, interested in Zion's welfare everywhere, and heartily commend such a move for peace. We see no good reason why peace should not, or could not, be restored between the brethren and churches who are agreed in doctrine. It is almost universally true that when troubles come in the churches and among the brethren there are some wrongs done on both sides. Brethren get wrought up, and in the flesh, and things are done hastily and in the heat of passion. Wrong steps are often taken. Things are said that should not be said. Frequently a bad spirit is manifested. It is so easy for us to get in the flesh. It is so easy for us to retaliate when we think a brother has treated us wrong, and it is so easy for us to judge a brother wrongfully. These feelings should be laid aside. All should be willing to forgive the wrongs of the past. If we are not willing to forgive our brother, how can we expect our Lord to forgive us? How many of us who have engaged in war with our brethren can sincerely say we have done no wrong ourselves? It seems to us that it would be a good move for the brethren who are divided on account of the troubles that have existed in that section, as well as in other sections, to have a meeting for the purpose of trying to adjust their little differences, if there are any, and see if they cannot come together. There should not be any compromise of true principles of the doctrine and order of God's house to do this, and no such compromise would be required. The Bible tells us how to adjust and settle our differences. If, and when, we follow its teaching peace and sweet fellowship will be restored. May the Lord help us all to strive for the things that make for peace. C. H. C.

---April 15, 1937

We have been requested to give our views on the above citations of Scripture. (John 1:1) reads, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." (II Timothy 4:2) reads, "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine." We are going to give a little guess as to why we were asked to give our views on these two passages. Our guess is that somebody has said that the command to "preach the word" means to preach the Bible, and our questioner wants to know if that is the view we have of the text. We just make this little guess about it. In (John 1:1), in the original language, it says "In the beginning was the Logos" (Word), etc. Berry's New Testament Lexicon, in defining the word Logos says it "is used by John as a name of Christ, the Word of God, i. e., the expression or manifestation of His thoughts to man, (John 1:1), etc." The Word was made flesh; and in this God was manifest in the flesh. The Word was God, and as the Word was God, it was God manifest in the flesh. He was and is the second Person in the Holy Trinity. Logos is in the nominative case and singular number. In (II Timothy 4:2) the apostle says, "Preach the word." In this quotation it is "ton Logon." This is in the singular number and accusative case. It is the same as in (John 1:1), only different case. We know that some brethren think the apostle meant to instruct Timothy to preach the Bible, or to preach the Scriptures. But the New Testament was not then written and gathered together. But if that is really what he meant, it must be modified so as to mean for him to preach just what the Bible teaches. And this is the way the brethren will usually bring it around to mean who say that the instruction was for him to preach the Bible. The apostle tells us, "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified." -(I Corinthians 2:2). He would preach the Word; he would preach Christ, and Him crucified. Nothing else would he know, in the salvation of poor lost sinners. No other religious instruction would he give, only what Christ has authorized. Paul's preaching would be a very good example for the Lord's ministers to follow in this day. Again the apostle said, "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." -(II Corinthians 4:5). In this the apostle tells us that we "preach Christ Jesus the Lord." In (I Corinthians 1:23) he says, "But we preach Christ crucified." It was the apostle who did the preaching. What did he preach? He preached Christ and Him crucified; he preached the Word. If all who are professed Old Baptist preachers would put in their whole time doing this, and behave themselves when they are not in the pulpit, the Old Baptists would not be divided as they are, and more of the Lord's little children who are out in the world would be seen coming home to the old church, and love and sweet fellowship would abound, and sweet peace would reign in the camps of Israel. The Lord would be showering His blessings down upon us, and this country would be a better place in which to live. We should try to mend our ways, if we have been doing otherwise. Suppose some of us try it and see what the result would be. Do not try it for just a few weeks or months, and then quit; it is a life-time job. Keep at it as long as you live; and that will not be too long. C. H. C.

---April 15, 1937

We have been requested to give our views on (Jeremiah 24:1-3), which you may read by turning to the same in your Bible. It is not necessary to take space here to quote it. Our views can be given in as few words as we know how to express them by giving what Gill says in his Commentary concerning this chapter, which we copy, as follows. By the term good people is meant the obedient ones among the Israelites. C. H. C.

GILL'S COMMENTS

This chapter contains a vision of two baskets of figs, representing the Jews both in captivity, and at Jerusalem. The vision is declared, (Jeremiah 24:1-3); where both time and place are pointed at, in which the vision was seen, and the nature of the figs described, and what passed between the Lord and the prophet concerning them. The explication of the vision begins, (Jeremiah 24:4), and continues to the end of the chapter. The good figs were an emblem of the good people that were carried captive with Jeconiah into Babylon, which the Lord says was for their good; and He promises to own them, and set His eyes upon them for good, and that they should return to their own land, and have a heart to know Him as their God, and return unto Him, (Jeremiah 24:5-7); the bad figs signify the people that were with Zedekiah at Jerusalem, and those that were in Egypt, who are threatened to be carried captive into all lands, and there live under the greatest reproach and disgrace; or be destroyed in their own land by the sword, famine, or pestilence, (Jeremiah 24:8-10).

Hebrews 12:6-8,12

---May 6, 1937

S. L. Miller, of Wray, Ga., has asked us to give our views on the language recorded in the verses cited. (Hebrews 12:5-8) reads as follows: "And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of Him: for whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons." This teaches us that the Lord chastises His children for their disobedience, and verse ten tells us that it is for their profit. It is very evident, too, that if one is not chastised by the Lord, that one is not a child of God—has not been born of God. It is also very evident, from the teaching of the apostle, that the Lord's children all do wrong. They have not attained to a state of sinless perfection here in this life, and do not attain to it here. They fall short of that; yet it is the duty of His children to strive for that, as much as possible. And it is for their good that the Lord chastises them. Remember, though, that chastisement is one thing and atonement is another thing. The Lord Jesus made atonement for them, and thereby satisfied the law which, without that satisfaction being made, would have separated them forever from the peaceful presence of God in eternity. Jesus was their surety. He took their law place. But now that they are brought into divine relationship with God in regeneration, God deals with them as children. This brings in a parental relationship; and He chastises them for their wrong doing, for their good, to bring them into the path of obedience, and to bring them thus closer to Him. Hence, the instruction given them in (Hebrews 12:12-13), as well as in many other places in the Book, to which we do well to take heed. C. H. C.

Meeting Suggested

---May 20, 1937

Some few weeks ago we sent a circular letter under the heading "copies sent to preachers of Wetumpka and Hillabee Associations, also to many deacons and lay members in various sections" in regard to a meeting trying to blend the brotherhood together in Christian fellowship, to which we have received several favorable replies. We are now making a second appeal in behalf of said meeting, covering more territory than in the first appeal, as we now realize our differences are even greater and more widely spread than we realized in our first appeal. Dear brethren, do we not fully realize that we are commanded to labor for peace and fellowship among ourselves, in the spirit of love and humility, sacrificing every fleshly notion and personal hobby that tends to confuse the minds of the Lord's children? Surely none of us can truthfully say that we have the peace that Jesus left with the church, when many of us continue to agitate the question of feet washing when there is no church among us that does not practice the example. Also the practice of returning old church letters back, after having been received together with the bearer by another of the same faith and order, thereby shirking our duty and laying upon others a task which they cannot Scripturally perform. Also some of us sitting in councils, usurping the authority that belongs solely to the church. Be it known that we have no axe to grind, nor no personal enmity toward anyone of the Lord's children, and fully believe when trouble arises in the church it should be confined to the church wherein it arises, for she is commanded by her Head and Lawgiver to keep herself in Scriptural order and is fully capacitated to do so. "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth." - (Proverbs 1-31) and ((6) (Proverbs 24:6). The suggested meeting above, it seems to us, amounts to about the same thing as a council. But a council does not have the right to impose their suggestions upon a church. An orderly gospel church is the highest ecclesiastical court on earth; and it is the church that is to execute the laws of the kingdom. Strife and confusion and division among ourselves is all wrong. Such things come from beneath. Little differences and strifes over words to no profit should not exist or be engaged in. May the Lord help us all to "strive for the things that make for peace." C. H. C.

After The Flesh

---May 20, 1937

For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit.-(Romans 8:5). To our mind the apostle here draws a line of distinction and shows the great difference between the unregenerate and those who have been born from above. In his teaching here may also be found an idea of comfort and consolation and encouragement for the tempest-tossed child of God, for it gives an unmistakable evidence of a gracious state. "They that are after the flesh" are those who have been born of the flesh; those who are the offspring of Adam in their natural state. They are those who have been born of the earthly parentage only. They have been born from beneath, but not from above. To "mind," as here used, simply means to love, to care for, to be concerned about. They do not mind or care for the things of the flesh in order to be born of the flesh, but they mind those things because they are born of the flesh. One does not care for the things of nature in order to be born into the natural realm. One has to be first born into the natural realm in order to care for the things that are in that realm. To be "after the Spirit" is to be born of the Spirit, born from above. One does not have to mind, or care for, the things of the Spirit in order to be born of the Spirit, no more than one has to care for the things of the flesh, the things of the natural realm, in order to be born of the flesh, or in order to be born into the natural realm. We love the things in the natural realm after we have been born into the natural realm. The loving or caring for the things of nature, the things that are in the natural realm, is indisputable and unmistakable evidence that one has the natural life-has been born into the natural realm. Even so, one minds, loves, cares for, the things of the Spirit because he has been born into the spiritual realm-because he has been born from above. The fact, then, that one loves God, minds the things of the Spirit, cares for and loves spiritual things, loves holiness and righteousness, is indisputable and unmistakable evidence of the fact that he has been born of God, has been born from above. It is evidence which inspiration has given that one is a child of God. The mind is something which pertains to and belongs to life. The carnal mind is a mind that belongs alone to the natural life. The spiritual mind belongs alone to the spiritual life. "We have the mind of Christ." -(I Corinthians 2:16). Those who have the life of Christ have the mind of Christ. This mind is not a carnal mind, but a spiritual mind. To be in possession of no other mind than a carnal mind is to be in a state of death; or to be in a state of death in trespasses and sins is to have no other mind than a natural mind, or a carnal mind. One must be born of another parentage than the natural parentage in order to have the mind of Christ, or in order to have a mind for spiritual things. If you have a mind for spiritual things; if you have a desire for spiritual things-if you hunger and thirst after righteousness, it can be for no other reason than that you are "a child of Jehovah, of the seed Royal, a dignified race." You have been born from above. God is your Father; Jesus is your elder Brother; heaven is your home; and you will live with the Father and with Jesus and all His redeemed family in all the ceaseless ages of eternity. The light afflictions here are but for a moment, and are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in you after a few more seasons of sufferings and distress. May the Lord bless and sustain you. C. H. C.

Philippians 2; 4:23 AND Jude 1:25

We have been requested to give our views of ((2) (Philippians 2:12) and ((Jude 1:25) (Jude 1:25); ((2) (Philippians 2:12) reads, "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." Next verse reads, "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure." Verse thirteen shows that it is God which worketh in them, and in verse twelve they are commanded to work out. By their works they are to manifest what God works within them. Note, though, that God works in them to do. God does not do this doing for them, but He works in them to do, and they are to do the doing. God also works in them to will. It does not say that He works in them the will or the doing; but He works in them TO WILL, and TO DO. God gives them eternal or spiritual life, and He preserves, sustains, and keeps them and that life. Will springs from life, and it is a product of life; it belongs to life. Hence God works in them to will, and they have a will for spiritual things because God works in them. Then they should work out and manifest what God has done and does do for them. In this they glorify God in their bodies and in their spirits, which are His. They show forth His praise in thus working out and manifesting that they are His children, and manifesting their love for Him. ((Jude 1:25) (Jude 1:25) says," Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Then the next verse says," For there are certain men crept in unawares," etc. It seems to us that the apostle here conveys the idea that it was necessary for him to write so that they be saved from the teachings of these men who had crept in unawares. We do not think that eternal salvation is called common; however, it may be that the word here used means a salvation common to all God's people. But if that is what the apostle means, we cannot understand how he brings in the exhortation as applying to it, which he does. Here is a salvation, called common salvation, in which exhortation becomes needful or necessary, and this saves from ungodly men and their false teaching, or is a salvation from that. Exhortation and admonition are necessary in this. In (Hebrews 2:1-2,3,)the apostle says," Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was sted-fast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward: how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him." Here we have it in a stronger way of saying it that we cannot escape if we neglect. And here is salvation on one side. What is the opposite of salvation? Condemnation, of course. Then, the child of God cannot escape the condemnation if he neglects the salvation. Does eternal salvation depend at all upon the person not neglecting it? Most assuredly not. But here is a salvation which does depend upon them not neglecting it. For this reason it is necessary for them to "give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard." Under the law every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward. The same thing is true now; and that being true then, "how shall we escape," if we neglect to give heed to and to observe the things the Lord has taught in His Word? There is no escape. In thus neglecting the salvation here mentioned and brought to view, we fail to take heed to what Paul has here written, and to what Jude taught in his exhortation. The result is that we do not escape condemnation. It is certain and sure. "God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." C. H. C.

Elder Cash Passed Away

---June 3, 1937

Today (Friday, May 21) we are in receipt of a card from Elder Leon H. Clevenger, of Excelsior Springs, Mo., stating that Walter Cash passed away the day before and that the funeral would be in St. Joseph on the 21st at 3:30 p. m. Elder Cash was editor of the Messenger of Peace for many years. We do not know his age, but he was growing old. May the Lord bless those who are bereaved. C. H. C.

Proposed Peace Meeting

On another page of this paper will be found an article by Elder Lee Hanks, under the heading, "Can't All Who Truly Want Peace, Have a Peace Meeting?" We copy the article from the Messenger of Zion of March 15, 1937, by request. We have also copied an article by Elder A. B. Ross from the Messenger of Zion of April 12, by request, under the heading, "Endorses 'Peace' Article." Some of the brethren in Tennessee, especially Brethren Z. Stallings, A. B. Ross, and J. C. Ross, have been in correspondence with us for some little time in regard to the matter of making an effort to get peace restored in that country. Some of them have urgently requested that we make some suggestion, and to make some move, looking to that end.

What we have been doing has been in a private way—we mean, by private correspondence. We do not like the idea of publicly crying out peace, and posing as a peacemaker, and then doing things at other times and other ways that hinder peace. We are sorry to say that we have had some experience with matters of that sort, or some few persons of that kind. In our correspondence with some of the brethren in regard to the condition of affairs in Tennessee and Kentucky we suggested that the churches interested, where the disturbance exists, call for brethren from outside that territory to come and serve as a committee to hear all the evidence, and then to suggest to them as to what steps should be taken to restore peace so that all might be brought together. Some of these brethren have said they want us to come and serve in trying to get peace restored. We have told them that we will not serve if there is objection. In order for us to agree to serve, the brethren on both sides must be agreed for us to do so. We have thought it best to labor in a private way for some move whereby the matters might be adjusted and peace be restored, rather than to be airing these matters out in public print.

We still think that would have been the better course to pursue; but as these things have been made matters of public print it seems to us necessary now for us to say something that way, too. If we do not, then many who do not know all the circumstances involved would conclude that we do not want peace restored. We do not care so much for our own cause, but we do care for the cause of the Master. Hence, in what steps we take, and what we do, we must have the cause of the Master in view. In our young days the Baptists of Tennessee and Kentucky were all one people. They were all together. They met together in love and fellowship, and peace and harmony prevailed. They were a happy people. The Lord blessed them in their gatherings together. Their associations were seasons of happiness, joy and gladness. The Lord blessed the ministers to preach sweetly, and in defense of the glorious doctrine of grace, and the beauty of the church. Many shouts of praise went up from the camps of Israel. It ought to be that way now. It should have been that way all along. That things are not that way is known to all concerned. If brethren want peace, then peace can be restored; but there are some sacrifices to make. It will not do to sacrifice principles nor the truth. To do that would not bring peace, but more confusion. If we should have some little idea of our own, which we did not claim to be a fundamental matter, and it caused confusion, yet if we were not willing to make a sacrifice of that idea for the sake of peace, it could be clear to all that we are not very anxious for peace. If we really desire peace with our brethren, then we would be willing to sacrifice that little idea, and give it up. Some of the brethren who have been writing us have urged us to take some step looking toward the restoration of peace, and have urged that they wanted us to be in the meeting if one should be had. We trust we have been trying to consider the matter in the right way. We do not wish to suggest a step that would make bad matters worse. But we are going to make a suggestion here. Our suggestion is this: That a meeting be called for, to be held at a suitable time and place, for the brethren to consider the matters over which they have been disturbed. Let them endeavor to frame up and recommend a course whereby peace may be restored, and the matters of irregularity be eliminated. There are irregularities which need adjusting. If you will meet together in such a gathering, in the Spirit of the Master, you can accomplish the desired end. Peace can be restored. If the brethren on both sides desire it, as they have plainly said to us in private correspondence that they do, then we promise to meet with you, and to help you all we possibly can. If you succeed, in this, it will be better than to call a council of brethren from a distance. What will you do, brethren? Let all the brethren over there, no matter which side you are on, write us and give us a frank expression of your feelings and desire in the matter. What we have here suggested as a meeting is somewhat after the order of the Dallas peace meeting held in 1926. There are some things which cannot be straightened out by brethren merely meeting together and confessing their faults and mutually forgiving each other. That is good as far as it goes, but that being done will not straighten out things that churches have done. Hence, our suggestion, as above. Our race is nearly run. We have spent forty-seven years laboring among the Primitive Baptists. We have labored all these years, the best we knew how, for the time-honored principles which have characterized our people as a separate and distinct people from the world in all the ages of the past. We have tried to labor for the things that make for peace. We have, all along the line, tried to plead that we should not be at war among ourselves. If all would do right, or strive for the right things, and try to live right, there would not be so many troubles and divisions in our beloved Zion. Some of us have advocated wrong things-things the Bible does not teach-and have done wrong things. That is where trouble comes from. We should stand for the things that God has authorized in His Word; but we should do that in the right way. We trust that such a meeting as we here suggest may be held soon, and that peace may be restored, and all matters ironed out in such a way that permanent peace may be the result. Let us hear from you. May the Lord bless each one, and lead us all in the right way, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Fenced Vineyard

Now will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard. My well-beloved hath a vineyard in a very fruitful hill: and he fenced it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also made a winepress therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes. And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard. What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes? And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard: I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down: and I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned, nor digged; but there shall come up briars and thorns: I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it. For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant: and he looked for judgment, but behold oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry. Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth! In mine ears said the Lord of hosts, Of a truth many houses shall be desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant. Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath, and the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah.-(Isaiah 5:1-10). What great and solemn lessons are taught here! The good Lord had a vineyard. He planted the vineyard in a fruitful hill. He chose the place of the planting. He did not select a place of poor soil-not a desert place, nor a salt valley-but a fruitful hill. A fertile and beautiful place. And He fenced it. He put a fence around it that was sufficient for its protection. Nothing wrong, and nothing lacking, so far as the fence was concerned. But somebody must have moved the fence, and joined field to field, or laid field to field, with other people. Surely the Lord placed the fence at the right place. It was not joined to another fence. The Master gathered the stones out of His vineyard. The ground was made smooth and soft. Nothing there to cause stone bruises on the feet. Surely, a pleasant and a delightful place-a wonderful piece of ground. Then He planted it with the choicest vine. The vine was of His own choosing. It was not a wild vine, or wild grape. He makes the vines good. This is and was His own work. And He built a tower in the midst of it. His children need a tower along life's rugged way. There they may see the glories and the beauties of the land. They may there be above the troubles of this old world. And He made a winepress therein. From the winepress may be brought forth the fruit of the grapes, or the juice of the grapes, which gives strength to the poor pilgrims as they journey along the pathway of life. Everything is there that the poor pilgrim needs. Well fenced is the vineyard; all the protection necessary; the soil is good; the elevation is high; it is on a fruitful hill; all things necessary for the good thereof were done. But there was something wrong. The wrong was not with the Lord, nor with what He had done. The wrong was with His people. They did not bring forth the fruit that He required. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." -(John 15:8). The Lord was not pleased; He was not honored; He was not glorified; His name was not magnified, as should have been by them. Hence, He says, "I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down; and I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned, nor digged; but there shall come up briars and thorns." Evidently this was Israel; and "what was written afore time was written for our learning." All these things are ensamples to us. The Lord also said, "I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it." What a drouth then ensues. May we not so provoke the Lord by wickedness and rebellion that He will send no more clouds with rain where we are? Ministers are sometimes represented as clouds. Some clouds are without water, and bring no rain. How deplorable and desolate it would be to live in a country without gospel rain! "Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth." The Lord's people were to be a different people from any and all other people. They were to be a separate people from all other people. They were not to adopt the forms and manners of worship of any other people. They were not to join in the worship of, or with, any other people. They were not to lay field to field. They were to take no part whatever in the worship of any of the idol gods of the nations round about. "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God; and Him only shalt thou serve." To join in with any of the nations round about in any of their worship and service was to worship other gods than Israel's God. It was to join house to house and lay field to field. The only way not to join house to house or lay field to field was to simply abstain from any and all their worship, and to have nothing whatever to do with the same. This did not mean to have no friends in a worldly way with the people of the world; but to have no friends in a religious way with any others only in the way the Lord required. Worship and serve no other way or place, only in His vineyard; and that worship and service to be absolutely separate from the world and from everything else but the vineyard; just do all the Lord said do, and do nothing else but that. "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes." -(Song of Solomon 2:15). Foxes are sly and cunning creatures, and those little fellows may look very innocent. But they spoil the vines. They destroy all the tender grapes. They can slip in almost if not altogether unawares. How cunning they are! We may think that they are so little that they will do no harm. But these "little no harm things" destroy the vines. They destroy all the tender grapes. Then, the first thing we know there are no grapes but wild grapes. Wild grapes are not sweet and delicious. They are sour, and put the teeth on edge. When the teeth are on edge, good and pleasant food cannot be enjoyed; and a bad temper is soon manifested. If we may have one of the little foxes that the world has, why may we not have two? And if we may have two, why may we not have four? And if we may have four, why may we not have eight? And if we may have eight, why may we not have everything the world has? And before we get into our ranks everything the world has, where would there be any Old Baptists? The very things which the world must have in order that their institutions live would destroy the Old Baptist Church. If we had the things the world has, there would be no Old Baptist Church. Where is the fence? "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." -(II Corinthians 6:14-18). The things which God has not commanded are here called unclean by the inspired apostle; and he commands to touch not. All things the Lord has not taught in His Word are to be let severely alone. Do not touch them. Are we all doing as the Lord here commands? If we mix and mingle with the world in our worship and service, may they not have the right to conclude that we esteem what they have to be as good as what we have? And if they so conclude, how and wherein may the Lord's children who are out in the world be encouraged to come home to the old church, where they may have that sweet rest and peace that is not to be found out in the world? If there is no difference between the church and the world, may they not do just as well out in the world? Why "come out from among them," if there is no difference, and if we have what the world has, and if we may join in with the world? We have many good friends out in the world. They have been good and kind to us. They have proved themselves to be friends to us in matters that pertain to the world and worldly things; but we cannot worship together. We cannot engage in the same things in a church way. They have so many of the little foxes, the little things the Lord has not given in His Book; and we cannot take part with them in those things. Those who are honest and sincere do not think less of us on this account. They admire our honesty and sincerity. They will be the same with you. Let us be faithful and true to our Master.

Putting Up Fences

---July 1, 1937

It is a real nice thing for us to remember that it is easy for us to go to an extreme on most anything. It is easy for us to see a mistake, or a wrong, that somebody does, and be so fearful that we may get off on that side of the matter that we go to an extreme the other way. We might be like the mule that was blind in one eye. While crossing a bridge, he was so afraid he would run off the bridge on the "blind side," he kept getting farther and farther from that side, until he ran off on the other side. We should not go blind on one side and off to an extreme on the other side. That there are bars to fellowship laid down in God's Book no one need try to deny. "But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. Be not ye therefore partakers with them. For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light: (for the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;) proving what is acceptable unto the Lord. And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." -(Ephesians 5:3-11). We quote at length so that we may have the direct connection, and see at once, very clearly, that here is a command to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. Here is a bar to fellowship which the Lord Himself put up, by the pen of His inspired apostle. It is by the observing of the bars which the Lord has put up that the church is preserved in such a way as to have the Lord's approval. To fail to observe the bars which the Lord has put up would simply be to open the flood gates to all sorts of iniquity and wickedness, and would destroy the identity of the church where and when it is done. In the first division in the church the Catholic party threw down those bars, and a flood of iniquity came into the church. Novatian and those who stood with him for the purity of the church refused to throw those bars down-they kept them up; and that resulted in the first division in the church, or separation from the church. This is where and when the Catholic party appeared. The Lord has built every fence and put every bar to fellowship that His people need, or that the church will ever need. We need no other bars than those He put up. But we do need to observe every bar the Lord has put up. Let us lay down a principle which our father laid down in a debate with a Missionary Baptist. That principle is this: Whatever is Baptist is Scriptural. To deny this is to deny that our people are Scriptural. If what is Baptist is not Scriptural, then the Baptist Church is not Scriptural. If the Baptist Church is Scriptural, then what is Baptist is Scriptural. This being a fact, it will not do to deny that what is historically Baptist is Scriptural. If we deny it being Scriptural to do as history shows has been the general practice of the Baptists to do, then we deny that the Baptist Church is Scriptural. When we deny that, then we admit that we do not belong to a Scriptural organization. How careful we need to be that we do not find ourselves in a dilemma. In our contention against bars to fellowship which are not authorized by the Scriptures let us not forget that there are bars to fellowship which are authorized by the Scriptures. Let us not forget that the Lord has put up some bars in His Book. Let us not try to argue our point in such a way as to make people believe we are opposed to all bars to fellowship. If we are opposed to all bars to fellowship, then we are opposed to something the Lord has put in His Book. In the Throgmorton-Potter Debate on "Who Are The Primitive Baptists," held at Fulton, Ky., in 1887, Elder Throgmorton laid down a very broad basis of fellowship for the Missionary Baptists, and tried to make it appear that on this account they are the Primitive Baptists. Let us not forsake or leave the position occupied by and contended for by Elder Potter in that debate, and go over to Throgmorton's position. He was wrong then, and that position is wrong yet. The new means and measures introduced among the Baptists by Fuller, Carey, and others, were borne with by the Baptists for years, though protested against for all those years, until forbearance had long ceased to be a virtue, when they finally withdrew from them from 1832 to 1845. That was the thing they should have done at the very introduction of those new measures and new doctrines. Those things were not Baptist, and hence a departure from Scriptural teaching. They brought trouble and disturbance in the Baptist ranks. Bringing in of new means and measures will always bring disturbance among them. Not so long ago a brother who has had much to do, we suppose, in the making of new tests of fellowship over in Georgia wrote us that he had a desire to visit this country, and asked if we would make appointments for him. We wrote him that we would not; that we were having no trouble in this country about the matter they were fussing about; that all our churches engage in feet washing, and we are having no trouble about the question, and do not want any; and that they had put up a fence themselves; and our desire is for them to stay on their own side of the fence which they have put up. The fence that keeps our people out should keep them in. So we just want them to stay on their own side of the fence. In doing this, they will have less opportunity of bringing trouble among us-and we do not want trouble. If there is smallpox in a house, and a quarantine is established, it is for the protection of those who are not in that house, to keep them from being exposed to the disease. The people who are on the outside are forbidden to go on the inside, for in so doing they become exposed. But if they do violate the law and go inside, they then have to stay on the inside. It is a violation of the quarantine law for those on the inside to go outside among other people who have not been exposed to the disease. So, if those brethren have established a quarantine against all those who do not make feet washing a test of fellowship, they themselves violate their own quarantine when they get outside the fence they have put up. Let us all require the folks to stay on their own side of the fence which they have put up. The same thing is true in every like condition or circumstance. The Trumpet folks have put up a fence. All Baptists everywhere should require them to stay on their own side of the fence. If our folks cannot go among them on account of the fence they have put up, how can they lawfully go among our folks elsewhere? Evidently they are fence breakers or jumpers. May the Lord help us to be consistent, and to observe the things He has given us in His Book. C. H. C.

Elder Duncan Married

---July 1, 1937

We received a request from Elder James Duncan, of Memphis, Tenn., to come there and be with the church on the first Sunday in June, and to preach for them that day and night, and also on Monday night and Tuesday night, and to solemnize the rites of matrimony for him on Wednesday evening at 7:30. As we have had a desire for quite awhile to visit the church there, we wrote Brother Duncan we would be there if not providentially prevented. So we were with the church in their service on Sunday at eleven, on Sunday night, and on Monday and Tuesday nights. The church also desired that we have service on Wednesday night, which was agreed to. So, at 7:30 on Wednesday evening we were at Elder Duncan's home and solemnized the rites of matrimony between him and Mrs. Rosa P. Nelson (unless we have gotten her name wrong), after which we went to the church and had service. After service we were conveyed to the depot by Brother Pruitt and wife. Left

Memphis at 10:35, arriving home about four o'clock Thursday morning and found all well, for which we trust we are thankful. The meetings with the good brethren, sisters and friends in Memphis were delightful and pleasant. We spent some pleasant hours with some of them in their good homes. On Tuesday Brother S. W. Dearing's wife and sister went with us to visit Brother W. P. Dearing and family, near Covington. We spent a few pleasant hours with them. We were so glad to see him and his good wife and dear mother once more. His mother is near eighty years of age, but is still strong in the faith, and loves the good old way the fathers trod. This is a precious Old Baptist family, and have seemed like "kinfolks" to us for about forty years. The congregations were good at each service, and there seems to be a good interest there. We enjoyed our stay with them. They were good to us—so much better than we feel to deserve. May the good Lord continue to bless them, and to lead them on in the same good old way. They are satisfied to be just plain old-fashioned Old Baptists. We hope to visit them again some day. And may the Lord bless dear Brother Duncan and his companion, is our humble prayer. We may not be giving her name correct above, as we failed to make a note of it, and we are so forgetful. But her name is Duncan now, anyhow. C. H. C. (We have the name corrected in this book.)

Should Be Marked

---July 15, 1937

Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.—(Romans 16:17-18). To our mind it is very evident from this language of the apostle that the things which bring divisions and offenses in the church are such things that are not taught in the Book of Inspiration. What men have learned from some other source than God's Book are the things that bring divisions in the church of God. If there is division and discord in the church any place, and you wish to know, for certain, who is responsible for such trouble and division, just find out, for certain, who is, or has been, advocating the thing that the trouble is over, and then you will have the person who is responsible for the trouble. Nearly all, if not all, the troubles in the Old Baptist Church are started by some of the preachers. The preachers are responsible for the troubles being started. Then the churches are responsible for the troubles not being stopped. When some preacher starts up something contrary to that which you have learned in the Book, or which is not taught in the Book, you may be assured that trouble will result soon, if that preacher is not stopped. Such preachers should be stopped by the church. And there is much more danger that the church will be too slow about stopping the preacher than there is that they will be in too much of a hurry. Such a preacher should be admonished at once, as soon as he begins advocating something not found in the Book; and if he will not desist at once—right now—right then and there—he should be promptly dealt with. He should be marked right then and there. Put a brand on him. And then when he has been branded, be sure to avoid him. If any will not avoid him, then brand that fellow, too. Such men as are here described by the inspired apostle do not serve our Lord Jesus Christ. They may claim to be in the service of God, and may tell us that the things they advocate are the very things that would be pleasing to our Lord, and necessary for the church to do and to have in order to stand high in the esteem and estimation of the world, and that they are good things to engage in so as to make the church an inviting place for our children, and so on. But the apostle tells us that such men serve their own belly, and not the Lord. There is some motive in view which they have in bringing in things that the Book does not teach. "Such men can make use of good words all right. They can make fair speeches. They can talk one way to you, when present with you, or when writing to you; and then they can talk another way some other place, or to some other person. They know how to use deception, all right. They can tell you that they are longing for and hoping for a better union and better understanding among the Lord's people, and then they can tell some other party that it will not do to affiliate with some brother who is orderly and who stands for the traditions which we have been taught in the Word of God. He can write mighty nice to you, and he can give somebody else "hail Columbia" for recognizing you as a Baptist. What a pity that such men creep in; but they do. "For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts." -(II Timothy 3:6). The inspired apostle has warned us about such. It is our duty to be on our guard, and to do as the Saviour has warned-" watch." May the Lord help us to stay awake and to watch, as well as pray. C. H. C.

Remarks to A. H. Roden

---July 16, 1937

The following remarks were made to Brother Roden following a letter from W. D. Griffin and Brother Roden's reply, in which Griffin personated us. We do not deem it necessary to insert those letters here. Remarks-We do not care to spend time with Griffin in our columns. His folks will not publish our articles in their papers. Then why should we be continually giving them space in our paper? Griffin says he wants to be fair. The probabilities are that no one would have known it had he not said so. Is he seeking notoriety? If he wants an investigation of the differences between us, or if he wants a discussion, let his people indorse him as a representative man, able to set up and defend their doctrine, and accept the challenge we put out twenty years ago, and which has never been withdrawn. C. H. C.

Rev Cayce Pentecost Baptized

---August 5, 1937

The baptizing took place at the Dresden Baptist Church last Sunday night when eleven were baptized, including Rev. Cayce Pentecost and family. Bro. Pentecost has for many years been a minister of the Primitive Baptist denomination. He joined the Dresden Baptist Church last Sunday night with his wife and three children. They were immediately baptized. Bro. Pentecost was baptized by Rev. Stubblefield, the pastor, and then he in turn baptized his wife and children. A large crowd was present for the baptizing. Rev. Dewey A. Stubblefield, the pastor, is delighted with the interest manifested in the affairs of the church. He preached to big crowds at both hours last Sunday. The above item appeared in the "Dresden Items" in the Weakley County Press of July 16, 1937, published in Martin, Tenn. So Elder Cayce Pentecost has joined the Missionaries. His membership was at Little Zion Church, one of the churches which withdrew from the Greenfield Association in 1934. This is sufficient to show whether there has been anything wrong or not. It seems, from the way the above article reads, that Elder Pentecost was baptized by Elder Stubblefield, and that then Elder Pentecost baptized his wife and children. If that is correct, then Elder Pentecost baptized for the Missionaries without being ordained by them, unless the ordination was performed very quickly, for it seems that the wife and children were baptized immediately after Elder Pentecost was. It seems to us that if the ordination Elder Pentecost had from the Primitive Baptists was good and valid, so would the baptism he had from them be good and valid. If Elder Pentecost had valid ordination by the Primitives, he also had valid baptism by them. If he had valid baptism by the Primitives, then the baptism he received from the Missionaries is not valid. In that case, he has exchanged a valid baptism for an invalid baptism- a baptism that is not valid. Get the pronunciation of that word, invalid, correct, please-not in-va-lid baptism, but invalid baptism. It is not even an in-va-lid baptism-it is equivalent to no baptism at all, for it is invalid. If Elder Pentecost is not satisfied with the old order of things, just as they were handed down to us by our fathers and grandfathers, then he has taken the right step-he should leave the Old Baptists alone in peace, and go where they already have the new means and measures that the world delights in, and that the churches of the world must have in order to live. We are sure he knows very well that the man for whom he was named-Elder S. F. Cayce-would have none of the new means and measures and doctrines of the Missionary Baptists. And if his parents would have taken in with such things as that, they would never have given him the name Cayce. Peace go with you, Brother Pentecost. C. H. C.

Call For Peace Meeting

---August 5, 1937

After we had the type all set for this issue of the paper and all made up in the pages and on the press ready to run, but just before starting the press, we received the following call, signed by Bethel Church, South College Street Church, and Richland Church, the three Primitive Baptist Churches in Nashville. Some time back we suggested that these three churches co-operate and join in the call for the proposed meeting. We are glad to get this from those churches. So we took the forms off the press, had this article put in type, and the paper made up again, and printed with this article in it. Now, please bear in mind that all the churches concerned may be represented in the proposed meeting by messengers. Any church desiring to do so may appoint any number of her members to represent her in the meeting. And we think that the churches should represent in the meeting. Also, please bear in mind that this meeting is not to make laws to govern the kingdom or to govern the churches. It is not proposed by us that any more is to be done in, and by, the meeting other than to submit recommendations whereby the troubles may be ironed out and eliminated. True, personal matters may be forgiven, and all who have indulged in such things may have the privilege of confessing their faults, which is right-" confess your faults, one to another." Personal wrongs should all be forgiven. But there are some things which this proposed meeting cannot adjust. All that they can do is to make recommendations as to how such matters may be adjusted. Some things have been done by churches, and the churches themselves will have to straighten out those matters, if they are straightened out. And it will be necessary for some things to be straightened out in order that perfect peace be fully restored. We are glad to see this move made, and an effort started to restore peace among the brethren in that section of the country-Tennessee and a part of Kentucky, where the peace of the churches and brethren has been disturbed. If not providentially prevented we will be at the meeting. May the Lord direct us all in wisdom's ways, and enable us to labor for the peace of Zion. We should work for peace, as well as pray for peace. Following is the call, as sent to us from the three churches. C. H. C.

PEACE MEETING

We, the undersigned Primitive Baptist Churches, of Nashville, Tennessee, herewith invite, as our guests, all Primitive Baptists, and especially the preaching brethren, who feel that they would like to see peace restored and all re-united again in one body, as we once were; who would like to attend the much talked of "peace meeting" through the columns of some of our Baptist papers, by private correspondence, and by face-to-face conversations among the brethren. Said meeting to be held in the Bethel Primitive Baptist Church house, 714 Gallatin Road, Nashville, Tenn., Friday, Saturday and fifth Sunday in August (August 27, 28, 29), 1937. Let all come in the right spirit-the Spirit of our heavenly Master-full of love and forgiveness for each other; and praying that the meeting might be one long to be remembered, in the way of estranged brethren being re-united in sweet love and fellowship; that it might be a great outpouring, of the spirit of love. Our Union Meeting

---August 5, 1937

Our union meeting-the union meeting of the South Arkansas Association-was held Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, July 16, 17, 18, with Friendship Church, El Dorado, Ark. It Was a good meeting, from start to finish. The preaching service was as follows: The introductory on Friday morning was preached by Elder C. M. Monk. The rule of the union is that the pastor of the church where the meeting is held preach the introductory. Elder T. L. Webb is the pastor of the church. But as Elder Monk could be at the meeting only one day, by request of Elder Webb it was agreed that Elder Monk preach the introductory. The Lord blessed him to preach a good discourse, which was both comforting and instructive. After the discourse the privileges of the church were extended, when two dear sisters came forward asking for a home in the church. They were joyfully received. In the afternoon Elder Black, from Texas, preached. Then at night Elder W. H. Lee was blessed to preach a good discourse. Saturday morning Elders W. J. Puckitt and John R. Harris preached to the people. The Lord blessed them with sweet liberty. Then an opportunity was given for any to present themselves who desired a home in the church, and two more dear sisters came forward wanting to enlist in the service of the Master. They were gladly received. Elder E. W. Hargett preached in the afternoon. At night the preaching was done by the writer. Sunday morning the writer went first, followed by Elder Webb. Then after lunch the ordinance of baptism was administered, the four sisters being baptized, with a brother who had united with the church some time before, and who had been prevented from being at the church for baptism on account of providential hindrance. It was a wonderful meeting-a union indeed. Not a discordant note was heard. The Lord manifested His presence, and smiled on the assembly at each service. May He have all the praise, for to Him it is due. "Behold, how good, and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The next union is to be held with Mount Paran Church. They are to set the time for the meeting. C. H. C.

Meeting at Cross Roads

---August 5, 1937

As has been announced in our columns, Cross Roads Church, near Henderson, Tenn., appointed a meeting to be held on July 7 and 8 as their fortieth anniversary, the church having been organized on July 7, 1897. We had no idea of attending the meeting, as we thought we could not go, though we desired to be present with them. But we were called to conduct the funeral service of Brother W. S. Baughan, as it had been his request, or his expressed desire, that we should conduct his funeral when he should pass away. The funeral service was held in the afternoon on July 7, the first day of the meeting, which was at eleven o'clock. Brother Baughan's membership was at that church. He was the last one of the charter members, and he was buried on the fortieth anniversary of the organization of the church. By request of many of the brethren we agreed to remain over and be with the church in their service on the 8th. Elder W. C. Davis is the pastor, and was present. It was a sweet meeting. The Lord's presence was sweetly manifested. Elder J. H. Phillips is buried there. We had the privilege of visiting and looking upon his grave-buried beside his wife. We felt sad, and could not refrain from shedding tears as we stood beside his resting place. Our old friends are crossing over the river, and we sometimes feel lonely and sad. May the Lord remember us all in mercy, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Call For Peace Meeting

---August 19, 1937

In our last issue we published the following call for a peace meeting to be held in Nashville, Tenn. The meeting is to be held with Bethel Church, but the call was made by the three churches in Nashville-Bethel, South College Street, and Richland. This is as it should be, we think. It shows and manifests that the three churches' are willing to co-operate in doing what is right that peace may be restored in that country. We trust that much good may be accomplished by the meeting. We trust that all the churches who are concerned in the matters that have been disturbing the peace of the brethren in that country will be represented in the meeting by messengers. Let the churches represent, from each "side." If all go there with prayful hearts, leaving personal grudges behind, and with willing hearts to do what the good Book teaches, no doubt much good will be accomplished. No matter if some have said hard things about us, let us remember what the Lord has said, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." Let us go there with willing minds to surrender, or give up, anything but the principles of truth and righteousness, and to be governed by the teaching of the Book-just to do and live as God has directed. The meeting is not to try to see how much wrong we can find; but try to map out, or suggest, what steps need to be taken in order that the brethren may all be brought together upon right principles. Let us lay aside all personal grudges and grudges, and try to labor for the peace of Zion. In our younger days the Baptists in that country were all together, and they should be that way now-and they can be, if all will try to do the right thing. May the Lord direct us all in the right way. If not providentially prevented we expect to be there, as we have been urgently requested to do. C. H. G. It is not necessary to insert the call again, or here in this place, as it is on another page in this book.

Our Church Papers

---August 19, 1937

The following article is copied from the Advocate and Messenger of April, 1937. We think the article is good and timely. Our people where we live know that we are always glad to have brethren in the ministry visit our churches in this section. And Brother Pittman is just with us in this matter, and he is also aware that we are agreed. We do not mean to intimate, by referring to this, or by saying this, that he is otherwise than as he stated in this article. But we do wish to indorse the article. Our readers are aware of the fact that The Primitive Baptist and the Advocate and Messenger are harmonious, because of the fact that the two papers have been offered in a club together for a number of years. We are not afraid for our subscribers to read the Advocate and Messenger. We are glad for them to do so. Then they can see for themselves that we are not the only one who contends for the principles set forth in The Primitive Baptist. If our readers would all labor together, as our ministers should all labor together, with an eye single to the unifying of the Lord's people, and to the upbuilding of the cause of the Master, perhaps our cause would be in better condition today. If any are doing otherwise, may the Lord touch their hearts, and enable them to see the error of their way. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

As I look back to my young days I feel that the church paper in my parents' home had an influence on me for good. I would sometimes read it, especially matters of an experimental nature. And when I was baptized my pastor advised me to subscribe for a Baptist paper, which I did, to my profit, comfort and instruction. I believe that our Baptist periodicals have generally been a blessing to the cause of truth and righteousness, and I wish every family would take at least one church paper. Sometimes our papers have published things hurtful to the cause, for we editors are very imperfect-we make mistakes. But pastors, deacons, and members make mistakes. And so do churches and associations. And yet all of us, if following the teaching of the Spirit, are striving to serve for the greatest good to the greatest number-striving to unify Primitive Baptists upon the fundamentals of the Scripture. If there be church papers among us that divide God's people, or that seek to keep them divided where divisions have occurred, then such papers are not teaching as Christ taught. If there be some editors who want their readers to read no other Baptist paper except their own, then they are narrow and selfish. All we editors, of course, make special efforts to build up our subscription-this is right and proper. But in doing this we should not want to hinder the growth and influence of other Baptist papers. Nor should we be afraid to publish the addresses of our correspondents for fear other editors might send them sample copies and secure their subscription. Personally, I have felt it right to publish the writer's address-unless there be some special reason for not doing so. I would be glad if the blessed truths about Jesus and the precious doctrine of salvation by grace could be scattered everywhere. And I also want my readers to read other Baptist papers except the one I publish. I want my churches to receive visits from and to hear other ministers preach besides their unworthy pastor. By doing this they have an opportunity to read better articles than I can write, and hear better sermons than I can preach. This will do them good and make them stronger and broader Baptists. And if I am not jealous I will rejoice in that which tends to strengthen and unite our people. But selfish pastors and editors among us-if there be any-will, by acting selfish and uncharitable, hinder brotherly love and weaken the tie of fellowship. I am very imperfect-my mistakes are many-but I do not want to be called a selfish or jealous Baptist. In my heart there is a burning desire to see Zion prosper and her broken walls built up, but how to perform that which is good I find not. I know that not long hence I shall lay down my pen for another to take up, and when that time comes I pray that it can be truthfully said that my little labors were performed unselfishly, though imperfectly. And I would delight to see all we editors of the nine Baptist periodicals published in this country laboring more in love to unify our people upon the plainly taught truths of the Scriptures and manifesting less interest in doubtful matters that have brought confusion and division. By walking uprightly, "speaking the truth in love," and writing in the spirit of brotherly kindness and Christian charity, our papers will wield a greater influence for good and manifest more glory to Him who has called us from nature's darkness into His marvelous light. R. H. P.

Will You, Please?

---August 19, 1937

For sometime we have been asking that obituaries be made as short as possible, but it seems that the writers of them forget about our request, or disregard it. Will you not please remember this request, and have mercy on your editor? It is very disagreeable to us to have to cut down on what you write in these obituaries, and leave out a lot of what you write. It is not at all pleasant for us to have to do this. Suppose you try to put yourself in our place, and try to imagine how you would feel if you were conducting the paper, and the space limited, and you have on hand enough good material to fill the paper for several months, and then folks send you a great long obituary, long enough to take up anywhere from one to three columns of space in the paper. And yet you have matter on hand that you cannot publish, on account of the space being limited, and matter that is of general interest to the cause any place where the paper might go. And notwithstanding this, some writer takes a lot of space in an obituary—a matter that cannot be for the upbuilding of the cause, but of special interest to only a few. How would you feel? When we thus take up so much space for some matter in which only a few of us can be specially interested, does it not look like it is selfishness on our part? Are we really treating the great majority of the readers right, or as we would wish to be done by, when we do this? We trust that the writers of these things will please remember these things in the future, and govern themselves accordingly. We know that these things can be made much shorter than many of them are. We know, too, that we feel like saying a lot of good things in such articles, but we can refrain from taking so much space. It is unnecessary to give the names and addresses of the surviving relatives. This simply takes up space and is of no comfort or instruction to the great majority of the readers. If we want to say so many good things about people, we should say them while the persons are living. Let us scatter more flowers along the pathway of the living. The good things you may say of us after we are gone will do us no good. Say more of your good things while we are yet living, and say less after we are gone. Do not keep back your good things to say after we are gone from this world. It is the living that need to have the good things said, and not the dead. May the Lord help us to be helpers one of another. And please remember that we are now giving fair warning that we will limit the space for obituaries. If you make them longer than three hundred words, we will have to leave out some of what you write. This is not to wound your feelings, or to wound the feelings of any who write; but we are compelled to make them shorter than a great many of them are. You can say all that is necessary in three hundred words, even if you cannot say all you would like to say. We know how you feel in regard to such matters; but we have to consider other matters as well as consider how the writer feels. Remember that we sometimes are called on to write obituaries, too; and for this reason we know the feelings of the writers. Will you now please consider these things, and make these matters short? C. H. C.

The Nashville Meeting

We should have had some account of this meeting in our columns before now; but after the meeting, which was on Friday, Saturday and fifth Sunday in August, we were filling some appointments, and have been at home very little since the meeting. There were forty-two ministers in attendance at the meeting. The names of all of them were enrolled as being present, without regard to where or how they had stood-without regard to their order or standing among the brotherhood. The object of the meeting was not to pass judgment on the order or standing of any minister or others who might be in attendance at the meeting. On Friday morning it was put upon the writer to preach the opening discourse in the meeting, which we tried to do, as best we could, with the ability the good Lord saw fit to give. After the opening discourse a committee was selected to frame recommendations to present to the meeting, whereby all matters causing the disturbances and the troubles which have lately existed in that part of the country might be adjusted, and the brethren and churches might be brought together, and fellowship restored. However, before the committee was selected, the meeting made choice of Elder H. P. Houk as moderator and Elder C. H. Cayce as clerk. Elder E. S. Frye was requested by Elder Houk to serve as assistant moderator and as moderator pro tern in the absence of Elder Houk from the room, as Elder Houk was appointed to serve on the committee. The brethren selected to serve on the committee were: Elders H. P. Houk, C. H. Cayce, J. A. Monsees, James Duncan, T. L. Webb, R. O. Raulston, Lee Hanks, John R. Harris, J. D. Shain, and W. A. Shutt, and Deacon G. P. Nail. The committee labored hard Friday and until afternoon Saturday. On Saturday afternoon they finished their work, and their recommendations were read in open meeting. Then all were given opportunity to ask any questions they desired to ask concerning what was embraced in the recommendations, and the questions were answered. A stenographer was employed to take the questions and answers, which are to be published with the recommendations. After the reading of the recommendations, the same were approved by-unanimous vote of all the Primitive Baptists present- and a large crowd was there. We offered to print the proceedings-the recommendations, with the questions and answers-in pamphlet form for free distribution among our people. A contribution was taken up to help pay the cost of the printing and distribution of the same. The actual cost will be around ten cents per copy. If any desire to help pay this cost, it will be appreciated; but they will be printed and distributed free to any who desire them. Please write and tell us at once how many you would like to have, so we may have some idea as to how many to print. You are not obligated to pay anything for the copies you want. This is left entirely with you. At this writing we have not received the stenographer's report. This delay is holding up the work of printing and sending out the report of the meeting. When the proceedings are printed and sent out, it will be expected that the churches involved will either adopt or reject the recommendations of the meeting, as presented by the committee and approved by those present at the meeting; and that they will straighten out and eliminate the irregularities, so that peace may be restored. There are some things which will have to be cleared up in order to have peace and in order that fellowship exist and abound among the brotherhood. There are some things which will always bring trouble, confusion and distress among our people. No investigation was made as to the troubles, or as to who was in the right, or who was in the wrong. Not a single witness was called. Not a single question was asked as to whether this or that thing had been done, or as to whether this or that condition existed. Some of the things mentioned in the recommendations by the committee were known by some of the members of the committee to have been done and to have existed. Hence no witness was examined, no investigation was entered into, for the simple reason that this was not a council meeting. Some of the brethren on the committee had been involved in the trouble, one way or another; and they simply unanimously agreed in the committee room as to what would bring about peace and restore fellowship, and how unity and fellowship may be maintained. It was a wonderful meeting. There was not a jar in the committee room. Everything was done harmoniously and by a unanimous voice there. We never served on a committee where things went more smoothly. Then when the time came for approval or non-approval of the recommendations as presented by the committee, the vote for approval was unanimous. Not a single vote was cast against approval. Then a song was sung and all engaged in shaking hands and embracing each other, while shouts of praise were heard and tears of joy were shed abundantly. We pray that much and lasting good may come of this meeting. May the Lord help us all to "behave ourselves in the house of God," and help us to labor for peace, and to strive for the things that make for peace. C. H. C.

We have been requested to give our views concerning the case of the woman brought to the Saviour, which instance is recorded in (John 8:1-11). We will not take space here to quote the language recorded concerning the case. Turn to your Bible and read it. We have heard this matter referred to as proof that persons guilty of adultery should be forgiven and retained as members of the church. If this does prove that, then will you please tell us what any person should be excluded from the church for? The matter of adultery is set forth in the Scriptures as the capital crime against the marriage vow and against the marriage bed, and is the only Scriptural ground upon which one may put away the companion and marry another. Note, here, the language of (John 8:4-5,6): "They say unto Him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act. Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou? This they said, tempting Him, that they might have to accuse Him." Observe that they said this tempting Him, "that they might have to accuse Him." The evident fact here is that they thought they had Him "cornered," so that no matter what He might say they would have Him entangled in His speech. Jesus had said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." -(Matthew 5:17-18). This being true, He was not to sit as a judge, to administer the law. If He should have said for them to do what the law said do, He would have been sitting as a judge, to pass sentence, and to administer the law; and this would have been a contradiction of his statement that He came to fulfill the law. If He should have said that He forgave the woman, that would have been to set the law aside, and not a fulfilling of the law. In either case, He would have been entangled in His speech; and this is just what those Pharisees and scribes thought He would have to do. But in this, as in all other instances when they tried to entangle Him, they were foiled in their purpose, and their efforts in that direction were a failure. Note that Jesus says, in (John 8:10-11), "Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more." In this He does not say that she is forgiven, and the law thereby set aside or dishonored and trampled under foot. Neither does He pass sentence, and thus sit as a judge. Thereby the scribes and Pharisees are thwarted in their purpose and design. The foregoing all being true, it is a twisting of the Scriptures to apply this as an example to justify the forgiveness of the sin of adultery by the church. No such lesson is taught in this circumstance, and to apply the matter that way is a flagrant misapplication of the Scriptures. Just as well make a misapplication of the commandments and exhortations in the Scriptures, and give them to the unregenerate and ungodly world, as the religious world does, as to make such an application of this case as is sometimes done. Let us remember to rightly divide the word of truth, and put a lesson where it belongs. After writing the above we had the impression that we had expressed our views on this matter once before in the columns of this paper, hence we looked that up. For the benefit of our readers we refer you to page 179 of Volume I of our Editorial Writings-or Selected Editorials, which was the title given to the first volume. That article was written and published in The Primitive Baptist of May 7, 1907. C. H. C.

Excuses

---November 4, 1937

We have been gone from home a lot during the past several weeks, about three months, and have had so much to attend to that we have not been able to write for our columns as we would like to do. Besides this, we are far behind in answering letters received. We ask that all be as patient as you can, and we will answer the letters as soon as we possibly can, and will also write some for the paper as soon as we possibly can. For several days we have not been well, but at this writing (Oct. 22) we are feeling some better than for the past few days, and hope to be able to fully carry our work on in a few more days. Remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

Corresponding Editor

In August, 1936, we visited the North District Association in Kentucky, where we were met by Elder J. H. Keaton, and who went with us into Ohio and then to his home, and then to the Indian Creek Association. While with him on the trip we heard him preach several times, and had the privilege and opportunity of talking with him, and exchanging views concerning matters that are of importance to our people and to the cause of the Master. Rather, we would say, that we had the opportunity of getting his views on matters of the faith and practice of the Primitive Baptists and in connection with the teachings of the Book. We also had the opportunity to learn something of his standing among the brethren in that country, as well as to learn something of his standing as a man. Hence, we requested that he make a trip west. This he agreed, the Lord willing, to do. So, we arranged a list of appointments for him, as our readers are aware; and we were with him on the entire trip. For several weeks we were with him and his family, and heard him preach almost every day during that time. It is with a great degree of satisfaction that we can say that we never heard him utter a single uncertain sound in the whole time we were privileged to be together. So, while he was here at our home, in our office, we asked him to let us place his name on our editorial staff. We had made no hint to him before that we would make such a suggestion. He seemingly hesitated for only a moment, and replied that we might do so if we felt that it would be for the good of the cause and would be no injury to the paper; We are thankful to have such men, as we esteem him to be, associated with us in the editorial work on The Primitive Baptist. If we know our heart, our desire, in continuing the publication of the paper, is to comfort and to benefit the Lord's humble poor, and to defend the truth as it is in Jesus our Lord, and for the glory and honor of heaven's King. This was the desire of our sainted father when he began the publication of this paper, and was so until he laid down his pen in death, when the Master called him up higher. He died in the harness, with his face toward Jerusalem. We trust that by the grace of God we may do the same. We feel that no greater honor could be bestowed upon us than that we might die in the Lord's service, and in the service of His poor and afflicted people. The reproach of Christ is greater riches than all the treasures of this poor world. We are glad to have the name of Elder J. H. Keaton, 364 Brandon Road, Huntington, W. Va., added to our list of corresponding editors. May the Lord help us all to labor together for the advancement of the cause of the Master, and for the unifying and building up of the Lord's dear children. May we all endeavor to extend the circulation of the paper, for these commendable ends, and help us to fill the pages of the paper with such matter as will have a tendency to accomplish these things, and that we may never sow discord among brethren. Will the readers all pray for us, to this end? Elsewhere in this paper will be found an article from Elder Keaton, under the heading "Salutatory." May the Lord bless the dear brother, together with his family, as well as the brethren and churches where he labors, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Hens Furnish Church

---November 18, 1937

Sharon Church, near Culloden, has three beautiful plush chairs and stand which cost $95. The ladies of the church took all the eggs laid on the meeting days and paid for this furniture. This was a great work and the hens felt better, we bet. - Banner Herald, November, 1937. Anybody taken the bet, yet? How much did you bet? Who won? Did you find out, for sure, that the hens felt better? Were they "talking hens," or were they "cackling hens?" Who sold the eggs? Were they fertile, or infertile, when sold? Were they sold as pure and sure fresh eggs? If they were fertile eggs, what would they hatch? Were any of them goose eggs? We ask this question because the article does not say they sold only chicken or hen eggs. Some of them might have been some other kind of eggs, for all we know. We have read in the Bible something about cockatrice eggs. Did they sell some of that sort? C. H. C.

---November 18, 1937

For some time we have been urgently requested to visit the churches in some parts of Tennessee, especially in some of the middle and western portions of the state. We have felt that it was hardly prudent for us to make any extended trip just then; but now we are ready to visit the churches in those sections, the Lord willing, as the brethren may feel would be advisable, and where they feel some good might be accomplished by us going among them. So the brethren may write us concerning the matter, and make their suggestions as to the time they may think best for us to make such a trip, and also make their suggestions as to the places they may especially desire us to visit. Please remember and bear in mind that we are not as strong as we once were, and that it is not prudent for us to try to preach more than once a day, as a rule; and also that we might not hold out, physically, on too long a trip. Anyway, write us your suggestions, and pray the Lord that our labors might be blessed of Him to the good of the cause and His glory, if He should spare us to make the trip. C. H. C.

Advice and Advise

---December 2, 1937

There is quite a difference between giving advice and giving a command. To command is to direct authoritatively; to bid; order; charge; enjoin. The giving of a command carries with it the idea of having authority to enforce the thing commanded. The one who gives a command is one in authority. Advice carries no such thought or idea. Advice means a view or consideration of a thing; hence, opinion; judgment. An opinion recommended or offered as worthy to be followed; counsel. To advise is to give advice to; to offer an opinion to as worthy or expedient to be followed; to counsel; warn. For one to give or to offer advice does not signify that the one so doing is above or superior to the one to whom the advice is given. But the giving of a command does signify that the one giving the command is over or above the one to whom the command is given. If one can really give a command, in order that the command be effectual, or worth while, he must have the power or authority to enforce the command. No such thing as that is implied in giving of advice. One to whom advice is given is under no obligation to heed the advice, or to do as advised. The matter of doing as advised is optional with the one to whom the advice is given. The doing of the thing advised is left to the option, or will, of the one so advised. The inferior may advise the superior; or one may advise one who is his equal. But the superior commands the inferior. The inferior does not command the superior. Synonyms for advice are: Opinion, recommendation, instruction, suggestion, exhortation, admonition. Hence, if one recommends that a certain thing, or certain things, be done, he simply advises that. He gives that as his advice. But he has no authority to enforce the same. He can only advise or recommend, unless he is one in authority to enforce the thing proposed or commanded. For instance: In the peace meeting at Nashville we put forth some recommendations; things we recommended to be done and to be observed and followed. We had no right or authority to command that those things be done, nor any authority to enforce any of them. The churches are free to adopt or to reject the recommendations. The churches may adopt them, and they have the power and authority from God's Word to enforce them. All that meeting could do was to recommend or to advise certain things to be done. But the churches are to execute the laws which Christ gave to govern in His church or kingdom. Even the church does not have the right or authority to make laws. Jesus was the sole and only Lawgiver in Zion. He gave all the laws, rules and regulations to govern in His kingdom. He delivered all the laws and ordinances to His apostles as the judges in His kingdom. They sat as judges in that kingdom; and that is the Supreme Court. They, as the supreme judges, passed on all the laws, and told how to observe and how to execute them; and they delivered them all to the church for keeping. So the church is the executive body. They are to execute the laws which Christ gave, and they are to do that according to the direction and instruction of the Supreme Court. For them to do otherwise is for them to simply do that which is unconstitutional and contrary to the instruction of the Supreme Court. But the Lord never gave a law that is unconstitutional. Our law making bodies, in temporal affairs, sometimes pass a law that is unconstitutional; but our Lawgiver in Zion never did a thing of that sort. And those who are to execute the laws may do things that are contrary to the law, and contrary to the ruling of the Supreme Court. God's ministers should study the constitution and laws which our Lord has given, so that they may be able to rightly advise the Lord's children how to live, and how to observe the laws which Christ gave. They should be able to advise the church as to how those laws should be observed, or executed, or obeyed, as the case may be. The minister is not the master. He is a servant-if he is a true minister of the gospel. He cannot enforce a single law in the kingdom; but he can advise, or recommend, in regard to the observing or enforcing those laws. To you ministers, who read this, we would put this question: Have you not, from time to time, advised the churches you were serving as to how they should do certain things? Have you not frequently advised them as to whether they should do certain things, or should not do them? In the giving of such advice, did you do so with the idea that you were above the church, or that the church belonged to you? Certainly not. If you did, we will say, kindly, though bluntly, that you are not a true servant. If you are, you have forgotten your station. "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants, for Jesus' sake," says Paul. The true gospel minister is truly a servant; yet he is to advise, teach, and instruct the churches and the Lord's children as to how they should live here in the world. He is an overseer. As such, he is to set the right example as to how one should live as becometh the Lord's children. He should live right, himself. "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ," says Paul. He is to be an ensample to the flock. He should set the example as to how to live. In (II Corinthians 8:10) the apostle says, "And herein I give my advice." In this instance he chose not to speak as with the authority which he had as an apostle or judge in the kingdom; but to speak by way of advice. In thus writing concerning the matter under consideration, the church doing as advised shows forth a willingness and cheerfulness and gladness to do the thing that was commendable. Thus it was a matter of choice and willingness, freely done on their part. If the apostle chose to deliver the teaching here as a matter of advice, rather than as one of authority, which it seems that he did, then he has set an example that the minister may advise. But no other ministers have ever been appointed as judges in the Lord's kingdom. The apostles constituted the one and only Supreme Court. But they did set examples for the true ministers to follow in the succeeding ages. We would do well to endeavor to follow the examples set and left on record for us. May the Lord help us so to do. C. H. C.

Close of Volume 52

According to the custom which has been practiced since the close of the first volume of The Primitive Baptist, it is now time for us to write another article on the close of the present volume-Volume lii. At this juncture we are reminded of the inquiry of the Prophet Isaiah, {(0:6) (Isaiah 40:6)} "What shall I cry?" The pondering of our heart for several hours has been, "What shall we say? How can we write another article as a close of the volume?" There are many and various and sundry things which might be said, but they would not all be appropriate for an article of the sort this is supposed to be. So, "What shall I cry?" was the question asked by the old prophet of God. Many a time when it falls to the lot of the poor servant of God to speak in the name of the Master he feels to be blank-feels that he has nothing in the world to say; and his earnest inquiry is, "What shall I cry?" Many times the editor is in the same condition in regard to writing. But the minister must make the effort. The people expect him to say something. So he must go forward, no matter how "empty" he may feel to be. So, the readers expect the editor to say something. He must make the effort. His inquiry may be, "What shall we say?" But the time is up; he cannot wait longer. He must write something-and he must write it now. The Lord told His prophet what to cry. He was not left to guess at what to say. Guess work may have been as good in that day as at present. But guessing has never been any benefit to Israel in any age of the world. But will the Lord tell us what to say? There is an abundance of what to say given us in the Book; but some things set forth therein may not be exactly appropriate to write in an article for the close of the volume of a paper. There must be some truth that is appropriate for such an occasion. But, can we think of it? Will the Lord give us a mind on the things that may be appropriate? "Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." -((Job 14:1) (Job 14:1-2). Do we realize how true this is? We are swift passengers from time to eternity. The time and place that now knows us will soon know us no more. But we are one year nearer to the end of our earthly trials and conflicts than we were a year ago. We have had some trials during the year past, as in every year since we can remember. But we have also had some seasons of rejoicing. We have seen and heard many of the Lord's little children made happy and to rejoice in the Lord along during the past year. We have seen some who had been at war possessed with a spirit of peace, and desiring to see an end of unholy war. This has been delightful to us. "Behold, how good, and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." We would be glad if we could live to see all true Old Baptists living together in peace and union and sweet fellowship; but we do not expect to see that. If such persecutions as the Lord's people have had to endure in some of the ages of the past should come upon them now, no doubt they would thereby be driven closer together. That time may come, whether we live to see it or not-and it may come sooner than some expect. "History repeats itself," is an old saying, which is very true. "That which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past." -((Ecclesiastes 3:15). If "that which is to be hath already been," then that which hath already been is to be again. "History repeats itself." The Lord's people have been persecuted in the past, and what hath been is to be again. It will come, whether we believe it or not. The Lord has suffered His people to be persecuted in days past, often as a chastisement and punishment for their sins and rebellion, and the forsaking of His laws and service. He will do the same again. He does not change. For our own good, it would be better for us to do that changing which needs to be done, and to forsake our own ways, and seek to serve the Lord. "Seek ye the Lord, while He may be found," is the instruction which has been given. Let us try to manifest our love for each other more than we have in the past. Let us forsake the world, and the things of the world, and "humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, and He will lift us up." May He forgive our follies of the past, and help us to walk humbly and circumspectly before Him. Farewell until our issue of January 6, 1938, if the Lord lets us live until then. Remember us in your prayers. May the Lord bless you. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 53

---January 6, 1938

We are now entering into the fifty-third volume of The Primitive Baptist. We do not feel to write much in the way of an introduction to this volume. We do not know what to say, nor how to say it. The best we know, just at this moment, is to pledge ourselves, with all our strength and energy, to endeavor, the very best we can, to earnestly contend for the principles for which this paper has stood since the first issue was printed on the first of January, 1886. That is, we pledge ourselves to this, if the good Lord sees fit to spare us to live, and to bless us with a sane mind. Some of these days we will write our last article—we will lay our pen aside some day. We do not know any more now about how long the Lord will see fit to spare us than we knew a year ago. But for some purpose, best known to Himself, He has spared us to begin the publication of another volume of The Primitive Baptist. Will you pray the Lord to enable us to continue to contend earnestly for the faith that was once delivered to the saints? C. H. C.

Questions on Order

---January 6, 1938

We have received the following questions, with the request that we answer them through The Primitive Baptist:

1. Is it Baptist order and custom for a sister church to send a committee to a sister church without first giving legal notice of their intentions?
2. Is it order for said committee to ask the sister church to grant letters of dismissal, saying that they will receive said members if they see fit to grant them letters, when said members refuse to give a reasonable excuse for wanting letters? In case the letters are not granted, and the church in question would say that they felt that the church that refused to grant the letter did not have fellowship for their church, then go and receive these members by relation, when the church of their present membership is still in existence and holding regular meetings and transacting business in a regular way, would the church that received such members be in order?

3. Is it Baptist order and custom for a church to receive members by relation who have been excluded, without them first being restored to the church that excluded them? We will try to answer the questions, as best as we can, and as we understand them, by number. In answer to question one will say that it depends upon what the committee is sent for. If a committee is sent by one church to bestow labor upon a sister church, it seems to us that the committee should bear a letter from their church, with the complaint laid out in the letter. In answer to question two will say that we do not understand why a committee would be sent to a sister church asking that sister church to grant letters of dismissal to one or more of her members, unless it be to certify to the church that the member has been living right, when the church of their membership might be ignorant of the way they have been living, and therefore not be sure that the member is entitled to a letter. Remember that a church letter of dismissal says that the bearer is a member in full fellowship and good standing until joined to another church of the same faith and order. If the committee is not for that purpose, we do not see the propriety of a committee. A person asking for a letter of dismissal should have good reason for asking for it, and should be willing to give the reason. In fact, when the letter is given for the right purpose and in the right way, the person asking for the letter usually states the reason why the letter is asked for. If the person is not willing to do that, it looks like there is something wrong, on the very face of things. Church matters should be dealt with openly and frankly. To receive a member by relation from a church where that church has not granted a letter of dismissal is to treat the sister church with contempt. In our way of looking at things, it is a gross disorderly act. It denies that the sister church has the right to attend to her own business, or to attend to her own affairs. It savors of the assumption of authority by one church over another. In answer to question three will say that we have repeatedly stated our opinion in regard to the receiving of persons by relation who were excluded from another orderly Old Baptist Church. It is gross disorder. It denies that a sister church has the right to discipline her own members. It is destructive to every law and principle of discipline by the church. When such a thing is done, then the church which excludes the person is forced to either fellowship the person in a sister church that she could not fellowship in her own body, or else fellowship between the two sister churches is broken and destroyed. Where an account is charged against a person is the only place on earth to get the account cancelled, or squared. If a concern in Chicago has us charged with a thing, whether the charge is just or unjust, that is the only place to get the books square. No other concern in the whole world can square that account, other than the concern who has the charge against us. Until our people recognize this truth and conduct themselves accordingly, there will be trouble and confusion and discord between sister churches, and fellowship between them will continue to be broken and destroyed. Back With Us

In another place in this paper will be seen an article headed, "Salutatory," by Elder H. P. Houk, of Gurley, Ala. We are glad to have him again associated with us on the editorial staff. Elder Houk is a man who is as "sound as a dollar," and is true to the principles for which the Old Baptists have stood all through the ages. We are sure that he can be depended upon to stand for the things that are true and right. We are glad to place his name on the staff again, and we hope he "will do better this time." We are glad to have such men with us as we have on our staff of corresponding editors. We firmly believe that each one of them is a true Old Baptist, and they have no "time" for any of the inventions of men in the affairs of religion. May the Lord bless them, and bless their labors in the kingdom to the good of the cause and to the comfort of His people and the glory of His name. C. H. C.

Softshell Stung

---January 6, 1938

In our issue of February 20, 1936, we paid some attention to an article written by one Rev. Parson E. C. Gillentine, of Laurel, Miss., which he had published in the Baptist and Commoner, of Little Rock, in which he had tried to make it appear that the early Baptists of Mississippi were of the modern sort, Missionary so-called Baptists. We showed from reliable and authentic history that those early Baptists did not advocate what these modern Pharisaical Softshells advocate. Our article stung the Hon. Rt. Rev. Parson Gillentine, so he wrote another article calling it an "Open Letter to the Editor of The Primitive Baptist." But in his so-called open letter he does not even pretend to answer what we said or what we proved from reliable history. Instead of that he vents his spleen on the doctrine of personal and unconditional election, and asks a lot of questions concerning the same, besides false statements and misrepresentations of the teaching of the Primitive Baptists. But suppose that doctrine is not the truth? What then? Does that prove that those early Baptists of Mississippi were the Bogard and Gillentine sort of Baptists? No; not on your life. Here is what those early Mississippi Baptists said they believed: "We believe in the everlasting love of God to His people; in the eternal unconditional election of a definite number of the human family to grace and glory." This is the very doctrine which Gillentine, in his "open letter," rants against. That doctrine was believed by those early Mississippi Baptists. It is the very doctrine these modern Softshell hypocrites do not believe; and it makes them mad and gives them the jitters every time they come in contact with it. Poor fellows. No sort of bluster about what you "are doing for the Lord" can put you in line with those early Mississippi Baptists. You fellows do not preach the gospel, anyhow. We doubt if you would know what the gospel is, even if you should meet it in the road labeled in box-car letters. Poor little Gille. C. H. C.

Things Appreciated

---January 6, 1938

We have received quite a number of holiday remembrances, for which we are thankful. We cannot write a personal acknowledgment to each one who sent us these kind remembrances, with their assurances of Christian love and fellowship, and we wish each one of you to accept this as a personal note assuring you that these things are valued more than we are able to tell you. Besides these things, we receive, from time to time, from dear brethren and sisters, a few words of appreciation of our efforts and labors in the cause of the Master, many of which we do not deem prudent to put in the paper, for good and sufficient reasons, so it seems to us. But we do appreciate the same more than we have words to tell. They help us and encourage us to press on in the Lord's service, and in service to His dear children. We feel unworthy of so many expressions of love and appreciation and approval; but we appreciate the same. May the Lord bless each one of you who have thus spoken or written a good word of encouragement to us. They have been as a drink of cool water to our thirsty soul. If we are truly a servant of the Lord, not one of you shall lose your reward. We cannot reward you, but the God we try to serve can, and will. May His richest blessings rest upon you, is our humble prayer. And, please do not forget that we are poor and needy and need your prayers. C. H. C.

Genesis 6:2 Remarks To Reinert Varhang

---January 6, 1938

(Genesis 6:2) refers to the sons of God taking the daughters of men for wives. They married the daughters of men. This language is symbolic. The sons of God were children of God. The daughters of men were the inventions of men. The Lord's children forsook the true service of God and engaged in the practice of the doctrines and commandments of men. That is what many are doing in this present age of the world. Destruction came upon them then on account of their wickedness; and destruction will come again for the same thing. We will try to write a little further on the matter when time and opportunity will permit. You will find a little hint on that matter on page 387 of Selected Editorials. C. H. C.

Changed Over

We see that "Dr. Bogard" has quit the Baptist and Commoner and is now connected with the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight, as editor of that paper, which has lately been moved from Tennessee to Arkansas; but the former Tennessee editors are still retained on the editorial staff. It seems that the reason "Dr. Blowhard" quit the Commoner was because he could not very well have his way about some things. It seems that the Rev. Dr. has to be the "big boss" of everything he has anything to do with. Rev. Allen Hill Autry charged that the reason why Bogard quit the Convention was because he could not boss the Convention. We note these short statements: "But she and I do not agree on what the policy of the paper should be and since the paper was not my property I was compelled to submit to much that I did not like." There; that's "the rub;" just did not like the idea of submitting; no, sir; I must be the "ramrod," the "whole cheese;" I must have the say-so about the policy of the paper, and what does or does not go into its columns. Hence: "There was just one way out and that was to walk out." So, out the Rev. Bogard walked. That's the way it seems to have been in regard to the Arkansas Baptist State Convention, too, several years ago, and so, out he walked. C. H. C.

Money Disappears

A few years ago these anti-Board Missionaries were howling loud and long about how the Convention folks were extravagant, how they squandered "the Lord's money," how their expenses were high, and so forth, and so on. We thought then, and said so more than once, that it seemed to us just a question as to who handled the cash. So, now it seems that somebody besides Convention folks have been allowing some cash to "get away" somehow. On page 3 of the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight of December 10, 1937, we find an article under the heading of "A Page of Cold Facts," over the signature of Ben M. Bogard. In said article, under "Fact Numbers 1" we see this language: Why has a debt accumulated-steadily accumulated at the rate of more than TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS A MONTH since March? What has become of the THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS a quarter that came in over and above enough to pay the printer? Where does the money go? I do not say that anybody is stealing the money, but I do say somebody KNOWS where the money goes. There now! How could you intimate, "dear brother," that these honest (?) soul-savers could possibly do such a thing as to squander the Lord's money? Or, that they could possibly know what has become of the money? Don't you know, "dear brother," that they are not wanting money? Don't you know, "good brother," that they are "belly-aching" for the salvation of souls, and that filthy lucre has no charms for them? Precious, "good brother," calm down, now, and do not be so ugly as to put in your good soul-saving paper such a veiled intimation that your partners in the soul-saving business would do such a thing as to steal the Lord's money out of His soul-saving business. Under "Fact Number 7" we see this statement: It is a cold fact, and this fact is so very cold that it may blister. We have been abusing the Southern Baptist Convention for using so much money for expenses, so much overhead expenses, and we have done right when we abused them for this. But it IS A COLD FACT that the Convention only uses NINE PER CENT to cover the expenses while the Texarkana office used OVER FIFTY PER CENT for expenses! Here this fellow admits that the Convention folks carry on "the Lord's business" at the small cost of only nine per cent, and yet that they "howled" about the high cost. Well, it just appears to us that a cost of only nine per cent for the expense of carrying on a business is a mighty low cost. We believe the average cost of doing business is much higher than that. But, now the "Big Boss" admits that the cost of their machine at Texarkana has amounted to fifty per cent for expenses! It seems to us that for the sake of economy you folks had better go back home to the Convention, if for no other reason. You young fellows thought (?), perhaps, you had found a new way to carry on that monstrous work of soul-saving, a much more economical way, than the inventors had found and worked out, but you babies did not know as much, perhaps, as you thought (?) you knew.

Under "Fact Number 9" we find this statement:-----told Brother-----, a prominent member of the Malvern church, that money coming to that Texarkana office was FIRST USED to pay the ones who worked in the office and what was left went to the missionaries. Well, of course. How can a business be carried on unless the expenses are paid? That is always the first thing that has to be taken care of- the expenses. How on earth are you going to get an airplane to sail to heaven to carry passengers into glory, unless the gas bill is paid first? Of course, it makes not so much difference what the money is contributed for, the expense of the business must come out of the contributions, and "Jones, he pays the freight." This whole modern mission business is a great big humbug, and was hatched as one of the greatest money making machines of modern times. They beg money under the pretense of saving souls; but the Lord has not turned His work of salvation over to these modern money hunters. Nor has the Lord ever been a partner in their business. C. H. C.

Cheap Salvation

---January 20, 1938

We see in the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight, according to the report made by the Reverend Dr. Blowhard that his "Missionary Baptist Institute" is doing a most wonderful work. He evidently has a most wonderful soul-saving machine over there in Little Rock. It seems to us that they might have all the folks saved in our capital city some of these days-unless they are saving "the same old sixty" over again from time to time. And it seems that they sure do have the "cost of production" down to "rock bottom." The "big boss" says: "We have figured up the cost of this work. It is amazing, but true, that the average cost of the work is one dollar and twenty-five cents ($1.25) for each soul that has been saved." That is truly amazing! Gee, that sure is cheap salvation! Wonder how they did manage to get the article down so cheap! That sounds to us like it is too cheap to be a true and genuine article. We are afraid of that stuff. It surely must be a counterfeit. No genuine article of salvation has ever been so cheap in America, that we have ever heard of before. We have read in some of their literature that it cost only one cent to evangelize a heathen-but that is a long way off; and we could not all of us go over there to see if they were dispensing the genuine article or a counterfeit. However, we never did believe they were dispensing the genuine article over there, for the simple reason that we never caught them dispensing the genuine article here. We have never believed that it has been committed to them to dispense it. We have never believed that these fellows had anything to do with the matter of dispensing eternal salvation to the souls of men and women. But, if you will just hand over your cash to this "institute," they will in a short time have the millennium ushered in. The Rev. Dr. Bogard handles the cash. C. H. C.

Meddlers and Busybodies

---February 3, 1938

That there have been meddlers and busybodies along the line there can be no doubt. In days of old there were some of such characters, and they caused others to have trouble, and brought trouble upon themselves. To meddle is "to interest, engage, or concern one's self unnecessarily or impertinently; to interfere; to interpose or participate interferingly, or busy one's self improperly with another's affairs." To "meddle (with or in) is to concern one's self officiously or impertinently with another's affairs." A meddler is "one who meddles; one who interferes, or busies himself with things in which he has no concern; an officious person; a busybody." A busybody is "one officious in the affairs of others; a meddling person." Here we have a definition of what a meddler is, and what it is to meddle, and as to what a busybody is. These are ugly things, and are sure trouble breeders. Solomon says, "He that goeth about as a talebearer revealeth secrets; therefore meddle not with him that flattereth with his lips." -((0:19) (Proverbs 20:19). To flatter is an "act of pleasing by artful commendation or compliments; false, insincere, or excessive praise." Hence, a flatterer is one who practices deception. He will praise you to your face, but in his heart he does not mean what he says. He is a deceiver. Better not meddle with one who is of that sort. He will sure get you into trouble, sooner or later, one way or another. He will not do to depend on. Better" let him alone." It is sure to the best interest of one to not meddle with one of that sort. A talebearer is" one who officiously or maliciously spreads gossip, scandal," etc. Gossip is" the tattle or conversation of a gossip; idle talk; groundless rumor." A talebearer will sure spread trouble, if he does not make it. For one's own good, he had better not meddle with a talebearer. It would be better for one to" mind his own business," and let the talebearer alone. To meddle with matters not our own will sure bring trouble upon us, as well as cause trouble among others. We would suppose that people know more about their own business than other people do. If other folks know more about how to manage and attend to their own business than we do, suppose we meddle with their affairs, and try to tell them how to run their business? That would certainly not look very well in us. Sooner or later such a course would get us into trouble. It would cause others to have a poor opinion of us, to say the least of it. If there is trouble in a community, and we go into that community, it is better for us, as well as better for the community, that we let that trouble alone. If we meddle with it, we get ourselves into trouble with some of them, or perhaps all of them. If we meddle with it, we only make bad matters worse. It might not be so hard for those concerned to get matters adjusted, and get the trouble settled, if we do not meddle with it. They understand it better than we do. To be a meddler, then, is to be a maker of trouble, or to be a stirrer up of trouble. It is to be a busybody. The Apostle Peter puts a busybody in a very ugly class. He says, "But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters." -((Pet 4:15) (I Peter 4:15). What a pity that all people do not try to attend to their own business, and let the business of other folks alone. When one puts in one-half his time attending to his own business, and puts in the other half letting the business of other folks alone, he will not cause trouble as a meddler or as a busybody, nor will he have to suffer as a busybody. This does not at all say that one church may have what she pleases, no matter what it is, and no other church has the right to object. What is detrimental to the cause is something which concerns any church, and she has a right to object to it. But it does not give her a right to interfere with the rights of sister churches. Nor does this give an individual a right to meddle with the affairs of the church, or with matters that the church is to attend to. No individual has the right to go from his own home and endeavor to regulate the affairs of others. Let us learn to "behave ourselves" in the house of God. C. H. C.

Mississippi Baptist History

---February 17, 1938

In the Baptist and Commoner of July 31, 1937, the Rev. Dr. Ben M. Blowhard gives some account of a trip he made in Mississippi and Louisiana. In this he refers to an association which he calls the Mississippi Association, and says that it was organized in the year 1806, or that certain churches associated together in that year, forming that association. In his article he says: "The old Mississippi Association was always just an old-fashioned Missionary Baptist Association and many of the churches have remained the same until this day." Ah! they have remained the same, have they? Here is Article 4 of the Articles of Faith upon which the old Mississippi Association was constituted: "We believe in the everlasting love of God to His people; in the eternal unconditional election of a definite number of the human family to grace and glory." Do your churches have such an article as that now? Please answer, Doctor. Number 6 of their Articles of Faith says: "We believe all those who were chosen in Christ, before the foundation of the world, are in time effectually called, regenerated, converted and sanctified; and are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation." Do your people have that in their faith now, Doctor? Do you, and do they, believe the teaching and sentiment of that article, Doctor? Number 7 of their Articles of Faith says: "We believe there is one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus, who by the satisfaction He made to law and justice, in becoming an offering for sin, hath by His most precious blood redeemed the elect from under the curse of the law, that they might be holy and without blame before Him in love." Doctor, do you and your people believe and teach the doctrine embraced in that article of faith of those old Mississippi Baptists? Doctor, do you and your people believe that God did elect a definite number of the human family to grace and glory? Do you believe and teach that the elect were chosen in Christ before the ages of time began? and that they were a definite number of the human family? Do you believe that the elect, those thus chosen, are in time effectually called and regenerated in time? Do you believe that Christ redeemed the elect from under the curse of the law? Do you and your people, Doctor, really believe that Christ redeemed anybody from under the curse of the law? Or, do you believe that He only died to give every person of Adam's race a chance to be saved? Say, Doctor, do you and your people believe what those old Mississippi Baptists said they believed? Doctor, did you know what these old Mississippi Baptists said they believed? If you did not know, then why would you try to make it appear to your readers that you did know, by making the claim that you were just like them? If you did know what they said they believed, then why would you try to make it appear that you are in line with them, and that you are the same, seeing your faith and teaching is not what they believed and taught, and you did know it? Which horn of the dilemma will you take, Doctor? You will just keep quiet, will you not, Doctor? We get our information as to the date the Mississippi Association was organized, which was in July, 1807, from page 77 of Griffin's History of the Mississippi Baptists. We quote from their Articles of Faith from the same page of the same book. In 1810 this query was sent to the association, which may be found on page 86 of the same book, with their answer: "Is the washing the saints' feet a Christian duty? Answered in the affirmative." How would you answer that query today, Doctor? You are not like those Mississippi Baptists, are you, Doctor? From page 90 we give this extract from a circular letter they put forth in 1811: "Brethren, we are obliged to believe, that inasmuch as God sent His Son into the world to save His people from their sins, that He has a people whom He designs to save. Now, if any of those whom God designs to save should be finally lost, He must either change His mind, or else He has not power to accomplish His designs- the supposition of which we consider blasphemy." Doctor, you and your Softshell brood could not digest such doctrine as that, could you? On page 101 we find the following question put to the association from one of the churches, and their answer: "Should a brother be held in fellowship, who prefers the rights and privileges of the Masonic Lodge to the communion of his church? Answer-No." Say, Doctor, those Old Mississippi Baptists came very near saying you should not be held in fellowship, did they not? How about you and your folks saying that, what they did then, Doctor? They said that in 1818, Doctor. Are you like them now, Doctor? Say, Doctor, who was editor of the Baptist Flag in November, 1906? On page 4 of that paper of November 29, 1906, in the department conducted by J. K. P. Williams, of Sherman, Texas, over the signature of T. J. Humble, we find the following language: In "Paxton's History of Louisiana Baptists," "I find the following articles:" We believe in the everlasting love of God to His people; in the eternal unconditional election of a definite number of the human family, to grace and glory," which was adopted by the first association organized in Louisiana, which was in the year 1818, which is No. 4, and the following is No. 6:" We believe that all those who were chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, are in time effectually called, regenerated, converted and sanctified, and are kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation." The reader will please note carefully that these are the same as the Articles of Faith of the old Mississippi Association. Evidently they copied the articles from that association, and were originally of that old body. But let us read from the pen of T. J. Humble: These articles of faith were rejected in the year 1845, and after the year 1850, there was not a Missionary church or association to be found in Louisiana having such articles of faith, and it seems to me that if there was nothing wrong about them, they would have been continued, and to contend for the accepting of the Primitive Baptist baptism is equivalent to charging an error of great magnitude against God's children for their action of the age, which I cannot be a party to. Get the idea, please. The Missionaries at that time were having a war among themselves on account of some preachers going over from our folks to the Missionaries, and who were taken in by them on the baptism administered by the Primitive Baptists. Humble was opposed to that. He did not believe the Primitive Baptists were right in their teaching, and did believe the Missionaries did right in changing their articles of faith, which he openly avows was done. Why? Because they did not believe the doctrine contained in them. Yet, this man Blowhard has the brass to claim before his readers that they are the same people. They are no more like those old Mississippi Baptists than a skunk is like an apple blossom. C. H. C.

A Stunner

We received the following letter a few weeks ago, which we copy verbatim, punctatim literatim,-word for word, punctuation for punctuation, letter for letter: Nov. 15 1937. Eld. C. H. Cayse. Thornton Ark. Dear Sir. Referring to an article in your paper that you call The Primitive Baptist of date of July 15 1937. in which you state that you do not care to spend time with Griffin in your paper as his papers will not carry your articles, and you further state that you challenged our people twenty years agoe and they has never been withdrawn. I am utterly surprised at this statement from you in writings or otherwise, as you well know that I challenged you to your face and in writings and that I have witnesses to the oral Challenge and I have Registered return receipts showing that you received the challenge through the mail, and I have your corospondance and copies of mine where you accepted my challenge and agreed to correspond so as to arrange the nessary propositions, you also ask that I secure the endorsement of one or more of my Churches and I sent that And have a return receipt, and have return receipts showing that it has been impossable to hear from you on the subject since that time. Now there is no need for you to be hurting to investigate our differences and publishing such statements in your paper as I am ready to accommodate you the Lord being my strength, also you will not have to depend on our papers to publish it I will publish it in book form or rather I should have said we will publish it for I know you would want it published, now you may carry an article in your paper correcting your statement and publish my letter and agree to debate the subject or shut up on the subject which you have already done only through your paper. Now Eld Cayce I don't want to be rude but you know that what I have written you is so and I can prove it. If you don't want to debate our differences that is alright but don't try to make it appear that we are all afraid to meet your great Theology neither are we afraid to meet you though you are considered the great leader among your people, it seems that you would come on out and not be forever challenging some one, the Philistine Giant He finally did fight so for I have more respect for him than I have for you due to the fact that all you have done is challenge and have failed to live up to it. Hoping to hear from you soon and that you may be ready to make good your long boasted challenge I am your friend. R. W. Rhodes. We have not written the gentleman privately. We honestly believe that notoriety, or publicity, is what he really wants; so we gratify him that much this time, by publishing his wonderful (?) effusion just as he wrote it, and just as we have it on file. Suppose you throw away enough time to read the blustery effusion again. See how he "butchers the King's English;" but yet he blows about wanting to debate, and the same to be published in book form to palm off on the public! Now, would we not have a book filled with wonderful language-a part of it, at least. Isn't the spelling, punctuation, and capitalization wonderful! These fellows must have a dictionary and a grammar all their own! The writer says he challenged us. Yes. But he sent propositions that would require a simpleton to accept, especially if the debate is to be published. We sent him a copy of the propositions we made our challenge on in 1910. Did he accept them? Not on your life. Will he do so now, after all his blowing? We shall wait and see. The "parson" refers to correspondence between us. Yes. Does he want the correspondence all published- including the list of questions we asked him and his letter in answer to the same? If so, we will give space for the whole thing, if he will get one of his papers to do the same. Will one of his papers publish all that? No. "Parson" Berry proposed in his paper that if we would copy a certain article from his paper, that he would publish our reply. We copied the article and replied to it. Did Berry copy our reply? No. He has not done so yet-and the evidence is that he does not intend to. Of course it is all right for these fellows to "go back" on their word; for, according to their doctrine, God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated from all eternity that they should do just what they do, and they could not do otherwise than the way they do and what they do. Yes, he sent an endorsement; but they did not give the kind of endorsement asked for. He knows what was asked for, or can find it by referring to the correspondence. Will he get that? We shall see what we shall see. He says "we will publish it." Will the gentleman give good bond and security that he will pay his half the cost of publishing the books? Frankly, we would want some security before obligating ourselves for any cost or expense on such a proposition. Yes, we said as long ago as 1910 that we wanted a debate with these folks, if they would put up a representative man, and have the discussion published. This will show the people what the real differences are between us, and will show the people just what we hold to and the principles we stand upon; and it will also show to the people just what these fellows advocate. We quit debating several years ago; but we would engage in this one more under the conditions proposed by us years ago. We have not withdrawn the challenge. "Parson" Rhodes says he has more respect for the Philistine giant than he has for us. Of course, we would expect that, for people usually have more respect for their own kinfolks than they do for others. Au revoir.

Trip Cut Short

---February 17, 1938

We left home on Wednesday night before the fourth Sunday in January for Tennessee to fill some appointments in the Western part of that state. We were at West Plains, near Milan, on Thursday, and at New Hope on Friday. The weather was bad, so the crowd was not large at New Hope. Saturday we were at Blooming Grove. The weather was still bad. We were to have been at Little Zion on Sunday, but the weather was so bad, and the roads so bad, that there was no meeting at that place. Word was scattered around and they had meeting again at Blooming Grove on Sunday. Several of the brethren in the ministry were with us at West Plains and New Hope, and an effort was made to change some of the appointments and give us more time at some places than the first arrangement called for. Elder W. C. Davis, of McEwen, fell in with us at New Hope, and was to make the trip with us. The rain continued, and besides the rain, the weather turned very cold, and some snow fell, so it seemed that we could hardly get to the appointments. So we, with Elder Davis, remained with Elder Commodore Brann and Brother G. T. Kelley until Friday, when we were conveyed to Dresden, where we took the train for Union City. We were with the church there Saturday and fifth Sunday. Several brethren in the ministry were at this meeting, which was a pleasant one. A number of brethren and sisters from sister churches were at the meeting. On account of the bad weather, and perhaps some misunderstanding on account of the change in some of the appointments, and the short time to give notice, we decided it would be prudent to return home and go back later. Appointments have been arranged and some of them will be published in this issue of the paper, and we suppose others will be sent in soon. Elder Scott had an aunt by marriage to pass away on Saturday, who lived near Murray, Ky., and it was the request of the family that we conduct the funeral on Sunday. Just as we are writing this her name is gone from us. We went with Elder Scott, and conducted the funeral at 2 o'clock; then went to Murray, Ky., where we took the train for home, and arrived home at 3:20 Monday morning, January 31. We trust the weather will be better when we try to go to that section later. Pray the Lord to bless our going to the good of His people. C. H. C.

Hardshellism Refuted

---March 3, 1938

The above is a sub-head of an article in the Baptist Examiner of January, 1936, written by one W. T. Stegall, of Pontotoc, Miss., whose name appears in that paper as associate editor. In this article Elder Stegall says (we copy it just as it was in that paper): If they can savingly and effectually receive a knowledge of and belief in Christ, immediately and directly by the operation of the Holy Spirit, without the record of Him and without apostles, messengers, and witnesses, had we not as well burn all the Bibles and kill all the preachers? Why mention His precious name at all? Notwithstanding the Elder has here made such statements as in the foregoing, yet we occasionally see something from his pen in some of our Primitive Baptist exchanges, in which it seems to us that he poses as a Primitive Baptist. He stands excluded from a Primitive Baptist Church in the bounds of the New Hope Association, in Mississippi, unless he has been recently restored. The above paragraph contains the same reasoning which the Arminian world has used all along against the doctrine believed and advocated by true Primitive Baptists-" if they can savingly and effectually receive a knowledge of and belief in Christ, immediately and directly by the operation of the Holy Spirit, without the record of Him," etc., "had we not as well burn all the Bibles and kill all the preachers?" This is simply an argument that no one can be saved without Bibles or preachers-all would be doomed to an endless or eternal hell, without Bibles or preachers. That is the argument, in a nutshell. It also argues that if Bibles or preachers are not instrumental in regeneration then there is no use for Bibles or preachers. There is no more sense nor logic in the gentleman's argument here than for one to say that there is no use to sow seed and cultivate the soil because in so doing one does not or cannot make another world like this. Because one cannot make another world by sowing seed or tilling the soil is no reason why he should not till the soil. That is no proof or evidence that no good is accomplished by sowing seed and tilling the soil. Because sinners are not regenerated through the instrumentality of the Bible or gospel preaching is no argument that there is no good accomplished by reading the Book or through the medium of gospel preaching. There is a use for the Bible, and there is a use for gospel preaching, but they are not for the purpose of regenerating people. They are not for the purpose of imparting life to the dead. If the preacher is for the purpose of raising sinners out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ, then the preachers will be used in the resurrection of the dead from the graves at the last day; for our Saviour told us while He was in the world that the one is accomplished in the same way, and by the same power, and through the same process as the other. It is by the hearing of the voice of the Son of God that sinners are quickened into divine life. When Elder Stegall preaches, it is Elder Stegall's voice that the people hear. Then if it is through his preaching that sinners are regenerated, then Elder Stegall is the Son of God whom Jesus mentions. Wonder if he is Jesus? We knew it was prophesied that He was coming back to the world again, but we did not know that He had got here yet. Wonder if He looks like He did when He was here before? The gentleman's argument in the above paragraph necessarily embraces the teaching that life is imparted through a medium. There is no such thing taught or proved in all the realm of science, or in God's Book, as that life is imparted through a medium. The gentleman certainly should know that life is always imparted by a direct and immediate touch of life. There can be no such thing as life imparted through a medium. In the very nature of things such a thing is absolutely impossible; and it is absurd in the extreme to argue, or try to argue, such a thing. The gentleman made an effort in some of his articles to "play on" the ignorance of some Primitive Baptists. We would kindly say that it is ignorance "gone to seed" to argue that life is given or imparted through a medium. If the gentleman's contention is true that no one is regenerated except through the instrumentality of the Bible or gospel preaching, then no infant could ever possibly be saved in heaven, unless they go to heaven without regeneration or salvation. Those who argue that the Bible and preachers are necessary for the salvation of persons of Adam's race have, all along, accused the Old Baptists of preaching infant damnation -and the Old Baptists have always denied the charge. But here is the doctrine that has the idea of infant damnation in it-no preaching, no people saved. The infant is not in the reach of gospel preaching. If there is no salvation for any only for those who are in reach of gospel preaching, then there is no salvation for any infant. If the infant can be saved without gospel preaching, so can others be saved without it. The infant is saved without gospel preaching, and that is the way all other saved persons are saved. Jesus said, "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." -Mark 10: 15. The little child receives, enters into, the kingdom of God without the gospel, by being born into it. And if the adult does not receive it that way, or enter into it that way-the same way the little child does-he does not enter it at all. The Lord has one way of regenerating people, and that way is suited alike to the infant and to the adult. He does not have one way to save the infant, and another way to save the adult. They are saved the same way-so our Master has said -believe it or not. If people cannot be saved now without preachers, pray tell us how the Lord ever got that saving business started. The first man saved had to be saved without a preacher-or else the Lord used a child of the devil to regenerate the first man for Him in order to get His business started. How does that taste? Excuse us, please. We have no use for your doctrine. It was invented by Rome, and she has deceived the nations with it along the line. C. H. C.

A Young Dog

---March 3, 1938

From the Arkansas Baptist of Nov. 29, 1906, we have the following language: When the Landmark Baptists of Arkansas come to understand each other they will be able to do a work that will astonish the world. We are only in the formative period now, but we are progressing. There is a bright future for us. Here we are in 1906, in the formative period. If they were in the formative period then, in 1906, they are a very young outfit now-only about thirty-two years old. And yet some of these young "bucks" are now claiming to be older than a body that has been in existence over nineteen hundred years. This young upstart sprang from the Board and Convention body of so-called Baptists; and the Board and Convention business was infused into the Baptist family by Fuller and Carey in 1792, and the Board and Convention crowd was finally thrown out of the Baptist ranks in the United States from 1832 to 1845-after the Baptists had protested against, and borne with, their nefarious business all those years. Forbearance ceased to be a virtue. In the casting out of this octopus the whole brood went with the bunch. But in 1905 and 1906 this new-born babe was in the formative period. This little thing was just a babe then-hardly old enough to walk. But they were making great promises. They would soon astonish the world. Well, perhaps they have begun to do that, in some of their Sunday school business at Texarkana-according to the Rt. Rev. Ben M. Blow-hard, D. D., LL. D. Wonder how many more D's the Rev. gentleman would like to have. According to Rev. Allen Hill Autry, Bogard wrote his own recommendations to get the D. D. Say, Doctor, who wrote the recommendations for you to get the later D's? From the Gospel Missioner of June 8, 1905, J. A. Scarboro, editor, we have the following, under the heading of "Fido and Bob:" A friend of ours had a pet dog named "Fido" and Fido was a great fighter. For a long time he would allow no other dog to either come in or pass by without a fight. Our friend's neighbor reared a puppy which he called "Bob" and Fido would stand on the porch and watch for Bob and whenever Bob passed on the street Fido would run out and whip Bob and then come back and look happy. He whipped Bob until he learned his name, and the boys would say "Bob" and Fido would fly to the door and look for Bob and bark. But Bob kept growing, as puppies will, and finally got big enough to give Fido a warm tilt; a little later he whipped Fido, and then the program changed from Fido versus Bob to Bob versus Fido. After Bob whipped Fido a few times, the boys would say "Bob" and Fido would run under the bed, and if Fido got out and Bob saw him he chased him home.

Moral: 1891-2 Board versus Gospel Missioner. Fido vs. Bob. 1901-5, Gospel Missioner versus Board. Bob vs. Fido. You can now find "Fido" under the Baptist bed. Selah. The anti-Board crowd was just a young dog then. The pup was born about the year 1890 or 1891. The Board crowd was an old dog at that time. If the Board crowd was an old dog then (and that was the old dog, according to Scarboro), and the anti-Board crowd was just a young pup then (and the thing was just a young pup then, according to Scarboro), it necessarily follows that the Board and Convention crowd still constitute the older dog. It seems to us that it is just a case of "dog eat dog." C. H. C.

An Address To Young Preachers

---March 3, 1938

The following article, appearing under the above heading, is copied from a book called "The Primitive Preacher; a Book of Sixteen Sermons Delivered by Gregg M. Thompson." The book was published in 1888. Elder Thompson was an able minister in his day. The following chapter from the book is so good and timely that we feel it would be profitable to our readers now. Please read carefully and consider its teachings prayerfully, and may the Lord help us to take heed to the same. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Dear Brethren: Will you take kindly, in the close of this book, a short address from an old servant, who has been for sixty years in the war, has passed through many severe and hard-fought battles, and is now standing upon the verge of the grave, ready to drop his armor, receive his discharge, and go home to rest from his labors? You are the called of God, to stand upon the walls of Zion, and watch for the good of God's people. Your life is one of labor, toil, and exposure to the fiery darts of the enemy. Your responsibilities are great, and a lack of faithfulness in the discharge of duty on your part, may bring great distress and confusion among Zion's citizens. When Moses delivered his last address to the children of Israel, he warned them of the dangers that would surround them when they entered the promised land; that the country was filled with idolatrous worshipers, and by them they would be led away from their God, and bring upon themselves His divine wrath. One little deviation from the law of the Lord, that might be thought very small and unimportant, brought upon them His wrath and correcting rod. The word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; and you will not escape if you neglect the word spoken by the Lord, and confirmed unto us by them that heard Him. Every thing not commanded by our Lord, and taught and practiced by His apostles, is forbidden, and classed with idolatry. It leads our minds away from Christ, and changes the order He has established in His kingdom, which is diverse from all other kingdoms, and is not to be numbered with the nations of the earth. An entire separation from all human and worldly institutions, and a strict observance of the commands of Christ, have been the infallible mark of His church in all ages of the world. Worldly churches may practice the ordinances of the gospel as commanded; they may teach a great deal of truth, but let them withdraw their worldly institutions and their humanly devised systems, and they are dissolved and killed at once. The very thing that maintains the distinct visibility and identity of Christ's church, and insures her final triumph over all her enemies, is the certain destruction of all false churches. I therefore charge you before God, to watch this point, and guard it well. False churches will hate and abuse you, and call you hard names, but let none of these move you; a faithful discharge of duty, and the comfort and peace of Zion are worth more to you than life, and all the honors earth can give. God has never promised you worldly honors, or wealth, or a smooth sea to sail over; reward here is found in suffering persecutions, and bearing reproaches with His poor and afflicted people; for, "They that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." Your reward is in heaven, and your crown is waiting for you when you shall have fought your last battle. Be the servant of the church; not for filthy lucre, but because you love her, and are willing to suffer for her, and with her. Be careful to feed the lambs and sheep, to nurse the little ones, to strengthen the weak knees, encourage the fearful hearted, and speak comfortable things to God's people. I shall never meet you in this world; I shall soon drop into the grave, and be forgotten by the world; but my last words to you are: Be careful to maintain the purity of the church, and her entire separation from all the institutions of men. If men tempt you to the least deviation from the path marked out in the gospel, by the siren song of "No danger;" be not deceived; it leads to destruction. Again, I say, Remember the distinct mark that has in all ages identified Christ's church, and preserve it; and at the end of your warfare and stewardship here, your Lord and Master will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." God bless you! and so preserve you that you may keep your garments unspotted from the world. Amen. G. M. Thompson.

REMARKS

After the foregoing article was put in type, and before going to press with this issue of the paper, we received the Primitive Monitor for February, 1938, containing the above article with the following comments by Elder John M. Thompson, who is now past ninety years of age, and is a nephew of Elder Gregg M. Thompson. We are glad to insert the comments from the Monitor, below. We knew as long ago as 1917 that Elder Gregg M. Thompson was not a Mason, or that he could not have consistently been a member of anything else in the world other than the Old Baptist Church. His writings were living evidences that he belonged to nothing else. See The Primitive Baptist of September 11, 1917, which article appears in Editorial Writings, Vol. III, page 242, which will be ready to mail out in a few more weeks. C. H. C.

THE COMMENTS

The foregoing "Address to Young Preachers," by Gregg M. Thompson, my father's oldest brother, which is the last in his book of "Sixteen Sermons." As I believe it will be valuable for our young ministers to thoroughly study and duly consider it, I send it to the highly esteemed editor of our well-beloved Monitor; and I request editors of our other periodicals to publish it if they so desire. I have been asked whether my uncle, Gregg Thompson, was a Freemason, and as I thought he was, I answered accordingly, and I was surprised to read his advice and warning relative to human and worldly institutions, that "An entire separation from all human and worldly institutions and strict observance of the commands of Christ have been the infallible mark of His church," and that everything not commanded by our Lord, and taught and practiced by His apostles, is forbidden. And if he had been a Mason, he was not when he wrote this address. He was a noble and Scripturally gifted minister of the gospel of Christ. He was highly esteemed by the faithful saints that knew him in his faithful labor. J. M. Thompson.

Isaiah 45:7

I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the Lord do all these things.-((7) (Isaiah 45:7). Our views were given briefly on the above passage quite awhile ago in our columns. This is a text which is strongly relied upon by the Absoluters to prove that the Lord not only makes peace but that He also creates wickedness. One William Branham, of Hitchens, Ky., asked us for our views of this text sometime ago. We have given our views in our columns, as well as to him, that the evil mentioned in this text is not wickedness or sin, but that it is punishment for sin. We have placed ((Amos 3:2) (Amos 3:2,6) along with this text. Branham sent our letter, along with some of his remarks, to the editor of the Old Faith Contender, a rank Absoluter, which sheet is published in California. In Branham's letter to Parson Berry, the editor, he says: If anyone in this world will take one verse of God's holy word and show me that we have anything to do with our time salvation I will gladly acknowledge I am wrong. Surely that is fair. In regard to the brother's proposition, as here given, we will simply refer him to what he said in a letter dated April 10, 1934, which he wrote to Elder H. H. Lefferts, a copy of which he sent to us. In that letter Brother Branham says: In regard to the expression I used near the last of the article I wrote for the Signs that was published in the March issue, that "our present salvation largely depends on how we live in this present life," I should have explained it the way I understand it, but the letter was so long I had already wrote is why I didn't. I may be wrong the way I understand it, as I know I am very weak in many things. I do not claim to know as much as my older brothers in the Lord. If I am wrong I will be very thankful to you or any other of the brothers if you will show me where I am wrong. I did not mean our eternal salvation. I only meant our present salvation, or the common salvation, or the joys and peace we have in this present or natural life. I will refer you to a few verses of Scripture, the way I understand them. First: "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." -((Jude 1:25) (Jude 1:25). Did Jude mean our eternal salvation when he wrote this to the saints? If he did, the Scriptures undoubtedly would contradict itself; for another Scripture reads thus: "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." -((2) (Philippians 2:12). Did Paul mean their eternal salvation? He surely did not. The ones, the way I understand it, was the ones who had already been quickened, and possessed the Holy Spirit. * * * Next is what James says, "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." -((9) (James 5:19-20). The two verses James wrote in this chapter undoubtedly don't mean eternal death, for he was speaking to the brethren, that had already been born again, or to the church. We copy the above from the brother's letter without taking the authority to correct the language, or the verbage. If we should do that, these fellows would say we had changed what was said. But in this matter we simply answer Branham with Branham. He answered his own request nearly four years ago. "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." -(Luke 16:31). Branham also asked us concerning ((0:23) (Jeremiah 10:23), which reads: "O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." Parson Berry quotes the following from what we said concerning this text: The man does the walking. The Lord does not walk him. The Lord directs, tells him how he should walk, but the man does not always walk as he is directed. The parent directs the child how to walk, but the child does not always walk as the parent directs; but the child does the walking. To this Parson Berry says: This is legalism pure and simple. Here is the voice from Sinai- Do-and-live. It is the law which says, here is a full set of directions, here is the rule you shall walk by,-now it is up to you to follow them; and if you follow them of course you will inherit the land, if not you shall be punished according to all the just penalties attached to this law. * * * But do we not believe we must keep God's commandments? Yes, how we do believe it! For we have been shown what the keeping of the Law means and how unable we were to keep it except God "walks us." There you are! This infidel does not believe the Bible! The text says "it is not in man that walketh." God says it is the "man that walketh." Berry says "not so, but God walks us." Whom shall we believe-Berry or the Lord, as He gave it to us by the Prophet Jeremiah? As for us, we prefer to believe what God has said, rather than what this infidel says, even if he does call it legalism. Please note how he put the word "inherit" in his blasphemous language above. Neither we, nor any of our people, have ever taught that the Jews would inherit the land as a result of doing what God commanded. The land of Canaan was theirs by gift and by birth. God gave the land to Abraham and to his seed after him for an everlasting possession. Hence, the land was theirs by gift and by birth. But they had to do what God commanded them to do, they had to do what God said do, to enter into that land and to enjoy the blessings therein. That land (the land of Canaan) was a type of the gospel church. The gospel church belongs to the Lord's children, to those who have been born into His family. It is theirs by gift and by birth. But they cannot enter into the church and enjoy the blessings therein without doing something. They have to "walk." How would it have sounded for Jeremiah to have said, "It is not in man that God walketh to direct his steps?" Berry says that God walks him. That may be so; but we are frank to say that we do not believe a word of it. Neither do we believe that God "talks him." God's ways are equal; but Berry's ways are not equal. If God "walked him" his walk and ways would always be equal; he would always be walking in ways that are equal. But this fellow has actually denied the very language itself. In the text, man is the subject of the verb walketh. Hence, it is the man that walketh; it is the man that does the walking. The man in the text was the Jew. He did not walk in order to be a Jew; but being a Jew, the Lord's chosen and peculiar people, the Lord directed them how to walk, and they did the walking. If they walked right, they walked according to the direction the Lord gave. If they did not walk according to the direction the Lord gave (and sometimes they did not walk that way), then they walked wrong. If the Lord "walked them," as Berry says, then they would never have walked wrong, unless the Lord "walked them" wrong. We do not care which horn of the dilemma these infidels take. We use the word infidel in the sense of not believing what the Bible says; and Berry has denied believing what it says. Now let us notice ((7) (Isaiah 45:7)) a little farther. Matthew Henry, in his comments on this text, says: Here light and darkness mean the same as peace and evil. Light and peace denote prosperity, and darkness and evil signify adversity. The notion that evil is here put for sin is quite erroneous, being at once inconsistent with the scope of the verse and opposed to Scripture doctrine, by making God the author of sin. Again he says: "I form the light," which is grateful and pleasing; "and I create darkness," which is grievous and unpleasing. "I make peace," put here for all good; "and I create evil;" not the evil of sin, God is not the author of that, but the evil of punishment. The Jamieson, Faussett, and Brown Commentary says, on this text: Create evil-not moral evil, but in contrast to "peace" in the parallel clause, war, disaster. Gill, in his comments on this text, says: "I make peace, and create evil;" peace between God and men is made by Christ, who is God over all; spiritual peace of conscience comes from God, through Christ, by the Spirit; eternal glory and happiness is of God, which saints enter into at death; peace among the saints themselves here, and with the men of the world; peace in churches, and in the world, God is the Author of, even of all prosperity of every kind, which this word includes; evil is also from Him; not the evil of sin; this is not to be found among the creatures God made; this is of men, though suffered by the Lord, and overruled by Him for good; but the evil of punishment for sin, God's sore judgments, famine, pestilence, evil beasts, and the sword, or war, which latter may more especially be intended, as it is opposed to peace; this usually is the effect of sin; may be sometimes lawfully engaged in; whether on a good or bad foundation is permitted by God; moreover, all afflictions, adversities, and calamities, come under this name, and are of God; see ((Job 2:10) (Job 2:10); ((Amos 3:6) (Amos 3:6). Now a word as to the actual and literal meaning of the Hebrew word which is translated evil in the text. The Hebrew letters transposed into the English are rah, and so the word is pronounced. The meaning of the word is bad or (as noun) evil-adversity, affliction, bad, calamity, etc. This word rah is from the word raw-ah, a primitive root, which means "to spoil (literally, by breaking to pieces); figuratively, to make (or be) good for nothing," etc., "do mischief, punish," etc. As proof of this see any reliable Hebrew dictionary. So, we have it that the very meaning of the word the prophet used is just what we said was taught in the language. Strange, is it, that some folks will actually, not only strain and twist the language of Holy Writ, but actually deny the plain teachings of the same in order to have a cloak for meanness and for the devilment that is committed and carried on in the world. May the good Lord pity and have mercy on such wicked blasphemers, who thus advocate a doctrine which charges the most holy God with the crime and devilment of this world and of the devil himself. C. H. C.

Preachers Should Not Lie

It is a cold fact that some have gone to downright lying in connection with this trouble. It is bad enough for anybody to lie but still worse for preachers to lie.- Orthodox Baptist Searchlight, Feb. 25, 1938. The foregoing is from Dr. Bogard's statement of "Cold Facts" on page 4 of the paper named. We wonder since when, Dr. Bogard, has it been so bad for preachers to lie? And, have they all quit lying about other things than "this trouble?" If so, since when have they quit? Say, Doctor, did not some preacher say that one hundred dollars had been put up at a certain place in Alabama for a certain man to meet you in debate at a certain place? And the money was not put up, either, was it, Doctor? "Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?" -Rom. ii. 21, 22. C. H. C.

Elder Fairchild Again

---April 7, 1938

Yes, we have heard from Elder J. W. Fairchild again. We received the following letter from him: Whitesburg, Ky., January 8, 1938. Dear Brother Cayce: After a sleep of 29 years the Footprints of the Flock has awoken and is making its appeal to God's children again. It wants to be neighborly and exchange visits with The Primitive Baptist, so please permit The Primitive Baptist to come up and visit with it. I am enclosing two copies. If you are in reach of Bro. John Harris please hand him one. Bro. Cayce, I have heard of you opposing me very bitterly, but I can say truthfully I have never opposed you. I have been ready at all times to co-operate with you. Were you to visit us I would ask our churches to receive you heartily, and would rejoice to have you in my home. I have not one ill feeling toward you. Why not let bygones be bygones, and you and I work together for the peace and union of our people? You know they need all the help they can get. You and I are getting old. Why not let the remainder of our lives be an example to God's ministers in love and forbearance. The Lord help us to do it. In love, J. W. Fairchild. In the same envelope was enclosed two copies of his paper, which he says has "awaken." We would be glad to know that it has "awaken" to the truth, and that the truth might be set forth in its pages, if the publication of it continues, for we do not think the truth was always set forth in its pages when he published it before. If you have a copy of our Editorial Writings, Volume I, turn and read the articles therein beginning on pages 264, 268, 314 and 361, and you will see some little something as to where Elder Fairchild stood then. On page three of the copy of the little paper he sent us with his letter we note the following statement: Again I am a member of Sandlick Church in Letcher County, Kentucky. Into the fellowship of this church I was baptized July 17, 1889, and on May 21, 1892, by request of this church I was ordained to the full functions of the gospel ministry, by the following presbytery: Elders William R. Craft, Peter Adkins, Samuel C. Caudill, John A. Craft, and Spencer Adams. Under the kind and brotherly guidance of these and other servants of the Lord, I received my first lessons in the ministry. So, it seems that Elder Fairchild has gone back to the Sandlick Church, where they had a division about May, 1896, on account of the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things, as preached and advocated by Elder Fairchild himself. We presume he has gone back to that faction which stood with him at that time and since that time. Anyway, he is now identified with a faction that is not recognized by the regular Primitive Baptists, as we shall show presently. How did he get membership with those people? He did not join them by letter from orderly Primitive Baptists, for the simple reason that he was excluded from the fellowship of Providence Church, in the Good Hope Association, in Mississippi, and that church refused to restore him to their fellowship. Following is a letter from Elder G. W. Lewis, who is pastor of Good Hope Church and also moderator of the Amite Association: Auburn, Miss., Feb. 12, 1938. Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-I received your letter of Feb. 9th, and in reply will say: Elder J. W. Fairchild has not been restored to the fellowship of Providence Church. He stands excluded from the orderly Primitive Baptists of Mississippi. You may use my name, as requested in your letter, if you desire. If there is any other information, in regard to Elder Fairchild's standing in Mississippi, we can furnish you, please call on us. We would be glad to have you to visit us any time you have a mind. We have a great desire to hear you preach the unsearchable riches of Christ again. May God bless you and yours. Please remember us in your prayers. In hope, G. W. Lewis. This letter above tells plainly enough as to the standing of Elder Fairchild, or rather, his lack of standing. But what about the people he is identified with over in Kentucky? We wrote Elder J. H. Keaton, Huntington, W. Va., to find out about that, as he is not so far from that section, and were pretty sure that if he did not personally know, he could refer us to some orderly Primitive Baptist who does know. Elder Keaton wrote to Elder J. E. Craft, Neon, Ky., as follows: Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 15, 1938. Elder J. E. Craft: Dear Brother Craft-Will you advise whether or not the Sandlick Church, in Letcher County, Ky., is in the Sandlick Association; and if so, please advise if that association is in good standing. Has there not been some contention with those folks among other associations over the doctrine of the resurrection? In short, is it considered a sound body of Old Baptists? You remember showing me a letter some time ago from Elder J. W. Fairchild, and I think we agreed as to what was best to do about it. I notice now he is printing the Footprints of the Flock, and seems to have membership in the Sandlick Church. When you answer this letter, will you state that your letter may be used for publication? Hope you are all well. Would be glad you could come to see us again. Won't you, soon? Please let me hear at once. Yours in hope, J. H. Keaton. Under date of February 3, Elder Keaton wrote us as follows: Brother Cayce: I have just received the enclosed letter from Elder J. E. Craft. He is moderator of the Union Primitive Baptist Association, of Kentucky, and is a safe man. He is located in the bounds of this Sandlick Church, and understands the situation. I am also enclosing a copy of my letter to him, to which his is a reply. You will not understand Elder Craft to be moderator of the Union Association which he mentions in his letter, but he belongs to the original Union, which withdrew from this faction which he mentions, because of this heresy. Thus it is plain to see the hole Fairchild has crawled in. I think you will find Elder Craft's letter to be in harmony with the statement I advanced in my former letter to you; but I wanted to be sure. Use my letter to Elder Craft as you wish; also he gives consent to publish his. Yours in hope, J. H. Keaton. The letter which Elder Craft wrote to Elder Keaton is as follows: Neon, Ky., Feb. 1, 1938. Dear Brother Keaton: Relative to the Sandlick Church you refer to; it has not been recognized as a sound Primitive Baptist Church for a number of years. Neither has Elder J. W. Fairchild been in fellowship with the Primitive Baptists for more than twenty years. However, he went into North Carolina during this time and preached for them under some coloring, I don't know what, and was let out as soon as he was exposed. The church he is now with belongs to that faction of Sandlick Association that preach a non-resurrection of our bodies, and that Christ was never here in the flesh, no punishment for the wicked; and in correspondence with that part of the Union Association that preaches Universalism, from which we withdrew, I think, in 1920 or 1921. Now there is an association known as the Sandlick Association; they are a very good body of brethren; I will refer you to Elder William Kash; he will know them better than I Brother Keaton, I would have written sooner, but was lacking in some of the facts, and had to gather them. You may correct and use this as you like. I have been very sick for nearly two weeks since getting your letter; hope you will pardon the delay. I enjoyed reading of your trip to Tennessee and Arkansas and its results. I don't know when I can come down. I would love so much to come. Yours in hope, J. E. Craft. The foregoing shows up more than one thing. For one, it shows that when Elder Fairchild was with our people in recent years, that he was with us under false colors, or else Elder Craft is mistaken. Evidently, when Fairchild left that country, whenever that was, he must have been considered as in disorder by the orderly Baptists there. But he got among the orderly Baptists in this western country, and then among the orderly Baptists in Mississippi, where he was excluded. Now, he has gone back to the disorderly faction in Kentucky where he was before, and now represents himself to be a Primitive Baptist. Let the reader note carefully the doctrine he is now identified with, and in line with. Such is not Primitive Baptist doctrine, and a man in line with such as that has no right to represent himself as being a Primitive Baptist. But it may deceive some folks. Elder Fairchild has heard, he says, of us opposing him very bitterly. So far as we are concerned, it is not a personal matter. We have no personal grievance against him. If such should be the case, we would follow the instructions our Lord gave in the eighteenth chapter of Matthew. We would have labored with him privately. But that is not the case. It is a matter of doctrine and principles advocated by him, and the course he has pursued in public life as a minister. It is the cause at stake, and not our personal feelings. And so long as he pursues the course that he has been pursuing in our acquaintance with him, just that long will we oppose him, if the Lord continues to spare us to live. Not only is this true as to Elder Fairchild, but we would oppose any other man who pursues a similar course. Our life is an open book, and shows that this has been our course all along the line. We have no time or inclination to "co-operate" with any man or set of men who are trouble makers in Zion. The sooner our people get rid of such men, and pay no attention to them, and leave them severely alone, the better it will be for our cause. There can be no such thing as peace in Zion while such men are allowed to get in their work in the churches. "Ephraim is joined to his idols; let him alone." Since the above was written, we have received a copy of the third issue of Fairchild's paper, and we notice in it that Elder J. B. Hardy is still "hooked up" with Fairchild in his disorderly and trouble making course. We also note names of some other brethren who are lending support to Fairchild. In regard to this we would say that if a brother who is doing this will not cease and desist in that course immediately, he should be brought under charge for treating the cause with contempt and disrespect, and should be immediately dealt with by his church under the charge. To lend support and influence to a man who has been excluded by an orderly Old Baptist Church is to treat the cause of the Master with contempt and disrespect, and one who will do that should be dealt with for the same. In late years Fairchild has tried to line up and keep company with the Progressives; and he got to where they will not have him, so we have been informed. It seems that he "is just anybody's dog that will hunt with him," It seems to us that if Fairchild wishes recognition and fellowship with orderly Baptists, the first thing for him to do is to get recognition and fellowship with orderly Baptists over there in Kentucky where he got out, and make satisfaction with Providence Church in the Good Hope Association, in Mississippi. And it seems to us that in order to do that it will be necessary for him to do some walking. C. H. C.

Elder Monk Passed Away

On Monday night, May 9, we received a call from Shreveport, La., telling us Elder C. M. Monk had passed away, and that we were wanted to be there Tuesday afternoon in the funeral service. A large crowd was at the funeral, which was held at Bethel Church. Elder John R. Harris and Brother Elvyn Attaway and our second son, Fleming, went with us. We went by El Dorado, and Elder Webb and Brother Craft went with us from there. We drove back home that night. Another faithful and true soldier of the cross has laid aside the weapons of his warfare, and we have lost another good friend. May the good Lord bless and sustain the bereaved family, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Returned Home

---May 19, 1938

We returned home on Monday afternoon, May 9, from our long trip in Tennessee and Kentucky. We do not have time to write an account of the trip for this issue of the paper, but will say that at most of the places we visited we found a good feeling prevailing among the brethren and churches. We will try to write more about the trip for the next issue. C. H. C.

Elder J. C. Ross Bereaved

---May 19, 1938

We are just in receipt of a card from Elder A. B. Ross, Martin, Tenn., bearing the sad news of the death of the wife of Elder J. C. Ross, Greenfield, Tenn. A good woman is gone. We deeply sympathize with Brother Ross in his great loss and sore trial. May the Lord give grace and strength for his need, is our humble prayer.

Sister Ross was double first and double second cousin to our father. She passed away on Monday, May 9. C. H. C.

Nashville Meeting

---June 16, 1938

Elsewhere in this paper will be found an article from Elder J. A. Monsees, of Macon, Ga., concerning the matter of reconciliation between the Old Line Baptists and the Progressives, of Georgia. Elder Monsees says, in a postscript, following his article: I have been asked if the Nashville peace meeting was not called in an effort to regain fellowship with the Progressives. Brother Cayce will, perhaps, answer this question from the standpoint of less bias than I. So we ask him to do so. We confess that we are sometimes a little dull of comprehension, and that it sometimes takes a little time for us to grasp the real and full meaning of something that may have been said, or of a question that may be asked. The full and real meaning of this question may not yet be fully grasped by us. If the querist meant to ask if the Nashville peace meeting was called and held with a view of our people regaining fellowship with and getting in line with the Progressives, we answer, without any equivocation whatever, that the part we took in it, in calling the meeting, or aiding in getting up the call, and what was done in the meeting, was with no such object in view. The object of the meeting is plainly stated in the pamphlet containing the proceedings of the same, both on page 1, first paragraph, and page 3, under the heading of "The Recommendations," first paragraph. On page 1 the minutes of the proceedings begin as follows: The proposed meeting for the purpose of endeavoring to restore peace in and among the disturbed churches in Tennessee and parts of Kentucky and between brethren, etc. On page 3 the paragraph reads: The following principles of faith, or doctrine and practice, are hereby recommended as principles upon which the present disturbances among the Primitive Baptists in Tennessee and parts of Kentucky may be adjusted. In the face of these two statements why would one ask if the meeting was for the purpose of making an effort to regain fellowship with the Progressives? Please read article 14, on page 8, on the subject of instrumental music in the churches; then read article 18 on page 9, and note particularly what is said with reference to progressive measures. It seems to us that the proceedings of the meeting speak as plainly as it could be spoken. It seems to us that these things make it clear and positive that in order to have peace, and in order for peace to be maintained, progressive measures must be eliminated and let strictly and absolutely alone. According to the way we have understood some of the Progressive brethren in the past, if our people would just eliminate these very things, as recommended in the Nashville meeting, which we here call attention to, we would thereby have regained fellowship, at once, with our Progressive brethren. Instead of the Nashville meeting recommending that, they recommended the very opposite. We have noted in some of our exchanges that a suggestion has been made that the ministers of the Progressives be invited to preach in our churches, and our ministers preach in their churches—meaning, as we understand the matter, an exchange of pulpits. This may be all right, but we do not think so. We frankly say that we do not approve of it. Read article 15 on page 8 of the Nashville meeting, taking notice of the note of warning. We had trouble enough years ago with progressive measures, without inviting any more trouble on those matters. If the Progressive brethren desire union with the brethren who are still in the "old paths," let them put out the things that brought the trouble, and so declare themselves, and we think it would then be time for an effort to be made for a getting together of the Old Line Baptists with them. No doubt there were mistakes made and wrongs done on both sides; but let the things that caused the trouble be put away, and then the mistakes may be corrected and amendments made for the wrongs done, and all matters adjusted. But no use to make any effort to get together as long as the things are retained that brought the trouble, as we see the matter. C. H. C.

Tour in Tennessee and Kentucky

---June 16, 1938

We left home on Friday, March 5, to fill the appointments as arranged for us and Elder W. C. Davis, as published in The Primitive Baptist of March 3 and 17. We filled an appointment in Memphis that night. Next morning we were conveyed to Brown's Creek by Brother Hawkins, to meet the appointment at that place. An extra appointment had been made for Mt. Moriah for Saturday night, but the meeting that night was rained out. Elder Davis met us Sunday night in Jackson. From there on we filled the appointments as arranged and published, except that at Little Zion for Thursday, April 8. A brother conveyed us there from Bethel, but the weather was somewhat threatening, and looked like rain. We arrived on the ground, and, after we had been there for nearly an hour, one brother, a member of that church, came on foot. We asked him if he thought any more would be there, and he said he did not think so. Hence, we left, the brother conveying us taking us to the home of Brother G. L. Kelley. All the other appointments were met. We would be glad to give a detailed account of the trip, but believe our space can be used for a better purpose, and trust the brethren where we went will excuse us for not going into detail. We had good meetings at almost every place. The congregations were small at a few of the places, but almost every place the congregations were good. It was a very busy time, and we hardly expected so many to be present as were present at most of the places. At one or two places some brethren expressed a feeling of disappointment that no more were present. We, reminded them that it was a busy time, and that the people were under no obligation to come out to hear us preach. They were under no obligation to us. But we are under obligation to attend our regular church meetings. Elder Davis left us at Round Lick on Thursday, May 5, returning home to meet a regular appointment on Saturday and Sunday. We wound up at South College Street, Nashville, Sunday night, May 8, and left Nashville at 11:30 that night for home, arriving at Fordyce at 1 p. m. on Monday, where we were met by our wife and children. We were glad to get home, after an absence of six weeks and three days. Work had piled up while we were away; so we have had no time for idleness since our return. We are trying to get ready to leave for another trip, and expect to make another little trip to Alabama before this reaches the readers. Remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

Confession Changed

---June 16, 1938

At a Conference in Meridian, Miss., on May 21, the Southern Presbyterians changed their Confession of Faith. The Confession was the old Westminster Confession, which the Presbyterians have had for about three hundred years. We have been aware of the fact that not many of them have been preaching the doctrine for years which the Confession contained. For years many of the preachers have been preaching Arminian doctrine, and have not been teaching the doctrine of election and that the elect of God were predestinated to eternal life. The old Westminster Confession set forth the doctrine of unconditional salvation and also the doctrine of unconditional reprobation. The Baptists have always denied the doctrine of unconditional reprobation. The old Presbyterian Confession said, Chapter III: Sec. 3. By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels were predestinated unto everlasting life, and others foreordained to everlasting death.

4. These angels and men, thus predestinated and foreordained, are particularly and unchangeably designed; and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished. These are the two sections which they have eliminated from their Confession. There was opposition to the move, but it was carried by a vote of one hundred and fifty-one to one hundred and thirty. We remember that an effort was made by them several years ago to change the Confession. So, at last, they have accomplished the matter. Calvin, the founder of the Presbyterian Church, was a strong predestinarian-too strong for the Baptists. The London Confession of Faith was largely copied from this old Westminster Confession; but they could not copy the above items; so they put them as follows: By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels are predestinated or foreordained to eternal life, through Jesus Christ, to the praise of His glorious grace; others being left to act in their sin to their just condemnation, to the praise of His glorious justice. These angels and men thus predestinated, and foreordained, are particularly, and unchangeably designed; and their number so certain, and definite, that it cannot be either increased, or diminished. It seems that the world is still drifting farther and farther from the truth. If the Primitive Baptists should quit preaching the truth, it would not be preached. The Lord will have a few witnesses for the truth when the world comes to an end. He will not leave Himself without a witness. C. H. C.

---July 7, 1938

Under the above heading is an article in the Messenger of Peace of June, 1938, by the editor, Elder W. A. Chastain. It being our sincere desire to be perfectly fair, and being perfectly willing for our readers to know the facts in this case, as well as in any other with which we have to do, we copy the article from the Messenger in full: THE ARTICLE “Under the caption, 'Was He a Mason?' appears an editorial by Elder C. H. Cayce, in his paper, The Primitive Baptist, Vol. 32, page 8, Sept, 11, 1917, in which he calls in question some statements made by Elder W. A. Chastain in his late book, 'A Discussion on the Worship of God.' He quotes from his book as follows: “Eld. Gregg M. Thompson, who lived in Georgia for years, and who was one of the ablest debaters our people have ever had, and who met Eld. Burgees, a Campbell-ite and champion debater and won a grand victory for our people, * * * * was a Mason, so I have been told. Yet, the Georgia Baptists did not non-fellowship him. But this did not make Masonry right, understand. I am not saying this in defense of any secret order, but to show that this is no test of soundness of doctrine.” “The reader will notice that Eld. Chastain emphasizes the statement that Eld. Gregg M. Thompson was a Mason, and then adds, 'So I have been told.' To this we wish to say that Eld. Chastain should have better informed himself, before making such a statement, if he did not know. Eld. Thompson has gone to his reward, and is not here now to defend himself. It seems to us that this great man had enough to contend with while he was living, without a thing of this kind being published to the world about him when he has gone to his long eternal home, and is not here to defend his own practice. But fortunately, Eld. Thompson left on record his position and principles as to how a member of the church should live, and what the church member should belong to." C. H. Cayce.' "We, doubtless, should have made no reference to the above through the Monitor had it not been for the unfavorable reflection cast on Eld. Chastain. Since we are, perhaps, mainly responsible for the statement by him, which Eld. Cayce criticizes: that 'Eld. Gregg M. Thompson was a Mason,' is correct. The late Eld. Gregg M. Thompson was my father's oldest brother. We very well remember him and have heard him speak of his membership in the Masonic order. Eld. Chastain is correct when he says he was a Mason when he resided in Georgia, and 'the Georgia Baptists did not non-fellowship him.' And now we adopt and subscribe to the following statement made by Eld. W. A. Chastain: 'But this would not make Masonry right, understand.' He, too, was a fallible man. We all need to be reminded of this fact. "Before closing this article we will give a quotation from Eld. Gregg M. Thompson which will not be called in question. We quote him direct from his published debate with Eld. O. A. Burgess-Page 258: " 'Good benevolent institutions may be gotten up among men, and great good may be effected by them. No one can see the great improvement in agriculture, that has been made in the last few years, but what will acknowledge that agricultural societies have had much to do with it. If the intoxicating bowl has been driven from the sideboard and a man feels degraded to be seen in a tippling shop, the temperance movement has, doubtless, had much to do with it. Many poor widows have been fed, and orphans educated and reared to respectability by the Masons. These, as worldly institutions, may be called good: I have nothing to say against them. But they have no power to impose their laws upon the church of Christ, neither has the church any power to adopt their laws, or to form an alliance with them. If it is true that John the Baptist and John the Divine were Masons (which I am inclined to credit), they were such as individuals, as citizens of the world and did not attempt to impose the laws of that institution upon the church, or to form a union or communion between the two institutions. This would have been a violation of the laws of the King, and would have destroyed the distinct visibility of the church. For the church to become united with any of the worldly institutions, and to adopt their laws and government, changes her organization, and she ceases to become the church of Christ." 'We give these facts in support of truth and right, and to the injury of no man dead or living. Truth will stand and will win its own fame. We all should be careful not to misjudge the motives of our brother and put him in an unfavorable light before the world. If we could all be more charitable one to another, be sure that we have just cause for censure before we accuse him of willful wrong, how much smoother the world would then run! Judge no man rashly. We all need more of Paul's charity-'Charity suffereth long and is kind.' Oh, that we were all filled with that spirit! Wrongs in doctrine and practice can oftentimes be more easily corrected through the spirit of kindness than otherwise. 'A soul saved from death,' saved to a useful life in the church. R. W. Thompson." -In the Primitive Monitor, October, 1917. "Remarks:-This editorial by Eld. R. W. Thompson is reprinted in this number because the same question seems to be up for discussion again by reason of Eld. John M. Thompson's comments on Eld. Gregg M. Thompson's 'Address to Young Preachers,' in the February (1938) Primitive Monitor. Eld. John M. Thompson in his comments, draws the conclusion that Eld. Gregg M. Thompson must not have been a Mason, but we have been informed by some of our ministers, who know the facts in the case, that he was a member of the Masonic order in good standing, at Ashland, Mo., at the time of his death. We feel that this article of Eld. Thompson's, and these statements, should settle this question. C. Dove, Editor. (Above from Primitive Monitor, April, 1938, p. 182.) We are thankful to God for such noble, Christian men as Elder Thompson and Elder Dove, who, with clear vision and noble hearts are faithful comrades in defense of truth and right. Any cause that cannot be supported with fairness must utterly fail. We have an affidavit on file in our office that may be examined by any of our brethren, executed May 9, 1938, by Mr. A. F. Martin, present secretary or clerk of Masonic Lodge No. 156, at Ashland, Mo., stating that Eld. Gregg Thompson was a member in good standing at the time of his death in 1888, and had been received into that membership in 1882. This affidavit is given under the seal of Mr. O. T. Scott, Notary Public. Elder Lloyd Sapp also writes: "There is abundant evidence in this country that this is true. I am also acquainted with the records and know it to be true." Elder Cayce states in his paper of March 3, 1938: "We knew as long ago as 1917 that Elder Gregg Thompson was not a Mason, or that he could not have consistently been a member of ANYTHING ELSE IN THE WORLD other than the Old Baptist Church. His writings are living evidences that he belonged to nothing else." Here is plainly an error and a case of mistaken judgment. We wonder, will it be corrected? A correction is due the readers of that paper, as well as Elder Thompson. We repeat that Elder Gregg Thompson preached all through many of the southern states, especially Georgia, and he a Mason! Our northern brethren, many of them, have visited and enjoyed the churches of the southland, and the present bars against us certainly are not justified. But, here is a statement setting forth the present conditions:

" Amendment to the constitution adopted Sept. 19th, 1878, as follows: "This Association will not hold in fellowship ANY church, neither will we knowingly correspond with ANY association which holds a member which belongs to any secret institution, whether moral, political or religious. "Signed: Eld. C. H. Cayce, Mod. Eld. John R. Harris, Clerk." This resolution is found in the minute of the South Arkansas Association for 1935. Yet they preached on their stand that year a good brother who belongs to an association that has secret order members in it. The above amendment is very wide and decisive. We suggest you read it again and study it well. The writer is not a member, and never has been, of any secret order, but this amendment turns us all down together. In that great meeting at Fulton, Ky., in 1900, of which Elder J. H. Oliphant was moderator, where our people from all over the U. S. were more nearly unanimously represented than at any meeting of modern times, they adopted the following language: "Bars of fellowship set up by our local churches have been the most destructive influences against the growth and progress of the church. Traditions of men and human customs being regarded as authority have often given rise to bars of fellowship and resulted in the destruction of the peace of the churches. * * * It is painful to note on the pages of history how frequently our people have been divided and their happiness destroyed by foolish and sinful declarations of non-fellowship. * * * * "When bars of fellowship are raised they exclude the erring from the God-appointed remedy for the correction of their errors and render restoration hopeless. "When bars of fellowship are unlawfully raised among our people the bond of union by which our churches are held together is broken and the welfare of the cause exposed to the most uncertain results. If the raisers thereof cannot be induced to remove them at once, the only course for those who want to remain in this holy church union is to discard their actions and have no connection with them until they withdraw such bars of fellowship." "Such bars mob innocent Baptists by the wholesale." -Lee Hanks in Messenger of Zion, April 15, 1938. We often cry, "Peace, peace," and then crucify the Prince of Peace. We urge our brethren to stand where our fathers have always stood, and would be happy to see the day when peace may abound, and pray that all may labor to that end.

OUR COMMENTS

Elder Chastain says, "Here is plainly an error and a case of mistaken judgment. We wonder, will it be corrected?" Yes, Brother Chastain, it will be cheerfully and gladly corrected. We are not glad we made the error; but we are glad to correct it. When we read the above article in the Messenger it was the first time we had ever seen or read the statement from Elder R. W. Thompson, which is copied in the above from the Primitive Monitor of October, 1917. We did not know he had ever made the statement, as we were not then getting the Monitor, and no copy of it was sent to us; or, if it was, we did not receive it. Under such circumstances as that, how could we be expected to make any correction on account of that statement having been made? In the Monitor of February, 1938, Elder John M. Thompson said that "if he had been a Mason, he was not when he wrote this address." Brother Thompson was judging the matter from the writings of Elder G. M. Thompson; we were judging the matter from the same standpoint. We judged from that same standpoint in 1917, when we copied some of his writings from his book called "The Measuring Rod." We only "knew it" from the evidence which we had in the case. Since then, and since our comments on the article from Elder G. M. Thompson in our issue of March 3, 1938, we have received additional evidence which we never had before. We would have made correction of the matter if the above article had never been published in the Messenger. On March 29, 1938, we received the following letter from Elder Lloyd Sapp: Ashland, Mo., March 21, 1938. Elder Cayce: Dear Brother-I note that you say in your paper of the March 3rd issue that Elder Gregg M. Thompson was not a Mason. Now, Brother Cayce, I happen to live here at Ashland, Mo., in the same town where Elder Thompson lived the latter part of his life. I belong to the same church where his membership was when he passed away. I am also pastor of this church, the church he pastored while here, and was pastoring at the time of his death. I am in a position to get the facts concerning his membership in the Masonic lodge. Therefore, in kindness, and in defense of the truth, concerning this matter, I beg to say that Elder Thompson was a member of the Masonic lodge the last years of his life. The records of this lodge, No. 156, show that he was elected to membership October 21st, 1882. Also, that he was a member of good standing at the time of his death, April 19th, 1888. Three members of said lodge recommended him for membership and it was my privilege to have known all these members. Also, I have heard one minister and a lawyer say that they sat in lodge with Elder Thompson. There are a few who live in this community who can give the same testimony. Elder Thompson died one year before I was born. However, his name is often mentioned as an able defender, and one who was true to his calling. By those who remember him, he is still held in sweet memory, and his name revered. In fairness to the support of truth and all concerned, I wish you could see fit to publish the above in your paper. Lloyd Sapp. "The Measuring Rod," from which we quoted in September, 1917, was published in 1861. In that book Elder Thompson said just what we copied from the same, and which it is not necessary to again copy here. It is not our wish or desire to aggravate matters. In Zion's Advocate of May 15, 1881, page 377, is an announcement by Elder Thompson of the desire to publish the book, "The Primitive Preacher," dated Crawfordsville, Ind., May 9, 1881. We suppose this was before Elder Thompson moved to Missouri. He lived in Georgia prior to the year 1881. He joined the Masons on October 21, 1882, in Missouri. He died April 19, 1888. The book was not published until during the year 1888. Probably the writing was done, according to the announcement in the Advocate, before October, 1882. But, whether this be correct or not, he joined the Masons in October, 1882, at the age of seventy-one years, six months and ten days, according to the date he gave of his birth on page 5 of "The Primitive Preacher" and the date given above by Brother Sapp. Yes, Brother Chastain, we make the correction. ' Brother Chastain says: "We repeat that Elder Gregg Thompson preached all through many of the Southern states, especially Georgia, and he a Mason! Our northern brethren, many of them, have visited and enjoyed the churches of the southland, and the present bars against us certainly are not justified," and then he quotes an amendment to the constitution of the South Arkansas Association, which was made in 1878. Are there any present bars up on this question by the Southern Baptists which have not been up all the while -since before Brother Chastain was born? That which Brother Chastain quoted from the minutes was an amendment. It was no new thing; but the amendment is sixty years old. The same year (1935) from which Brother Chastain quotes this, Brother Chastain tells his readers that there was a good brother present from a northern church. Was he barred? No, he preached peace by Jesus Christ, and did not intimate that we should reform our churches, and he was heartily received, and invited to come back. Does the fact that Elder Gregg Thompson was heartily received by the churches in the South show that he was barred? Does the fact that "our northern brethren, many of them, have visited and enjoyed the churches of the southland," prove or show that they were barred? We might name a number of brethren from the North who have visited and preached in churches, many of them, in the southland, and who were heartily received. About 1936 we invited Elder Chastain to visit the South, and insisted that he do so, which he refused to do. Does that even look like they were barred? In our repeated invitations to Brother Chastain we told him that we sincerely wished he would visit us and see for himself whether or not he was barred, and that he could come nearer telling in that way than by staying at a distance. We assured him that our invitation was made in sincerity and good faith. He declined, and gave his reason as follows: June 16, 1937. Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-In answering your letter of May 29 wish to say that I have been gone from home a great deal since getting it and been rushed much with pressing duties. Returned home last Monday from Ohio, where I attended the Sandusky Association and met about sixteen preachers and many brethren, and enjoyed a very fine meeting. As to making a visit to your country and churches permit me to say that it will be next to impossible to do so this year, due to my care of seven churches and editorial work and also my own private business affairs. May the Lord bless you and your people. Yours to serve, W. A. Chastain.

The reader will see that Brother Chastain did not say then that he was barred, or assign this as a reason for not accepting the invitation to visit the South. Elder Leon H. Clevenger has recently been in this country. In our issue of April 21, 1938, Elder Clevenger gave a short account of this trip, in which he says: The Lord was good to us, and the dear Primitive Baptists gave us a real welcome everywhere we went and many invitations to return. I have been visiting some of these churches occasionally for the last twelve years, and they are lovely people, who seem ready to welcome orderly Primitive Baptist preachers from other states at any time, as long as they come preaching Christ in peace and are not trying to spread trouble. Just here we copy Article 9, on pages 6 and 7, of the Nashville Peace Meeting: We do not think our members should be retained in the church who hold membership in or affiliate with any of the so-called fraternal or religious institutions of the world. It is a well-known fact that it has always been against the rules of the Primitive Baptist Churches of the South to retain members who affiliate with such institutions, whether secret or otherwise, which rule we believe to be Scriptural; and we think it would be destructive to endeavor to reform the churches. We should continue to stand where we have always stood on this question, and those things should not be permitted to make inroads in our churches. In this we are not endeavoring to regulate other folks or their affairs; but we desire that our churches all remain clear of these things, as they have in the past. It seems to us that this explains the attitude of the Southern Baptists as clearly as it could be expressed. Our people have not had bars up against good brethren from the North or from the East or from the West who would come preaching peace by Jesus Christ. We have always welcomed orderly brethren to come South. If there are any bars up somebody else has them up, and not our folks. What we have is for our protection, and not as dictating to others. We would kindly suggest that "here is plainly" another "error and a case of mistaken judgment. We wonder, will it be corrected?" We would also kindly suggest that "we urge our brethren to stand where our fathers have always stood, and would be happy to see the day when peace may abound, and pray that all may labor to that end." In Arkansas and Oklahoma

We should have had a little account of this trip in our last issue, but it seemed that we could hardly get to the matter of writing about it. We left home on Friday morning, June 10, and went to Fort Smith, arriving there about 6:30 p. m., and were met at the bus station by Sister Martin, wife of Brother D. B. Martin. We were at the service at the church in Arkoma that night, and Saturday and Sunday. This was a union or district meeting of the churches of the Salem Association. It was a delightful meeting. We made no note of the names of the ministers in attendance, and so we cannot give their names. Of course we remember the names of some of them, but may not remember all. So we will not try to give their names. Elder John R. Harris, of Thornton, started before we did, and was at the meeting, and continued with us during the following week. On Monday and Tuesday, June 13 and 14, we were with the church called Little Flock, at Ratcliff, Ark., Elders D. W. Witt and R. L. Piles going with us and Elder Harris, through the week. On Wednesday and Thursday, June 15 and 16, we were at Revilee Church, near Magazine. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 17, 18, 19, we were with Little Flock Church, at Abbott, Ark. This was their communion meeting. From this place Elder Harris returned home. These were all good and pleasant meetings. From the foregoing we went to Tulsa, and had meeting there on Monday and Tuesday, June 20 and 21. This seems to be a live little band, and they seem to be devoted to the cause. We enjoyed our stay with them. The services were at night, and good congregations were present. Then we filled the appointments in Ada, New Hope, (near Shawnee), Oklahoma City, Bethlehem, Union Springs, and Sulphur. We also filled an extra appointment in Edmond, going there from Shawnee, being met and conveyed by Brother W. T. Morrisett to his home. Brother Morrisett is one of our old Tennessee associates. We were in his home several times in Tennessee, years ago, before he moved to Oklahoma. We would be glad we could mention the name of each one whose home we were permitted to visit, but we cannot do so. We had the pleasure of being in the home of Elder Cummings, who is the pastor at Oklahoma City. They esteem him highly, and we learned to love him. We were also in the good home of dear Elder A. D. West. He was with us at several of the appointments, and did everything he could to make us feel pleasant and at home. We had the pleasure of meeting Elder M. L. Welch, whom we had not met before. Besides, we met many brethren and sisters for the first time, and doubtless many of them we will never see again in this life. The churches we visited are evidently in peace, and the Lord is blessing them. We have long had a desire to visit those dear people, and now we have a desire to visit them again. Some other churches we had a desire to visit, but this was all the time we had for the trip. May the good Lord continue to bless them with peace and prosperity and fellowship, is our humble prayer. We desire that they all remember us in prayer. If we meet no more in this world of sorrow, we have a sweet and blessed hope that we shall meet in a better world, where troubles and sorrows never come. C. H. C.

Pie Supper Planned

---August 4, 1938

A pie supper has been planned at Midway schoolhouse Monday night (June 27). Proceeds will be used for the First Primitive Baptist Association of Oklahoma, which will be held from August 11 to August 14. The above is taken from the Purcell Register, of June 23, 1938, a newspaper published in Purcell, Oklahoma. This band of folks who advertised to have this pie supper at the schoolhouse named are not connected with the First Primitive Baptist Association of Oklahoma. They are identified with the Trumpet faction. But how does that sound, and how does it look, for people claiming to be so strict and so orderly, to be having a pie supper to raise funds to care for their association? Evidently they are resorting to the same ways and means of the world to raise funds for their work. Pie supper! Pie supper! Suppose we have a little paraphrasing of the Scriptures to justify this business. Get your Bible now and read as we refer to some citations. Let us go first to (Acts 6:1-4) "Look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this pie supper business." ((7) (Acts 6:7): "And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient unto the rulers and dictators in the kingdom, and they had many pie suppers and raised large sums of money thereby for the advancement of the Lord's kingdom." ((3) (Acts 16:13-14,15). The case of Lydia. After she was baptized she was very zealous, and instituted and conducted many pie suppers to care for the meetings in that section. (I Timothy 3:14-15). Paul wrote this to Timothy that he might know how he ought to behave himself in the house of God, and how he might raise funds to care for the Lord's service by having pie suppers, and other merchandising methods which he might get from the world. (II Timothy 3:16-17) "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Now, candidly, where, in the whole Book, do you find any authority for engaging in such methods as having a pie supper to raise funds to care for a meeting? Where is it? Book, chapter, and verse, please! Yet these folks cry "order! order!" Their cry of order reminds us of a lot of frogs in a swamp in wet spring time. Just listen to their noise: "Order! Order! Order!" "For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." -(I Timothy 6:10-11). Get your book and read on to the end of the chapter. May the Lord help those of us who have been deluded, and who have been following men, to turn from the same, and help us to follow the teachings and examples found in His holy Book. C. H. C.

Another Correction

Dear Elder Cayce:

The Primitive Baptist of July 7, 1938, reached me today. I note what you have to say about the Thompson matter. However, I note that you have misunderstood me again. I said that Elder Thompson was a Mason the last years of his life, that I was in a position to know about this. But I did not say that he was not a Mason in his younger life. In fact, he moved his membership here from another state. Also, I have never heard of a man being made a Mason at the age you mention he joined this lodge. He was elected to membership, not elected to take the work, as he had taken the work before this date. He did not join the Masons at the age of seventy-one years and six months, but moved his membership here at that age. The fact that he was elected to membership carries this thought and I am surprised that you give this as the date that he joined the Masons. I did not say he joined the Masons on this date. I said he was elected to membership to this lodge on that date. Elder Chastain was right when he said that Elder Thompson was a Mason when he lived in Georgia. What I had to say did not deny this statement, as you have used my name. Now Brother Cayce, let's be fair on this matter, acknowledging to the facts in the case, and let the matter drop. You have used what I wrote you to prove that Elder Thompson was not a Mason prior to the date mentioned in my letter. I feel that this is unfair on me and does not carry the thought which I tried to convey to you. As this matter first started in your paper, I feel that it would be fair to print the above. Lloyd Sapp. P. S.-It was not the desire of anyone to offend when the correction was made in the Messenger. But, in view of the fact that you had not corrected, and knowing that you had the proof, ample time having passed, it seemed there was nothing left but to correct the error. Had you acknowledged my letter, and said nothing more, this correction would not have been necessary. Everything that I have said has been in defense of the plain truth and not with a desire to agitate, nor confuse, nor to offend. Yours in hope, Lloyd Sapp. Ashland, Mo., July 9, 1938.

Yes, we cheerfully and willingly give space for the above correction. We have no desire whatever to mislead or to make a wrong impression. But, let us keep the record straight. If our readers will refer to The Primitive Baptist of March 3, 1938, they will see that we had copied the article from the "Primitive Preacher," an "Address to Young Preachers," and that the same was in type when we received the Primitive Monitor of February, 1938, with the same article in it, and with comments from Elder John M. Thompson, in which he said that "if he had been a Mason, he was not when he wrote this address." Brother Thompson was judging the matter by the same evidence by which we were judging the matter. This was in the Primitive Monitor before it was in The Primitive Baptist. Evidently Elder John M. Thompson was mistaken, and so were we. We must have drawn the wrong conclusions from the writings of Elder Gregg Thompson. We drew that conclusion in 1917 from his writings in the "Measuring Rod," a book which he published in 1861. Elder Sapp says above, "knowing that you had the proof." You are mistaken in that for a certainty. Elder Robert Thompson published a correction of our statement which we made in September, 1917. This correction was in the Monitor of October, 1917. But we did not see it. We never had a copy of that issue of the Monitor. The first time we ever saw that correction was when it came out in the Messenger of Peace for June, 1938. Will a correction of this be made? If we had been in possession of the proof, we would have made the correction long ago. In The Primitive Baptist of September 19, 1929, is, an article from Elder Burton L. Nay, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, giving an account of a trip he had just made in West Tennessee.

He said, "Their welcome and hospitality is unforgettable. I also found a desire for unity among us rather than forced divisions." "Let us heal rather than hurt. Under present conditions and in our present state, it appears that bridges are better than bars. The truth preached in love is Zion's surcease and safeguard." This is the way Elder Nay found matters in West Tennessee in 1929. This has been the attitude of the brethren we have been associated with all along. Will a correction be made of this matter, also? Only one more word. We think that from the reading of Elder Sapp's letter in our issue of July 7 we we're entirely justifiable in the conclusion which we drew. We thought that when one makes application for membership in an order, he is either accepted or rejected by vote of the membership, and we also thought it was customary for the applicant to be recommended by some member or members if accepted. Sorry we misunderstood the meaning. Thank you for the correction. If it is not desired to agitate this matter, then it will be dropped; but we think proper corrections should be made. However, it is immaterial with us whether a correction be made concerning the above matters or not. Neither have we had, nor do we have, any desire to agitate, nor to confuse, nor to offend. C. H. C.

Tour in the North and East

---October 6, 1938

We left home on August 4, 1938, to fill appointments which were made for us by Elders J. H. Keaton and T. W. Osborne. These appointments were in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia. They closed at the New Liberty Association, at Scott Depot, W. Va., the first Sunday in September. After that list of appointments were made we agreed, by urgent request, to allow other appointments to be made in Indiana, to close on the second Sunday in September. On the trip we were in attendance at the Scioto Association, at Pleasantville, Ohio, on August 19, 20 and 21. We also attended the Muskingum Association, at St. Louisville, Ohio, on August 24 and 25. The association was one more day, but we could not remain there for the last day, although we regretted so much having to leave before the meeting was over. But we had to do this in order to meet the arrangements which had been made. Both of the meetings were good. We attended the Indian Creek Association, at Lester, W. Va., on Friday, Saturday and fourth Sunday in August. Two united with the church at this meeting. Large crowds were present each day, and it was a wonderful meeting. We were at the New Liberty Association, at Scott Depot, W. Va., on Friday, Saturday and first Sunday in September. One united with the church during this meeting. This was another wonderful meeting. On Monday, August 29, at Coal City, a brother united with the church, to be baptized later. While in Ohio we met Elder J. Harvey Daily and wife, of Macon, Ga., who were on a trip in Indiana and Ohio. Brother W. T. Daily and wife, of Indianapolis, Ind., were with them. While on the trip we tried to make a note of the names of the ministers we had the pleasure of meeting. We may have failed to get the names of some of them, but the following are the names of those we did get: Those whose homes are in Kentucky were Elders E. H. Hicks, E. N. Slusher, Levi Saylor, W. L. Kash, A. J. Christopher, S. A. Amburgey, A. L. Tackett, G. W. Hall, W. M. Caudill, M. B. Tackett, Eli Moore, A. F. Kiser and C. L. Ratcliff. Elder Ratcliff was ordained at Ray's Fork Church on Wednesday, August 10, by a presbytery composed of Elders S. E. Angle, the pastor of the church, Levi Saylor, J. H. Keaton and the writer, besides the deacon, or deacons, present, whose names we failed to get down in our notes. In addition to the names here given, we met other brethren in the ministry from Kentucky at the Indian Creek Association. We desire to give their names, and expected to get them from a minute of that meeting; but as we do not yet have a copy of the minute we cannot give their names. Neither can we give the names of all the ministers who were at that association, for the same reason. We do not wish to delay longer the writing of this account of the trip, and want to assure each one that we would be glad to give the name of each.

The ministers present at the Scioto Association were: Elders G. F. Hanover, Ashville, Ohio; M. O. Curp, Newark, Ohio; Corvin Dove, Thornville, Ohio; U. G. Porter, x Nashport, Ohio; T. W. Osborne, Coopersville, Ohio; J. H. Keaton, Huntington, W. Va.; Daily Hite, Morral, Ohio; A. D. Pitney, Maumee, Ohio; C. E. Denman, Chesterville, Ohio; Ivan Hindall, Findlay, Ohio, and the writer. Those present at the Muskingum Association were: Elders B. F. Robertson, Charleston, W. Va.; U. G. Porter, Nashport, Ohio; L. V and Daily Hite, Morral, Ohio; F. F. Burkepile, Fredericktown, Ohio; M. O. Curp, Newark, Ohio; T. W. Osborne, Coopersville, Ohio; A. D. Pitney, Maumee, Ohio; G. F. Hanover, Ashville, Ohio; J. H. Keaton, Huntington, W. Va.; Corvin Dove, Thornville, Ohio; J. S. Bibler and Herman Hartman, Newark, Ohio, and the writer. The Muskingum Association was held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 24, 25 and 26. On Wednesday night a meeting was appointed to be held at Friendship Church, in Newark, for the purpose of ordaining Brethren J. S. Bibler and Herman Hartman to the work of the ministry, they having, at their regular meeting previously, invited the ministers attending the association to be at this meeting to attend to the ordination. An account of this ordination was given in our issue of September 15, 1938. The presbytery was composed of Elders L. V Hite, Corvin Dove, F. F. Burkepile, A. D. Pitney, T. W. Osborne, C. H. Cayce, J. H. Keaton and Daily Hite, and Deacons Samuel Francis, Elmer Iden, M. B. Claggett, P. F. Lantz and Howard McCurdy. We pray the Lord to bless the labors of these dear brethren in His vineyard. On Friday, August 12, on our way from Morehead to Catlettsburg, Ky., we stopped at the home of Elder L. P. Damron, where he was lying a corpse, having quietly passed away the day before. By request we held a short service there. The family told us that the dear brother had been looking forward to being with us at Morehead. May the Lord bless the bereaved ones, is our humble prayer. The Indiana ministers we met were: Elders Ed Allen, Cecil Fuson, George Culy, L. W. Johnson, S. J. West, G. B. Green, W. A. Walters, Ernest Bradley, Earl Daily and John M. Thompson. Elder Thompson is past ninety years of age, and is in good health and is strong for a man of his age. He has traveled and preached much in the past in different states, in the South as well as North and West. We were glad to meet him once more. He was with us in Indianapolis, and seemed to enjoy the service. May the Lord continue to bless him in his last days. In all probability we shall never meet again on earth, but we hope to meet in a better country. Other ministers we met, whose names we have noted, are as follows: Elders Lowell Lilly, I W. Kilby, Willie Harvey, H. J. Cox, J. L. B. Lilly, U. G. Nichols, L. G. Mann, C. M. Pendleton and Z. T. Whaling. Besides these we met a number of others whose names we expected to get from the minute of the Indian Creek Association, which minute we do not have. We are sorry we cannot give their names, too. We traveled more than 3,000 miles on this trip. The last appointment filled was in Louisville, Ky., on Sunday night, September 11. We tried to preach nearly every day on the trip, beginning at Richmond, Ky., on Saturday, August 6, and twice on several days. We arrived home about 1 o'clock p. m. on Monday, September 12, and found all well, for which we felt to thank the good Lord. This was a pleasant trip to us. Elders Keaton and Osborne were with us most of the time on the entire trip, Elder Keaton being with us almost the entire time for five weeks. Elder Osborne was with us several days. We have had a tumor on our neck for several years. Soon after leaving home it became inflamed and broke, and it gave us a lot of trouble and pain. These brethren were good to us, and dressed the place twice every day, until we left them, a few days before we returned home. It is still, at this writing (September 21), not well, though much improved. The brethren were good to us every place we went-far better than we feel to deserve. May Heaven's richest blessings rest upon them, is our humble prayer. We desire an interest in your prayers. C. H. C.

Our Association

---October 6, 1938

Our association (the South Arkansas) was held with Pleasant Grove Church, Kirby, Ark., on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 16, 17, 18, 1938. They had preaching on Thursday night, though the associational meeting began at 10 o'clock Friday morning. The introductory sermon was preached by Elder M. A. Norman, who is the pastor of the church. The following visiting ministers, besides Elder Norman, were in attendance: Elders W. W. Fowler and J. A. Littlejohn, Dallas, Texas; D. W. Witt, Mansfield, Ark.; G. E. Griffin, Canyon, Texas; R. L. Piles, Hon, Ark.; Leon H. Clevenger, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; R. M. Willett, Platte City, Mo.; L. P. Griffin, Nixon, Texas; Lewis N. Barrow, Jr., Mena, Ark.; R. F. Pierce, Quitman, Ark.; J. F. Abernathy, Oden, Ark.; and W. J. Green, Gray, Ga. The home ministers present were: Elders W. H. Eubanks, Poplar Grove, Ark.; W. H. Lee, Donaldson, Ark.; J. W. Guest, Rolla, Ark.; John R. Harris and C. H. Cayce, Thornton, Ark. The preaching was all a unit, not a discordant note sounded, and the Lord blessed the speakers to preach the truth in love. They preached peace by Jesus Christ. And the Lord blessed the people to hear with joy and gladness. His sweet presence was felt and manifested. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Two willing ones were encouraged to come home to their friends, telling how great things the Lord had done for them. They were joyfully and gladly received, their baptism to be attended to at that church on their next regular meeting time, the second Sunday in October. It was a glorious meeting, and we are sure it will not soon be forgotten. The meeting was well cared for in every way. May the Lord bless those who so devotedly and carefully looked after the feeding and caring for the visitors, and for all who were in attendance. Good order prevailed throughout the entire meeting. The Lord willing, the association will meet next year with Macedonia Church, near Dalark, about twelve miles east, or southeast, of Arkadelphia. C. H. C.

Troubleth Israel

---October 20, 1938

Our readers will remember that we had an article in our issue of April 7, 1938, concerning Elder J. W. Fairchild and some of his works, and that he is again publishing his paper, which he is pleased to call the Footprints of the Flock, at Whitesburg, Ky. We would not have given him any notice were it not for the fact that he is again publishing this paper and representing himself to be a Primitive Baptist in order. We felt that we owed it to our people to inform them as to the status of affairs. Of course Elder Fairchild became very much wrought up on account of what we said. Below we give his entire article in reply to what we said: "HE THAT TROUBLETH ISRAEL" I am indebted to Elder C. H. Cayce, editor of The Primitive Baptist, for more than two pages of free advertising. Not many ministers are of such prominence that an editor will devote that amount of space in advertising them, so I feel greatly honored. And as a kick from some people is a boost, I have received a real boost. You know "No one ever kicks a dead dog." But there is one thing I hardly understand. If a man's influence is such that his overthrow demands the use of more than two pages of such an important paper as The Primitive Baptist, is he not worth saving? If his influence could only be turned from "bad" to good, would he not be a real asset to the cause? I suppose Elder Cayce never thought of that. At least he has never tried it. If I am in disorder among Primitive Baptists, there is no one to blame for it more than Elder J. E. Craft, of Neon, Ky. Before I united with a church in this part of the country, I wrote Elder Craft asking him about the order of the Baptists in this section, and especially the people he is with. Not one word of counsel or explanation did I receive. Instead he took my letter to Elder J. H. Keaton, and as Elder Keaton wrote him, they "agreed as to what was best to do about it." What did they agree to do about it? To tell me just what to do to get in fellowship with the true Primitive Baptists? If so, they never mentioned it to me. They never suggested that I make satisfaction to Providence Church in Mississippi. On the contrary, they kept silent till they received orders from their chief, and then went to work to secure evidence to condemn me. A fine way to bring the prodigal back into the fold, don't you think? As to the order of the Baptists with whom I am affiliated, they are about like the rest of the Baptists here in Eastern Kentucky. There has been so much strife and division among them, all doing wrong, that it does not become one faction to throw up disorder to another. But the Sandlick Association of which I am a member is the one recognized by the Three Forks and Washington Associations in Virginia. True, they recently dropped correspondence with the Sandlick Association because some of its ministers deny the humanity of Jesus. Read the February Footprints and you will find I exposed and condemned that teaching. I have been laboring to get the Baptists here out of that error, and if that is done the Three Forks and Washington Associations are ready to receive us back. As to Elder J. E. Craft's faction, they are as deep in the mud as we are in the mire. There are noble people among them, good people in all the factions and I am laboring to bring about a better understanding among them and thus promote peace and union. And were it not for men like Elder Cayce, keeping up the strife, I believe they would soon be together living in love and fellowship. If Elder Craft does not know that his statement that I have not been in fellowship with Primitive Baptists "for more than twenty years," and that I "went into North Carolina during this time and preached to them under some coloring," is not true, I pity his ignorance. As to whether I made satisfaction with Providence Church in Miss., ask the members of that church. Ask them if any one could do more to make satisfaction than I did. Ask them if they ever knew a minister to so desecrate the sacred office of pastor and manifest such a spirit of envy and hatred as Elder Lewis did that day. Brother E. T. Ruffin, Taylorsville, Miss., can give the facts in the case. When I was received into Sandlick Church, it was on a statement signed by twenty members of Providence Church, stating that I had done all in my power to make satisfaction, and that the church did wrong in not restoring me. In that statement they further said, "During Elder Fairchild's residence in this part of the country, he had the respect of every one, and his character was above reproach, and we can truthfully say we have never known a sweeter spirited brother, and his preaching was sound and God-honoring." And that is the kind of men Elder Cayce refuses to "cooperate" with, and wants the denomination to get rid of. No wonder, for he would have to stop ferreting out God's humble ministers and seeking to bring about their destruction, and cease stirring up strife and confusion in the churches, to co-operate with such a person. And it would prevent him from having charges brought against brethren and them dealt with by the church for lending support to respectable ministers of irreproachable character, whose preaching is sound and God-honoring. No, Elder Cayce would have to change harness to co-operate with such a one. I want to apologize to our readers, who do not know Elder Cayce nor read his paper, for using this space to reply to his charges. I regret to have to do so, but feel it necessary. The Footprints of the Flock is published to promote love and fellowship, peace and union, not to spread strife, nor oppose God's true ministers. And if we would all labor as hard to reclaim the erring and bring them back into the true fold as Elder Cayce and his agents do to destroy those who do not take orders from him, we would soon be one flock again and not need detectives to hatch up evidence to prove that some one is identified with the wrong faction of Baptists. But dictators are the order of the day, and if we must have one, I know of no one better qualified for the position than Elder Cayce. However, I shall continue to look to the Lord for my orders, even if it does bring down upon my head the anathemas of the big boss. The foregoing is copied from the Footprints for May, 1938. We would have replied to the same long ago, but have been away from home most of the time, and have not had time to notice the same until now. The reader will note that in the heading Fairchild places over his article that he slyly accuses us of being the one who "troubleth Israel." Well, this is just like Ahab." And it came to pass when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, Art thou he that troubleth Israel? And he answered, I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim." -((Ki 18:17) (I Kings 18:17-18). The very man who accused another of troubling Israel was the guilty party. So it is now. Fairchild is the guilty party. The reader will please take particular notice that Elder Fairchild wished to co-operate with us. Note carefully that on January 8, 1938, he said, "I have been ready at all times to co-operate with you. Were you to visit us I would ask our churches to receive you heartily, and would rejoice to have you in my home." But because we did not see proper to co-operate with him, or to "line up" with him, now he is pleased to call us a dictator and the big boss. If we are a dictator and the big boss, why would he wish to co-operate with us, and why would he ask his churches to receive us heartily? Why? Bah! The elder says he has received a real boost from what we said. Perhaps so. But he says no one ever kicks a dead dog. Perhaps not. Neither do dead dogs bark; nor do they bite. It is the dogs which bite that people need to be warned against. Hence, the warning which we gave. Most dogs that bite will slip up on the unsuspecting ones, and will bite when it is least expected. Better watch the dogs." Beware of dogs." Two legged dogs are about as bad as the other sort." Beware of dogs." Fairchild says that Elders Keaton and Craft "kept silent until they received orders from their chief," referring to us. Did they receive any orders from us? No. We made inquiry as to the body of people Fairchild is identified with, as to whether they are considered orderly Baptists, and those brethren, as faithful brethren should, got the facts and informed us; and then we published the facts. That is what hurt Fairchild. We knew he was excluded from orderly Baptists in Mississippi. And we also knew that when a man is excluded from an orderly Old Baptist Church he is thereby excluded from every orderly Old Baptist Church on earth. But Fairchild admits that he is identified with a people who deny the humanity of Jesus. But of course that is all right, as he has set in to convert them from the error of their way. So did he join the Missionary Baptists one time-or was it twice? Wonder if he joined them and set in to convert them from the errors of their way? We believe he was also once identified with the Progressives. Wonder if he united with them and set in to convert them? But the error he admits is among the people he is identified with is not the only false theory they hold to and advocate. He says, "Were it not for men like Elder Cayce, keeping up the strife, I believe they would soon be together living in love and fellowship." Our life has been an open book, and the work we have done, and the labors we have engaged in, to bring our people to a better understanding, and to get troubles among them settled and adjusted, plainly and bluntly give the lie to this statement from Fairchild. But, according to the doctrine he advocates, when convenient, he could not help it, for God predestinated beforehand that he should do what he does. It is all according to God's determinate counsel; God determined that everything should come to pass just as it does. According to his doctrine, we had to do what we did; we were just doing what God determined before to be done. He tried to line up some of our people in Arkansas and Louisiana with that "Absolute" stuff, and the result was a dead church, and to this day they have not recovered from the blow the cause received from Fairchild's work. Elder Fairchild accuses us of not laboring to bring the erring back into the fold, and of trying to destroy God's true ministers. Well, we gave Fairchild a fair trial in this country, and the result with one church where he proposed to labor was as stated above. And that was done without any interference from us. We have had enough of it in this country, and we want no more of Fairchild. We do not say this alone for ourself (for C. H. Cayce), but we say it for the Baptists of this section of country. No detectives are necessary to find out some of the course Fairchild has pursued. Too many people know something about that for a detective to be needed. As he so abused Elder G. W. Lewis in the foregoing article, we sent the paper to him, and asked him for a statement. Just here we will say that there is not a man in the whole state of Mississippi who stands higher as an honorable, upright Christian gentleman than Elder G. W. Lewis. He is not only highly respected by Primitive Baptists, but he is highly respected by all people who know him-especially in the section where he lives. We are too well acquainted with Elder Lewis and with his standing and conduct as a man and as a Baptist to even begin to believe a single word of the aspersion of Fairchild concerning his conduct. Following is the letter we received from Elder Lewis in response to our request for a statement: Auburn, Miss., Aug. 8, 1938. Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-Replying to your letter of July 8 requesting that we send you a statement for publication in reply to what Elder Fairchild says in the May issue of the Footprints of the Flock, in regard to Providence Church and our attitude in the matter, will say: We are willing for Providence Church and our friends who were present to say whether or not we conducted ourself as a pastor and moderator should under such circumstances as confronted us at that time. We have served the church continuously since, and we have never been more kindly treated and shown any more consideration than these good Baptists have shown us. We feel grateful that we have the esteem, love, confidence and fellowship, not only of the church, but of the entire community. Providence Church belongs to the Good Hope Association, of Mississippi, composed of ten orderly churches. The association is in direct correspondence with the Bethany and Amite Associations, of Mississippi, and she is in fellowship with all the orderly Primitive Baptists of Mississippi. This is the home association of Elder J. E. Alderman, who is eighty-seven years of age, and has been in the work of the ministry for over forty-seven years, and has been moderator for many years. Elder C. N. Ware, of Taylorsville, Miss., is serving five churches in this association at present. Elder G. H. Banks, of Newton, Miss., has served churches in this association for years. These are godly men, and able ministers of the gospel. Orderly ministers of the Primitive Baptist faith visit Providence Church and the Good Hope Association from Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, and perhaps other states. These Baptists are recognized as orderly Primitive Baptists by the Primitive Baptists of the entire Southland. Elder Fairchild was excluded in an orderly way by an orderly Primitive Baptist church, and that is where he stands today. In hope, G. W. Lewis. If Elder Fairchild, or any other man, objects to being investigated and ferreted out, it is very evident that something is wrong. The preacher who is all right does not object to being investigated or ferreted out.

The man posing as a preacher should be investigated and ferreted out. If he is not all right, the sooner you find it out, the better it will be for you. The Lord has set somebody on the walls of Zion as watchmen. It is the duty of the watchman to watch. If he fails to sound the alarm he is a traitor. Yes, while the good Lord spares our life, we expect, by the help and grace of God, to watch and to sound the alarm when we see one endeavoring to represent himself as a Primitive Baptist when he is not." Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple. "-Rom. xvi. 17, 18. It is not pleasant to us to engage in exposing such matters as this, but faithfulness to our God and to His cause and people requires it. We would rejoice to know that men would cease to do as some men do, but we do not expect it in this life. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away. For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts, ever learning, and never able to come to the knowlege of the truth. Now as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith." -2 Tim. iii. 1-8. C. H. C.

Studies in Predestination

---November 3, 1938

In the Footprints of the Flock for May, 1938, Elder Fairchild has a continued article under the above heading. We copy the article in full, and recommend a careful reading of it before reading what we have to say concerning the same.

THE ARTICLE

Predestination is not the incentive or motive power that causes men to do either good or bad. Men do good deeds, not because it was predestinated they should do them, but because they are prompted by a righteous spirit to do them. And they do evil deeds, not because it was predestinated they should do them, but because they are moved by an evil spirit to do them. They do good deeds for the same reason a good tree bears good fruit, and evil deeds for the same reason that a corrupt tree bears corrupt fruit. Is not that clear? I believe we are all agreed on the above statement. The thing I am trying to get all my readers to understand is that there is a vast difference between God's predestinating a thing and authorizing or causing that thing to come to pass. The Bible clearly teaches that God has predestinated many of the wicked deeds of men, but it as clearly condemns the idea that God ever causes, authorizes or influences men to do wrong. No more wicked deed was ever committed by men or devils than the betrayal, condemnation and crucifixion of Jesus Christ. And yet His inspired servants tell us, "For of a truth against thy holy child, Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do WHATSOEVER THY HAND AND THY COUNSEL DETERMINED BEFORE TO BE DONE." -((27) (Acts 4:27-28). The whole mob, Jews, Gentiles, Herod, Pontius Pilate, doing whatsoever the hand and counsel of God determined before to be done. Predestinate and determine before mean exactly the same, so those who condemned and crucified the Saviour did just what God had predestinated they should do. Will anyone dispute this? If so, will he please tell me what the above Scripture means? But while God predestinated that this should be done, was He the author of those men's sin? Did He cause or influence them to do it? Certainly not. Listen to Peter: "Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and with wicked hands have crucified and slain." -((23) (Acts 2:23). God not only foreknew, but also determined that they should condemn and crucify Jesus, and yet they did it "with wicked hands." They knew nothing about God's purpose in the death of Jesus, and voluntarily condemned and put Him to death. They were just as guilty as they would have been if God had not "before determined" or predestinated it. They knew Him not, nor understood the voice of the prophets which they read, and "fulfilled them in condemning Him." -((27) (Acts 13:27). Will any one claim that these men were not responsible for their deeds because they fulfilled God's purpose? No, they did it "with wicked hands." No doubt some one will want to know how God can predestinate an act and not be the cause or author of it. I have already shown that predestination is not the force that causes men to act, but as this is the crux of the question, let me further illustrate. Over in Eastern Tennessee there are many large springs-good size streams springing out of the earth and wending their way toward the sea. They run through rich narrow valleys, and often cut away the banks and carry off the soil. If left to take their course they would wash away much of the soil, but those farmers save their soil by keeping the stream in proper bounds. They cut a new channel and straighten the stream in one place, and put in an abutment to protect the bank in another. They do not cause the water to flow down stream, but they do fix its channel and thus save their farms. These farmers go further than just preventing the streams from washing away their land. They sometimes direct it in an entirely new channel, cutting a race for it, and bringing it around the side of the mountain to where it will have a great fall. Here they build a mill and use the force of the water in its fall to run its machinery. They did not cause the water to flow down stream, but they fixed its channel, directed its course, utilized its power and not only prevented it from destroying their lands, but made it grind their wheat and corn, and in many other ways serve the community. And who will say those farmers did wrong in fixing the channel of the stream and turning it into a blessing instead of leaving it to take its course and wash away their best soil? God no more causes men to do wickedly than those men caused the water to flow down stream. The water runs down stream because the force of gravity draws it that way; and men do wickedly because their evil lustful nature draws them that way. And as men fix the channel of the stream and turn the force of the water into a blessing, so God sets the bounds of the wicked, lays out the path they shall travel, determines or predestinates what things they may do and what things they shall not do, and thus confines their wickedness in such a channel that it works for the good of them that love God. That is not bad of God, is it? Aren't you glad that God has fixed the bounds of the wicked? If the wicked were turned loose, unrestricted and unbounded by God's decree, where would our safety be? I am not so much concerned as to whether God has predestinated the righteous deeds of men or not, for I have nothing to fear from them; but I am immensely concerned as to whether God has determined or predestinated the wicked acts of men. Only by the bounds of the wicked being unalterably set can the righteous be secure. Aren't we agreed on this? It seems to me that here our limited and unlimited predestinarians can find a common meeting ground. The contention of our limited brethren that God is not the author of sin and in no sense causes men to sin, is not only granted but advocated as strongly as they advocate it. And our unlimited brethren's argument that God's predestination or determinate counsel extends to all the wicked actions of men and devils, fixing their bounds, governing their deeds, determining what they may and may not do, is set forth in perfect harmony with His goodness and perfection. Does not each find here all for which he is contending and nothing contradictory to it?

OUR COMMENTS

The first thing we wish to say regarding the foregoing is that Elder Fairchild is here apparently engaging in his old tricks of trying to wrap up his doctrine so as to get our brethren to swallow it before they realize what it is that they are taking. Let the reader carefully note the fact that a strong effort is made in the article to convey the idea that predestination does not cause anything. Note the very first sentence in the article: "Predestination is not the incentive or motive power that causes men to do either good deeds or bad." In the Footprints for June the elder says this: I thought I made it plain last month that predestination is NEVER CAUSATIVE. Regarding predestination as causative is at the bottom of most of the schisms over that subject. If God's predestination is not causative, and never causes anything to come to pass-if predestination has nothing whatever to do with a thing coming to pass- then why be such a stickler for the doctrine that God predestinated all things that come to pass? Why be so bent on advocating that doctrine, if God's predestination has nothing to do with things coming to pass? If God's predestination of a thing has nothing whatever to do with that thing coming to pass, then the thing predestinated would come to pass just as well, and just the same, without God's predestination as with it. God's predestination, then, is a useless thing, and nothing ever comes of it, either good or bad. The doctrine may be the truth, but we are not yet ready to accept it. Are you? Let us try that just a little. Let us first call attention to (Romans 8:28-29,30): And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified. In this God the Father is for you in foreknowledge and predestination; the Holy Spirit is for you in calling; the Son is for you in justification; and the final end of all this is the final glorification of every heir of promise -every one that loves God; every one that was known beforehand by the Father in the covenant of grace. Take God's foreknowledge out of the matter, and not one would be glorified. Take the calling out of it, and not one would be glorified. Take justification out of it, and not one would be glorified. Hence, all these, together, is the cause why one is glorified. Not only so, but take God's predestination out of it, and not one would be glorified-unless it should be done by accident. Hence, God's predestination is linked in as a part of the cause of one being glorified. To deny that God's predestination is a part of the cause why one is glorified is to simply deny the certainty of the final salvation and glorification of any poor sinner. Primitive Baptists have always held that the final salvation and glorification of all the elect of God is certain and sure, because God has predestinated, determined beforehand, that they should be conformed to the image of His Son, and finally glorified in heaven. But if predestination has nothing whatever to do with a thing coming to pass, then the Primitive Baptists have been wrong in this contention all along the line. Are you ready to surrender, and to renounce, the truthfulness of the doctrine which has been characteristic of our people all along? Let us have another text-Eph. i. 3, 4, 5, 6: Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love: having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the beloved. In this we have the fact that those who were chosen in Him before the ages of time began were predestinated unto the adoption of children. That is, God predestinated that those He chose should be adopted into the heavenly family-predestinated them unto the adoption of children. If predestination has nothing to do with a thing being done-and never causative-then God's predestination is no part of the cause of one being adopted into the heavenly family-it has nothing to do with, and is no part of the cause of, one receiving the "adoption of children." But God does adopt every one He chose, and they are taken finally into the heavenly family in glory, because He has "predestinated us unto the adoption of children." God determined beforehand that they should be thus adopted, and He brings them into His heavenly family in accord with His previous determination, or His previous purpose thus to do. Predestination does have something to do with this coming to pass. In the June issue of the Footprints Elder Fairchild also says: "Therefore, to be consistent we must contend for the predestination of all things or nothing." There you are, flatly! If we must contend for the predestination of God in the salvation of sinners, we must also contend that He predestinated all things that come to pass. If He predestinated all things that come to pass, then He also predestinated all the crimes, and all the sins, that are committed in the world. According to this, God predestinated all the sins that we commit; then He predestinated to save us from our sins. If this is true, then He predestinated to save us from His own predestination! Bosh! When Elder Fairchild was publishing the Footprints in 1909 he said in that paper for September, 1909: This world is governed by the law of cause and effect-not one thing is left to blind chance. There is not only a cause for every effect, but there is a cause for every cause except the First Cause. The First Cause is an uncaused cause-all the reasons for its existence are in itself. First Cause is another name for God. God is the first cause of all causes. We replied to this in The Primitive Baptist of October 26, 1909. See page 314 of our Editorial Writings, Volume I We quote these few words from that reply: According to the logic of it God did not cause Adam to violate the law, but the devil caused Adam to do so. And Elder Fairchild says God is the first cause of all causes. Then God caused the devil to cause Adam to violate the law. Adam would not have violated the law if the devil had not caused him to do so; and the devil would not have caused Adam to violate the law if God had not caused him to do that. There can be no effect without a cause. Then Adam could not have violated the law if the devil had not caused him to do so, and the devil could not have caused Adam to violate the law if God had not caused him to do so. If this does not make God the author and the first cause of sin, we confess we do not know the meaning of the words. There is no use caviling over the matter; it simply makes God the first cause and the author of all sin. In the article above Elder Fairchild refers to, and quotes, what we consider to be the strongest text in the Bible in support of the doctrine that God predestinated all things that come to pass. {((27) (Acts 4:27-28)} Note that He says the "whole mob, Jews, Gentiles, Herod, Pontius Pilate" "did just what God had predestinated they should do." If God is pleased with His predestination, then He was pleased with what that ungodly mob did. According to that doctrine, they were doing the will of God. In ((0) (Matthew 12:50) Jesus said," For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." According to Elder Fairchild's doctrine, those wicked men-the whole mob -Jews, Gentiles, Herod, Pontius Pilate, and all the rest of that motley crowd-were, and are, brother, and sister, and mother of the blessed Son of God! And so is the devil brother, and sister, and mother of the blessed Jesus, for he does the will of God, too; for the Lord predestinated that he should do everything he does. As another said, who advocates the same doctrine Elder Fairchild does, "God could not lie, but He raised up a nasty little devil to do His lying for Him." This doctrine these fellows advocate, sure enough, makes God meaner than the devil. Let us here have the text above referred to. First, we will quote, as follows, beginning with verse 5 {((5) (Acts 4:5)} down to and including ((22) (Acts 4:22): And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes, and Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John not the Apostle John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem. And when they had set them Peter and John in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this? Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, if we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole; be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus. And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it. But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves, saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it. But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name. And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus. But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done. For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was shewed. We have taken this long extract from this chapter to show plainly what gave rise to the following-or to what is embraced in ((26) (Acts 4:26-27,28). It is plainly seen here that these wicked men-the rulers, elders, scribes, Annas, Caiaphas, John, Alexander, and the kindred of the high priest-were threatening the apostles and forbidding them to speak in the name of Jesus. When Peter and John were thus threatened and forbidden to speak in the name of Jesus they were let go. See ((23) (Acts 4:23): And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them. ((24) (Acts 4:24) says, "And when they heard that." The antecedent of the pronoun they is their own company, in ((23) (Acts 4:23). Their own company, to whom Peter and John went, heard the report, which they made, of the threatenings of those wicked men. So, let us read ((24) (Acts 4:24): And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said. Just here let us interrupt the reading to ask a question or two. If God predestinated everything that comes to pass, and His predestination is according to His will, then were not those wicked men doing what was God's will for them to do? And, as the apostles lifted up their voice with one accord in prayer to God, did they pray for God's will to be done? If so, did they not pray for those wicked men to do just what they were doing? Did not Jesus teach His disciples to pray to the Lord, "Thy will be done?" Is it not a fact that the prayer of the apostles here simply resolves itself into a request, or a pleading, for the Lord to interpose and to interfere with these wicked men, and to hinder and prevent them from carrying out their wicked threats and designs? It is simply a pleading unto Him that He would do in this case as in another, to which they refer. Now, let us read on: And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against His Christ. For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done. And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word, by stretching forth thy hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.-((24) (Acts 4:24-30). This is plainly a prayer to God to prevent these wicked men from carrying out their threats and designs. It is a prayer to God to interfere in this case, just as He did in the other case, when Herod, Pontius Pilate, and the wicked mob were gathered together against His Christ. Did the Lord interfere in that case, and hinder, or prevent, them from carrying out their design? He most surely did. They did not carry out His predestination. The Lord did not allow them to do that. He does not allow wicked men and devils to carry out His predestination; He carries that out Himself. It was God's predestination that Jesus should die-that He should lay down His life. Those wicked men had tried, from the time of His birth,.to take His life; but the Lord did not allow them to take it. Jesus said: {(John 10:11,15,17-18)} "I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." "And I lay down my life for the sheep." "Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father." Here we have it plainly that they did not take His life; but it was according to the will of the Father that the Son die. So those wicked men were not allowed to take His life. Their purpose and design was thwarted and overthrown. So, the apostles, in the text just referred to above, prayed the Father to thwart and prevent the carrying out of the designs of these wicked men in this instance, as He did before. When the soldiers came to the Saviour, as He hung on the cross, with the thieves, the thieves were not dead, but Jesus was dead already. {see (John 19:33)}} In ((23) (Acts 2:23) it is said that He was delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God; but it does not say that what those people did was by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God. What they did was not by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, but was by wicked hands. God's determinate counsel was one thing, and what they did was another thing. It was by nothing else than by the devil's own lie and invention that men have advocated the idea that those wicked men and devils were fulfilling and doing and carrying out God's will, purpose, pleasure, and predestination. We never have believed it, and we do not now believe it, and never expect to believe it. If that doctrine is the truth, the eternal God has unalterably fixed, predestinated and decreed from eternity that we should not believe it-and we are glad He did. With these things before us, what shall we say? It is very clear and evident that all this pretense of pleading for peace and reconciliation is pure buncombe. This, above, is the blasphemous doctrine you swallow when you "swallow Fairchild." Excuse us, please. We still stand just where we have stood all along the line. See our Editorial Writings, Volume I, pages 18, 335, 337, and 340; Volume II, page 218; Volume IV, page 389, as well as other articles in our writings on the same subject. Such doctrine always has caused trouble when advocated among Primitive Baptists, and it always will. It is heresy of the blackest sort and of the very deepest dye. The sooner the Primitive Baptists get rid of every mother's son that advocates it, the better off they will be. Put such as that out of the boat, and stop up the leak, to keep it out, or else the boat will sink; the candlestick will be removed, and the blessings and privileges of gospel worship and service will be taken from that place. This is verified from the history of the past. May the Lord deliver His poor little children from such doctrine, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Encouraging Letter

---November 3, 1938

Dear Brother Cayce: I have just finished reading Volume II of your Editorial Writings. I read Volume I some time back. Surely The Primitive Baptist has been an Old Baptist paper all along the line. It is still contending for the same doctrine and principles that it did fifty years ago. We love that doctrine and those principles. We love those who have not been afraid to speak out in defense of that doctrine. Brother Cayce, you have been plain-spoken. We were never left to guess as to where you stood. We love you for that, and would love to encourage you while we can. We know that you have had many trials, and many burdens to bear; the world has tried hard to crush you, but God has upheld you through it all. You have never been willing to compromise with error, but always ready to expose it. You are old now, and must soon lay your armor down; you have fought a good fight; you have contended earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. You have fought many battles for the dear old church; you have won many battles for it-and we love you. Some day we will go to our mail box and get our paper, and these words will stare us in the face: "Elder C. H. Cayce passes away." Oh, how we will miss you! There will be weeping in Israel. We will then think of many things we should have said to encourage and help you along the way. I wish all of the Old Baptists would tell you of their appreciation for you now. We do appreciate you and your labors and efforts. We pray God to continue to uphold you by His righteous omnipotent hand. Remember us at a throne of grace. Your brother in hope, Lewis Keith. Quay, New Mex.

REMARKS

Were it not for an occasional letter like the above we feel that we would have given up in despair long ago. "Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing to both small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come." --((22) (Acts 26:22). Not only has the world tried to crush us, but some of "our folks" have done the same. Persecutions from the world are not so hard to bear, but the daggers that come from within our own borders hurt. But the Lord has sustained us, and many brethren have been good to us, and have helped us much along the way. We have already forgiven those who have maligned us, and pray God to forgive them and help them to walk in the right and in the "good old way." Pray for us. C. H. C.

Hardshell Bragging Again

---November 17, 1938

Under the above heading is an article on page 4 of the so-called Orthodox Baptist Searchlight of July 11, 1938, by the Hon. Rt. Rev. Ben M. Bogard (or, rather Blowhard), D. D., LL. D. (and as many other D's as we suppose he could get), which some persons have asked us about. The article reads as follows: Brother P. P. Heliums, Russellville, Ala., writes: "I am sending you a clipping from a Hardshell paper. The reason I am sending this is that some of them around here are boasting that you will not meet Cayce, their big man, in debate. I want you to write me a personal letter telling me if you will meet him in debate, and also answer in your paper." It is very strange that Hardshells should boast of me not meeting Cayce in debate when I met him and so completely routed him that he cannot be induced to meet me again. It has been tried and he refuses to meet me. I met him at Little Flock Church near Burnsville, Miss., and he was OFFERED ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS IN CASH DEPOSITED IN THE BANK AT WIN-FIELD, Ala., if he would repeat the debate at Winfield, Ala. Witness, Mr. W. J. Perry, Winfield, Ala., and Elder Abner Green, Guin, Ala., and numerous others living near Burnsville, Miss. But what if I had refused to meet him in debate? I should not be blamed for according to the Hardshell doctrine it was thus foreordained from before the foundation of the world. Sic! We do not know what clipping Mr. Heliums sent the Rev. (?) Blowhard. But the first thing we wish to call attention to is what Bogard says our doctrine is. This he knows very well is not true. He knows very well that we teach no such thing. That is what he charged on us in the debate near Leedy, Miss., and he knows we corrected him on it, and he refused to accept the correction and said we taugt and argued it there. He knows we finally told him that he was a liar; that we said no such thing. He knows this, and still he makes the assertion that this is our doctrine. He knows better. He has read The Primitive Baptist enough to know that we have fought that doctrine all along. But there is no use to correct Bogard on anything. So long as he can make his people believe that is our doctrine he will continue to try to do so. But he named some witnesses in his article that one hundred dollars had been put on deposit in a bank at Winfield for us to meet him there in a debate. He made that statement in his paper quite awhile ago- perhaps about the first of the year 1924, or earlier. On May 30, 1924, we wrote to Brother S. W. Lucas, Win-field, Ala., and asked him to find out the facts in regard to this matter. On June 17, 1924, Brother Lucas wrote to us, and in that letter he said: Now as to the $100 being on deposit here at Winfield for you to meet Bogard. I did not know any better way to get at facts than to ask the Missionaries about it. One of them said he told an outsider (not a member of the Primitive order) that Cayce would not meet Bogard again for $100; but all of the other Missionaries whom I've talked with say there is not, nor has not, been any $100 as a standing offer for Cayce to meet Bogard at Winfield. Since Brother Lucas wrote the letter of above date he has passed away. He was a man of unquestioned truth and veracity. So that shows the statement by Bogard to be untrue. But since he published the statement copied above in his paper of July 11, 1938, and gave the name of two parties as witnesses, we thought it might be prudent for us to investigate the matter a little farther. So we called on a friend of ours here in Thornton, who is an honorable man, and a member of the Missionary Baptist Church here, and showed him the paper, and asked if he would do us the favor of writing to those two witnesses given by Bogard and ask them about it. He readily granted the request, and wrote them as follows:

Mr. W. J. Perry, Winfield, Ala.

Dear Sir: I am writing you in regard to a proposed debate between Elder Cayce and Elder Bogard at Winfield. I see in the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight that Elder Bogard says one hundred dollars was deposited in a bank there for Elder Cayce to meet him in debate. In what bank was the money deposited? Is it still on deposit there, to be paid to Elder Cayce if he will meet Elder Bogard there in debate? What bank is the money deposited in? I will thank you for this information. I belong to the First Baptist Church, Thornton, Ark. Respectfully, C. C. Strickland. A verbatim copy of the above letter was addressed to Elder Abner Green, and mailed to him at Guin, Ala. Mr. Perry replied as follows: Sept. 26, 1938. Dear Sir, Amos sorry but I don't know anything about the matters you mention above; if you will write me the particulars, I will try to investigate and see if there is now or has been such as you mention. Respt., W. J. Perry. A few days after receiving the above letter from Mr. Perry our friend received the following: Guin, Ala., Oct. 6, 1938. Mr. Strickland: There is nothing of a debate at Winfield between Elder Bogard and Cayce, but they are about to get up a debate at Winfield with the Campbellites, if they can get someone to debate with them. Well, Mr. Green has done passed over; he died the 10th of January. So I will answer, instead of him. Mrs. A. W. Green. R. 2, Guin, Ala. Now, there you are! On July 11 Bogard gives a witness who passed over on the tenth of last January! The living witness says he knows nothing about it. Say, Bogard, your living witness will have to stand aside. He is not a competent witness, for he knows nothing about it! Wonderful witness! And the second witness is dead, and had been dead six months when you gave his name. Say, Bogard, have you had a letter from him since he left Alabama? Why did you not give his present address? Can you tell us how we can get information from him now? His wife answered for him, as he is beyond reach now, and says there is nothing of a debate between Bogard and Cayce. The reader may ponder these matters, and judge for yourself as to Bogard's brag-for brag is all that it is, except that it is plainly void of truth. Poor Blowhard! Wonder if that is the way he expects to get to heaven! C. H. C.

Titus 2; 3:15

---December 1, 1938

Exhort servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things; not answering again; not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity; that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.-(Titus 2:9-10). In this the apostle has instructed Titus to teach and so instruct as is here quoted. Servants were to be taught, instructed, and exhorted to conduct themselves as here laid down. They were to be exhorted to be obedient unto their own masters. This does not necessarily mean that the masters were the actual owners of the servants. A servant is "any person employed by another and subject in his employment to his employer's directions and control; an agent who is subject to the direction and control of his principal. One who serves, or does services, voluntarily or on compulsion; a person who is employed by another for menial offices, or for other labor, and is subject to his command; a person who labors or exerts himself for the benefit of another, his master or employer." See Webster's International Dictionary. If one is employed by another, then he is a servant of that employer. He may not be a good servant, or he may be a good servant-depending upon how well he serves. If he is not a good servant, then he will not remain indefinitely in the employ of the master or principal-that is, if the principal, or manager of the business, cares for the success of the business he is engaged in. This is a self-evident fact, and needs no proof. If one who is at the head of a business is aware of the fact that those under him are not conducting themselves according to the instruction given in our text, then it is manifest that the manager himself is not true. There is something wrong with him. The business is not his own; and so he becomes a servant over other servants. Allowing the servants under him to continue in their stations, and they not being true to the master, he thereby becomes a traitor to the master, or to the employer. This principle is true, and holds good in all walks of life, whether in business affairs or governmental affairs. Now make your own application of this, and see where our people stand. Purlioning means "to take away for one's self; hence, to steal; filch; to practice theft; to steal." See Webster's International Dictionary. If one is employed by another, and is paid so much per day, or so much per week, or month; and is supposed to work so many hours per day, or per week, or per month, then that much of his time belongs to his employer. If he is to work one hour for the employer, then that hour of his time belongs to his employer. And that means for him to give the very best of his strength and talent to the work he is employed to do during that hour. If the servant wastes five minutes of that hour he has niched the employer that much; he has stolen that much from the employer. If a man is employed by the government on W. P. A. work-or any other work, for that matter-and he wastes his time, by leaning on his shovel, or in any other way, he has stolen that time from the government. As the worker is, himself, a part of the government, of course he has stolen a small fraction of that wasted time from himself, and in the final accounting he and his own children, or family, will have it to pay for. About as mean a man, we believe, as we have ever heard of along that line is a man who will steal money out of one of his pockets and put it in another. But such a worker steals from all the taxpayers of the nation, for they have the bill to pay. In the morning of time, according to the record we have in God's Book, our Bible, we have it that God said, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground." - (Genesis 2:19). "In the sweat of thy face" signifies labor, work. This is what God said about it. That is the fiat of the great King and Ruler over all. It has never been' revoked or repealed, or even suspended. That is the only honorable way to obtain a living here in this world. This will remain true as long as the world stands. There are only three ways by which one may obtain a living here. One way is to work for it; another way is to beg; the other way is to steal. If one is able to work, it is dishonorable to beg. If one is not able to work and is in destitute circumstances, the same Ruler over all has made it the personal duty of those who have of this world's goods to supply the needs of the destitute. But it was never made the duty of governments by the Ruler over all to supply those needs. When people attempt to carry out these things in such a way, it is no better than to presume that they have a better way of doing things than the all wise God has directed. No other way will do as well as God's way. "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat." -((Th 3:10) (II Thessalonians 3:10). That way and plan seems to be all out of date in these times. That is too old and out of date for us in these latter days. The plan now seems to be to feed and take care of those who will not work, and all live easy. In the law which God gave in ancient times He said; "Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work." This is found in ((0:9) (Exodus 20:9); in ((21) (Exodus 34:21) He said, "Six days thou shalt work." But now we must cut down on the work, and live without doing much of that. A flagrant violation of what God has commanded. If we want happiness and prosperity in the land, or in the church, do what God has commanded; live in obedience to His laws and commandments. But does the infallible and sufficient rule-the Book of God-give any instruction to the masters? Yes, indeed. "Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven." -(Colossians 4:1). Read also (Ephesians 6:5-9). Which is the worse, for the servant to steal, or for the master? Is it not just as bad for one to steal as for the other? If the master fails to give that which is just to the servant, then the master is stealing from the servant; but that is no more wrong than for the servant to steal from the master. And if one does wrong that does not justify the other in doing wrong. Two wrongs never make a right. "But shewing all good fidelity." Fidelity means "faithfulness; adherence to right; careful and exact observance of duty, or discharge of obligations; especially, adherence to a person or party to which one is bound; loyalty." See Webster's International Dictionary. It seems to us that this is so clear that no further comment is needed. We should all be faithful and loyal in discharging every duty which devolves upon us, in every walk of life. May the Lord help us to think on these things, and give us strength for our day and for every trial. C. H. C.

---December 15, 1938

This issue brings volume fifty-three of The Primitive Baptist to a close. Fifty-three years of publishing this paper have been finished. Many changes have come during these years. There have been wars, and famines, and pestilences, and fires, and earthquakes, and storms, and cyclones, and tornadoes, and failures, and depressions, and high prices, and low prices, and surpluses, and short crops, uprisings, and downittings, dark days, and days of sunshine, and extravagance, and bankruptcies, and poverty-stricken ones, and millionaires-and what not. Through it all the Lord has brought us to this good hour. His mercies have never failed, and He has not changed. He is the same God that He was fifty-three years ago, and the same that He has ever been. His truth is the same. There has been no change in the principles of truth. God is the author of all truth, and so there is no change in truth. No matter what the circumstances may have been, or what they may be, what was a principle of truth any number of years ago is a principle of truth today. We asked a man once if he would then unqualifiedly endorse an article which he wrote several years before. After a time he answered that he would if the circumstances were the same. Would circumstances. change a principle of truth? If it was wrong to lie fifty-three years ago, it is wrong to lie today. It has always been wrong to lie. It has always been wrong to steal. It has always been wrong to commit adultery, and it is wrong yet. It has always been right to contend for the truth, and it is right to do that yet. It has always been right for one to acknowledge his mistakes, and correct them when possible, and it is right yet. But there have been some men all along the line who would not do that, and there are some who are that way yet. We suppose it will always be that way. "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived," so says God's Book, and we still believe that, as we have been doing all these years. The Lord has cared for His church ever since He set it up here in the world, and He is caring for it yet. He has promised to preserve His kingdom, and "all the promises of God in Christ Jesus are yea and amen, to the glory of God." There have been, and may yet be, dark and dismal scenes for His humble poor to pass through; but "God is faithful, by whom ye were called into the fellowship of His Son." God cares for the sparrows, and He cares for His little children. His mercies are everlasting. He never fails. He has never left us alone. He has been with us, and cared for us, in many deep sorrows and distresses. Blessed be His holy name, for His wonderful works to the children of men! Though the people forsake Him, though His children be forgetful and neglectful, yet He has never forgotten or been neglectful of them. He is rich in mercy. Being rich, the supply of mercy and grace is inexhaustible. There is no such thing as His mercy being exhausted. If it should be exhausted, everlasting ruin would be ours-not one would escape. Notwithstanding the great wickedness in the world today, yet the Lord is merciful, and still preserves the universe and the world still stands. But there may be a great scourging ahead-unless some turn from their wicked way and from the course that things are going. May the Lord pity us, and preserve His faithful few from the awful catastrophe. Let us count up our blessings, if we can. Surely the Lord has been good to us all. Notwithstanding the great wickedness going on in our own nation, yet the Lord has been good, and is good, to this wicked nation. Think of the war going on in Spain, and in China, and the serious and dire threatenings of war in the entire old world! Yet, this nation is still blessed with peace with other nations and among ourselves. Wonderful blessing! Do we appreciate it as we should? Should we not, with the close of this year and the ushering in of another New Year, consecrate and dedicate our lives anew to the service and praise and adoration of our God, and begin the coming year with renewed determination, and by His help, to be more devoted to Him than we have in the past? May His blessings rest upon you, dear reader; and when you pray, please remember us and our little family. Pray God to forgive all our past mistakes and follies, and to help us to live closer to Him what remaining days we have left us on earth. C. H. C.

INTRODUCTION TO VOLUME LIV

---January 5, 1939

Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.--(3) (Philippians 3:13-14). As we pondered in mind the matter of writing an article as an introductory to Volume LIV the above Scripture came to mind. The expression, "I count not myself to have apprehended" means that he did not claim that he yet possessed what he evidently desired to possess and to attain to, as expressed in the language following. But he expressed a desire and determination to "press toward the mark." That signifies a desire to press forward. In a great measure the beloved apostle here expressed the desire of our poor heart as we enter this new year and new volume of The Primitive Baptist. We would be glad if every reader could and would join with us in "forgetting those things which are behind." So many things have been done in the past which should be forgiven and forgotten. Things have been said which should not have been said. They cannot be unsaid. But we can confess our wrongs, whether those wrongs were wrong words or wrong deeds. And we can and should forgive those who have trespassed against us. "It is human to err and divine to forgive." We do not have a mind to write a long article as an introductory to this volume. We do feel, however, to say that it is our desire to labor for the unity and peace of the Lord's dear children. It is our desire to labor for the unifying of the church in all places. We confess that sometimes things creep into our columns which should not be published. We confess that we make mistakes, and sometimes let things go in that should not be allowed. Perhaps some may think they could do better in the publishing of an Old Baptist paper than we do; and perhaps they could. It would be too bad if no one on earth could do any better than we do in some things. But sometimes we are imposed on. Sometimes things are sent to us for publication which should not be published, but it may be concerning something we know nothing about, and we are innocent in the matter. It may be a matter that looks good to one who does not know all about the matter. When such is the case, somebody has not dealt honestly with the editor; and the editor is blamed for the matter unless he will publish something contrary to the other, or make some statement about it, by way of correction or exposing it. If he does that he sure incurs the displeasure of some, and so somebody is "ruffled," no matter how things may go in the premises. Things like this have been encountered by us along the line. But we desire to be as the apostle, "forgetting those things which are behind." We still desire to be "reaching forth unto those things which are before." "The mark for the prize of the high calling" is before. So it is needful to press forward. Let us not go backward. "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God." -((62) (Luke 9:62). If a man is plowing in a field and looks back, he is sure to plow a crooked furrow. Let us keep our faces turned toward Jerusalem. Let us "press toward the mark." To press is to push hard. Labor to that end. "Strive for the things that make for peace." Do the things that tend to peace and not confusion. DO as well as TALK. Let us not be found talking peace and about peace, and doing contrary to our talk. "And let the peace of God rule in your hearts." -(Colossians 3:15). If we let the peace of God rule in our hearts, we will labor for peace. May the Lord help us to thus labor in the publication of this volume of The Primitive Baptist, and every volume He may permit us to live and publish, is our humble prayer. Brethren, reader, will you pray for us to this end? C. H. C.

Remembrances

---January 5, 1939

Here we are now, wanting to say something, and we do not know what to say nor how to say it. We just do not know how to find words to tell how thankful we feel and how much we appreciate the kind remembrances we have received during the holidays. Many nice and beautiful and splendid cards have been received during the holidays. Many sent us substantial gifts as an expression of Christian love and affection. We appreciate all these things more than we have words to tell. These gifts and remembrances have all helped to lighten our burdens, and have helped to make us feel lighthearted, and have given us renewed courage to press on in our efforts to serve the Lord and His dear people. They have brought to us the assurance and renewed evidences that we are not without friends, and that we have them in different states and different parts of the country. Many times we have felt to be cast down and almost forsaken and alone; but we know now that we are not forsaken, nor are we alone. May Heaven's richest blessings rest upon each and every one who has thus brought cheer and courage to us-to the editor and his dear companion and children-during these holidays. Our sincere and hearty thanks to each one. Again we say, may the Lord bless you. C. H. C.

Triune God

---January 19, 1939

Sister Bettie Murrie, of Avant, Okla., and Brother W. T. Parker, of Purvis, Miss., asked us some time ago to give our views on the Trinity in the Godhead. Sister Murrie asked if they are three spirit beings. We will try to give our views of the matter in a very brief way. In the first verse of the Bible we have the language, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." The word which is here, as well as in other places in the Old Testament, translated God is a word which denotes a plurality-that is, more than one; rather, it denotes one composed of more than one. The word does not signify as to how many the one is composed of, but it is more than one. A plurality is an indefinite number; but it is more than one. It may be two, or three, or four, or any other number more than one. But though God be composed of more than one, yet He is but one God. Christ (Jesus) was God; and He was also man. He was the Son of Mary and He was also, at the same time, the Son of God. He was God manifest in the flesh. {(I Timothy 3:16)} He was the Word; see (John 1:1) "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Turn and read the following verses. (John 1:14) tells us that "the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." So, now we have the Son of God, which also carries with it the idea of a Father. Here is something which puzzles the finite mind-how that Christ could be God, or called God, and also called the Son of God; how He could be the Son, and still be as old as the Father. This is true, however, from the fact that He was and is the eternally begotten Son of God. Hence, though they be thus spoken of as Father and Son, yet they are one. They are one in divine essence, one in power, one in purpose, one in glory. Paul tells us in (Hebrews 1:3) that the Son is the express image of the Father. The terms "Holy Ghost" and "Holy Spirit" mean the same thing. "God is a Spirit." - (John 4:24). So, we have three, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, or Holy Spirit. "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one." - (I John 5:7). The three are the One God. But, though they are one, they are spoken of as separate, from the different office work of the three Divine Persons in the one Godhead. It was the office work of the Father to elect, make choice of His people, and to predestinate them unto the adoption of sons; it was the office work of the Son to redeem; and it is the office work of the Holy Spirit to regenerate those whom the Son redeemed, and to bring them into divine relationship with God. The work of the salvation of poor sinners is, therefore, all the work of God, and will end in the final glorification of all the heirs of promise. In (Genesis 1:26) we have this language, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." A likeness is a picture. Although God is a Spirit, yet man is a faint picture of Him. God is spoken of as having a head, eyes, ears, nostrils, body, hands, arms, feet, etc., and man has all these. We do not understand that God has these things literally, or materially, as we do; but these things picture God to us but faintly. He is an infinite being, and cannot be comprehended by finite beings, as we are. But man is one composed of three-the body, the soul, and the spirit. We can divide between the soul or the spirit and the body; but we cannot divide between the soul and the spirit; but the Lord can. (Hebrews 4:12-13) "For the Word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in His sight," etc. Here we have it that the Word of God can and does divide between the soul and the spirit; but man cannot do this. As God is one composed of three, so is man one composed of three-thus, not only in the likeness of God, but also in the image of God. The man, the one made in the likeness and image of God, is the only being of God's creation that sinned. These are a few of our thoughts on this wonderful subject, though we have written more than we thought we would when we began this. May the Lord bless the same to the benefit of the reader. C. H. C.

When Are We Sheep?

---January 19, 1939

Quite a while ago Brother Pleasant Brown, of Bloomington, Ind., asked us to give a definition on "when are we sheep?" In the mind and purpose of God His people were always His sheep. Before they had any existence, even in eternity, before time was, they were embraced in the everlasting covenant, which is ordered in all things and sure. Hence, in His purpose they were His sheep then. But being members of the Adam family, they were involved in sin in the fall, or in the transgression of Adam. They went into bondage in that transgression, and so they needed to be redeemed. To redeem is to buy back. In the everlasting covenant they were given to the Son. When the fullness of the time was come Christ came into the world, made of a woman, born of the virgin Mary, and redeemed them from under the curse of the law. He paid the redemption price in full. Then they were His sheep by redemption. Then the Holy Spirit comes into the heart of every heir of promise, just at the right time-not a moment too soon, nor a moment too late, and quickens them into divine life; raises them up out of a state of death in sin to a life in Christ. By this work they are brought into divine relationship with God; they are made partakers of His divine nature. Then they are thus made His sheep by divine relationship. In the resurrection at the last day their bodies will be raised from the dead, made spiritual-for it is the same body that is sown a natural body that is raised a spiritual body. Then, in soul, body, and spirit, they will be received into glory-glorified-and will dwell with the Lord in eternity. May this be your happy lot, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Could He Have Kept From It?

---February 2, 1939

A brother has asked us "if Adam, in the garden, could have kept from eating the apple?" We do not know whether the fruit he ate was an apple or not; we rather think, if it "was an apple, it may have been a crab apple. A crab apple will make your mouth "pucker," and the mouth of man seems to have been "puckered" all along down the line. Perhaps it was sour grapes that he ate, as the children's teeth have been on edge. Do you know anything about 'possum grapes? Maybe it was 'possum grapes he ate. Or it might have been a peach, or an apricot. Anyhow, laying aside foolishness, we have been under the impression that it was the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil that he ate. It seems to us that this is the way we have learned it in the Book. The man violated the law which God gave him. If the man could not help doing what God told him not to do, then punishment could not possibly be inflicted upon any principle of justice. If the man did violate the law, which he did, and he is justly punished for the violation, then he could have kept from violating it.

Paul, the inspired apostle to the Gentiles, said that "the law is just." As the law is just, then the punishment of the violator is just; and as the punishment of the violator is just, then the man did not have to violate the law. If he could not have obeyed and kept the law, then he had to violate it. If it is argued that he had to violate it in order that people be saved in heaven, then that makes the salvation of men and women dependent upon wicked works-the very worst sort of Arminianism. God knew what the man could do just as well as He knew what he would do. To say that the man had to violate the law because God knew that he would is to deny that God knew the other side of the question. The man who argues that a thing had to be the way it was because God knew it would be that way denies the foreknowledge of God, for he denies that God knew the other side of the question. The servant that received one talent hid his Lord's money; but the talent was given according to his ability. Hence he had the ability to improve the talent. God gave him the ability and then gave him the talent. As God knew he had the ability, He knew he could improve the talent. But He also knew that he would not improve it. He knew both sides of the question. The brother also asks, "If he could, why did Christ stand as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world?" To this we will say that He did not. We have heard that said times without number. There is no such statement as that in God's Book. (Revelation 13:8) says, "And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship Him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Their names were written from the foundation of the world. Where were they written? In the book of life. What book of life? Of the Lamb slain. If He stood, He was not slain. If He was slain, He did not stand. That very expression is self-contradictory, and we have often wondered why brethren would use it. Why not quit contradicting yourselves? (Revelation 17:8) says: "And they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world." This shows that what was from the foundation of the world was the writing of their names. The Lord knew that His people would fall into the bondage of sin, as well as He knew that man did not have to transgress, and so Christ was made surety for them. C. H. C.

Bible Classes

---February 2, 1939

We see in the Baptist Trumpet that they have some so-called Bible classes now. That is the way they usually start a Sunday school in Primitive Baptist churches—just call the thing a Bible class. Of course they are following the Lord in this; for did not Paul say, in (Titus 1:5) "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee?" The word wanting means left undone, according to the marginal reading. So the apostles left undone the matter of organizing Bible classes or Sunday schools, but authorized the organization of such things in this language. So they also left undone the organization of ladies' aid societies, women's missionary societies, junior leagues, senior leagues, ladies' auxiliaries, and the thousand-and-one other things which the world has. You folks may be kept busy now for a few years in catching up with the world in these matters you have started into. Go to it, boys. You have imbibed the Campbellite theory that baptism is a cure-all, and now you are taking on the Sunday school idea. We suggest for your next move to get some Campbellite or other Arminian literature for your Sunday school, as we see your class is open to all. Phew! That thing stinks! C. H. C.

Meetings Resumed

---February 2, 1939

In our issue of November 17, 1938, was a notice under the above heading of meetings being resumed at a certain place in New Mexico. After the paper was sent out some party wrote us that those people had been excluded. So we tried to investigate the matter to some extent, and we got the information that there has been some trouble there. We did not learn enough about the matter to form an opinion as to the merits or demerits of the case; but it seems to us that everything is not just right at that place. We feel that it is but justice to our readers for us to say this much about the matter. It is a great pity that people will impose such things on the editors of our papers. It would be so much better if people would settle their troubles when they have them without pursuing a different course—trying to get in with somebody, or trying to get others involved in some way with their troubles. When a church has troubles we believe it would be better for them and for the cause if everybody would stay away from them, and take no part in their affairs, until they settle their troubles. Let them alone until they get straightened out. It would be still better if each one would behave himself in the house of God, and thereby have no trouble in the church. C. H. C.

Malachi 4:5-6

---February 2, 1939

Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.-((5) (Malachi 4:5-6). About two years ago Sister A. M. Law, of Marvell, Ark., requested us to write some on ((5) (Malachi 4:5). We have quoted both ((5) (Malachi 4:5) and ((6) (Malachi 4:6) above. This is a prophecy of the coming of John the Baptist, and of the work he was to do. The same prophet spoke of him in (Malachi 3:1), "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me." The Saviour lets us know in (Matthew 11:7-14) that the coming of John was a fulfillment of this prophecy. In (Matthew 11:14) He says, "And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come." But John said he was not Elias; and he was not Elias in person; but he was Elias in that he came in the spirit and power of Elijah's God. Concerning John the angel said, in (Luke 1:16-17) "And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God. And he shall go before Him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord." Holy Kiss

---February 2, 1939

In 1935 a sister asked us what is meant by the "holy kiss," as spoken of by the apostle in (Romans 16:16) and other places. We believe it would be as well, or better, to give Gill's comments on that, rather than to write on it ourselves. Here is what Gill said in commenting on (Romans 16:16). C. H. C.

THE COMMENTS

Christian salutation is a wishing all temporal, spiritual, and eternal happiness to one another; and which, as it should be mutual, should be also hearty and sincere, and this is meant by the "holy kiss;" the allusion is a common custom in most nations, used by friends at meeting or parting, to kiss each other, in token of their hearty love, and sincere affection and friendship for each other; and is called "holy," to distinguish it from an unchaste and lascivious one; and from an hypocritical and deceitful one, such an one as Joab gave to Amasa, when, inquiring of his health, he took him by the beard to kiss him, and stabbed him under the fifth rib; and as Judas, who cried, "hail Master," to Christ, and kissed Him, and betrayed Him into the hands of His enemies. I say, it is an allusion to this custom, for it is only an allusion; the apostle did not mean that any outward action should be made use of, only that their Christian salutations should not be mere complaisance, or expressed by bare words, and outward gestures and actions, either of the hand or mouth; but that they should spring from real love and true friendship, and be without dissimulation, hearty and sincere.

Doors Closed

---February 2, 1939

A brother has asked us what we think about a church closing her doors against a sound orderly preacher. Well, we might think there is something wrong somewhere. A man might be a good man, as we speak of men, and be sound and orderly, and yet can't preach to the edifying of the body. He might be trying to work with a gift that he really does not possess. A man can't preach just because he wants to, or has the desire. A man might have a desire to preach, and not have a call from God to preach. Perhaps the Lord has not bestowed that gift upon him. Then there might be something wrong with the church. They might be led by someone who should not be leading. There might be many things we could think. Circumstances might be such as for it to be imprudent for a sound orderly man to preach at a certain place. As to the conditions that exist where the question came from, we do not know, and we do not care to meddle with their affairs. We do not care to be a busybody. C. H. C.

John 5:37-42

---February 16, 1939

A brother has asked for our views on (John 5:40-42), and asked, "Who was the Saviour talking to in the last two verses-are they children of God or not?" Let us here quote (John 5:37-42): And the Father Himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard His voice at any time, nor seen His shape. And ye have not His word abiding in you: for whom He hath sent, Him ye believe not. Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me. And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. I receive not honor from men. But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you. To begin with, it seems to us that here is a very clear description of the persons addressed. They had never heard the voice of the Lord. "For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom He will." -(John 5:21). "The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." -(John 5:25). If one has never heard the voice of the Lord, he has never been made alive from the dead; he is still dead in trespasses and sins. It is by the voice of the Lord speaking that sinners are made alive from the dead. When He speaks they hear, and are made alive from the dead. So, if one has not heard that voice he is still dead in trespasses and sins. "And ye have not His word abiding in you." Word, here, is the logos word, ending in on, reading logon, which is the accusative case and singular number of logos. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." - (Romans 8:9). "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." - (I John 5:12). It appears to us, from these statements, that here are two very plain evidences that these people were the unregenerated scribes and Pharisees. A Pharisee is a religionist all right; but that religion is a worldly religion. Paul was a strict Pharisee before he was regenerated. He was a strict religionist, but was not a child of God by regeneration. The Pharisee religion was removed from his heart when he was regenerated. "But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you." They were destitute of the love of God. That love was not in them. "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." - (I John 4:7-8). The command, or admonition, here given is not meant to convey the idea, nor in the sense, that we should manufacture in our hearts a love for one another. It does not mean that we can or should voluntarily love anyone that we do not love. But it is in line with the expression in (verse 18 of the previous chapter), "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth." Hence, it means for us to love one another in doing, for in deed means in doing. If we are not showing our love by our doing, we are not loving one another in the sense that we are here commanded. But "every one that loveth is born of God." Then, if one does not love God, it is because he has not been born of God. "We love Him because He first loved us." - (I John 4:19). God's love manifested is the cause; our loving Him is the effect. "Like causes under like circumstances always produce like effects." This is a true scientific fact. Hence, where the cause exists, the effect will also always exist. These people did not have the love of God in them; and remember that God's love is the cause. They did not have the cause in them to produce such an effect as for them to love God. They did not love God because they did not have the cause in them to produce it. We suppose, now, that this is enough on that line, or on that part of the subject. So we will proceed to (John 5:39). On a part of this verse (39) we shall not express an opinion so much as we shall present a few facts. That verse reads: "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." In the Interlinear the verse begins, "Ye search," as though it might be simply a statement of fact; but the word in the original is ereunate, pronounced er-yoo-nah-ta. According to Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon this is second person, plural number, present tense, imperative mood of ereunao. Hence, the Saviour was addressing the persons already described above; second person, signifying persons addressed. Plural number-more than one person addressed. Present tense, signifies present time. Imperative mood, according to Webster's International Dictionary, is "expressive of command, entreaty, advice, or exhortation, as the imperative mood. Expressive of, or of the nature of, command; directive; commanding; authoritative; as, imperative orders. Not to be avoided or evaded; urgent; obligatory; binding; compulsory; as, an imperative duty or work." According to Macmillan's Modern Dictionary, "In grammar, expressing a command, entreaty, or exhortation." So, it is necessarily a fact that the Saviour commanded these people to "search the Scriptures." We do not give this as simply a view of the matter, but these are just simple facts.

There is no eternal life in the Scriptures, though worldly religionists may think so. Eternal life is in Jesus, and the Scriptures so testify. "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son." - (I John 5:11) "This is the record" -it is so recorded. "And this life is in His Son." Eternal life is in Jesus-not in the Scriptures. The Scriptures testify as to where the eternal life is. No man, even in nature, can take the plain language recorded in Scripture and make it appear therefrom that eternal life is in the Scriptures. The letter of the Book is too plain for that. Yet the unregenerate man does not, and will not, believe this truth; and that only evidences the truthfulness of the Book. The unregenerate man will not accept, or believe, the plain statements that are found in the Book, even though he knows what the language says. We remember once, in conversation with a party, that we quoted some language recorded in the ninth chapter of Romans. The party said "that is a dangerous doctrine" and "would not do." We replied that it was so recorded in the Book. The reply was, "I do not believe it, even if it is in the Book; it is a dangerous doctrine, and will not do." Once in debate with a man we quoted this language of the Saviour: "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." -(John 11:26). Then we asked him, "Believest thou this?" He shook his head-answering that he did not believe it." And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life." They had no will to come to Him. The Interlinear reads: "And ye are unwilling to come to me, that life ye might have." Their will was to not come to Him. Will springs from life. They had no such will because they had no life to produce such a will. The carnal mind is enmity against God. The mind being enmity against God, the will is contrary to Him and to His teaching. All this clearly and plainly, to our mind, teaches the truthfulness of the doctrine taught by the Primitive Baptists. Brethren, we have the truth, and we should rejoice in it and delight in contending for it. We should "contend earnestly for the faith that was once delivered unto the saints." It is the only doctrine that provides comfort and consolation for God's humble poor here in this world. It is "our meat and drink." May His blessings rest upon the reader, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Romans 8:13

---February 16, 1939

For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.-(Romans 8:13). Some time ago. Brother B. T. Altman, of Wauchula, Fla., asked us to write an article on this text. In compliance with the request we will try to write a few lines. This language was addressed to the church of God at Rome. Let this fact be noted first, and that for this very fact the language cannot be applied to alien sinners. To apply this language to alien sinners is to say that the church of God at Rome was made up of alien sinners. Note the address in the (first chapter, down to and including verse 7). This language, then, is addressed to children of God, those who have been born of God, those who are in possession of the Spirit of God, and not to alien sinners. The word if as used in this text introduces a condition. This signifies that the result mentioned is sure to be reached by the doing of the thing introduced by the word if "If ye live after the flesh." The doing of this will surely and certainly lead to the thing the apostle names, which follows as a result: "Ye shall die." There is a death which necessarily and surely follows as a result of these persons living after the flesh. The word flesh here manifestly means the old and sinful nature and disposition. It could not possibly mean simply the body of flesh, or lump of flesh. In the absence of life the body itself is nothing but a lump of clay. Hence, to live after the flesh is to live after or follow the old sinful nature, sinful inclinations, sinful desires, which we possess. Even after regeneration we still find left in us that old sinful nature which we had before; and that is why we have a warfare within, which continues as long as we live in the world. In that warfare, if we give over to those old sinful desires, that old sinful nature, we live after the flesh, and that brings death as a result. We thereby lose the fellowship and communion of saints; we lose sweet communion with our blessed Lord and Master. It is called living after the flesh, because it is living after the old sinful nature, the sinful disposition, which we still have in the flesh, in the natural life-the Adamic life. "But if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." This could not possibly mean that one will receive spiritual or eternal life as a result of mortifying the deeds of the body through the Spirit. As already observed, this language is addressed to the children of God, to the church at Rome. Not only so, one must first have the Spirit, or be in possession of the Spirit, in order to do anything through the Spirit. Hence, it must necessarily be true that the Lord's children are those who are here addressed; and they should, through the Spirit, mortify the deeds of the body. By so doing, and as a result of so doing, they enjoy a life that it is impossible to enjoy by doing any other way. They thereby live-not obtain life; but live. There is a living here promised which depends upon them doing what is laid down-it depends upon what they do. May the Lord help us to live closer to Him, and to be more obedient than we have in days gone by, and thereby enjoy the sweet manifestations of His glorious presence and approving smiles while we live here in the world. Scioto Association

---March 2, 1939

We have a history of the Scioto Association which was published when that association was one hundred years old, then an outline since that time (1904) to 1938. We also have a copy of the proceedings of the organization of the association in October, 1805. It was our intention to publish a little history of the association in our columns in some detail; but our space is so limited that we will have to abridge much more than we had intended. The meeting of the organization was held Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, October 12, 13, and 14, 1805. The introductory sermon was delivered by Elder Cyrus Paulk, from (Zechariah 4:11-12). Four churches were represented-Ames, 49 members; Pleasant Run, 36 members; Old Chillicothe, 14 members; Salt Creek, 33 members. A circular letter was inserted in the minutes. To show where those old soldiers of the cross stood, and that the Primitive Baptists are still occupying the same ground today, we will take the space to insert that circular letter here.

THE CIRCULAR LETTER

The Elders and Brethren convened at Old Chillicothe, to the Churches in our Union, send Christian Salutation: Dearly Beloved in the Lord: We call upon you to rejoice that the great Head of His church is set upon His holy hill, Zion, and that the government is upon His shoulders; He will build His church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. It is He that stands amidst the golden candlesticks, and holds the stars in His right hand. He has all gifts, and 'tis He that has promised that the wilderness and the solitary places shall be glad for Him. The design of our corresponding in an association we wish to be understood, to become acquainted the better with each other; to be an advisory council, and not to give up the independence of each individual church. We consider that each church is possessed of full power to rule itself under Christ and His divine laws; and that no rule or vote of the association is to bind any church, farther than in love and entire satisfaction they may accept it. We believe it is the privilege of any brethren who want help in conducting any of their special business to apply to such church, or particular brethren, as they shall choose, to constitute a church, ordain a minister, or settle differences, where a church or churches think themselves unable to do it. We only want to know that our churches are built upon the foundation of the apostles, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone; that they keep the ordinances as they were delivered, and that they walk in the fellowship of the gospel of peace. These will doubtless be the grounds of the churches participating in mutual joy. On this ground they will feel a confidence to stir up one another to love and good works, and enjoy a satisfactory interview. At this meeting we trust we have had the blessing of our dear Lord's presence, when we have given attention to the preaching of His Word, in our prayers, praises and special interview; thanks to His name. And now may the peace of God rule in your hearts through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen. Signed, Nathan Cory, Moderator. Peter Jackson, Clerk. Right here we wish to digress, inserting this little paragraph by way of parenthesis: The idea that an association is not a higher court is no new thing among Baptists. To hold that an association is a higher court, and has the right or authority to sit in judgment over the church is a departure. Note carefully what these brethren said more than one hundred years ago. It is no new thing among Baptists that the church is the highest ecclesiastical authority on earth. The statement along this line in the Nashville (Tenn.) Peace Meeting in 1937 is in perfect harmony with what these old brethren said in October, 1805. The following are the names of those who served as moderator, and the years they served: Nathan Cory, 1805-06; Samuel Comer, 1807; Nathan Cory, 1808-1819; John Littleton, 1820-21; Nathan Cory, 1822; Alex. Holden, 1823; Nathan Cory, 1824-26; Wm. Baker, 1827; Nathan Cory, 1828; Wm. Baker, 1829-38; J. B. Moore, 1839; Wm. Baker, 1840; J. B. Moore, 1841-45; Geo. Ambrose, 1846-47; Wm. Baker, 1848-50; J. B. Moore, 1851-55; J. S. Johnson, 1856-57; D. Scofield, 1858-68; G. N. Tusing, 1869; D. Scofield, 1870; G. N. Tusing, 1871; D. Hess, 1872; S. C. Stover, 1873-74; D. Hess, 1875-77; D. G. Peters, 1905-06; Walter Yeoman, 1907-20; L. T. Ruffner, 1921-23; M. O. Curp, 1924-28; G. F. Hanover, 1929-38. The following are the names of those who served as clerk, and the years they served: Peter Jackson, 1805-1819; J. Root, 1820; Peter Jackson, 1821-22; J. Root, 1823-26; Peter Jackson, 1827; J. Root, 1828-29; Ewel Jeffries, 1830-33; T. McNaghten, 1834-38; Geo. Ambrose, 1839-45; J. Peters, 1846-47; S. P. Ashbrook, 1848-62; T. A. Peters, 1863-72; T. Cole, 1873-78; W. D. Wood, 1879-80 and 1883; no session listed for 1881 and 1882; L. T. Ruffner, 1884-87; T. J. McNaghten, 1888-92; H. O. Blue, 1893-94; T. Cole, 1895-96; T. J. McNaghten, 1897-1908; E. A. Huchison, 1909-12; G. F. Hanover, 1913-20; Chester Peters, 1921-22; O. W. Cory, 1923-1938. The second session, in 1806, and third session, in 1807, and the last session, in 1938, were held with Pleasant Run Church. According to the records this church has entertained thirty sessions of the association. The 1938 session was the one hundred thirty-fourth. Pleasant Run Church was organized in Virginia in 1790, and went to Ohio as a body in 1801. From the history of the association we quote this language concerning this church: "It has been blessed all along its history with a sound ministry and a discerning membership, and none of the delusions of the day were allowed to take permanent root. It was the first church that called a halt in the attempt made by the modern Missionaries to obtain a permanent foothold among us." At the seventy-third session (in 1877) a committee, consisting of Jonathan Peters and Elders Daniel Hess and Thomas Cole, was appointed to prepare a history of the association, and to present the same at the next session, which was done, and the history was published in the minutes of the seventy-fourth session (1878). At the one hundredth session (in 1904) a committee was appointed to bring the history down to that date, a period of one hundred years. Elders L. T. Ruffner and Thomas Cole and Brother T. J. McNaghten were appointed on this committee. The first eleven sessions were held in October, the next twenty in September. Since then the sessions have been held in August. The earliest confession of faith on record was adopted in 1816. This confession contained an article which prohibited correspondence with any church or association that did, in principle or practice, hold to involuntary slavery. The confession was revised at later dates, and this article left out. Article 2 of the confession was as follows, and has been retained all along the line: We believe the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments were given by inspiration of God, and are the only sufficient and infallible rule of saving knowledge, faith and practice; and that the doctrine of unconditional election, original sin, total depravity of man, justification by Christ; redemption and the forgiveness of sins through His blood and according to the riches of His grace, regeneration, conversion and sanctification by the Spirit, baptism by immersion, final perseverance of the saints through grace to glory, resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment, are the fundamental doctrines thereof, which we feel ourselves bound to maintain. The association continues in these same principles. From the report of the committee at the seventy-fourth session we take the following:

Each individual church of Jesus Christ derives its existence from the Great Head of the church, Jesus Christ Himself, to whom alone is each one amenable. He alone is the Lawgiver, and He alone the one who has the right to walk as judge among the seven golden candlesticks or churches. To each one He gives of the same Spirit, the same laws, the same power; hence all are equal, and no one is superior, and none inferior. The mutual association of two or more equal servants does not change their relation to their master, or create an additional fund of power; but when so gathered together their highest duty is to "comfort each other with the same comfort wherewith we are comforted of God," and to "walk in the comfort of the Holy Ghost," and to "observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Hence, no decision of any church, or assembly of churches, can be a law, and should not be obeyed as such; but is valuable only as it may ascertain and point out the mind of Christ. ' The association is wholly the creature of the several churches. When they fail to meet together, it falls; but it has no power whatever to affect their existence separately. Hence, when queries have been presented, the object has only been to consult as brethren, and no individual church or association of churches can do more than give their advice. Hence, an association is called an "advisory council." Various queries have been submitted to the association, at different times, for her counsel or advice, a few of which are submitted: At twenty-first session-Query from Union Church: Can a member that is guilty of a public transgression be restored without general satisfaction? Answer: He cannot. There must be a general satisfaction to the body to which he belongs. Twenty-fourth session-Query from two churches: Has any church a right to silence a minister without a council? Answer: We consider the church independent; but in most cases of difficulty with the preacher, that amounts to a division in the church, we conceive that a council is expedient. Twenty-ninth session-Query from Laurel: Is it good order for a church to exclude members on the evidence of non-professors? Answer: In some instances testimony from credible persons not belonging to the church may, and ought to, be received; but as to the propriety and weight of such testimony, in any particular case, the church acquainted with the circumstances can best judge. Fifty-fifth session-Query from Pleasant Run: Is it according to Holy Writ for the church of Christ to receive the administration of ordinances as just, either baptism or the Lord's Supper, administered by any man not regularly ordained by the church? The association deferred an expression until the fifty-seventh session, when it decided that it was not gospel order to do so. In the work and report of the committee in 1904 they said: For information we are indebted to statements made by David Benedict, as quoted in Hassell's Church History, pages 747, 776, including Judson's letter to the ladies of America, Black Rock Convention of 1832, Life of J. B. Moore, Mosheim's Church History, pages 202 and 203, and extracts from minutes and church records; also History of Kettocton Association, by Wm. Fristoe. Thus it will be observed that they thereby endorsed the Black Rock Address, and held to the same principles the brethren did at Black Rock in contending against the new measures introduced by Fuller and his followers. The following is so full of good information and good reading that we take the space to copy the same from the history: It will be observed that this association first met under the simple name of Baptist. It is an ancient name, the most so of all claiming a Christian profession. "In those days came John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness of Judea." "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." Under the name Baptist and Anabaptist and the names of those who adhered to Baptist principles was the true God worshipped from the first dawn of Christianity to the present time, though the gates of hell have opposed the travel of God's people through all past time, as it was declared to the serpent in Eden, "Thou shalt bruise his heel." This heel bruising is to continue to the end, "for all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." The "young child's life was sought;" John the Baptist was beheaded; the apostles suffered martyrdom and were made "as the filth of the world and the offscouring of all things." They were "chosen in the furnace of affliction." They were to be "hated of all men" for Christ's sake. They "should not be reckoned among the nations." They were a "holy nation, a peculiar people." Their great persecutor is presented under the figure of a beast having seven heads and ten horns, having a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies, and to continue forty and two months (1260 years), to make war with the saints and overcome them. See (Revelation 13). The second beast spoken of in that chapter, having two horns like a lamb, but a voice like a dragon, a pleasant exterior, but inwardly having the same nature as the first beast, is another persecutor of the saints. Under all these adverse circumstances were they to live, and great numbers of them sealed their faith with their lives, in the prison or at the fagot. All this was the result of the unholy alliance of church and state, a union forbidden of God and denominated in the Scriptures as adultery and fornication, a crime for which the Jews, as a figurative nation, suffered severely. How often were friendly overtures made to the Jews, "Cast in thy lot among us, let us all have one purse." -((4) (Proverbs 1:14). See also (Ezra 4:2) (Ezra 4:2). The adversaries said, "Let us build with you; for we seek your God, as ye do." But the proposition was wisely rejected; an example set by the typical Jews, not followed in these last days by all professed Baptists. These adversaries of Judah and Benjamin were really enemies, as appeared shortly afterwards. But their snare they thought was concealed, knowing that "in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird." -((7) (Proverbs 1:17). The name Anabaptist was applied to those who repudiated the Catholic order and would not recognize their baptism. Says Mosheim, in the epitome of his Ecclesiastical History, pages 202 and 203, "The true origin of that sect which acquired the denomination of Anabaptists, by their administering anew the rite of baptism to those who came over to their communion, is hid in the remote depths of antiquity and is extremely difficult to be ascertained.'Before the rise of Luther and Calvin, there lay concealed in almost all the countries of Europe * * * * many persons who adhered tenaciously to the following doctrine which the Waldenses and others had maintained, some in a more disguised, and others in a more open way, viz., That the kingdom of Christ, or the visible church He had established upon earth, was an assemblage of true and real saints, and ought to be inaccessible to the wicked and unrighteous, and also exempt from all those institutions which human prudence suggests, to oppose the progress of iniquity or to correct and reform transgressors." Two learned members of the Dutch Reformed Church, appointed by the king of Holland to examine into the origin and the history of the Dutch Baptists, reported in their book published in 1819 as follows: "The Baptists may be considered as the only Christian community which has stood since the days of the apostles, and as a Christian society which has preserved the pure doctrine of the gospel through all ages." See Hassell, page 471. From the first of their organization in apostolic times they were antagonized by Pagan powers, next by Papists, and as they always protested against them, even at the risk of their own lives, even unto death, they were the first and original protestants long before the rise of Luther and Calvin. The figurative Israel, in coming up out of Egypt, were accompanied by a mixed multitude, which were found along the line down to the end of the Jewish world. When the types ended and the antitype succeeded, there was also a mixed multitude peculiar to itself. But in both type and antitype, Israel has been and is a "speckled bird,'the birds round about are against her." -

(Jeremiah 12:9). As before stated, at the setting up of the gospel kingdom the term Baptist was sufficient to distinguish this "peculiar people" from others of Christian profession, when their denominational name was referred to, though they were afterward referred to as sects or heretics by way of derision in Mosheim's and Ruter's histories and others. The same name Baptist alone served to distinguish them in this association until A. D. 1837, when the most remarkable event in her history occurred. A division in the general body occurred, and as both sides claimed the name Baptist the adjectives "Old School" and "New School" Baptists were used to distinguish them. As different views were held on the doctrine of the atonement, the words special and particular atonement were used to designate the Old School party, and still later the word Predestinarian was used. The title Primitive Baptist obtains now generally. All these adjective terms describe those of apostolic origin. The causes that led to the division, and made necessary the above descriptive words, form the most important part of our history, to which we will now briefly allude. The division referred to was not caused by open and outward foes, whose violent persecutions had a tendency to unite rather than divide. Paul prophesied that after his departure "grievous wolves should enter in among you, not sparing the flock; also, of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." The Saviour gave warning. "Beware of false prophets who come among you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." A further caution is, "Take heed how you hear," and "take heed what ye hear." We read also that "in the last days perilous times shall come. Men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. From such turn away." "Of this sort are they which creep into houses (churches), laden with sins, led away with divers lusts." Again, "Mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them. For they are such as serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly, and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." It was by good words and fair speeches that sin entered into the world;" for when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also to her husband, and he did eat." The plan of the subtle serpent has never been improved upon. Notice, he did not tell the woman that she would surely not die, thus boldly denying God's word, but that she should not surely die. As much as to say, "You may die or you may not die; and in case you do not die, ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." This was the first open promulgation of the chance system on the lottery plan. In like manner the Bible doctrine of the special, definite, atonement was not at first violently antagonized by anyone claiming our name, but by artfully substituting an indefinite atonement, sufficient for the whole world were the whole world to believe in Him, thus pivoting the eternal salvation of any or every one on belief as a condition instead of the blood of Christ, and keeping out of view that "it is the work of God that ye believe in Him whom He hath sent." -John vi. 27. Thus virtually denying the Bible doctrine of eternal election, or being chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world. "Knowing, brethren, your election of God." -(Th 1:4) (I Thessalonians 1:4). Thus transferring the place of election from the precincts of eternity to the precincts of time, and taking it out of the hands of God and putting it in the hands of carnal man. "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you." -(John 15:16)." How is the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed! The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter!" -Lamentations of (Jeremiah 4:1-2). All of the foregoing was introduced among our people in England over one hundred years ago, not by outside enemies but by men of themselves, soon to be transferred to American churches, and from small and tentative beginnings it took root, and by affiliating with kindred systems of similar age, all unknown to the Bible of our original principles of faith, it developed more and more its inherent character and its paternity. Apostolic fellowship is based alone on apostolic doctrine, and errors, however small, cannot be defended by the truth, but only by good words and fair speeches and following cunningly devised fables. Becoming more and more amplified, it claimed the power of saving souls from eternal burnings by the preaching of their gospel and patterning after Papal Rome and Mahomet, and more recently the Mormons. Missionaries were sent the world over, ostensibly to save souls, but gold in abundance being necessary, to propel the gospel, the Papal system of the fourteenth century was adopted. They abridged the Decalogue into two words, "fine gold," without which gold millions had gone to hell and millions more would follow. See Hassell's Church History, pages 772, 773, and 774. No difference between the holy and profane was searched after. And, as in Ezekiel's time, great and still greater abominations were shown, even so now. Strong delusions are sent of God to manifest more and more the mystery of iniquity." He that hath an ear to hear let him hear." Much is said lately about helping the Lord. Uzzah put forth his hand to steady the ark, to help the Lord. We read his fate for so doing. The tabernacle built by Moses had no windows to admit natural light into the holy place, but an inner light continually burned, all typical of the church, the antitype, the true tabernacle which the Lord pitched, and not man. This tabernacle is supplied with a continual inner light, needing no natural light. Yet vain man ignores the power of God, in whom is no darkness at all, ignores Him who is the light of the world, and sets at naught the anointing of the Holy One by which the recipient is enabled to know all things, and needs not that any man teach, save" as that same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie." - (I John 2:27). Ignoring all this, they teach in the words that man's wisdom teacheth, and having itching ears and not enduring sound doctrine, teachers are heaped up who can teach man's wisdom. Not being satisfied with altars made of rough stones, they must pollute them by lifting up their tools upon them to polish them. The unhewed oratory of the brogue of Galilee does not suit the ears of the men of taste. They fear, as did Puller, that the Baptists would" become a dunghill in society" unless they could induce those to preach who could come with excellency of speech and human wisdom. This was contrary to Paul's practice who went among the saints, not with excellency of speech or of man's wisdom, and whose speech and preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. This was in order that their faith might not stand in the wisdom of men but in the power of God, for the wisdom of this world and princes of this world come to nought. Enough has been said to show cause for withdrawing church fellowship from all that ignored the plain teaching of the Bible, and who so plainly departed from the old landmarks. The question may arise, How or why did any, for a time at least, embrace erroneous views that resulted eventually in a great departure in many sections of America among our people? Snares are always hidden pitfalls; are not at first discernable. Nets are concealed, for" in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird." Leaven does not manifest its power and nature suddenly. The spittle at first applied did not give clear sight. The blind man could only see men as trees walking, but afterwards saw clearly. Mark viii. The typical Jews were commanded to drive out the Canaanites from the land the Lord had promised to the children of Abraham. They fought against those that occupied their own land. In the business of discipling they gathered together those whom the Lord had prepared beforehand. They were made fit for heaven by the Holy Ghost before they were qualified to be gathered together in a church capacity. The Holy Ghost first brought the gospel, and no man can do more than to bear witness to it. The Christian is strictly commanded to "be ye separate" from the world, "for ye are not of the world," and all intermarriages with the world, spiritually, is forbidden. The evils resulting thereby are typically set forth in the last chapter of Nehemiah. Also in the seventh chapter of Proverbs antichrist is brought to view under the figure of a lewd woman.;" Now let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: "Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." One commandment is, "Follow me." Not to go ahead of Him and ask Him to follow us and bless us, as does the world, but to follow Him. There are many places the children are sometimes found in where Christ never went first, and were it not that the name of God and Christ are sometimes connected with such places, thus giving them a lamb-like appearance, perhaps they would not be so often frequented by the children of the kingdom. How willing are our adversaries to say, as in (Ezra 4:1) (Ezra 4:1) "We worship the Lord as you do; let us build together; let us have one purse," to which sentiment all the world seems to agree except that sect that is everywhere spoken against. Oh, that we would give the same answer the adversaries then received! Please read. Again, let us remember we cannot improve the rule, given us in the Holy Scriptures for our conduct, either as churches or individuals. The world furnishes no pattern for the church. Remember, brethren, your high calling as members of His mystical body. You belong to an ancient family, a royal family. Your history cannot be written without consulting the records of eternity; altogether unlike the harlot daughters of Babylon, whose pedigree, at most, dates back but a few hundred years. Why should we court the favor of so small a thing? Let Zion's "breasts satisfy thee at all times; and be thou ravished always with her love. And why wilt thou, my son, be ravished with a strange woman, and embrace the bosom of a stranger?" Why carry on a commerce with the world, contrary to God's law? You are entitled to the coin of the realm. O trade in that alone, "For the merchandise" of heavenly wisdom" is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold." Christ is head to His church, His body, and is head to no other body whatever. Therefore no one has a charter from Christ to organize or build up anything he pleases and call it by His name, or conduct it in His name. In conclusion we will say that we are at the close of our one hundredth session in 1904. We, as an association, are not alone in our past history. The experience of different associations in America has been the same as ours, and at near the same time. Since 1837 all our churches are as one on all vital points. What hidden snares await us, or what nets may be woven in the looms of Babylon to entangle the feet of the "speckled bird" in its meshes, we know not, during the coming one hundred years, but may we hope that we shall not be ashamed of the gospel of Christ, that we may all along be esteemed as the "filth and off scouring of all things," and may we not be ashamed of being regarded as the "dung hills of society" by an antichristian world. Would we be shown the bride, the Lamb's wife {(Revelation 21:9)} clothed in raiment of needle work, adorned with all the jewelry of heaven, and who, by virtue of her divine relationship to the King of kings, is mistress of the universe? whose name is found in the archives of eternity, who is compared to a city that hath no need of the light of the sun or moon, but is lighted alone by the glory of God and the Lamb? Then behold it in the church of the First Born. From all the foregoing it will be seen that this old body of Baptists has stood for 134 years, through the storms that have come and gone, and are still holding to the same principles of doctrine which have characterized the church all through the ages. May the Lord bless and prosper them, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Elder Morgan Replies

---March 2, 1939

Elder Morgan, editor of the Trumpet, in that paper of February 16, replies to our article on "Bible Classes," in our issue of February 2. He makes practically the same argument for having that little baby among them as the Burnamites made when they introduced them a number of years ago. That was one thing they introduced in some churches in Virginia, Kentucky, and other states years ago. The introduction of so-called Bible classes, with other trumpery, brought a division in the church in different states. It did so at Luray, Va., which resulted in a lawsuit over the church property, in which suit the property was awarded to our people who opposed such departures. The introduction of so-called Bible classes frequently is followed by the bringing in of other trumpery, unless the thing is soon abandoned. Elder Morgan, though, says he "knows nothing of Primitive Baptist starting Sunday school in the Primitive Baptist church." We had given him credit for being better informed than this. We did not know he was so ignorant of the history of the Primitive Baptists. Did he not know that the Sunday school, or so-called Bible class, was one of the things introduced by the followers of Fuller and Carey? Did he not know that this was also one of the things introduced by E. H. Burnam and his followers-as Pence and Bradley? These matters are historical facts. Better read a little history, Brother Morgan. Another little matter of history. Brother Morgan, did you not know that there was some trouble in your own section years ago, brought on by a man joining one of the churches there on a forged letter?-that he had been excluded from a church in Tennessee; moved to Texas, and forged a letter and joined a church there on that letter? Did you not know this, Brother Morgan? Did you not also know, Brother Morgan, that this fact was finally found out, and that it caused a great disturbance and division? Honest, Brother Morgan, did you not know something about this affair? Are you totally ignorant of all that? Are you wholly ignorant of the fact that those churches, after being divided for several years, came together and accepted all official work done, not only while they were apart, but also that done by the preacher who was excluded in Tennessee and was a member of one of your churches on a forged letter? Do you not know, Brother Morgan, that the church of your membership was in that matter? Or, are you altogether ignorant of all this? Come clean, Brother Morgan, and tell us whether you have been ignorant of this all the time, or have you known about it? Brother Morgan, did your baptism come through that which was administered by that excluded preacher, or did it not? Be candid with us, Brother Morgan, and tell us what you know about your own baptism-whether it is "Simon-pure" or not. Brother Morgan, we are not writing this in a spirit of ill-will, nor madness, nor to ridicule. But we would be glad to make you see some of your inconsistencies, if your eyes are not so blinded by prejudice that you cannot see. We still say that you folks go over the country looking for a job of disturbing folks and getting them to let some of your boys baptize them again and re-organize them into so-called churches. Witness _ a case in Louisiana; also a recent case in Arkansas. We do not know personally what was wrong in the case in Arkansas, but have read a little about it in the Trumpet. Brother Morgan, do you not know that it is an age-old practice for the Primitive' Baptists to settle their troubles, when and where they have had them, and divided, and to come together accepting the baptisms administered by them? Do you not know, Brother Morgan, that it is impossible for you to trace your own baptism back without going through just such procedure? And do you not realize, this being a fact, that your contention and practice unchurches and destroys the identity of every Primitive Baptist church in Texas, as well as in the whole south? You can't trace your baptism back without going through the Kehukee Association, or through Daniel Parker. Can you? If so, please trace out the line for us, will you? We are not "from Missouri," but a large number of us need to be cited. Also, Brother Morgan, please tell us what church excluded some whose baptism you denounce-and what was the charge? Tell us the man, the church, and the charge, please. Prejudice, jealousy, and stubbornness have caused more of these troubles than real disorders or heresy. What a pity. C. H. C.

Communion Service

---March 2, 1939

Brother Thomas Herbison, of Dickson, Tenn., has asked us this question, and wants us to answer through the paper: "If there is no deacon present at a communion service, who should wait on the table?" It is the business of the minister to administer the ordinances, and not the deacon. Hence, the minister should break the bread and pour the wine. Then it is customary for the deacon, or deacons, to pass the emblems to the members; but, if no deacon is present, any other brother could do that as well as the deacon. C. H. C.

(Deuteronomy 14) AND (Leviticus 25)March 2, 1939

In July, 1937, Sister Lena Bowlin, of Madison, N. C, asked us to give our views on these two chapters. They are too long to quote here, but we will make a few remarks on them. In a portion of Deut. xiv. the Lord gives instruction to Israel concerning things that they might eat and things they were forbidden to eat. Certain kinds of animals were to be unclean to them, and which they were forbidden to eat. We take it that the observance of the law thus laid down was conducive to good health, as well as that they enjoyed blessings in obedience. In the chapter was given instruction, also, concerning tithing. They were required to give one-tenth of their earnings for the Lord's cause. Here is one place where many people get their idea of tithing in the 'present age; but under the gospel what is done is to be as a matter of freewill offering. In Leviticus xxv. the Lord gave instruction concerning the sabbath years. Under the law every seventh day was a sabbath day and every seventh year was a sabbath year; then every seventh sabbath year there was to be a jubilee year. In the jubilee year, or the fiftieth year, all property was restored to the original owner; debts were cancelled, and servants set free- that is, servants who were Jews. The land could not be sold for perpetual ownership. When the Jews were driven out of the land of Palestine the land was not sold by them nor bought from them. It is their land to this good day. God gave it to them for an everlasting possession, and no land in the country was to be sold, so as to be conveyed forever. The land is still theirs, and some day they will return and possess it. C. H. C.

Views Requested

During, or about, January, 1937, Brother G. A. Sweetland, Damascus, Ark., asked for our views on (Matthew 5:12); (16:27); (Luke 6:23); (I Corinthians 3:14); (Revelation 11:18); (22:12). (Matthew 5:11-12)- reads, "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." The Saviour did not mean to teach us in this that we should rejoice and be glad that some men will lie or tell falsehoods on us; but to rejoice and be glad that we are not guilty. We may rejoice that we are counted worthy to suffer for Jesus' sake. Remember that this is when they are saying evil of us falsely-not when they are saying evil and telling the truth. If we are guilty of wrong doing, and they tell that on us, we are not being persecuted. When we suffer for evil doing we are not being persecuted; it may be, though, that we are being prosecuted. No place for rejoicing or being glad in that. In (Matthew 16:27) the Saviour is teaching the fact that there are rewards and punishments here in the world for obedience and disobedience. It cannot have reference to a future state after death, for He says in (Matthew 16:28), "Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in His kingdom." The matter contained in the text, then, had special reference to what was in store for that present generation. (Luke 6:23) is right along on the same line as the foregoing, and is the same teaching. That is, it is along the same line as (Matthew 5:12). We wrote an article on (I Corinthians 3:14) which was published-in The Primitive Baptist of October 30, 1906, which article is on page 128 in Volume I of our Editorial Writings. We do not have space to publish the article again now. Our views have not changed. (Revelation 11:18) is also along the same line, teaching how that the Lord blesses His obedient children here on earth. They are judged and chastised here for their disobedience. (Revelation 22:12) says, "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." He does come, in the person of His Spirit, and chasses us for our disobedience, and blesses us in obedience to Him. We receive our rewards here, according to the way we do. Heaven, which the saints receive after death, is not a reward; that is an inheritance. The bliss and glory of heaven is in store for them as an inheritance, and not as a reward. The rewards are here in this life. And this has special reference to the church state here in the world. Notice (Revelation 22:14-15), where He refers to the city, which is the church, and what is without-on the outside-of the church. When the Lord's children remain on the outside of His kingdom, and fail to walk in obedience to His commandments, they stay in bad company. C. H. C.

Some Questions

---March 16, 1939

In September, 1937, Brother J. M. Thornbury, of Wyoming, W. Va., asked us the following questions:

1. When, in point of time, does God forgive the sinner?
2. If Christ made complete satisfaction for the sins of the elect, were their sins ever against them? If so, when and why?
3. If they were never against them by reason of Christ's death, how could they be forgiven?
4. In what sense are we justified by faith? By the blood of Christ? We will try to give a brief answer to these questions:
 1. He forgives His people every day-all along the line of time. If not, why did the Saviour teach His disciples to pray for forgiveness?
 2. In a law sense the sins of the elect were charged to Christ as their surety. The work Christ did was to make atonement-to satisfy the demands of the broken law. Atonement is one thing and chastisement is another thing. And atonement is one thing and forgiveness is another thing. All such as the above is from a failure to distinguish between atonement to satisfy the broken law and fatherly chastisement and forgiveness. We gave some questions some time ago on these matters, and no man on earth could give an answer to them without dividing

- between these matters and keeping them in mind. If your child breaks the law you would satisfy the law, if you could, and thereby make atonement for him; but you would also chastise him for his wrongs. This answers question 3 also.
4. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." - (Hebrews 11:1). The Spirit bears witness in our heart that Jesus is our Saviour. This brings joy and peace, and one is thereby justified by faith. This faith received in the heart is what enables one to believe in Jesus as his Saviour. But this faith is brought to none only those who have already been justified in the eyes of the law by the blood of Christ. C. H. C.

Please Have Mercy

---April 6, 1939

In every issue of The Primitive Baptist under the obituary heading we have a request that obituaries be short, and that they must be limited to 300 words. This is frequently disregarded. Now, please tell us how we can consistently insert an obituary of 350 to 400 words (and sometimes longer) for the gratification of one writer, and not do the same for others? Sometimes an obituary is sent us which much exceeds the limit we ask, and perhaps it is of some child, or very young person, unknown to nearly all our readers. We have sometimes cut them down; but sometimes that is hard to do. And if we can very well abridge them it puts needless and unnecessary work upon us. If such things are published as sent-much too long-it causes us a loss of much time to give the matter study and consideration. We do not wish to wound the feelings of any. But sometimes we wonder if some people have any regard for the feelings of the poor editor. Look through the columns of this issue and see how many obituaries and resolutions of respect this paper contains. During last year we published 189 obituaries and 39 resolutions of respect, making a total of 228. We do not object to publishing obituaries and resolutions of respect, but we do ask that they be short. Please have some mercy on us, and do not send us long obituaries and resolutions of respect. C. H. C.

---April 6, 1939

In January, 1938, Brother W. M. Blackwell, of Meadowview, Va., asked for our views on (1 John 2:2), and asked if it means the same as (1 John 2:15-16,17). (1 John 2:2) reads, "And He is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." If the word world in this text means the whole race of Adam, then of what race were the our and ours in the text? Propitiation means expiation, satisfaction. If He expiated the sins of all the race of Adam, what could send one of the race to eternal torment? What could condemn one of them? There is more than one world spoken of in the Book. Sometimes that word is used with reference to the Gentiles. He was the propitiation for the sins of His people among the Jews, and also for the world-His people among the Gentiles, or among the nations of the world, as well as Jews. (1 John 2:15-17) refer to another world- the world of the ungodly, the things of the natural realm, and that are contrary to God and godliness. In (1 John 5:19) John says, "And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness," or in the wicked one. There was the world of the redeemed in (1 John 2:2), and the unredeemed or ungodly world in (1 John 2:19). C. H. C.

---April 6, 1939

In January, 1938, Sister John A. Crouse, Sparta, N. C., asked our views on this text. In November Thurmon Loftis made the same request. It is included in the message written to the church at Sardis. The one who overcomes will be clothed in white raiment. Obedience to the Lord's commands makes a beautiful robe. White raiment of the Lord's furnishing to His obedient children is a garment that is worth having on. See (Revelation 3:18), in the language to the church at Laodicea. The name of the one who overcomes will not be blotted out of the book of life. A blessing to be enjoyed here in the world. And the Saviour will confess his name before His Father, and blessings will be thus enjoyed which cannot be had any other way than in obedience to the Master. This language is all to the church, and not to the world, and has to do with their life here on earth and not in the glory world. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." - (Revelation 3:6). C. H. C.

A Reminder

---April 6, 1939

Dear Brother Cayce: I will write you a few lines. This leaves us well once more. We have had a lot of sickness this winter. Hope this finds you and family in good health. I received the copies of papers and gave them out Sunday at CrawfordsviUe Church. In looking through an old song book I saw where you were there in 1907. I am sending you the note as it was written in the book. This is the home church of Elder Harvey Oliphant. I have been pastor there eight years. I think you will get some new subscribers from there. I am going to send for your Editorial books as soon as possible. I think I can sell some of them also. We need a weekly paper; so I am going to do my best to help you get it. Your little brother in labor and love, Elder J. E. Sparks. Clermont, Ind.

THE NOTE

April 12, 1907-10:30 a. m.- Elder Claud Cayce; text, ((Th 1:4) (I Thessalonians 1:4-5)) "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God. For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power," etc.

REMARKS

Dear brother, we thank you for sending this. We remember being there, and being in the home of our precious brother, Elder J. H. Oliphant. We also remember dear old Brother Lockett very well. The writing looks to us very much like his. We loved those dear people; but we suppose most of those who were there then are gone to their long eternal home. May the Lord bless them, and continue to bless your labors among them. C. H. C.

---April 20, 1939

Brother M. B. Purvis, Cordele, Ga., has asked for our views on this chapter. He did not say what particular verse he wanted our views on. It would take quite a lot of space to give our views in full on the entire chapter. (John 10:1-5) the Saviour teaches that He came in by the door, which is the door of prophecy. Every prophecy concerning Him was fulfilled by Him when He left the world. He came according to prophecy, and is therefore the true shepherd. All others who came professing to be the Messiah were thieves and robbers. In (John 10:7) He presents another matter, as that He Himself is the door of the sheep. As He is the door, there is no other way by which a poor sinner can be saved or enter into eternal life.

He is not only the door by which His people enter in, but He is also the good and true Shepherd, and He cares for His sheep. He laid down His life for the sheep-not for the sheep and the goats. To the wicked Jews He said, "But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you." If one has to believe in order to become one of His sheep, then they could have become sheep by believing, and the Saviour was mistaken in what He said. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." He, as the good Shepherd, gives all His sheep eternal life, and not one of them shall ever perish. They shall all finally live with Him in glory. C. H. C.

---April 20, 1939

There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it: now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man. Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard. -(((9:14)

(Ecclesiastes 9:14-16). Brother W. H. Dearman, of Chunky, Miss., has asked us to give our views on this text. The little city seems to us to be the true church, or the Lord's humble followers. That has always been just a few. The poor wise man appears to us to be the blessed Saviour. He became poor that we, through His poverty, might be rich. He delivered the city, notwithstanding all the powers of darkness were arrayed against her. Satan and his cohorts have besieged the city all along the line. It was by the Lord's own power and wisdom that His people are delivered from everlasting destruction and ruin, which Satan would bring upon them. No man remembered that same poor man. He trod the winepress alone, and of the people there was none to help. All His disciples forsook Him. Peter even cursed and swore and said "I know not the man." And His children, even now, often forsake His sweet and delightful service; and His service is so often made a secondary matter, when it should be first. How forgetful we are. C. H. C.

---April 20, 1939

A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children: and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.-((22) (Proverbs 13:22). Brother R. L. Barrett, of Fontana, Calif., has asked us for our views on this text. "A good name is rather to be chosen than, great riches," said an inspired writer. The man who walks uprightly, in the service of the Master, who diligently fights the good fight of faith, who lets his light so shine that others may see his good works, who lives in such a way as that those who are personally acquainted with him can but say that there is a reality in the profession he has made, leaves an inheritance of much more value and greater worth than the wealth of this old world. He leaves a good name for his children and for their children. And such a one will be fed. God has so promised, and His every promise is sure. But ill-gotten gain never profits much, or for long. Wealth that is obtained by other means than honest toil and labor will not stay. It slips away. Much more could be written, but we have to be brief. C. H. C.

So far as we know it has always been believed by Primitive Baptists that the Lord's ministers are called of God and put into the work of the ministry, and that the ability to preach the gospel in the spirit of the matter is a gift from God, and that God gives ministers to His church. "And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." -(Ephesians 4:11). These are the different gifts in the ministerial office, and they are all gifts from God. "And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that He counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry." -(Ephesians 1:12). The Lord put this man into the ministry; He made him a minister. "For I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee." - ((6) (Acts 26:16). While "it is true that the Lord makes His ministers- puts men in the ministry, it is also true that there is something for them to do. From one standpoint the Lord qualifies His ministers; but He does not do their studying for them. The apostle' admonished, or instructed, Timothy to" study to shew thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." -(II Timothy 2:15). It is necessary for the minister to study the Bible in order that he know the right application of its teachings, and then to make that right application. He needs to know the truth, or what the truth is, and then he should faithfully preach, or teach, or proclaim, the truth. He should teach the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. In order to do this, he needs to study the Scriptures so that he may know what is the truth. It is a flagrant violation of Holy Writ to teach any doctrine that is not the truth. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed." -(Galatians 1:8-9). Here it is very plain that a curse is pronounced against any man for teaching a doctrine that is not the truth. The doctrine a man promulgates is the doctrine he teaches. We are sure that all our brethren will agree with us that it is very important that a minister preach the truth, and nothing but the truth. Now, we would be glad for some person to tell us what the difference is in a man speaking a false doctrine in preaching and speaking a false doctrine in song? The sentiment is spoken in either case. We cannot sing. We have tried, but could not control our voice in song. If we had been trained or taught in our childhood we might have learned to sing, though we doubt it very much. The Lord did not bestow that gift upon us. Now, will you please tell us which is worse-we to preach a false doctrine to you, or you to sing a false doctrine to us? Is it not "about six of one, and a half dozen of the other?" If you set forth a false doctrine in your speaking in song, is there not just as much curse pronounced upon or against you by the God of heaven as upon us for setting forth a false doctrine in preaching? If not, why not, since it is a false doctrine spoken in each case? "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." -((6) (Colossians 3:16). Here we have it that teaching is done in songs. And remember that a curse is pronounced against one who teaches a false doctrine. Then, should we not be just as careful and particular to sing the truth as to preach it? Paul instructed Titus thus: "In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you."

-(Titus 2:7-8). It is certainly just as important to use sound speech in singing as in preaching. There is no question but that the singing of a false doctrine is just as much and as strongly forbidden in Holy Writ as preaching a false doctrine. One should always speak the truth. Look at the following lines a moment, please: This world is not my home, I'm just a passing through; My treasures are laid up somewhere beyond the blue; The angels beckon me from heaven's open door, They're all expecting me, and that's one thing I know, I fixed it up with Jesus forty years ago; I know He'll take me through, though I am weak and poor. Now, just imagine yourselves gathered together at the church for the worship and service of God; the congregation sings this song; then the preacher gets up and delivers a discourse in harmony with the sentiment of the song. The angels are expecting you. Are you going to disappoint them? You should fix it up with Jesus-and do it today. Tomorrow may be everlastingly too late. You may die before the sun goes down, and your soul will be launched into eternal hell-everlasting burnings-unless you fix it up with Jesus. I fixed it up with Jesus forty years ago, and you can fix it up with Him right now. Oh, dear friend, will you come right now, and fix it up with Jesus! Suppose your preacher should advocate such a doctrine as that-would you not think he should be excluded from the church, unless he would recant and apologize? If he should be excluded for advocating such a doctrine, why should you not be excluded for advocating it? That's the doctrine you are advocating when you set forth such sentiment in singing. We do not wish to wound the feelings of any, but we do desire that our people sing the truth, as well as preach it. We cannot help but doubt the real soundness of any Old Baptist who will sing such sentiment. For the sake of the truth, which you profess to love, if you have been guilty of singing such unsound sentiment, quit it at once, and do so no more. The Lord willing, we will write some more next issue concerning this matter. C. H. C.

The Resurrection

May 4, 1939

Brother R. B. King, of Bakersfield, Mo., asked us if the Saviour was talking about the resurrection of the body in (Matthew 22:25-27); ((20) (Mark 12:20-27); ((0:29) (Luke 20:29-38), and asked if it is not a fact that the bodies of the non-elect are left in their graves if this is what was the subject under consideration. We answer that it was the resurrection from the grave that was under consideration; but the Saviour was not talking about whether it was a certain class, or all classes, of human beings that would be raised. He was refuting the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection of the body. They were a set of non-resurrectionists, and went to the Saviour with a question designed to entangle Him in His speech and in His doctrine. This they utterly failed to do; and the Saviour taught the doctrine of the resurrection in refuting them. But that the Saviour taught the doctrine of a universal resurrection of the dead from the grave is evident from His statement in (John 5:28-29) "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." It is not necessary to argue here why they do good; it is because they were first made good by the work of the Holy Spirit. The Sadducees denied there being any resurrection at all, but the Pharisees believed in the resurrection. See (Acts 23:8). Paul was called in question for his teaching. The multitude accusing him was composed of both Sadducees and Pharisees. In the midst of them Paul said, "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets: and having hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." -((4) (Acts 24:14-15). See also (Revelation 20:11-15). God's people were written in the book of life, and were not judged out of the things written in the books. Others were judged out of the things written in the books, and were all cast into the lake of fire. C. H. C.

No Weekly Paper

May 4, 1939

It is a fact that our people do not have a weekly periodical in the whole United States. Is this to our credit? We have some periodicals published twice a month and some published once a month-and some of them occasionally skip an issue. Does it not look like our people could support at least one weekly periodical in the whole United States? Of course they COULD. But what are you doing toward getting a weekly? Are you trying to get more to subscribe for one of our papers- one of the papers being published in defense of our cause? Do you ever try to persuade some to take The Primitive Baptist who are not taking it? Perhaps you may sometimes ask someone to take it, and that one may refuse, or put you off. Do you then get discouraged, and quit? How about a quitter? Do you not remember a poem we used to see in our old school reader, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again?" If you start in to do a certain piece of work around your place, and you meet with setbacks, do you quit- or do you keep on trying? Do we not believe in perseverance? To persevere is to keep on at it. There was once a business concern that had this for a slogan: "Keeping everlastingly at it brings success." In order to do what you can to help us make The Primitive Baptist a weekly, it is necessary for you to keep on trying to get others to take the paper. Try using your powers of persuasion on those who are not subscribers. Do not stop at simply asking them if they are taking the paper, and just asking them to do so-persuade them to try the paper for awhile-for one year, at least." Will you try this? If we will all try, and do our best, for the rest of this year, we can have a weekly. Some of our readers have been doing some good work during the past few months. But we need the help of others. Co-operation, and helping each other, will go a. long ways. Let us show by our work on this line that we have an interest in the cause. May we count on YOU? Let us WORK together? Will you work with us, to the end that we may make The Primitive Baptist a weekly? C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 6:1-7

May 4, 1939

Brother G. A. Waid, of Steele, Ala., has asked for our views on verse 4 in the above citation, and refers to verse 5. This language in the verses named is in regard to brethren going to law with one another, which some Corinthian brethren had done. The apostle sharply rebukes them for this. He instructs them in (I Corinthians 6:4) to set them who are little esteemed among them to judge between the brethren in regard to matters of this life, where difference exists; and then in (I Corinthians 6:5) he shames them, and asks the question, "Is it so that there is not a wise man among you?" Were they all so ignorant that they could not judge worldly differences between their brethren? He also asks, "Is there not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?" These questions naturally answer themselves. They are affirmative questions, and must necessarily be answered yes. Then, they were to be shamed, rebuked sharply, and reprovved for going to law. It is a shame for Primitive Baptists to go to law before the world with their differences. Better suffer wrong than to do that. It has always been against the rules of the Primitive Baptist Church for brethren to go to law with one another. C. H. C.

Condemnation and Salvation

---May 18, 1939

Brother W. M. Jenkins, of Bold Spring, Tenn., asked us: "What is the cause of anyone's eternal damnation? Sin, I understand, but what sin? One Baptist preacher said it was what we do. If so, damnation is conditional. I can't so understand. That is what he understands Primitive Baptists have always believed." The preacher is right, as we understand the matter. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." -(Romans 5:21). Wages is what you get for what you do. Sin is the transgression of the law; and that is what you do, and death is what you get for it. On the other hand, "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." It is true that Adam's sin was ours, as he represented us, and we are born into this world with the same life which he had; and that life became poisoned with sin when he transgressed the law. But as we grow old enough to do anything we commit actual sin. Either way, it is enough to condemn us, and when we have both, a sinful nature and actual transgressions, it makes condemnation doubly sure without the intervention of divine grace-without the intervention of mercy and the work of our Saviour. So, God's gift is eternal life. The old Westminster Confession of Faith, the old Presbyterian Confession, made condemnation unconditional as well as salvation. Chapter III, Sec. 3, reads: "By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels were predestinated unto everlasting life, and others foreordained to everlasting death." This the Primitive Baptists have always denied. They have always believed that eternal salvation is unconditional, but have never believed that people were sent to hell unconditionally. The London Confession, Chapter III, Sec. 3, says: "By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels are predestinated or foreordained to eternal life, through Jesus Christ, others being left to act in their sin to their just condemnation, to the praise of His glorious justice." The Presbyterian Confession was put forth several years before the London Confession, by the Baptists, which was put forth in 1689. The Baptists, in their confession, copied largely from the Presbyterian Confession, where they very well could do so. If the Baptists believed as the Presbyterians, in unconditional reprobation, why did they change that article? There is quite a difference in one being predestinated to condemnation and being left to act in his sins. If God predestinated the damnation of some of the race, and predestinated the salvation of others, then the salvation of those who are saved is not a matter of grace-no more than the damnation of the others is a matter of grace. C. H. C.

---May 18, 1939

Brother J. R. Woodard, of Cullman, Ala., has requested our views on the language recorded in the above citation, concerning Moses and the burning bush. We will not take space to quote the language here. An angel of the Lord appeared to Moses in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush. The bush burned with fire, and was not consumed. The Israelites had been in bondage, and were afflicted, and yet they were not consumed. We think this was a type of the church. Notwithstanding the burning, and the afflictions which the church has endured all along the line, yet the church is not consumed. The reason the bush was not consumed was that God was in the midst of the bush. The reason why the church is not consumed is because God is there. Moses drew nigh to the bush to see the great sight, and God said to him, "Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place where thou standest is holy ground." The church is a holy place; it is holy ground. God requires that when we draw nigh, to enter into His service, we put off our shoes from off our feet. We cannot serve God with any of the inventions of men, or with what men have made. The commandments of men being observed or obeyed is not rendering service to God. Nothing but what God has commanded in His Word will do as service to Him. The world, and worldly things, the things of the world, must be put off. They must be laid aside. The church is in the world, but is not of the world. The world must be kept out of the church, or else there will be a going down of the church in that place. "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." --(33) (Luke 14:33). The church-the true church-is an institution which the Lord established here in the world. It is holy ground. It is not to be esteemed lightly. May the Lord help us to serve Him in a way that we may show that we esteem the church above everything else in the world. C. H. C.

---May 18, 1939

In the conclusion of our article in the last issue under the above heading we promised to try to write some more for this issue along the same line. We have not had the time to devote to this that we would like to have had, and so we will have to make this article brief. There are some hymns which have been very popular among our people, and are yet, that are good and soul-inspiring in the main, and yet a few words have crept into them in the books that our people have generally used that are corrupt and unsound. Why the compilers of our books have used those hymns with such unsound sentiment retained we are unable to say. Perhaps some of the compilers did not notice the sentiment. Perhaps some of them used the hymns without making any effort to correct the sentiment just because the hymns were popular. Be that as it may-it is a question we cannot answer; but we find such hymns-a number of them. Take this good old hymn as one example, the first line of which is, "There is a fountain filled with blood." Let us here quote the second stanza: The dying thief rejoiced to see That fountain in his day; And there may I, though vile as he, Wash all my sins away. There can be no question but what the pronoun I, in the third line, is the subject of the verb wash in the last line. Hence, the sense of it cannot possibly be anything else than that I wash my sins away. The language cannot possibly be twisted to mean anything else. Now, get yourself up a "distracted" meeting, and get your modern evangelist to "go to it" to get sinners to come up to the altar and wash their sins away! Just as well do that as to sing the sentiment! Just as well preach it as to sing it. We had in our possession years ago an old song book which went out of use before the Civil War. In that book we found this hymn to read this way: The dying thief rejoiced to see That fountain in his day; I hope that blood was shed for me, And washed my sins away. When you sing that hymn that way you sing the truth. There are more things we will try to write about along this line later on. For this time we must stop now. May the Lord help us to consider. C. H. C.

Church A Widow
CHURCH A WIDOW

---June 1, 1939

A brother writes us that it is being advocated that the church was a widow for three days and nights that Jesus lay in the tomb, and asks our views of the matter. A widow is a woman whose husband is dead. The church is represented in the Bible as being the bride of Christ. "Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife." -(Revelation 21:9). "For thy Maker is thine husband; the Lord of hosts is His name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel." -((4:5) (Isaiah 54:5). We remember being in debate with a Campbellite years ago on the question of the identity of the church. We took the position that the church was established by the Master during His personal ministry on earth. He said that if that be true, then the church was a widow for three days and nights, while Jesus was dead. We replied that he was correct, and that she was a widow for three days and nights, for her husband was dead just three days and nights; but the Lord's promise and assurance to her was, "Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more." - ((4:4) (Isaiah 54:4). We told him that his so-called church was not the Lord's church, for she had never been a widow, for the simple reason she had never been married or had a husband. The church was a widow for awhile-three days and nights; but she is not a widow now, and never will be again, for her Husband is alive forevermore. May the Lord bless these thoughts to your good. C. H. C.

They Were Jews

---June 1, 1939

Brother P. S. Walton, of Danville, Va., asked us these questions: "Was Abraham a Jew? Was Christ a Jew? Was Mary, Christ's mother, a Jew?" Abraham was the father of the Jewish nation. Christ was a Jew. He was a descendant of Abraham, of the lineage of David. David was a Jew. Mary was a Jew-that is, her parents were Jews. She was of the Jewish nation. But Jesus had some Gentile blood in Him, through the lineage of Ruth. Ruth was a Gentile, the daughter-in-law of Naomi, and was married to Boaz, a Jew, and it was through his lineage that Christ came. C. H. C.

Communion Meeting

---June 1, 1939

Our regular communion time here at Thornton is the first Sunday in July. The meeting will be on Saturday and Sunday, 11 o'clock both days, and Sunday night, as usual. At our last meeting the church extended a special invitation for members of sister churches to be with us at that time. We will appreciate your coming. Remember, too, that we are to have two ministers with us at that time from Iowa. We hope to have a large number of brethren and sisters with us then. C. H. C.
Preaching and Singing Article Number 3

We promised in our issue of May 18 that we would try to write something more along the line of preaching and singing at a later date. We could not very well get to it for the last issue. Will call attention now to a few things along that line. We begin this little article by asking a question. What is religion? True, there is more than one kind of religion. "For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it." -(Galatians 1:13). Here we have mentioned the "Jews' religion," and how the Apostle Paul had practiced that religion, and in so doing he persecuted the church of God, beyond measure, and wasted it. It appears to us that this was not a very good religion; but it consisted of a very bad practice. He continues, in the next verse, thus: "And profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers." Get your Book and read on in the chapter and you will see how the Jews' religion was taken from him. But here is a religion that we would certainly all agree was not good. There is a vain religion also mentioned in the Book. "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bri-dleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." -(James 1:26). A thing that is vain is something "having no real substance, value, or importance; empty; void; idle; worthless." -Webster. So, here is a religion that is of no value; it has no real substance; it is of no importance; it is void; it is worthless. And this is what some practice. It is the things they do. But here is another kind of religion the Book tells us about: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." -(James 1:27). Here is a religion that is approved of God; and it is something to do. In doing this one is practicing the pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father. It is "to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction is not to go to where they stay and "eat up what they may have," or to heap burdens upon them, but it is to minister to them; it is to do something, or say something, that will help them to bear their burdens and sorrows; it is to be of help to them in their distresses. To keep one's self unspotted from the world is not to visit the grog shop, or the whisky store; it is not to go to the races; it is not to go to the theater or the picture show; it is not to engage in card playing; it is not to engage in "shooting dice;" it is not to engage in raffling off quilts; it is not to engage in selling chances in or on anything, even in the name of the church, or for the church; it is not to engage in any kind of gambling scheme; it is not to curse and swear, or to take the name of God in vain; it is not to engage in questionable things, means, or measures, in business; it is not to go to places where you would be ashamed for your wife, or daughter, or sweetheart to go with you; it is not to do many other things we might mention that the world engages in, and which are unbecoming in the membership of the Lord's church or kingdom. In fine, the pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is to visit and administer to the needs and for the comfort of the fatherless and the widows, and to do just what God has taught in His Book, and to strictly leave undone the things that are not taught therein. That is the way, and the only way, to practice the religion which God the Father and our blessed Saviour approve of. In the practice of this religion there are blessings which come to those who engage therein, and which no one can ever realize or enjoy any other way. "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed" (or in his doing).-(James 1:25). The blessing enjoyed by such a person is here in this life; it is in his doing, and follows as a result of it. But there is no blessing to be enjoyed after this life as a result of our doing. All the joys of heaven come to one as a result of, and because of, what the Lord has done for us and what He will do for us. The blessings and joys of heaven are an inheritance-yours because you are God's child, and not because of what you have done, or can do, or may do. That is all a matter of sovereign grace and mercy. Yet, in the face of these manifest and evident facts, we sometimes hear Old Baptists sing: 'Tis religion that can give Sweetest pleasures while we live; 'Tis religion must supply Solid comfort when we die. After death its joys will be Lasting as eternity; Be the living God my Friend, Then my bliss shall never end. If you have nothing but religion to supply solid comfort when you come to die, how do you think it will be with you? Remember that religion is what you do. "After death its joys will be" -What does the word its refer to? That word is a pronoun, and must have an antecedent. No grammarian in the whole universe would deny that religion is the antecedent of the word its. Then the joys of religion are lasting as eternity. The practice of religion here in this world will bring joys to you in eternity, for those joys are lasting as eternity. Do you believe that rank Arminianism? Frankly, we do not. When you sing that to us, you sing something that is not the truth-it is a flagrant contradiction of the truth taught in God's Book. It teaches that unless you practice the religion everlasting hell, eternal destruction, everlasting burnings, will be yours; but that in the practice of religion heaven and all its joys and glories will be yours. Now, how about praising and using a book containing such rottenness? We have to beg you to excuse us, please. Someone may hear you sing that sentiment, and then you preach contrary to it; then he would have a right to say, "Which way do you believe-the way you preach, or the way you sing?" May the Lord help us to consider. We may write some more concerning these things later on. C. H. C.

Resurrection

We have been asked to give our views as to the order of the resurrection; or if those who were members of the church militant will be raised first, and then after a thousand years the others of the children of God be raised. No such thing as there being two resurrections of the children of God has ever been advocated or believed by Primitive Baptists-that a part of God's children will be raised when Christ comes back to earth, and then after a period of a thousand years the others of God's children will be raised. This seems to us to be rather akin to Russellism, or to the doctrine that is now being advocated by Judge Rutherford. It is not the truth, and is only another one of Satan's inventions to deceive the Lord's people. "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." -(Th 4:16) (I Thessalonians 4:16-17). There is no room for a mistake here-that all God's people will be raised at the same time; they will all be raised together. Not only is it clear in this that they will all be raised at the same time, but it is also clear that they will be caught up from this earth. This earth is not their home. They are pilgrims and strangers here. They have a better country beyond this life. The Lord was taken up in a cloud. He went away in a cloud of glory, and He is coming back the same way; see ((0) (Acts 1:10). And when He comes in the cloud of His glory all the dead in Christ shall be raised, and the saints who are still living on the earth will be changed and caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air, and shall ever be with the Lord. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." -(I Corinthians 15:51-52). Here we are plainly told that the bodies of all the saints shall be changed, and that this will take place in the twinkling of an eye. Not only so, but that those who may be living at the time of His coming will be changed at the same time and just as quickly. John Gill, the learned Baptist divine, said that all the saints will be raised at the same time. No Baptist of any note has ever advocated anything else, and any other theory is a departure from Primitive Baptist doctrine. Departures are what cause trouble in Zion. Let us be careful to let finespun theories and speculation severely alone. No man can get a good name for himself among the Lord's people by speculation. He may deceive some, and have a few followers; but such has a woe pronounced against him. May the Lord help us to stay with the truth, and to steer clear of the inventions of men.

Women Prophecy

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Christ, I Hope-I am sending $1 to subscribe for your paper. Through a miracle of sovereign grace I was permitted to come in contact with your paper, and it is the only thing that can satisfy my soul. You see, God's wonderful loving grace came into my heart over three years ago. I fought it, not knowing what church to join until last summer, I joined the Missionary Baptists; but they never have seemed to satisfy my hungry soul. But since I borrowed some of your papers I began searching the Scriptures and praying for understanding, and I know God is leading me in the way of truth. Brother Cayce, do you believe in women preaching? and what does the Scripture mean where it says in the last days your sons and daughters shall prophesy? Pray for me. M. B. Jones. Adamson, Okla.

REMARKS

Paul says to let the elders be the husband of one wife. If women can fill this requirement, as Elder Newman once said, then, by all means, let them be ordained to preach. Whatever the above prophesying may mean, it cannot mean for them to be put in the ministry. C. H. C.

---July 6, 1939

Years ago we engaged in a debate in Texas with Mr. J. W. Chism, who represented the Campbellites. The debate was to have been between Mr. Chism and Elder S. A. Paine. We were present to attend the debate, but Elder Paine was called home after the session of the first day, on account of sickness in his home. So we had to take his place, beginning on the morning of the second day. During the debate Mr. Chism took the position and argued that Christ was our security; that when the debt which the sinner owed became due, He paid the Father, and satisfied the Father, and had the claim or debt transferred; that we now owe the debt to the Son instead of the Father; that it is like the song says, "Jesus paid it all-all to Him I owe;" that as Jesus then held the claim against us, He had the right to make the terms of settlement; that He has made the terms of settlement, and laid them down in the New Testament; and when we meet those terms of settlement by doing what He has commanded and required therein, then the debt is cancelled, or marked paid-and so on, and so on. Our contention was that Jesus did not simply go our security, but that He was our surety, "By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament." -(2) (Hebrews 7:22). Modern law makes very little difference between security and surety; but there is a difference. If James buys goods of a merchant, and John goes security for James, when the debt is due the merchant looks to James for payment; if James fails to pay, then he will endeavor to collect from John. The merchant looks to James first, and, if James fails, then he looks to John. He does not look to John first. The merchandise, or goods, is charged to James, with John's name on the book as security. Thus John guarantees the payment of the debt in case James fails. The name of James is first on the bill, and the name of John is second. That is security. That is not what Jesus was to His people; but He was their surety. In law, originally, surety is a person given, or who gives himself as a pledge. Jesus "gave Himself for us." If John stands as surety for James, when the debt is made it is charged to John, and not to James. The goods are charged to John, and put on the book as against John, by James; which shows that the goods were bought by James, but they were things to be paid for by John. If John is security for James, he would say to the merchant, "Whatever debt James contracts, I will pay if he fails." But if he is surety for James he says to the merchant, "Whatever debt James contracts, I will pay it." He stands with the merchant in the place of, in the stead of, James. So Jesus was the surety of His people. Your sins, if you are one of His children, were not charged to you; they were charged to Jesus, by you, as your surety. The Father has never looked to you for the payment of the debt. He looked to Jesus for the payment. He looked to your surety. He was able to pay, and did pay, the debt in full. As your surety He satisfied every demand of divine justice in your stead. No demand will ever be made of His people for the payment of the debt you owed. The law has been satisfied by Him; He has met all its demands, and hushed all its claims. It cannot condemn you now, for Jesus has met and performed all that it ever demanded or could demand. The surety paid the debt, and the transgressor goes free. This having been done for His people by their surety, the Holy Spirit is sure to regenerate each and every one of them, and bring them into divine relationship with the Lord, and they will be finally landed safe in glory. But if we should owe a merchant, or a bank, a thousand dollars, and we are penniless, and the debt is due, and the merchant's son, or the banker's son, should go to our creditor and satisfy that creditor, and have the debt transferred to him, so that we now have to pay the son instead of the old man, we cannot see how the son has benefitted us in the least, or has done us any good. We would just as soon pay the old man as to pay the boy. If we are penniless (and the sinner is penniless), we are no more able to pay the boy than we are to pay the old man. That position simply denies that Jesus has done the sinner any good. As to what the gentleman called a song we told him it was not a song, but a chorus to a song; and as originally written the chorus was, Jesus paid it all. All the debt I owed. Sin had left a crimson stain, He washed it white as snow. Now, we said, what is the matter with that chorus? The trouble with it is that some of you fellows have "doctored" it, and got it out of fix. Look at it a moment. "Jesus paid it all" -all what? What you owed, of course-or else He paid part of it and left part for you or someone else to pay. So far as we are concerned, if He did not pay the whole thing we are in as deplorable a condition as before, and He has done us no good. How about you? Were you in so deplorable a state as that-or could you pay a part of the debt yourself? All right. He paid it all-the whole debt; He paid it in full. Now take the next line, as quoted by our opponent, and as it is so often sung, "All to Him I owe." Then what do you owe to Him? According to the language, you owe to Him just what He paid. No use to try to twist the language and say we owe Him our service and praise-we know that is true; but what does the language say? That is the question. There is not a grammarian in the whole country who would say that is what the language teaches. He would say that, according to the language, we owe to Him just what He paid. And that is what it was changed and made to read that way for. The truth is that Jesus paid what His people owed; He paid all the debt; He paid it in full, and then they are given the benefit of it. Hence the inspired apostle said, "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." -(I Corinthians 15:57). As long as sixty years ago we heard our precious old mother sing No. 567 in the old Thomas Hymn Book with that chorus. For the benefit of our readers we close this article with that old sweet experimental hymn, with the old-time chorus. Remember that the hymn and chorus are not on practical lines, but law and experimental-the law satisfied by your Saviour and Redeemer, and your experimental knowledge of your insufficiency and failure to save yourself: Nothing, either great or small, Remains for me to do; Jesus died and paid it all-Yes, all the debt I owe. Chorus-Jesus paid it allAll the debt I owe- Sin had left a crimson stain, He washed it white as snow. When He from His lofty throne, Stooped down to do and die, Everything was fully done; Yes, "finished," was His cry. Weary, working, plodding one, Oh, wherefore toil you so? Cease your "doing;" all was done, Yes, ages long ago. Till to Jesus' work you cling, Alone by simple faith, "Doing" is a deadly thing-All "doing" ends in death. Cast your deadly "doing" down, Down, all at Jesus' feet; Stand in Him-in Him alone-All glorious and complete.

Perhaps you know the tune-you have it in some of the books, though changed just a little so as to suit the new song and to suit the change the Arminians have made. Do not sing such sentiment as to leave some to wonder whether you believe the way you sing or the way you preach. Preach the truth in its sweetness and simplicity, and then sing the truth, and nothing but the truth. Just as well mix up your preaching as to mix up your singing. May the Lord help us to stand for truth in all we do. We may write some more concerning these matters later on. Do you stand with us on these things? C. H. C.

Communion at Bethel

---July 6, 1939

Elsewhere in this paper will be found an article headed "Quaint Ritual of Foot Washing Observed at Church Near City." The article is copied from the Shreveport Journal. We feel sure that many of our readers will enjoy reading the article. Not many newspaper articles give our people such an unbiased report as this. Most articles in metropolitan journals are on the order of ridicule and sarcasm, though sometimes veiled. The reporter used an expression which we wish to call to the attention of our readers. It is this: "Regardless of the viewpoint on the mentality of foot washing, one would have to be void of sentiment or respect for things sacred to scoff at the foot-washing ceremony. It is a solemn, impressive rite that can create a lump in one's throat." (Let us say, and we say the truth, that it does not, it will not, it cannot, create a lump in the throat of one whose heart has not been touched and softened by the work of the Spirit of the eternal God. Whatever may be the religious belief of the reporter, he has here "given away" to us the fact that he knows something experimentally of the work of grace; and God's predestination embraced him-this is an evidence of that to us-and the "joys to come," which the Old Baptists draw a wordy picture of, are his. Another expression: "Then the pastor, Elder Garner, read some passage of Scripture from which he later took his text. I refer to him as 'Elder' because there are no 'Reverends' among Old Baptists. They think the term is too exalted to apply even to a minister." The Old Baptists have good reason for their position regarding the use of the word reverend. That word is found one time in the Bible, and that is in (Psalms 111:9), which reads thus: "He sent redemption unto His people: He hath commanded His covenant for ever, holy and reverend is His name." The one whose name is reverend is the one who sent redemption unto His people. That was the work of God, and not the work of the preacher. And He sent redemption by His Son-He is the Redeemer. Of course, worldly religionists, or modern religionists, do not understand our people in this matter, as well as other matters. But there is one expression in the article in which our friendly reporter is mistaken. We are sure that he made the statement from the information which he had received. It was this: "His faith and creed are the same as when Roger Williams brought them to America." The mistake here is that "Roger Williams brought them to America." Roger Williams did not bring our faith or creed to America. We are aware of the fact that some have said that Roger Williams was the founder of the first Baptist Church in America; but that is a mistake. Roger Williams organized his church at Providence, Rhode Island, in 1639, upon the Baptist principles of freedom of worship. The first Baptist Church organized in America was by Dr. John Clark (a physician) and eleven others at Newport, Rhode Island, in 1638. Although the Roger Williams church was organized upon the Baptist principles of freedom of worship, yet his church was never really identified with the Baptists, and was not listed as being among them in those days. It was later on that some claimed him and his church as Baptists. We appreciate the good article from the reporter concerning our people. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE BY RUPERT PEYTON (From Shreveport Journal)

Just beyond the outskirts of Shreveport in a spot from which, but for the terrain and trees, the spires of the city could be seen, is a little community where tradition and custom more quaint than the ante bellum period, still prevail. Here one may witness religious rites that have been unchanged in centuries and unaffected by the modern world growing about. Here is Bethel Primitive Baptist Church, a little shrine nestled in a grove of oak and pine which, to the faithful flock who worship there, is one of the loveliest spots on earth. Here is a church that exists without a collection plate, a Sunday school, a salaried pastor, an organ or a new song book. It has no missionary program, no drives, no revival meetings, no ladies' society, nor a custom that was not initiated centuries ago. The members say their rites have not changed, except in language, since the days of Jesus—they claim apostolic origin. Here the solemn ceremony of footwashing is observed at every communion with the same devotion as when it was customary among several creeds ages ago. Here is real wine served from a common cup—not grape juice from individual glasses. The bread is unleavened. Real wine is served, says the good pastor, because it is more symbolic of the blood of Christ—it doesn't spoil. I went to Bethel recently and spent several hours, and it was with some reluctance that I departed from the scene of religious fraternity. Hospitality is a trait of those good people. Bethel is but a few miles north of Shreveport. One goes up the Blanchard road, past the second K. C. S. underpass, then follows a gravel road to the right. A sign at the end of a sandy lane that intersects the road informs the traveler that Bethel is a quarter of a mile to the right. I found the service under way with the congregation singing an old hymn. No newfangled tunes for these Primitive Baptists. They still sing the songs their grandparents sang and their parents before them. "Amazing Grace" and "How Firm a Foundation" are among their favorites. Officially they are known as Primitive Baptists, but the adherents usually refer to themselves as "Old Baptists." However, they are known to the uninitiated as "Hardshells." This derisive appellation has been applied so long that "Old Baptists" have gracefully bowed to it without offense. Old Baptists present a unique and incongruous picture in the modern ecclesiastical realm. Their quaintness, their adherence to the old customs, their staunch belief in the doctrine of predestination, long since relegated to oblivion or never adopted by other creeds, set them apart. This is the very essence of their faith and accounts, principally, for their unchanging customs and mode of worship. It accounts, too, for their old songs, for most of the modern hymns contain words out of harmony with the tenets of foreordination. Though there is no article of faith against instrumental music in the church, Old Baptists do not believe an organ necessary to worship, so there is none. I took my seat near the rear and listened to the old hymns that sounded like the chants of bygone years. Then the pastor, Elder Garner, read some passage of Scripture from which he later took his text. I refer to him as "Elder" because there are no "Reverends" among Old Baptists. They think the term is too exalted to apply even to a minister. Humility is one of their strongest traits. A restless child in the seat near me gave its mother some trouble and slightly disturbed proceedings. A young mother with a cute baby sat in front of me. The baby was but a few months old, but was in a good humor and smiled at me. I liked it. But soon the baby began to cry, and the mother stepped outside. She returned a few moments later with a nursing bottle. The baby was satisfied and fell asleep. There is no such thing as a nursery at a Primitive Baptist Church, and rural folks can't leave babies at home unattended. Some people, unacquainted with this situation, don't understand this. An old man, apparently 80, pronounced the invocation in a voice that was feeble but fervent, then took his seat directly in front of the pulpit a few feet from the minister and cupped his ear with his hand. His hearing was impaired, but he appeared very happy. The pastor started his sermon in typical Old Baptist fashion—a humble apology for his human frailties and expression of his profound love for the "brethren" and the great responsibility of the duty of "trying to say something of comfort to God's people." The sermon was over sooner than usual. There was a brief intermission while the men of the church arranged two rows of seats facing each other for the women to observe the communion ritual. The wine and unleavened bread were on a table in front of the pulpit covered with a cloth. There was a prayer and the pastor read the account of the last supper, emphasizing that Jesus had washed the feet of the disciples and had enjoined them and "all of God's children to wash each other's feet." "We Old Baptists," said the, good man, "believe in going all the way. We do not believe in going half way and then stopping. On that memorable night our Lord washed the feet of the disciples." So saying, Elder Garner pulled off his coat, girded himself with a long towel, as Jesus did. Two deacons drew forth basins from under the communion table and filled them with water from a pail. The pastor took one of the basins, knelt before the old man in front of the pulpit, who had pulled off his shoes, and washed his feet, wiping them with the towel. Then he arose, divested himself of the towel, gave it to the old man who girded it on. The old man knelt, washed the pastor's feet, then the two arose, grasped each other's hands and embraced. Both wept silently. Meanwhile, this same procedure went on among the members of the congregation as, two by two, they paired off and observed the ritual. Women washed women's feet and men washed men's. The women embraced each other at the conclusion of their part in the rite, and some of the men did also. Nearly all wept silently. Primitive Baptists do not shout, but they weep silently at intervals in their service. They say these are tears of joy. Regardless of the viewpoint on the meniality of foot washing, one would have to be void of sentiment or respect for things sacred to scoff at the footwashing ceremony. It is a solemn, impressive rite that can create a lump in one's throat. Realizing that their customs are unique and strange to the moderns, Old Baptists accept their position with kindly stoicism. Laugh at them and they will pity you. You do not understand their ways or know their joys. Only those with the faith and will to humble themselves in the ritual of footwashing can enjoy the pleasure of "obeying His commandments," say this band of faithful adherents. "Secret societies," said the pastor, "have a secret they could tell but won't. We have a secret that we would tell but can't. This is the secret of our joy in serving the commandments of our Lord." Old Baptists do not approve of divorce except for

"Bible grounds," which is infidelity on the part of either party contracting the marriage. There is also a church rule which forbids any member to defraud any person, or to evade the payment of a debt when able to do so. These rules are applied occasionally. Old Baptist pastors are paid no salary. However, they usually receive free-will offerings after each service. The clerk or a deacon notifies the congregation that donations will be received after the service. Those wishing to contribute do so by going to the clerk after benediction. No plates are passed during the service. Old Baptist pastors receive no special training, as the church maintains no schools and confers no degrees. Convinced that a brother has received the "divine call" any congregation can ordain a minister. The test of his eligibility is his understanding of the creed, good character and devotion. Usually the minister is a farmer who spends his week-ends serving four or five churches over a rather wide area. Few are full-time pastors and services are seldom held more than once a month. No sermon in an Old Baptist Church is complete unless it touches on the cornerstone of Old Baptist faith-predestination. This, with a wordy picture of the joys to come, is the spiritual meat and drink of the followers of faith. Believing as they do in predestination, Old Baptists see the gospel not as a "means unto salvation," but an evidence of it-a way to enjoy it. Eternal salvation, they contend, comes by the choice and act of God to which man, depraved by Adam's sin and curse, is wholly passive. Hence preaching, to them, is not a soul-winning duty but an obedient service and a joy unto the "saved." Other creeds call this fatalism. Old Baptists, however, deny this, contending that "God is not the Father of sin but the Almighty who exercises His will and pleasure." No wonder the missionary spirit does not exist among Old Baptists. The Primitive Baptists will accept anything modern but his religion and religious rites. He likes the radio, the automobile, modern things, and is, to the best of his ability, adapting himself to the changing material world. But on the spiritual side, he belongs to the old order. His faith and creed are the same as when Roger Williams brought them to America. Though profoundly faithful to his creed and satisfied with no other, the Old Baptist is tolerant. He has no dislike for Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant. He only wants to live and let live and enjoy his peculiar faith in the way that his ancestors have for centuries. The communion ritual over, the members of the flock closed their services with a procedure unique to the faith-the "parting hand." There is a special song for this occasion. It is called "The Parting Hand." There are many stanzas and the tempo is slow and the air doleful. As they sing this song the members walk about and shake hands, singing as they go. This is a part of their rites in which non-members may participate. The communion is for members only. Following the parting hand the crowd assembled under a big oak on the churchyard where a wooden table, about 50 feet long, stood. Then from near-by automobiles men and women drew forth boxes and baskets filled with treasures of culinary art of the countryside. Soon the table groaned under the weight of a feast fit for the gods. Certainly these people who know the economy of doing without do not practice it in their dining rooms, for they know nothing of the shortage of food. Here before us lay a feast-meats of every description, fried chicken, roast chicken, chicken pie, fruit pies, custards, salads of various assortment, cakes, cakes, and cakes, all prepared according to those delicate recipes that seem to be a secret of the rural South. On my plate I had a piece of roast beef, a la rural, a helping of chicken pie, two kinds of salad, a slice of roast chicken, a slice of fried country ham, a slice of custard, a slice of delectable apple pie, plus a few pickles. I managed to do justice to this generous plate and was offered more, but had to forego the pleasure of sampling other tempting morsels. Space would not permit. After the meal there was no hurry. Women cleared away the tables, the men pulled out their pipes, children began to play about the churchyard. Some boys tossed a baseball. Men and women huddled in little groups under the trees, or sat on benches and talked. No European crisis bothered these people-not even the latest sins of the new deal. They were but slightly interested in state politics. A group of farmers looked at the clouds in the west and wondered if it would rain. Crops were suffering, they said, from both drought and cold. Women talked about the neighborhood matters. They were worried about "Sister" Jones, who was too ill to be present. She had been specially mentioned in a prayer. A group of little children, toddled about and played with a dog. A baby laughed with glee on its father's knee while a bevy of teen-aged girls looked admiringly on. A curious little boy whose picture I snapped, wanted to know whether it would be in the paper. It was a scene of naive peace, contentment and happiness that made the departure to urban artificiality exceedingly difficult. As I drove away I silently wished that this scene would never change.

Some Questions Asked

---July 20, 1939

We are in receipt of a letter containing the following questions, with the request that we answer the same:

1. Does the spirit come back, from where it is, to the body at the resurrection?
2. Is sin the cause of death, or does God especially cause one, at any age, to die?
3. What constitutes man-the soul, or the dust he was made of?
4. Do we have immortality while we live here in this life before we are resurrected from the grave?
5. Where does the Bible first mention a literal burning hell, and by whom first preached? We will comment just a little on the questions by number.
 1. Yes, the spirit comes back to the body at the resurrection of the body.
 2. All and every kind of death is a result of sin. Primarily death in sin, a loss of all moral standing with God, was the result of sin. All death follows as a result of sin.
 3. The man complete is composed of soul, body, and spirit; yet the body is sometimes called a man, and the soul is called the soul of man, and the spirit is called the spirit of man. Sometimes the man is called a living soul, or persons are sometimes referred to as souls.
 4. Yes, we have immortality in some sense before the resurrection. The very life of Christ-eternal life-is implanted in the soul or spirit in the work of regeneration; so that when the body dies the spirit does not die, Even the unregenerate possess immortality in the sense of never ceasing to exist, or in the sense of always dying, but not in the sense of always living and never dying. The literal translation of the sentence of the law of God in the morning of time is, "dying, thou shalt die;" which means always dying and never ceasing to be. The children of God are made alive from that state of death, and then are always living and never dying. This principle of always living is implanted in the soul, but not in the body, and so the body dies; but though the body dies, on account of sin, yet the spirit lives on account of righteousness. When the body is raised at the last day, in the resurrection, then the bodies of the saints will be changed and made immortal-always living and never dying.
 5. We have not looked the matter up as to where the hell referred to is first mentioned. What difference does it make where it is first mentioned, if it teaches at all that there is an actual place of eternal punishment? And what difference does it make whether it is a literal fire, or some other kind of fire? Are you interested in that place? Is your interest there, or is your interest in a better place than that? The apostle said, "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence we also look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ." -((20) (Philippians 3:20). This is the place where the interest of the Lord's children is. The Saviour preached that there is such a thing as everlasting punishment, for He said, "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." -(Matthew 25:46). The word translated eternal here, with reference to the life of the righteous, is the same word that is translated everlasting with reference to the punishment of the wicked. If the life of the righteous is of endless duration, and it is, then so is the punishment of the wicked of endless duration. The word in the original means, "Of endless duration, interminable, never ending." C. H. C.

A Good Meeting

---July 20, 1939

Our last meeting here at home, Saturday and first Sunday, was a wonderful meeting, to us. To say it was a good meeting does not express it. This was our regular communion time. Elders A. W. Thompson and W. A. Holmes, of Iowa, were with us. After the preaching on Saturday, when the opportunity was given for any to present themselves who desired a home with us, our oldest boy, Claudis, Jr., came forward and asked for a home in the old church. He was gladly and joyfully received as a candidate for baptism. He said that it was his desire, if it was all right for us to do so, for us to baptize him. It made us feel so thankful, and yet so insignificant, for our own precious boy to express a desire that we lay him beneath the yielding wave in following the blessed Saviour. On Sunday morning we assembled at the water, at a large pond near-by, and led him down into the water and laid him beneath the wave, in obedience to our blessed Lord, and raised him up again-setting forth both a burial and a resurrection-to walk in newness of life. The Lord graciously smiled on us all in this delightful, yet solemn, service. Then we all went to the meetinghouse, and had preaching-good preaching, after which the communion and footwashing service was attended to, in which we had the delightful privilege of washing the feet of our precious boy. We had often wondered if we would ever have this privilege. Elders Thompson and Holmes, and Sisters Holmes and Hill, who were with the two brethren from Iowa, all took part in the service. The service was delightful. We all got a taste of what is meant in the promise of our Saviour when He said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Many tears of joy were shed. The joy and love that was manifested cannot be told. Lacking from the first Sunday in July to Thursday before the second Sunday in September it was just fifty years from the time our father baptized us (his oldest son) till we had the sweet pleasure of baptizing our oldest son. "O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good: for His mercy endureth forever." -(Psalms 136:1). Read the entire (Psalms 136). Each verse in it ends with "for His mercy endureth forever." Help us to praise His wonderful and glorious name. C. H. C.

Selling Chances

We have been asked if we think it right for the sisters to piece a quilt and dispose of it by selling chances; the "lucky number" to get the quilt, some little article to be given to the parties who "take a chance;" this to pay a debt the church may owe. Just as well ask us if we think it is right to gamble, or conduct a lottery, for this is nothing but a lottery. If such a project should be advertised in a newspaper, that paper would be barred from the mails by United States' law, because it contained an advertisement of a lottery. A paper containing an advertisement of any kind of lottery scheme is barred from the United States mails by law. Is it right to gamble? Who, but a perverse renegade, would say there is no harm in gambling, or that it is right to gamble? It is no worse to gamble in a game of poker with cards, or to shoot dice for the money, than to raffle off a quilt, or any other article. If it is done "for the benefit of the church" it is only a cloak to hide behind. If one would gamble "for the church" he would gamble for his own gain. Wrong is wrong, no matter under what name it sails; and gambling is gambling, no matter if it is engaged in for the pretext of paying a church debt, or what not. Such conduct is reprehensible, and so far as we are personally concerned, we "have no time" for any such practice. May the Lord pity the rising generation when they see the professed followers of the humble Master engaging in such immoral and ungodly practice. It brings shame and disgrace on the cause of the Master. C. H. C.

In the four articles we have written on this subject we trust we have given our readers something to think about-or that we have caused some of them to stop and think. It is a matter that deserves to be thought about seriously. But thinking will do very little good unless we act on the matter. We need to do something about it. And the thing we need to do is to quit singing a falsehood. The Arminian world recognizes the fact that many people will be unconsciously brought to believe the sentiment they sing. Realizing this fact, they take advantage of it, and make strenuous efforts to get their books, containing unsound sentiment, into the hands of the people; and they take great pains and put forth much effort to get those books to be used. This calls for strenuous effort on the part of our people to overcome such labor, and to strive to get songs and books containing nothing but sound sentiment to be used in our churches and homes. Here we wish to give you another sample of a song frequently used: "Brethren, we have met to worship." In some of the books in use the second stanza reads as follows: Look, and see poor sinners round you Trembling on the brink of woe; Death is coming; how alarming! Can you bear to let them go? Let us tell them of the Saviour; Tell them that He may be found. Let us pray that holy manna May be scattered all around. Now, look at that! Poor sinners trembling on the brink of woe! Death is coming-Lookout! Warn-'em, good and strong! Will you tell a few graveyard tales to get them frightened, and scare them into making a "profession?" "Can you bear to let them go?" What are you going to do about it? Will you get up a "distracted meeting," get your professional evangelist, bring in some straw and some sawdust, and "take them down the sawdust trail?" Will you set up a "mourner's bench," and get up there, and go into the "old-fashioned" revival business, beat them in the back, and have a hot old time, and "bring them through?" What are you going to do about it? To suit your actions to your singing, when you sing that language, you must "get a move on you." Some of the books do not have all that verse that way. Some of them have it this way: Look, and see poor mourners round you Fearing, trembling, as they go; Longing for a hope in Jesus, Will you comfort them or no? Let us tell them of the Saviour; Tell them that He may be found. Let us pray that holy manna May be scattered all around. The changes here made in the first five lines of this stanza are well and good; but why stop at that? Notice the sixth line: "Tell them that He may be found." As here used the word may can mean nothing more than that it is possible for Him to be found-there is no certainty about it; it depends wholly and solely upon the amount of effort that is put forth by us and the mourners! He MAY be found! How do you like that? Do you want it preached that way?' Is that your faith or belief? Remember that the Master said: "Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted." - (Matthew 5:5). Do you believe what He said? or do you believe that He MAY be found? Why not sing the truth and let us in song "Tell them that He will be found?" Suppose we notice the last stanza, as it reads in some books our people use: Let us love our God supremely; Let us love each other too; Let us love and pray for sinners, That our God their souls renew; Then we'll love them still the better; Take them to our kind embrace, Journey with them on to glory, There to sing redeeming grace. Notice the word renew. You will have God to renew some by your prayers, will you? You will get out, now, will you, and help the Lord to save souls? Why not, seeing you sing it that way? Renew means to make new again; to restore to freshness, perfection, or vigor; to make new spiritually; to regenerate. So, as here used, the word cannot possibly mean anything else than to regenerate, or to make new spiritually. So, you Old Baptists who sing that language, are you going to teach people in your song that you can help the Lord to regenerate sinners by your prayers? Or that you, by your prayers, can and will help sinners to be regenerated? We should, at least, be consistent-either go, "boot and baggage," to the Arminian camps, or else quit singing such rot. We will, the Lord willing, write some more later. C. H. C.

Millennium and 2 Peter 2; 3:18

---August 3, 1939

Dear Brother Cayce: I have a few questions I would like to have your views on briefly.

1. The people I am affiliated with have a lot to say about the premillennial coming of Christ-about the millennial reign.
2. Some of these same people teach that children will be born naturally; also that people will be saved from sin, or born again.
3. Also, (II Peter 2:10-12). When will this take place? at His coming for His church? This is for my benefit, as well as others. Yours in hope, John L. Brennen.
Webster Springs, W. Va.

OUR REMARKS

The writer of the above is not affiliated with the Primitive Baptists. We do not know what people he is affiliated with. On No. 1 we do not understand what he means to ask us. But we will just remark that we do not expect other people than the Primitive Baptists to advocate the truth. They are as liable to advocate one false doctrine as another. As to question 2 will only say that we do not understand how children will be born naturally and in sin during the millennial reign of Christ, as we understand those people to teach who hold that Christ will come back to earth and reign on earth in person for a thousand years. If the earth is renovated, and sin taken out of the world, as we have understood them to teach, then we do not see how any would be born in sin during that thousand years. Neither can we understand how any would or could be saved from sin during that time, for there would then be no sin for them to be saved from. But this whole matter of the millennium, as taught by the world, is nothing but speculation, and is plainly contradicted by plain declarations in Holy Writ. The inspired writers have plainly taught that when Christ comes again it will be to gather His children home in glory, and that their bodies are to be then-right then, not a thousand years later-changed and made spiritual, and that they will then be forever with the Lord. See ((Th 4:13)

(I Thessalonians 4:13-17); (I Corinthians 15:22-26),(51-57). Third. The false teachers described here are in the world now, and have been here all along since the Lord began to send out His true ministers. In the prophetic age the Lord sent out His prophets among His people. Then old Satan began to send his prophets, too. He is a great imitator-just like a monkey; or a monkey is like him. If you have a pet monkey he will try to do everything he sees you do. Old Satan is like that; he saw the Lord send out prophets, and he sent out a lot more. Then when the gospel day was ushered in, and the Lord sent His ministers out, old Satan soon began to send his preachers out, too. And as it was in the prophetic age, when he had so many more prophets than the Lord had, so now he has many more preachers than the Lord has. Satan's ministers "walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government." They have no use for the Lord's government; they despise His kingdom and the subjects of it; they despise the laws the Lord has given to govern in that kingdom. They are "presumptuous, self willed." They presume to do the work Jesus came to do. Their will is contrary to God and His way. "They are not afraid to speak evil of dignities." They are simply natural men; they are like natural brute beasts; they have only one nature, one life, and that is poisoned and contaminated with sin. They speak evil of things they understand not, "and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." They have eyes full of adultery, and cannot cease from sin. They have no life that is above sin. Sin is their element. Nothing can live above its own element. They beguile unstable souls. They deceive every child of God possible who is not thoroughly established in God's doctrine. That is one thing the devil sends them out for, and some of them work at it very industriously. They get big money for it, sometimes. They are exercised with covetous practices; and are cursed children; they are not blessed children. They are wells without water. They never bring that which will satisfy the spiritual thirst of the heaven-born soul. They are clouds all right, but they are carried about with a tempest. They are not rain clouds; they bring no gospel showers. Beware of them. Read the Bible for yourself, and shun those vain deceivers. May the Lord deliver His little ones from their clutches. C. H. C.

A Drunken Feast

---August 3, 1939

If you will read (I Corinthians 11:21) you will see that some of the members of the church at Corinth converted the sacramental supper into a drunken feast-that some of them were drunken. In some places they use grape juice in the sacramental supper. Will some of those who use grape juice please tell us how those people at Corinth could get drunk on grape juice? They were sharply rebuked by the apostle for getting drunk, but he did not reprove them for using wine (the fermented juice) in the sacramental supper. C. H. C.

Romans 11:2-5

---August 17, 1939

God hath not cast away His people which He foreknew. Wot ye not what the Scripture saith of Elias? how he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying, Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life. But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal. Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.-(Romans 11:2-5). We have been asked who the seven thousand men were. This was in the days of Elias, or Elijah, and refers to the time this old prophet had to flee for his life. God's plan was for Israel to care for the prophets He sent unto them; but they sometimes failed to do that, and even persecuted those prophets. They persecuted Elias, and he had to flee for his life. That was when he made the intercession referred to above by the apostle. It appeared to him that he was left alone; that he was the only one left who had not gone after false gods and false ways. But the Lord assured him that he was not alone; that there were others who had not bowed down to idol gods, or to Baal. Of those who had not thus departed the Lord assured him that there were seven thousand men. They were a few in comparison with the whole of Israel. They constituted a remnant-just a small part of the whole number. But that was a sufficient number for the truth to be maintained and for the right worship and service of God to be engaged in. God was not then without witness. Then the apostle said that there was still a remnant in his day. It has been that way in every age of the world-that the truth of God and His true worship and service has been maintained by a few. God has reserved to Himself a remnant in every age of the world to maintain the cause of truth and righteousness. What was done, and what was true, then, is still true. The truth is still maintained by just a few. The Lord will not be left without a witness in the earth. Things may look dark and gloomy, and we may sometimes feel that we are alone in the world, but there is still a remnant reserved. May the Lord help us to be identified with the remnant, and sustain us, who try to follow Him, in every trial. C. H. C.

General Address

---September 7, 1939

From November 14 to 18, 1900, there were gathered and assembled together at Fulton, Ky., a large number of Primitive Baptists from different states of the Union. Fifty-one ministers were present and took part in the meeting. In that meeting a general address was read and approved by a unanimous vote of all present. When the proceedings of that meeting were printed or published this address was in the book, under the above heading. On account of circumstances which exist in some parts of the country, and some things being done in some places, we feel that this address is timely now, and worthy of serious and prayerful consideration by the Primitive Baptists in every section of our country. When that address was put forth thirty-nine (almost) years ago it was evidently the sentiment then of the great body of Baptists. We were at that meeting, and we then fully indorsed the sentiment and principles set forth in that address-and we stand there yet. What do you say, dear reader? Do you stand now where the Baptists stood thirty-nine years ago? Remember that principles are eternal and never change. Following this address, which we copy below in full, are the names of the fifty-one ministers who were in attendance at the meeting, with the post office address of each one at that time. Many of them have crossed over the river, and some left our people and went to another order. Following this address we also copy an article which was written by several ministers and brethren assembled at Oakland City, Ind., on September 27, 1900. This article was unanimously approved by the Fulton meeting in November, same year, and published as an "Appendix." We recommend a careful reading and study of these addresses. If the things set forth therein were good then, they are good now. The Primitive Baptists as a body raised no objection then to the principles set forth therein. We stand now on the same principles as set forth therein. C. H. C.

THE ADDRESS

Pursuant to a call of the Primitive Baptist Church of Fulton, Ky., the elders and messengers of the Church of God known as Primitive Baptists, being convened from various places in the United States of America, in the city of Fulton, Ky., from the fourteenth day of November to the eighteenth day of the same month, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred. To all of like precious faith with us, Greeting. Recognizing with humble gratitude the gracious and divine providence of God in giving us the kingdom and preserving its order and purity through the lapse of many hundred years, fraught with commotions, revolutions, and other vicissitudes of human life, we do feel under profound obligations to thank God and labor faithfully for the prosperity of His holy cause.

1. The Importance of Fellowship cannot be overestimated. It is the sacred cord that binds together the members of this holy community. Since there is no tribunal higher than the local churches to which they may appeal, their safety and perpetuity depends on the preservation of their fellowship.
2. Bars of Fellowship set up by our local churches have been the most destructive influences against the growth and progress of the Church. Traditions of men and human customs being regarded as authority have often given rise to bars of fellowship and resulted in the destruction of the peace of the churches. Such customs and traditions as have no Bible sanction should never interfere with fellowship. It is painful to note on the pages of history how frequently our people have been divided and their happiness destroyed by foolish and sinful declarations of non-fellowship. We do most solemnly and prayerfully beseech all our churches and people that they raise no bars of fellowship against any Primitive Baptist with whom they are agreed on fundamental principles-such as the eternal salvation of sinners, wholly by grace and entirely unconditional on the sinner's part, and who are sound and orderly in the ordinances of the Church, administering baptism by immersion to penitent believers only by ministers of the gospel clothed with authority by the Gospel Church, and administering the Lord's Supper to such baptized believers only, and who manifest a willingness to labor for the peace, union, and fellowship of the whole body. The gospel is God's appointed remedy for the correction of errors in his Church, and it is in every way sufficient to correct errors among the children of God, if lovingly and faithfully employed. When bars of fellowship are raised they exclude the erring from the God-appointed remedy for the correction of their errors and render restoration hopeless. When bars of fellowship are unlawfully raised among our people the bond of union by which our churches are held together is broken and the welfare of the cause exposed to the most uncertain results. If the raisers thereof cannot be induced to remove them at once, the only course for those who want to remain in this holy Church union is to discard their actions and have no connection with them until they withdraw such bars of fellowship.
3. Heresy being so positively forbidden by the Scriptures, we deem it important to have a clear, accurate, and concise understanding of what the word implies. We take heresy to mean a departure from the teachings of the Scripture as explained in our acknowledged Confession of Faith, but not mere differences of opinion upon immaterial points of doctrine and practice upon which the Bible makes no positive statements. The Bible does not state the day nor the hour upon which members shall be received in the Church, nor the Lord's Supper administered, It mentions neither hymnbooks, associations, formal letter correspondence, nor general handshaking. So upon all such matters liberty should be allowed, provided that everything is done in decency and in order, and the books used are sound in sentiment. No doctrine nor practice that violates neither the Scripture nor acknowledged confession should be construed as heresy. The treatment of heresy requires but little comment. The Bible plainly states that a heretic, after the first and second admonition, shall be rejected, {(Titus 3:10)} but let it be fully known that an action or doctrine is heresy before action is taken against it. We deem it unsafe to deal with a man as a heretic unless he avows the heresy. In cases where divisions have been forced in the Church by bars of fellowship or otherwise we do earnestly and prayerfully beg our brethren not to go to law over Church property. We believe it is better to take what would be paid out in cost of suit and expend it in a house than to gain the house by law, and much more in harmony with the teaching of our dear Saviour.

4. The Right of an Individual Church to discipline her members is clearly taught in the Scriptures. From the decision of an orderly church, in matters of discipline, there is no appeal. The church is the only authority to which complaint may be made. Only when a church has refused or neglected to discipline a member or members whose actions are bringing reproach or distress upon the cause in general, or when a church, in the opinion of sister churches, has so far indulged in disorderly practices as to render her incapable of proper self-government, or when she has departed from the faith, has a council of churches any right to consider her case, unless they are specially called on by her to do so. For instruction of churches in such cases as described above we refer them to the London Confession of Faith, Chapter XXVI, Section 15.
5. Restoration of Disorderly Churches is a subject that has given much concern to our people. When churches are guilty of only irregularity in doctrine and practice and are willing to disclaim such irregularities and return to primitive order it is our candid opinion that they should be received into the general fellowship of the denomination without being required to perform the impossible task of counteracting every individual irregularity.
6. That Associations may be made an advantage to the churches none would hardly deny. That they have sometimes been abused and made a disadvantage none will dare deny. Associations are useful in keeping the churches in sympathetic touch with each other. They can be made useful by making them a place of worship, a place to obtain news from the different churches in the community, by laboring to cultivate a spirit of love and fellowship and of Christian forbearance by putting in the time in trying to build up the cause of Christ rather than trying to impose our peculiar notions on others. Associations may be abused and rendered injurious by the opposite of the above.
7. The Care and Encouragement and Duties of the Ministry is a subject of too great magnitude to be passed by lightly. It is very thoroughly, however, in the London Confession of Faith, approved by this convention. We most earnestly request a careful study of the subject in that document (read Confession', Chapter XXVI, Section 10. See also Minutes of Black Rock Convention). It was evidently the belief of our London brethren, supported by the Holy Scriptures, that ministers of the Word should give their entire time, energy, and talent to their ministry, and the brethren should divide with them a sufficient portion of their living to keep them and their families who are not capable of self-support above want. It is a positive fact that our appreciation of any object is increased by the amount of care and labor we bestow upon it. It is natural for a mother to love her babe, but as she cares for it from day to day the intensity of her affection increases. A father and mother may take a child not their own to rear, and at first feel a slight indifference, but nights of watchful solicitude and days of toil and care will render that child so dear that they with difficulty distinguish it from their own children. So a church that cares for her pastor loves him better and appreciates his service more than one that does not. There is a holy relation between pastor and evangelist that should not be ignored. The pastor should welcome the evangelist and his labor and show him due courtesy and consideration. In return the evangelist should remember that it is the pastor's duty and privilege to preside over the church and administer its ordinances. No evangelist should assume to administer any ordinance in the church when the pastor is present unless he is specially requested to do so by the church and pastor. The work of an evangelist is indispensable. Without such work the gospel kingdom would be extended no farther, as it is the chief work of an evangelist to introduce the gospel where it is not known, and to organize churches. There should be no lack of appreciation of either pastor or evangelist, as both are indispensable in the upbuilding and progress of the church and authorized by the Word of God. {See (Ephesians 4:11)} If the claim of Primitive Baptists be true, no one has access to baptism, the elements in the Lord's Supper, or any other gospel privilege, where there is no Primitive Baptist Church, or ministry. In view of the vast territory in our own country that is absolutely ignorant of Primitive Baptist doctrine, and therefore totally destitute of church privileges, and as the redeemed of the Lord are among every nation, kindred, tongue, and people under heaven {(Revelation 5:9)} we behold the great necessity of stirring our people up on this subject. This clearly demonstrates that we claim too much or do too little. We earnestly solicit our people to encourage the work of an evangelist. Not to spend his time in visiting large and well-organized churches, but to labor with the feeble and destitute churches and in places where there is no church. The churches should lovingly, freely, and faithfully contribute of their carnal means as God has blessed them to the support of brethren engaged in this needful work. We would not be understood to regard that there are degrees in the ministry, but different lines of work in the same office. It is the special duty of the deacons to superintend the financial interest of the church. They should have control of the church treasury and expend it in serving tables. First, the table of the Lord. Secondly, the table of the poor. Thirdly, the table of elders that labor for them. They should receive the donations from the brethren and keep a correct account of same and report to the church, that it may know who are bearing the burdens of the church. The object of the deacons is to equalize the burdens of the churches. (See Practical Suggestions to Primitive Baptists, by Elder Cash.)

8. The Confession of Faith, adopted over two hundred years ago by thirty-seven of the ablest ministers of England and Wales, representing over one hundred churches, has served one of the most needful services among our people of any document of faith since the days of the apostles, and has stood unquestioned as an expression of the Primitive Baptists' interpretation of the Bible from then till now. At the present assembly of fifty-one ministers, representing three hundred and thirty-five churches, aggregating fourteen thousand five hundred members in direct correspondence with over one hundred thousand Baptists, the Confession has been carefully read and approved. Language through the lapse of many years undergoes variations in applications and meanings, whereby certain clauses become more or less obscure in meaning. Wherever, in the opinion of this assembly, the meaning of a section was not apparent footnotes were added to bring out the meaning. The office of this Confession of Faith is not to be regarded as a standard of faith and practice, but as an expression of our interpretation of the Holy Scriptures, which is the only rule of faith and practice.

We recommend the Confession with the notes to the careful perusal of all Primitive Baptists, and insist that they make themselves familiar with its teaching. Believing that such a course would obviate many of the difficulties that have so sadly distressed our beloved Zion in the few years passed, we would be glad to see this document, that has stood the test as an expression of our faith for more than two hundred years, become uniformly used in our local churches as their expression of faith and practice. Praying God's blessings on His holy cause everywhere and that general prosperity may soon follow, we are your obedient servants and ministers of the gospel in the fear and love of God. John M. APPENDIX We, the undersigned elders and brethren, pursuant to a request made by brethren of Patoka Association of Primitive Baptists, now convened at Oakland City Church, in Oakland City, Ind., on the 27th day of September, 1900, to our brethren of like precious faith everywhere: We sincerely regret the division and strife that have been among us, and earnestly desire that we may be led to see alike, and to unite in our understanding of truth as taught in God's Word. We represent in this meeting about one hundred congregations in Indiana and Illinois. We recommend the London Confession of Faith as an expression of Bible truth. The articles of faith of our churches are substantially inharmony with the doctrine and practice set forth in that instrument, and we do heartily recommend the London Confession to the household of faith everywhere. Inasmuch as there is some difference of opinion concerning the teaching of some of the articles in the London Confession of Faith, we will submit the following in the way of explaining our understanding of their teaching:

We do not believe that God has unconditionally, unlimitedly, and equally predestinated righteousness and unrighteousness. It is our belief that God has positively and effectually predestinated the eternal salvation of His people which were chosen in Christ before time. God's purpose concerning sin does not sustain the same relation to sin that it does to holiness. While we think that God's purpose concerning sin is more than barely permissive, it is such as to exclude all chance and uncertainty, yet we hold that God is in no sense the cause of sin. We do not believe that God requires or forbids anything in His law, and then by a power irresistible moves His creatures to act contrary to His commands. In Chapter III, Section 1, of London Confession, we read: "God hath decreed in Himself from all eternity, by the most wise and holy counsel of His own will, freely and unchangeably, all things whatsoever come to pass; yet so as thereby neither is God the author of sin, nor hath fellowship with any therein, nor is violence offered to the will of the creature, nor yet is the liberty or contingency of second causes taken away," etc. In this they deny that God's attitude to sin is causative, and in the body of this Confession we insist that they maintain that God's attitude to holiness is causative. So they clearly distinguish between God's efficacious decree of holiness and His purpose concerning sin. Section 2: "Although God knoweth whatever may or can come to pass upon all supposed conditions, yet hath He not decreed anything because He foresaw it as future, or as that which would come to pass upon such conditions." Here they distinguish between the knowledge of God as an attribute of God and the decree of God as an act of God, which we believe to be Scriptural. For God to foresee that man will yield to influences of a secondary nature does not imply that God moves man to sin, but only that He is the Permitter of sin. Webster defines "permit," "to suffer, without giving authority." We use it in the sense of "not hinder." Section 3 they say: "Others being left to act in their sins to their just condemnation, to the praise of His glorious justice." If they had believed that God moves men to sin, they would not have said, "being left to act in their sins," etc. We insist that we should not use language implying that God's attitude to sin is the same as His attitude to holiness, for this tends to destroy the distinction between right and wrong. The expression, "unlimited predestination of all things," seems to convey the idea that God's purpose concerning sin is as unlimited and as unrestricted as it is concerning holiness; and if so, then God's decree concerning sin would be causative, since it is causative concerning holiness, and this view would destroy all distinction between right and wrong. Chapter XVI, Section 2: "These good works, done in obedience to God's commandments, are the fruits and evidences of a true and lively faith; and by them believers manifest their thankfulness, strengthen their assurance, edify their brethren, adorn the profession of the gospel, stop the mouths of the adversaries, and glorify God," etc. Section 3: "Their ability to do good works is not at all of themselves, but wholly from the Spirit of Christ; and that they may be enabled thereto, besides the graces they have already received, there is necessary an actual influence of the same Holy Spirit to work in them to will and to do of His good pleasure; yet are they not hereupon to grow negligent, as if they were not bound to perform any duty unless upon a special motion of the Spirit," etc. They do neglect, not being forced in duty irresistibly. We believe the Scriptures teach that there is a time salvation received by the heirs of God distinct from eternal salvation, which does depend upon their obedience. The people of God receive their rewards for obedience in this life only. We believe that the ability of the Christian is the unconditional gift of God. Besides the efficacious grace of God in the heart in regeneration, we need the company of God's Holy Spirit to comfort, lead, and bless us, which He has promised to give to every one that will ask Him. {(Luke 11:13)} The act of God necessary to our regeneration must in some sense be distinguished from His act necessary to our obedience. We are never commanded to be born again, but in hundreds of places we are called on to obey. We are passive in regeneration, but in obedience we are active. Regeneration is neither a vice nor a virtue; obedience is a virtue and disobedience is a vice. Regeneration is wholly independent of the will. There could be no such a thing as obedience or disobedience independent of the will. Men do not neglect to be born again, but they do neglect their duty. In Section 5, Chapter XVI, we read: "We cannot by our best of works merit pardon of sin, or eternal life, at the hand of God," etc. They did not place obedience in the place of Christ, or His atonement, and so we believe it would be exceeding sinful to mention good works as essential to these ends, yet we believe there is an important use for good works aside from these ends. In Section 2, same chapter, they say of good works: "By them believers manifest their thankfulness, strengthen their assurance, edify their brethren, adorn the profession of the gospel, stop the mouths of the adversaries," etc. We think these uses of good works Scriptural. We hold that God's government of His people is moral. We hold, too, that conditionality is an essential element of moral government. We distinguish between God's government of mind and His government of matter. Section 5, Chapter III: "God hath chosen in Christ unto everlasting glory, out of His mere free grace and love, without any other thing in the creature as condition or cause moving Him thereto." Although the two-seed doctrine was not thought of at the time this Confession was written, yet this article clearly condemns the two-seed doctrine in all its phases. Chapter XXXI, Section 1: "The souls of the wicked are cast into hell, where they remain in torment and utter darkness, reserved to the judgment of the great day. Besides these two places heaven and hell for souls separated from their bodies the Scripture acknowledgeth none." Christ will resurrect the wicked by His power, exerted in His office as King through a proceeding of law, and not under the new covenant, as the righteous will be, each to their endless reward. There is a sentiment prevailing in some parts of our beloved Zion that the wicked will be annihilated at death, and we call attention to the sentiment in this quotation on that subject. The annihilation theory is an innovation, and contrary to every Confession of Faith, and also contrary to the Scriptures. In Chapters III, IV, and IX, the London Confession mentions the freedom of the will. We do not understand them to mean that the will is free in the sense that it is self-determining, as the Arminians hold; nor that man is capable of choosing things of which he has no knowledge, nor things above and beyond his nature; we do not understand the Confession to mean that men dead in sin are, while in that state, capable of choosing holiness, but we understand it to mean that men are capable of choosing things in harmony with their nature-things most agreeable to them. They are and must be capable of voluntary action in order to their being accountable. Liberty of will in this sense is essential to moral government, as we believe. Men before regeneration are capable of choosing things agreeable to them, as they are afterwards. In conclusion, we love the doctrine of grace, and we believe that any view of predestination, or of the will, that will tend in any degree to apologize for sin will also tend to minimize the doctrine of grace. Paul says: "To the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the beloved." Paul so preached as to make grace glitter and shine as a star of the first magnitude. He puts word upon word to lift up our ideas of God's grace, so we feel it important to oppose any view of the decrees of God that will in the least excuse any sin in man, or point out mitigating circumstances for sin, because just in proportion as we excuse or apologize for sin we also belittle the doctrine of grace; so we oppose the two-seed doctrine because it seeks to find some quality in man that stands as the cause of his election to glory, while Paul speaks of God's people, "were children of wrath even as others." We were no better in our nature or conduct than others, and this is the lesson of our experience. When low bowed before the Lord in the darkest hour of our lives, we confessed, and we knew there was nothing in us that could merit esteem, or give the Creator delight. So we oppose every feature of Arminianism as opposed to the doctrine of grace. We feel bound to contend for those principles that most exalt the doctrine of grace, and we feel sure that if we stay with those lessons that we learned in our first experience, we will expose everything that tends to minimize the doctrine of grace. Matthew 1:1 AND 1 Peter 2:9

A brother has asked us to give our views on (Matthew 1:1) and ((Pet 2:9) (I Peter 2:9), The two citations read as follows: The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham.-(Matthew 1:1). But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvellous light. -((Pet 2:9) (I Peter 2:9). The brother wishes to know if the two places refer to the same generation, and asks when those were chosen, as mentioned in the last quotation. In (Matthew 1:1) the writer is giving the line of ancestry of Jesus, the Son of Mary, our Saviour, showing the line of descent from Abraham to Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom Jesus was born. This is the matter recorded here. You will find practically the same thing in the third chapter of Luke. In the other citation the apostle is referring to the Lord's children as a generation, and calls them a chosen generation. The people this apostle was writing to were not natural Jews. He was addressing "the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappa-docia, Asia, and Bithynia;" and he calls them the "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father." As they were elect, they were chosen of God-that is, God had chosen them, and as such they were "a chosen generation." They were "a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people." They were different from the world-made so by the work of the Lord. As to when they were chosen, we may see from (Ephesians 1:3-4) "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love." The choice was made before the ages of time began, before they had existence. "Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, when as yet there was none of them." - Psalm cxxxix. 16. The chosen generation were His members. That is, the whole complete body of Christ; the redeemed family is His body. They were written in God's book before any of them existed-" when as yet there were was none of them." The choice, then, was before time-before they had existence. The Father made choice of them, and predestinated that they should be conformed to the image of His Son. They will be finally glorified. Likes The Good Old Songs

---September 21, 1939

Dear Brother in Christ: I like your Good Old Songs very much, if you only had different music written for them. It seems like they are awful hard for the people to sing them. We like the words and the sentiment of the songs. I am with you when it comes to singing. I believe singing the truth is as necessary as preaching the truth. May God give you wisdom and strength to go right ahead in what you are doing. Your unworthy brother, I hope, saved by grace, if saved at all, Oscar Wallace. 8034 Sarena, Detroit, Mich.

REMARKS

We appreciate your kind expressions of approval and indorsement. The music to the songs in the Good Old Songs were the tunes written, usually, originally for those songs. They were all taken from old-time books, just as they were written in those books. We agree that the tunes are some harder to learn than the tunes written according to modern music. Things that are worth little are easy to learn. Things that are worth while are harder to learn than things worth less. The best things are harder to accomplish than other things are. To us, modern music only entertains and excites natural emotion; the old music stirs the soul, and excites solemn praise and adoration to God. They are deep in spiritual expression. The worship of God should be a x solemn thing. The church is a city of solemnities. Deep spiritual and solemn music is, therefore, better suited to the worship of God.) Light fantastic music is suitable for some things, perhaps, but we do not think it so suitable for the worship of God. We have heard some of this light fantastic music sung at times and places that absolutely disgusted us, and made us really wish we were somewhere else. Study the music in that book, and learn it, and sing it, and then you will be glad that you did. May the Lord bless you in your labors. Pray for us. C. H. C.

God's Way – The Right Way

---October 19, 1939

Note.-The following article was written as a comment on an article by Elder H. L. Golston, Brush Creek, Tenn., in which he was commending some deacons who called on a minister's family where there was sickness. They reported to the church some of their needs when the church met in conference. Elder Golston commended them for what they did. Our comments were as follows: The foregoing was good as far as it went. The deacons did the right thing in seeing after the needs in the case. But suppose there had been no church meeting the next night, or for a week or two. Then what? The Bible way is to lay by in store, as God has prospered us. The funds should be laid by, and put in the hands of the deacons. Then when the need arises they have the funds ready. That is God's way. If the church cannot risk the deacons to dispense the funds to those in need they should remove them from the office. God's way is the right way, and the best way. One in need might suffer much before time for the church to meet. C. H. C.

Preaching and Singing Article Number 6

We have received many letters of indorsement of our articles which we have written upon this subject, as well as some letters of criticism. We did not expect it to be otherwise. Of course we could not well expect an indorsement of our writing on the question from many who think it will do to sing just "any old thing," no matter what the sentiment may be. But that does not deter us from calling attention to such matters, and warning our people and our readers of the danger there is in such things. Some have seemingly accused us of a wrong motive in the matter. Well, they did that in regard to the prophets and apostles of old. As sure as one endeavors to get the people to cease practicing a wrong, or to correct an error, somebody will accuse him of selfish and wrong motives, or of being a "grouch." If one is faithful to his trust, will he cease from giving such warning, because of such accusations? We all know that he will not. He will bear all such as that, and continue to issue the warnings. We do not expect to sell all the song books our people use, nor do we expect to print and publish all the papers our people read; but, whether we do that or not, we do desire our people to put out literature and songs without unsound sentiment, and desire that our people use nothing but sound sentiment. We should be consistent. It seems that somebody in England has been disturbed a little in regard to this matter of singing, as well as here in the United States. We exchange with the Zion's Witness, published in England. We copy the following extract from the "Annual Address" of the editor of that magazine, as published in that paper of October, 1939: Many a man of God is sent to feed one solitary saint, be the congregation five hundred or a mere handful. The poor minister likes a nice congregation; yes, flesh is flesh, whether in a vessel of mercy or a vessel of wrath. But the Lord has better employment for His servants than trying to keep a people together who merely meet for old association's sake, or because wedded to a building, a pew, a denomination, or to worship the musical god. And how the devotees of the latter have increased since the appearance of the-----Tune Book! From its first inception we felt it would prove more of a curse than a blessing, introducing, as it does, a spirit antagonistic to that of true worship-the very spirit of the congregations of the dead. A real blight we consider many modern tunes to real devotion. The spirit that prompted the worthies of Gower Street to rise up in arms against the introduction of even-----into their service many years ago was a right one. What would they say now about the-----tunes almost universally sung throughout the denomination, not to mention Worse evils. We doubt whether they would own the sect at all. And if fashionable in the tunes, we must be up-to-date * * * * Besides, "quick's the word" in the world today, and we must move a little with the times * * * Thus they wrap it up. Oh, the emptiness of it all! the death! Probably a neurotic female presides at the organ, * * * whilst the slow solemn voice of the aged saint is silenced * * * and, alas! parson, deacon, member dare not, or will not object. Ah, "the Lord is a God of judgment, and by Him actions are weighed." How true is so much of the sentiment expressed in the above extract. It is a fact that the modern, light, quick, frivolous music of these latter times utterly destroys the spiritual emotions, and only animates the natural, baser, sentiment and instincts. The music sung in our assemblies in these days, where they have adopted so much of the modern sort, is not as sweet and soul-comforting and uplifting as it was in our youthful days. May the Lord help us to return to the old soul-enlivening and soul-cheering tunes that were so sweet to our ancestors, and to be careful to promulgate the truth in song as well as in preaching. May the Lord help us to "save yourselves from this untoward generation." C. H. C.

Special Meeting

---November 2, 1939

On January 4, 1890, in the home of a Sister Morris, Elder Cayce made his first attempt to speak in the name of his Master. This coming January 4 will mark the fiftieth year that he has labored in the Lord's vineyard-worked in that vineyard in the South, North, East and West; worked hard serving churches, debating and preaching, and with his pen. For some reason, I trust not from a proud or selfish viewpoint, I have desired to have services at our church, here in Thornton, on January 4, 1940; and that Elder Cayce preach the opening sermon. The first Sunday and Saturday before in each month is our regular monthly meeting. I told the church my desire. They, by motion and second, agreed to have services Thursday, January 4, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. We desire our kindred in the Lord to be with us. We want you to come. Come, praying the dear Lord to be in our midst, to own and bless. Pray-pray the Lord to send more laborers in His vineyard, for truly the harvest is white. We would like to have representatives from each church Elder Cayce has served during these fifty years,' as well as Baptists from all parts of the country. He loves the cause of his Master. His greatest delight is in serving his Lord, and his brethren. He delights in having his brethren and friends with him in the house of the Lord. January is a winter month, and, sometimes, 'tis harder to care for a crowd comfortably at this time of the year than at other times. We are asking that, as soon as you can, write me and tell me you are coming; and, if you intend to come by private conveyance, tell me how many will be in your crowd. This will enable us to know how many to prepare for. This invitation is to all Primitive Baptists and friends. We are sincere when we say, we want you to come. Yes, come; and may the sentiment expressed by the poet be the prayer of each: 'Tis my desire with God to walk, And with His children pray and talk; Altho' I persecuted be, Yet Jesus suffered so for me. 'Tis my deire, around the board To meet thy saints, my dearest Lord; In union with thy saints to be, And oft commune with them and Thee. I will tell you more about our plans in the next issue of the paper. Yours in hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Universalism, Rutherfordism, Goats, Esau

---November 16, 1939

About a year ago we received a request from a brother for us to write a lengthy editorial refuting Universalism, Rutherfordism, and that the goats are the disobedient children of God, and that Esau represented the flesh. We do not have the time or space to write a lengthy article on these matters. In our issue of August 15, 1935, we had an article on the subject of the sheep and the goats. What we wrote on that subject in that article were simple facts then, and they are plain and simple facts yet. It is not necessary to go over those matters again here. That article will be in Volume VI of our Editorial Writings, which has been begun, but will not be ready to send out for quite awhile yet. We had to lay that work aside for a time, as we are busy now printing minutes, and we let them come first after the paper. In Volume II, page 262, is an article on General Judgment and Eternal Hell, and in Volume IV, page 153, is an article on the subject of Eternal Punishment. In those articles we gave some plain and simple facts, some of which the child of grace is taught in his experience. Universalism and Russellism (Rutherfordism) both deny that there is any such thing as eternal punishment. This doctrine has always been embraced in the Confessions of Faith of Baptists. If it is not the truth, the Baptists have always been heretics. If it is the truth, then those who deny it are heretics. A heretic should be admonished twice, and then if he will not cease and desist, he should be excluded promptly. If you fail or refuse to do that, then you are a rebel- rebelling against the laws of the King of Zion. Heresy is like a canker (cancer); it will eat. The only remedy is to cut it out, or put a plaster on it that will kill it and take it out. To let it run on, it will destroy and kill. Better attend to it quickly, as the imperative law of the King commands and requires. If Universalism is the truth, then the doctrine of election is not the truth. Election means that some are chosen out of and from among others. If all the race are saved, then there was and is no election, no choice. No use to cite Scriptures here to prove the doctrine of election. The man who advocates Universalism denies the doctrine of election, and is a heretic. He should be excluded for heresy and for denying the faith. If Esau represents the flesh, then God hates the flesh of His children. Jacob had flesh, as well as Esau; but God loved Jacob. On this question read the article on page 482 of Editorial Writings, Volume IV Paul tells us plainly in Romans ix. that this was election-not flesh and spirit. To deny this is to deny the Bible. It seems to us that in some places the church is becoming entirely too loose in her discipline regarding the doctrine the church has always stood for. The devil is evidently working on the inside for the destruction of the church of God and God's doctrine. But there will be a few faithful ones, who will stand for the truth, in every age of the world. But if you want the church to stand in your community, and do not want the candlestick removed, you had better be awake to the situation, and administer the laws the King has given you. "Awake, thou that sleepest." C. H. C.

A Short Trip

---November 16, 1939

We left home Thursday night before the fourth Sunday in September for Tupelo, Miss., where we attended the Tombigbee Association Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. To us it was a wonderful meeting. The preaching was all in the spirit of the Master. Then on the following days, including Thursday, we filled some appointments in the bounds of the New Hope Association, and then on Thursday night in Jackson, Tenn. Friday morning we went with Elder W. A. Bishop to the Mississippi River Association, which met with Mt. Moriah Church, near Friendship, Tenn. The congregation was small on Friday and Saturday, on account of rain. But it was a fine meeting. The following week we filled appointments at West Plains, New Hope, Rutherford, and Union City Churches. Friday morning we went from there to Paducah, with Brother A. E. Luten, to attend the meeting of the Soldier Creek Association, held there. This was a wonderful meeting, yet some sadness on account of the fact that Brother C. K. Hopper was confined upon his bed in affliction. He had counted so much on being in the meeting. The last word we had from him a few days ago he was improving. We trust he may soon be restored to his usual health. May the Lord bless him and his loved ones, is our prayer. From the Soldier Creek we filled appointments at Middle Fork, Puryear, and Harmony. Then to the Greenfield Association, held with Bethel Church, near Fulton, Ky. This was another good meeting. From there we came home, filling an appointment in Memphis Sunday night, arriving home about 2 o'clock Monday morning, finding all as well as usual-the family meeting us at the train. We were glad to see them once again. The meetings were all good and pleasant. Fellowship and love abounds among the brethren in that country. May the Lord help them to continue in peace and love. Let us live right, and the Lord's blessings will follow. We were glad to visit that section once more before we go hence. They were all good and kind to us. We shall not forget your kindness, though we feel unworthy. C. H. C.

Great Body Not Gone

---November 16, 1939

We do not think the great body of Baptists have ever gone astray at once. True, there have been irregularities, and some have departed from the faith; but still "What is Baptist is Scriptural." Troubles have been brought into the church by some failing to follow Christ, and some of us followed the preacher instead of following Christ. But at no time did the great body of Baptists follow the preacher, or preachers, who went wrong. If we follow what is, and has been, recognized as Baptist doctrine and practice all along the line, we think we will be following the Master and His teaching. May the Lord help us all thus to do. Pray the Lord for us, that He will help us to walk in that "good old way" the Lord has directed. C. H. C.

Preaching and Singing Article Number 7

We feel like we should call attention to a few more words in some of our songs which convey a wrong idea, sentiment that is altogether wrong and untrue. Take a serious look at these lines: In fellowship of joys and woes, We'll bear the common strife, And onward press thro' all our foes, And win eternal life. Do we win eternal life by our own efforts? or by pressing onward through all our foes? That is not the way we read our Book. We read in our Book language like this: "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." - (Romans 6:23). We are aware of the fact that the apostle said, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." -(Galatians 6:7-8). It is most certainly true that one reaps in and from the same field where the sowing is done. It is also true that one reaps the same thing that he sows. What he sows is multiplied, and he reaps what he sows. This being true, if one reaps everlasting life by sowing to the Spirit, he must have had everlasting life before the sowing was done. That is what one sows, if he sows to the Spirit; and then he reaps what he has sown. Then, it cannot possibly be true that one has to do the sowing in order to procure, or to obtain, or to win, everlasting life. Study this text. Here is another line we wish to call attention to: My nature is so prone to sin, Which makes my duty so unclean, That when I count up all the cost, If not free grace then I am lost. Our duty is what the Lord has required of us. Does the Lord require something unclean? Certainly not. What the Lord requires-what is our duty to do-is clean. But sin is mixed with all we do. Hence, it is our doing that is unclean. Put the word doing in the second line, instead of the word duty, and then you will sing the truth. Here is another instance: Lord, submissive make us go, Gladly leaving all below; Only Thou our leader be, And we still will follow Thee. If the Lord makes us go in the path of duty, in following Him, then we are not going submissively. If we are made to do a thing, it is done against our will, or our will has but little part to play in the matter. We are made to be children of God, and our will has nothing to do with it. But God requires a willing service. "If any man will come after me," etc. "If his offering be a burnt sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the Lord." -(Leviticus 1:3). God works in His children to will-not the will, as we have sometimes heard it said; but He works in them to will. God gives them the divine life, and the will springs from the life, and they will to follow Him. Hence, if they render acceptable service, it is a willing service. They serve God because they love His service, and then it is acceptable to Him. Then, let us sing it this way: Lord, submissive we would go, Gladly leaving all below; Only Thou our leader be; And we still will follow Thee. One more we wish to mention in this article, and that is the song titled, "Death Is Only a Dream." There are four stanzas in the song, and they end this way: "And yet 'tis no more than a dream;" "For death is no more than a dream;" "They find it no more than a dream;" "To wake with glad smiles from their dream." If the title of that song, and the last line in each stanza be true, then death is not a reality. A dream is "a series of thoughts, images, or emotions occurring during sleep; any seeming of reality or events occurring to one sleeping," etc. A dream is a seeming reality. If "Death Is Only a Dream," it is only a seeming of reality, and is not a reality. But, according to God's blessed Book, death is an awful reality. Death in sin is a reality. Physical death is a reality. Our loved ones who have gone down into the dark valley went down into an awful reality. Jesus died for our sins. {(I Corinthians 15:3)} If that song and the title of it be true, Jesus only dreamed; it was only a seeming reality! The whole thing is a myth! Nothing but a dream- just an imaginary thing! Lord, help us all to think; help us to study and to consider the teaching of thy Book, and help us to consider what we are setting forth in our songs as well as in our preaching. Lord, help us to "contend earnestly for the faith that was once delivered to the saints." Let us be found "speaking the truth in love" in song as well as in preaching. We may write some more later on. C. H. C.

Holiday Greetings

---December 21, 1939

The holidays will soon be here, and we wish every reader may have a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." May the coming holidays bring joy and gladness to every heart. May the New Year bring renewed hope and courage to you, to last all the whole year through. May many joys be yours, with little sadness and sorrow. We would say no sadness or sorrow; really that is what we wish for you; but we know some sadness comes to each person along life's pathway. We would be glad to send a Christmas card to each one; but we cannot do that, as the cost would be too much for so many; but we can try to express our good wishes for you this way; and we desire this to be a personal message to each reader. May the Lord's richest blessings be yours to enjoy, is our sincere prayer and wish for you. Just here we would suggest a year's subscription to The Primitive Baptist for some poor widow, or to your pastor, or to some afflicted saint, would be a very acceptable and appropriate gift. So, also, would a Bible, or a Testament, or one or more volumes of Editorial Writings. No better gift could be made. Either of these would bring help, and comfort, and joy, and satisfaction to the recipient. If you wish to do something for some person that will be of real help or benefit, consider this suggestion. And may the Lord help us to scatter flowers in the pathway of His children. C. H. C.

Moved To Thornton

---December 21, 1939

Brother M. B. Claggett and daughter, Sister Grace Claggett, have moved to Thornton from Newark, Ohio. Sister Grace will work in our office, and will help the editor and wife with our work. Many things have needed to be done which we have had to allow to go undone because there was more to do than we could possibly get done. We trust that Sister Claggett will be a great help to us in our work in the office, both to the editor and the wife; and we trust that she will also be pleased with her position with us, and will not have cause to regret making the change, and that neither she nor her father will ever have cause to regret moving into our midst. We ask our readers to pray the Lord to bless all our labors to the good of the cause of the Master. C. H. C.

Desire Expressed

---December 21, 1939

This is the last paper to go out in 1939. I wish for each reader the very best of the season's Greetings. In bidding adieu to 1939, and thinking of a few of my many blessings, I feel that my desire and aim for 1940 is: to be more devoted and more loyal, first, to my heavenly Father, then to my family, brethren, sisters and friends. Then, almost instantly, the question arose,

How can one be devoted and loyal to God? Is not some of the ways "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together;" and "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me?" If we are not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together, would we not receive blessings from Him when we assemble in the house of God, to honor and praise His great and holy name? I feel now, and have felt all along, that the dear Lord will meet with us at our church here on January 4, 1940, and that each one present will receive His blessings. The Primitive Baptist, dated January 4, 1940, will be mailed a week late. We wanted to give an account of our meeting in that issue of the paper. In order to do this, the paper will be late. We feel to know that the paper carries a message of cheer, comfort and instruction to many of the Lord's children; yea, to many who are shut-ins on account of afflictions, as well as to those who are well, physically. Then, this being true, is not the paper a help to the Lord's people? Please continue to beg the dear Lord to be "merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause His face to shine upon us." And "O let the nations be glad and sing for joy." "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us." In hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Will You?

---December 21, 1939

Recently a friend, a wellwisher, of the Primitive Baptists and of The Primitive Baptist paper, while passing through our town, stopped at our office for a few minutes. His conversation, in short, was: "Congratulations, Elder Cayce. The Lord willing, I aim to be at your January meeting. Here is a dollar and a half for the paper to be sent to * * *, a new subscriber. Tell your members that I am not a member of any church, but I want to head the list for each present subscriber to send one new subscription in, and thereby, in a small way, show our appreciation for the long, useful life you have spent and devoted to the cause of the Master." We appreciate our friend's visit, and appreciate his interest in the paper. Do you approve of his suggestion? Will you do as he did-each present subscriber send one new subscription? Will you? Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Close of Volume 54

---December 21, 1939

We are nearing the end of another year. The closing record of another year's work is now being made. Another volume of The Primitive Baptist is being completed with this issue.. As the obligation to write an article for the close of this volume is presented to us, the feeling comes over us that perhaps our writing along this line has become stale to our readers. While wondering in mind as to what we shall write for the close of volume fifty-four, and that perhaps we have written along the same line each year, for several years past, and that perhaps our expressions have become stale, we thought of the language of the poet (Good Old Songs, No. 365): Since man by sin has gone from God, He seeks creation through, And vainly hopes for solid bliss, In trying something new. Suppose we should find "something new" to write about, would it be worth anything to the readers, or to us? "For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing." -Acts xvii. 21. These people were worshipers of idols-were idolatrous worshipers. They were always seeking after some new thing. But the poet continues: The new possessed, like fading flowers, Soon loses its gay hue, The bubble now no longer stays, The soul wants something new. So, if we should find something new to tell our readers, the new thing would soon disappear like a bubble. The same old principles of truth are as good now as they ever were. May we not, then, well apply the fifth stanza to the present situation:

The joy the dear Redeemer gives, Will bear a strict review; Nor need we ever change again, For Christ is always new. History repeats itself. Every year brings its joys and sorrows. There are days and nights in every year, and they average up about the same length. Sometimes the nights are longer than the days; and then the days are longer than the nights; but they follow each other in succession. Some nights are darker than others. Some days are brighter than others. We do not see the sun every day. Sometimes the clouds hide the sun from our view. But the sun is shining behind the clouds, even if we cannot see it at the time. There are some cloudy days, as well as sunshiny days. Without the clouds we would have no rain; and without the rain, the earth would not be watered; the vegetation would wither and perish. After a few cloudy and dismal days we can appreciate the sunshine, and enjoy the sun's pleasant rays. When the sun sets clear we look forward in anticipation of another bright and pleasant day. While we have had some dark days during the past year, we feel that the sun is setting clear in the close of this, another day, and we are hoping that it will rise bright and clear and beautiful in the morning of the year 1940. We bid you a kind farewell, hoping to greet you again in the New Year, the next issue to be dated January 4, 1940. Please bear in mind, however, that the next paper will be sent out a few days late, for the reason given by our dear companion. Pray for us. C. H. C.

Editorial Writings From The Primitive Baptist

By Elder C. H. Cayce Volume VII 1977

CAYCE PUBLISHING COMPANY THORNTON, ARKANSAS

TO

My Beloved Wife who has untiringly labored with me and for me during these many years, and TO My Dear Children who are so attentive to their poor old father, and TO My Sainted Father and Mother who cared for me when I could not care for myself, and TO My Dear Brethren and Sisters who have been so kind and good to poor me all these years is this and all previous volumes Lovingly Dedicated

PREFACE

We have received many words of endorsement of the previous volumes of our Editorial Writings. We have also had some words of criticism. Every reader has not indorsed everything that each volume contained. We could hardly expect that they should. But we are trying to faithfully reproduce what we said in our editorial writings in The Primitive Baptist during the years since we began the work of trying to edit the paper. Our dear companion insisted for several years that we undertake this work, before we could "muster up the courage" to undertake it. Her opinion was that it would be of benefit to the cause of the Master. This volume, with the previous volumes, will show that our people - the Primitive Baptists - are still standing where they have always stood. They will also show, conclusively, that we have occupied the same ground during all our public life. Some things herein will be of value, from a historical standpoint, in the years to come. If we know our poor heart our desire in the publication of these volumes is the glory of God and the advancement of His blessed cause, and the benefit of His humble poor. The price we have been selling the books for is clear proof of the fact that the making of money is not the object in view. We desire that the Lord's dear children who are blinded by false teachers may be enabled, by the reading of some of these pages, to see where the true church is, and where the truth may be found. May the blessings of our Lord rest upon the reader, is the humble prayer of The Author.

Introduction to Volume 55

---January 4, 1940

Here we come again, with the same old stale expression, "With this issue we begin another volume of The Primitive Baptist." This issue is the beginning of Volume Fifty-five. Many papers have been started and many have passed out of existence since our father sent out the first issue of The Primitive Baptist; but by the help of the Lord this periodical has continued on through all these years, standing upon the same platform and the same principles upon which it stood from the first. The Abstract of Principles, which appear on another page, which have been in most every issue of the paper from the beginning, were in the first issue, January 1, 1886. The eleventh article was added by our father on January 29, 1900, now forty years ago. That position, as expressed in the eleventh article, was not a new thing, or a new doctrine; but had been held to all along the line. It was a known principle held to by Primitive Baptists all along the line. A few years ago we wrote in an introductory to one of the volumes calling attention to the second article in our Abstract of Principles, calling attention to the fact that this article underlies all the others. Let us quote that second article again here from the Abstract of Principles: That the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are a revelation from God, written by inspiration, and that they are the standard of faith, and the only rule divinely authorized for Christian practice, teaching, as they do, all that we ought to believe, know, or practice religiously. This is a well known principle held to by the Primitive Baptists all along the line. If we should contend that we may teach or practice something which the Bible does not teach, we would thereby depart from this fundamental Primitive Baptist teaching and belief. We propose, by the help of the Lord, to continue to stand by and upon that principle during the coming year in the columns of the paper, and so we promise to endeavor to stand upon the same principles we have been contending for during the past. May the Lord help us so to do. If you endorse these principles, will you show it, and help us, by doing what you can to get others to subscribe for The Primitive Baptist? May the Lord bless you, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Double Size

---January 4, 1940

This issue of The Primitive Baptist is twice the regular size. We usually have sixteen pages in an issue, but this issue has thirty-two pages. This was necessary in order to get the full account of our meeting on the same date of this paper, which our companion desired should be in this issue. Our regular readers are aware of the fact that usually the pages of the paper are trimmed at the top and sides. This is not the case with this issue, as our folding machine will not trim a paper of thirty-two pages. Our readers will have to cut the pages apart at the top or sides, or where they need to be cut apart. Of course, we could have done this, perhaps, on another machine, but the time would have delayed still further the sending of the paper to the readers. Besides, the expense would have been most too much. Please do your own trimming, either with a knife or scissors. The reading will be just the same as if we had trimmed the pages for you, and will be but little trouble to you. We trust that you will enjoy the contents of this issue, and that if you are not already a subscriber, you will send in your subscription right away, and try the paper for a year. May the Lord bless each reader, is our prayer. And please pray the Lord in behalf of the editor and family. C. H. C.

Fiftieth Anniversary

---January 4, 1940

Sometime ago, when I first began to think and plan our January meeting, Elder Cayce said I might have January 4th paper as I wished-that is, I might have "the say" as to what should go in this paper. Therefore my desires were: First, to have his sermon of the first day's meeting in the paper. Fifty years from the time he made his first effort to speak in the name of his Master, in the home of Sister Morris, in Wayne County, Tenn., he preached at our church, Cane Creek, here in Thornton. The discourse was taken down in shorthand by Sisters Grace Claggett, Anice Pilkington, and Gladys Cottle. Then his closing remarks, at the close of the meeting on Sunday, were taken down. Both sermons are in the paper. Second, in his first effort he used the song "Amazing Grace!" and the song was sung to the tune of New Britain. I have heard that song sung in other tunes. So I wanted the song and the same tune in this paper. Third, I wanted you to see just how he works in getting The Primitive Baptist to you. Therefore, we had his picture taken at his desk while he was working on the manuscript for this issue of the paper. The books in the background are the books in his personal library. Fourth, I thought you would like to see a picture of the office, the office force, and the mail bags carrying The Primitive Baptist to you. The mail bags contain December 14, 1939, Primitive Baptist papers. All along, my prayer-if indeed I have ever prayed-has been that the dear Lord would meet with us, and that His sweet presence might be manifested; and each of us feel to know that it was good to be there. I believe many came praying; and many wrote that they could not meet with us, but were begging the dear Lord to be in our midst. Surely He was here, and His sweet presence was felt, and His dear name was glorified, and His children were comforted and edified. Praise God, from whom all blessings flow, Praise Him, all creatures here below. Would you like to know how so many were cared for in such extremely bad weather? Well, that was easy. No burden, only a pleasure. Meals were served at our home. The oldest and most feeble ones were seated at a long table. Others were served cafeteria style. After filling their plates, the house was theirs to find as comfortable place as possible to eat. Every one present seemed to have plenty and enjoyed themselves. At night, the crowd was slept in different homes. Many letters and telegrams were received containing word pictures of appreciation and well wishes. They were appreciated by Elder Cayce and all of us. We trust you will enjoy this issue of the paper, and each and every issue of this year. Please continue to remember us in prayer. Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Kind Remembrances

---January 4, 1940

The editor and family have been the happy recipients of many kind remembrances during the holidays. Many beautiful cards and many nice and valuable presents have been sent and given to us. We feel to be unworthy of such manifestations and expressions of Christian love and sweet fellowship. While it is true we have trials to endure, and hard things come our way that have to be encountered and endured, yet such manifestations of Christian love and fellowship give us renewed strength and courage to continue to press onward in the strife to serve the Lord and His humble followers while He lets us stay in this old world. Such things bring us sweet comfort and consolation. May the Lord bless each one who has so kindly and lovingly remembered us, is our humble prayer. Please let this be a personal note to each one of you. And please pray the Lord to give us strength and courage for the battles of life which may confront us in this New Year of our Lord, 1940. Editor and Family.

A Tribute to Elder Cayce (1 of 2)

---January 4, 1940

Remembering, as we do, that on January 4, 1940, Elder Cayce will have completed his fifty years in the ministry, and feeling that he well deserves a word of praise, we have composed this little poem to be published in the paper, which also is published on the above date: Fifty years ago today, When our brother was a youth, He entered into the Master's service, As a herald of His truth. It was early in the morning He began this truth to tell; He has served his Master faithful; He has served Him long and well. He has gone throughout the nation Bearing tidings for the poor; He has preached a full salvation; He has made his calling sure. It can be said of our dear brother, As it was of Paul of old, He has fought a good warfare, And the truth he's never sold. He has met the wise and noble To defend the Lord's great cause; After fifty years of labor, He deserves this little applause. He has been a little David, With the smooth stones in his hand; He has conquered many a foe Before his face they could not stand. Oft he has gone away from home, Leaving his loved ones all behind, To serve the Lord, whom he loves, And who to him has been so kind. We hope he still has many years In which to preach the truth, That is as precious to him now As when he was a youth. And when his work on earth is done, And he no more this truth can tell, May he be resigned to the Father's will, And say, "My Jesus hath done all things well." J. H. Keaton.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY MEETING

Commemorating the Fifty Years of Service in the Ministry by Elder C. H. Cayce Held at Thornton, Ark., Jan. 4, 1940 January 4, 1940 Elder Cayce: It is impossible for me to express my feelings on this occasion. I wish to say, before we proceed any farther, those of us who are at home understand that I am the moderator of the church here, Elder Harris frequently being elsewhere on our regular meeting time; but I am glad that Brother Harris is with us and expects to be with us during this meeting, and I trust that I rightly appreciate (I don't know that I do, but I trust that I do rightly appreciate) the fact that Macedonia Church, which Brother Harris serves, dismissed their meeting at this time, Saturday and Sunday next, on account of this special meeting, and Brother Harris being with us; and as I know that it will be satisfactory with the church, I am going to ask Elder Harris to act and serve as moderator pro tem during this meeting. I believe I will make it not only for today and tomorrow, during this special meeting, but throughout the entire meeting for the four days and three nights. It is not announced that we would have services Sunday night. So I am going to ask Brother Harris to take charge of the meeting as moderator. It is a cross to me to serve as moderator or pastor of the church at any time, but I just couldn't in this meeting. To see this gathering here this morning, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather conditions, and the different states that are represented here today, I don't know just how to say what I feel. What is it all about, anyhow? What is it for? Why should such an assembly be gathered from all these states here today on the fiftieth anniversary of my first effort to speak in the name of the Master? What has that service amounted to? And why should such a gathering be? I do not know whether I can do anything more during this meeting than to say what few words I have said. I am going now to leave the matter in the hands of Brother Harris as moderator. Of course, I understand the arrangement is for me to preach the first discourse of the meeting. I understand that. Elder Harris: I wish to make this statement, that I feel glad indeed to meet all the precious Old Baptists from different parts at this time; and so far as being appointed moderator of this meeting, I would have been glad if someone else had been appointed for this place, because I do not know whether I know exactly how to conduct this meeting as it should be or not. Of course, the arrangements are, as we all know, or most of us know, Brother Cayce is to preach the introductory sermon, and I just feel that we ought to give him the privilege, if he desires to, to have someone to introduce for him, to make the selection among the brethren to suit himself. Go ahead, Brother Cayce. Brother Cayce: As I said a moment ago, I do not know how to express my feelings. I want to read a few lines from a hymn that I believe comes as near expressing my feelings as I know how to find language to express them. I am not going to use that as an introductory hymn, but I wish to read a few words from it-No. 491: Poor, weak and worthless tho' I am, I have a rich, Almighty Friend; Though I feel my weakness and my poverty this morning, this assembly is assurance to me that I do have a rich, Almighty Friend, who has been so good to me all these years and gives me a place in the hearts of this great people gathered from the different states of our nation. Jesus, the Saviour, is His name- He freely loves, and without end. If that were not true, His love to me, a poor sinner, would have ceased before today. He ransomed me from hell with blood, And by His power my foes controlled. And I know I have had them (foes) all these years. He found me wandering far from God And brought me to His chosen fold. He cheers my heart, my want supplies, And says that I shall shortly be, Enthroned with Him above the skies- O what a Friend is Christ to me. I will never have another fiftieth anniversary of my service, and today my mind goes back to the time and place where I made the first effort; and as far as my knowledge extends, there is just one person living today who was present and heard that first effort, and that person is Elder G. L. Pilkington, sitting over there, present here. That was in Wayne County, Tenn. A few years ago, traveling along the highway with my family, we stopped at the place. We went in and viewed the spot where I stood. On that occasion it fell to my lot to introduce the service and then to try to talk. I did not consume much time in my talk. The song that I used was No. 294. In that day the custom was to read two lines of the hymn and then sing those two lines, and then read another two lines and sing those two lines, until they got through. That is what they called "lining the hymn." However, I will say here (parenthetically) that the Primitive Baptists in that age were not the only people who did that. I presume the custom got started on the account of the scarcity of books. Nearly all of you have books here today and it would not be necessary on account of the scarcity of books to sing this song like they did then- two lines at a time-but as this is in commemoration of that service that I endeavored to engage in in the beginning of my ministry, fifty years ago, I want you to sing this song that way. I want to line it for you, and then you sing those two lines when I shall have read them; when you sing those two lines I will read two more, then you sing that way until you get through. Now you are not accustomed to that. When you sing through two lines, do not forget and run on.

But when you sing the two lines, you stop. Fifty years ago that song was a favorite of mine. The sentiment expressed in that hymn was the very sentiment of my heart, and that same thing is true today, as I stand before you. Please sing as I line. (Congregation sang Amazing Grace.) As already stated, fifty years ago it fell to my lot and it was placed upon me to introduce the service. I used that hymn and tried to spend a few moments in prayer. My feeling then was that I would much rather someone else had offered the prayer. That is my feeling now. I would rather hear any of these brethren pray. I feel that I need their prayers; but to endeavor to hold this service as that was held fifty years ago, I will take the burden. I have been a burden-bearer fifty years. Sometimes it is sweet to bear the burden; sometimes it seems the burden is too great, but in bearing the burden and carrying it, I have found along the way sweet rest and peace. Will you bow with me while I try to spend a moment in prayer, and you try to pray while I do? PRAYER Holy, thrice holy, art thou, the great all-wise Creator of all things that are created, and who up-holdeth all things created by the word of thy power; supremely great, superlatively good, transcendently glorious; if we are not deceived in our poor hearts this morning, we desire to come before thee in gratitude and thankfulness to thy great, matchless and adorable name for every expression of thy love and mercy, and continual forbearance with us all along the pathway of life. Thy mercies have followed us all these many years, and we have never seen an end of thy goodness. We thank thee, heavenly Father, that thou hast cared for us and brought us from infancy to youth and to manhood and womanhood and some of us to old age. Thou hast cared for us when we could not, and did not, care for ourselves. Thy loving kindness has followed us all the days of our lives. We confess, heavenly Father, that notwithstanding the multitude of thy mercies, that we are unworthy, of ourselves considered, the least of thy favors. We confess our sinfulness, our forgetfulness, our waywardness, our many sins and transgressions that we have committed against thee all the days of our lives, but notwithstanding our sinfulness and forgetfulness, thou hast never been forgetful or unmindful of us. We thank thee, heavenly Father, for the unspeakable gift of thy dear Son, who came into this world a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief, who took upon Himself all the sins of thy dear people, bore them in His own body on the tree of the cross and put them away by the sacrifice of Himself. We thank thee, heavenly Father, that thou didst, in the years gone by give us in our hearts to realize the hatefulness of sin and the depravity of our hearts, the corruption of our hearts, and that thou didst lead us gently along to try our efforts in our own deliverance, and that thou ledest us to realize for ourselves that all our efforts were a failure. We thank thee, heavenly Father, that in the moment of despair, when all hope seemed to be gone, that thou didst then reveal thyself to us and manifest thyself to us as our Redeemer, our Saviour, and by thy grace gave us a good hope, through grace, of a home beyond this vale of sorrow and tears. We thank thee, heavenly Father, that, if we are not deceived, we find in our poor hearts a love for thy people, a love for thy cause, and for thy blessed truth. We thank thee, heavenly Father, for the sweet fellowship of thy people, and for their company and association, and that we are counted worthy to have a name with this, thy people, and have been permitted all these years to have a home and resting place with them. We thank thee, heavenly Father, that thou hast preserved us through these years and kept us to this good day, and that we have the privilege-the blessed heaven-given, blood-bought privilege -of assembling together on this day in this place from so many different parts of the country. We trust, heavenly Father, that our only aim is to glorify thee. If there is one in this assembly that has come to this place to glorify man, Lord grant to remove that desire from their hearts. We must confess, if one is permitted to speak for all in divine presence, individually or personally, of ourselves, we are nothing in thy sight. There is nothing in man to glory in; but help us, Father, to glory in thee and in the cross of Christ Jesus and to praise thy name and to bless thy holy name that we have been counted fit, through the righteousness of Jesus Christ, our Saviour, to go and continue in thy service during these years. Lord, help us and keep us what few days we have to live in the world. Lord, bless us, that thy hand may lead us, thy power restrain us, thy love constrain us, in thy blessed service, who are endeavoring to unite thy people in sweet peace and fellowship and love while we live in this world. We pray thy blessings to rest upon this assembly, individually and collectively. Thou knowest our hearts and thoughts. Thou knowest what we need better than we ourselves.

Some of us may be separated by many miles from loved ones. We pray thy protecting care to be thrown about them, and fill the absence of loved ones with thy holy presence and permit each one to return to loved ones at home and find them enjoying sweet peace and communion with thee. We beg thee, heavenly Father, that this meeting may be one long remembered. Go with us through the journey of life; stand close by us in death, and in death receive our departing spirits unto thyself in glory; watch over our sleeping dust until the morning of the resurrection. In mercy grant that in that morning these mortal bodies may be raised from the dead, made immortal, fashioned like the body of Christ, through the merits of the blood of Jesus Christ, where and when we trust we shall be divinely elemented, permitted, qualified, and capacitated to sing praise perfectly to thy name in all the ceaseless ages of eternity. These mercies, blessings and favors we trust we ask in Jesus' name and for His sake. And Amen.

SERMON

Fifty years ago this day when I made the first effort to speak in the name of the Master, the ministers present were my father, Elder S. F. Cayce, Elder J. P. Pilkington, father of our Brother Pilkington here, and Elder M. L. Rhodes. They are now trying the reality of the truthfulness of the doctrine that I have tried to preach during these years. At that time I loved the doctrine of grace. My only hope of ever enjoying the glory of the heavenly world was alone in the grace of God, and that is all I have now. I will have to ask you to be as patient with me as you can while I try to talk to you. I do not know how long I shall talk, nor how soon I shall quit; but, of course, I cannot help but see these stenographers before me to take down the words that I speak, and this in compliance with the wish of that good woman, that good wife, who has labored with me and for me and been a help to me these years, and who loves the cause that you love, and who labors for the cause many a night when most of you are asleep. For the benefit of the Lord's children scattered over the country she wanted this discourse to be published in The Primitive Baptist, which was due to have been mailed out this week. The regular time of our publication date, Thursday, January 4, is just fifty years from the day that I made the first effort to speak in the name of the Master. She wanted this discourse to be put in that paper, delaying mailing the paper out for a few days in order that this be done. Now it may be that it is a pity I did not study up and have outlined a "good discourse" to deliver on this occasion, when I might have had time to read it over after writing it, so I might correct the language and the sentences, and as far as possible have every sentence in it correct from a grammatical standpoint, and all the sentences well rounded, but I have not done that. For several days, I have, of course, been thinking about this occasionally, and wondering what in the world will I do? what will I say? and what course shall I pursue? I expected brethren to be here from different states, and feel so thankful to see them, and that they are here.

I feel like, if the Lord would help me, I ought to use the same text I used fifty years ago in the beginning of my ministerial labor; and yet, when I, in my mind, look around over the country in different directions and see the conditions that exist, and how many things that should be spoken about and presented and considered by our people as a body, should I pursue that course? What should I do? But my mind is to read to you the same text I used fifty years ago, and you will find it recorded in the eighth and ninth verses of the second chapter of Paul's letter to the church at Ephesus: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." That is text enough for a discourse all right, and I suppose I am not going to have the opportunity of preaching another time in this meeting. I must say my say at this time, if the Lord will help me. I do not expect, in the time I occupy, to bring out and enlarge upon every point that is embraced in this language. If I had spent all these fifty years in preaching right on this text and the direct connection with it in this chapter, I should not yet have been able to have told it all. It would take eternity to do that, and that has no end; so it will never all be told. In this, notice, please, just three words in the beginning of the language, "For by grace." "By grace." There is something here which the apostle is just about to mention and bring out, which he knows and most positively and emphatically declares to be by grace. Now it is either by grace, or it is not by grace- one way or the other. Fifty years ago I believed and tried to preach it in that first effort that this was something that was by grace. Now I do not believe that, and have not believed it during these years, just to be peculiar or just to be different from somebody else. The reason I believed that the salvation here mentioned by the apostle was by grace was because I had learned it to be so by experience. Before having experienced the truthfulness of this for myself, I thought I believed that salvation was by grace. When people would talk in my presence about how sinners were saved in heaven, and would tell me there was something the sinner had to do in order to reach heaven, and enjoy heaven, I would say, "I think you are mistaken." I had in my possession a little pocket Testament which my sainted father gave to me. I have it today in my library, and intended to bring it with me, but forgot it. I read that Testament some, and if I am not very much mistaken this text may be found marked in that little Testament that I read and marked in my childhood days. I thought I believed that the, sinner was saved by grace, and yet when I would think of myself and how I should ever reach heaven and immortal glory, while I thought I believed salvation was by grace, yet I thought there was something I had to do. That was what I thought about myself-something I had to do; there was something I must do in order that I ever be saved in heaven by grace. I learned by experience that all that I could do, that I might do, that others might do for me, would never, never, never bring me to where the Lord would save me. At the age of eight years, one night when all the family had retired, suddenly, unexpectedly, unlooked for, and undesired by me, I realized that I was a poor, lost sinner, ruined and undone. So great was the trouble that came over me that I burst into a flood of tears, and father, who had retired across the room on his bed, said, "Son, what is the matter with you? What are you crying about?" I made him no answer. He got up from his bed and came to my bedside; leaning over my little body, he said, "What is the matter? Papa wants to know what is bothering my boy? What hurts you?" I said, "I am a poor, lost, ruined sinner. If you can, I wish you would pray for me." Time after time, father would call the family around the fireside, read to us something in God's good Book, go down on his knees in prayer to God, and always father would remember to mention before God and to God in his prayer the poor sinful boy. That failed me. Many times in the dark hours of night, when others were wrapped in silent slumber, that sainted old mother who so many times, in this building, before it was moved here, when we had a little church over at Fordyce, occupied that seat, Sister Keaton, where you are, over against the wall-many times in the dark hours of night when everybody was asleep but mother, and she thought I was asleep, she came to my bedside. I could feel the tender touch of mother's loving hand when she came to see if all was well with her boy and she thought I was asleep, and she would kneel down on the floor by my bedside and pray to God in behalf of her poor boy. I know by experience something of what it is to feel and to know and have the assurance of a mother's love and care. I know you mothers pray for your children. I know you do. Every other friend in the world may forsake the child, but the good mother never will; but yet, instead of this poor boy feeling like Jesus was my Saviour, I sank deeper in despair. Mother prayed for me and father prayed for me and the Lord did not hear. He did not save me; I was a lost sinner. If ever saved, how can I be saved? Just one answer -by grace. By grace, not through my own efforts or labors. Oh, I tried that. Sometimes when the neighbors would be in our home I would hear a neighbor man, for instance, talking to my father. They did not know I was hearing, and I wasn't trying to eavesdrop, but I was close enough to hear; and I would sometimes hear some neighbor man speaking to my father about his boy. They would say, "Claud is a good boy. I wish my boys were as good as your boy." That would make me go away in some secluded place feeling that "They do not know. Their boys are open and above board in the things they do, yet they are not so wicked or lawbreaking, but my heart is as wicked as theirs, and in addition to that I am only a hypocrite, making them believe I am something and am nothing." Poor sinner; lost. "I will do better. I am going to live in such a way as to merit the praise that they bestow. I am going to do better, so as to have assurance from the Lord that Jesus is my Saviour." Did I get better? If I did, I could not tell it. It might be illustrated by the poor woman who had an issue of blood for twelve years, and spent all her living on physicians of this world, and grew no better, but rather grew worse and worse, until the blessed Jesus came that way, and by His Spirit and the virtue that was in Him was she healed. I grew worse in every effort. Now I am speaking from personal experience, my own feelings in the matter; every effort I made-asking preachers to pray for me; mother's prayers, and father's prayers, and all that-I just sank deeper in despair. Each time there was one less thing left to trust in until they were all gone-nothing left. My own prayers and the prayers of others had failed; and then, unexpectedly and un-looked for, somehow that burden left, and I believed then that salvation is by grace. I knew that if I should ever be landed safely on the sunny shores of eternal bliss, it was alone, wholly and solely, by the grace and mercy of God. Now I have tried to talk to you a little from an experimental standpoint. I want to look at this from another standpoint. "For by grace are ye saved." I might put in a little time in talking about the word ye. Just two letters in that little word ye. That, we understand, is a personal pronoun and refers to persons -persons addressed; people like we are, folks, sinners of Adam's race. By grace are you-you-saved. Oh, that brings it home to us individually, personally- you. "By grace are ye saved." Let me tell you that it is the height of folly-and I might even use rougher language than that-not only the height of folly, but I believe I will say, stark naked ignorance, if you will excuse the expression, to say the pronoun ye, in that text, means anything else other than sinners of Adam's race, persons, sinners of Adam's race. You are saved, not something else saved. He was not talking about something being saved that is not a sinner of Adam's race. "Ye are saved." If ye are saved, you are not only a child of Adam, but you are also, at the same time, a child of God, "a child of Jehovah, a subject of grace, of the seed royal, a dignified race." You, you, have been taken out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in the Lord Jesus Christ -and that is not something you did for yourself; you did not climb out; you did not, by your strength, hang on to something that somebody sent down to you, and another human being raised you out-not that-but you have been brought out by the work of the Spirit of God, the Spirit of God coming in contact with your spirit, and thus imparting to you a higher order of life, raising you up out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in the Lord Jesus Christ. How is that done? By grace. "By grace are ye saved." Let me give you what I one time heard a colored preacher say; he quoted this text (and he had the negro brogue all right); he said: "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God!" it is a "gift," not a "git." I said "thank you." The salvation in this text is "by grace" and it is the gift of God. It is not something that you get by your efforts and labors, but it is God's gift to you. In connection with this, let me read the twenty-third verse of the sixth chapter of Paul's letter to the church at Rome: "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." What does the word wages mean? Now, if I am mistaken about it, when I tell you my idea of what it means, I will thank you to correct me. I think the word wages means that is what you get for what you do. Isn't that it? Wages means something you get for what you do. What is sin? I think it was John who said: "Sin is the transgression of the law." Isn't that John's language? What is sin, then? That is something that you do; it is something that we have done; and it is something that we still do. It is the transgression of the law-God's law-that is sin. That is what we have done; that is what we do. Do you get anything for that? Yes, you get paid for it. "The wages of sin is death." That is what you get for what you do, and that is one side of the question. What is the other side? "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." I heard an old darky say, one time, concerning that expression, "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord;" "That means by grace; God gives it to you; it is free, gratis, for nothing, and besides that, you don't have to pay for it." "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." A good friend one time said to me: "Elder Cayce, you certainly must be wrong and mistaken in your idea that what we do has nothing whatever to do with our reaching heaven, that it is all by grace and nothing that we do has to do with that." I said, "Well, I may be wrong. If I am, I want to be right." I said, "Is it your idea that if I don't do something, I will go to the bad place?" He said, "Yes, that is it, exactly." "Then, your idea is, in order that I go to heaven, the good place, I have to do something." "Yes, that's exactly right." I said, "Well, I may be wrong and you may be right; but if I understand you and what you have said to me in regard to my own case, I suppose if it is true in my case, it is true of every other person in the world?" He said, "Yes." "Then, if I understand you, in my case, if I do nothing I go to the bad place." "That's right." "Then in order to go to heaven, I have got to do something. Then, I understand, it is your idea that salvation is by works and damnation is by grace." He said, "What?" I said, "It seems to me that if I do nothing I would go to the bad place, that would be damnation by grace; and if, in order to go to heaven, I have got to do something, that is salvation by works. Is that what you believe?" He said: "Lord, have mercy!" I said, "You do not seem to agree with Paul. Paul said, 'The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.' That is damnation by works and salvation by grace; but you have it salvation by works and damnation by grace. You do not agree with Paul." He said, "Look here, Cayce, I guess Paul was right." I said, "Paul and I agree; then if Paul was right, and I agree with him, salvation is by grace. 'For by grace are ye saved through faith.'" If there has ever been a time in all my life of these fifty years of service in the Master's kingdom that I should be so candid and sincere, is it not today, above every day that is in the past?-Honest, candid and sincere in that which I present. Certainly it looks that way to me. I am nearing the end of the way. I am nearing the end of the journey. I will not serve another fifty years-won't live long enough to do that. I do not know how long all you brethren in the ministry have been serving. If there is one present who has been trying to preach the unsearchable riches of the Master for as long as fifty years, will you please raise your hand? Is there one here? I see no hand go up. I have been longer in the ministry than any of you. You know I am very far down on the western side of the hill, and if one should be candid and sincere and plain, does it not look like it would be when I can realize I am coming near the end of the way? Now, if I should refer to something that is contradictory to the viewpoint held by any of you, our brethren, friends or neighbors, let me say it is in all kindness and love; and I realize, if possible, more than ever, in all these years, the great responsibility that rests upon me to present the truth, as I see it, and as God's blessed Book teaches it to me, and as I have learned it by experience along life's way, of which I have been speaking to you already, and shall not go back and rehearse that. Notice, now, the reading of our text, "For by grace are ye saved" - not by grace are ye brought into a state whereby you may be saved, "but by grace are ye saved" -not by grace that an effort was made to save you; not by grace that the way of salvation was opened up; but "by grace are ye SAVED." I wish I could emphasize that and sound it out so loud that it might be heard to earth's remotest bounds and sink deep in the heart of every child of grace and every lover of God in this wide world. "By grace are ye saved." Do not forget that, please. But, I remember once, when I was a lad of a boy, hearing two men in discussion, in a public debate, and one of them quoted this text-that is, the eighth verse. He did not quote the ninth, but quoted the eighth verse, or part of it, this way: "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and faith is the act of the creature." That is the way he quoted it. That was in Kentucky, when I was just a lad of a boy; I remember it very well. That was before I ever joined the church, and I remember so well what came into my mind when he used that language. I thought, "Now you have fixed it, haven't you!" He said faith is the act of the creature. We do no violence to language, we do no violence to the Bible or its teaching, if we take a word, or expression, or clause, out of a sentence and put in place of it the true meaning of the word, expression, or clause, removed. "For by grace are ye saved." What is grace? A short definition of it is, "a favor bestowed upon unworthy or undeserving characters - an unmerited favor bestowed upon undeserving or unworthy characters." "By an unmerited favor are ye saved." You were undeserving; you were unworthy; you deserved nothing good from the hand of the great God of the universe. What we really deserved was everlasting banishment from His peaceful presence. "By an unmerited favor are ye saved" -not banished from His presence, but delivered from everlasting destruction, from everlasting banishment from the presence of God, by an unmerited favor. "By an unmerited favor are ye saved through the act of the creature." If faith is the act of the creature, we do no violence to take the word faith out and put act of the creature in its stead. "By an unmerited favor are ye saved through the act of the creature; and that not of yourselves, but it is through the act of the creature; it is the gift of God, but it is through the act of the creature; not of works, but it is through the act of the creature." What kind of a mixture of language would we have in that? The very language, in itself, is such a conglomerated mess, if you will excuse the expression, that as ignorant as some say Old Baptists are, we know better than that; and if the Old Baptists, in their ignorance, can see the folly of it, does it not look like smart folks ought to see it? "By an unmerited favor are ye saved through the act of the creature; not of works, but it is through the act of the creature; it is the gift of God, but it is through the act of the creature." Do you know that won't work? Some years ago, when I lived in Tennessee, there were three men who conducted a meeting in a county over there, not in the same county

I lived in, but near by, in another county. Three men held the meeting. One of them did the praying, another did the singing, and another did the preaching. In that meeting one of them said: "I stole one soul the devil thought he had," when someone made a "profession." When the meeting was over a fellow living in the community brought out a new translation of our text. One of those men was named Potts; another was named Droke; another was named Franklin. The translation the young man gave us of (Ephesians 2:8-9), was: "For by Potts are ye saved through Droke; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of Franklin." I thought this translation suited the occasion very well. Let me give you a translation to suit modern theology -the doctrine the gentleman I referred to advocated in my case, that I, in doing nothing, would go down to the bad place, and that in order to go to heaven I had something to do. I will read the text to harmonize with that doctrine: "For by works are ye saved through the act of the creature; and that of yourselves: for it is not the gift of God: for it is by works: therefore let every man boast all he can." It seems to me that if salvation is a matter of works, something accomplished by my efforts and my labors, and I have attained to salvation thereby, that the language would have to read something like that. Instead of that, the apostle has it, by the moving power of the Spirit of God, just as it is. He was moved by the Spirit to write what he penned down in the original language: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." But let us notice that from another standpoint- the standpoint of faith. The world has it that it is by grace through faith, and that unless we exercise faith we can never attain to that saving, or that salvation. Now, I have heard that-I am not misrepresenting anybody. Of course, if you do not think that way I am not talking about you. I am talking about the fellow who told me that you must exercise faith, and that unless you exercise faith, then you cannot attain to that saving. "It is through faith, and so one must exercise the faith." I turn over to another statement made by this same inspired writer, and I find this language recorded in his letter to the Hebrews: "For all men have not faith." Now in that expression he does not, to my mind, convey the idea that no man has faith, but there are some who do not have faith. Question, please: As there are some men who do not have faith, and some men who do have faith, what is the difference between those men who have not faith and those men who have faith? There must be a difference. Now what is that difference? Certainly there is a difference; and as some men do not have faith, please tell us what class of men those are who do not have faith. Well, they are unregenerate sinners. That is what is the matter; but they must exercise faith in order to obtain eternal salvation. But the sinner does not have faith to exercise. Now please tell me how under heaven a person is going to exercise something that he is not in possession of? Suppose this brother (pointing to a brother) has his right arm cut off at the shoulder. He is destitute of a right arm; but I say to him, "Exercise your right arm; exercise your right arm, I tell you." Do you think it would be possible for him to exercise his right arm, seeing he has no right arm? In order that he be able to exercise his right arm, he must be in possession of a right arm before he can exercise that right arm. In order to exercise his right arm, he must have a right arm, and then exercise his right arm. It is too late then to exercise his right arm in order to attain the end designed; the end is reached when the arm is bestowed and given to him. Now since it is impossible for him to exercise his right arm, when he has no right arm to exercise, if his home in heaven depended on it, would it not be a foregone conclusion, and an absolute certainty, that heaven he could not see? It closes heaven's door forever against that man who is destitute of a right arm, if he must exercise the right arm in order to salvation. All right; I take the other matter, and I come to this man who is destitute of faith and I tell him that his home in heaven depends upon him exercising faith. Suppose I tell him, "Unless you exercise faith, heaven you can never see; you are doomed to everlasting punishment and banishment from the presence of God, and to suffer everlasting burning, unless you exercise faith," and he does not have it to exercise, would that not make salvation a matter of absolute impossibility to that man, and close heaven's door against all the race of Adam? They are in a state of unregeneracy and it makes heaven a matter of impossibility for them. Talk about a hard doctrine! I am glad salvation is not like that. I am glad it does not depend upon that. I am glad the apostle says, "By grace are ye saved through faith." Somebody might say, "You are denying faith; what do you say it is?" All right; I think that is a fair question, a fair demand. There is nothing unfair about that, not a thing; and so I shall endeavor, for a little while now, to tell you about that. I go to God's Book and I find where Paul says, again in his letter to the Hebrews, I believe the eleventh chapter and first verse, "Now faith is;" he tells us what it is. As sure as heaven is happy, as Elder Hopper used to say, Paul tells us what it is; we won't have to guess at what faith is when we read that. What do you think about it? "Faith is;" and notice that the word is, that is an ever present truth. He did not say faith was; he did not say faith will be, but faith is. It was so when he said it, and there has never been a second of time from then to now it was not that way; it is still that way, and it will be that way when this old world comes to an end; "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Let us examine this text. Paul here gives us two things which faith is—one is "the evidence of things not seen;" When you were given a good hope through grace, perhaps in your childhood days, or in youth, the blessed evidence was brought into your heart that Jesus is your Saviour. "Evidence of things not seen;" the blessed evidence was given you in your very soul that there is a better place over yonder, there is a better home beyond this vale of sorrows and tears, and that when you are done with all afflictions incident to this life you shall share the glories of that home. "Evidence of things not seen;" you cannot see that home; you have evidence of it, that there is something better over yonder. You can't see it, but you have the evidence of it. Having the evidence of it, sweet hope springs up in your heart. Then that hope is made up of expectation and desire. Somehow, from that time back yonder, maybe you can't remember when, expectation sprang up in your heart of something better; expectation of something better was yours. Then you began to look out in hope, hops, hope. "We are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Hope is made up of expectation and desire. Sometimes I hear people say, "I hope this, and I hope that," when they have no hope for it in the world, for they are not expecting it. In my youthful days I hoped that some day I would be wealthy in the goods of this world. I expected it, and I desired it; but I have lost that hope. That hope has been destroyed—not that I have lost the desire. I wish I had a million dollars to put in the cause of my Master. And let me tell you, brethren, if I know my heart, I love the cause of my Saviour, and I thank God for the privilege and blessing of putting into this meeting everything I shall put into it; it does my heart good. I am glad to have you in my home. I am glad for you to sleep in my home, eat at my table, eat up everything you can find there. I want to tell you it is free. I want that, but I am not expecting to be rich. I have the desire all right, but I am not expecting it; hence I am not hoping for it. I have lost the expectation; hence, my hope is lost. "If we hope for that we see not." The blessed evidence is given us, and so we expect something better beyond. And that divine life which God has implanted in your soul is the fountain from which the desire springs. So there is the desire and expectation. Then you are hoping, and with patience wait for it. Now there is faith, the evidence of things not seen—that blessed evidence that came to you, perhaps years ago. Sometimes you want more evidence. "Lord, increase our faith." That is what some said in ancient days; and I have sometimes thought I have had the same desire they had, as expressed in that language. "Increase our faith." Give me more evidence, more evidence, and more evidence to strengthen my hope, and, like the line in the song, "His word my hope secures." I believe that is the way it reads. Now that does not mean that the hope secures His promise, but His promise secures the hope; it makes it sure. That hope is based on the promise of God, and you rest on that; and I am willing to risk His promise-blessed assurance, blessed hope, blessed evidence of things not seen. But that is not all. The apostle told us that faith is the substance of things hoped for. Sub is a Latin prefix which means under. Stance is from the Latin sto, which means to stand. Substance, then, is something which stands underneath. Now let us read our text, "By an unmerited favor are ye saved through the evidence of things not seen; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." "By an unmerited favor are ye saved through the substance of things hoped for; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Now let me read it again, "By grace are ye saved through something which stands underneath: and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Oh! what is it that stands underneath? Faith, in the sense of our text, is something that stands underneath. What is it that stands underneath? Let me ask the poor tempest-tossed pilgrim here in the world-let me ask you- What is it that stands underneath you? What is it that has stood underneath you along life's way? What is it that has held you up and sustained you in your afflictions, in your sorrows, in your troubles, in your distresses, even in soul sorrow? "My soul," Jesus said, "is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." The worst suffering a poor mortal knows is soul suffering. Oh, what is it that has stood underneath you and held you up? What is it? Can you not answer, "The hand of the Lord Jesus has been underneath me, I trust, all these years, and has held me up, and sustained me, and kept me to this good hour." Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." His hand is underneath, to uphold and sustain them all along life's uneven pathway. "By an unmerited favor are ye saved through the hand of Jesus Christ," who will bring you at last unto His Father in eternal glory. "Grace, grace unto it." Is it any wonder the poet wrote language like this: Grace, 'tis a charming sound, Harmonious to the ear! Heav'n with the echo shall resound, And all the saints shall hear. Grace first contrived the way To save rebellious man; And all the steps that grace display Which drew the wondrous plan. Grace first inscribed my name In God's eternal Book; 'Twas grace that gave me to the Lamb, Who all my sorrows took. Grace led my roving feet To tread the heavenly road, And new supplies each hour I meet While pressing on to God. Grace taught my soul to pray, And made mine eyes o'erflow; 'Twas grace that kept me to this day, And will not let me go. Grace all the work shall crown, Through everlasting days; It lays in heaven the topmost stone, And well deserves the praise. Brethren, that doctrine of grace shows how a man is degraded and is abased; but it exalts and honors God; and I love Him for His grace. I love Him because He has done so much for me. "Oh, how I love Jesus, because He first loved me." I now conclude. I do not know how long I have been standing before you; but grace, the doctrine of grace, and the praise of God for His grace, has been my meat and drink for these fifty years. If this should be the last discourse that I ever deliver in this world - and I know that soon I am going to deliver the last one-I want to tell you I am willing to risk it; I am willing to go into the dark regions of death relying upon His grace. It is by grace: "not of works, lest any man should boast." "Nothing in my hand I bring;" I am just a poor sinner saved by the grace of God. I love every child of God, because I believe he will reach heaven, and be saved in heaven by God's grace. You may not see everything as I do. If the doctrine of grace does not embrace me, I am gone-I am ruined. No other way will ever reach a sinner like me. Remember me in your prayers. The Lord has been good to me these years. I am not worthy of this. If I could illustrate to you how much I amount to, as near as I know how, it would be this way: If I had a blackboard here, and I write on the blackboard a zero or cipher, I ask you what that is? You would say, "nothing." Well, I am less than that, of myself considered. How can I get that illustrated on this blackboard? That zero is nothing. Then, I, myself considered, am less than that. How in the world can I show on the blackboard how that is? The only way I know how is to rub the zero out. Soon I am going to be rubbed out. When I am gone, this old world will continue. The sun will continue to rise in the east and set in the west. The stars will continue to shine in the heavens, and the old church will move on, and God will have somebody in the world to bear witness to the blessed truth of the doctrine of grace. I want it to be where my children can get it and enjoy it. Oh, how good the Lord has been to me. He has put it in the heart of my oldest boy to come to the church and ask for a home with us, and I believe-Oh, children, may I tell it on you? The good Lord has so wonderfully blessed me as to touch the heart of everyone of my children. I believe He has; I believe every one of them has been touched in their hearts with the finger of God. The Lord has been good to me, and merciful to me. "Grace, grace unto it." "Grace upon grace;" grace all along the line. I want to serve Him because He has been so gracious to me and so good to me. I want to see my children come home. I want to see every child of grace come into the old church; then I want to see them trying to live in a way to honor God when they get in there. That is my desire. May the Lord bless you. I could talk all day and not get through. Brother Harris, take charge.

PROCEEDINGS

After the close of the discourse above, it was agreed that the deacons of this church, together with other deacons present, act as a committee to arrange preaching during the meeting. Then a motion was made and seconded and unanimously carried that a committee be appointed from the various states represented to draw up resolutions of appreciation for the fifty years of service rendered by Elder C. H. Cayce. Those appointed were: Elder R. F. Pierce, Quitman, Ark.; Elder S. E. Angle, Waynesville, Ohio; Elder J. L. Ceilings, Abilene, Texas; Elder J. H. Keaton, Huntington, W. Va.; Elder Leon H. Clevenger, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Elder Elbert Holdren, Syracuse, Kan.; Elder W. A. Shutt, Nashville, Tenn.; Elder J. O. Dodd, Englswood, Colo.; Elder H. L. Golston, Brush Creek, Tenn.; Deacon B. B. Lawler, Brownsboro, Ala.; Brother W. R. Hammett, West Monroe, La.; Elder G. L. Pilkington, North Little Rock, Ark.; Elder J. D. Holder, Tupelo, Miss.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE

We, the undersigned, being a committee appointed by the acting moderator of Cane Creek Primitive Baptist Church, of Thornton, Ark., at a special meeting on January 4, 1940, which meeting was held in honor of Elder C. H. Cayce, and to pay some tribute to him in consideration of his fifty years as a minister, editor, etc., beg leave to submit the following to be presented to the church, and, if approved by the church, to be published in the next issue of The Primitive Baptist: He began editing and publishing The Primitive Baptist in the year of 1905, following the death of his father, Elder S. F. Cayce, who founded the paper in 1886. He has been untiring in his effort to publish a good clean paper, and to be of general help to the cause. The Primitive Baptist has a wide circulation in the United States, as well as in some foreign countries, and is considered a representative paper among the Baptists at large. We appreciate him for the collection, correction, arrangement, publication and distribution of a song book that has been, and will continue to be, a source of consolation and joy to all lovers of the truth, and for his labor of love in putting these songs within the reach of everyone. We appreciate him for his earnest, careful, and prayerful study of the Word of God, especially in its application to his brethren in the ministry, his kindness to the aged, the middle-aged, and especially, his kind, fatherly manner of exhorting, instructing, correcting, and encouraging the young ministers among us. Elder Cayce's ability as a defender of the cause of the Master in His vineyard has not been excelled by any man. He has always been ready, when a Goliath challenged the army of Israel, to meet the enemy without fear. He has studied to prove himself a workman, and one who should not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. The Baptist family have never been afraid or fearful of their interest when the same was placed in his hands, but like David of old, he has always come out victorious over the enemies of truth, and he has met the giants of every denomination when the Master's cause has been challenged. We have never known an elder more faithful as a pastor, nor a more able church builder. He has gone through heat and cold, rain or shine, to visit the churches of his care, always taking heed unto himself and also to the doctrine, continuing in them, thereby saving himself and those that heard him. We don't know of a servant of God that has been more virtuous, sincere, honest and true, all his life, in his deportment and dealings with his fellow man. His life is an open one, true in all respects. It would be well for his children and all that love their dear Redeemer to follow the example of Elder C. H. Cayce's life. Elder C. H. Cayce's labors as an evangelist, or traveling preacher, have been continuous during the past fifty years. He has helped to establish and constitute, on a true Bible basis, a great many churches, covering territory reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans. He has visited among the Primitive Baptist Churches in nearly all localities in the United States and many places where there were no churches. He has been well received everywhere, and his preaching has been helpful and binding our people closer together on a true Bible basis. As a peacemaker, he has been sent for many times where there was confusion or division, and his influence and wise counsel in these peace meetings and elsewhere have been of much value to bring our brethren together in the right way. We believe he has done the work of a true evangelist through the grace and help of the Lord. We would not forget to mention in these resolutions the earnest and faithful co-operation of his godly companion and dear children in all his labors. We do thank God for them and their noble labors in assisting him in all his ministerial work and in publishing and distributing our good paper and other publications, and for their hospitality and kindness to the brotherhood. Signed: Elder H. L. Golston, Chairman. Elder J. H. Keaton, Clerk. Elder J. L. Collings. Elder Leon H. Clevenger. Elder W. A. Shutt. Elder R. P. Pierce. Elder S. E. Angle. Elder Elbert Holdren. Elder G. L. Pilkington. Elder J. D. Holder. Elder J. O. Dodd. B. B. Lawler. W. R. Hammett. The church sat in conference on Thursday, January 4, 1940, at 7 p.m., when the foregoing was read and unanimously approved and adopted by the church in conference, and approved unanimously by the entire assembly, and ordered the same to be placed in the church record with a request that it be published in The Primitive Baptist as of date January 4, 1940. Elder John R. Harris, Mod. protern. L. H. Miller, Church Clerk. ELDER CAYCE'S CLOSING DISCOURSE, JAN. 7

If I should endeavor to express my feelings at this time, words would fail me. My knowledge of language is not sufficient to command words to express just what I feel. This meeting has been one of joy to me, and has brought gladness to my heart. And I trust that I am thankful for the sweet evidence of appreciation I have received and the assurance that I have had from those assembled in this meeting of their love and esteem and fellowship for poor me. This meeting began on Thursday, that day being the fiftieth anniversary of the day I made the first effort to speak in the name of the Master, and according to the arrangements and plans that were made, as you are aware, it was placed upon me to preach the opening discourse of the meeting in commemoration of that first effort. There is only one man living today that I know who was present on that occasion fifty years ago, and he was present Thursday, and he is present today. So far as my knowledge extends, there is no other person living who heard that first effort. I used the same text Thursday, as you know, that I used fifty years ago. The same doctrine that I tried to preach then, so feebly, I still endeavor to promulgate, with the ability the good Lord has seen fit to bless me with, to this good day. I realized several years ago that I had reached the top of the hill, and for several years I have realized the fact that I was going swiftly down the western slope toward the sunset of life. In my younger days, I looked forward to the noontime of life, to the blessings and joys in life, and the pleasures in life; but for several years I have not done that. The forward looking to blessings and joys in life has gradually grown less, and less, and less, so that I have come to the place now that I look forward to joys in life very little. Sometimes I look back over the road that I have traveled, and sorrows are remembered, trials are remembered, heartaches are remembered, difficulties are remembered, and they bring sadness. I think of them with grief; but sometimes I remember some of the joys along life's way, the pleasures that have been mine, the sweet things that have come my way; that brings gladness to my heart. Sometimes I try to count up the Lord's mercies and blessings to me, and I cannot enumerate them. One picture that one of the brethren drew, I will refer to. It was last night in Brother Clevenger's discourse, how that the Lord's children have their trials here, and difficulties here, and sorrows here, but their joys unending are beyond this life. He drew this picture, those of you who were present will remember: In married life, the young couple starting out with nothing, with poverty, struggling along for something better later in life. I felt that so befittingly pictured the life of this poor sinner that stands before you. My greatest and hardest struggles and trials and conflicts and battles were in my younger days. Some of you brethren who have been associated with me along these years know how true that is; but now I am living in my last days, and the Lord has so wonderfully and graciously blessed me. Sometimes when we have lived through the day, and the day is drawing to a close, the sun sets behind a cloud, the evening is gloomy and dark; but sometimes the sun sets clear, and it looks bright and shines bright until it goes behind the western hill, and then night comes. Oh, do I know how to praise my Master as I should, that, as I am coming near to the sunset and the evening of life is coming to a close, if there is a cloud in the sunset, I cannot see it. It is true that I may live several years. I do not know about that. If it is God's will to spare my life, I want to stay here, if He sees fit to bless me that I may be of some service to His little children and to His kingdom. I do not know why-I cannot understand it-but His children from different parts of the country, north, south, east, and west, come to me and write to me for advice and instruction in this matter and that, as pertains to the kingdom here, wanting advice as to how the Lord has said we should do in this particular case or that. I do not know what the experience of each one of you brethren in the ministry has been, but I do know this, in my own experience in life, sometimes when I have granted requests of that sort it was rightly used. Sometimes they have been abused, and not only have those things been abused, but they have used those things to abuse the one that was endeavoring to give them what they were asking for, in fairness, sincerity and honesty. I realize that, and I realize, too, that what few remaining days may be left to me to serve here in the vineyard of my Master that bonds and afflictions abide me. During this meeting, there has not been a minister in attendance, not one present, who has been in the service as long as I have-not one. Not many ministers among us have been. In my young days, they called me the "boy preacher," but now, sometimes, they refer to me as "old man Cayce." I realize this- that in many ways that I have served, in the days gone by, the things that I have engaged in defense of the Master's cause, I cannot do now. As some of the brethren have referred to the matter, I have met the enemies of our cause and doctrine in face to face combat; and I am not saying it boastfully, but the man has not lived in this world before whose face I have been afraid to stand in defense of the doctrine of God our Saviour, as we understand it. I am not saying that boastfully, not at all. But that man has not lived, and he is not living today; but I realize that age has crept upon me, and in some respects I have failed-my memory is not what it once was; my mind is not as active as it once was; I cannot think as quickly as I once thought; and, so, for that and other reasons, I have declined to debate any more. When I quit it, I looked around over the country-I looked the situation over, and I wondered if God would send some that could and would take up the standard, and, thank God, He has. That man there (pointing to Elder J. D. Holder) is one of them. He preached first this morning. I have realized and recognized the fact that he is not the only one-there are others. You remember this thought, here, that God ceased to send prophets to Israel of old, because of their wickedness and rebellion against Him. If we desire the Lord to send ministers in His vineyard in this age of the world, you had better be careful how you disobey Him-or better be careful not to do that, but do as He has commanded in His Word. In ancient times, God withheld the rain on account of the wickedness of His people; and in this age of the world, He may withhold the gospel rain on account of the wickedness of His people, and He has done it in some sections of the country. I wish I could admonish every young minister to be faithful and true to the trust and true to your God. You may have trials along the way; you may not know how you are to live and get through in doing what God has said do, but it is not your business to know how you will do that. It is yours to do what God said do and leave the result with Him, and He will take care of the situation. The Lord has taken care of me. I know I do not have to guess at that- I know the Lord has taken care of me, marvelously good to me, and if I am permitted to still live and grow still older, I will, more and more, be laid upon the shelf. You know they do not have much use for an old man any more anywhere. In business, they do not have any use for an old man. If you apply for a position, you are asked, "How old are you?" "I am so old." "Well, you are too old; got to have a young man." That is true in the churches. When they want a man to serve them as pastor, they want a young man that is full of life and energy and vigor; but if there has ever been a time in the history of civilization that the world needed old men, it is today. They need the conservatism of the old man in business, in the business world. We need the conservatism of an old man at the head of this nation today. Look at Germany today. An old man would not do-got to have a younger man, and he plunged the nation into ruin. Look at Russia today. The younger man at the head of that government plunged her into ruin- freedom gone, not allowed to worship God as we do here today. No matter what their religious faith was, their churches were burned and destroyed; whatever may have been their religious proclivities, their privileges were taken away and denied them- in Germany and in Russia and in every nation like them. They need a conservative man. And they need conservative men in business to hold in check, to prevent the wild, reckless way of living and conducting business affairs. We need conservative men in the church of God today to hold in check and prevent the wild and reckless going to ruin of the church of God. You may need the young man to pull up hill-you may need his strength to pull, to climb the hill; but when you get to the top of the hill you need the old man to put on the brakes to keep you from plunging into ruin or destruction. But the old men are laid on the shelf; I realize that; and let me tell you, brethren, that I am beginning to realize and to recognize something of the feeling of our old people. This precious old brother here (Brother M. B. Claggett) said just a few words to me about how he felt when he asked the church where his membership was to appoint someone else and ordain them to the office of deacon. He could not work like he used to; he was not as active as he used to be, and getting to feel like he was in the way. So many times, while my mother was yet living, she would say, "Son, I feel like I am just in the way." Sister Miller, do you feel that way-just in the way? Let me say, if I could say it and say it in the right way, we realize the fact that these old folks cannot work like they once did; they cannot labor like they once did; they cannot do the things they once did, but they are not in the way. I have never felt like one of them was in the way. Father (B. B. Lawler), you are not in the way. God bless your heart! If ever you get to the place where you do not have a home, you have got a home while I live. I would love for you to come and let me look at you. You will not be in the way as long as I have eyes to see you. As long as I have eyes to see them and look at them, and remember their prayers and the things they have done in their younger days, the old folks will not be in the way. Now I do not want to talk long-oh, yes, I do; but I won't. While Brother Collings was preaching and telling about his experience along the way, and his observation of some of the Lord's little children in their going home to the church and some of them not, I remember a circumstance that I was brought in contact with a number of years ago in Tennessee. There was a sister-I call her a sister, and I believe it is true that she was a sister in the Lord; she loved the Lord; she loved the blessed Saviour, and she loved the old church; but, on account of a feeling sense of her own unfitness and her own personal unworthiness and weakness, she never had the courage to come to the church and ask for a home there. She was stricken with a sickness unto death. She had a daughter about grown, and that daughter had a good hope in the Saviour, and just before the spirit left her body, she called the family all around her bedside and told them good-bye; and she said to them, "It is all right on the other side. Everything on the other side is bright and glorious, and I am going to be carried presently by the Lord and His angels into the heavenly world in spirit. I am not afraid about that. It is all right, and I don't want any of you to grieve for me." Then she turned to that daughter, who was standing by her bedside with tears streaming down her cheeks, and said, "Daughter, don't do like mother has done. While I am perfectly reconciled to the fact that all is glorious for me beyond death, but your poor mother dies with regret because I have not followed my Saviour and my Lord in baptism. Daughter, don't do like mother has done. The Lord has blessed you with a sweet hope in Him; for your sake, and for mother's sake, and for Jesus' sake, go, with what God has given you, to the church and deny yourself and follow your blessed Saviour, and miss what I am having to regret. Don't live as mother has lived, out of the church. I will have that to regret in my dying breath." Brother, that is something for us to think about. Today some of us who are alive and in full vigor and strength, tomorrow may find our bodies lying in the casket. We know not. "Today is the day of salvation." "If you will hear His voice, harden not your hearts." Today, while you have the opportunity, is the time to serve your Master; today, while the opportunity presents itself, is the time for you to do what God commands and requires at your hands. Now, I have had joy, sweetness, and pleasure out of this meeting. What is it worth to you? Yes, I put something into it, indeed I have, certainly I have; from different standpoints, I have put something into it. Are you sorry I did? I am not. Every moment of the time, from the beginning to this moment, has been sweet to me. Brethren, I have enjoyed having you in my home; have enjoyed seeing you surround our table; I have enjoyed seeing you eat of the things that were provided and placed on the table to satisfy your natural appetites. I did not furnish all of it; no, I did not; but let me tell you, there is some left over. We expect to eat one more meal there today. The good lady has already said, "They are not going to eat near all I have." You know, I am not afraid of you eating all I have. If you should have eaten all I had yesterday, my God has promised "You shall be supplied." And I believe my God is just as able today to send meat and bread to me, if it is His good will to do so, by a raven as it was for Him to do that for Elijah. It makes me think about (I do not know whether I ought to tell it or not, but I will) an anecdote I heard once. A poor old widow, destitute, without riches, went down before her fireplace, begging the Lord to send her something to eat. "Send me something or the poor old servant will perish." Some wicked boys, passing by, heard it, and they went and bought something and carried it there and knocked on the door, and she opened the door. They said, "Here's some provisions for you." She commenced clapping her hands. "Thank God! I begged Him to send me something." "The Lord didn't do it, we did it," "My God sent it to me if He did send it by the hand of the devil." My Lord is able. The world and the fullness thereof belong to Him, and if my God puts it in my heart to put whatever He has blessed me with in His service and I put it there, my God is able to supply again what I may need for the next day. I am willing to risk Him; are you? Are you willing to risk Him? What I have got out of this meeting is worth more than money could buy. I believe it was on yesterday-I do not remember now the circumstances, and how it came up exactly, and just how much, but I had a little money in my hand, and I believe it was that good woman that has been laboring untiringly and praying for the success of this meeting in my home-she asked me if I would take that much for what I got out of this meeting. I said if I were to sell out I would be the gainer, because what I have got out of this meeting, I would still have it, and would have the money, too. You know, you can't sell that in that way. You may sell out by disobedience. We are to receive the blessings in obedience that God has put in the pathway, and when you sell this, you sell for nothing, and you get nothing; you have lost it all, but in this there is something that is worth more than the world knows about or can comprehend. Jesus said one time, "I have meat to eat that you know not of." The Lord's little children in His kingdom and in His service have meat to eat that the world knows not of. If we could we would tell it to you to make you understand it, and realize it; there is only one way to realize it in full, and that is to obey, go in the service of God. That is the only way to know it. I have felt so unworthy for such a meeting as this to be held in commemoration of my fifty years of service. It seems I have been able to accomplish so little, and sometimes, when it seems I have been able to accomplish a little, I see so much more that needs to be done that it seems my service amounts to nothing after all. But when I think again of some of the joys along the way, and when I think of the quietude of conscience that is mine today, I would not exchange it for the world. I trust that if I still live, I may be able to say when the end comes, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Brethren, that means something-to keep the faith-that means something. Let us not deny the faith in word or deed. To keep the faith means more than to preach the truth. You may preach the truth, but deny the faith in your works. Let us live in harmony with the doctrine of God our Saviour, and then you can say, "I have kept the faith." I believe I can say that. My writings will show where I have occupied all these years-and, let me say one more thing here, and that not boastingly. There is not a man living today who can find two things which I have written on any point of the doctrine of God or the practice that God requires of His people that contradicts another thing I have said-not one-and I am not boasting about it. I do not mean by this that I have never, in any way, presented some viewpoint in regard to some particular passage of Scripture that I see now as I always did. I do not mean that. I have before now, expressed some view on some particular passage that I do not see now as I did then. At one time in my younger days I held to the idea that when the Saviour said, "If it were possible they would deceive the very elect," that it had reference to the Lord Jesus as the very elect, but, my brother, I do not see it that way now, and haven't for a long time. That very elect embraces the servants that God has chosen to be witnesses for His blessed truth that He will not suffer to be deceived and led astray by Satan or the Judaizing teachers of this world. I believe God has reserved some to Himself as witnesses for His truth that He will not suffer to be deceived, and we may say that is a remnant of His children. "There is a remnant according to," in harmony with, "the election of grace." They are God's specially chosen witnesses. Now we should prove by our life and conduct, and by our teaching, that we are His witnesses, and not let our life be smeared over with wrong doing or wrong living. The life of the servant of God, the minister of Christ, and his character and reputation are as easily soiled as is the character and reputation of a virtuous girl. They need to be careful of the way they live and the way they act, and so do we. Now I must come to a conclusion. It is a sad moment. This meeting has been sweet to me. I felt unworthy-I feel unworthy now-of the eulogy that has been placed upon me., I feel unworthy of this gathering of the Lord's servants from about twelve states. The first service, if I remember correctly, Thursday night, there was a man placed on the stand from West Virginia on the east, far in the east, and another man from the very extreme western part of the state of Kansas (this was a mistake. It was Elder J. O. Dodd from Colorado), the extreme points of the compass, brought together in this meeting, preaching together here near the center of the dividing line between them, the same glorious truths that feed our hungry hearts, here and everywhere; and from different states they have come-Ohio and Arkansas; there is the north and south yoked up here in the service of God, proclaiming the same rich truths. East, west, north and south, standing here, side by side, preaching the same glorious doctrine of God our Saviour; and then they have come from Missouri, Mississippi, and Tennessee, and from different sections of the country. What do we learn here? We learn that God's people are really one. God's family is one family. Old Baptist people are one. Brethren, how would it look now, in this late age of the world, for us to have names applied to us in this late age that have been applied to some of the other orders? For years, since the dividing of the country in what was called the Civil War (I would not call any war a Civil War. There has never been a war fought with carnal weapons but what it was an uncivil war), it was "the Church North" and "the Church South;" the "Northern Convention" and the "Southern Convention;" north this and south that; and now, after all these years, are we going to pattern after them, and say Northern Primitive Baptists and Southern Primitive Baptists? What do you think about it? As for me, I am going to tell you, please, excuse me. Our fathers considered the Baptist family, the nation over, as one family; and when they come together, as we have in a meeting like this, you can feel that oneness, you can feel that unity and drawing close together-one family; and we should have things in common and engage in the service of God and quit our foolishness, and God will pour out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to contain it. Now let me bid you farewell. I don't want to say "good-bye;" that seems too much like we won't meet any more, we won't see each other any more; that teems too much like a separation that will last always. Now we will soon be scattered to the different portions of the country, and go where our duties call us to go, separated from this place, but as we are separated from this place, we have something to fare well upon. Farewell! Farewell! Brethren, I hail you happy in the Lord. I love you for the truth's sake and for your own sake. I trust that I appreciate you. I love your sweet fellowship. I love your company. I love your association. I am glad to have had you in our humble home. I am glad to share our hospitality with you, and I ask you, when you take your journey away to go to your places and to fill your stations in life, that you let your mind and your heart and your affections still abide with us, and keep us in your mind and in your hearts and in your affections, and do not forget us in your prayers. Not only do I ask that for my poor unworthy self, but I ask that for that good companion, that good wife, who first conceived the idea of this meeting, and somehow I feel like the Lord put it in her heart, who has prayed for the meeting and for the success of it, that God's name might be honored and glorified first and above everything else in the world. Remember her in your prayers; and not only do I ask that, but brethren, will you pray for our children? Oh, will you pray for them? I believe the Lord has been good to bless them in touching their hearts with the finger of His love. I have seen some evidence of it in everyone of them. I believe the Lord has been good to them in that way, and if it could be God's will that they might have the courage this day, before this meeting is all over and we are gone, we would be glad to see some of them coming to the church and asking for a home. I have asked some of them if they had a desire to come to the church and there has been an admission that "I have sometimes felt that way;" and I want to say to you, my child, if that is your desire, there is a place here for you. The God of heaven placed the life in the soul from which that desire springs; it does not come from beneath-it does not come from there. Not only my children, but I think I have seen some evidence in some of your children, you brethren here. I believe there are children here, young folks, who love the church, whose hungry hearts have been fed by gospel preaching, whose hearts have been comforted by it; and that being so, there is a place for you in the old church. Come into the church, where you can enjoy the sweet fellowship and communion of God's children, to walk with you, hand in hand; and when you stumble and fall they will lift you up and help you to run life's journey along the way, to the praise and glory- of your Lord and Master. There is a place here for you. Farewell, If we meet no more in this world, I believe in my soul today that I will meet you over yonder. I can't say I will know you as Jesse Collings over there. I do not know about that; but if you are there, and I believe you will be, I believe I will know, and you will know, Jesus as our Elder Brother, and God as our Father, and each other as the family of God, God's family; God is the Father, and Jerusalem which is above, is the mother. They are the children of the same Father and mother; it is a divine relationship. There it will be the family of God, and there will not be one missing. We have our family reunions here, and all the children come home. I have met with some since the holidays, and asked, "Did you have a good Christmas?" "Yes, a good Christmas. All the children were at home." All the family at home. Over yonder, in glory, all the family will be at home after awhile. They will not be separated any more. Farewell songs will not be sung; good-bye will never be said. One eternal day of solid bliss and joy forever in the presence of God, and I believe all the family of God will sing over there. They can't all sing here. The Lord hasn't seen fit to give me a tongue to join you in singing the songs that you have been singing during this meeting; the Lord hasn't seen fit to give me a tongue to sing the songs of Zion here, but in the eternal world, I trust my tongue will be tuned to sing His praise and I will be permitted to join with you to sing anthems of praise to His blessed name, and there will be no discordant note sounded in that song of redemption forever and ever. Farewell, brethren. Perhaps what I have said is not appropriate, but it is the best I could do. Brother Harris, take charge.

CONCLUDING REMARKS

At the conclusion of the service, as above, an opportunity was extended for any to come forward who had a desire to live in the church and to let their desire be known, and also the privilege was extended for all to take the parting hand who had a desire to do so. Our second son, Fleming, came forward and expressed a desire for a home in the church. He said he had desired a home in the church for a long time. He was joyfully received. While the hand of fellowship was being extended to him, young Sister Adell House, daughter of Brother and Sister Homer House, came and asked for a home with us. She was also joyfully received. While extending the hand to her another young sister, Rhoda Mae Hannah, daughter of Sister House, and stepdaughter of Brother House, came forward asking for a home. She was also gladly and joyfully received. It is impossible for us to describe the joy of the meeting. As soon as possible after dismissal we all went to the water, and Elder John R. Harris buried Sister Adell beneath the yielding wave, and then we buried our precious boy and Sister Rhoda Mae beneath the yielding wave, each candidate having their preference as to who should administer the ordinance to them. On Friday, at the close of the preaching service, Sister Grace Claggett and her father, Deacon M. G. Claggett, presented letters from the Primitive Baptist Church at Newark, Ohio, and were joyfully received on their letters, and the hand of fellowship extended to them by every Old Baptist present. AH rejoiced together, some shouting praise to our Lord and Master. There was shouting on Sunday, too. The meeting will long be remembered. Surely, the Lord has been good to us. Why should we not serve Him? Who can forbear to love A God so good and kind? Sure He is worthy to be loved By me and all mankind. Seventeen ministers, besides the unworthy writer, attended the meeting, though some of them were present at only one service. We tried to preach, the best we could, Thursday morning, as others arranged. Then there were two discourses each day and night until Sunday, when the deacons had arranged for two discourses, and then the closing by the writer. The ministers present during the meeting were: Elders S. E. Angle, Waynesville, Ohio; L. H. Clevenger, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; J. L. Collings, Abilene, Texas; R. F. Pierce, Quitman, Ark.; T. C. Ford, Louisburg, Mo.; H. L. Golston, Brush Creek, Tenn.; W. A. Shutt, Nashville, Tenn.; Elbert Holdren, Syracuse, Kan.; J. II Keaton, Huntington, W. Va.; J. A. Littlejohn, Daila:., Texas; J. O. Dodd, Englewood, Colo.; G. L. Pilkington, North Little Rock, Ark.; J. D. Holder, Tupelo, Miss.; J. T. George, Little Rock, Ark.; John R. Harris, Thornton, Ark.; J. W. Guest, Rolla, Ark.; and E. W. Hargett, El Dorado, Ark. The last three are in our association. Thirteen states were represented during the meeting. Many were prevented from coming on account of the cold weather, the rain, fleet, and snow. It seemed that all who were present were glad they were here. We feel to be so poor and unworthy of the eulogy passed upon us. If we have any worthiness it is in Him who gave Himself for us, and who is, of God, "made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." We have nothing of ourselves to glory of; but we do desire to glory in the cross of Christ. Please pray the Lord to help us to live in such a way as to retain the love and respect and sweet fellowship of our brethren what few days we may have left to us here on earth; and pray the Lord to bless and sustain our dear companion who helps us so much to labor in the vineyard of the Lord; and please pray for our two boys who have come to the dear old church, that they may be enabled, by grace, to "walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they have been called;" and please pray for our other three children, that the dear Lord may, in mercy, lead them in the right way, that they may never bring reproach on their name and character, and that they may be led to follow the Lord here below. Again, please remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

Some Flowers

---January 4, 1940

Dear Brother and Sister Cayce: Since it is impossible for me to be with you at your meeting the first Sunday, I will try to represent by letter, which will, at least, let you know that I am thinking of you on this notable occasion with wishful and silent prayers for blessings and joys which only come from the merciful hands of Him whom you both love and serve so faithfully, and who has so graciously sustained you in your untiring struggle for, and defense of, the sacred cause which you have loved and held above everything else in the world. Hand in hand you have gone, through heat and cold, in trials, and tears, and often in the face of opposition and persecution. None of these things have ever moved you; neither have you counted your own lives dear unto yourselves for the glory of God. Perhaps not many who will be present on this eventful occasion will better understand the sacrifices and labors of your lives than the poor, unworthy writer. Were it possible, I would reach over the wide expanse of mountains and valleys and drop a little bunch of flowers on the sacred pulpit before you, which I would wish to bloom and cheer you until you come to say, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith, I have finished my course, I am now ready to be offered." Precious brother and sister, I trust it will be of some comfort to you to know that, though in a foreign land, your poor little brother and sister, who once shared your association and the comforts of your good home, and the joys of the dear old church there, wish to extend the hand of greeting and Christian love as you meet together in praise and service to our merciful God. And, if not asking too much, we desire that you remember us when you approach the throne of grace. May the dear Lord so manifest Himself at the meeting that it will be one never to be forgotten, is our prayer. Please remember us to the brotherhood. Your little brother, T. L. Webb.

Well Spent Life

---January 4, 1940

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.- (Psalms 23:6). In our efforts to be a true soldier of the cross and fight the good fight of faith, it is helpful to study the lives of the men of God of old and see how God cared for and delivered those who feared and obeyed Him. The quotation above was used by David, a man after God's own heart. God had chosen him for the work he did. God preserved and delivered him from many dangers, and had manifested His love and mercy in so many ways that he could proclaim, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." David felt assured that the good Shepherd that gave His life for the sheep, was his Shepherd. He could embrace the precious promise, "I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." -(John 10:28-29). Feeling this promise to be his, David could truthfully say, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." I feel sure that Elder Cayce has served and worshiped the same God that David loved so well, during the fifty years he has spent in the ministry. I trust that the God of all grace will continue to sustain, uphold, strengthen and comfort Elder Cayce, and bless him to live many more years to carry on the great work he has been engaged in, lo, these fifty years. I fear that we as Baptists do not appreciate Elder Cayce as we should. Let us scatter some flowers along the pathway he is traveling while he lives. I desire to offer this suggestion, without consulting Elder Cayce: let everyone who reads this issue of The Primitive Baptist send in one new subscriber. In hope, G. W. Lewis.

For The Trumpet Baptists

---January 18, 1940

We wish to kindly ask the Trumpet brethren to tell us if the following was all an orderly practice: On page 55 of the History of the Primitive Baptists of Texas and Oklahoma, by Elder J. S. Newman, and published by the Baptist Trumpet, then at Tioga, Texas, in 1906, we find the following: In 1863 the Concord Association met with Sugar Loaf Church on Friday before the second Sunday in September. Elder Jesse Graham preached the first sermon, who was chosen moderator, and Squire Haggard, clerk. The Association this year appointed a committee of thirteen to meet with Concord Church to try to adjust some trouble between Elder J. H. Russell and B. Payne, that had been suffered to be introduced into the association from Zion Church, in Burnett County. In 1864 the association met with Shiloh Church September 24, 25, 26. The first sermon was preached by Elder J. H. Russell. Elder Jesse Graham, moderator, and S. Haggard, clerk. On page 56, the record, of same year, says: "Before the committee met, that was appointed by this association last year, with Concord Church to settle the trouble between Elder J. H. Russell and B. Payne, Brother Payne died. To make satisfaction, the committee, however, met, and in the absence of Elder J. H. Russell, excluded him. When the association met, and the time had come, Elder J. H. Russell got up to preach the introductory-sermon, according to the order of the association, and Elder G. W. McDonald objected to Elder Russell preaching it. Elder Jesse Graham, who was moderator, called Elder McDonald to order; he, however, refused to keep order, and withdrew from the assembly, calling on all that stood with him in the exclusion of Elder Russell to follow him. The association declared McDonald and all that went with him in disorder. 'This association prays the powers that be to discharge our brother, Elder D. W. Russell, for the churches greatly need his services as a preacher, and he is a weakly man, a member of Captain Car-rington's Company, Foard's Command.' " On page 59, of the same book, we find the following record of the same Concord Association for the year 1880: "The association met with Bosque Church on Friday before the fourth Sunday in August. The first sermon was preached by Elder Jesse Graham, who was moderator, and W. B. Hedgpeth, clerk. 'We, the association, advise the churches to meet the brethren that went off from us (in 1864) and called themselves Concord Association, by messengers, at Salem Church, Coryell County, on Friday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1880.' It will be remembered that this association divided in 1864. After the division the contending parties were known as the 'Lower wing' and the 'Upper wing' of the Concord Association. Both factions, by their messengers, met at Oglesby, Coryell County, October, 1880. After both parties having confessed their wrongs, the 'Lower wing,' by motion and second, dissolved; after which, the churches that were in the 'Lower Wing' of the Concord Association, and, likely, others organized the Regular Primitive Baptist Association." Here is a case on record of a division which lasted for sixteen years, which was settled by mutual confession of wrongs and all coming back together. Please bear in mind, too, that the party who went off from the association were called the "Lower wing." Bethel Church, at Killen, was in the "Lower wing" of the Concord Association. On pages 130 and 131 we find the following history of that church: "Bethel Church was organized in Coryell County, likely in 1864 or 1865. I notice that the church was a member of the 'Lower Concord' Association in 1866, with W. C. Maples, E. Ivey and A. Walters, as messengers. It is believed that the following members were in the constitution of the church, viz., E. Ivey, Ruth Ivey, Violet Doss, A. Walters, Matilda Walters and Hannah Jeffreys. In 1870 Elder Moses H. Denman was a member of the church and likely the pastor of the church. Elder Denman, B. Ellis and M. D. Galloway were messengers to the Concord Association in 1870. Elder Denman remained a member of this church till 1874, when he was dismissed by letter, and he and Elder M. Whitely constituted Cedar Grove Church July 15, 1874. Elder Denman then joined the church by letter from Bethel Church. He died a member of Cedar Grove Church. In 1878 and 1879 Elder M. Whitely was the pastor of Bethel Church. "I have no means of knowing who served the church from 1879 to 1891. In October, 1891, Elders J. B. Downing and W. Y. Norman were called jointly to the pastoral care of the church. In 1898 Elder J. S. Newman joined the church by letter from Pilgrim Rest Church, in DeWitt County, at which time Elder A. V. Atkins was pastor of the church. In 1900 J. S. Newman was dismissed by letter. W. J. D. Bradford was ordained to the ministry August 5, 1903, by Elders A. V. Atkins, W. Y. Norman, E. R. Robinson, S. A. Paine and J. S. Newman. Elder Bradford is the present pastor of the church. The church is now at Killeen, in Bell County. The church first joined the 'Lower Concord' Association, with which it remained till the Lower and Upper Concord settled their trouble in 1880. The church was then in the constitution of Primitive Association. In 1888 the church joined the Little Flock Association, of which it is still a member." We presume the editor of the Trumpet is a member of this Bethel Church. Is he, or is he not? Elder Morgan, you said you did not know so much about the history of the Baptists. Did you, or do you, know that your church was in this trouble and settlement of the same? Do you not know that the trouble was settled by mutual confession of wrongs and a coming together? If that kind of settlement throws the whole thing in disorder, please tell us where your order is now? How about it, Brother Ball, seeing you disclaim any connection with anything of the kind, and seem to think that because our people-the Peace Baptists, as you term us-have had just that kind of settlement, that we are all in disorder. Does not the language in ((65:5) (Isaiah 65:5)) describe you brethren pretty well? Read it: "Which say, Stand by thyself, come not near me; for I am holier than thou." Would it not be much better for you brethren to get down off of your "high horse," and the brethren and churches come together and worship together as they did before the unholy war was engaged in, and before the un-called-for trouble came? If not, do you not think it would be consistent for you brethren to stay on your own side of the fence which you have put up? C. H. C.

The Book of Life

---February 1, 1940

We see an article under the above heading in The Good Samaritan of November 1, 1939, published at Vidalia, Ga., by Elder T. E. Sikes, for the Progressives. It seems to us that the sentiments contended for and set forth in that article are a radical departure from the teaching of the Scriptures and from what has been the teaching and sentiment of the great body of Primitive Baptists all along the line. To our mind it virtually denies that Christ made atonement on the cross, and virtually sets forth the principle held to by many Arminians that the atonement is made in heaven now when one accepts Christ, or when one believes on Christ as his Saviour, that then Christ makes atonement for him in heaven. True the article does not say that, but we see no real difference in this position and what is contained in and set forth by the article in the Good Samaritan. Let us examine, carefully and kindly, some things we find in that article. Here is one statement therein: In (Revelation 13)it mentions the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. This passage does not signify that the name was written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, but this book of life was that belonging to the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. If we are not mistaken about the matter, this is the position taken by the great majority of the Arminian world. Have the Primitive Baptists been wrong and the Arminians right all along the line? We are not yet ready to say so. The truth of the matter is that the teaching of this text is precisely what the writer above says it is not. The Interlinear Translation of (Revelation 13:8) reads as follows: And shall do homage to it all who dwell on the earth of whom have not been written the names of the founding of the world in the book of life of the Lamb slain. This makes the matter clear that the writing of the names was from the foundation of the world; and the names were written in the book of life; and the book of life was the book of life of the Lamb slain. He was not slain from the foundation of the world. True, it was in the mind and purpose of God that He should lay down His life, but that was not done until nearly two thousand years ago on Calvary's hill. It is an evident fact that the book of life, as here called, was and is the same as the covenant that was ordered in all things and sure. That covenant does not grow. According to the writer of the article we are objecting to, the covenant grows, for the writer has it that names are being written in that book now. He says: I love to believe that He is actually saving people today, and that our heavenly Father's ear is still open to human petitions in behalf of the salvation of sinners, and a sinner who is today born into the spiritual family, of which Christ is the head, that sinner's name is written in the Lamb's book of life. It is the divine record of the beginning of his spiritual life; he was not an heir of heaven until he was born into the spiritual family; and I do not think it is dealing fairly with truth and with divine facts, as God brings them to pass, for us to suggest that any sinner had his name recorded in the book of life, or that he had any spiritual standing in this divine family, until he is born into this family. According to this when a person is born from above, then his name is written in the book of life. If this is true, then the book grows larger and increases in size all along as persons are born into the family. This is a positive contradiction of the language found in ((Sam 23:5) (II Samuel 23:5): Although my house be not so with God: yet He hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure: for this is all my salvation, and all my desire, although He make it not to grow. Not one shall ever be added to this. The heirs of promise were all embraced in this everlasting covenant-they were named in the will, or in the covenant; and it does not grow-not one has ever been added there, and not one ever will be added. Again, David, in impersonating or representing the Lord Jesus, said: My substance was not hid from thee, when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.-((9:15) (Psalms 139:15-16). According to this language of David all the members of the mystical body of Christ were written in God's book before they had existence-" when as yet there was none of them." If they are written in the book at the time they are born into the family, then they were born into the family before they had existence, for they were written before they had existence. If David was correct in his statement, and he was correct, then they were written in the book before time was, or from the foundation of the world, before they had existence, and not when they are born again. This expression forever settles the matter, also, as to whether they were, or are, eternal children. If the doctrine of eternal children be true, then they always existed. But David says they were written in the book "when as yet there was none of them." As they were written in the book before they existed, then they did not always exist. But they were chosen in Christ, and their names written in the book of life, written in the everlasting covenant, before they existed, before time was, even from the foundation of the world. Another idea in the above last quoted language from the Good Samaritan, if we read the language correctly, is that our prayers may have something to do with the eternal salvation of poor, lost, ruined, unregenerate sinners. The writer says he loves to believe that "our heavenly Father's ear is still open to human petitions in behalf of the salvation of sinners." According to this, if we pray for the salvation of sinners, then God may save some that He would not otherwise save. If this does not make the peopling of the heavenly world depend upon what human beings do, upon their efforts and prayers, we confess that language is meaningless. It makes the eternal salvation of sinners to depend upon the efforts and the prayers of the church and preachers. If our prayers are instrumental and a help in the eternal salvation of sinners, is not our preaching also instrumental and a help in the same? If not, why not? The writer quotes the language of James, {(6) (James 5:16)} "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," and applies that to the eternal salvation of sinners. If the writer and his people, with whom he is identified, believe the statement made by James, and believe that application of the statement to be the truth and the correct application of it, why do they not unite in prayer, and bombard the courts of glory, and prevail upon the Lord to save all these wicked sinners who are in the world today, and thus put a stop to the work the devil is carrying on, and make this old world a better place in which to live? But James was not talking about the eternal salvation of sinners when he used the language quoted. He said: Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. This was to the brethren and concerned differences and troubles among them. The confession of faults one to another and praying one for another, avail much toward healing their difficulties and differences and troubles among themselves. But the promulgation and the advocating of a false doctrine will not avail anything to that end. But there is nothing in the language that even intimates that we may, by our prayers, get some saved who would otherwise be lost. The writer refers to Paul's language in (Romans 10:1), and makes it appear that Paul was praying for the eternal salvation of the people mentioned, or that he was praying that they might be regenerated. This is the position of the Arminian world. Let us here quote (Romans 10:1-3): Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. What was Paul's prayer, and for whom was he praying? Was he praying for alien sinners, that they might be born again? No; he was praying for Israel. National Israel was a type of spiritual Israel. What was the condition of these Israelites for whom the apostle was praying? They were in ignorance. They had a zeal of God. He did not say that they have a zeal for God, but a zeal of God. As the zeal they had was of God, then they had already been born of God, they were already children of God. Hence, it was too late for the apostle to be praying for them to be born again. He prayed that they might be delivered from the ignorance they were in. It might not be much out of line with the prayer of Paul for some to pray that way now for the writer of the article we are here commenting on, which was in the Good Samaritan. If we are not mistaken as to who the writer of that article is, we think he is a good man, after the way we speak of some men, and we believe he is a child of grace, but we think he is badly wrong in the sentiment he has set forth in that article. We cannot agree with him. It has never been Primitive Baptist doctrine. Advocating such doctrine has always caused trouble among the Primitive Baptists, and always will do so. And we wish to say, kindly, yet frankly, that our people cannot afford to unite with the Progressives, or to form a union with them, while they have that sort of doctrine advocated among them; for it would only mean to unite with more trouble. The Primitive Baptists have had enough trouble already, it seems to us, without doing something that would cause more. We would be glad to see all true Primitive Baptists united and living together in peace and fellowship, but that cannot be accomplished by uniting with a false doctrine. This article is written in kindness and love, we trust. May the Lord add His blessings. C. H. C.

Organs in Churches

---February 15, 1940

In the Banner-Herald for January, 1940, the main organ of the Progressive Baptists, we find an article over the signature of J. W. H., one of the editors, under the heading, "Singing in Worship with an Instrument," in which the writer makes an effort to prove that we are commanded in the New Testament to use instruments in the church service. In order that no one may have room to say or to even think, that we misrepresent the teaching of the brother in his article, we reproduce the article below, just as it appeared in the columns of that paper: After all that has been said and done about singing in worship with or without an instrument, would you be interested to know that the Bible teaches definitely that we should sing with an instrument? Brethren, upon my reputation as a scholar, I affirm positively that the Bible does teach the use of an instrument in sacred singing in the church. This statement is not based upon Old Testament teaching, but upon that which is taught in the New Testament. Singing is mentioned but twelve times in the New Testament, as follows: (Matthew 26:30); ((26) (Mark 14:26); ((25) (Acts 16:25); (Romans 15:9); (I Corinthians 14:15); (Ephesians 5:19); ((6) (Colossians 3:16); (Hebrews 2:12); ((3) (James 5:13); (Revelation 5:9,3); (15:3). The various forms of "sing" in the New Testament are translated from three separate words in the original Greek. These words are, ado, psallo, and hymneo. Corresponding words in English are, ode, psalm, and hymn. The first word, ado, means to sing an ode, or simply to sing. I am quoting Young's Analytical Concordance to the Bible and Liddell & Scott's Greek-English Lexicon, seventh edition, revised and augmented. Quoting again from the same authorities, the word, psallo, means to sing praise with a musical instrument, or to touch sharply, to pluck, pull, twitch as with the fingers in playing a stringed instrument. The word psalma in the Greek (English psalm) means "a tune played on a stringed instrument." The word, hymneo, means to hymn, or sing a hymn, to commemorate in a song. In the use of the first and third word, nothing is said about the use of an instrument. In (Matthew 26:30) and ((26) (Mark 14:26), the expression is the same in the original and in the translation, "they sang a hymn." There was no instrument there, we feel sure. In ((25) (Acts 16:25) and (Hebrews 2:12), the third word is used, hymn, and there is not the remotest possibility that an instrument was used or referred to. In the three passages in Revelation, the first word, ode, is used, and could be rendered literally as follows in the three passages respectively: They oded a new ode, they oded a new ode, they oded the ode of Moses, etc. In all human probability no instrument was used or referred to in these passages. And by the way, taking those last three passages in Revelation, it is very likely that no instruments will be used in heaven, just my opinion. In the other five passages, namely: the one word that always occurs is psallo, in one form or another. In (Romans 15:9); (I Corinthians 14:15) and ((3) (James 5:13), the word is psallo alone, and means to sing praise with an instrument. So Paul and James both told us to sing with an instrument. In (Ephesians 5:19), all three words are used in order and the first and second are repeated. So there Paul really tells us twice in that notable passage to sing praise with an instrument. In ((6) (Colossians 3:16), all three words are used and the first one repeated. So there, in that beautiful passage, Paul tells us most solemnly to admonish one another with psalms, songs sung with an instrument. Now brethren, please consider what I have written. No matter what you believe, if it is not true, you certainly ought to give it up. No matter how you feel about it, you want the truth. Jesus said some very pretty words about the truth. No matter what you have been accustomed to, if not according to truth, you ought to be willing to let the custom go. If not familiar with the Greek, please secure the services of any available Greek scholar and verify or refute my statements before you approve or condemn. If my conclusions are correct, and I affirm that they are, we may sing with or without an instrument in our worship, just as we please, and be doing the will of God. J. W. H. The first thing we wish to call attention to is the authors the writer gives as proof of his position that the apostles authorize the use of musical instruments in church service. One of the authors relied upon is Young's Analytical Concordance, a copy of which we have in our library. Here is what we find concerning Young in the Encyclopedia Britannica, ninth edition, which is given up to be as reliable authority as can be found: Young, Robert, LL.D., biblical scholar, born at Edinburg, Sept. 10, 1822, bred a printer, was superintendent of the Mission Press at Suratt (1856-61), thereafter devoting himself to the preparation, the printing and publishing at Edinburg, of a long series of meritorious books of somewhat narrow but remarkable biblical scholarship, working with unbroken industry down till his death, Oct. 14, 1889. Among his books is the laborious Analytical Concordance to the Bible, giving 311,000 references. Here we have the plain statement that Mr. Young's works are narrow. Evidently Mr. Young wished to do just as the writer of the above article from the Banner-Herald-try to find something to justify the use of musical instruments in church worship. The next is the lexicon he gives as authority. Evidently this is a small lexicon, and is not complete. We have before us Liddell & Scott's Unabridged Greek Lexicon, eighth edition. This is conceded to be the highest authority on classical Greek; and be it remembered that this is not a lexicon of New Testament Greek, But it says that psallo (primary meaning) is "to touch sharply, to pluck, pull, twitch," etc. And "II mostly of the string of musical instruments, to play a stringed instrument with the fingers, and not with the plectron." So, if the brethren propose to take this definition as authority, they should get a musical instrument with strings and pluck the strings with their fingers. It seems to us that a banjo would come more nearly meeting the situation than the organ they use. The organ is a wind instrument, and is not a psallo at all, taking the brother's own authority on the matter. But the lexicon says that it was "later, to sing to a harp." It gives this as Epic dialect, and cites (Ephesians 5:19) and (I Corinthians 14:15), the latter of which is translated, in our King James translation, "I will sing with the Spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also." Let us translate this according to the brother's contention and the definition he accepts of the word, and we would have something like this: "I will play a stringed instrument with the fingers, and not with the plectrone, with the Spirit, I will play a stringed instrument with the fingers, and not with the plectrone, with the understanding also." Put that with the first part of the verse now, "I will pray with the Spirit," etc. Now, what kind of "stuff" do you have, pray tell us? Let us here give the definition of the Greek psallo by well recognized authority on the meaning of New Testament Greek. Thayer's New Testament Greek Lexicon says: Psallo; future, psalo; a. to pluck off, to pull out; b. to cause to vibrate by touching, to twang; * * * to sing to the music of the harp; in the New Testament, to sing a hymn, to celebrate the praises of God in song, ((3) (James 5:13), in honor of God, (Ephesians 5:19); (Romans 15:9) "I will sing God's praises indeed with my whole soul stirred and borne away by the Holy Spirit, but I will also follow reason as my guide, so that what I sing may be understood alike by myself and by the listeners," (I Corinthians 14:15). The same Lexicon gives the definition of psalmos as follows: A striking, twanging; spec, a striking the chords of a musical instrument; hence a pious song, a psalm, (Ephesians 5:19); ((6) (Colossians 3:16); the praise eckei psalmon is used of one who has it in his heart to sing or recite a song of the sort, (I Corinthians 14:26); one of the songs of the book of the Old Testament which is entitled Psalmoi, ((33) (Acts 13:33); plural, the (book of) Psalms, ((44) (Luke 24:44); biblos psalmon, ((0:42) (Luke 20:42); ((0) (Acts 1:20). Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon gives the definition of psallo as follows: To move by a touch, to twitch; to touch, strike the strings or chords of an instrument; absol. to play on a stringed instrument; to sing to music; in New Testament to sing praises, (Romans 15:9); (I Corinthians 14:15); (Ephesians 5:19); ((3) (James 5:13). The same Lexicon defines psalmos as follows: Impulse, touch, of the chords of a stringed instrument; in New Testament a sacred song, psalm, (I Corinthians 14:26); (Ephesians 5:19), et al. So much for the definition of the word in the New Testament. It is clearly evident that the word psallo nor the word psalmos have no such meaning in the New Testament usage as that an instrument, either a harp or an organ, was intended to be used. If there is any such intention that a musical instrument was to be used in the worship, it is clear that it was not an organ, or a wind instrument, which an organ is, but an instrument with strings, and the strings were to be played with the fingers. Hence, you brethren do not, therefore, have Scriptural authority for the use of the organ, even if we grant that the Book authorizes the use of an instrument at all in the worship -but this we do not grant. If any such meaning is to be given, please be so kind as to inform us of a good reason why Gill, the most learned commentator since the days of the apostles, did not tell us about it in some of his writings. In his comments on the various passages referred to, Gill does not tell us that, by the use of the word psallo by the apostle, an instrument of music was meant, but he tells us that the meaning was the singing of hymns and the Psalms of David, or psalms in the Old Testament. Why did not Matthew Henry, in his Commentaries, tell us that was what was commanded by the apostles? In Matthew Henry, on ((6) (Colossians 3:16), we have this: To teach and admonish one another. This would contribute very much to our furtherance in all grace; for we sharpen ourselves by quickening others (quickenings is not used here in the primary sense, of imparting life, but in a secondary sense of stimulating, etc. -C. H. C), and improve our knowledge by communicating it for their edification. We must "admonish one another in psalms and hymns." Observe, Singing of psalms is a Gospel ordinance; -the Psalms of David, and spiritual hymns and odes, collected out of the Scripture, and suited to special occasions, instead of their lewd and profane songs in their idolatrous worship. Religious poesy seems countenanced by these expressions, and is capable of great edification. But, when we sing psalms, we make no melody unless we sing with grace in our hearts, unless we are suitably affected with what we sing, and go along in it with true devotion and understanding. Singing of psalms is a teaching ordinance as well as a praising ordinance; and we are not only to quicken and encourage ourselves, but to "teach and admonish one another," mutually excite our affections, and convey instructions. We trust our readers will consider and ponder well what is here quoted from Matthew Henry. In (3) (James 5:13) the apostle uses the word psalleto, which is the third person, singular, present tense, indicative mood of psallo, and it literally means to sing praise. In the Interlinear it is so translated, "let him sing praise." On this text Matthew Henry says: In a day of mirth and prosperity "singing psalms is very proper and seasonable." In the original it is only said, "sing" (psalleto), without the addition of psalms, or any other word. And we learn from the writings of several in the first ages of Christianity-particularly from a letter of Pliny's, and from some passages in Justin Martyr and Tertullian - that the Christians were used to sing hymns, either taken out of Scripture or of more private composure, in their worship of God. Though some have thought that St. Paul's advising both the Colossians and Ephesian to "speak to one another in psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs," means only the compositions of Scripture; the Psalms of David being distinguished in the Hebrew by Shurim, Tehillim, and Mizmorim, words that exactly answer those of the apostle. Let that be as it will, this however, we are sure of, that singing psalms is a gospel ordinance, and that our joy should be holy joy, consecrated to God. Singing is so directed to here as to shew that if any be in circumstances of mirth and prosperity, he should turn his mirth, though alone, and by himself, into this channel. Holy mirth becomes families and retirements, as well as public assemblies. Let our singing be such as to "make melody with our hearts unto the Lord," and no doubt God will be well pleased with this kind of devotion. Notice what the brother says about (Ephesians 5:19), and remember his contention is that the word psallo in the New Testament means to play on an instrument. We have shown above that the original meaning in classical Greek was to "play a stringed instrument with the fingers, and not with the plectron." Let us quote the text, now, and try it by such definition: Speaking to yourselves in psalms (psalmois) and hymns (humnois) and spiritual songs (odais), singing (hadontes) and praising (psallontes) with your heart to the Lord. Now suppose you try "speaking to yourselves in playing on a stringed instrument with your fingers," and "playing on a stringed instrument with your fingers with (or in) your heart to the Lord," and see how you get along with it! Such is not real good nonsense. Notice that the brother says: "In (6) (Colossians 3:16) all three words are used and the first one repeated." In this statement he is absolutely wrong; for psallo is not repeated. That text reads, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms (psalmois) and hymns (humnois) and spiritual songs (odais), singing (hadontes) with grace in your hearts to the Lord." There is no successfully disputing the fact that in doing what is here instructed by the use of the words psalmois, humnois and odais is all summed up in the "singing (hadontes) with grace in your hearts to the Lord." Playing a stringed instrument with the fingers is not singing; but psalmois is included in the word singing in this text by the apostle. Is it not a pity he did not have a "scholar" there to inform him better than that? Be it remembered, too, that the apostle did not say, "playing a stringed instrument with the fingers and singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord;" but he did say to sing - sing what? Psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs, and to sing them with grace in your hearts to the Lord - not with grace in your musical instruments to the Lord. The instruction is definite and specific-nothing left to vain speculation or the invention of some man's device or whim. From Neander's History, Volume 1, pages 302 and 303, we find that the worship which was brought over from the Old to the New Dispensation was the synagogue worship, and this consisted of reading the Scriptures and expounding the same. This was equivalent to reading a portion of the Old Testament, and then preaching. Of course, in the synagog worship they had only the Old Testament Scriptures. On page 304 we find this language: Church psalmody, also, passed over from the synagogue into the Christian Church. The Apostle Paul exhorts the primitive churches to sing spiritual songs. For this purpose were used the psalms of the Old Testament, and partly hymns composed expressly for this object, especially hymns of praise and of thanks to God and to Christ; such having been known to Pliny, as in customary use among the Christians of his time. In the controversies with the Unitarians, at the end of the second and the beginning of the third centuries, the hymns were appealed to, in which from early times Christ had been worshiped as God. The power of church melody on the heart was soon acknowledged; and hence such as were desirous of propagating peculiar opinions of their own, like Bardasanes or Paul of Samosata, seized upon this as an instrument well adapted to their purpose. This shows clearly that the worship which passed over from the old to the new was the synagogue worship and not the temple worship. It is a well-known fact that there was no such thing as any sort of instrument used in the synagogue worship - nothing there but prayer, the reading of the Scriptures, singing and preaching. Instruments such as harps, cymbals, etc., were used in the temple. So, also, did they, in the temple service, slay their beasts and make their offerings, sprinkling the blood of the slain beasts on the mercy seat and the vessels used in the service. If you are going to have instruments, harps, organs, etc., in your worship, then why not go all the way, and have your beasts slain and make the bloody sacrifices also? If one part of that service is done away, then the whole thing has been done away, and temple worship and service is no more, and no part of it is to be brought into the gospel church. In a foot note on page 128 of Volume 3 of Neander's History we find this statement: From the French church proceeded the use of the organ, the first musical instrument employed in the church (Catholic Church.-C. H. C). On page 439 of Philip Schaff's History of the Church we find this language: The use of organs in churches is ascribed to Pope Vitalian (657-672). Constantine Copronymos sent an organ with other presents to King Pepin of France in 767. Charlemagne received one as a present from the Caliph Haroun al Rashid, and had it put up in the cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle. The art of organ building was cultivated chiefly in Germany. Pope John VIII (872-882) requested Bishop Anno of Freising to send him an organ and an organist. The attitude of the churches toward the organ varies. It shared to some extent the fate of images, except that it never was an object of worship. The poetic legend which Raphael has immortalized by one of his master-pieces, ascribes its invention to St. Cecilia, the patron of sacred music. The Greek (Greek Catholic) church disapproves the use of organs. The Latin church (Roman Catholic) introduced it pretty generally, but not without the protest of eminent men, so that even in the Council of Trent, a motion was made, though not carried, to prohibit the organ at least in the mass. The Lutheran church retained, the Calvinistic branches rejected it, especially in Switzerland and Scotland; but in recent times the opposition has largely ceased. In the Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia, Volume 3, page 1961, we find this language: Sanction of instrumental music in worship is supposed by many to be found in (Ephesians 5:19) and ((6) (Colossians 3:16), where occurs the word psallo, which, it is alleged, means to sing with the accompaniment of a harp. But this argument would prove that it is as much a duty to play as to sing in worship. It is questionable whether, as used in the New Testament, psallo means more than to sing. But, even admitting that it retains an instrumental allusion, we may hold, with Meyer and others, that it does so only figuratively; the heart being the seat or the instrument of the action indicated. The absence of instrumental music from the worship of the church for some centuries after the apostles, and the sentiment regarding it which pervades the writings of the Fathers, are unaccountable, if in the apostolic church such music was used. It is a fact as clear as noonday, when the sun is shining in all his glory and splendor, that instrumental music was not used in the early churches, just after the days of the apostles, as well as in their day. To say that the New Testament authorizes the use of such instruments is to charge the apostles themselves with failing to do what they commanded, and to charge the early church, for several centuries, with either open rebellion or the darkest ignorance. And, furthermore, it is an admission that since the days of the apostles the Roman Catholics were the first body of people claiming to be Christians who obeyed the divine injunction. Where does one really belong who will contend for a thing which has such an admission in it? On page 491 of Volume 2 of Benedict's History of the Baptists, published in 1813 (which was before the Missionary division, you know), we find a letter written by a body of Baptists in reply to a letter they received from the Episcopalians. The Episcopalians had made a proposition to the Baptists for a union of the two bodies. The Baptists objected to such a union, whereupon the Episcopalians said it was a matter of (to put it in our own words) stubbornness on the part of the Baptists that they refused, and that there was no sound reason for such a refusal. A letter was written to the Baptists by some Episcopalian calling for their reasons for refusing to go into such a union. The letter was dated September 26, 1698. That was 241 years ago last September. The Baptists wrote a letter in reply, which was dated March 11, 1699- 241 years ago on March 11, 1940. In this letter written by the Baptists they asked the Episcopalians to show, among a number of other things, "that instruments of music are to be used in God's worship, under the New Testament." They said: These are some of the things we desire you to prove and make plain to us by the Holy Scripture. But if the case be such that some or all of them cannot be thereby proved; then the second thing necessary to our reconciliation with your church is, That you will give us clear and infallible proof from God's Holy Word, such as will bear us harmless in the last day, that our Lord Jesus Christ hath given power and authority to any man, men, convocation, or synod, to make, constitute, and set up any other laws, orders, officers, rites and ceremonies, in His Church, besides those which He hath appointed in His Holy Word; or to alter or change those, which He hath therein appointed, according as may, from time to time, to them seem convenient; and that we are bound in conscience towards God, by the authority of His Word, to yield obedience thereunto; or whether it will not be a sore reflection upon the sufficiency of the Holy Scriptures, and a high defamation of the kingly and prophetic offices of Jesus Christ, to suppose such a thing. Here we have the plain and unmistakable evidence that the Baptists would not have organs in their churches 241 years ago. It is plainly and unequivocally contrary to Baptist belief, usage, or practice to have musical instruments in their churches. They held that such was contrary to New Testament teaching, and unauthorized by the Word of God. We also see very plainly from this that they held it a violation as well as a reflection upon the Master, to practice anything the Bible does not authorize. Some of the Progressive brethren have lately been, in a way, suggesting an effort to get a reconciliation between them and our people upon the ground that "where there is no law, there is no transgression;" that a thing not expressly forbidden may be allowed and practiced. Upon that principle, we might have all the societies the world has, for they are not mentioned in the Bible. Upon that very ground (for one thing)-that they are not mentioned in the Bible-the Primitive Baptists have always rejected them and refused to fellowship them. Hence, it is conclusively true that to fellowship and use any of those things would necessarily be a departure from original Baptist principles. On pages 205 and 206 of Fifty Years Among the Baptists, by Benedict, the Baptist historian, who was with the Baptists in the time of the Missionary split, and who went with that party in the division, we find this language

(we are quoting from the edition published by Newman and Collings. Benedict wrote the book in 1859): The Introduction of the Organ among the Baptists.-This instrument, which from time immemorial has been associated with cathedral pomp and prelatical power, and has always been the peculiar favorite of great national churches, at length found its way into Baptist sanctuaries, and the first one ever employed by the denomination in this country, and probably in any other, might have been seen standing in the singing gallery of the old Baptist meeting house in Pawtucket, about forty years ago, where I then officiated as pastor; and in process of time, this dernier resort in church music was adopted by many of our societies which had formerly been distinguished for their primitive and conventicle plainness. The changes which have been experienced in the feelings of a large portion of our people has often surprised me. Staunch old Baptists in former times would as soon have tolerated the Pope of Rome in their pulpits as an organ in their galleries, and yet the instrument has gradually found its way among them, and their successors in church management, with nothing like the jars and difficulties which arose of old concerning the bass viol and smaller instruments of music. Note the expression, "dernier resort," which means "last resort, or expedient." In this expression the author admitted that it was not authorized by God's Book. Note, too, please, he wrote this in 1859, and says the first organ in a Baptist Church was forty years prior to that date, which would run back to 1819. Here was the first one placed in or used by a Baptist Church. It was one of the new measures introduced by the Fullerites in their departures. Note, also, please, that the instrument gradually found its way among the Baptists. That is the way with all heretical doctrine or practice-it starts very small, but it grows. "Their word doth eat as a canker." - (II Timothy 2:17). Cancers will grow; better kill them in their very incipency. And, please, note carefully, that "Staunch old Baptists in former times would have as soon tolerated the Pope of Rome in their pulpits as an organ in their galleries." How about you Progressive brethren in that respect? Are you like those staunch Old Baptists? Verily, not. Others of the Primitive Baptists may be ready to go "courting" with you, but this little editor is not, until you renounce that instrument of Rome and put it from you. May the Lord help us all, and enable some of His little children to "touch not, taste not, handle not." C. H. C.

Is Ours A Christian Nation?

The above question is asked on page 240 of the Minutes of the Southern Baptist Convention held at Louisville, Ky., in 1909. The question is in headletter type, and stands over the chart, which we copy below, and beside the chart we give, also, what they had under the same:

It will be observed that there are ninety squares in the picture, each square representing about one million people. At that time the estimated population of the United States was about ninety million. The first permanent settlement in the territory now known as the United States was made in 1607 by the English on the banks of the James River, in Virginia. Many of the first settlers of this country came here seeking a place of security, or a place where they could worship God in quietude, according to the dictates of their own conscience. They were endeavoring to get away from persecution. The first settlers were already "Christianized." Hence, in the first settlement of this country, if a chart should be made to represent them, they would be all white squares. But in all these years they have not "kept even." In their labors to evangelize or Christianize the world they had fallen behind fifty-eight million in 302 years. According to their own figures, counting all the white and shaded squares, there were just thirty-two million evangelized, or saved, persons in the United States in 1909, and fifty-eight million unevangelized, or unsaved. Remember that the Catholics were the first to send out missionaries to convert and to save the unregenerate, or the lost. At this rate, how long will it take these missionary fanatics to "take the world for Christ?" In the same book, on page 180, may be found this statement: "A million a month in China are dying without God." These fanatics do not know, seemingly, that God is everywhere, and that He works in the heart, and is not dependent on their money schemes to perform His work of regeneration in the heart. If they confess this, they give up their money schemes, and lose their fat jobs. "We are not as many which corrupt the word of God." The word corrupt, in that text {(II Corinthians 2:17)} is from a word which primarily means deal deceitfully with. Hence, "We are not as many which deal deceitfully with the word of God." Their problem reminds us of a problem a teacher once gave to a boy in school. The teacher said, "Johnnie, if a frog falls into a well that is fifty feet deep, and he climbs toward the top one foot each day, and falls back two feet each night, how long will it take him to climb out of the well?" The boy worked all day on the problem and still did not have the answer. So, next day the teacher required him to continue all that day working on it. At closing time the teacher asked, "Johnnie, do you have the answer to that problem yet?" The boy answered, "No, sir; but if you will furnish me with paper I think I will have him in hell by this time tomorrow." The way the missionaries seem to be progressing with their work it seems to us that in the course of time they will have this country in hell, unless divine providence intervenes and delivers us from the downward course we, as a people, are going. May the Lord deliver us. C. H. C.

Preaching and Singing Article No. 8

Our last article under the above heading was in our issue of December 7, 1939, which was our seventh article under that heading. It has not been our intention in writing these articles to wound the feelings of any of our dear brethren, yet it seems that some have taken exceptions to some of the articles written. We wish it to be understood, too, that we have no desire to be in such a work as "asserting a matter of opinion as if it were a fact, or asserting a matter of fact without due evidence." We have endeavored to give what we deem to be good reason for our objection to words in our songs which are not correct words to use. We are well aware of the fact that more latitude is allowed in poetry than in prose; but it seems reasonable to us that when better words can be used to convey the truth, it would be better to use such words. Some good brethren have seen fit to "take us to task" on some things we have written along this line. Very well; we are not writing for controversy, or to stir up strife or controversy. We have no desire to engage in a war with anyone; but our desire is to encourage the use of sound speech both in preaching and singing. Paul said to Titus ((Titus 2:7-8)), "In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned." We have received the following note from a dear brother in the ministry since our last article on this subject:

Dear Brother Cayce:

I know, as do all, that we should be very respectful to the feelings of all, and especially to our dear brethren; but I was very forcibly reminded in your recent comments on the song, "Death Is Only a Dream," of the words of Mr. A. J. Buchanan, the man who wrote the music and refrain of that song. I don't know if Mr. Buchanan is still living or not. But twenty-five years ago I was personally acquainted with him. He has been in my home many times. I have heard him sing and play that song, and used almost the exact words you did, saying that death was not a dream but a reality. Let us be kindly affectioned one toward another. We think- the writer of this penned it for our columns, but we withhold his name, as we may be mistaken about him writing it for the paper; it may have been meant for us personally. But if the writer of the music and the refrain (or chorus) said that death is not a dream, then are we to be censured for saying the same thing? No place in the Bible is death called a dream-that is, not that we remember to have seen, or that we can find. But we do find that death is called a sleep. Perhaps it is just as irreverent to say what the Bible says as to say what it does not say. If one thinks so, he does not think of God's Book as we do. We understand God's Book to teach that because of what Jesus did for His people He has made death to be only a sleep to and for them. God Himself called death a sleep. (Deuteronomy 31:16)" And the Lord said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers." And Paul said, "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." -(I Corinthians 15:51-52). And again he said, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." -((Th 4:13) (I Thessalonians 4:13-17). Sleep is not a dream; it is a reality. One rests in sleep, if the sleep is undisturbed by restless dreams. In death the Lord's children rest. Their spirits do not die; but they do die in body. The body dies and goes to the grave; and in body they sleep a sleep that is undisturbed by restless dreams. They rest from all their labors. In the morning of the resurrection they will be called forth from their graves, and will awake out of their sleep - not a dream. It will be real. Death is real-sleep is real-not a dream. The waking will be real, too; it will not be a dream. And we rejoice to believe it is and will be real-a reality. Yes, people have a legal right to sing what they please, whether it is the truth or not; but we sincerely doubt the Lord's people having a Scriptural right to either preach or sing something that does not conform to sound speech. We are glad of something, too; and that is that we have a right to call attention to matters we are sure are not according to right, even at the expense of being called a dictator. What a pity all do not consider well the instruction given in (Romans 12:3). C. H. C.

An Abomination

There are some things in the world, and some things done in the world, that are bad; and there are some things that are extremely bad-they are an abomination. Let us read ((6) (Proverbs 6:16-19): These six things doth the Lord hate; yea, seven are an abomination unto Him: a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, an heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren. Here are six things which the Lord hates. They are bad; they are detestable. A proud look is detestable. So is a lying tongue. So are hands that shed innocent blood. If there is a man running around over the country trying to injure and destroy his brother minister, he is one who would shed innocent blood. Frankly, we have no desire for a preacher to come into our section who spends a lot of his time talking derogatorily of a brother minister. It savors most too much of a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations. It looks to us too much like being swift in running to mischief. Too much along that line causes us to suspicion that perhaps he is not a really true witness. The preachers going over the country, if they are true ministers and true witnesses, should spend their time in telling of the goodness of God, and the truths of the Bible, which have a tendency to unite the Lord's children in love and fellowship. To do otherwise is to sow discord among brethren-and that is an abomination unto the Lord. We have, a few times in life, been in company with preachers who would spend much of their time in trying to turn some against another preacher. That is detestable to us, and the Lord hates it. An abomination is anything hateful, wicked, or shamefully vile; it is a hateful or shameful vice. If you have been guilty, quit it at once, if you have any respect for yourself or for that which is approved of the Lord. May the Lord deliver us from such preachers, or such persons. C. H. C. Suppose we should call you our good and worthy brother in public, and yet refuse to make appointments for you, or to recognize you, or to receive you, would you think we were acting according to (Romans 12:9) "Let love be without dissimulation?" C. H. C.

Quietly Passed Away

---March 21, 1940

Today (March 15) we are in receipt of a card from Mrs. Grace Thompson Pentecost, Tipton, Ind., saying that her father, Elder John M. Thompson, quietly passed away at midnight on March 6. She said he failed rapidly since January 1, and that when he could no longer use his pencil and reading glass he soon slipped into coma. He was past ninety years of age. As long as he was able he was active in the service. He traveled many miles among the brethren and the churches of the south, as well as other states, preaching the gospel of the grace of God. He was firm in his convictions. We have associated with him much in the years gone by. Our last time to be with him was at Indianapolis in September, 1938. He enjoyed the service much. We were together after the service in the home of Elder Earl Daily. When we bade him farewell we felt that we would never meet again in this world of trouble. We had hope then, and do yet, that we will meet in that better country beyond the river. May the Lord bless his loved ones who are left behind to weep and mourn. And may the Lord send others to fill up the ranks as the older ones are called to come up higher. We have an article in type written by him which is to appear in this issue. C. H. C.

Covenant Breakers

When we unite with the church we thereby enter into a covenant that we will attend the services of the church unless we are providentially prevented. This is equivalent to taking a solemn oath before God that we will do this. When we neglect attending the services of the church, and try to find some excuse for not being there, do we not become covenant breakers? If you will read Paul's description of the ungodly, as recorded in Rom. i., you will find that he draws an awful ugly picture of them. When we break our covenant do we not make ourselves to look much like the ungodly world? It is mighty ugly and unbecoming in the Lord's little children to do that way. Perhaps some of us can mend our ways in regard to this matter, if we will only try. Let us awake to our duty along this line. It will be a help to us to do so, and a help to the church; and our influence will be better in the community where we live; and it will be honoring to our Lord, who has done so much for us. Try this for at least a year, and see how much better you get along, if you have been breaking your covenant. C. H. C.

Memorial to Convention

---April 4, 1940

We have before us a minute of the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention at Kansas City, Mo., in 1905. On pages 42-45 appears what is termed "Tex-arkana Convention Memorial," with the Convention's answer to the same. This Texarkana meeting, from which this memorial went up to the Convention, was on March 22, 1905. From this memorial it appears that the Missionaries had been having, and were then having, some dissatisfaction in their ranks. It appears that some had become dissatisfied with the way the Convention were doing things, and the way they had been doing all along. Here is one thing the memorial says: First, we want the money and the associational basis of representation eliminated from the Constitution and a purely church basis substituted instead. * * * * There is other and greater work to do than the handling of cash, and the money basis is the lowest and most unscriptural that is possible to ask Baptists to co-operate on. We can never agree to it and would rather suffer division than to submit to it. * * * Let us impress upon your minds the fact that those who presented this memorial had been working with the Convention and the Board all along. But suddenly they have discovered that the money basis of representation is altogether unscriptural and is such a "low down" thing. Perhaps some of the trouble was as to who should handle the cash. Let it also soak into your system that the writers of this memorial say, "We would rather suffer division than submit to it." They had not divided then; but threatened a division unless the convention would change their constitution, upon which they had been operating for sixty years. The title page of the minute says this was the fiftieth session and the sixtieth year. But the Convention refused to make the change here which they demanded. The memorial also says: We object to the power put into the hands of the Boards by the Convention to appoint and remove missionaries at pleasure without giving them the right of appeal to the Convention, as has been seen in some cases; we ask that this power be taken away from the Boards of the Convention. The answer by the Convention to this was: It (the Board) reserves to itself absolutely, subject to the instructions of this Convention, the whole matter of the selection of field appointment and of missionaries. But these disgruntled fellows would submit to this no longer. They must have some power and authority as to the missionaries themselves. They have formed an association since then, and the association has a committee, and we understand that committee has the right to choose, select, and appoint missionaries to the field, and the missionary must go where the committee says go. What the difference is we are, as yet, unable to see. If we are going to "hire out" to preach, it seems to us there would be no difference whether the employer be called a "Committee" or a "Board."

It seems to us that it would be about the same to "eat the devil as to drink his broth." In the memorial the writers complained that a couple of missionaries had been dismissed, and so they said: We cannot agree to that sort of thing, and we would rather suffer division than to do it. They further say: Fifth, we attach hereto a copy of our statement of principles and methods of work. We do not ask that you adopt these in full, but send it with this communication so that you may see that we, while we ask you to concede two or three points for the sake of harmony and peace, are really conceding more than we ask you to concede. We are not asking you to make all the concessions; we are willing to meet you as brethren on half-way ground. At the same time we are stating the least we can ask of you. If you reject this at this session we shall consider that we have done our duty and shall trouble you no more. This memorial was signed by B. M. Bogard, J. B. Selman, J. K. P. Williams, J. T. Tucker, A. J. Robins, J. H. Kuykendall, and J. Y. Freeman. Let the reader observe that the parties who sent up this memorial agree to concede more than they asked the Convention to concede, so they said. The question naturally arises: Were the things they agreed to concede to Scriptural, or were they unscriptural? If they were Scriptural, then they confess that what they were holding, but which they offered to surrender, although Scriptural, they would surrender. If unscriptural, then why hold to them? If unscriptural, were they not proposing to surrender something of the devil's invention? If Scriptural, then were they not proposing to give up something from heaven in order to stay with the devil's inventions? All the above reminds us of a little couplet we heard in our boyhood days: Lord, save us, and bind us, And put us where the devil can't find us. C. H. C.

Not Their Faith

---April 4, 1940

Since our article on "The Book of Life," in our issue of February 1, it seems that the position taken by the editor of the Good Samaritan is not the position taken by the other ministers among the Progressives. From the evidence we have received we feel safe in saying that probably no other minister among them holds to that view. They all probably agree with us that the names of the Lord's children were written in the book of life before the ages of time began. We are glad that this is true, and that they are sound in the faith on this question. C. H. C.
Following Rome

---April 18, 1940

In the minutes of the Southern Baptist Convention of 1905, held at Kansas City, Mo., we find some reports of their work in different parts of the world. Beginning on page 100 we find reports of their work in Southern Mexico. On pages 103 and 104 appears a report of the Leon Field, by R. W. Hooker, M. D. Under the head of "School Work," on page 104, he says: During the month of December, Mrs. Hooker and Felippa Perez, the girl above referred to, canvassed the neighborhood in the interest of establishing a day school and secured the promise of some twenty children outside of the one or two in our congregation. In this way we are touching new homes and not only getting a chance to educate the children of our members but also taking advantage of the same powerful means the Romanists use everywhere, the educational principle, to train them up under our religious influences. Aside from what is here admitted, that they are following Romanists in her tactics, it also shows that money begged from the people under the pretense of using it to pay for preaching the gospel to the lost in order that they may be housed in glory is used to furnish the inhabitants of other countries with free schools, free medicines, free doctors, free instructions how to farm, blacksmith, and other secular matters. God pity such hypocrisy! And that, too, under the pretense of saving lost souls from eternal damnation and eternal burnings! But, note the admission, that they are "taking advantage of the same powerful means the Romanists use everywhere, the educational principle," etc. Of course, they will and do follow Rome in her inventions in these measures. Be it remembered that the first advocates of these mission measures among the Baptists said, on page 429 of the Minutes of the Philadelphia Association: It is, however, a very remarkable circumstance, that in modern missions Papal Rome has led the way. "When the Roman Pontiff," says Mosheim, "saw their ambition checked by the progress of the Reformation, which deprived them of a great part of their spiritual dominion in Europe, they turned their lordly views toward other parts of the globe." The society, which in the year 1540, took the denomination of Jesuits, or the company of Jesus, were by the Pope chiefly employed, at first in India, Japan and China, after which they spared no pains in propagating their erroneous sentiments in the West Indies and on the continent of America. There you have it! Papal Rome led the way! Jesus did not lead the way! The apostles did not lead the way! God did not authorize it! Papal Rome invented it! If their admission-the admission of these early votaries-be true, the whole thing came from hell, and the devil is the author of it! No wonder they adopt and use Rome's tactics! The whole business is from Rome, and those who are following in her means and measures are no more the church of Jesus Christ than Rome herself-and they claim that Rome is Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots, the beast spoken of in Revelation. Since they pattern so closely after Rome, if Rome is the Mother of Harlots, they must be one of the harlots which Rome is the mother of. May the Lord pity and have mercy on the poor dupes who are blindly following these missionary fanatics in the path marked out by Rome. God says to His little children who are entangled in her meshes, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." -(Revelation 18:4). C. H. John 3:8

---May 2, 1940

The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit.-(John 3:8). Brother J. M. Simmons, 1168 S. Schuyler Ave., Kankakee, Ill., has asked us to write an explanation of this text. In compliance with his request we will try to write some of the thoughts we have had in connection with the language. This is a part of the conversation our Saviour had with Nicodemus. The conversation was most certainly concerning the matter of the new birth, or being born again, or from above. The word again, in the preceding verses, primarily means from above. Hence, being born from above and being born of the Spirit mean the same thing. To be born of the Spirit is to be born from above; and to be born from above is to be born of the Spirit. The word translated wind in this text frequently means spirit, though it sometimes means wind, and is so translated here in our King James Version. The word listeth means sovereign will or pleasure. Hence the wind blows sovereignly, or where it pleases to blow. Our will or pleasure does not have a thing in this wide world to do with the blowing of the wind. It blows where it pleases, whether we like it or not. Not only does the wind blow sovereignly, where it pleases, so far as we are concerned, but it also blows when and how it pleases. It ceases to blow when it pleases to do so, and we cannot make it to blow, no matter how much we might desire to feel its enlivening breeze, especially during the hot summer days. And it blows how it pleases. If it pleases to blow in a gentle zephyr breeze, it just blows that way. If it pleases to blow in a gale, or in a tornado, it just blows that way. No doubt many would stop the blowing of the wind when it blows in the tornado or cyclone, if they could. But people have no control over the wind, or over the way, or the how, or the when, it blows. Just as the wind blows sovereignly, so the Spirit operates sovereignly-just when and where and how He pleases. As the word translated wind, in this text, is frequently translated spirit, and frequently means spirit, this text evidently means that the Spirit breathes when and where and how He pleases. If it pleases the Lord to suddenly strike one down, as He did Saul of Tarsus, He does so. If it pleases the Spirit to operate as the gentle breeze, so that one can scarcely tell a difference in his feelings, He does so. No human being can tell where the wind comes from, and no human being can tell where it goes. "So is every one that is born of the Spirit." There is something about the work of the Spirit in regeneration that no human being can tell. It may be that you can remember when you first felt to be a poor sinner in the sight of God; or it may be that you cannot tell. Whether you can tell that or not, there is one thing about it that you do not positively know-you do not certainly know that it was from the Lord. If you but knew that, then you would certainly know that you are a child of God, and you would have no more doubts to arise in your mind concerning that matter. Neither do you certainly know that the work thus done in your heart will finally land you in the glory world. If you certainly knew that, then you would no longer walk by faith, but by sight. But if you love the Lord, and love His cause, and love His service, it is because something has been done for you that you could not do for yourself. You know you have felt something, but you do not certainly know where it came from, nor where it goes to. But it caused hope to spring up in your heart, and that hope is an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast. It is our stay in and through all the troubles and trials of this life. "We love Him because He first loved us." He loved you first, and shed abroad His love in your heart, whether it was done gently and quietly, or like a torrent. It was the same love of God in your soul, whether it came upon you gradually or suddenly. And, no matter whether the Spirit operated the one way or the other, you cannot tell "whence it cometh, or whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the Spirit." It is a universal fact; there is no exception. One might say, "Show me a leaf in the forest the wind has not blown upon, and I will show you a person upon whom the Spirit of God has not operated." Very well; we reply, "Show us a leaf, or a twig, or a limb, or a tree, in the forest that has ever resisted the blowing of the wind, so that the wind has taken its everlasting flight, and will operate, or blow, upon it no more, and we will show you a sinner that has resisted the operation of the Spirit, so that the Spirit has taken His everlasting flight, and will operate upon that sinner no more." The Saviour was not talking about the universality of the operation of the Spirit, or the extent of it, but the effectuality of it. The wind blows effectually; and the Spirit operates effectually. He accomplishes that which He pleases. We are glad the Lord works sovereignly and effectually in the salvation of poor hell-deserving sinners. If it were left to the will and whims of poor sinful human beings, no one would ever be saved. It is all of His own sovereign will and mercy. And all the praise and glory are due to His matchless name. C. H. C.

Streamlined Religion

---May 2, 1940

We are in receipt of a clipping from a county paper over in Alabama containing a little article about some preachers engaged in a meeting and who have adopted what the article calls streamlined methods. This is just another and a later name for modern religious practices. The article before us says that "it is a time when the thoughts and emotions of people are keyed up to a high pitch and they are looking for things highly thrilling and sensational. To meet this propensity of folks, automobiles came out streamlined." "We believe that the phase of life lagging behind most and being slowest to pick up step with the fast age is religion." "Not all religious denominations are in the old ruts, however." "Have put the streamlined effect to their religious work." "It might be well for other denominations to catch on and adopt a few streamlined methods too. Their people-young people, especially-might like it and manifest more interest." We copy the foregoing statements from the article. The gentleman who wrote that article may not know it, but all worldly religionists have adopted streamlined methods as fast as they have been able to learn them. But there is one order of people who remain in the "old ruts," and the Lord will have some followers all along the ages who will not forsake the good old way. "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." -(Jeremiah 6:16). Some of us prefer to walk in the good old way and find rest for our souls, rather than ride in your "streamlined religion" inventions. They are not of the Lord's making. Such streamlined things are of men and devils, and are not the Lord's way. His way is one. He knew what would be for the good of His people in the beginning of the age, when He set up His kingdom, and left nothing out that would be for their good. The devil's religion has to be "improved" on and changed and new and novel methods adopted all along the line. The more streamlined methods the world invents in their religion, of course the better the world will be pleased-and the devil too. But God's children are commanded to come out from the world and to touch not such things as the world invents in religious matters. Streamlined religion! Things that are streamlined meet with less resistance. We suppose streamlined religion meets with less resistance from the world and the devil. Of course the world and the devil will not resist the things that they like and invent. But God's truth has never been loved by the world nor by the devil. We do not suppose any of the devil's folks would get mad at "streamlined religion," but they got mad at Stephen for preaching God's old-fashioned truth, and stoned him to death. Paul was a "streamlined religionist" until the Lord changed him. Then he desired the "good old way" of the Lord. So has it been in every age of the world, and we suppose it will still be that way as long as the world stands. C. H. C.

A False Claim

---May 16, 1940

We have received a letter from a brother in which he says: I heard a man preach on Sunday, February 18, who claims to be a Primitive Baptist. He said that if a church lives in peace a long time there is something wrong; and if a man does anything wrong, to just go on and do all the meanness he can. He gave this Scripture to justify what he said, "he that is guilty of the least is guilty of the whole." He also said that everybody has eternal life. The brother asks us to answer these things through The Primitive Baptist. It is very evident to us that the man who preached such heresy as the above is not a Primitive Baptist. If a church does not live in peace it is very evident that there is something wrong. How does such a sentiment as the preacher expressed compare with this language by the inspired writer, (James 3:14-18): But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descend-eth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace. From this language it seems to us that the inspired apostle classes such a claim as is made above as being a lie against the truth. Where there is strife and confusion in the church, it is evident from the teaching of the apostle, it proceeds from beneath, and is not good, but devilish. The man who brings the strife and confusion, then, is a devilish man. He makes confusion and strife instead of peace. The Lord of glory did not say, "Blessed are the trouble makers," or "blessed are the strife and confusion makers;" but He said, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." -(Matthew 5:9). If the peacemakers shall be called the children of God, what may those be called who are not peacemakers? May it not be said of them, or to them, with propriety, "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it?" -(4) (John 8:44). If there is something wrong when the church continues to live in peace, can any intelligent reason be given why the apostle would say, "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you?" -(II Corinthians 13:11). The next idea expressed, "if you do one wrong, just go on and do all the meanness you can," is also as foreign from the truth of the teaching of God's Word as hell is from heaven. The text cited does not read that way, anyhow. The apostle said, "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." -(James 2:10). The teaching is that if one transgresses, or offends in one point, he is a violator and transgressor of the law. Note the next verse: "For He that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law." Does that mean that if one commits adultery he is at liberty to kill? According to such teaching as that of the preacher, if he should step aside in one point, then he is at perfect liberty to run away with another man's wife, or to take the life of his fellow-man. We frankly say that we would not want to sleep in a room with such a man. God's instruction is, "Let him that stole steal no more." - (Ephesians 4:28). But this preacher's teaching reverses that instruction and would say, "Let him that stole steal all he can." Such doctrine is from hell and is fathered by the devil, the father of lies. "Everybody has eternal life!" It is very evident that the persons addressed in ((4) (John 8:44)) did not have eternal life. Those who have eternal life are of God; but these persons were not of God. Therefore, these persons did not have eternal life. "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." - (I John 5:12). It seems to us that such preachers as advocate such sentiments as set forth above are plainly described by the inspired Apostle Jude, in ((Jude 1:25) (Jude 1:25)): "But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves. Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core. These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever." Sure this is a dark picture for such men. May the Lord pity His poor children who are deceived by such infamous men posing as preachers. C. H. C.

Our Trip East of River

---June 6, 1940

We are late about writing a little account of our trip in Southwest Alabama, Southeast Georgia, and East Tennessee in April. The first appointment was at Ramah Church, near Banks, Ala., in the Choctaw-hatchee Association on Tuesday, March 26. Then at the following places: Antioch, Pleasant Grove (Ozark), Union, Little Vine, and Piny Grove, in the same association, and then at Mars Hill, in Harmony Association. Five brethren-Brethren S. E. Cope-land, V H. Copeland, and a Brother Heath, and Elders J. N. Bobo and H. P. Copeland-met us at Ramah, and went the round with us until the meeting at Little Vine, March 31. They returned home from there. Elder S. W. Etheredge, who made the appointments for us, stayed with us through the whole time of these appointments. Brother Copeland has already written some account of the meetings during the time he was with us. We also met and were with Elders W. T. Cook and J. D. Putman. Elder Joseph Hobbs and Elder Hall, of the Pulaski Association, were with us at Mars Hill, and so was Elder A. A. Garrett, of the Flint River Association. Elders R. D. Dodgen and J. K. Everett, of the Patsaliga Association, met with us several days. We think they left us on April 5, from Olive Grove, in the Flint River Association, to return home. At all the places, up to and including Mars Hill, they had service in the morning and afternoon, with lunch on the ground. We had the pleasure of meeting dear old Elder T. E. McGowan once more at Little Vine. He is old and feeble in body but still strong in the faith. May the Lord bless him in his latter days. From Mars Hill we filled appointments in the bounds of the Flint River Association at Shady Grove, Union (Miller), Olive Grove, Piedmont, Tired Creek, Pisgah, and Trinity. Besides these, some appointments were made at night at other places. Elder M. L. Gilbert, of Florida, met us at Piedmont on April 6, and was with us at the places named following that place. We were also with Elders A. A. Garrett, T. R. Crawford, L. Z. Folmar, R. K. Blackshear and R. G. Lewis. We had the pleasure of being in the home of each one, except Elder Lewis. From there we went to Chattanooga, Tenn., to fill appointments arranged by Brother D. M. Raulston, at Friendship, near Ringgold, Ga., Chattanooga, Lookout Valley, Walnut Grove, South Pittsburg, Sweeten's Cove, Bethlehem, and then at the Sequatchie County High School, in Dunlap, on Sunday, April 28. We met Elders J. W. Dempsey, W. R. Abernathy, H. L. Golston, M. A. Hackworth, W. J. Harwood, J. W. Clemons, and Fred Stewart. Elder Golston met us at Chattanooga, April 14, and was with us the remainder of the trip. All the meetings, throughout the entire trip, were pleasant to us, and we enjoyed some pleasant seasons with the dear saints. We do not remember making a trip that we enjoyed more, at most of the places we went. The brethren were all good and kind to us- much better than we felt to deserve. Our companion and three of the children-Fleming, Ilene, and Hartsel-were at the service at the High School in Dunlap. Wife's father was there with them. We saw him as we went into the auditorium, but did not see them, as they were in a different place. We did not have any idea of their presence until after the service was dismissed. They were within a few feet of us before we saw them, or had any idea they were nearer than Thornton, Ark. It sure was a great surprise-and we were glad to see them, of course. We spent the night with father and family, at Brownsboro, Ala., then drove home on Monday. We were glad to get back home again. Work had "piled up" much while we were away, and we have had so much to attend to, getting corners rounded up again, that we have not had the time to write about the trip. And now, we feel that what we have been able to write is hardly worth the space it will take in the paper. May the good Lord bless all those we met and with whom we had the pleasure of associating and conversing and engaging with in the sweet service of our heavenly Master. We feel to thank the good Lord for His mercies extended to us. We are doing this writing on Friday, May 31. Our regular meeting time here at home is tomorrow and next day-Saturday and Sunday. We are due to leave home Sunday at one o'clock for a long trip out west. May the Lord bless our labors. Remember us and our loved ones in your prayers, please. C. H. C.

Jeremiah 7:17-20

---June 6, 1940

Brother W. H. Dearman, of Chunky, Miss., requested us to give our views on ((7) (Jeremiah 7:17-19)). Somehow, we do not have a mind to write on the language recorded in the verses referred to. Perhaps it may be of some benefit to our readers for us to give them the benefit of Gill's comments on the language. So we give below his comments on ((7) (Jeremiah 7:17-20)). C. H. C.

THE COMMENTS

"Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Judah," etc. Not in one city only, but in all of them, and particularly the chief of them; as follows: "and in the streets of Jerusalem?" these words, with what is said next, show the reason why the prophet was forbid to pray for this people, and the Lord was so provoked with them as to cast them out of His sight; and He appeals to the prophet; and to what He saw, or which He might see; for what was done was done not in secret, but openly, in the very streets of the city; by which He might be sufficiently convinced it was but just with God to do what He determined to do with them. "The children gather wood," etc. In the fields, or out of the neighbouring forest; not little children, but young men, who were able to cut down trees, and bear and carry burdens of wood: "and the fathers kindle the fire;" take the wood of their children, lay it in order, and put fire to it; which shows that they approved of what their children did, and that which they did was by their direction and order: "and the women knead their dough;" so that every age and sex were employed in idolatrous service, which is here intended; the corruption was universal; and therefore the whole body was ripe for ruin; nor would the Lord be entreated for them: and all this preparation was, "To make cakes for the queen of heaven;" the moon, as Abarbinel; which rules by night, as the sun is the king that rules by day; and which was much worshipped by the Heathens, whom the Jews imitated. Some render it, "to the work, or workmanship, of heaven;" that is, to the whole host of heaven, sun, moon, and stars, which were worshiped in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem, ((Ki 23:5) (II Kings 23:5)), The Targum renders it, "to the star of heaven;" and Jarchi interprets it of some great star in the heaven, called the queen of heaven; and thinks that these cakes had the impress of a star upon them, see ((Amos 5:26) (Amos 5:26)); where mention is made of "Chiun, your image, the star of your god." The word "chiun" is akin to the word here translated "cakes," and thought to be explained by a star; see also (Acts 7:43); but it seems rather to be the moon, which is expressly called by Apuleius the queen of heaven; and often by others Coelestis; and Urania by the Africans, as Tertullian and Herodian affirm; as also Beltis, by Abydenus; and Baaltis, by Philo-Byblius, or Sanchoniatho; which have the signification of queen; and these cakes might have the form of the moon upon them, and be made and offered in imitation of the shew-bread: "and to pour out drink-offerings unto other gods;" not different from the queen of heaven, and the hosts thereof; for to her and them drink-offerings were poured out, (Jeremiah 44:18-19); but other gods besides the one, only, living, and true God, "that they may provoke me to anger;" not that this was their intention, but so it was eventually. "Do they provoke me to anger? saith the Lord," etc. No: He cannot be provoked to anger as men are; anger does not fall upon Him as it does on men; there is no such affection in God as there is in men, His Spirit cannot be irritated and provoked in the manner that the spirits of men may be; and though sin, and particularly idolatry, is disagreeable to Him, contrary to His nature, and repugnant to His will: yet the damage arising from it is more to men themselves than to Him; and though He sometimes does things which are like to what are done by men when they are angry, yet in reality there is not such perturbation in God as there is in men; "do they not provoke themselves to the confusion of their own faces?" the greatest hurt that is done is done to themselves; they are the sufferers in the end; they bring ruin and destruction upon themselves; and therefore have great reason to be angry with themselves, since what they do issues in their own shame and confusion. The Targum is, "do they think that they provoke me? saith the Lord; is it not for evil to themselves, that they be confounded in their works." "Therefore thus saith the Lord God," etc. Since these are their thoughts, and this is the fruit of their doings: "behold, my anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place;" like fire, to consume and destroy it; meaning Jerusalem, which was burned with fire; as an emblem of God's wrath, and an instance of His vengeance upon it, for sins; which came down in great abundance, like a storm or tempest: "upon man and upon beast;" upon beast for the sake of man, they being his property, and for his use; otherwise they are innocent, and do not deserve the wrath of God, nor are they sensible of it: "and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of your ground;" which should be blighted by nipping winds, or cut down and trampled upon by the Chaldean army: "and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched;" that is, the wrath of God shall burn like fire, and shall not cease until it has executed the whole will of God in the punishment of His people.

In August, 1939, Elder G. B. Sutherland, of Haysi, Va., asked us to write our views on (John 10:16). In the language of the Apostle Peter, to the lame man, as recorded in (Acts 3:6), we would say, "such as I have, give I thee." The text reads, "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." He had some sheep which were not of the Jewish fold. He had some people among the Gentiles, as well as among the Jews. The Jews thought the Lord's people were all among the Jews, but they were not. Jesus must bring them-His people who were among the Gentiles as well as those who were among the Jews. He could bring them the same way He brought those who were of the Jews; "they shall hear my voice." He did not say "they shall hear my words;" but "they shall hear my voice." It is by the power of His voice that poor sinners were raised out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ, and it was that way then. It has always been that way, and it will never be any other way. They are all-both Jews and Gentiles-brought into divine relationship with Him by the direct work of the Holy Spirit - by the Lord speaking directly to them, and thus raising them out of death into life. Paul said to the Ephesians- the Gentile Church at Ephesus-" And you hath He quickened." They were in a state of death before they were thus quickened; but after they were thus quickened they were not in a state of death in sin, but were alive. "The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live." -(John 5:25). The Lord saves His people among the Gentiles the same way He saves His people among the Jews. Now there is one fold and one shepherd. The Gentiles are admitted into the privileges and blessings of gospel worship and service. Under the law the oracles of God were committed to the Jews; but now the Gentiles have the blessings and privileges of gospel worship and service. This brings us to another field. We wonder if we appreciate those blessings and privileges as we should. They may be taken from us some day, as they were taken from the Jews. But we will not write on that matter here. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the good of our readers. C. H. C.

Preaching and Singing Article No. 9

In what we have written concerning the matter of unsound sentiment which we have seen in some of the songs, which our people have been accustomed to singing in some places where we have been, it has been far from us to be faultfinding. Neither have we had such a thing in mind as to find fault with any certain book. Neither have we had any desire to engage in any such thing as destructive criticism. As for any of our work or procedure in the fifty years we have been in the ministry, or the nearly thirty-five years we have been editing The Primitive Baptist, we have never felt to take offense at anyone who had the kindness to offer constructive criticism. We take it that if we use language which does not properly express the true thought, if a brother will kindly point out the mistake to us, we will take it as a favor. But it seems that if we endeavor to do a thing like that some take offense at it. But this one thing we know, according to the English language, we have not misconstrued, or placed a wrong construction on a single sentence we have called attention to. Yet we confess that we are imperfect, and that we make mistakes. Perhaps we had better not call attention to any error again in anything we find in public print, because we are imperfect ourselves. If that position be a correct one, then it would be a grave wrong for anyone to ever attempt to convince us of any error we might make, unless that person is perfect and makes no mistakes himself. For the present time we have accomplished what we desired to do, even if some have seemed to resent what we have said. If we have offended anyone we are sorry of that, but we feel an ease of conscience that we have tried to do our duty in the matter as best we knew how. We still have the right of free press under our government. But we do not have the right to use copyrighted matter without permission of the owner of the copyright. It seems to us that it is a sad day for our Zion when a man cannot call attention to an error in public print without his brethren becoming offended and saying hard things about him for it. May the Lord pity some folks. With love for the truth and righteousness we conclude our articles on this question, reserving the constitutional and Scriptural right to point out any error we see. C. H. C.

Messenger of Zion Sold

---June 6, 1940

The Messenger of Zion, which has been edited and published by Elder J. D. Shain at Madisonville, Ky., will be edited by Elder Ariel West, of Luling, Texas, in the future. We understand the paper will still be printed and mailed at Madisonville, Ky. Elder West has just taken over the work of editing the paper. We wish Elder West success in his undertaking, and trust it will be for the good of the cause of the Master. Elder West is a young man, but is well received by the Baptists where he goes, so we have learned. May the Lord bless him in his labors, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Something Different

---June 6, 1940

How would you like to have a Primitive Baptist periodical conducted along a little different line from any other? There has been such a publication-one along a different line from any other-under consideration. The editor, or the one to have it in charge, is expecting to have the printing and mailing done from our office here in Thornton. The periodical would probably be published monthly, and would be in pamphlet form of about thirty-two pages each issue. Each issue would contain one or two discourses delivered by some of our ministers-taken by a shorthand writer, and published in this periodical. In addition to one or two discourses in each issue, there would be articles written, and sometimes some discourses delivered years ago, to be copied from old books and old papers, showing thereby what the Baptists believed and taught in the years gone by. The prospective publication would be along a different line altogether from anything our people now have in the field. It would contain sermons that would be both comforting and instructive, as well as old writings that would be both comforting and instructive. The price would have to be about $1.00 a year, at least until a subscription list could be built up large enough to be self-sustaining at a lower price. We agreed to make an announcement of this in our columns, and to ask our subscribers to write us a card and say if you will place your name as a charter subscriber for such a publication. Do not send any money; but if you would like to have such a periodical, just write us a card and say, "I will be one of the charter subscribers for the new publication, to contain one or two discourses, and other good matter, each month," and sign your name with your postoffice address, and mail to us. Please do this at once, so we may have an idea about how our people feel in regard to such an important publication. We will appreciate it if our other Primitive Baptist papers will copy this article. May the Lord direct us in the way that will be for the advancement of His precious cause. C. H. C.

The Term Church

---June 20, 1940

Dear Brother Cayce: I would like for you to answer these questions through The Primitive Baptist:

1. Is the church visible or invisible?
2. Can it be said that the church consists of the saved of all the earth?
3. The Bible speaks of local churches, such as the church at Ephesus, the church at Jerusalem, etc. It speaks of the church as having been purchased by the blood of Christ. {(0:28) (Acts 20:28); (Ephesians 5:25)} Christ promised perpetuity to His church. { (Matthew 16:18)} Paul speaks of the general assembly of the church. {(Hebrews 12:23)} Does the word church mean the same in all these different places?
4. Is the word church ever applied to believers, except when they are assembled?
5. Is there any difference in the kingdom of God and the church of God?
6. How can those who believe in eternal and unconditional election consistently use the term "offered grace?" The London Confession of Faith says that the Lord freely offered unto sinners life and salvation (Chap. XII-of God's Covenant).

Martin Luther, although a Calvinist, says that the gospel is an offer of grace.
What do they mean by this? Yours in Christ, Wyoming, W. Va. J. M. Thornbury.
REMARKS

We will try to answer the questions, as best we can, without taking them up by number, singly. Sometimes the word church embraces all that Jesus died for, and so may include all the finally saved, when used in that sense. In (Ephesians 5:25-27) we are told that Christ gave Himself for the church, that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, etc. Those He gave Himself for will finally be presented to Himself without spot; they will be landed safe in glory. In (Hebrews 2:9-13) we are taught that those for whom Jesus gave Himself, those for whom He tasted death, will be brought to glory; and they are there called brethren, the church, and the children which God hath given Him. So the word church, as here used, embraces all the finally saved. But the word does not always embrace all the redeemed family; sometimes it simply refers to the local assembly of the saints who are gathered together, and united together, for their mutual benefit and for the worship and service of God. To know what the writer means by the word church, see subject under consideration. I think the Scriptures teach that the church, as a body embracing and teaching the doctrine of the Bible, will continue to exist on earth until Jesus comes again. It may become extinct in this or that locality, but it will then be moved to some other place, so that it will not become entirely extinct. We think this answers question four also; as believers may be a part of the church, even when the church is not assembled in a local body. They are in the church when the word is used to designate or describe those for whom Christ gave Himself. Sometimes the kingdom of God means the church, and sometimes the word church has reference to the kingdom as an organized body, or to the body authorized by the Lord to execute His laws, which He gave to govern in His kingdom, or church. Concerning the expression in the London Confession of Faith, we here give the interpretation placed upon that by the brethren assembled in the meeting at Fulton, Ky., in 1900: By the words of "offereth unto sinners life and salvation," etc., we do not understand that the gift of eternal life is offered to alien sinners, but should be understood as meaning the assurance or enjoyment of spiritual or divine life, as is taught in (0:30) (John 20:30-31) and (Galatians 6:7-8). The following places in the Confession describe the alien sinners as being unable to accept an offer of life: Chapter XX, Sec. 4; Chapter IX, Sec. 3; Chapter III, Sec. 6; and for further explanation of the doctrine herein set forth and from which said doctrine is deductible, see Confession, Chapter XVII, Sec. 3; Chapter XVIII, Sec. 3 and 4; Chapter X, Sec. 4; Chapter XX, Sec. 1 and 4 (II Peter 1:10-11). This is the explanation put upon that by those brethren there assembled. As to what Martin Luther said and taught in his use of that sort of expression, we cannot say, as we do not have all his writings. We have some of his works, but not all, and just now we do not find that language in the books we have containing some of his writings. We do not mean to say the expression is not in the books we have containing his writings, but we do not find it in the limited time we have to search for it now. Trust this may be of some benefit to you, Brother Thornbury, as well as to others of our readers. C. H. C.

Respecter of Persons

---July 4, 1940

Brother Pleasant Brown, of Bloomington, Ind., requested us in March, 1939, to write some in regard to the matter of God being no respecter of persons. Peter's language, recorded in (0:34) (Acts 10:34-35), is often quoted by the Arminian world to prove that one must fear God and do righteous works in order that God save him. Peter said: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him." This was said by the apostle at the house of Cornelius. Cornelius, who was a Gentile, was described "as a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway." -((0:2) (Acts 10:2). This was before the apostle went to his house. The word translated devout in this text is translated godly in (II Peter 2:9), which says, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations." Cornelius was a godly man before the preacher got there. As he was a godly man, he was a child of God. Before the apostle went to the house of Cornelius he was shown in a vision that God had a people among the Gentiles. Three days before Peter got to Cornelius he saw this vision. See ((0:9) (Acts 10:9-20). In that vision a voice from heaven said to him the third time, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." What God hath cleansed-not what God will cleanse after, or when, you go there and preach to them. When Peter got to Cornelius, and heard what Cornelius had to say about what had occurred with him four days before, and how that he had sent for him, as the angel had instructed, then Peter used the language quoted above, as recorded in ((0:34) (Acts 10:34-35). "Of a truth I perceive." This expresses the thought that he can now see plainly the truthfulness of what was shown him in the vision. It is a clear manifestation of the truth of what he had heard said in the vision-" What God hath cleansed." It was thus taught him that God had a people among the Gentiles, and the teaching confirmed by what he was here brought in contact with. "God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation," etc. People are accepted with the Lord among the Gentiles, as well as among the Jews. This Gentile, being a godly man, who feared God, and the works which he did, and his praying to God, all proved that he was accepted with God. Nationality makes no difference in this matter. Peter, as well as other Jews, thought none of God's people were to be found among the Gentiles-that God had no people only among the Jews. He is here shown and convinced that what he and other Jews had thought was wrong. If the Arminian position is right, then God is a respecter of persons. Their view in regard to the matter of being saved is that Cornelius had to hear the preacher preach, and believe and then obey that preaching in order that he become a child of God, or in order that God save him. If that position is true, then God would respect and save Cornelius for what he had done, and he would be a respecter of persons. But as God is no respecter of persons, the Arminian doctrine is wrong. God does not save sinners, or give them eternal life, as a result of what they do, or in consequence of what they do. He does not save them on certain stipulated conditions performed by them. There is a sense in which God does respect persons. Let us notice the first offerings made unto the Lord. See (Genesis 4:2-5): And Abel was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground. And in process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof. And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering: but unto Cain and to his offering He had not respect. Cain made an offering of the fruit of the ground, the labors of his own hands, his own works; but the Lord had not respect unto Cain and his offering. God did not accept such an offering. When a man offers his own works today as a ground of acceptance with the Lord, the Lord does not accept it. Abel offered the firstlings of his flock. Blood was shed in the offering which Abel made. This was a type of the offering made by the Son of God on Calvary's cross. God accepted Abel's offering-He had respect unto Abel and to his offering. Abel did not become righteous by making his offering. He did not become a child of God by making his offering, but he obtained witness by it. "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts." -Heb. xi. 4. Abel had the faith before he made the offering. Faith is a fruit of the Spirit. Hence, he was in possession of the Spirit, and was already a child of God before the offering was made. God accepted the offering, and thereby Abel obtained witness that he was a child of God. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the good of our readers. C. H. C.

Trip Northwest

---July 18, 1940

After our meeting at home on the first Sunday in June we left home at 1 o'clock to fill appointments in Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, and Iowa, as made by Elder J. Q. Jones, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and others. We arrived at Syracuse, Kansas, at 3:40 Monday afternoon, June 3. Elder Elbert Holdren met us at the train and conveyed us to his home, where we spent the night very pleasantly. His wife was not well and was not at home, just leaving a hospital a few days before and was at the home of his sister in Holly, Colorado. We had meeting at his church Tuesday and Wednesday-all day meeting both days. Elder L. E. Thompson was present at the Wednesday morning service. The meeting was pleasant each time. Sister Holdren was able to be at the services Tuesday and on Wednesday afternoon. We trust her health has much improved. On Friday a Brother Loomis conveyed us and Elder Holdren to Lamentations Junta, Colo., to the home of Elder Ralph Fry. In the afternoon he and his family and Elder Holdren and Brother Loomis went with us to Kim, where an appointment had been made for us for that night. We had a very pleasant meeting there, after which we all returned to Lamentations Junta, and spent the remainder of the night in the home of Elder Fry. Saturday morning we all went to Ordway, where we had an all-day service. Sunday morning we went to Fowler, where an all day service had been arranged at the home of Brother Fry, father of Elder Fry. After service that afternoon he conveyed us to Colorado Springs, where we had service that night, and also on Monday and Tuesday nights. This is the home of Elder Ira Fry, who is the pastor there. From Colorado Springs we went to Denver, where we had services on Wednesday and Thursday nights. Elder J. O. Dodd lives in Englewood, a suburb of Denver. We spent Wednesday night in his home. Elder A. G. Johnson, of Greely, met us here and conveyed us to Kimball, Neb., on Friday. There are but few members at Denver, but they are a faithful little band. Elder Dodd went with us to Kimball, where we had service Friday night, and both morning and afternoon Saturday and Sunday. This was their regular communion time. The meeting was pleasant and delightful. Saturday morning Elder Ira Fry came and was present the two days. Elder Fry is the pastor, and they esteem him highly. Elder Fry's son was just recovering from a very serious illness, resulting from sticking a nail in his foot. We trust he is well by this time. From Kimball we went to Cozad, Neb., where we had service on Monday night, Tuesday, and Tuesday night. Elders W. S. Craig and Leslie Henry live here. Elder Craig has been in very poor health for some time, and was not able to be out, or to attend the service. We called to see him Tuesday afternoon. We trust he may soon be restored to health, and pray the Lord's blessings may rest upon him and his family. Elder Henry was with us in each service. He is a precious and promising young gift, and is much loved by his brethren. Brother Frank Newman and wife met us at Cozad and conveyed us to Arnold, their home. We had service there two days. Elder Henry is their pastor, and was with us there. From Arnold Brother and Sister Newman conveyed us to Battle Creek, Neb., where we had service Friday night, Saturday and Sunday. This was their communion time, and the meetings were delightful. Elder J. Q. Jones met us here and conveyed us to his home in Council Bluffs, Iowa. We spent Monday visiting with him, and in the afternoon he conveyed us to Missouri Valley, where we spent a pleasant night in the home of Brother P. S. Bunch. On Tuesday and Wednesday we had all day service at Loveland (Council Bluff Church). Elder J. Q. Jones, the pastor, and Elders Vincent, G. J. Jones, A. W. Thompson, and W. A. Holmes were present here. From Loveland we were conveyed by Elder Holmes to the home of Elder Thompson, in Casey, Iowa, where we visited on Wednesday, June 26, with Elder Vincent, in the home of Elder Thompson. On Thursday we had service at Sharon Church, the home church of Elder Thompson. Elder C. M. Harris, of Marion, Ill., was on a visit to some relatives near there, and was present at the service, as also was Elder Vincent and Elder Holmes. Elder Holmes conveyed us from Sharon Church to his home in Newton, where we spent Saturday very pleasantly. An appointment had been made at Mt. Pleasant Church, near Grinnell, for us for Saturday night, by request of some of them. We had a very pleasant meeting there. On Sunday there was an all day service at Des Moines River Church, near Eldon, Iowa. It was a delightful meeting. Elder Holmes is the pastor, and was with us. Three cars, loaded with passengers, were there from Salem Association, in Illinois, among them being Elder Claud Webb's son, Brother and Sister Hopkins, Brethren Earl W. Poland and E. K. Symmonds, and Sister Ethel Byler. There were others whose names we do not now recall. After the service, Elder Holmes went with us to the home of a Sister Thompson, near Ottumwa, for supper, where we spent a few hours visiting. Then he conveyed us to Albia, where we boarded a train at 11:15 that (Sunday, June 30) night for home. We arrived in Little Rock Monday evening at 6:05, where we were met by three of our children (Florida, Fleming, and Hartsel) and Sister Grace Claggett and Sister Mildred Morrow. Sister Mildred lives in Newark, Ohio, and is here visiting Sister Grace. We arrived home safe at 8:05 that evening, and found all well as usual, for which we trust we are thankful. The trip was pleasant and delightful. The brethren were all kind and good to us, and received us heartily, and manifested that they endorsed our little efforts to speak in the name of the Master, and endorse our labors for peace in our beloved Zion. They want no new things, and are satisfied with the sweet doctrine of grace and the order of God's house, as the Master left it. The churches are small in number and somewhat far apart in miles, but we found them to be united in bonds of sweet fellowship. May heaven's richest blessings rest upon them, is our humble prayer. We trust they will remember us at the rich throne of grace. Many of them we will never meet again on earth. We trust that, by the grace and mercy of God, we shall meet them in that blessed home where sorrows and separations never come. We feel a warm fellowship in our hearts for them. C. H. C.

Lest We Forget

---July 18, 1940

Are you interested in a Primitive Baptist periodical conducted along a little different line from any other? Elder Cayce told you about such a publication being talked of in June 6 paper. A few have written us that they were interested and that they wished their name placed as a charter subscriber for such a publication; but we have not heard from near all of you. Write us at once if you approve of such a publication and if you will be a charter subscriber. I know of a fact that a number of sermons have been taken down as they were delivered from the pulpit. One or two such sermons are to be in each issue of the proposed paper - depending, of course, on the length of the sermon. Would you like to read one or two sermons each month, as well as a reprint of "long ago?" Then write us now. Will you? Yours in hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Acknowledgement of Error

---July 18, 1940

Dear Brethren Everywhere: It is with much joy and thanksgiving that I am privileged to correct an error that I (at the time of making it) was honest in. Some time in December, 1939, I wrote some of my thoughts to the Zion's Landmark on the subject of predestination and conformation. This article appeared in the January 1, 1940, issue of the Zion's Landmark. The error appeared in the eleventh paragraph, and the second clause. I was honest in my conviction that the word ordain, as it appears in that Scripture, where the apostle thus speaks, "For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them," was referring to (and that exclusively) the term walk. And, while it is true, no doubt, that 'God leads His people by His Spirit to walk in the paths of righteousness, and by the same power influences them for good, yet ordain, in the sense of this text, means prepared. When I was cited to this error by some faithful brethren, and understood the great import of it, I had a desire to write a correction, and make myself plain, lest some poor little lamb of God may mistake my error for truth and be led astray. I wish to say, ordain has reference to the term works, and not walk, in the above mentioned text; for He is our example of good works, and we should follow the great example. May God pardon error, and turn mistakes to His glory, is my prayer. T. R. Crawford. Cairo, Ga.

REMARKS

How commendable it is for us to acknowledge our mistakes when it is brought to our attention that we have made them. Dear brother, your course in this has drawn us closer to you than we ever were before. How good it would be if every one of us had the courage to acknowledge our mistakes, and how much better off we would be. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you, dear brother. Our prayer is that this will be blessed to the good of Zion. The above should have appeared sooner, but was delayed while we were away from home. We are sorry of the delay. C. H. C.

John 14:2-3

---August 1, 1940

Elder J. E. Alderman, of Stringer, Miss., requests us to give our views on (John 14:2). (John 14:2-3) read as follows: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." For the satisfaction of this dear old father in Israel we are willing to give him such as we have, and trust the same may be of some consolation and comfort to him. He is a precious old servant to us. There is a sense in which this house, or kingdom, was prepared from the foundation of the world. "Then shall the King say unto them on His right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

-(Matthew 25:34). The glory world was prepared for His children from the foundation of the world. In the Father's house are many mansions, or dwelling places. In the heavenly world the redeemed will dwell in God's love in peace, in happiness, in rest, in the presence of Jesus, their Redeemer and Saviour. But in the language of the Master here recorded we see a special place to be prepared for each one of the redeemed. "I go to prepare a place for you." He has gone to the Father in heaven to prepare a place for each of you, His children. He had each one, individually, in mind and purpose, and in His heart. He went there, Brother Alderman, to prepare a place for you, personally, individually. It was especially for you, and for each one of His children, that He went to His Father, to the Father's house, to the home in glory, to prepare a place for you, each, one of you, specially and individually. What He did for one of His children, in this respect, or in regard to this, He did for each one individually. And His promise recorded here is precious and dear to our hearts. He has gone to prepare a place for you in that home, which home was prepared from the foundation of the world; and He is coming back for you, and will take you to live with Him in that glorious home. A precious promise this is. A few more trials here, and your sorrows will end. May the sweetness of these truths comfort your heart, dear brother, and also comfort the heart of each reader, is our prayer. C. H. C.

A Great Loss

---August 1, 1940

Brother G. A. Craft, of El Dorado, Ark., was with us at our meeting the first Sunday in July. He enjoyed the service much, as we all did. It was a delightful meeting. On Monday night following our meeting he started to write a letter to us, which he did not finish. On Saturday, July 13, he passed away very suddenly, with heart trouble, and was buried on Sunday. His funeral was conducted by Elders John R. Harris and E. W. Hargett. We would have attended the funeral, but were away from home, at Atkins, Ark. The following is the letter Brother Craft wrote, as far as he got with it, which was the last writing he did on this line: El Dorado, Ark., Monday Night. Dear Brother Cayce: While reading tonight in your Editorial book, No. 2, I felt that I must write you a few lines. I have thought of writing you and Sister Cayce many times; but, realizing my poor and imperfect way, I have hesitated to do so. Yet, if the good Lord would direct my mind I would like to tell you how I appreciate your love and kindness shown this poor boy from time to time. I feel that I could never express my thankfulness. There he stopped. Brother Craft was a true and faithful member of the church. He had many friends, and will be greatly missed. We loved him much. May the good Lord bless and sustain his bereaved wife and children, and the church of his membership. C. H. C.

Isaiah 14:20

---August 1, 1940

Sister M. P. Bradford, of Primm, Tenn., requests our views of ((20) (Isaiah 14:20), which reads as follows: "Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land, and slain thy people: the seed of evildoers shall never be renowned." This prophecy was against the king of Babylon, while the Jews were in captivity there. The king was not buried as other kings; his death was not mourned as was the death of kings, usually; nor did he have the burial which kings usually had. His burial was as the burial of the poor and common people. And his family were destroyed. "The seed of evildoers shall never be renowned." That is, their renown shall not last long. Shame and disgrace is sure to follow as a result of their evil doings. These are just a few of our thoughts in connection with the language here recorded. C. H. C.

Ambassadors

---August 15, 1940

And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.-(II Corinthians 5:18-20). What all things are of God? Does that expression mean that all things which exist are of God? We think not. The all things in this verse are the same all things which are mentioned in (II Corinthians 5:17): "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." The same all things which are become new are of God; and then the apostle says, "who hath reconciled us to Himself." "Hath reconciled" is in the past tense; it is something which has already been done. No part of that work of reconciling us to Himself is to be accomplished in the future, either by what we do, or by what the church does, or by what the sinner does. It has already been accomplished; it has been finished; it has been completed. This work was fully accomplished-fully done-by Jesus Christ-not by Jesus Christ and the preacher; not by Jesus Christ and the sinner; not by Jesus Christ and the church; not by Jesus Christ and any society or set of men under heaven-but by Jesus Christ alone. Then He "hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation." The ministry of reconciliation is the work of a servant, in the sense of an ambassador, for he says we "are ambassadors." It is, therefore, necessarily true that the work of the minister, or of the ministry, has no part in the work of reconciling. That has already been done; God has already "reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ." Now, having already done this, He gives to men, of His own choosing and calling, the ministry of reconciliation. Their work is to tell what the Lord has already done, which is "that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself." God was manifest in the flesh; Christ was God manifest in the flesh. God accomplished the work of reconciling His people unto Himself. He did that work in Christ. He did not impute their trespasses unto them. Their sins were not charged to them. Their trespasses were imputed to Christ. Their sins were charged to Him, for He was their surety. As He was their surety, He took their law place. He was responsible for all their transgressions, all their sins. They were all imputed to Him; they were all charged to Him. As such, He met all the demands of the law for them and in their stead. When the demands of the law were thus met, the just and righteous law of God was satisfied, and God was satisfied; and thus He reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ. No wonder, then, this same apostle could, and did say: "For if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life." -(Romans 5:10). In the original language the expression, being reconciled, is in the past tense; and in our present day English it strictly means "having been reconciled." Now, God having done this, He hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation-that is, He "hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation." He has not committed unto us the - work of reconciliation, but the word of it. He has placed upon somebody the duty and the obligation to tell the news of what the Lord has done. The word, of reconciliation means the news of it-tell it, and tell about it; tell what the Lord has done. To do this is to proclaim glad tidings; it is to tell the good news. It is to tell the Lord's humble poor, those for whom Jesus laid down His life, that He has made perfect and full and complete satisfaction for all their sins; they have been reconciled to God by Jesus Christ. Having been reconciled to God by Jesus Christ, He having met all the demands of the law for them, and the law having been fully satisfied, they are sure to finally enjoy all the bliss and glory of the heavenly world. This all being true, now "we are ambassadors for Christ." It is not the business or work of an ambassador to persuade persons to cease to be citizens and subjects of one country and to become citizens or subjects of another country, or a foreign country. If the United States should have an ambassador in Germany, or in any other foreign country, who should begin to endeavor to persuade the subjects of that government to renounce allegiance to that country and to become subjects of the United States, not only would that foreign government send him out of that country immediately, but he would be immediately recalled by the United States government. That is not the work or business of an ambassador. "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us." The Lord sent us to you; we are messengers whom He has sent; and He sent us to you. The work we are to do is to beseech you, plead with you, to persuade you-not to persuade you as aliens, to cease to be citizens and subjects of Satan in his kingdom, and to become citizens and subjects of the Lord's kingdom, or to become children of God; for the people to whom these ambassadors were sent were already children of God. They were sent to the Corinthian brethren, not to the aliens in that country, or in any other country. In this letter the apostle wrote to "the church of God which is at Corinth, with all the saints which are in all Achaia." - (II Corinthians 1:1). The Lord sent them as ambassadors to His own people who are dwelling here below, in a foreign country. This country is not their home; their home is in heaven, and they are fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God. But some of them had been deluded, and, so, were divided. "Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ." -(I Corinthians 1:12). They were not reconciled to God-that is, some of them were not; for they claimed that they were of Paul, or Apollos, or of Cephas. They claimed that the preacher had something to do with their being saved, or being made children of God. They did not say, "I am for" the preacher, but "I am of" the preacher. To be of Paul is one thing, and to be for Paul is another thing. They are two different things entirely. One may be for England in the present conflict between that country and Germany, and yet be not of England. If the Corinthians were of Paul, then they should be baptized in the name of Paul. They were not baptized in the name of Paul, but in the name of the Lord-in the name of the Trinity. Hence, the apostle, as an ambassador sent of God, would beseech them to be reconciled to God- to give up the false notion or idea that the preacher or the church, or society, or any set of men, or their own doings, had anything in the world to do with their eternal salvation, or had anything in the world to do with their birth from above, or to do with their sins being removed. "Be ye reconciled to God." Be satisfied with what He has done for you. Do not be trying to do, or trying to get done, what the Lord has already accomplished for you in the finished work of the crucified and risen Redeemer. If all the Lord's children were reconciled to God, were satisfied with the Lord's work, what He has done, and what He commands His children to do, they would stop the work many of them are trying to engage in, in "saving souls," and trying to "take the world for Christ," trying to help sinners to be born again, and would be coming home to the Old Baptist Church; and then they would be busy doing what the Lord has commanded to be done in His church by His children. They would be behaving themselves in the church of God, which is His body, the pillar and ground of the truth. They would be enjoying His approving smiles, and peace and fellowship would reign throughout the borders of Zion, and the world would be a better place in which to live. May the good Lord help us to "be reconciled to God." C. H. C.

Which

---August 15, 1940

Which is the "biggest" -a preacher who says he does not want a certain other man to preach at his church, or the church? Which should be the boss- the preacher, or the church? Does the church belong to the preacher? Or, is the preacher supposed to belong to the church? Please read (II Corinthians 4:5). C. H. C.

Remarks to Emerson McAfee

August 15, 1940

It is a Bible truth that there is a warfare which continues in the child of God as long as he shall live in this world, for the plain and Scriptural reason that in regeneration he is made partaker of the divine nature, as Brother McAfee says, and the old sinful nature is not removed, or taken out of him. But he will not have that old sinful nature when the body is brought forth from the grave in the resurrection morning. Glad to hear from you, Brother McAfee. C. H. C.

John 1:11-13

---September 5, 1940

He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.-(John 1:11-13). (John 1:11-12) of the above quotation are frequently used by the Arminian world to try to prove that one must believe on the Lord in order to be born again, or in order to become a child of God. They always stop their quoting with the expression, "even to them that believe on His name." If that were the end of the sentence their argument would be very plausible. But the writer continues the sentence by saying, "which were born," etc. The word believe is in the present tense, denoting present time. That is, those who are believing now, in the present time. The expression were born is in the past tense, denoting something which was done in time past; something that was done in past time-not something done in the present time. They were born at some time in the past, and are now believing, at the present time. There is not a man in the whole wide world who can take that text and analyze it, or parse it, or diagram it, or treat it any way in the world according to the rules of language, and make it appear that believe, in the present tense, precedes, or comes before, were born, in the past tense. The birth is first; it comes before believing. They were first born of God, then they believed on His name; and then He gave them power to become the sons of God. But the power to become sons of God must, necessarily, be in some other sense than becoming sons by birth, for the plain and simple reason that they were already born of God, and they were, therefore, already sons by birth. Hence, it must, necessarily, be true that persons are first born of God -and this is of the sovereign will and work of God, without any condition or work on the part of the person-and then they believe on Him; and then He gives them power to become the sons of God in a manifest sense, by rendering obedience to Him as their heavenly Father. If any man will take that language and prove by it that belief precedes the birth, we will join his church, and will preach for them the remainder of our few days on earth and not charge one penny for it. C. H. C.

Point Remove-New Hope Association

---September 5, 1940

Brother R. J. Taylor and Elder E. W. Hargett, with two other brethren, of El Dorado, came to our home on Thursday, August 15, and took us in the car with them to the home of Elder J. H. O'Neal, of Atkins, Ark., where we spent the night pleasantly. Friday morning we took Elder O'Neal in the car with us to the Point Remove-New Hope Association. The meeting was held with Little Flock Church, a few miles west of Paris. Elder J. H. O'Neal and Elder J. L. McClellan are their home ministers, and were both at the meeting. Elder McClellan was re-elected moderator, and served efficiently. The visiting ministers were: Elders J. F. Autry and Lewis N. Barrow, of Mena, Ark.; G. P. Neisler, Abbott, Ark.; D. W. Witt, Mansfield, Ark.; E. W. Hargett, El Dorado, Ark.; G. D. Owens, Olio, Ark.; M. A. Norman, Oden, Ark., and C. H. Cayce. The introductory sermon was preached by Elder McClellan. The preaching was all a unit, from start to finish. Not a discordant note was heard. Though the weather was not good on Saturday, on account of rain, yet the people were well cared for, and every service was pleasant and delightful. The meeting will be long remembered, we are sure. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon those who so freely and pleasantly cared for the people, and upon those who were in attendance, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Editorial Writings

---September 5, 1940

Volume six of our Editorial Writings will soon be ready to send out, provided there is no unforeseen accident to delay the work. The printing has all been done, and we are now at work on the binding of the books. This volume is larger than any of the previous volumes, it containing 582 pages. On account of the increase in cost of production we may have to sell this volume at a little better price than the previous volumes. The wage and hour law hampers us in our work, and makes the cost higher than it would be. The number of hours we can work our employees is limited, and we do not have work to employ any more experienced workers, and learners are an expense and are in the way. Hence, we have to employ only such as can produce the work. Notice will be given through our columns as soon as the books are ready to mail out. C. H. C.

Mountain Springs Association

---September 19, 1940

We attended the Mountain Springs Association, held with Fullers Chapel Church, North Little Rock, Ark., the first Sunday in September, beginning on Friday before. The following named visiting ministers were in attendance: J. L. McClellan, Ozark, Ark.; W. A. Bishop, Jackson, Tenn.; W. C. Moak, Memphis, Tenn.; S. E. Angle, Waynesville, Ohio; James Bibler, Newark, Ohio; John R. Harris, Thornton, Ark.; A. H. Garner, Ruston, La.; W. H. Eubanks, Poplar Grove, Ark.; H. E. Black, Merigold, Miss.; J. H. O'Neal, Atkins, Ark.; C. M. Harris, Marion, I11.; E. L. Cur-neal, Fairfield, I11. Their home ministers in attendance were: E. N. Crider, Quitman, Ark.; B. Isaacs, Rose Bud, Ark.; J. L. Pilkington, North Little Rock, Ark.; L. G. Montgomery, Bee Branch, Ark.; J. T. George, North Little Rock, Ark.; F. M. Russell, Heber Springs, Ark.; S. J. Hall, Enola, Ark.; R. F. Pierce, Quitman, Ark. The preaching was all a unit, a perfect chain, all linked together, from the start to the finish. No quarreling or mote hunting was heard by us throughout the meeting, and the Lord blessed the brethren who occupied the stand from time to time to speak to the comfort and benefit of His children and to the glory of His name. During the meeting three were received by experience, one by letter, and three restored to the fellowship of the church. It was a wonderful meeting, and we are sure it will be long remembered by those present. May the Lord be praised for His wonderful blessings upon the children of men. C. H. C.

Salem Association

---September 19, 1940

We had the privilege of attending the Salem Association once more. The meeting was held with Mt. Pleasant Church, near Waltreak, Ark., beginning on Friday before the second Sunday in September, and closing on Sunday about noon. The visiting ministers present were: R. M. Fowler, Tribby, Okla.; A. D. West, Ada, Okla.; J. L. McClellan, Ozark, Ark.; James Bibler, Newark, Ohio; H. E. Black, Merigold, Miss. Their home ministers present were: D. W. Witt, Mansfield, Ark.; G. D. Owens, Olio, Ark.; M. A. Norman, Oden, Ark.; G. P. Neisler, Abbott, Ark. This was another wonderful meeting. We do not have language to describe it. The Lord blessed each one who was appointed to preach to speak in such a way as to comfort, encourage, and instruct His humble poor, and to the glory of His blessed name. His divine presence was manifested all during the meeting, and all were happy and rejoicing in the Lord. Nine willing ones came forward during the meeting, asking for a home and a resting place in the church. They were joyfully and gladly received. Each one expressed a feeling sense of unworthiness, but as having a love for the church, and a desire to follow the Saviour in baptism. The meeting was well cared for. May the richest blessings of heaven rest upon each one we met at the meeting, is our prayer. Just as we go to press, we learn that three more joined at the water Sunday afternoon. C. H. C.

Sugar Creek Association

---September 19, 1940

We left home on Thursday, August 22, in company with Brother L. H. Miller and wife, and went to Ozark, Ark., where we spent the night in the good home of Elder J. L. McClellan. On Friday morning we took him with us and went to the Sugar Creek Association, near Rogers, Ark., which association was held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The following ministers of that association were present: O. E. Coones, G. W. Reed, and T. J. Crist. Elder Reed preached the introductory discourse. The following named visiting ministers were present: O. E. O'Dell, Centralia, Okla.; D. F. Coones, Lebanon, Mo.; Tom Scoggins, Springfield, Mo.; J. L. McClellan, Ozark, Ark.; O. M. Cummings, Oklahoma City, Okla.; W. Y. Haire, Springfield, Mo.; T. A. Parsley, Lead Hill, Ark.; J. F. Autry, Mena, Ark., and the writer. Each minister present filled the stand at some time during the meeting, and the Lord was good to each one. It was a pleasant and delightful meeting all the way through. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." May the richest blessings of heaven rest upon each one present, and upon each home represented, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Went Back To Trumpet

---October 3, 1940

Not long ago Elder L. R. Huckaby, of Mena, Ark., left the Trumpet folks and came to our people at New Prospect Church, Board Camp, Ark., and then moved his membership to Mena. While he was with our people his young son joined the church and was baptized by Elder Huckaby. But he attended the Rich Mountain Association, which we think met on Friday before the fourth Sunday in August. During that meeting he went back to the Trumpet Baptists. Three writers had something to say about it in the last issue of the Trumpet. We copy the following paragraph from an article written by Elder Huckaby's daughter, in that paper of September 5, 1940: Saturday morning Elder L. N. Faught introduced service, followed by Elder Monroe Denton, who was blessed to preach to our comfort for over an hour, after which shouts of praises could be heard when my precious father, Elder L. R. Huckaby, and my brother Addison, came begging for forgiveness for joining and affiliating with the Peace Baptists. God alone knows the joy we felt to be re-united once more. Mother, Laura, and I remained with what we deem the true order, and constantly prayed that we may all be again re-united this side of heaven; and those prayers were answered when we saw daddy lead little Billy into the beautiful Ouachita River Sunday morning and administer that sacred ordinance of baptism. Billy is our baby brother, whom daddy had formerly baptized into the Peace Baptist Church. Poor Billy! One or the other of the times that he was led by his father and laid beneath the yielding waves, he was led by his daddy into a solemn mockery! Wonder if daddy does not feel a glow of heavenly glory in his heart for thus leading his trusting child! But the reader can see the name that they give our people. In the same paper Elder J. M. Denton calls us the "peace" or consolidated Baptists. The writers in that paper frequently refer to us as the Peace Baptists. As they claim to be the opposite sort of Baptists, we suppose they are not Peace Baptists. What is the meaning of the word peace? Webster gives this meaning of the word: A state of quiet or tranquility; freedom from disturbance or agitation; calm; repose; specifically, 1. Public quiet, order and security; public tranquility and obedience to law. Hence, that public order and security which is commanded by the laws of a particular sovereign, lord, or superior, etc. 2. Harmony or concord between individuals; freedom from personal strife or quarrels, etc. As they accuse us of being Peace Baptists the foregoing is the condition they accuse us of being in, and we would be grieved to deny the charge or accusation. Evidently they accuse us in the epithet of being in obedience to law, and in a state of quiet or tranquility. Of course they, thereby, lay claim to be in an opposite state or condition. Tumultuous is an opposite to peace, of course. Webster tells us that word means: Full of, characterized by, or conducted with, tumult or uproarious disorder; turbulent; as, a tumultuous assembly or meeting. 2. Agitated, as with conflicting passions; disturbed. Synonyms of tumultuous are: Disorderly, irregular, noisy, confused, turbulent, violent, agitated, boisterous, lawless, riotous. Synonyms are words of similar meaning. But, as peace means "public tranquility and obedience to law," and as they do not claim to be Peace Baptists, and say that we are Peace Baptists, then we are in tranquility and obedience to law. It, therefore, follows that they must be a lawless set. Webster tells us that lawless means: Without law; not based on, or regulated by law; having no laws. Not restrained or controlled by the law of morality or society; unruly; disorderly; licentious; sometimes, illegal. We have been aware, for some time, that in some measure this was their condition and conduct-some of them-but they have unwittingly admitted it. May the Lord open the eyes of His humble poor who are deluded by some self-willed leaders, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

South Arkansas Association

---October 3, 1940

Our association (the South Arkansas) met with Harmony Church, Bradley County, Ark., on Friday morning, September 13, and closed on Sunday, September 15. Elder W. H. Lee was appointed to preach the introductory sermon, but was delayed in getting there, on account of not being well. After the people assembled, Elder John R. Harris, of Thornton, was appointed to preach the introductory, which he did, to the satisfaction of the hearers. The Lord was good to him, and blessed him to preach to the comfort of those present. There were eight visiting ministers present during the meeting, as follows: Leslie Henry, Cozad, Nebr.; D. W. Witt, Mansfield, Ark.; H. E. Black, Merigold, Miss.; W. E. Wright, Alma, Ill.; J. H. O'Neal, Atkins, Ark.; G. P. Neisler, Abbott, Ark.; A. D. West, Ada, Okla.; R. M. Fowler, Tribbey, Okla. The home ministers present were: John R. Harris, Thornton, Ark.; W. H. Lee, Donaldson, Ark.; and the writer. The Lord wonderfully blessed each one as he came to fill his place in the preaching arrangements, and they were enabled to speak in a way to comfort and instruct the Lord's humble poor, and to the glory of His name. Sweet peace and fellowship abounded. We do not think we ever witnessed a meeting more universally enjoyed by the people present. One dear brother came forward during the meeting and asked for a home with the church, and he was gladly and joyfully received. Elder Harris administered the ordinance of baptism on Sunday afternoon. May the Lord be praised for His wonderful blessings. The next session of this association is appointed to be held with Cane Creek Church, in Thornton, which will be the one hundredth annual session. The association agreed that it be a four days meeting if the church desired to have it so. At present it is the mind of the church to hold the meeting for four days. We wish to celebrate the centennial meeting at that time. We desire to have a large attendance at that meeting. Begin now to lay your plans and get ready to come. May the Lord spare us to see that time, and bless us then to have a wonderful meeting, and to enjoy His blessed felt presence. C. H. C.

Hard on "Hardshells"

---October 17, 1940

We have received a copy of a paper published in Little Rock, called the American Baptist, of July 15, 1940, on the front page of which appears an article under the heading, "Mo. Minister Uses as Subject, 'Hard on Hardshells,'" by Elder Max Pendley, of Southwest City, Mo. If we may be excused for calling him such, we will say that the gentleman certainly does manifest anything else but a Christian spirit. Nobody made any attack on him, and no personalities were used by the writers whom he so freely attempts to abuse in his article. Note the following: Is salvation conditional? As I write these lines I have before me a paper called The Primitive Baptist, in which I find an abstract of principles. Article four states that the election of saints is unconditional. This is contrary to the teaching of God's Word, and if believed, would damn souls. Not only is salvation conditional, but every promise in God's Word is conditional. (II Corinthians 1:20) says, "For all the promises of God in Him are yea, and in Him (Christ) Amen, unto the glory of God by us." There you are! All those who believe that the election of the saints is unconditional are doomed to eternal damnation, according to this man. And, according to that sort of logic, or that sort of reason, no one can be saved in glory unless he believes as this man does. If that is not real "narrowness," we confess that there is no such thing. He says that every promise in God's Word is conditional, and then quotes a text which proves to the very contrary. (II Corinthians 1:19) says, "For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even my me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea, and nay, but in Him was yea." Then (II Corinthians 1:20): "For all the promises of God in Him are yea, and in Him Amen, unto the glory of God by us." If they are yea and Amen, as the inspired writer says, then they are not all conditional. God made promise unto Noah that He would never again destroy the earth by water. Was that a conditional promise? If it depended upon the obedience or faithfulness of Noah or his offspring for its fulfillment, we know there would have been another flood long before this time. God said by Isaiah ((4:9) (Isaiah 54:9-10)), "For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." Here God has told us that the covenant of His peace is as His covenant with Noah. The promise made unto Noah that He would never again destroy the earth by water was an unconditional promise. And He said "this is as that." Hence, this is also an unconditional promise or covenant; and this covenant was the covenant of His peace. This means that there is, and was, an unconditional covenant of His peace. The gentleman is wrong in his statement that every promise in God's word is conditional. It is true that God has made conditional promises; but that does not prove that every promise He made is conditional. Here is a conditional promise: "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land: but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." -(9) (Isaiah 1:19-20). But there was no promise of eternal life in this. This promise was made to Israel - persons who were already God's people-a living people. If they were willing and obedient, they should eat the good of the land; but if they refused and rebelled, they should be devoured by the sword. The gentleman also says: In this same paper, page 24, column 3, in reference to the new birth, quote: "This relation came about independently of human effort." No greater untruth or soul destroying doctrine ever came from the pits of hell. Jesus taught men to seek the kingdom of God. Then the gentleman cites (Matthew 6:33), though he does not quote this text. It reads: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." What things shall be added? Is eternal life one of the things to be added? No; but what ye shall eat, what ye shall drink, and wherewithal ye shall be clothed-the needs of this life in the natural realm. This was in the Sermon on the Mount, and was addressed to the disciples, and not to the multitudes. Look at the beginning of chapter five, and see for yourself. Then he cites ((5:6) (Isaiah 55:6)), which was to Israel, and no promise of eternal life in that. He also cites (Matthew 11:28-29), and (Luke 13:24). The language there was to the disciples and not to alien sinners. There is no command anywhere in God's Book telling alien sinners to do a single thing in order that they receive eternal life, or in order that they be born again. But the gentleman says that "no greater untruth or soul destroying doctrine ever came from the pits of hell." We will see whose doctrine came from the pits of hell. This gentleman's doctrine is that alien sinners must hear, believe, and obey the preaching, or the warning given by him and his kind, in order to escape the torments and pits of hell. Note the case of the rich man in hell and Lazarus in Abraham's bosom; (Luke 16:19-31) (Luke 16:22-23): "And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom." In (Luke 16:27-31) we have recorded some of what was said, beginning with the rich man's request to send Lazarus to his father's house: "I pray thee, therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house: for I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." This doctrine that people might be kept from going to hell through the preaching done by men was believed by the man in hell. Abraham did not believe that doctrine, and he was in heaven. Then, whose doctrine is it that came from the pits of hell? The same doctrine promulgated by this self-righteous Pharisee, Max Pendley, and all the whole motley crowd. The doctrine they preach is from hell; and they are, therefore, hell-sent preachers. But he continues: This same writer says, "Every expression of Scripture that relates belief with spiritual life is in evidence of it only, and in no case a condition of receiving it." This damnable heresy would destroy the vital element that makes salvation possible so far as we are concerned for it is belief in Christ that saves sinners. (First John 5:1) "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God." The word translated is born in the text the gentleman quoted is gegennetai, and is in the third person, singular number, perfect tense, indicative mood, and passive voice. The passive voice clearly and unmistakably shows that the thing born is passive in being born, and does not have something to do in order to be born. What wonderful wisdom this simpleton displays! According to his theology and logic, he had to do something in order to be born of his parents! He had to believe on his parents in order to be born of his parents! Such a contention is either fit for a hypocrite or a lunatic! The word is in the perfect tense, which "conveys the double notion of an action terminated in past time, and of its effect existing in the present." See Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon, page xlii. Section xxxix. Those who are now believing, in the present, were born, at some time in the past. The birth was completed, it was terminated, at some time in the past, and the effect (believe-present) continues unto the present. The gentleman reverses the order. He puts the present before the past. He puts action before life. He puts thunder before the lightning. He puts the effect for the cause. He puts the fruit for the tree. He refers to (John 1:11-12), but ignores verse 13. He knows that the whole sentence is diametrically opposed to his devil-invented theory. John there says: "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Were born is in the past tense, and believe is in the present tense. If this blatant blustery blow-horn will parse that language; or treat it any way possible by the rules of language, and make it appear that believe, in the present tense, precedes and comes before were born, in the past tense, we will join his church, and will preach for his folks as long as we live, and never charge one penny for it-and this he will not do; and then we will whip every Old Baptist in the whole country with that text-and this he could not do, even if his home in glory depended upon it. May the Lord have mercy on his poor benighted soul. He manifests as much ignorance as any man we have ever read after. C. H. C.

Associations Visited

---November 7, 1940

We left home on Friday night, September 25, to fill appointments in Georgia as had been arranged by Elder Joseph Hobbs, and as published in our columns. We attended five associations while on the trip. We arrived at Cochran, Ga., on Friday morning at 12:20, and were met at the train by Elder J. F. Dykes, and conveyed to his pleasant home, where we had needed rest until time to get a good breakfast and go to the meeting of the Ebenezer Association, near Empire. If we made no mistake in getting their names, there were fourteen visiting ministers and ten of their home ministers at the meeting. The visiting ministers were: Elders J. H. Daily, Macon, Ga.; J. B. Wilson, Summit, Ga.; R. L. Cook, Social Circle, Ga.; Robert Barron, Zebulon, Ga.; J. B. Glisson, Clax-ton, Ga.; Isaac Wilson, Garfield, Ga.; R. M. Riner, Graymont, Ga.; S. H. McCorkle, Ellaville, Ga.; G. A. Hill, Pineview, Ga.; Wm. Moody, Lamentations Crosse, Fla.; Joseph Hobbs, Pitts, Ga.; J. W. McMillan, Enigma, Ga.; O. E. Wiggins, Smithville, Ga.; and C. H. Cayce, Thornton, Ark. Their home ministers present were: A. J. Banks, J. H. Sanders, E. D. Bryant, J. H. Chance, Joel C. Bryant, J. F. Dykes, T. L. Graham, J. B. Lord, E. J. Maddox, and L. G. Powell. Brother Robert M. Lord was chosen as moderator, and Brother Homer Corbitt was chosen as clerk. Since the association Brother Lord has been called to his long eternal home. He was a great man, and was dearly loved, and will be greatly missed. He left a large family, who are deeply grieved on account of their great loss, and all the brotherhood in that section mourn for him. May the Lord bless and sustain each of the bereaved ones by His grace, is our humble prayer. The next association we attended was the Pulaski, which was held on October 1, 2, and 3, with Cedar Creek Church, near Cordele. Elder G. A. Hill was chosen moderator, and Brother Bartlett A. Barker was chosen clerk. The following named ministers were at the meeting: J. A. Monsees, Atlanta, Ga.; J. H. Daily, Macon, Ga.; Ariel West, Luling, Texas; S. W. Etheredge, Ozark, Ala.; Z. Stallings, Milan, Tenn.; A. J. Banks, Macon, Ga.; L. Z. Folmar, Pelham, Ga.; A. A. Garrett, Arlington, Ga.; J. A. Fagg, and J. R. Worrell, Winston-Salem, N. C.; W. A. Beasley, Orlando, Fla.; O. K. Sheffield, Fort Pierce, Fla.; Lewis Sheffield, Vero Beach, Fla.; W. T. Cook, Dothan, Ala.; P. H. Byrd, Vidalia, Ga.; E. D. Bryant, Danville, Ga.; T. L. Graham, Chauncey, Ga.; J. B. Glisson, Claxton, Ga.; E. S. W. Holland, Fort Meade, Fla.; Wm. Moody, Lamentations Crosse, Fla.; O. T. Jones, Reidsville, Ga.; T. V. Mann, Marietta, Ga.; B. A. Phillips, Alpharetta, Ga.; J. F. Dykes, Cochran, Ga.; O. A. Knight, Valdosta, Ga., and the writer. Their home ministers present were: G. A. Hill, Pineview; Joseph Hobbs, Pitts; M. A. Hall, Arabi; and T. W. Cox, Omega. There were thirty ministers, in all, present during the meeting. The next association we attended was the Original Upper Canoochee, held with New Hope Church, near Lexsy, Ga., October 4, 5, 6. Elder J. B. Wilson was chosen moderator, and Elder V. H. Hooks was chosen clerk. The visiting ministers present were: O. A. Knight, Valdosta, Ga.; A. J. Banks, Macon, Ga.; J. F. Dykes, Cochran, Ga.; W. J. Green, Gray, Ga.; Joseph Hobbs, Pitts, Ga.; E. D. Bryant, Danville, Ga.; and the writer. Their home ministers present were: P. H. Byrd, Vidalia; J. B. Wilson, Summit; V. H. Hooks, Lexsy; R. M. Riner, Graymont; J. B. Glisson, Claxton; A. E. Temples, Statesboro; D. R. Temples, Vidalia; O. T. Jones, Reidsville, and Isaac Wilson, Garfield. The next association we attended was the Harmony, which was held with Liberty Church, Sumter City, October 11, 12, 13. Elder W. I. Kelly was chosen moderator, and Brother Gerald Wiggins clerk. The visiting ministers present during the meeting were: J. A. Fagg and J. R. Worrell, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Z. Stallings, Milan, Tenn.; J. A. Monsees, Atlanta, Ga.; J. H. Chance, Cochran, Ga.; Joseph Hobbs, Pitts, Ga.; J. E. Shackelford, Tishomingo, Miss.; A. A. Garrett, Arlington, Ga.; R. K. Blackshear, Donalsonville, Ga.; Cayce Phillips, Ellaville, Ga.; Hugh Connell, Jacksonville, Fla.; Ashley Griffin, Ocilla, Ga.; W. H. Hancock, Macon, Ga.; J. B. Lord, Dudley, Ga.; B. F. House, Phenix City, Ala.; and the writer. Their home ministers present were: W. I. Kelly, Edison, and O. E. Wiggins, Smithville. The next association we attended was the Union, which was held with Concord Church, near Lenox, October 18, 19, 20. We were there on the eighteenth and nineteenth only, as the appointments arranged for us had us billed to be at another place on Sunday, the 20th. Elder J. W. McMillan was chosen moderator, and Brother V V Fletcher, clerk. The visiting ministers present were: W. R. Rhoden, McClenny, Fla.; G. A. Hill, Pineview, Ga.; A. J. Banks, Macon, Ga.; J. H. Chance, Cochran, Ga.; M. A. Hall, Arabi, Ga.; Cayce Phillips, Ellaville, Ga.; L. Z. Folmar, Pelham, Ga.; Wm. Moody, Lamentations Crosse, Fla.; E. S. W. Holland, Fort Meade, Fla.; S. W. Cox, Omega, Ga.; O. E. Wiggins, Smithville, Ga.; B. F. House, Phenix City, Ala.; Hugh Connell, Jacksonville, Fla.; J. H. Sanders, Danville, Ga.; J. F. Dykes, Cochran, Ga.; H. L. Moody, Lamentations Crosse, Fla.; T. R. Crawford, Cairo, Ga.; and the writer. Their home ministers present were: J. W. McMillan, M. D. Tucker, O. A. Knight, Ashley Griffin, L. A. Davis, J. F. Parish, C. C. Smith, and L. L. Register. The meetings were all good and delightful. We never heard a discordant note sounded. The Lord blessed the ministers who filled the stands, from time to time, with liberty to speak in His name to the comfort and joy of those who were present, and all seemed to be encouraged to press on in the same good old way. Good and orderly congregations were present at each service. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon them, individually and collectively, is our humble prayer. We tried to get the name and address of each minister at each of the foregoing meetings. If any were not obtained, it was unintentional, for we tried to get them all. We will try to write an account of the trip, other than the associations, in our next issue. We arrived home at about 1:40 on Tuesday morning, October 29, and do not have time to write more concerning the trip for this issue of the paper. We trust the dear brethren, sisters, and friends, whom we met, will remember us in their prayers. C. H. C.

Experience and Call to the Ministry

---November 7, 1940

We hereby acknowledge receipt of a pamphlet, the title of which is "My experience and Call to the Ministry," by Elder J. A. Moore, 1676 Eighty-fifth St., Los Angeles, Calif. It is an interesting pamphlet, and is worth the price asked for it, which is only 15 cents. Send 15 cents to him and get a copy of the same. C. H. C.

Trip in Georgia

---November 21, 1940

In our last issue we gave a report of the associations we attended while on our recent trip in Georgia, and stated that we would try to write another article for this issue concerning the trip. We left home on Wednesday night, September 18, to fill the appointments, as arranged by Elder Joseph Hobbs, and as published in our columns. Some few other appointments were made, besides those published in that list. One was at Sardis, near Macon, on Monday night, September 23. Another was at Mt. Pisgah on Monday, October 14. Another was at Gordon on Friday night, October 25. The last was at Bethlehem, in Macon, on Sunday night, October 27. The arrangement was at first made for us to be at Trail Branch on Saturday and Sunday, October 26 and 27; but this was changed, for us to be at Camp Creek (if we remember the name of the place correctly) on Saturday and at Trail Branch on Sunday. Besides the places above named, and besides the associations attended, we were at the following named churches: Bethel, Mt. Nebo, Mt. Paran, Red Hill, Lebanon, Hazlehurst, Valley Grove, Fitzgerald, Eureka, New Providence, New Bethel, Emmaus, Mt. Olive, New Hope, Christian Hope, Hawkinsville, Pleasant Hill, Oakey Grove, Sweet Home, Bay Spring, and Cool Springs. There were good congregations at most every place, even though it was a busy time. Much interest seemed to be manifested in the service. Frequently brethren and sisters were present from a great distance. Many of the brethren in the ministry were with us at different places. By experience we know what it means for a poor traveler to have the brethren in the ministry with us. Elders Joseph Hobbs, M. A. Hall, and G. A. Hill were, especially, very attentive to us. They were with us much of the time, and we spent some time in their good homes. We were in the good homes of many others of the dear brethren in the ministry, but these brethren took special interest and care in going with us and conveying us from place to place. All the dear brethren, sisters, and friends were especially good and kind to us on the entire trip. They took special care to see that we had a good and comfortable place to rest when crowds were present, especially at the associations. This was a great help to us in enabling us to continue on the long trip and to fill all the appointments, and to get back home feeling as well and as strong as when we left, seemingly. We shall never forget the many acts of kindness and consideration shown us on this trip. They manifested the fact that they took into consideration the fact that we were not as young as we once were, and that old folks cannot hold out like young folks can. We never enjoyed a trip more-so it seems to us now. We would be glad to give the name of each one in whose home we were cared for, but cannot do that. Some brethren have sometimes, apparently, taken pains to tell about the good meals served at places where they went. It seems to us that this should be, and will be, taken for granted by the readers. At each place we went it seemed to us that they all took special pains to have good and wholesome food prepared for us-such as one should have who is "just fixing to be old." And they were careful to have good beds for us to sleep on. Then they were careful to see that we had the rest which we so much needed. They were good and kind and considerate in every way. May the good Lord bless them, is our humble prayer. We arrived home at 1:40 on Tuesday morning, October 29, and found all well, for which we trust we are thankful to the good Lord. Again, we say, may the Lord abundantly bless all those dear brethren, sisters, and friends, is our humble prayer. We trust they will not forget us, and that we may have an interest in their prayers. We would be glad to hear from any of them who may feel disposed to write us a line. We appreciate the good letters which some wrote to our dear companion while we were on the journey. C. H. C.

Meeting in Memphis

---December 5, 1940

We left home on Thursday afternoon, November 14, for Memphis, Tenn., to attend the three days meeting, beginning on Friday, celebrating the eleventh year of services being held in their building. Their first service in their building, at Walker and Pennsylvania, was held there eleven years ago. Ten visiting ministers were present during the meeting, which began Friday morning, and continued three days- Friday morning, Friday night, Saturday morning, Saturday night, Sunday morning and Sunday night. The visiting ministers were: Elders J. T. George, Little Rock, Ark.; J. W. Hipp, Prim, Ark.; W. V McDonald, Coffeville, Miss.; W. L. Smith, Oxford Miss.; D. W. Witt, Mansfield, Ark.; W. C. Davis, McEwen, Tenn.; W. H. Eubanks, Poplar Grove, Ark.; W. A. Bishop, Jackson, Tenn.; J. O. Dillon, Ramer, Tenn.; and the writer. Their two home ministers (Elders E. C. Holder and W. C. Moak) were also present. They had two discourses each morning and night. It was a good meeting, and much enjoyed by all who were present. The crowd was large on Sunday and Sunday night. Two united with the church during the meeting—a brother and sister. The sister was baptized on Sunday night by Elder Moak. The brother is to be baptized later. The church is full of life and is prospering. They are a faithful band. May the good Lord bless them, and enable them to continue on in love, peace, and fellowship, as they have in the past. We shall never forget their kindness to us. We visited in several of their homes during the meeting. Again we say, may the Lord's richest blessings continue with them. C. H. C.

About At An End

---December 5, 1940

Brother Z. W. Lofton, of Lincoln, Ark., asks us this question: "Doesn't it look like our publications and liberty is about at an end?" We are fearful that this is so. We are sure that the trend is that way, if we are to take the past as an indication of what is in the future. History repeats itself. We would suggest that our readers study the path traveled by Hitler, in Germany, and see where things are in that country, and then compare the same with the trend elsewhere, and then draw your own conclusions. Without there is a change in the trend of events in the near future, there will be a time of great persecution to come upon our people before many more years. May the good Lord pity us. When this persecution comes, many who now seem to be bent on ruin will be brought to see the folly of the course they have been pursuing. "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured by the sword; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." This is just as true today as it was when it was penned by the Lord's prophet hundreds of years ago. "If ye sow to the wind, ye shall reap the whirlwind." The spirit of war and bloodshed is in the world. May the Lord have mercy on His poor and afflicted people, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Do You Want It?

---December 5, 1940

Announcement has been made a few times in our columns concerning the matter of publishing a monthly periodical containing one or two sermons delivered by some of our ministers, as well as sermons that were delivered and published in the past. The price of the proposed periodical is to be only one dollar a year. A number have written us they would subscribe for the proposed periodical; but we have not received as many promises as we feel we should have in order to undertake the work. So we are asking one more time that you write us if you would like to have such a periodical. Do not send any money, but just write that we may put your name down as a subscriber. A postal card will do. How many will write at once? Will you? C. H. C.

Agents

---December 5, 1940

A few brethren have agreed to act as agents to solicit subscriptions for The Primitive Baptist, and remit the same to us. You will find a list of them following the names of our corresponding editors. Of course, the corresponding editors are authorized to solicit subscriptions for us; but some of them have done very little along this line. Even so, some of them do very little writing for the paper. We wish we knew how to wake some of them up.

We trust these brethren will all get busy and do all they can to help to extend the circulation of the paper. We will appreciate it. C. H. C.

Close of Volume 55

---December 19, 1940

For two or three days we have been trying to get our mind settled on a line of thought appropriate to the close of the volume. It seems that it is all in vain. We have even spent some time reading over the articles we have written at the close of previous volumes. Still, we could not have a leading of thought for an article on that line. Then we turned to Volume 19 and read the article on the close of that volume, which was written by our sainted father thirty-six years ago. It was his last article on the close of the year's work, close of the volume. Somehow, as we read it we felt a desire to copy that article and adopt much of it as our own at this time.

So, instead of trying to write an article for the close of Volume 55 we copy the article written by our father in 1904 as the close of volume 19. C. H.C.

THE ARTICLE

Another year with all its sorrows, disappointments, mournings of soul and bleedings of heart, as well as its joys, pleasures, gladness of heart and rejoicing of soul, has passed and gone, and the year 1904 will have passed before another issue of The Primitive Baptist reaches your homes. Not only so, but we are all, both editors and publishers, and readers, one year nearer the end of our pilgrimage on earth. As the year 1904 has passed and all the occurrences and happenings of same are, or soon will be, numbered with the things of the past, so also will we all soon be numbered with the dead; the times and places that know us now will soon know us no more forever. Many who wrote for the columns of The Primitive Baptist during the first year of its publication, 1886, and many dear brethren and sisters who were readers of our first volume have stepped off the stage of action, been called to try the realities of a world unknown to us; their souls being present with the Lord and their bodies being asleep in Jesus. Every year only brings us that much nearer the end of our journey, or stay, in this world. How careful, therefore, we all ought to be to make good use of our time and talents while life lasts. Let us all remember that the Saviour says, (Matthew 7:26-27), "Every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell." Let us remember, too, that Paul says, (I Corinthians 3:15) "If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss," and that the same apostle says also, (Galatians 6:7-8) "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption." Still realizing our weakness and imperfections we wish to repeat what we said a year ago - or quote from our editorial, "Close of Volume Eighteen," as follows: That we have erred and made mistakes, in different ways, is no more apparent to others than to ourselves, for we do most assuredly "groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body;" yea, we "groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven; if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked." But this is the great question; "Will I be found naked?" Oh, how naked, how naked, we will be if not clothed upon with the imputed righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ! Within ourselves considered, we feel to be "wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." Realizing, thus, our weakness, sinfulness, and inability, we, therefore, feel conscious of the fact that we have made many, yea, very many, mistakes in our editorial career, and we do, therefore, most earnestly request our readers and patrons to "throw the mantle of charity over us," and to hold us up in your prayers. No doubt we have made blunders, both in our editorial work and as publishers. Not only so, but our bookkeeper and subscription clerk has, doubtless, made mistakes also, and it may be that our, and his, mistakes, some of them at least, have been observed by our patrons. But, notwithstanding we are weak, and have, therefore, made many mistakes, and feel willing to confess our faults and to ask the forbearance and forgiveness of our brethren and sisters-our patrons who may have observed, or been worried over, our mistakes-yet our God is perfect, and the Lord has been good to us, and we feel under renewed obligation, more and more every year of our life, to serve and obey Him, as best we can, in all things-all things required of us-all His holy commandments. We believe the servants of the Lord, the ministers of Christ -those who are called of God to preach the gospel-are commanded to "teach all nations; baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you;" and we feel that this command is to us, and that the Lord, who called us to this work, has been so good to us, of such tender compassion toward us, and, if we are not deceived, has done so much for us, that we feel under renewed obligation, every year of our life, to do all we can in that direction. To this end-or for this reason-we not only try, in our weakness, to preach the gospel, or occupy the pulpit, but this is the incentive, if we are not deceived again, that prompts us to edit and publish a weekly paper for the benefit and instruction of the dear children of God. Not only are the ministers of the gospel commanded to teach, but they are also commanded to "feed the church of God, which He hath purchased with His own blood;" and this we are trying to do, not only in the pulpit, but through the press also. We say, again, if not deceived in our own heart, that, our greatest object in editing and publishing a weekly paper, as well as in trying to preach the gospel, is to instruct and feed the children of God, and if not deceived the incentive that prompts us to do these things is that we feel that we have been called of God to the work of the ministry, and we feel under great obligation to the Lord to do all we can in that direction. Not only have many of our readers and correspondents who were with us during the first year or succeeding years, we might say, of our publication passed away, but a great many changes have taken place, in various ways, since we began editing and publishing The Primitive Baptist nineteen years ago. Among other changes which have taken place during the publication, or progress, of our nineteenth volume, we bought, about Oct. 1, 1904, the subscription list of the Gospel Light, and have since then been sending The Primitive Baptist to Elder Todd's subscribers, his paper having suspended, and he, since the suspension of his paper, having joined the Missionary Baptists. But while many changes have taken place during these nineteen years, and some, even, during the last year, yet, as stated a year ago, and as we all know, "principles never change," and as we feel to occupy, on all parts of the ground, both doctrinally and practically, just where we did nineteen years ago, believing on all points of doctrine, church polity, religious service, mode of worship, church government, etc., just as we did then, we repeat what we said a year ago, in "Close of Volume Eighteen," as follows: The doctrine of God our Saviour is the same now that it was then, and we love, have tried to preach, defend, and publish the same doctrine-on all parts of the ground-during our eighteenth volume (now nineteenth) that we did during our first volume, or that we did eighteen (now nineteen) years ago. But while this is true, "as true as gospel," so to speak, and while it is also true that the doctrine which we try to preach, and are publishing abroad, the doctrine believed and advocated by all true Primitive Baptists, the doctrine of God our Saviour, we might say, will stand as unsullied truths "amidst the wreck of worlds and the crush of nature," yea, stand untarnished after everything else, as we humbly believe, has failed, yet we feel that we will soon be done battling for these blessed truths, that we will soon have to "lay our armor by," that our race is almost run, that we will soon reach the end of our journey, that all our labors will soon be numbered with the things of the past, for we have reached and passed over the top of the hill of life and are fast going down, as it were, on the other side. Besides, our physical frame and constitution has been greatly impaired by the ravages of disease, having passed through three or four very long spells or attacks of sickness. Hence, we desire to be faithful in the discharge of our duties what little time remains for us to spend in the service of God, and in trying to serve His people. It is very painful indeed-a great cross to our nature-to differ from those we love, especially so, if it be those that we esteem highly, for their work's sake, as faithful and able ministers of the gospel of Christ; but it sometimes becomes our duty-or at least we feel it to be our duty-to do so. But whenever we differ from our brethren on any point of doctrine, practice or church polity, we wish to do so in love and in all good feeling, having all due respect for them and their opinions. In conclusion, we would ask you all, all our readers, all the dear brethren, sisters and friends into whose hands this may go, to remember us at a throne of divine grace; remember us in your prayers to "the God of all grace." We bid you adieu for the year 1904, praying the Lord to bless you all, and to bless this article to your good. S. F. C.

Introduction to Volume 56

It becomes our duty, according to custom, for us to try to write an article by way of an introduction to another volume of The Primitive Baptist-the beginning of volume 56. We feel to be entirely at a loss, altogether at sea, as to what to say. We do not even know how to begin such an article at this time. Personally your editor feels to say that, here and now, we try to again rededicate our life and strength and energy all to the service of the Master. We shall try, to the very best of our ability, to conduct THE Primitive Baptist, during the coming year, and through as many years as our life may be spared, if we may still be allowed and permitted to continue the publication of the same, in such a way as to comfort, instruct, console, and encourage the Lord's humble poor, and for the advancement of His cause and kingdom here in the world. We shall endeavor to keep all things out of our columns that would have a tendency otherwise than to be of benefit. We shall try to publish only such matter as will tend to unify, comfort, console, encourage, and strengthen the Lord's dear children. It seems that a spirit of war and bloodshed is rampant in the whole world. It seems that a spirit of destruction is abroad in the whole world, and it seems that this same evil spirit has permeated the ranks of the Lord's church. It is not only in the governments of the world, but it is in the so-called churches, and is apparently in the true church. Such a spirit brings sure destruction to every kingdom which is infested with it-unless there is sure and speedy repentance. The dark and lowering clouds tell us, if we are not mistaken in the "signs of the times," that there is great trouble just ahead of us, and that great destruction is just ahead of us. But we do not wish to be a party to the bringing of it. Do you, dear reader? If you do not, then will you join with us, and help us, and let all of us try to forget the past, as much as lies within us, and let us, together, labor and strive for peace and unity of Zion, and for the unifying of the Lord's dear children. Let us talk about, and labor for, and do the things that will have a tendency to this end. Let us remember that patience is a great and wonderful virtue. Have we all been as patient as we should have been? It is so easy to become impatient when we observe something which is not just exactly to our liking, or to our way of seeing. We may not know all the circumstances in the case. We would do well to remember that we are directed to "be patient toward all men." -(Th 5:14) (I Thessalonians 5:14). In the next verse the apostle says, "See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men." If this were strictly observed by all of us, are you not sure that we would all get along much better than some of us have been doing during the past several years? May the Lord pity and help all of us to remember the golden rule, and to practice the same more than we have in the past. Will you try to pray the Lord to help us to follow this right teaching and instruction in the few remaining days we may have upon earth? And will you join with us in a "New Year's" resolution to try to conform our lives to the same, and each and all of us try to reduce the same to practice in our lives? Brother, reader, are you with us in this? May Heaven's richest blessings rest upon you, dear reader, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Remembrances

The editor and family have been the happy recipients of many kind remembrances during the holidays. Many beautiful cards and many nice and valuable presents have been sent and given to us. We feel to be unworthy of such manifestations and expressions of Christian love and sweet fellowship. May the dear Lord bless each one who so kindly and lovingly remembered us, is our prayer. Please let this be a personal note to each of you. Please pray the Lord to give us strength and courage for the battles of life which may confront us in this new year, 1941. Editor and Family.

A Good Old Letter

---January 2, 1941

The following letter is real good, and is timely now, as we believe. It is copied from The Primitive Baptist of May 15, 1886-more than fifty-four years ago. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Elder S. F. Cayce:

Dear Brother-I have received five numbers of The Primitive Baptist, and have read them very carefully, and can say I truly endorse the sentiments advocated in your paper as the doctrine of the Primitive Baptist Church. I have had a name in that church about sixty years, and have passed with her through many wars, trials and afflictions. I have witnessed the rise of New Schoolism, of Campbellism, Two-Seedism, and a host of other isms that have caused strife and division; but in the midst of all we had faithful men who have stood at their post, and fearlessly displayed the banner of truth before their enemies. I have witnessed their afflictions and have mingled my tears with theirs when error, like a flood, was sweeping over the land, and the voice of weeping and lamentation was heard in every part of Zion. The clouds were dark and threatening; our harps were upon the willows; the enemy was strong, and in our midst, making rapid changes upon us, calling us Anti-nomians, antimeans, and ignorant bigots; that we were opposed to the spread of the gospel, and doing all we could to keep the world in darkness, and prevent the salvation of men. But, thank God, we had a few noble spirits who counted not their lives dear unto themselves, and refused to bow to the image of the old beast, or to take its mark, or live in fellowship with its unscriptural institutions; and, like their brethren of the 12th century, declared non-fellowship for all unscriptural institutions and inventions of men unknown to the gospel, and gotten up as auxiliaries to the church. These resolutions produced a division, and gave birth to what is now called the New School or Missionary Baptist Church. Before this split, there was no such a body in existence. This I know, and every other man that has been a Baptist sixty years knows by his own personal observation, and is acknowledged by such men as Wayland, Graves and Wood. Such unprincipled historians as Benedict and Ray may try to conceal these truths and claim that they are the Primitive stalk of Baptists, but to do it they have to convict their most learned and honest men of falsehood or ignorance. I am prepared to give the testimony of those men, and a host of others, of the modern date and unscriptural characters of the practices and institutions that produced them as a separate sect. The sect calling themselves the "Christian Church" are a little older than the "New School Baptist," and came out of the Presbyterians, and received their ministerial ordinations and baptisms from them (See the life of Dr. Pervoynce, one of their founders). They and the New-School Baptists both preach a conditional salvation, and that the preached word is the means of giving spiritual or eternal life to the sinner dead in sin. They both teach that the preacher is the medium through which eternal life is given to the dead sinner, and that without the preached word there is no salvation; and I think that a just inference, according to their preaching, is that there is no damnation; for they say that "it would be unjust to damn the sinner unless the gospel is preached to him, and a chance given him to repent and believe and obey the gospel," so without the gospel, he could not be condemned; but by it, he has a chance to be condemned; and, to my mind, both parties make the gospel a curse to the world, for all will not believe and obey it. For rejecting these things and teaching that the gift of God was eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, and through no other medium, we were called anti-means and Anti-nomians; but none of these things moved us while we found that Paul and the other apostles taught the same truth, and were persecuted for it. To be a Primitive Baptist we must observe all things whatsoever Christ has commanded, and reject all the inventions and traditions of men. The order and discipline of Christ's church must be maintained, for He, as the Head and Leader, has, by His teachings and specific commands, given us the doctrine and order to be observed in His church, and it is rebellion on our part to add anything to it, or to take anything from it. In the last few years I have traveled extensively among our churches from Maryland and Virginia, to Kansas and Texas, and I find our churches in a more prosperous and united condition than they have been in for the last fifty years; and I feel that a better day is before us if we abide in the word of our Lord and keep ourselves unspotted from the religion of the world and its institutions. My work is about done; I shall soon lay my armor down, and rest from my labors; but while I live I shall love the Primitive Church and its primitive gospel, and shall pray that God may bless and prosper you and all who are laboring for that blessed cause. May His Spirit guide you as editor, and your correspondents, so that truth may be proclaimed, and the saints comforted, and the peace of Zion maintained. G. M. Thompson. Ashland, Mo., April 8, 1886.

Is It Sufficient?

---January 16, 1941

On page two of the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight of December 25, 1940, we find a "Radio Sermon" by Ben M. Bogard, under the heading, "The Bible is the All-Sufficient Rule of Faith and Practice." For a wonder to us the "Reverend" "Doctor" Bogard has, one time, put out a real good article for him. Wonder how he happened to stagger on to the truth and to stick so closely to it in one article? Most of the whole article is real good, to come from Bogard. In the article Dr. Bogard says: The Bible claims to be a perfect rule of faith and practice. In (II Timothy 3:16-17), we read that the Scriptures "are given by inspiration of God, that the man of God may be perfect; thoroughly furnished unto all good works." If the Scriptures thoroughly furnish us unto all good works we certainly do not need any additional furnishing. * If the Bible is not a perfect guide then it is worse than useless, because it might even mislead the people. If it is a perfect guide, then we should each one take it as the man of our counsel, as a "lamp to our feet and a light to our pathway." This is all good and true. What a pity that all professed Christians do not observe the fact, and conform their practice to the same. If a man conforms his life to the truth set forth in the Doctor's Scriptural teaching in the foregoing, as well as in what he has set forth in the entire sermon on the same line of thought, he will practice nothing as a professed Christian which the Bible does not authorize. Does the Doctor practice what he has preached in this sermon? Let us turn another page in this paper and see if he does. On page four we find another article from the Doctor, under the heading, "One Thousand Dollars a Month Net Profit." In that article the Doctor says: First, let the Sunday School literature profit pay all the expense of the mission office, pay the salary of the Secretary-Treasurer, and every thing else that can be called expenses, so that we can look the world in the face and tell the truth when we say that every cent in our missions ACTUALLY GOES TO THE MISSIONARIES, both in the home land, and on the foreign field. Where, in the Bible, does the Doctor get the authority for a Sunday School? And where does he get the authority for the Sunday School Literature? Where does he get the authority for the church to engage in any kind of publishing business? Where does he get the authority for any such officer as a Secretary-Treasurer? What is the person a Secretary-Treasurer of, any how, and where is the authority for such? But, alack and alas! Here is a confession, as we take it, that they have not been telling the exact truth all the time in regard to this business. It seems that they have been claiming that all the money went direct to the missionaries, or that it does actually go to them; but here is an admission that the claim was and is false! Where in the Book, Doctor, do you find the authority for making such a false claim? Where, in the Book, Doctor, is your authority for a "mission office?" In the days of the sojourn of the Saviour on earth, when His apostles were personally with Him, there was one who carried the bag. That one was Judas, and he was a thief-so the Book says. Doctor, is that your authority for having one to carry the money, as treasurer? If so, do you try to find a Judas to keep the funds? May we reasonably judge so, since it has not been so long since you accused one of your treasurers of stealing the Sunday School money? Doctor, did you wish to change officers so as to give another an opportunity to "get a finger in the pie?" But the Doctor continues: It would be encouraging to the churches to contribute if they really knew that ALL OF THE MONEY THEY SEND IN FOR MISSIONS ACTUALLY WENT TO FEED AND CLOTHE THE MISSIONARIES. Doctor, how in the wide world could they know that all the money sent in actually goes to feed and clothe the missionaries, since you have exposed, or claimed to expose, the "cold fact" that some stealing of the money sent in for literature had been going on? How could they know that there is not yet a little stealing going on? Honestly, Doctor, we really could not help having some little doubt about the matter, when the thing is gotten up and carried on in the name of church business, especially when it is being engaged in by those claiming to conform to the "perfect rule," since there is nothing in the "perfect and sufficient rule" concerning such a thing. But the Doctor continues: Then when the Secretary-Treasurer went out among the churches to collect mission money he could TRUTHFULLY SAY that not one cent he collected went to him personally but every cent went to the missionaries. As it is now, when the Secretary-Treasurer goes out to collect, somebody will say that he is out trying to collect his own salary, and in one sense that is true. Has the Secretary-Treasurer been telling the people that he was out to collect mission money, and not to collect his own salary? It seems so, from what the Doctor says. And the Doctor's language leaves the impression that the Secretary-Treasurer was lying to the people when he made such a claim; for the Doctor admits that the accusation that he was out to collect his own salary was true in one sense. If true in one sense, we wonder if it is not in a true sense! Strange admissions some men will make! Let us here make a lengthy quotation from the Doctor's article: Second, we should use the rest of that money to spread our principles by putting at least TEN MISSIONARY EVANGELISTS in the field. They can be paid ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A MONTH out of this net profit, with the understanding that they collect on the field as much as they can where they preach and let what they collect be added to the hundred dollars up to not more than fifty dollars a month, making the salary of these missionary-Evangelists at least $150.00 a month. Ten good men can be secured at that rate, and it would mean that they can go to places of destitution and stay there until they build up the work by either increasing the membership of weak churches where we now have none. Where, in the Book, does the Doctor get his authority for such teaching as he put forth in this? These fellows need the money to put ten missionary evangelists in the field. They can do it with the money-yes! But they would do this, for the simple reason that the Lord does not put men in the field for them! These men must have a salary, and know that they are to be supported by men before they will go into the field. If they will guarantee the sum of $150 a month they can get ten good men with the money at their disposal. If they were to depend on the Lord for their preachers, they might not get good ones; so they may offer to pay that sum of money, and then they can get men-not men of God's choosing and sending, but men of their own choosing, selecting, and sending! Ministers are witnesses. Here is a proposition to hire witnesses. But a true witness will testify to the truth without money and without price. But by paying the price they can get good witnesses-witnesses who will, of course, testify what the employer wishes to be told. So, Doctor, you will hire men to testify what you folks want testified to! The witnesses who testified that the disciples stole the body of the Lord from the sepulcher were hired to tell that story. They were paid large money. You will pay a good sum of money, too, will you, Doctor? Evidently your principles are not being spread by ministers sent by the Lord, so you must send them for that purpose, or your principles will not be spread. Of course, that is right, for the Lord is not in your business, any how. Doctor, please tell us who was Secretary-Treasurer in the mission office from which Paul was sent to Ephesus? to Galatia? to Philippi? to Rome? or to any other place where he went and preached the gospel? Who was Secretary-Treasurer of the band who sent Timothy, or Titus, or Barnabas? Who sent Philip "toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert?" Who sent Peter to the house of Cornelius? What Secretary-Treasurer held the funds out of which he was paid to make the journey? How much did they pay him out of the treasury for making that trip, Doctor? Doctor, is it not a fact that the business you folks are engaged in is simply a merchandising and money-getting and money-making proposition with you, any how? Is it not a fact that it is money which you are really interested in, and not the preaching of the gospel, or even the salvation of souls? "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" But let us have two more short paragraphs from the Doctor's article. Before quoting any more, however, let us say that all the emphasis in the foregoing quotations from the Doctor is his own. He emphasized by placing words in capital letters, and we have followed his own emphasis. But hear the Doctor again: Third, we should get out many thousands of tracts, cheap booklets, and scatter them all over the country. Such distribution of good literature will do much for our work and it will mean the salvation of souls. The results of such an enlarged program will be that new churches will be established, new Sunday Schools will be organized, new Young Peoples' Training Courses started, and that will mean an increase in the sale of the literature and thus make the net profit even greater. The sale of literature will increase as the work enlarges. We shall be getting somewhere then.

Of course, if they "shall be getting somewhere then," they are not "getting somewhere" now! We agree with the Doctor again. They are getting nowhere. The only thing we will agree that they are getting is that they are getting money to accomplish a thing that money will not accomplish, and getting some of the Lord's children deceived-leading them to believe that the eternal destiny of poor sinners depends upon their liberality; thus placing the eternal salvation of poor sinners in the hands of wicked and deceitful money hunters! May the good Lord pity and have mercy on their poor deluded followers! Doctor, will you please give the citation where the "all-sufficient Rule" says for the church, or any others, to engage in any such practice as you and your crowd are engaging in? Where is your authority for the church to print thousands of tracts for the salvation of souls? Where is your authority for the teaching that the distribution of tracts will result in the salvation of souls? Is that not "tract salvation?" Doctor, suppose we revise (Acts 4:11-12) as follows, so as to agree with your teaching in the foregoing: "These are the tracts which were set at nought of you builders, which are become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there are no other tracts under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved!" Take your medicine, Doctor. It may taste bad, and it may make you vomit-if you are not too far gone for your stomach to be affected. Honestly, Doctor, you really need to "puke up" a whole lot of stuff you have been eating for, lo, these many years. Your heart may be all right, Doctor; we do not claim to have made a close examination of that organ, here; but your head and stomach are sure in a bad fix. Doctor, have you tried the remedies of some of your own "doctors" in your case? If you have, you have only been spending your means on the "physicians of this world." The "All-Sufficient Rule of Faith" teaches us, Doctor, that one who does that gets not relief from such "Doctors;" they only grow worse. Doctor, if you wish to get well of such "bellyaching" as you have been afflicted with for all these years, just take the pills as are prescribed in the "All-Sufficient Rule," and quit your merchandising business, and your stomach will get quiet, and your "poor old head" will stop aching. Really, Doctor, we are sorry for you, but sympathy will not effect a cure nor bring relief. Taking the straight medicine, as given by the Great Physician, in His Prescription Book, will give relief for such disorders. Good-bye, Doctor, for the present. Be a good boy, and take your medicine, and perhaps you will improve along the line set out in your radio address. C. H. C.

Trip in Georgia

We left home at 1:40 on Monday morning, December 2, for a trip of three weeks in Georgia. The first appointment was at Phenix City, Ala., on Tuesday, December 8, at eleven o'clock, and Tuesday night. Then we went to Georgia and filled appointments at Providence, in Roberta; Sardis, near Macon; then to a church which was not in the regular list, which we believe was Mt. Carmel. We failed to note the name of the church, and so we may not have the name correct. Then at Elizabeth (in Macon), Pine Ridge, Camp Creek, Rock Springs, Mt. Paron, Bethany (in Atlanta), Union, Big Creek, Boiling Springs, Harmony, Cross Roads, Corinth, and West Atlanta. When the list was made out an appointment was made for Sardis December 13, but that was called in, and we remained at Mt. Paron two days-December 12 and 13. The appointment at Corinth was an extra appointment for Saturday morning, December 21, and the meeting at West Atlanta was in the afternoon, same day, and again Sunday, where the trip closed out. At Elizabeth Church a young sister, Elizabeth Carolyn Bagley, united with the church on Sunday, December 8, and was baptized by Elder J. A. Monsees on Sunday night before the service. Then at the close of the service Sister Barbara Harden asked for a home in the church. She was received, and her baptism was to be attended to at the next regular meeting. The young Sister Bagley is the daughter of Elder Leo V Bagley. Sister Barbara is the daughter of Sister Cordie Harden, of Gordon. Both were gladly and joyfully received by the church. We met a number of ministers on the trip, but failed to make a note of their names. We may not recall the name of each one now, so we will not try to give their names. We are sorry we did not make a note of their names. We were with Elder B. F. House, at Phenix City. He is the pastor there. He could not go with us to other places on account of the poor health of his wife. We trust that she is much improved before now, and pray God's blessings upon them. Elder Monsees was with us at several places, and we were in his good home several nights. We shall never forget the great kindness shown to us by him and his dear companion. Elder B. A. Phillips was with us several days, and conveyed us to several places. We shall never forget his great kindness to us. We spent one night in the home of Elder J. Harvey Daily. Since we were in Georgia, Elder Daily and wife and daughter were at our place. He preached at our little church here on December 24, at night, and on the 25th at eleven o'clock. The Lord blessed him to preach good. He left here the morning of the 26th for Texas, to fill the appointments which had been arranged for him by Elder Ariel West. The crowds were small at most of the churches we visited, but the services were usually interesting and pleasant. The brethren, sisters, and friends were all good and kind to us-much better to us than we feel to deserve. We wish we could name each one of the ministers we had the great pleasure of being with, but we deem it best not to try to give their names, as we might overlook some of them. But we shall never forget their kindness and manifestations of Christian fellowship and brotherly love. May the good Lord richly bless each minister, each brother, and each sister, and each friend we met on the trip, and may He bless and prosper each church, and grant that love and fellowship may continue to abound among them. We are sure we met many on this trip that we shall never meet again in this poor old world, but we hope to meet them in that better place, that better country, where sorrows, trials, afflictions, and separations never come. We trust they will not fail to remember us in their prayers. We feel to be poor and needy, and need the prayers of the Lord's dear children. Pray the Lord, please, that we may have grace and strength for our every trial, and grace to sustain us in the hour of death. C. H. C.

Another Editor

At our request Elder J. Harvey Daily, of Macon, Ga., has consented for his name to be added to our editorial staff. We have known Elder Daily for more than thirty-five years. He was present at the funeral of our sainted father, Elder S. F. Cayce, at Martin, Tenn., in August, 1905. We have never forgotten his great kindness to us in our great sorrow. Elder John R. Daily, the father of Elder Harvey, was associated with us as one of our corresponding editors for a number of years, and he was a great and good man. We love the Daily family. We are glad to have Elder J. Harvey Daily added to our staff of corresponding editors. He will write for the paper, and will also solicit subscriptions and forward the same to us. You will find an article from him on another page of this paper. He is a good writer, and is also an able minister of the New Testament. May the Lord bless him in all his laudable undertakings, and bless our labors together for the good of His great cause, and for the unifying of His dear children, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Acts 18:24-28 AND Acts 19:1-6

---February 6, 1941

We have been requested to write on the above citations of Scripture, but we feel that it would be better to copy what Gill said on the same from his Commentaries. It is rather long, but we feel that what this eminent man said on these verses will be worth the space. C. H. C. GILL'S COMMENTS ((8:24) (Acts 18:24). "And a certain Jew named Apollos," etc. Who by some is thought to be the same with Apelles, (Romans 16:10), his name is Greek, though he was a Jew, not only by religion, but by birth, being of a Jewish extract; "born at Alexandria;" in Egypt, which was built by Alexander the Great, from whence it had its name; it was the metropolis of Egypt, and the seat of the kings of it; great numbers of Jews were in this place; here lived Philo, the famous Jew; "an eloquent man;" in speech, as well as learned, wise, and "prudent," as the Ethiopic version renders it: and "mighty in the Scriptures," of the Old Testament, particularly in the prophecies of them concerning the Messiah; he had thoroughly read them, and carefully examined them, and could readily cite them: as well as had great knowledge of them, and was capable of explaining them; he was "skillful in the Scriptures," as the Syriac version renders it; or he "knew" them, as the Ethiopic; he had large acquaintance with them, and was well-versed in them: it is a Jewish way of speaking; so Ahitophel is said to be "mighty in the law;" the same is said of the sons of Reuben: this man "came to Ephesus;" after the departure of the Apostle Paul, and while Aquila and Priscilla were there; the reason of this coming hither was to preach the Word, and he did. ((8:25) (Acts 18:25). "This man was instructed in the way of the Lord," etc. Which John, whose baptism he only knew, came to prepare: the word here used signifies "catechised;" and suggests, that he was trained up by his parents in this way, who might have been the disciples of John, though afterwards removed from Judea to Alexandria; and that he only had been taught the rudiments of the Christian religion, or doctrine of the gospel; here called the way of the Lord, or which directs and leads unto Him, as the only Saviour, and is the path of faith and truth; or as some copies read, "the word of the Lord;" and which accounts for what is afterwards said of him: "and being fervent in the spirit;" either in or by the Spirit of God being made so by Him. who is compared to fire, and who, in the form of cloven tongues of fire, sat upon the disciples at the day of Pentecost, and upon others; among whom this Apollos is by some thought to be, though without any reason; however, he might be inspired with zeal by the Spirit of God: or "in his own spirit," as the Ethiopic version renders it; his soul was inflamed with zeal for the glory of God, the honour of Christ, and the good of souls; his ministry was very affectionate, warm, and lively; see (Romans 12:11) "He spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord;" or "of Jesus," as read the Alexandrian copy, the Vulgate Latin, Syriac, and Ethiopic versions; according to the measure of light and grace he had received, he spake out freely and fully, and taught the people with great industry, and with all the exactness he could, the things he knew concerning the person, offices, and grace of the Lord Jesus: "knowing only the baptism of John;" which must be understood, not of the ordinance of baptism singly, as administered by John, but of the whole ministry of John; as of that ordinance, so of his doctrine concerning repentance and remission of sins; and concerning Christ that was to come, and concerning His being come, and who He was, whom John pointed at, and taught the people to believe in: but perhaps he might know very little, if anything, of the miracles of Christ, or of His death and resurrection from the dead, and the benefits and effects thereof; and of the pouring out of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles, and the light and knowledge which were communicated thereby. ((8:26) (Ver. 26). "And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue," etc. Of the Jews at Ephesus; using great freedom of speech, and showing much intrepidity and greatness of soul, and presence of mind; not fearing the faces of men, nor the revilings and contradictions of the Jews: "whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard;" they attending at the synagogue, and having observed what he delivered, that there was some deficiency in it, though they took no notice of it publicly; partly on their own account, it not being proper, especially for Priscilla, to speak in public, nor was it allowed in the Jewish synagogue for a woman to speak there; and partly on his account, that they might not put him to blush, and discourage him; and chiefly on account of the gospel, that they might not lay any stumbling-blocks in the way of that and of young converts, and give an occasion to the adversary to make advantages: wherefore "they took him unto them;" they took him aside when he came out of the synagogue, and privately conversed with him; they had him "to their own house," as the Syriac version renders it: "and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly;" these two doubtless had received a considerable measure of evangelical light and knowledge from the Apostle Paul, during the time of their conversation with him; and as they freely received from him, they freely imparted it to Apollos, with a good design to spread the truth of the gospel, and to promote it and the interest of Christ in the world: and as on the one hand it was a good office, and a kind part in them, to communicate knowledge to him, so it was an instance of a good spirit, and of condescension in him, to be taught and instructed by them; especially since one of them was a woman, and both mechanics, and made but a mean figure: and from hence it may be observed, that women of grace, knowledge, and experience, though they are not allowed to teach in public, yet they may, and ought to communicate in private, what they know of divine things, for the use of others. ((8:27) (Acts 18:27). "And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia," etc. The chief city of which was Corinth, and whither Apollos went, as appears from ((9:1) (Acts 19:1). What disposed him to go hither, after he had received a greater degree of light and knowledge, was no doubt that he might communicate it to the good of others, to which he was moved by the Holy Ghost, who had work for him to do there: according to Beza's most ancient copy, there were Corinthians sojourning in Ephesus, who when they heard him (Apollos), besought him that he would go with them into their country; to which he agreeing, the Ephesians wrote to the disciples at Corinth to receive him, as follows: "the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him;" that is, the brethren at Ephesus, among whom Aquila was a principal one, wrote letters of recommendation to the brethren of the churches in Achaia, particularly at Corinth, not only that they would receive him into their houses, and hospitably entertain him as a Christian man, but admit him and behave toward him as a preacher of the gospel: "who when he was come;" into Achaia, and to Corinth: "helped them much which had believed through grace;" the phrase "through grace," is omitted in the Vulgate Latin version, but is in all the Greek copies, and may be connected either with the word "helped;" as the Syriac version, "he helped through grace;" and then the sense is, that Apollos, through the gifts of grace bestowed on him or by the assistance of the grace of God, or both, greatly helped and contributed much to the advantage of the believers in those parts; as to the encouragement of their faith, and the increase of the joy of it; for the quickening, and comforting, and establishing them in the truths and doctrines of the gospel, by his affectionate, fervent, and nervous way of preaching, or it may be connected with the word "believed," as it is in the Arabic version and in ours; and the meaning is, that he greatly assisted such who were already believers; and who became so, not of themselves, but through the grace of God; for faith is not of nature, nor the produce of man's free will, but is the gift of God's grace; it is a fruit of electing grace, an instance of distinguishing grace, it is owing to efficacious grace, and comes along with effectual calling grace, through the word preached, the means of grace; and is supported and maintained by the grace of God; the Ethiopic version renders it, "he preached much to them, who believed in the grace of God;" that is, in the gospel, the grace of God, which they received and professed; or in the love and favor of God, they were rooted and grounded in, and persuaded of. ((8:28) (Acts 18:28). "For he mightily convinced the Jews," etc. His reasoning was so strong and nervous, his arguments so weighty and powerful, and the passages he produced out of the Old Testament so full and pertinent, that the Jews were not able to stand against him; they could not object to the texts of Scripture he urged, nor to the sense he gave of them, nor answer the arguments founded upon them; he was an overmatch for them; they were refuted by him over and over, and were confounded to the last degree: and that "publicly" in their synagogue, before all the people; which increased their shame and confusion; and was the means of spreading the gospel, of bringinng others to the faith of it, and of establishing them in it, who had already received it: "shewing by the Scriptures;" of the Old Testament, which the Jews received and acknowledged as the word of God: "that Jesus was Christ;" that Messiah, which these Scriptures spoke of, whom God had promised, and the church of God expected; and which was the main thing in controversy between the Jews and the Christians, and it still is. ((9:1) (Acts 19:1). "And it came to pass while Apollos was at Corinth," etc. Whither he came after the Apostle Paul; and where he watered what the apostle had planted, and where he became very famous and eminent; insomuch that he was set up, though not with his will, at the head of a party, in opposition to the chief of the apostles, Peter and Paul; see (I Corinthians 1:12), and (I Corinthians 3:4-5,6), and (I Corinthians 4:6). "Paul having passed through the upper coast;" that is, of Phrygia, Galatia, Pontus, Bithynia, Lydia, Lyconia, and Paphlagonia; "came to Ephesus;" into Ionia, of which Ephesus was the chief city, and lay near the sea; wherefore the other countries are called the upper coasts; hither he came, according to his promise in ((8:21) (Acts 18:21). "And finding certain disciples;" such as believed in Christ, made a profession of Him, and had been baptized in His name, for such were commonly called disciples: these do not seem to be persons, who were either converted by Paul, when he was at Ephesus before, or by Apollos, who had been there since, and was gone; but rather some who came hither from other parts, since the apostle was at this place; though indeed his stay at Ephesus before was short, they might be here, and he not hear of them. ((9:2) (Acts 19:2). "He said unto them, have ye received the Holy Ghost," etc. Meaning, not the special, regenerating, and sanctifying grace of the Holy Ghost, for that is supposed in their being disciples and believers, but the extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost, for it follows, "since ye believed?" that is, in Christ; which is taking for granted, that they had received the special grace of the Spirit of God; for this believing is to be understood of true, spiritual, special faith in Christ: "and they said unto him, we have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost;" by which they could not mean the person of the Holy Ghost; for they must have known that there was such a divine person as the Holy Ghost: from the writings of the Old Testament, with which they were conversant: and from the ministry of John into whose baptism they were baptized; who saw the Spirit of God descend on Jesus, and bore witness of it; and declared, that Christ, who was to come after him, would baptize with the Holy Ghost: nor could they mean the special grace of the Spirit, which they themselves had received; but the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit of God, which they at present knew nothing of, and which were afterwards bestowed upon them: they knew that there were prophecies in the Old Testament, concerning the effusion of the Spirit in the last days, in the days of the Messiah; but they had heard that these had had their accomplishment; they had heard nothing of the day of Pentecost, and of the pouring out of the Spirit upon the apostles then, nor of any instance of this kind since; they did not know that the Holy Ghost was yet, ((9) (John 7:49); they knew He was promised, but not that He was given; the Ethiopic version, to avoid the difficulty of the text, renders it, "we have only heard that there was an Holy Ghost." ((9:3) (Acts 19:3). "And he said unto them, unto what then were ye baptized?" etc. The apostle takes it for granted that they were baptized, since they were not only believers, but disciples; such as not only believed with the heart, but had made a profession of their faith, and were followers of Christ; but asks unto what they were baptized; either in whose name they were baptized, since Christian baptism was administered in the name of the Spirit, as well as in the name of the Father and of the Son; or what attended or followed their baptism, seeing sometimes the Holy Ghost fell upon persons, either before baptism, or at it, or after it: "and they said, unto John's baptism;" some think they had never been baptized at all with water-baptism, only had received the doctrine preached by John concerning repentance and remission of sins, and so were baptized into him, professing the same doctrine he did, just as the Israelites were baptized unto Moses; others think they were baptized, but very wrongly, being baptized in the name of John, and not in the name of Jesus Christ; and so, as it was not Christian baptism they had submitted to, it was right to baptize them again: but neither of these are probable, for it is not likely that they should receive John's doctrine, and not his baptism; that they should be his disciples and followers, and not attend to the more distinguishing branch of his ministry; and it is still more unlikely that they should be baptized in his name, who preached Jesus Christ to his followers, and pointed out to them the Lamb of God, and declared Him to be greater than he; it seems rather that they were baptized, and that they were baptized in the name of Christ, as John's disciples were, as the apostle affirms in the following words. ((9:4) (Acts 19:4). "Then said Paul," etc. In reply to their answer, understanding them that they were baptized by John, he takes it up, and gives an account of John's baptism; showing how agreeable it was, and that it was the same baptism with the baptism of Christ, being administered in His name: "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance;" which required repentance antecedent to it, and was a fruit and effect, and so an evidence of it: "saying unto the people;" the people of the Jews, the common people, the multitude that attended on his ministry: "that they should believe on Him, which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus;" so that he preached faith in Christ, as well as repentance towards God; and made the one as well as the other a necessary prerequisite unto baptism; which shows, that his baptism and Christian baptism are the same. ((9:5) (Acts 19:5). "When they heard this," etc. That is, the people to whom John preached, his hearers, when they heard of the Messiah, and that Jesus was He, and that it became them to believe in Him: "they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus;" not the disciples that Paul found at Ephesus, but the hearers of John; for these are the words of the Apostle Paul, giving an account of John's baptism, and of the success of his ministry, showing that his baptism was administered in the name of the Lord Jesus; and not the words of Luke the Evangelist, recording what followed upon his account of John's baptism; for then he would have made mention of the apostle's name, as he does in the next verse; and have said, when they heard this account, they were baptized by Paul in the name of the Lord Jesus: the historian reports two things, first what Paul said, which lies in ((9:4) (Acts 19:4-5), then what he did, ((9:5) (Acts 19:5), where he repeats his name, as was necessary; as that he laid his hands upon them, which was all that was needful to their receiving the extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost, having been already baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus: which sense is the more confirmed by the particles men and de, which answer to one another in ((9:4) (Acts 19:4-5), and show the words to be a continuation of the apostle's speech, and not the words of the historian, which begin in the next verse. Beza's ancient copy adds, "for the remission of sins." ((9:6) (Acts 19:6). "And when Paul had laid his hands upon them," etc. They having been before baptized, not by him, but by John, or one of his disciples, in the name of the Lord Jesus; just as Peter and John laid their hands upon the believing Samaritans, who had been before baptized by Philip, (Acts 8:14-15,16-17), and the same extraordinary effects followed; "the Holy Ghost came on them;" in His extraordinary gifts, whose special grace they had before an experience of: "and they spake with tongues;" with other tongues, or in other languages, which they had never learned or had been used to, as the disciples did at the day of "Pentecost: and prophesied;" preached, having an extraordinary gift at once, of explaining the prophecies of the Old Testament, and also foretold things to come.

Temperance Facts

---February 6, 1941

The above is the title of a little book published by the "Minnesota Temperance Movement," 204 Hodgson Building, Minneapolis, Minn. It is not a book of arguments, but a book of facts. It is well worth reading. It gives facts, and states the authority for the same -for each fact. If you wish to know, for certain, what the liquor business is, and what the effects of drink are, even in small quantities, and the facts as to the benefits in tax payments to the government, you should get one of these books. Send 25 cents to the publishers and ask them to send you a copy. Five copies may be had for only one dollar. We are giving this notice free, because we desire that our readers may know where to get correct information concerning the facts about the liquor business. C. H. C.

Waldensian Confessions

---February 20, 1941

We have been requested to publish the Confession of Faith of the Waldenses. They put forth a Confession of Faith in the year 1120. This Confession was as follows:

1. We believe and firmly maintain all that is contained in the twelve articles of the symbol, commonly called the apostles' creed, and we regard as heretical whatever is inconsistent with the said twelve articles.
2. We believe that there is one God-the Father, Son and Holy Spirit.
3. We acknowledge for sacred canonical Scriptures the books of the Holy Bible.
(Here follows the title of each, exactly conformable to our received canon, but which it is deemed, on that account, quite unnecessary to particularize.)
4. The books above-mentioned teach us-That there is one God, almighty, unbounded in wisdom, and infinite in goodness, and who, in His goodness, has made all things. For He created Adam after His own image and likeness. But through the enmity of the devil, and his own disobedience, Adam fell, sin entered into the world, and we became transgressors in and by Adam.
5. That Christ had been promised to the fathers who received the law, to the end that, knowing their sin by the law, and their unrighteousness and insufficiency, they might desire the coming of Christ to make satisfaction for their sins, and to accomplish the law by Himself.
6. That at the time appointed of the Father, Christ was born-a time when iniquity everywhere abounded, to make it manifest that it was not for the sake of any good in ourselves, for all were sinners, but that He, who is true, might display His grace and mercy toward us.
7. That Christ is our life, and truth, and peace, and righteousness-our Shepherd and Advocate, our Sacrifice, and Priest, who died for the salvation of all who should believe, and rose again for their justification.
8. And we also firmly believe, that there is no other mediator, or advocate with God the Father, but Jesus Christ. And as to the Virgin Mary, she was holy, humble, and full of grace; and this we also believe concerning all other saints, namely, that they are waiting in heaven for the resurrection of their bodies at the day of judgment.
9. We also believe, that, after this life, there are but two places-one for those that are saved, the other for the damned, which (two) we call paradise and hell, wholly denying that imaginary purgatory of Antichrist, invented in opposition to the truth.
10. Moreover, we have ever regarded all the inventions of men (in the affairs of religion) as an unspeakable abomination before God; such as the festival days and vigils of saints, and what is called holy-water, the abstaining from flesh on certain days, and such like things, but above all, the masses.
11. We hold in abhorrence all human inventions, as proceeding from Anti-Christ, which produce distress (alluding probably to the voluntary penances and mortification imposed by the Catholics on themselves.-Jones), and are prejudicial to the liberty of the mind.
12. We consider the Sacraments as signs of holy things, or as the visible emblems of invisible blessings. We regard it as proper and even necessary that believers use these symbols or visible forms when it can be done. Notwithstanding which, we maintain that believers may be saved without these signs, when they have neither place nor opportunity of observing them.

13. We acknowledge no sacraments (as of divine appointment) but baptism and the Lord's Supper.

14. We honor the secular powers, with subjection, obedience, promptitude, and payment. On page 277 of Jones' History is an epitome of the Waldensian Confession in the twelfth century. It is not the Confession itself, but a summary, or epitome, of it. It is as follows: The Centuriators of Magdeburg, in their History of the Christian Church, under the twelfth century, recite from an old manuscript the following epitome of the opinions of the Waldenses of that age. In articles of faith the authority of the Holy Scriptures is the highest; and for that reason it is the standard of judging; so that whatsoever doth not agree with the Word of God, is deservedly to be rejected and avoided. The decrees of Fathers and Councils are (only) so far to be approved as they agree with the Word of God. The reading and knowledge of the Holy Scriptures is open to, and is necessary for all men, the laity as well as the clergy; and moreover the writings of the prophets and apostles are to be read rather than the comments of men. The sacraments of the church of Christ are two, baptism and the Lord's Supper; and in the latter, Christ has instituted the receiving in both kinds, both for priests and people. Masses are impious; and it is madness to say masses for the dead. Purgatory is the invention of men; for they who believe go into eternal life; they who believe not, into eternal damnation. The invoking and worshipping of dead saints is idolatry. The church of Rome is the whore of Babylon. We must not obey the pope and bishops, because they are the wolves of the church of Christ. The pope hath not the primacy over all the churches of Christ; neither hath he the power of both swords. That is the church of Christ, which hears the pure doctrine of Christ, and observes the ordinances instituted by Him, in whatsoever place it exists. Vows of celibacy are the inventions of men, and productive of uncleanness. So many orders (of the clergy), so many marks of the beast. Monks are a filthy carcass. So many superstitious dedications of churches, commemorations of the dead, benedictions of creatures, pilgrimages, so many forced fastings, so many superfluous festivals, those perpetual bellowings, (alluding to the practice of chanting) and the observations of various other ceremonies, manifestly obstructing the teaching and learning of the Word, are diabolical inventions. The marriage of priests is both lawful and necessary. They put forth a third Confession of Faith in the year 1544, as follows:

1. We believe that there is but one God, who is a Spirit- the Creator of all things- the Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in us all; who is to be worshipped in spirit and in truth-upon whom we are continually dependent, and to whom we ascribe praise for our life, food, raiment, health, sickness, prosperitiy, and adversity. We love Him as the source of all goodness; and reverence Him as that sublime Being, who searches the reins and trieth the hearts of the children of men.
2. We believe that Jesus Christ is the Son and image of the Father-that in Him all the fullness of the Godhead dwells, and that by Him alone we know the Father. He is our Mediator and Advocate; nor is there any other name given under heaven by which we can be saved. In His name alone we call upon the Father, using no other prayers than those contained in the Holy Scriptures, or such as are in substance agreeable thereunto.
3. We believe in the Holy Spirit as the Comforter, proceeding from the Father, and from the Son; by whose inspiration we are taught to pray; being by Him renewed in the spirit of our minds; who creates us anew unto good works, and from whom we receive the knowledge of the truth.

4. We believe that there is one holy church, comprising the whole assembly of the elect and faithful, that have existed from the beginning of the world, or that shall be to the end thereof. Of this church the Lord Jesus Christ is the head-it is governed by His Word and guided by the Holy Spirit. In the church it behooves all Christians to have fellowship. For her He (Christ) prays incessantly, and His prayer for it is most acceptable to God, without which indeed there could be no salvation.
5. We hold that the ministers of the church ought to be unblameable both in life and doctrine; and if found otherwise, they ought to be deposed from their office, and others substituted in their stead; and that no person ought to presume to take that honor unto himself but he who is called of God as was Aaron-that the duties of such are to feed the flock of God, not for filthy lucre's sake, or as having dominion over God's heritage, but as being examples to the flock, in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, and in chastity.
6. We acknowledge, that kings, princes, and governors, are the appointed and established ministers of God, whom we are bound to obey (in all lawful and civil concerns). For they bear the sword for the defence of the innocent, and the punishment of evil doers; for which reason we are bound to honor and pay them tribute. From this power and authority, no man can exempt himself, as is manifest from the example of the Lord Jesus Christ, who voluntarily paid tribute, not taking upon Himself any jurisdiction of temporal power.
7. We believe that in the ordinance of baptism the water is the visible and external sign, which represents to us that which, by virtue of God's invisible operation, is within us- namely, the renovation of our minds, and the mortification of our members through (the faith of) Jesus Christ. And by this ordinance we are received into the holy congregation of God's people, previously professing and declaring our faith and change of life.
8. We hold that the Lord's Supper is a commemoration of, and thanksgiving for, the benefits which we have received by His sufferings and death-and that it is to be received in faith and love-examining ourselves, that so we may eat of that bread and drink of that cup, as it is written in the Holy Scriptures.
9. We maintain that marriage was instituted of God-that it is holy and honorable, and ought to be forbidden none, provided there be no obstacle from the divine Word.
10. We contend, that all those in whom the fear of God dwells, will thereby be led to please Him, and to abound with the good works (of the gospel) which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them-which are love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, gentleness, sobriety, and the other good works enforced in the Holy Scriptures.
11. On the other hand, we confess that we consider it to be our duty to beware of false teachers, whose object is to divert the minds of men from the true worship of God, and to lead them to place their confidence in the creature, as well as to depart from the good works of the gospel, and to regard the inventions of men.
12. We take the Old and the New Testament for the rule of our life, and we agree with the general confession of faith contained in (what is usually termed) the apostles' creed. Thus we have in the foregoing what were the principles held to by the ancient Waldenses. It is the same doctrine and order held sacred by true Primitive Baptists today. C. H. C.

What Is That To Thee?

---March 6, 1941

Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on His breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee? Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me. - (John 21:20-22). God's Book is the most wonderful book that has ever been written, or that ever will be written. There is something in it to fit the station and condition and doings of all people in every age of the world, and especially the life and experience and doings of His children. In the above text the Apostle Peter manifested a concern as to what John should do. He was, seemingly, at that moment more concerned about what another should do than he was about what he should, himself, be doing. It appears that he was making himself concerned about the affairs and doings of another, more than about his own affairs and his own doings. Our Lord's answer, summed up in our present day English, would be about this: It is none of your business what this man does. You attend to your own business-follow thou me. In the present time it seems that almost the entire world is manifesting great interest and concern as to what the other fellow does. That spirit is greatly manifested in and among the nations of the world, as well as among individuals. Nations are meddling with other nations, and seem to be much concerned about what they are doing and what they intend to do. How much better would all material things be if all would attend to their own business, and quit meddling with other folks and their affairs! The same spirit is frequently manifested in the true church today. We see so many who are manifesting so much concern as to "what shall this man do?" instead of "attending to their own business," and, for themselves, doing as Jesus said, "Follow thou me." On one occasion, recorded in ((9:38) (Mark 9:38-39) and ((9) (Luke 9:49), we have an instance of the disciples meddling with another. "And John answered Him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbid him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me." "For he that is not against us, is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." How much better would it be for us if we would all be engaged in giving even a cup of water instead of "grumbling" so much about what someone else is doing. May the Lord pity us. C. H. C.

For The Poor

For some time you have heard something about a new publication - something on a different line. Finally, we have succeeded in getting out the first issue. The name of the publication is For The Poor. The first issue, dated January, 1941, contains the following: A sermon delivered by Elder Cayce, at Atkins, Ark., July, 1940; taken down by Sister Grace Claggett; subject, "Moses Led the Flock;" a sermon delivered by Christmas Evans at an association in Wales in 1817; subject, "The Demoniack of Gadara;" "And Yet There Is Room," by Gideon. The last two were published in Zion's Advocate in 1899 and 1870, and a poem copied from the same paper in 1857. The February issue will contain a sermon delivered by Elder J. L. Collings; subject, "Gathering Up The Fragments," and some good articles published long ago. Turn to the last page of this paper and read the club offer for the two papers. We have a few copies of the first issue on hand. We will start your subscription with the first issue as long as we have any. We aim to have a picture of the present day preacher in the paper when we can. I am sure you will enjoy reading For The Poor. Try it and then tell me. Will you? In hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Little Things

---March 6, 1941

Elder Webb has given the title of "Little Things" to his book containing much of his writings. Work is progressing on the book in our office now. He is working in the office doing some of the typesetting. A number of pages have already been printed. Many of the articles the book will contain were published in our columns in the past few years. We think it is going to be a good book, well worth the price it will sell for. Any who have given him their names as subscribers for the book will oblige him if they will send their remittance to him now for the book, or for any number you agreed to take. It will help to pay for the material which has been purchased for the book, and will help to pay for the labor being done. The work will be carried on as fast as possible, so that the books may all be finished up as quickly as it can be done. We recommend the work to our readers. C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 2:9-10

But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.-(I Corinthians 2:9-10). We have been requested to write some on the ninth verse, which ends with the word him. There are some things which cannot be discovered or found out by the seeing with the natural eye. Neither can they be learned by the hearing with the natural ear. Neither can they be discovered by searching. They never even so much as enter into the heart of the natural man. "The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God; God is not in all his thoughts." -((0:4) (Psalms 10:4). The things that pertain to God and godliness are not in his thoughts. They have never entered into his heart, and never will. Something must be done for such a person (the wicked), not something done by him, but for him, before he will ever even think upon the name of the Lord, in a right way. He must be changed from his state of wickedness, must be brought out of that, before spiritual thoughts or desires ever enter or proceed from his heart. His heart must be changed first. Who can change a man's heart? The heart is the seat of affections. Who can change a man's affections, and cause him to love the things he now hates, or to hate the things which he now loves? "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh." -((26) (Ezekiel 36:26). "The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord." -(Proverbs 16:1). From these expressions we learn that the Lord is the One who can and does change the heart. He gives a heart of flesh. He prepares the heart. Without this preparation of heart, without this heart of flesh, one does not, and cannot, desire or love spiritual things. "Eye hath not seen." Here is something which cannot be learned, or known, or discovered, through the power of natural sight or vision. True, with the natural eye, we can and do behold many of the wonders in the realm of nature. We can see the great mountains, and valleys, the broad rivers, and expansive plains; we can see the stars which bedeck the heavens; we can see the moon, which rules the light by night; we can see the sun, the great center of the solar system; we can see the great variety of minerals in the earth, upon which we live and move; but we cannot see the invisible things of God. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handywork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard." -(Psalms 19:1-3). These material things which we see speak in thunder tones, by day and by night, in all the habitable parts of the world, and declare that God is, and that He is the God that He is-the great, infinite, eternal, all wise, omnipotent Jehovah God, the great Creator of all material things. But the wicked, unregenerated sinner cannot see beyond these visible material things. The great and wonderful spiritual blessings which God has prepared for His humble poor are not discovered, they are not found, they are not learned by the power of natural sight. "Eye hath not seen." That is just as true today as it was when it was written. It is not true then because it was written; but it was written because it was true. It had always been that way; it was that way then, and it is that way now; and it always will be that way. No sinner, then, ever has learned these precious things which God has in store for His afflicted people by reading any book, or by reading any man's writings, or by reading the tracts which men print and circulate, or by reading and studying their Sunday School lessons. They are not discovered or learned that way. "Nor ear heard." These things cannot be learned by the hearing of the natural ear. One hears the sound of the preacher's voice, when he is preaching, with the natural ear. It is a natural voice, and it is heard with the natural ear. But these are things that are not imparted by the organ of hearing, for it is true that "nor ear heard." Jesus said to some wicked unregenerated Jews, "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word." -(John 8:43). They heard the vocal sound of His voice; but they did not understand His teaching. Why did they not understand it? Because they could not. The understanding does not come that way. They had hearts of stone; they did not have the hearts of flesh. One must have a heart of flesh, an heart of understanding, in order to be able to understand. If such characters, or such persons, could not understand the preaching which Jesus did while He was here in the world, preaching His own glorious and everlasting gospel, do you suppose we have any preachers in the world today who can do a better job in making them understand than He did? If a preacher does preach in such a way as to make the world understand and "fall in" with his preaching, it can be for no other reason than that his preaching is of the world. "They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them. We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error." - (I John 4:5-6). The inspired writer here gives an infallible rule by which we may know a man who is of the world in his preaching. If he preaches so the world hears and believes his preaching, it is because he is of the world in his preaching. John tells us his preaching is the spirit of error. It is not the truth; he does not preach the truth. He preaches false doctrines of men-and perhaps the doctrines of devils. But the world does not hear those who are of God in their preaching; the world does not hear those who preach the truth, as God has given it to us in His Book. If one does hear us, why does he hear us? Can it be for any other reason than that he was first made to be of God, seeing it is true that "he that knoweth God heareth us;" and "he that is not of God heareth not us?" "Nor ear heard." "But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit." If you know and realize something of the greatness, the love, the justice, the majesty, the righteousness, the glory, the mercy, the riches, the presence of God, it is because some of these things have been revealed to you by His Spirit. If you have been given to know something of the glories which await the Lord's humble poor beyond this vale of tears, it is because something has been revealed to you by His Spirit. It is by the Spirit of God that you have been given to know something of the things of God. Hence, though you be poor in spirit, and hunger and thirst after righteousness, you have the Spirit of God dwelling in your poor heart; and all the good things which God has in store for His humble poor are yours, and they are yours to enjoy in all eternity beyond this world of sorrow and trouble. May the Lord graciously bless the reader, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Elder Pittman Passed Away

---March 20, 1941

At about nine thirty on last Friday night, March 14, we received a message from Sister Pittman, of Luray, Va., that Elder Pittman passed away that afternoon at 6:50. It was a great shock to us. We do not know, at this writing, whether he had been ill, or if he was stricken and passed away suddenly and unexpectedly. For several years he had been editor and publisher of the Advocate and Messenger. We have been together often, and our association with him has always been pleasant to us. We have always co-operated in our labors as editors and publishers of our periodicals. We have always looked forward to receiving each issue of the Advocate and Messenger. Elder Pittman was untiring in his labors for peace, and encouraged the brotherhood to "strive for the things that make for peace" in Zion. He labored to encourage brethren to steer clear of extremes. We loved him dearly. We deeply sympathize with Sister Pittman and the family. We have had trouble in our journey along the path of life, and therefore we know how to sympathize with those who are in trouble. In our sorrows and troubles we have been given, from time to time, to experience the truthfulness and certainty of the Lord's blessed assurance given to the eminent Apostle Paul, that "My grace is sufficient for thee." His grace is sufficient in every time of need and in every trouble. May His consoling presence be sweetly manifested to this dear family in this sad and trying hour, is our humble prayer. We sorrow and grieve with them. Surely another great man has fallen in Israel. May the good Lord grant, in mercy, to fill up the broken ranks. Lord, grant to give us men who will, like Elder Pittman, meekly and humbly, yet fearlessly, stand for the eternal principles of truth. May the Lord grant to shower down His rich blessings upon the bereaved family, and upon the churches our dear brother served. C. H. C.

Special Service

Our church here in Thornton agreed at our last meeting to have song service on Saturday morning, from ten to eleven; then the regular preaching service; then dinner on the ground; then song service in the afternoon. Then song service Sunday morning from ten to eleven; then the regular preaching service; then dinner on the ground; then song service in the afternoon. This on Saturday and first Sunday in April. Brother A. A. Gentry, Quitman, Ark., has been requested to be with us to help in the song service, and we have a promise from him that he will try to be with us. All are invited to come and be with us. May the Lord bless the service to our good and to His glory. C. H. C.

Book Wanted

---March 20, 1941

Years ago Elder J. R. Respass wrote a pamphlet on the book of Esther. He was then editor of the Gospel Messenger, which was published at Butler, Ga. The articles contained in the pamphlet were also published in The Gospel Messenger. We are anxious to get a copy of that pamphlet. Will you please search your place and try to find a copy of it for us? We would also be glad to get all the old copies of that paper that it is possible to get. Will you please make a search for any of them? Please write and tell us what you want for the pamphlet or the papers. C. H. C.

By Grace

---March 20, 1941

The following article by Elder G. T. Mayo, then of Palmersville, Tenn., but now of Dresden, Tenn., was published in The Primitive Baptist of November 26, 1890, under the above heading. As principles never change, what was a principle of truth then is a principle of truth now. Further comment is unnecessary. C. H. C.
THE ARTICLE

There are some claiming to be Baptists in our land who love to quote the above and dwell on it all the time and we think it one of the grandest themes that ever engaged the attention of the human family, but this same few have an erroneous idea of salvation. They think that a saved man can be at ease while others are carrying the news to all the world and bearing all the burdens, while they themselves are doing all in their power to hinder the spread of the gospel. Were it not for these who proclaim the gospel, this same few could not claim an existence in the world. All now composing that select few were converted under a people who have the gospel for a lost world. Why don't they quote the whole verse: "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Why don't they go entreating men and women to repent of their sins and believe in Christ to the saving of their souls? There are Baptists in all countries and have been through all the ages and it is remarkably strange that this same few were never heard of or known in any country but the United States. Do you know this people?

REPLY To the readers of The Primitive Baptist-The above article appeared in that great sheet which is published in the town of Martin, and one would think from the name it wears that it would take things clean where it goes; it is called the Baptist Reaper. I guess they will attach a binder to it by another season; they would attach one now if it was in their power and bind all that refuse to take part in their modern man-made institutions of saving sinners. But will say that the above is headed "By Grace," as you will see, and goes on to say that there are some claiming to be Baptists in our land who love to quote the above and dwell on it all the time. Notice he says "we think it one of the grandest themes that ever engaged the attention of the human family." I will say, then, that this few must be right, according to his views, when they are quoting and dwelling on this grand subject. So they are right so far. But you will see that he says this same few have an erroneous idea of salvation; and he says "they think that a saved man can be at ease while others are carrying the good news to all the world, and bearing all the burdens." Notice, he says "they think that a saved man can be at ease." I will say that we think that the saved have as good a right to be easy as the unsaved. But he says, "while others are carrying the good news to all the world and bearing all the burdens." I will ask, Who does he mean by others? He goes on to tell what these few think, and says "they think the saved can be at ease while others must do the work." Does he mean that we think the unsaved must do the work that he speaks of? It seems that he does. Now I will say that we don't think the unsaved could do much work for the Lord, though he leaves the impression that that is what we believe. If you think so, you are sadly mistaken, my brother. But he says "these few are doing all they can to hinder the spread of the gospel." Now I will have to differ with the brother here, and say in reply, that these few whom he says are doing all they can to hinder the spread of the gospel are the only people who proclaim the gospel, but not another which is not another, but a perversion of the gospel, as some do who claim to be doing so much, like the writer in the Reaper. Though I will say, in reply, that if this few have ever done anything to hinder anyone from spreading what he calls the gospel, I never heard of it. I don't think they ever stopped any man's mouth, or even tried to; but will say that "If it seems evil unto you (and your people) to serve the Lord, choose ye this day whom you will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." But the writer of the above says, "if it were not for those who proclaim the gospel, this same few could not claim an existence in the world." To this, I will say that you are right in that, for if it were not for those who proclaim the true gospel, we could not claim an existence in the world, for just such sheets as the Reaper and its followers would kick us out, quick. But this same few whom he hates so bad, are the people who proclaim the gospel of the Son of God, and so we have an existence in the world despite all the fiery darts that may be hurled at us from the author of the above. I am sure if it was left to him that he would never preach anything that would give this few an existence, but he would do all he could to preach them out of existence. Can't the reader see that from the tone of his article? But I will say to this good brother that the gospel is being proclaimed by this few, and they will be here, when you are done in this world, proclaiming the same true gospel, "salvation by grace," as they are doing now. So don't fret, but keep cool, for you can't get rid of us, for God said He would not leave Himself without a witness. But the writer says, "all that compose this select few are those who were converted under a people that have the gospel for a lost world." Of course he means by this that they are the people that have the gospel, therefore this few were converted under them. Now let me ask the brother how he found that out? Have you seen all this few, and did they tell you of this, or did some of your brethren tell you that? If they did of course that would make it so and give you the right to say so; but I will say that you might be mistaken about this; but if you think these few were converted under your people, I think you could be heard to sigh and say that we made a great mistake in that part of the work, as you think this few are doing so much to stop the gospel. However, we were not all converted under your preaching, as you would have the reader believe, but we were converted by the power of Him who speaks and it is done, commands and it stands fast, and works when and where He pleases. And we are thankful to say this is what gives us our existence, and not you, nor your people, as you claim. I will relieve you of that burden, knowing that you can't stay His hand nor say unto Him "what doest thou?" But enough on that. He goes on to say, "why don't they quote the whole verse?" "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God." Now let me say this text tells exactly how we came to have an existence in the world, as I have shown above. It is the gift of God, not of ourselves or of any other people, as the brother wants it, but "the gift of God," as the text reads. But the reader will see that he claims that we were converted under the preaching of a people who he claims has the gospel for a lost world. So you see he can't swallow the whole verse, after quoting it, as it does not suit his work system. But let me ask the writer, as he is so strict about taking the whole, why he did not quote the next verse, which reads: "Not of works, lest any man should boast." Ah! he knew where to stop. He knew that would blow his work system wide open. Let me ask who are boasting over their works? Is it these few, who, he says, don't do anything, or is it those whom he says have all the burden to bear, and who, he says, are the cause of our conversion? Let me say that he clears us from boasting. So you see these few are identified by the next text. It would have been far better for you, my brother, if it had not all been quoted, for it cuts his little system off, according to your own statement. The very thing you hold against us is the very thing that puts us in harmony with the text; for it is the gift of God, "not of works, lest any man should boast." Please remember this, and stop your boasting, or just say that this few can have this Scripture, as you are bound to do. But a few more remarks and I am through. He says "this few have an erroneous idea of salvation." Let me ask him whether he knows what kind of an idea they have? I will say that an erroneous idea is a false idea. Now we will see who have the erroneous idea. "This few" he speaks of believe that salvation is the gift of God; the apostle believed the same. Is this erroneous? If so, the apostle had an erroneous idea. "This few" believe that salvation "is not of works, lest any man should boast." And this is what the apostle said. Is this erroneous? If so, the apostle had an erroneous idea of salvation. Now, my brother, you say that this few "let others bear all the burden, therefore do all the work." Now this is your idea of salvation, i. e., that it depends upon our works. Hence, I will ask, whose idea is erroneous-this man and his brethren who claim to be doing so much, and who contend that salvation depends upon their works, or the people who stand identified with the apostle, when he says "not of works, lest any man should boast?" Now I think the brother can see where he is off about this idea of salvation. Again, he says, "why don't they (this few) go entreating men and women to repent of their sins, to believe in Christ to the saving of their souls?" I would say to that, "this is the work of God that ye believe on Him (Christ) whom He hath sent." -John vi. 29. Don't you see, my brother, that it is the work of God, and not your work or mine to make people believe? Neither can you dispute this without disputing the above Scripture. Let me say here, you are showing again who have an erroneous idea of salvation. Remember that Christ came to call sinners to repentance, and this is not in your power nor mine. This is why "this few" don't engage in your work system. I hope you understand this. But he likes to call us "a few." I guess he thinks this will make someone feel little; but let us see what Christ said; "Fear not, little flock, for it's the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." -(Luke 12:32). My brother would like it better if it would read "fear not, big flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to offer you the kingdom, if you will carry the good news and bear the burden." But let's see a little more about "the few." I call you to ((3) (Matthew 7:13-14)) "Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." You have given us the right name, my brother; we will not fall out about that. You see where "the few" go to and also where the many go to. So I will close by quoting the text, "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." But he winds up by saying: "Do you know this people?" I will say, yes, my brother, every person in this country knows who can take the above Scripture as it stands. It is "this few" you speak of, and they are the only ones that can. So, my prayer is that God may give the brother repentance to the acknowledging of the truth, and remember that God will do His work. Yours in hope of eternal life. G. T. MAYO. Palmersville, Tenn.

We have been asked to give our views on (Matthew 19:16-21), but it is necessary to go on down to (Matthew 19:26) in order to get the whole lesson. (Matthew 19:16-26) reads as follows: And, behold, one came and said unto Him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And He said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto Him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. The young man saith unto Him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions. Then said Jesus unto His disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. When His disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved? But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible. In (0:25) (Luke 10:25) we are told that this young man was a lawyer, and his question is there recorded in this language: "And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted Him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" It is to be clearly seen from this that the question as recorded by Matthew, "What good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" is in the sense of inheriting. That is, "that I may have," or obtain or inherit, eternal life. All this shows that this young man thought that he could get to heaven, or be saved, or inherit eternal life by what he did. He believed that being saved in heaven depended upon the good things he did. Please carefully note his question, as recorded by Luke: "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" His idea was that here is an inheritance which comes by doing something-that there is something to do in order to inherit eternal life. An heir is one who inherits an estate. There are just two ways by which one may become an heir. One way is to be born into the family, born of the one who owns the estate. The other way is by adoption. This being a fact, then it is absurd to say that one may inherit an estate by doing something. It is absurd to say that one has to do something in order to be born into a certain family. Even the will of the one born is not consulted; he has no will in the matter at all. The same thing is true in the matter of adoption. It is silly to talk about the one who is adopted having something to do in order to the adoption. When a man adopts a child of another into his family, the child is not consulted. It is of the will of the one who does the adopting. The child does not do something in order to be adopted. There is no law for the child to comply with in order to the adoption. All the law is complied with by the one who does the adopting. The one who does the adopting makes his own selection, does his own selecting, and does all the complying with the law. But the one thus adopted thereby becomes an heir to the estate of the one who did the adopting. The child had nothing whatever to do with becoming an heir, whether it be by birth or adoption. If you had a case in court would you want an attorney to represent you in the court who knew no more than to think that one becomes an heir by doing something, or that one inherits an estate by the good things he might do? Do you think such an attorney would be competent, really, to practice law even in the lowest court of the land? If you wished to adopt a child into your family would you want to engage the service of a lawyer who did not know any more than to claim that the child had something to do in order that you might adopt him, or in order that he might be adopted into another family? Frankly, we would not. So much for that. We see what the idea was which this man had. Notice, too, that Luke tells us that this man came to the Saviour, not as an honest searcher for truth, but "tempted Him." Hence, when he said "Good Master," it was a hypocritical expression. He believed, as other Pharisees, that the Master was an imposter and a deceiver and not that He was the "Good Master." The Lord knew his thoughts and his hypocritical approach, and hence said, "Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God." This Pharisee did not believe that Jesus was the God-man; and so it was hypocrisy in him to say "Good Master." The Lord tried the man on his own platform- showed from his own claim that he could not be saved in the way that he thought. If one is to be saved by the good things he does, of course he must keep the law. Hence, the Saviour said, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." The young man asked, "Which?" Then the Master repeated the commandments, one of which is, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The young man then said, "All these things have I kept from my youth up." We are persuaded there are many in this day who claim to be doing many good things, who are just like this young man was. He claimed to have done something which he had not done. If a man loves his neighbor as himself he will not keep a dollar when his neighbor needs it. If one loves his neighbor as himself, he would be as glad for his neighbor to have a dollar as to have the dollar himself; if he has a dollar he would be as glad for his neighbor to have it as to keep it himself. He had not kept all these from his youth up. There is no man in nature who loves another as he loves him-helf. Human nature is not built that way. Self preservation is said to be the first law of nature. A man may feel that he loves his wife as he does himself, yet under certain conditions and circumstances he will forget the wife and endeavor to protect himself. These things are facts, brought about by the depravity of the human heart. It is, therefore, a fact, an everlasting truth, that the young man could not be saved on his own platform. The young man went away sorrowful. Thus he proved that he did not love his neighbor as himself. He was not willing to sell what he had and give to the poor. Then the Lord said, "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God." He did not say that "it is easier for a camel to go through the needle's eye;" but "through the eye of a needle." We have heard a dodge on this language like this: "There was an opening in the wall around Jerusalem called the needle's eye, and if a camel was stripped of his burden, and was not too large, he could just squeeze through that opening, by getting down on his knees," etc. But Jesus did not say the needle's eye, but the eye of a needle. The disciples understood that it was impossible for a camel to go through the eye of a needle. And yet the Saviour said this impossibility is easier than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. That is, it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a man to be saved, or to inherit eternal life, by doing good things. Let us remark here that it is easier for the largest camel that ever was on earth to go through the eye of a cambric needle than for one to be saved in heaven, or to inherit eternal life, by doing good things. The disciples were exceedingly amazed, and asked, "Who then can be saved?" No one can be saved the way this young man thought they could. The Saviour answered, "With men this is impossible." What is impossible? The thing they were talking about, of course, which was being saved. With men it is impossible to be saved. Could language be any plainer or any stronger than that? Yet, in the face of this plain, positive, and emphatic statement of the blessed Son of God, vain men will still say it is possible with men, and that all men could be saved, if they will only exercise their own will in the matter; that it has been made possible for all men to come to Jesus and be saved. But the statement made by the Lord still remains unchanged, "With men this is impossible." If the matter had been left just that way it would have been a dark picture; but it was not left that way. Jesus said, "But with God all things are possible." Again, What all tilings? Certainly, all tilings necessary to the salvation of the sinner. With God it is not impossible for a sinner to be saved; but with the sinner it is impossible. The Lord is mighty and able to save. His love is eternal, and as immutable as Himself. His love is stronger than death. He was able to save Saul of Tarsus. He was able to save poor illiterate fishermen. He was able to regenerate John the Baptist before he was bora of his mother. He was able to make David to hope while he was upon his mother's breast. He was able to sanctify a prophet from his mother's womb. Yes, and He is still able to save. He was able to reach your case, dear child, and give you a blessed hope of immortality beyond the grave. He is able to save our children, and our neighbors, and their children. And He is able to keep all His children unto eternal glory. "His mercy endureth for ever." Praise be to His holy name. May His blessings rest upon the reader, and may these thoughts be blessed of the Lord to your consolation. C. H. C.

Hope and Belief

---April 3, 1941

We have been requested to write on the difference between hope and belief. Hope is made up of expectation and desire. Hope means to expect and desire. We desire things which we do not hope for, because we do not expect them. We may believe that certain things will be a certain way, but we do not desire that they be that way. Hence, we are expecting them, but not desiring them; hence we are not hoping for them. One definition of belief is "strong conviction that a thing is true." We may have strong conviction that a thing is true, and yet not desire it; so we are not hoping for that thing. We may not desire that it be that way; but we believe it is that way. The evidence is such as to convince our judgment that the proposition is true, and that a certain thing will be a certain way; and yet we may wish it were not true, or that it will not be that way. Hence we are not hoping for it, but we are believing the proposition. We believe some folks are going to do some very bad things; but we are not hoping for them to do those things, for we are not desiring that they do them. These remarks are sufficient, we think, to show some of the difference between belief and hope. C. H. C.

For The Poor

For The Poor is the title of the new publication now being sent out from our office. It is a monthly publication, containing discourses delivered by some of our ministers of the present and discourses delivered years ago, and articles copied from old publications. Read what some have to say elsewhere in our columns, about this new publication. We are sure you will enjoy reading this new magazine, if you are among the great army of the poor. The price is only one dollar a year, or in club with The Primitive Baptist, only two dollars for both for one year. The price of For The Poor is so low that we cannot afford to have a delinquent list. It is only one dollar a year, and is strictly in advance. Names will be dropped when the time paid for expires. Subscribe now and get the back numbers beginning with the first issue, January, 1941. C. H. C.

Hebrews 9:27-28

---April 3, 1941

And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation.-(Hebrews 9:27-28). We have been asked for our views on verse 27, which ends with the word judgment. We quote both verses because they are so closely connected together. Note the word as in verse 27, and the word so in verse 28. "As it is appointed unto men once to die, so Christ was once offered," etc. Just as it is appointed unto men once to die, so was it appointed for Christ to be once offered. Christ was offered by appointment. The expression "but after this the judgment," seems to be a kind of after thought. The judgment comes after the appointment. And there is a judgment which comes after death. In that judgment the Lord will separate His people from the goats, those who are not His children. These are just a few of our thoughts in connection with the language. Of course, we have not here gone into the subject matter further contained in (Hebrews 9:28). Much could be written in connection with that, but we desist. We recognize the fact that we may be wrong in the way we see this matter, as it is a complex and difficult subject. C. H. C.

Another Good Man Gone

---April 3, 1941

Elder W. H. Lee, of Donaldson, Ark., passed away on Monday evening, March 24, at about 8:20, and was buried on Tuesday afternoon near his home. The funeral was conducted at the church in Donaldson by Elder Jno. R. Harris, Elder McCorkle (a Missionary brother) and the writer. He had been in feeble health for some months, gradually declining. He was not quite fifty-five years of age. He had been living in Donaldson for several years, and served the church there as pastor. He was also pastor of Harmony, near Warren, and of Mt. Paran, near Fordyce, and Mena, Ark. He will be greatly missed by the churches which he served, and by the brethren of this section. He was a faithful and true servant, and a devoted husband and father. We deeply sympathize with his bereaved family, and pray that God's rich blessings may rest upon them in this sad and trying hour. He was a good and true and faithful and devoted friend to us, and we feel our loss keenly. It seems that many of our true and faithful servants are being called to their better home, and that the ranks are being thinned out. May the Lord grant to give us men that are faithful and true to fill up the ranks. We need men in the ranks who love the cause of the Master, and who are true and faithful. C. H. C.

Romans 5:6-10

---May 1, 1941

For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life." -(Romans 5:6-10). Much is contained in the above quotation from Paul's letter to the church at Rome. Something was done for somebody when they were without strength. Certainly the apostle does not mean that they were without physical strength. Human beings, who are living the natural life, have natural, or physical strength. But in a state of nature they are without spiritual strength. Being without spiritual strength, they are unable to perform any spiritual act, either of the mind, or outward act. They must first have spiritual strength in order to perform any sort of spiritual act. But Christ died for them when they were without strength. His dying for them was in the past, and was when they were without strength. He died on Calvary's cross upwards of nineteen hundred years ago, now. It is too late now for one to do something in order that this death be for them. When He died, about nineteen hundred years ago, He either did die for you, or else He did not die for you. It is too late now for you to do something in order that the death be for you. Christ died in due time. It was at an appointed time. It was neither too early nor too late to accomplish the object for which He died. Those for whom He died were ungodly. Here is a display of grace and mercy- that the sinless and spotless Son of God would condescend to die for ungodly persons - that the Father would give His darling Son to die for ungodly persons - poor guilty sinners of Adam's lost and apostate race. Was it for crimes that I had done, He groaned upon the tree? Amazing pity, grace unknown, And love beyond degree! Perhaps there are some who would die for what is called a good man, but not every person would do that. "Scarcely for a righteous man will one die." Perhaps you would die for your best friend; but not one of us would die for an enemy. "But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." The word Christ means the anointed one. He was anointed with the Holy Spirit without measure. He was the anointed Son of God- the God-man. He was God manifest in the flesh. He was the Word that was made flesh, and dwelt among us. Here is a manifestation and proof of the love God the Father had for His chosen ones, the objects of His pity and grace. He gave His darling Son to leave the shining realms of bliss, the glory He had with the Father before the world was, and come into this low ground of sin and sorrow to suffer and to bleed and die on Calvary's cruel tree for them, though they were sinners- ungodly sinners, and without strength to serve and glorify His name. What wondrous love is this! What wondrous love is this, O my soul! O my soul! What wondrous love is this, O my soul! What wondrous love is this, That caused the Lord of bliss To bear the dreadful curse for my soul! To bear the dreadful curse for my soul! "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent His only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." - (I John 4:9-10) "Much more then." Much is great in quantity, extent or degree. More is greater; superior; increased; added or additional. Used with an adjective or adverb (as with much) to form the comparative degree, and is besides; in addition; further. So, now the apostle brings out something in addition, something greater. "Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him." In addition to being justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him. Who shall be saved from wrath through Him? Those who are justified by His blood. Who are justified by His blood? Those for whom He died. We will digress here just a little to ask: How could any be saved from wrath through Him, if there is no such thing as wrath hereafter for them to be saved from? If there is no such thing as a place of wrath, then no one is saved from wrath through Him, nor could anyone be saved from wrath through Him. He did not save anyone from an eternal hell, if there is no such thing as an eternal hell for them to be saved from. If there is no such thing as a place of future punishment, or torment, then Jesus did not save a single one of the whole race of Adam from anything at all. To deny that there is any such place, or any such thing, as a place of torment after this life, is to deny that Jesus saved anyone of all the race from anything. It is to deny the virtue and work of His atoning merit and blood. "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life." In this verse we have the plain declaration that some were reconciled to God by the death of the Lord Jesus. He did not simply make reconciliation possible, but He actually reconciled them to God. He made reconciliation. "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ." -(II Corinthians 5:18). Will some great modern theologian; some D. D., or some D. D., LL. D., please tell us what can hinder the final deliverance and salvation from eternal ruin of any poor sinner who has been reconciled to God by the death of His Son? If one has been reconciled to God, what can hinder or prevent his salvation, or deliverance from eternal woe and misery? In this verse the apostle uses the words much more again. The words being reconciled are translated from a word which is in the Greek aorist tense, which is in constant use in the narrative of past transactions. Literally, then, the original word means having been reconciled. Who shall be saved by His life? Those who were reconciled to God by His death. Who were reconciled to God by His death? Those for whom He died. Could the inspired apostle have used words that could possibly have expressed the truth of the fact any stronger than "all for whom Christ died shall be saved?" He positively affirms in this Scripture, in these verses, that all for whom Christ died shall be saved. Christ died for the very purpose, the express purpose, that they be brought to God. "For Christ hath also once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God." -(Pet 3:18) (I Peter 3:18). This was the purpose which was designed to be accomplished by His death-that these be brought to God for whom He died. Do you, dear reader, believe that the purpose of His death shall be a failure? The Lord, speaking through the Prophet Isaiah concerning the Lord Jesus and His work, said, "Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon Him: He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause His voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall He not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till He have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for His law." -(Isaiah 41:1-4). As He shall not fail, it follows that each one for whom He laid down His precious life on Calvary's cross will finally be brought to God, and given to live with Him in eternal glory. It is not only true that He shall not fail, but He shall not even be discouraged. He knew that the purpose designed to be accomplished by His death would most certainly be fulfilled. Thanks be to His blessed and glorious name for the certain and sure deliverance of all the poor sinners of Adam's race for whom He laid down His precious life. Dear dying Lamb! thy precious blood shall never lose its power, Till all the ransomed church of God Are saved to sin no more. When this poor, lisping, stammering tongue Lies silent in the grave, Then in a nobler, sweeter song I'll sing thy power to save. He is worthy of all the praise and adoration and service which poor sinners, who have been blessed with a sweet hope in the merits of His atoning blood, can render unto Him here in this world of sadness and sorrow. Lord, help us to love thee more and serve thee better while we are permitted to continue to live in this old world. C. H. C.

Elder Webb's Book

---May 1, 1941

We are now at work on Elder Webb's book, which he has named "Little Things." It will be approximately 300 or 400 pages, printed in good clear type, and on good paper, with a good paper cover. The price will be only one dollar for one book. It will contain his writings, most of which have appeared in the columns of The Primitive Baptist during the past number of years. It will be good and instructive reading, and is well worth the price asked for it. In fact, most books of not more than half the size of this book sell for that much or more. Any of our readers may send a dollar to us for one of these books and one will be sent to you as soon as they are ready to mail out. Work is progressing with it as fast as possible. You can enclose a dollar for this book when you are renewing your subscription, and thus save some expense of sending an extra letter for the book. Do not fail to send your order soon, as only a limited edition will be printed. C. H. C.

Are They God's Choice?

---May 15, 1941

On page 164 of the Zion's Landmark of April 15, 1941, is an article signed by Thomas W. Kimsey, of High Point, N. C, in which he is trying to argue that God fixed and arranged everything in eternity that transpires in time. There is just one expression which we desire to call attention to. Mr. Kimsey says: "We cannot speak a word unless God chooses the words." It seems to us that here is about as grave a charge as we have ever heard or read against the Lord of glory. Let us kindly examine such sentiment just a little. In (0:7) (Exodus 20:7) and (Deuteronomy 5:11) the Lord, in His law, said, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain." It is positively and expressly forbidden by the Lord to take His name in vain. But Kimsey says "we cannot speak a word unless God chooses the words." Some men do take the name of the Lord in vain; some men curse and swear, and bitter and bloodcurdling oaths proceed out of their mouths. If Brother Kimsey is right in his statement, God made choice of the blasphemous oaths which men utter, and they could not have uttered such words unless the Lord had made choice of the words-yet the blessed Lord has expressly and positively forbidden the use of such language! According to Brother Kimsey, the Lord chose the words they used, or spoke, and they could not have spoken the words unless the Lord had made choice of the words-and this in the face of the fact that He forbade such. The inspired Apostle Paul must have known that some would teach such things as Brother Kimsey has affirmed in this statement quoted from him; for he says, in (I Timothy 1:3-4) "As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine, neither giving heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do." A fable is a "legend; fabrication; falsehood." A fabrication is an invented story. This statement that "we cannot speak a word unless God chooses the words" is an invented story. If Brother Kimsey be correct in his statement, then God chose the words of the fabricated story, and a man could not speak such words unless God chose' them; but the apostle admonished to not give heed to such. Hence, if Brother Kimsey is right, then the inspired apostle has directed that no heed be given to the words which God chose for the speaker to say. Jangling is a "discordant sound; idle chatter; quarreling." Such a statement that "we cannot speak a word unless God chooses the words" is, most surely, no better than idle chatter. That is the most charitable view we can possibly take of the matter. In verses 9 and 10 the apostle speaks of some very vile persons, and among them he mentions profane persons, and liars, and perjured persons. A profane person is irreverent, blasphemous, unholy, impious. If one uses blasphemous language according to Brother Kimsey, the Lord chooses the words for him. If a man lies, God chooses the lying words for him; and he could not lie if God did not choose the lying words for him. A perjured person is one who is guilty of the crime of giving false evidence, especially when under oath. But Brother Kimsey says that "we cannot speak a word unless God chooses the words." If that be so, then a man could not be guilty of the crime of giving false evidence unless God chooses the words. If that be true, then every false oath that men have ever sworn came directly from God. If God put such words in the mouths of men who have perjured themselves, would He not just as consistently swear a lie Himself? If not, why not? Jesus tells us that the devil is the father of lies. But if Brother Kimsey told the truth in his statement, then the devil is not the father of lies, but God Himself is the father of them. We might go on, ad in finitum; but this is sufficient. If one will not believe the testimony of the apostle, as here given, he would not believe, though one should rise from the dead. We remember, very well, the former editor and publisher of the Zion's Landmark, the beloved and lamented Elder P. D. Gold. We have been with him in his day, and preached with him, and talked with him. We know very well that he did not believe any such teaching as that "we cannot speak a word unless God chooses the words." We remember well that we were at an association with him once in North Carolina, and that we tried to preach just after he had delivered a sweet discourse. Our text was (I Timothy 4:16) "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." We showed that Timothy was already a child of God and a minister of the gospel; and that it was, therefore, too late for him to become a child of God by doing this, but not too late for him to save himself from false doctrines, etc. Elder Gold heartily endorsed our discourse. We regret to see such teaching as that set forth by Brother Kimsey appearing in the Landmark. We wonder if all the editors on the staff endorse such teaching. It brings trouble and confusion in the true church, and we would be grateful and thankful if such teaching were not permitted to appear in Elder Gold's paper, for we are sure he would not endorse it if he could speak to us now. May the Lord pity His poor bleeding Zion. C. H. C.

A Serious Charge

---May 15, 1941

In the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight of April 25, 1941, the Rev. James MacKrell brings some serious and grave charges against some of his Missionary Baptist brother preachers. He accuses some of their leaders with stealing and defrauding creditors. Note this paragraph which we copy from his article: You can now realize I am sure why such a leadership would DEFRAUD AND STEAL THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN A BANKRUPT ACTION WHEREIN THEY PAID THEIR OBLIGATIONS AT 35c ON THE DOLLAR and to this day have not made nor from all outward indications have no intention of making any effort whatever to repay this money. The emphasis is his. This looks to us like a very serious charge he has brought against his brethren. But the above is not all. Here is the next paragraph in his article: When we were building our tabernacle in Little Rock I went to every bank in Little Rock and North Little Rock and a few individuals who were financially responsible and sought to borrow a little money to help put up the tabernacle. I was told in EVERY INSTANCE that they could no longer loan ANY CHURCH a single dime because of the disgraceful way BAPTISTS had defaulted their debts. I told them I had always paid them any sum they had loaned me and THAT NOT A SINGLE MISSIONARY (association) BAPTIST CHURCH in Little Rock owed anyone a dime; they said they appreciated this fact, but the reputation of Baptists in general was so bad, THEY COULD NOT AFFORD TO LOAN A BAPTIST ONE CENT. It certainly does look bad that no bank or man of means in Little Rock would loan a Missionary Baptist one cent. They must be a mighty bad set of folks, that they cannot get any credit at all in the capital city of our state. These folks certainly do have a bad reputation, according to the Rev. Dr. MacKrell. Yet the gentleman stays with the Missionary Baptists. True, he brings these accusations of dishonesty against the Board Baptists; but his statement confesses the fact that the faction he has now aligned himself with (the Association Baptists - the Bogard stripe) are all put in the same class as other Missionaries by the banks and those who have money to lend - "the reputation of Baptists in general was so bad, they could not afford to loan a Baptist one cent." Of course, these Baptists were Missionary Baptists. If the gentleman's accusations are true, they must be a motley crowd. We would certainly be ashamed to have to admit that our people were such a motley crowd and had such a bad reputation. We are thankful that the people with whom we stand identified have a better reputation than that. We confess that they do wrong and make their mistakes, but they do have the reputation, in general, of being an honest and a debt-paying people. How can any set of folks who have such a reputation as MacKrell says his people have, be the church of Christ? God pity the church, if that is it! C. H. C.

A Pleasant Trip

We left home on Thursday, May 1, for a trip through the Harmony Association in Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas. We arrived in Jonesboro, Ark., at 9:25 p.m. Sister Harwood and her husband, and others, met us at the train. An appointment had been made for us there that night, but we missed a bus, and failed to get there in time for service. We were sorry of the disappointment. We spent the night in the home of Mr. and Sister Harwood. Left Jonesboro Friday morning at 6:45 and arrived at Senath, Mo., at 8:30. Elders R. G. Whitwell and A. M. Braden, and others, met us at the train. We attended the union meeting, held in Senath, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 2, 3, and 4. Elders A. M. Braden, R. G. Whitwell, W. C. Kirk, and W. F. Inman, of that association, were present in the meeting, besides two licentiates-Brethren Gibbons and Davis. Elder W. J. Shaffer, of Mayfield, Ky., was also in attendance. They had service both day and night during the meeting. The preaching was all in harmony and the services were enjoyed by all present. On Monday night we filled an appointment in the courthouse in Blytheville. Elder E. H. Rhodes lives in Blytheville, and we had the pleasure of meeting him once more. We knew him years ago in Tennessee. We also met his son, a young brother who is also now engaged in the work of the ministry, but do not now recall where we met him on the trip. Some of the brethren told us they are counting on building a house of worship in that community very soon. May the Lord bless them in the undertaking. On Tuesday night, May 6, we were at a schoolhouse, near the home of Brother Emmett Russell, near New Madrid. They have an organized church in the community, and we believe they hold their regular service at the schoolhouse. There was a shower of rain about the time to go to the meeting, but a good crowd gathered anyway. On Wednesday morning we were at Bethel Church, near Dexter. The congregation was small at this place, only a few members out. We were at that church years ago, v/hen we lived in Tennessee, while Elder Reed was pastor. We are sure not many of the present members of the church were there then. On Wednesday night we were at Gray Ridge. Sister Dixie Inman asked for a home in the church, and was joyfully received, and her baptism was to be attended to on May 11. On Thursday morning, Thursday night, and Friday morning we had service at New Hope Church, near Fredericktown, the home church of Elder W. F. Inman, who was present. On Friday night we filled an appointment at the home of Mrs. Mittie Logan, an afflicted sister, in Doniphan, Mo. On Saturday and Sunday we attended the meeting at Buffalo Church, near Bennett, Mo., and on Saturday night at the home of Brother Coley Bell. The Church had agreed to have their communion service at this meeting instead of on the regular time, the third Sunday. We served this church years ago- about forty-four years ago. We baptized a number of members for them while we were serving them. Nearly all who were living and members then are gone to their long home. At that church we baptized Elder P. E. Whitwell and his first wife, who have been called to that better home. On Sunday of this meeting three willing souls came to the old church, wanting a home and resting place from the things of the world-Will Whitwell, a son of Elder P. E. Whitwell, G. C. Whitwell, brother of Elder R. G. Whitwell, and Mrs. Dora Hodo. The baptism was set for the third Sunday in June. Brother Will requested us to baptize him, as we had baptized his father and mother. So we agreed, the Lord willing, to be with them on their regular meeting the third Sunday in June, and Saturday before. On Sunday night we were with the church in Rector. Elder B. D. Bryant, of Tiptonville, Tenn., is pastor, and was with us here. We were glad to see him again. Elder R. G. Whitwell met us at the train at Senath, and he and Elder A. M. Braden went all the trip with us. We enjoyed having them with us. Elder Whitwell was as kind and attentive to us as he could have been to an own father. We shall never forget the great kindness shown to us at each place we went. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon them, is our humble prayer. We trust they will remember to pray for us and our loved ones. We left Rector on Monday morning, May 12, at 5:28, and arrived home at 1 p.m., and found all well at home for which we felt to praise the good Lord, and to take courage. May the Lord bless you, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Brother Obe Tingen, of Apex, N. C, has asked us to give our views of the bruised reed and smoking flax, as used in the above citation, and which quotation we used in our editorial in The Primitive Baptist of May 1. Just now we do not have much mind to write-we feel to be rather dull and sluggish. So we will give Gill's comments on the verse cited, as follows: C. H. C.

GILL'S COMMENTS

" A bruised reed shall He not break," etc. The tenderness of Christ to weak and ignorant persons is here and in the next clause expressed; by whom young converts or weak believers seem to be designed: who are compared to a reed, because worthless with respect to God, whom they cannot profit; and in the view of men, who reckon them as nothing; and in themselves, and in their own view, who judge themselves unworthy of the least of mercies; and because they are weak, not only as all men are, of which weakness they are sensible; but they are weak in grace, especially in faith, and have but little hope, their love is the strongest; and because they are wavering like the reed, tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine, and shaken with the temptations of Satan, and disturbed with many doubts and fears; and are like a bruised reed, that is squeezed, and almost broken to pieces, and so of no use; those are broken in heart, under a sense of sin and unworthiness; whose spirits are bruised and weakened with it, and whose hearts are contrite on account of it. On these Christ does not lay His iron rod, but holds out the golden sceptre of His grace to them; He does not call them to service and sufferings beyond their strength; but strengthens, supports, and upholds them with the right hand of His righteousness; He binds up their broken hearts, having poured in the balm of Gilead, His own blood, and the wine and oil of His love; He encourages them in their application to Him for salvation, and manifests His pardoning grace, and restores comfort to them, and revives their souls: "And the smoking flax shall He not quench;" or, "The wick of a candle;" which just going out, has some heat, a little light, smokes, and is offensive: so the persons intended by it are fired or lighted by the divine Word; have some heat of affection in them to spiritual things, but have but little light; into the corruption of nature; into the glories of Christ's Person; into the doctrines of the gospel; into the everlasting love of God, and the covenant of grace; and but little light of joy and comfort., and this almost gone, and seeming ready to go out; and yet Christ will not extinguish it, or suffer it to be extinct; He does not discourage small beginnings of grace, or despise the day of small things; He blows up their light into a flame; He increases their spiritual knowledge; supplies them with the oil of grace, trims, snuffs, and causes their lamps to burn brighter. The Targum is, "the meek, who are like to a bruised reed, shall not be broken; and the poor, who are as obscure as flax (or a lamp ready to go out), shall not be extinct;" "He shall bring forth judgment unto truth;" which some understand of Christ's severity to wicked men, in opposition to His tenderness to His own people; see ((4) (Isaiah 11:4)); others, of the gospel, as preached by Him in truth, as in ver. 1; but rather it designs the power of His Spirit and grace accompanying the word, to the carrying on of His own work in the hearts of His people; which, though attended with many difficulties and discouragements, shall go on, and be performed; grace will break through all obstructions, and prove victorious at last; see ((0) (Matthew 12:20)).

What Unity!

---June 5, 1941

In the Western Recorder of May 15, 1941, on page 2, W. W. Hamilton, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, says, "If we are to "win the world to Christ, then we must be good soldiers of the cross," etc. This implies that they propose to win the world to Christ. As is well known, it has been the claim of these Missionaries, from the time of their birth, that under certain conditions - if they had money enough, etc. - they could take the world for Christ. But after a little more than a century of labor in their work, the world is in a worse condition today than at any time since they began their merchandising methods. They are not progressing very fast in their proposed feat of taking the world for Christ, or in Christianizing the world, or converting the world to Christ. But let us look at how well they are agreed. On page 4 of the same paper we see this statement by J. J. Robinson, of Louisville, Ky.: "The whole world is not to be converted by the preaching of the gospel. Our Lord said, 'I pray not for the world, but for those whom thou hast given me.'" If the whole world is not to be converted by the preaching of the gospel, then why scrape the country over to raise money for that very express object? They will tell us one thing at one time, and another thing, directly opposite, at another time. It just depends-as to what these people tell us. C. H. C.

Revelation 5:1-3

In August, 1940, Elder G. D. Owens, of Olio, Ark., asked us to write on (Revelation 5:1-3). We have never had much mind, or inclination, to do much writing on Revelation; but we will offer a few thoughts in connection with the text, which reads: And I saw in the right hand of Him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals. And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof? And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon. The seven seals are the same as the seven Spirits of God, mentioned in verse 6. In this verse is mentioned the Lamb, having seven horns and seven eyes, "which are the seven Spirits of God," etc. Seven, in Scripture, is a full, complete number. The book was sealed with the divine attributes of Jehovah. "No man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book." Man, as a fallen son of Adam, could not meet the requirements. He could not open the book.

The book, we are sure, meant the covenant of God's peace, the everlasting covenant. All the chosen ones were embraced in that covenant; they were given to the Son in the covenant. But they were the offspring of Adam; they were sinners of Adam's fallen and apostate race. God's just law had been violated; and God was offended. Satisfaction must be made to divine justice, if they ever enter heaven. Man was a sinner, and could not meet the demands. "No man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book." But the Lamb was both man and God. Divinity and humanity were joined together in this one Person. As the God-man He could reach both, the offended God and the offending man. He could meet all the divine attributes of Jehovah. He could and did prevail. See (Revelation 5:5). Another thought here: Any doctrine or theory of salvation which does not harmonize with all the divine attributes of Jehovah cannot possibly be the truth. The doctrine of grace is the only doctrine which does that, or which can do so. C. H. C.

Is It Deception?

Suppose a brother is accused of some immoral conduct, and the matter causes disturbance in his church. Suppose the brother thus accused, when the matter is causing disturbance in his own church, or with sister churches, demands, or requests, that his church withdraw from him, and, perhaps, to get them to do so, he declares against the church. Then suppose the church withdraws from him on that account. Suppose the brother later returns to the church and asks that he be forgiven for what they have on record against him. Then suppose dissatisfaction arises, at once, and disturbance springs up again between that church and some sister churches on account of this matter. Then suppose the church of the brother's membership calls for a council to come and investigate them. Then suppose the council convenes and investigates the record, but do not go back of that to arrive at the matter as to what caused all the trouble, or what gave rise to it, and declare that the church is in good order, and that her acts are orderly, etc. Now, what? If the brother is guilty, is not this a plain case of palming off immorality on the church? On the other hand, if the brother is not guilty, has he received justice? If he is innocent, is it not due to him, as a simple matter of justice, that the council should have investigated that matter, and then to declare him innocent? Should not this be done for the honor of the church, too? But to smooth over and hide the real facts in the case -is it not practicing deception on the Baptist family? Do you approve, or endorse, a procedure of that sort? We are frank to say that we do not. Furthermore, we do not propose to speak for another person on earth, but we do say, for ourselves, personally, that we do not endorse it, nor will we lend it any sanction, if we know it. That's plain, but we suppose it can be understood. May God help us all, as His professed followers, to deal honestly and openly and in a straightforward way with the things of the kingdom. No wonder conditions are no better in some places than they are. May the Lord deliver us from ourselves. C. H. C.

Requests Not Answered

---June 19, 1941

We have received several requests to write on certain portions of Revelation. We have no mind to write on the passages some have requested us to write on. If you do not see an answer to your request, just bear in mind that we have no mind to write on your text, or that we cannot get to it, and please excuse us. C. H. C.

A New Pamphlet

---June 19, 1941

We have just finished printing a new pamphlet for Brother A. H. Roden, of Glen Rose, Texas. The title is, "A Tribute to the Late Elder J. S. Newman." It is a nicely printed pamphlet, in good clear type, and contains a good picture of Elder Newman. We all remember the good writing done by this great and good man, and many can remember the sound of his musical voice as they listened to him proclaim the riches of God's grace. The little pamphlet is worth having in any home. The price is low-only 15 cents for one copy, or eight copies for only one dollar. Order from us or from Brother Roden. C. H. C.

Church Organized

We left home on Thursday night, June 26, for Champaign, Ill., by special request, arriving there about six o'clock Friday afternoon. The purpose of our going was to help in the organization of a Primitive Baptist Church at that place, which we were specially requested to do. We were met at the train by Elder N. F. Graves, and accompanied to his good home, where we had a good night's rest. On Saturday afternoon service was held at the new meeting house for the purpose of organizing a Primitive Baptist Church. Elder W. E. Wright was called upon to introduce the service, and then the writer was called upon to preach to the people, which we endeavored to do, with the help of the Lord. The service was enjoyed by those present. After this the ministers and deacons present organized themselves into a presbytery to organize the church. After the church was organized they went into conference and gave the name New Liberty to the newly organized church, and elected Elder N. F. Graves to serve as pastor and moderator for the coming year. They also made choice of a clerk to serve for a year. We failed to make note of the name of the clerk. They have a real nice new building erected, though it is not yet fully paid for. The Lord has wonderfully blessed them, and they are a united band, and feel thankful for the blessings the Lord has bestowed upon them. On Sunday the house was just about full, and the service was sweet and delightful. Surely the Lord's gracious and manifest presence was felt. May His name be praised for His wonderful works among the children of men. We feel that the minutes of the proceedings in the organization, as well as their Church Covenant, Articles of Faith and Rules of Decorum, will make interesting reading, so we append the same below. May the Lord's rich and abundant mercies and blessings rest upon this faithful little band, is our humble prayer. We trust they will remember us in their petitions at the throne of grace. C. H. C.

MINUTES OF ORGANIZATION

Some members of the Primitive Baptists living in Champaign, Ill., and vicinity, met at the Primitive Baptist meeting house in the city on June 28, 1941, for the purpose of organizing a church of the Primitive Baptist faith and order. Services were opened by Elder W. E. Wright, of Alma, Ill., and then preaching by Elder C. H. Cayce, of Thornton, Ark. Then we, the following named elders and deacons, being requested to do so, formed ourselves into a presbytery to organize them into a church, and proceeded as follows: Names of Presbytery: Elders O. L. Weatherford, C. H. Cayce, W. E. Wright, A. D. Brumfield and D. H. Knight; and Deacons Thomas B. Clapp, Fred B. Williams, J. D. Allen and Chas. Walker. Chose Elder O. L. Weatherford as moderator, and Elder C. H. Cayce as clerk of the presbytery. The Covenant upon which they agreed to be constituted was read, and signed by all the parties entering into the constitution, and is recorded below. Called for the letters of those desiring to go into the constitution, which were presented and read, as follows: Elder N. F. Graves, Deacon Otis Pile, Deacon Olad Allen, Licentiate Loyd Clapp, Brother Bennie Graves, Sisters Bernice Allen, Norma Clapp, Martha Pile, Clara Graves, Betty Jane Graves, Pearl Graves, Mary Graves, Helen Hayes, Nova Fox and Nona Higgins, The letters and bearers were received as being in order. The Articles of Faith were then read, and found to be sound. The Rules of Decorum were read, and found to be in harmony with Baptist practice. The members of the church then extended the hand of fellowship to each other. The presbytery and visiting brethren and sisters then extended the hand of fellowship to the church, the presbytery declaring them to be a gospel church organized in order. Signed: Elder O. L. Weatherford, Moderator; Elder C. H. Cayce, Clerk; Elders W. E. Wright, A. D. Brumfield and D. H. Knight; Deacons Thomas B. Clapp, Fred B. Williams, J. D. Allen and Chas. Walker.

CHURCH COVENANT

On June 28, 1941, we, Primitive Baptist members living in Champaign, Ill., and vicinity, met and entered into the following covenant: Forasmuch as Almighty God, by His grace, has been pleased, as we hope, to call us out of darkness into His marvelous light, and we all having been regularly baptized on profession of our faith in Christ Jesus, and have given ourselves to the Lord and to each other in a gospel church way, to be governed and guided by a proper discipline, agreeable, as we believe, to the Word of God; we, therefore, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by His assistance, covenant and agree to keep up the discipline of the church of which we are members in the most brotherly love and affection toward each other, while we endeavor, punctually, to observe the following rules: In brotherly love to pray for each other; to watch over one another for good; and, if need be, in the most tender and affectionate manner, to reprove each other; if we discover anything amiss in a brother or sister, to take the directions given by our Lord in Matthew xviii., and not to be whispering and backbiting; we also agree, if not providentially hindered, to attend our church meetings, and especially not to absent ourselves from the communion service without a lawful excuse; and not to neglect the defraying of the expenses of the church, and not to depart from the fellowship of the church without a regular dismissal. These things we covenant and agree to observe and keep sacred, in the name and by the assistance of the Holy Trinity. Signed: Brethren Otis Pile, Ben Graves, Olad E. Allen, Lloyd W. Clapp, Elder N. F. Graves. Sisters Martha Pile, Mary Graves, Helen Hayes, Pearl Graves, Betty Jane Graves, Clara B. Graves, Norma Clapp, Bernice Allen, Nona Higgins, Nova Fox.

ARTICLES OF FAITH

First. We believe in the existence, immutability, omnipotence, omniscience, omnipresence, and eternal perfections of the one only true and living God, who exists in the three-fold, yet undivided and indivisible substance of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; who was and is the sovereign Creator, Upholder, Governor, and Judge of the Universe.

2. We believe that the Old and New Testament Scriptures are the perfectly inspired Word of God, and the only infallible rule, or standard, of faith and practice; and that, as such, the Bible teaches all that we ought to know, believe, or practice religiously.
3. We believe in the doctrine of total depravity-that is, the entire human family are justly condemned, all having sinned in' Adam; and that our life received by virtue of the natural birth is poisoned with sin; and that in nature the man is sinful in all his parts, and all are dead in trespasses and in sins.
4. We believe in the eternal and personal and unconditional election of the saints unto glory; that they were chosen in Christ by the Father before the world was-before they had any actual existence; that God predestinated them unto the adoption of sons, and that they should be conformed to the image of His Son; and they will all be finally and ultimately saved in glory. But we do solemnly deny that God predestinated sin. He has determined to overrule and punish sin. Those whom God has not, or did not, predestinate to be conformed to the image of His son are left to act in their own sins to their just condemnation, to the praise of God's glorious justice.
5. We believe that the atonement and the redemption by Jesus Christ are for the elect only, and that they are justified in the sight of God by the imputed righteousness of the Son alone.
6. We believe in the direct, immediate, sovereign, irresistible, and, in all cases, the effectual work of the Holy Spirit in calling, regenerating and sanctifying the elect of God, and that in His own appointed time and way. The work of regeneration is an instantaneous and internal work, and is accomplished by the work of the Spirit of God on the spirit of the sinner.
7. We believe in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead-that is, that the bodies of all who die will be raised at the final windup and consummation of all things. We mean by this that it is the body that dies, and it is the same body which dies that shall be raised from the dead. The bodies of the saints will, at the resurrection, be changed, made spiritual, immortal, and re-united with their souls, and taken into the glorious presence of the Lord, and their happiness will be unending. The others will be cast into eternal torment, and their punishment will be unending.
8. We believe that baptism and the Lord's Supper are ordinances of Jesus Christ, and that true believers (those who have been born again) are the only proper subjects for baptism, and that Scriptural baptism is a burial in water; that the ordinances of the church are in the hands of the church for keeping; and that baptism is not valid unless administered by one authorized by a gospel church to administer the ordinances. Unleavened bread and wine (grape wine) are to be used in the Lord's Supper. We believe we should engage in washing each other's feet, following the example of the Master, as He said "I have given you an example."

9. We believe that baptism is the first ordinance, and that no one has a right to the Lord's Supper unless he has first been baptized by the proper authority, and is in order with his brethren at home.
10. We believe that the Lord's children (those who have been born again) are under parental law to the blessed Lord, and that He has promised blessings in His Word to His children who obey Him, which He has not promised to others, and that these blessings thus promised cannot be attained to or enjoyed any other way only by obeying Him-doing the things commanded by Him. On the other hand, He has promised chastisement-suffering, sorrow, trouble and distress-upon their rebellion and disobedience.
11. We believe that a gospel church is a body of baptized believers, who have banded themselves together to keep house for the Lord, and who maintain the true principles of doctrine and practice as laid down in the New Testament. Yet a true church may err from the right way; and when they do so, the Scriptural injunction is for them to repent. The church was set up by the Saviour during His personal ministry on earth, and this church has an unbroken succession unto the present day, and it will remain on earth some place until our Lord's second personal coming. The Lord established His kingdom, or church, for a home for His little children. He gave all the laws and rules and regulations to govern in this kingdom. We have no right to make new laws-laws not found in His Book; nor do we have a right to disobey or dishonor the laws which He gave.

RULES OF DECORUM

- Rule 1. The church shall be composed of members of her own body, but members of sister churches of the same faith and order who may be present shall be invited to seats by the moderator.
2. Conference shall be opened and closed by praise and prayer to God.
3. The church shall choose a pastor and moderator annually, who shall serve when present, unless objection be made, or one appointed to act as moderator pro tem, whose duty it shall be to keep order and extend invitations for the reception of members.
4. A clerk shall be chosen annually whose duty it shall be to make a plain record of all business transacted by the church, which record shall be read at the next conference, and all necessary corrections of the minutes be made.
5. Every member, when he rises to make a speech, shall address the moderator by the appellation of "Brother Moderator." The member thus speaking shall not cast any reflection on former speeches, nor digress from the subject under consideration; and shall give his views in as plain manner as possible; nor shall he speak more than three times on any subject without permission of the church.
6. No member shall be received into our body, or dismissed from us by letter, without the unanimous vote of the members present; but a transgressing member may be excluded by a majority of the members present; and a majority shall rule in all other cases, except as specified in Rule 17.
7. No complaint respecting grievances of a private nature shall be brought into the church against any transgressing member, unless the aggrieved party has complied with the directions given in (Matthew 18:15-16,17).
8. Every motion made and seconded shall come under the consideration of the church, unless withdrawn by the person who made it.
9. If a minority shall be aggrieved at the decision of the majority, the same should be made known to the church immediately; and if satisfaction cannot be obtained, it may be necessary to call for help from sister churches.

10. The moderator shall be entitled to all the privileges of speech, the chair first being filled, but shall not vote, except there be a tie; then he shall give the casting vote.
11. Any members who are absent from the regular church meeting should have good reasons for the same; and if they miss three meetings in succession, it shall be the duty of the church to inquire their reasons.
12. No member shall go to law with another member, on any account, without permission of the church.
13. If one member be aggrieved with another, and, instead of laboring with the said brother or sister, should be whispering and backbiting, such member shall be under censure of the church.
14. No member shall vacate his seat in time of conference without permission.
15. Whereas, Christ's kingdom is not of this world, and His humble followers are much persecuted, therefore we cannot take evidence indiscriminately from the world; but when reports of unmistakable facts are in circulation against one of our members, we think it right to take such testimony as is valid.
16. We agree that our regular conference meetings shall be held on Saturday afternoon before the first Sunday in each month, and that the first Sunday in May and October shall be our communion season.
17. Alterations, additions, or amendments may be made to the foregoing rules at any time by a two-thirds majority of the members present, after a month's notice shall have been given of any intended change, except in the instance of Rule 6; and Rule 6 shall never be changed.
18. The foregoing rules shall be read when thought necessary.

What To Do

---August 7, 1941

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother - Please answer the following questions through The Primitive Baptist for the benefit of some of our dear brethren:

Question 1. If an association or individual church has a preacher member, and while with them is sound in the faith and doctrine, but after moving away some 500 or 600 miles, staying away for years, but holds his membership at his former home, and dives deep into the doctrine of the world, preaching Universalism, or no hell doctrine, and his home association and church are notified and warned of his false teaching, time and again, by sound Old Baptist preachers who are known to be in good standing, then and there should his home church do something?

Question 2. Should his home church wait for some church 500 miles away to bring charges against this preacher or his home church before they do something with him?

Question 3. If his home church has plenty of witnesses, Old Baptist members in good standing, even some of them deacons and ministers, that these reports are true-that they have heard this preacher preach these things in the stand, and talk with him privately, and he contends this stuff is Bible doctrine- should his church still hold him in full fellowship, and have to appoint a committee of three of their own home members to go 500 or 600 miles to see him in person; and if his home church writes him, and he denies all these reports, whose word shall his church take-a dozen sound Old Baptists or this preacher, with all these reports on him? Please answer. Your little brother in hope, B.

OUR ANSWER

It seems to us that it is very clear and evident as to what should be done in such a case. In the first place the time has been when it would not have been considered good order for one to let his membership stay at his former place of residence, some 500 or 600 miles away, when he has moved near to another orderly Old Baptist Church. It does not look good. One may be ever so sincere in doing that, and may consider that he has good reasons for so doing; but it looks to others as though he prefers to have his membership stay where his home church may not know of his conduct or way of doing. Hence, we say it does not look good -and it is not right. Next, if he has been proven by witnesses, who are considered good, to have departed from the faith, and to be advocating such heresy, the church most certainly should take the matter in hand. Noticing particularly question 2-why should the church of the brother's membership wait for a church 500 miles away to bring charges against the preacher, if the church already has proof of his guilt? Should the church wait for another church to bring charges against her member if he is already proven to be a heretic, or as having departed from the faith, and to be preaching heresy? Since question 3 says he has been talked to privately, it seems that he has been admonished as the Scriptures require. If it should be claimed that these private talks do not meet with the requirements, then his church should admonish him at once and require a solemn promise that he will cease advocating such a doctrine, and if he will not then do that, or does not quit it at once, then he should be withdrawn from immediately. But here is another point in the matter: If the brother is disturbing the church where he is located, then that church, as a church, should, as a faithful church, notify the church of the brother's membership; and let them know that the brother has been labored with by them, and then his church should deal with him as the case may demand. If the church where the brother lives does not notify the church of his membership, then they are not dealing faithfully with their sister church. If a man has a case in court, accused of committing a certain deed, but denies his guilt, yet it is proven by a dozen or so good witnesses, will the court of justice take the word of the accused, or take the word of the dozen witnesses? To refuse to take the evidence of such a number of good witnesses is to disregard the law. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established." There is entirely too much disregarding the Lord's laws and requirements in His kingdom in these days. No wonder there is so much war and bloodshed in the world. May the Lord pity us and have mercy on His rebellious children, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Hebrews 13:10

---August 7, 1941

In October, 1940, Brother R. A. Ray, of Water Valley, Miss., asked for our views of (Hebrews 13:10), which reads: We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle. The tabernacle service was engaged in under the law. That was a law worship and service. Law worship and law service had been done away, and none of it is admitted in gospel worship and service. No one has a right to bring any of that into the gospel worship and service. The gospel kingdom, or church had already been established, and all law worship and service had been fulfilled and done away. No one has a right to gospel worship and service with law service. The beasts were required to be slain and offerings were to be made under the law, which were all a type of Christ and the one offering He would make. He had made that one offering for sin, and no more offerings were required. No one has a right to bring those things into the gospel kingdom. C. H. C.

Our Association

---August 7, 1941

Our Association, the South Arkansas, is appointed to be held this year with our home church here in Thornton. The usual time is Friday, Saturday and third Sunday. But a year ago the association agreed to have a meeting of four days this time, if the church here desired it. The church agreed, by unanimous consent, in their regular meeting in October, 1940, to have a meeting of four days of the association this year. So the regular associational meeting will begin at ten o'clock on Thursday morning before the third Sunday in September, and will close on Sunday. We expect to have service on Wednesday night, also, but the associational meeting is to begin on Thursday morning. This meeting of four days is to be held as a celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the South Arkansas Association. This will be the one hundredth annual session of the association. The membership of the church are making preparations to care for a large crowd. We are expecting many from a distance, and from different states. We want you to come. And we will appreciate it if those who expect to come will write us and let us know, and tell us how many you will have in your company. We desire to know about this, if you can let us know, so we may make some certain arrangements beforehand, as we want to take care of all who come. We earnestly desire that we have a regular Old Baptist reunion at this meeting. We ask you to pray the Lord to be with us, and that we may have such a meeting as will tend to unify the Lord's humble poor, and that will be to the honor and glory of His name who has done so much for us. We do not expect for anybody to air his troubles at this meeting. We invite all to come and worship with us; but if you have troubles at home, leave them there, and come to the meeting to worship and serve the Lord. If we do this, the Lord will bless us. We are praying and trying to labor to that end. Please let us hear from you. Do not put off writing, but let us hear from you as soon as possible. C. H. C.

Associations Attended

---August 21, 1941

We received word on Saturday, August 2, that wife's father, Brother B. B. Lawler, was seriously ill. So we left home on Sunday morning, August 3, for his home, near Brownsboro, Ala., with the wife and some of our children. We arrived there at 8 o'clock that evening, and found him some better. He continued to improve, and was able to be up and getting around pretty well when we left there on Thursday morning, August 14. On Thursday, August 7, we went to Chattanooga to attend the meeting of the Sequatchie Valley and Collins River Association, which was held with the Chattanooga Church on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 8, 9, 10. Twenty-three ministers were in attendance. We would give their names, but we do not have space to spare, and we are late in getting this ready for the printer, so it may be in this issue of the paper. It was a great meeting. Two broadcasting stations gave some time to them over the radio. Station WAPO gave thirty minutes each morning, from 8:30 to 9 o'clock, and another station, the name of which we do not now recall, gave fifteen minutes each afternoon at about one o'clock. We have some of the sermons delivered over the radio, which we intend to publish (probably in For The Poor) when opportunity permits. It was a great meeting, and the Lord blessed the ministers to speak to the comfort and benefit of His humble poor. On Thursday morning, August 14, we left the home of wife's father to go to Memphis, Tenn., to attend the Tallahatchie Association, which was held in that city with Morris Memorial Primitive Baptist Church. We had considerable tire trouble on the way, and arrived in the city at about seven o'clock, and went to the good home of Brother O. L. Hawkins, where we spent the night. The meeting began on Friday morning, and closed on Sunday. Twelve ministers were in attendance. Elder W. C. Moak, the previous moderator, was afflicted, in the Veterans' Hospital, and was not able to be present. He requested that the ministers present at the meeting visit him in a body at the hospital, which was granted. May the good Lord grant that he be restored to good health again, is our humble prayer.

The meeting was an enjoyable one. The preaching was usually good, and was enjoyed by those present. No one seemed to have a hobby to ride, and there was no "shooting" at others by any of those who occupied the stand. The church in Memphis is a lively band, and are faithful, and desire to continue to "stand in the ways, and see, and to ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and to walk therein." The Sequatchie Valley and Collins River is to meet next year with the church in Sweeten's Cove, near South Pittsburg, Tenn., and the Tallahatchie is to meet with Pleasant Grove, near Como, Miss., each at their usual time. We have been attending these associations and visiting their churches for many years. We may never be privileged to meet with them again in this world; but we hope to meet them, with all the redeemed, in a better world than this. May the richest blessings of heaven rest upon them, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

A Good Fight

---August 21, 1941

The above is the title of a pamphlet of sixty-six pages which we have just finished for Sister Grace Claggett. It is a story written by Elder G. B. Green, of Indianapolis, Ind., and published in The Primitive Monitor. The pamphlet has the picture of Elder Green and wife in their young days, and a late picture of them. The pamphlet is printed on tinted egg shell paper, a good quality of paper, with an extended green paper cover. It is a real neat book, and the contents make good reading. The price is only twenty-five cents a copy, and it is worth more than the price asked. Orders may be sent to Sister Grace Claggett, Thornton, Ark., or to Elder G. B. Green, 3736 W. Tenth St., Indianapolis, Ind., or to us. C. H. C.

Beautiful Feet

---September 4, 1941

Sermon preached by Elder C. H. Cayce at the Tallahatchie Association, Memphis, Tenn., August 16, 1941.

I am glad of the opportunity and privilege of meeting with you once more in the old Tallahatchie Association, an association I have been visiting from time to time for many years. When I first began to meet with this association I was called the boy preacher, but now I sometimes hear people refer to me as "Old Man Cayce." There are but few who are identified with the association now and who meet with you in these services that I met in this association in my young days. All of the old preachers are gone, and now most of those whose faces I see are different from those I used to know. I realize that soon I shall do as those older ones have done. I shall soon step off the stage of action, and I may never be permitted to attend another session of the old Tallahatchie Association, and to some of you I may be speaking what will be to you my dying words; and if the good Lord would graciously bless me to speak to you today I want to leave with you my dying testimony of the great importance of the servants of God, those professing to be God-called, and God-sent ministers, living the lives that become those that profess to be soldiers under the blood-stained banner of King Jesus. There is a great responsibility resting upon those professing to be ministers of the gospel of Christ; and not only is there a great responsibility resting upon them, but there is a great responsibility resting upon the church to whom God gives His ministers. In treating upon this great and important subject I hardly know just how to begin or just what should be said and just how it should be said. The perpetuity of a church in a community and the good influence of that church rests almost, if not altogether, upon the way that we live, the way that we conduct ourselves. Now before I proceed farther in making remarks and calling attention to these truths I want to ask you to be patient with me, for I must, if I am able to talk to you, endeavor to speak deliberately, and I know that what I say, I want it to be said so I may be heard and understood. It is stylish or fashionable to read a text, whether a man has any use for it or not. If there is any special text on my mind to use as a starting point it is a portion of (Romans 10:15), but I want to read (Romans 10:13-15). "For whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." That is a statement of fact. "Whosoever" - that is, everyone who- "shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Then in the next verse the inspired writer asks the question, "How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed?" That question is asked in such a way as to admit of but one answer. It is a negative question, requiring a negative answer. "How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed?" They cannot. A question stated in such form as to require a certain definite answer, either affirmative or negative, is the very strongest way possible that a proposition may be stated. It is not possible in our language to state the proposition any stronger, that a man cannot call on Him in whom he has not believed. Belief is a prerequisite in order that you can call on Him in the sense of this text. Then another question, "And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard?" They cannot. That is another negative question, requiring a negative answer, that they cannot believe in Him of whom they have not heard. Then follows another negative question, "And how shall they hear without a preacher?" They cannot. Here are three negative questions and each requires a negative answer, and each of them gives the proposition in the very strongest possible way of stating that they cannot. And then in (Romans 10:15), the apostle presents another question, "And how shall they preach, except they be sent?" That is another negative question and requires a negative answer. They cannot. It is a matter of impossibility for one to preach except he be sent. He may be sent by the power of Satan, and if he is he will usually preach Satan's doctrine. He may be sent by the power of men, and if he is he will usually preach the power of men. He may be sent by some board of men, and if he is he will usually preach the power of the board. He may be sent by the church, or some institution called a church, and if he is he will usually preach the power of that so-called church which sent him. If one is sent by the power of God he will preach the power of God, unless he is a traitor. Let me say to you, as easy as I know how, that I am of the opinion that there have been some men who were called and sent of God that proved traitors to the cause. When one does that it is the indispensable duty of the membership of the church to be well enough informed in regard to these matters that they may be able to discover the fact that such a man is a traitor, and then dispose of him as such. Now if you want me to modify that and will let me know that you do, I will try to modify it in such a way as to make it stronger, if possible. Men are sent to preach sometimes by one authority and sometimes by another. In the law dispensation of time, the Lord called and sent prophets into the world. However, He did not send them to the Gentiles, but sent them to Israel. Unto the Jews were committed the oracles of God. The law and the prophets were all committed to the Jews. Satan saw and observed these prophets which the Lord gave and sent, and then he got busy, and he also called and sent out prophets; and he called and sent out many more prophets than the Lord had. But every prophet which Satan sent was a false prophet, but they were sent all right. He sent his false prophets among the Israelites. Now in the gospel age, in the setting up of the gospel kingdom and the ushering in of the gospel dispensation, the Lord called and sent out some preachers. He did not send them to the Gentiles in the beginning. He said to them, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach." I wish that I could emphasize that expression. I wish that it could be so emphasized that it would burn into the heart of everyone that hears me this day or that it comes before in public print, "As ye go, preach." That is, preach as you go. How important it is in this day of darkness and heathenism that the servant of God preach as he goes, not necessarily preach with his lips, but preach with your feet. "As you go." You do not walk with your lips. You do not walk with your tongue. You walk with your feet, and in going you use your feet to go. How necessary it is that your walk be straight. "As ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." The Lord personally called, that is the Lord Jesus in person, by direct work of the Lord Jesus, the second Person in the adorable Trinity, while He was in the world, in setting up His gospel kingdom and ushering in the gospel dispensation, called the twelve and the seventy and sent them out. From the time that He was crucified and buried and rose again and ascended to His Father in glory, it has been the office work of the Holy Spirit, the third Person in the Trinity, to call and send out the gospel ministers. When the Apostle Paul was about ready to leave this world he called the elders of the church together at Ephesus, and said, "Take heed to yourselves." How important that is! "Take heed to yourselves." If every man professing to be a gospel minister in the old church today had observed that instruction-" Take heed unto yourselves" -there would have been less strife and confusion and division and discord in the church of God than there is today in many places. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers." That is the office work of the Holy Spirit-to make men overseers of the flock of God. Many men who profess to be, or propose to be, ministers of the gospel and overseers of the flock of God are importers. You may think that is plain, but I have an idea that you can understand what I mean. No imposters are needed in the church of God, and it is necessary that the membership of the church be on duty and awake that they may be able to discover that imposter; track him to see if you can tell what direction he is going. Had you ever thought about it? You cannot tell by the track of a goat which way he is going. You can track a sheep all right, but you cannot track a goat. Look at the track of that imposter and you should be able to tell by his track whether he is an imposter or not, whether he is a goat or a sheep. "How shall they preach, except they be sent?" It is God's work to call and send His ministers into the world. As we look upon the harvest and see that the harvest is great and that the fields are ripe unto harvest, and seeing that, then seeing how few laborers there are, we begin to get alarmed, we get distressed and conclude that we must get busy. We have some brethren in the church who can stand in the conference or in our church meetings and read and explain some portion of God's Book and deliver a good, warm, feeling exhortation that revives our spirits, and we turn in and try to make a preacher out of him. Why, yes, Old Baptists have made preachers, such as they are, and when they get one made, they don't want him and no one else will have him. He is sent, all right; but he is sent by the wrong authority. You have no more right or authority from the eternal God to make a preacher and send him out in the world than you have to try to regenerate sinners, not one whit more. This is a work that the eternal God has reserved unto Himself, and no man can do that. The Lord made and sent out preachers, and He has been doing that in every age of the gospel dispensation; from the time that the gospel dispensation was ushered in up to this good day the Lord has been making and sending out preachers. He has not made an assignment and someone appointed as receiver to carry on and wind up His business. He has not gone into bankruptcy. He is as rich and powerful today as He ever was in the world. He is still rich. Well, old Satan saw what the Lord was doing, that the Lord had quit making prophets, that that dispensation had come to an end, and now He has brought in a new dispensation, and He is making preachers and sending them out and so Satan got busy again, just like a monkey. Any of you know anything about a pet monkey? If you do, you know that a monkey will watch you and see what you do, and everything you do he will try to do that thing. So old Satan got busy and he began in the early day to make preachers, and send them out. We are warned in God's Book, that "Many false prophets are gone out into the world," and old Satan is still busy. He has many more preachers today than the Lord has. They are somewhat like the fellow that made them. If the ministers of Satan be transformed as ministers of righteousness they look very much like them. They get in the old church, all right. If Satan himself be transformed into an angel of light, no marvel that his ministers be transformed as ministers of righteousness, and they bring trouble into the church. The true God-called ministers must be watching out for those things. I have heard it said, possibly I have said it myself, that nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of a thousand when there is trouble, strife, and confusion and discord in the church of God, some preacher is responsible for it. I want to modify it and say it this way, that some preacher or preachers are responsible for getting it started and the churches are responsible for not stopping those preachers. I went to a place one time, having been called on to do so, and they were all disturbed, fellowship broken, and they asked me what I thought they ought to do. You young preachers, I want to tell you something; they will want you a whole lot in your young days, they sure will; but after awhile when you get old and not as strong as you once were, and not able to endure things as you once did, they will still have use for you—they will call on you in time of trouble, and then they won't need you any more until they have some more trouble. They asked me what I thought they ought to do. I told them I thought they ought to exclude both of the preachers. They said, "No, we won't have any preaching then." I replied, "God knows you ought not to have any more of the kind you have been having, and tear your church to pieces." They should be put on the outside of the pen, and if they are what they ought to be, they will soon realize the position they are in, and will be ready to "shell down the corn" and quit that foolishness. "As it is written," or "As it has been written," more strictly, literally translated, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Under the law there were certain specific requirements which must be met in order that one be capacitated or permitted to render service that was commanded and required in the tabernacle, and one was that the one who was put in that place must have straight feet. Many times, as you know, if his natural feet were looked at you would not say, "How beautiful are the feet of that man." Now, when the apostle wrote this and used this expression, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace," I am sure that he did not have reference to the natural looks, size and shape of these natural feet with which we walk. I remember a little foolishness. One time when a man was preaching sweetly and I was listening to him, I thought about this text, and then I looked at his feet, and I thought he had the ugliest feet of any man I had ever seen in my life, and I thought, "no matter how sweetly he preaches he cannot be a gospel preacher because of his ugly feet." But he was not talking about the natural feet, how nicely formed, but "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." Not that your natural feet are clean, but your walk. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." I have heard men preach before now with whom I was well acquainted. I knew the way they acted. I knew the way they conducted themselves, and I knew how little confidence some people had in them. I sat under the sound of their preaching when folks that did not know them would be shedding big tears and their faces all lighted up, just drinking it down, and shout out loud, "Praise God," but it did not have that same effect on me. It never made me happy; it never made me rejoice. Instead of that it made me feel like an ice house would not be as frigid as that was. Did you ever have a piece of ice put down your back? Cold, freezing to death. What's the matter? His feet were not beautiful. In order that his message be glad tidings and good news to me, if I am acquainted with him, it is absolutely necessary that his walk has been right. I have often heard it said, and some of you have perhaps read it, and perhaps you have heard me say it, that "where there is so much smoke there is mighty apt to be a little fire." Where there is so much smoke to be seen over the country, and especially in a community where so much is said about the preacher's ill conduct and ungodly living, there is mighty apt to be some fire. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." I am frank to tell you that when a man has so lived and so conducted himself as that he has lost his good influence in the community, if he ever had any, I don't want to hear that man preach. That is frank, but I don't want him to ask me to make appointments for him. I don't want him to visit my home churches, and I am going to tell you frankly that there are some men posing as preachers in the Primitive Baptist ranks, if they were to come to my home, and the weather was stormy, the thunder roaring, lightning flashing, I would not ask them to stay all night in my home. Is that too plain? Is that too rough? No wonder we hear complaints from every direction that our churches are diminishing and that places that you and I have known where once the candle of the Lord was planted, where God's name was honored and glorified, the glorious gospel was preached, shouts of joy and praise and thanksgiving to God went up, but that now they are gone, churches are gone down, the candlestick removed, and if the old house stands it is inhabited by the owls and bats. Why is it? My brother, there is a cause. It is for the simple reason, one is, that men who are of immoral repute and unsound in their teaching and in their preaching have been permitted to go on and occupy the sacred desk, and people have found out such men and do not want to go to hear them, and the cause dies down and goes out. That is one reason. The churches have gone to sleep on the job, and instead of requiring men to walk uprightly and to walk circumspectly who occupy the sacred desk, they put up with just anything. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." Another requirement-a man could not serve back there that had a crooked nose. His "smeller" would be out of fix. He could not smell the stench of some filthy thing that might be brought into the camp. The "smeller" of the servant of God must be so that he can smell the stench of false doctrine, false theories and false ways, for there is always a stench from everything that is rotten. And when you discover a man that cannot smell the stench of rotten doctrine you better take him out of your stand. Another requirement-his eyes must be straight and in the front part of the head. If they are crosseyed they look both ways and will not be able to see anything distinctly, and if you knew the facts in the case, it might be like the Irishman when he was going to cut the head off the chicken, or rather, hold the chicken for the head to be cut off. The fellow holding the axe was cross-eyed. The Irishman looked up into his face and said, "Wait a minute. Do you hit where you look?" The fellow said, "I sure do." The Irishman said, "Faith and if you do, you will hold the chicken yourself." He could not tell where that fellow was looking. He was cross-eyed. You must have a minister whose eyes are straight to look straight ahead, and when you look at him you may know what direction he is looking, and if you cannot tell what direction he is looking by the life he is living you better get rid of that preacher. There is another requirement. I will express it this way-his "taster" must not be out of fix. You know David said, "Taste and see that the Lord is good." But if my "taster" is out of fix, I could not see that the Lord is good by tasting. The "taster" must be all right, so that he will understand and know the doctrine of grace or doctrine of God our Saviour. His hands must be straight. If his hands are not straight, he would not rightly handle the Word of God. "Not handling the Word of God deceitfully," the apostle said. The man that handles the Word of God deceitfully has crooked hands; and if you have a preacher that handles the Word of God deceitfully, the sooner you get rid of that preacher, the better it will be for you and the cause in general. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." They must handle the Word of God in sincerity and in truth. They must look straight forward into the depths of God's grace and commandments. Their tongue must be right, so that they speak the truth of God in soberness. Their "taster" must be right, so they are able to distinguish the taste of the truth from that which is error. They must make straight paths for their feet, so that their walk is upright before men. When their life is like that and that way they "bring glad tidings of good things." Glad tidings that feeds the hungry hearts of the Lord's children. It binds up their broken hearts and revives their drooping spirits. It brings renewed evidence to them of their acceptance with God, and binds them together in love and fellowship and sweet union, and makes the old church a delightful place, a delightful place to live-makes the church an inviting place. I have been in some homes, not only on this trip but at other times when I have been in the city, and will say to you that your homes, as far as I have observed in them, and been with you in them, have been inviting places to me. I love to go to your home, brother. I enjoyed being in your home. It is a delightful place, an inviting place. If I were to go to your home when the lightning is flashing and clouds are rolling and the thunder roaring, and I wanted a place of shelter from the storm, and I knock on the door (I know there is somebody in there because I hear a noise in there), and the door may be slightly ajar; I may look in, and you don't answer to my knock, and I see you and your wife in a dispute, and I see the children lying on the floor engaged in combat, fighting each other, do you think I will push the door open and walk in? Instead of that, I will take another look at the cloud, at the approaching storm, and my conclusion will be that I prefer, I believe I would a little prefer, to be in the storm on the outside than to be in the storm in there. When God's little children who may be standing around, out in the world, where the storms are raging, and the lightning is flashing, and the thunder roaring, and they are looking for a place of shelter, a place of rest, and they approach your place of service, and as they look in and behold what is going on there-see you in strife and confusion and discord, and see that ungodly preacher that they have little confidence in, do you think they will want to push the door open and come on in? No, they will conclude they would just as soon be in the storm outside as to be in the storm in there. Let us make the church an inviting place for the Lord's little children. If we would do that we would not have to persuade them so much to come in. They want a resting place. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Good things in the kingdom of God. Now I believe you are in peace here at this church. I believe sweet fellowship abounds. Somehow when I go to a place, if things are not right, I can feel it pretty soon after I get there. I may not know what it is that is wrong. I may not know what the trouble is, but I can feel it. I can feel that something is wrong. And so I can tell it when I go to a place where love flows from heart to heart and fellowship abounds. That is your condition here, and so I say that we can tell the Lord's little children that there are good things here in the kingdom of God. He has put every good thing, from a spiritual point of view, in His kingdom that you need in the church. He put everything in the natural world that man needs. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Peace, peace, peace. There is nothing in the world that compares with peace. The world is in a turmoil today, as we know. Peace is disturbed, the whole world, almost entirely, engaged in war, and it looks like every day that this country will be drawn into it; we are getting closer and closer to it, every day that we live in the world. Go to the old world and tell me—could you assemble together in Germany today and engage in the service of God as you do here? or in Russia? or any country that Germany has captured and controls? The time is swiftly approaching that these blessings and privileges will be taken from us. Do we appreciate them as we should? "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." I love peace in the home. Wife and I, when we were first married, agreed that whatever we did we were not going to quarrel. Sometimes she tells me, "Don't preach me; don't preach us, but preach Jesus." But I want to say this, and she is present. She may take me to task for it, but I am going to risk it this once. She is larger than I am. I don't want her to sit down on me, but maybe I can beat her running. With all my shortcomings and all my misgivings, with all my faults and all my mistakes, we have been living together a little more than twenty-four years, and she has never yet given me a cross word. The Lord has been so good to me, so gracious to me, so merciful to me. He has blessed the Old Baptists with a spirit of forbearance for me, and they have permitted me to live with them now fifty-two years. It has been fifty-two years ago last Sunday since I asked for a home with them, and they have been so good as to let me still live with them; and, while I have had enemies, and do have enemies among them, yet, as a body of people, they are good and kind to me. They have proved that they love me. If I should be sold, and if what I have should be sold, if all my material possessions were sold, it would not be enough to repay the Old Baptists for what they have done for me. Let my last testimony be that I want to die in their fellowship and in their love; and if something should be said over my grave, or over my body, when I am silent in death, let them say it, and let their hands lay me down in my last long resting place. Will you pray for me? "As it is written (it is a true written statement), How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace." Brethren, let us try to live that way. Brethren, be on your guard. "Watch thou in all things." And may God grant to give you grace and courage and fortitude for your day and trial. I bid you farewell. May the Lord bless you. C. H. C.

Should Be Careful

It is an easy matter for any of us, in our preaching, to form a habit of misquoting the Scriptures. This may be done without any intention of placing a wrong construction upon what the Book says, but it is wrong. Some critic may be present, and our motives or intentions may be misjudged by them. Some honest searcher or enquirer may be present, and may know we have not quoted the passage as it reads, and this may cause his confidence to be shaken. You know, very well, that when we hear men of other orders preach, and they do not quote the Book correctly, we wonder if they have some wrong motive in view in thus making wrong quotations. We should remember that others may be the same way toward us; and for this reason, if for no other, we should be careful to quote just as it reads in the Book. If we are not sure the passage reads just precisely as we quote it, we should make it clear and plain that we are not sure it reads that way. Here is a passage we have often heard misquoted: And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." - ((Dan 2:44) (Daniel 2:44). We have often heard it quoted, "It shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms." The prophet did not say all other kingdoms, but all these kingdoms. The word these could not possibly embrace any other kingdoms than those represented in and by the image which the king had seen, and which Dainel tells him of. Those kingdoms were none others than the kingdoms embraced in the Roman Empire which were in existence when Christ came into the world and when He established His kingdom, or church, and which were reigned over by the Caesars. As proof of this read (Luke 3:1-4), and (Mark 1:1-5). These kingdoms were broken in pieces and destroyed, but some others were not. Informed persons know that to be true. So we should not use the word other for the word these when we quote that text. Let us give no occasion for criticism which can be avoided. We have called attention here to only one text which we often hear misquoted, though there are others. In calling attention to this we do not wish to leave the impression that we never do that ourself, but that we should try to be more careful in our speech. We love our brethren in the ministry, and desire that they be careful to abstain from and to avoid everything that is calculated to injure their influence and usefulness in the Lord's kingdom. When we frequently misquote the Scriptures we plainly show that we have not studied the Scriptures as we should; we show that we have not applied ourselves; we have not used the talent which the Lord has blessed us with. In this, we have neglected the obligation which the Lord has placed upon us. Let us wake from our lethargy and slumber, and apply ourselves in a way that will prove we are what we profess to be. C. Ahead Of Time

This paper is dated September 18, but we are mailing it out ahead of time, as our association begins on this date, and no work is to be done in our office during the week of September 15 to 20. We will be busy on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday getting ready for the meeting, and as the meeting begins on Thursday morning and continues until Sunday, we will then be busy in the meeting. So we are mailing this issue out ahead of time. The next issue will be dated October 2, 1941. C. H. C.

Baptists In All Ages

---September 18, 1941

The above is the title of a book just published by Elder Ariel West. It contains articles on church history and other subjects written by the late Elder J. S. Newman. The book is well worth the price asked for it, which is only one dollar. It is a valuable v/ork. We are glad these writings have been brought together and put in book form, a book of 198 pages. We are glad to recommend the work to any who are interested in knowing the truth regarding the history of the church, as well as on some fundamental points of doctrine. It clearly shows the folly of the doctrine some are so radical on-that God did, from all eternity, absolutely and unconditionally predestinate all things that come to pass, good, bad, and indifferent. You may order the book from us or from Elder Ariel West, Madisonville, Ky. C. H. C.

A Wonderful Meeting

---October 2, 1941

Yes, it was a wonderful meeting. This but faintly describes the meeting of the South Arkansas Association, in her one hundredth annual session, held with Cane Creek Church, here in Thornton, Ark. It was agreed and understood one year ago that this session would be a meeting of four days, celebrating her centennial session. We had service Wednesday night, September 17, but this was just an extra appointment, and was not the beginning of the associational meeting. Quite a number of visitors came in on Wednesday, so we had preaching that night by Elder A. D. West, of Ada, Okla. He was blessed to preach a good sermon and the meeting started off good in that way. At ten o'clock Thursday morning the introductory discourse was delivered by this writer. He apologized for consuming so much time, and does the same thing here again. After lunch was served the association convened in her business session. As the congregation voted their desire to witness the business transactions of the body, no preaching was had until the business was gone through, which consumed most of the afternoon, on account of the reading of the historical sketch which the moderator and clerk (Elders C. H. Cayce and John R. Harris) were appointed last year to have prepared for presentation to the body at this session. The sketch was adopted by unanimous vote of the body, and unanimously approved by every Primitive Baptist present. A new church had been organized near Pine Bluff, called New Bethlehem. She presented a petitionary letter for membership in the association. Another church had thought, two years ago, to represent in another association, but came back to this body at this time. They were both gladly welcomed among us. A committee was appointed as usual, to arrange the preaching during the meeting. This was done by the moderator upon a motion being made that the moderator appoint such a committee, and that the moderator and clerk serve with them. The committee arranged for each service throughout the meeting. Thursday night the stand was filled by Elder N. F. Graves, of Champaign, Ill., followed by Elder W. W. Fowler, of Dallas, Texas, of Chambers Creek Association. Friday morning the association convened at 8:40 and finished up the business. After the business session was done, the stand was filled by Elder A. D. Pitney, of Maumee, Ohio, of the Sandusky Association, and Elder R. E. Wilson, of Italy, Texas, of Chambers Creek Association. In the afternoon the stand was filled by Elders M. A. Hall and G. A. Hill, of the Pulaski Association, of Georgia. By request, Elder J. D. Holder preached in Fordyce that night. The stand was filled at night at the association ground by Elder M. A. Norman, Oden, Ark., of the Salem Association, and Elder L. Z. Folmar, Pelham, Ga., of the Flint River Association. Saturday morning the stand was filled by Elder W. F. Inman, Fredericktown, Mo., of the Harmony Association, and Elder F. M. Russell, Heber Springs, Ark., of the Mountain Springs Association. Saturday afternoon the stand was filled by Elder W. T. Richie, Blossom, Texas, and Elder A. J. Banks, Newton, Miss., of the Bethany Association. Saturday night the stand was filled by Elder A. D. West, Ada, Okla., of the First Primitive Baptist Association of Oklahoma. At the conclusion of the preaching service one brother came forward asking for a home with us, and was received by relation, or recommendation. He said he was tired of being identified where he had no recognition by the Baptist family. He was gladly received. Then five others came forward asking for a home, and they were gladly received. Two of them were baptized Sunday afternoon, and one is to be baptized at Elizabeth on the fourth Sunday, and two are to be baptized here on the next first Sunday afternoon. Sunday morning the stand was occupied by Elder J. D. Holder, Tupelo, Miss., of the New Hope Association, and Elder J. W. Hardwick, Booneville, Miss., of the Tombigbee Association. At the conclusion of the preaching service another came forward asking for a home in the church, and was gladly received. She was baptized in the afternoon with the other two, by Elder John R. Harris. The parting hand was then taken, with a mixture of joy and sorrow-joy for such a wonderful meeting, and sorrow that we were to be separated by many miles, perhaps to meet no more here on earth. The preaching was all of one piece. Not a discordant note was sounded in the whole time. If any had any troubles they were left at home. It was a grand reunion, meeting together from the north and south and east and west, and all of one accord. May the Lord be praised for His wonderful blessings. "His mercy en-durath for ever." May His rich blessings attend the pathway of each one, is our humble prayer. An extra number of the minutes of this meeting are to be printed. If you want one or more copies of the same you can get them free by writing us and asking for as many as you want. We will be glad to mail them to you, especially on account of the historical sketch which will be in them. C. H. C.

Characteristics

A characteristic is a distinguishing mark or trait. Sometimes one will have to know a person pretty well in order to know his characteristic marks or traits. Sometimes one can talk as though he loves you dearly, and as though he loves the peace and fellowship of the brotherhood, and the peace and unity of the churches. He may say that he prays for the peace of Jerusalem; but it is characteristic of some of them to work privately and under cover in such a way as to destroy the peace of the brotherhood and the churches. He will strive with all his ability, possibly, to break fellowship between brethren. But while he is doing that he can put on a very pious outward appearance. They may have on the outward clothing of a sheep, but inwardly they are ravening wolves, and are destroying the peace and union of some of the churches and the brotherhood. The Master has warned us of some such characters. They were abroad in the land in the days of the apostles, and there are evidently some such in the world today. How about a man telling you, face to face, or by private personal letter, that he thinks a great deal of you, and pray for your prosperity, and the Lord's blessings upon your labors, and, at the same time, laboring to destroy your work and labor and good influence with others? Is that observing the instruction given by Paul in (Romans 12:9) "Let love be without dissimulation?" Dissimulation is hypocrisy, pretense. It is simply a pretended love which he has for you when he tells you such as that. And when he tells how much he loves the cause of the Master, and how he desires the peace of Zion, and, at the same time, is doing what he can to destroy the peace of the churches and the brotherhood, it is plain and simple hypocrisy. It is true that many people with whom he comes in contact, and with whom he associates, may not know that he is thus pretending, yet it is a fact just the same. And so much the worse that some do not know it, for he thereby deceives some of the Lord's humble poor, and leads them away from the right path, and destroys the peace of the brotherhood. We have known some who were always busy looking after and attending to their own business; but some of that sort whom we have known seemed to make it their business to attend to the business of others, and try to get help along that line; and usually they find some who are willing to help. Some brother may do something which is perfectly legitimate and right, and that might have a tendency to unite brethren more strongly in ties of fellowship; but this busy fellow will get busy in an effort to destroy the brother who has taken the step which he does not like. Yet the step taken was designed for the bringing together more closely the brotherhood, and to the unifying and edifying of the body of Christ. Still, he may say that he is so anxious for brethren to dwell together in peace. Dissimulation! Al Capone had never been arrested, until he was caught the first time. Saul of Tarsus had never been arrested until the Lord arrested him when he was on his way from Jerusalem to Damascus. Many criminals, who are free today, have never been arrested, because they have not yet been caught. We have wondered sometimes if it were possible that a fellow might have a person excluded in order that no charge be brought against him in the church. We wonder sometimes about the Pharisee who prayed thus with himself, "God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." -(Luke 18:11-12). "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." -(Matthew 23:27-28). May the good Lord pity and deliver His poor and afflicted people from such, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Two Parents

---November 6, 1941

In the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight of October 10, 1941, is an article by T. A. J. Beasley, New Albany, Miss., under the heading, "One Birth: Two Parents or Agencies," in which the writer says: "The two parents or agencies in every physical birth are the father and mother. The two agencies in every spiritual birth are the WORD (or the gospel) and the HOLY SPIRIT." The writer does not tell which is the father or which is the mother in the spiritual birth. We wonder if he thinks the Holy Spirit is the Father, or is the Holy Spirit the mother? If the Holy Spirit is the mother, then the mother is in the masculine gender, for the Bible speaks of the Holy Spirit as He-" But the comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." If the Holy Spirit is a He, then the Holy Spirit is not the mother; and if the Holy Spirit is not the mother, then we suppose the writer means to teach us that the gospel is the mother. If the gospel is the mother, then every child of that family is born out of wedlock-and you know what a child is that is born out of wedlock. Ishmael was born out of wedlock; he was not the son of the married wife. We would just remark here that the world today is full of Ishmaelites-children born out of wedlock. Ishmael was a mocker-and there are many mockers today. "Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord." -Isa. liv. 1. God's children are not born out of wedlock. They have a mother, too, who is virtuous. Their Father and mother are both virtuous. God is their Father. Who is their mother? "For it is written that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a free-woman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount of Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all. For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that beareth not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband. Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise. But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now. Nevertheless what saith the Scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free-woman. So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free." -(Galatians 4:22-31). According to the writer in the so-called Searchlight they are children of the bondwoman-Agar (Hagar) is their mother. They are born out of wedlock. But Jerusalem which is above (the covenant of promise), and is free, is the mother of God's children. They are children of promise, and are legitimate children, being the children of the married wife. You folks have our sincere sympathy. Poor fellows, your mother is not a married wife, according to your own teaching and contention. C. H. C.

Let God Be True

EXPLANATION IN ANSWER TO QUESTION

Please explain ((Pet 3:19) (I Peter 3:19)-Mrs. W. A. Holt, Rogers, Ark.

Answer: The words are: "By which he also went and preached to the spirits in prison." The explanation is in the following verse, where it says; "Which were sometime disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah while the ark was preparing," etc. When was the preaching done? While the ark was preparing. Jesus preached through Noah to the spirits that are now in prison, preached to them before they went to the prison and the fact that they refused to believe Noah they were put in prison of hell. When was the preaching done? I quote the exact language of Peter for the answer. When was the preaching done? "WHEN ONCE THE LONG SUFFERING OF GOD WAITED IN THE DAYS OF NOAH WHILE THE ARK WAS PREPARING." That inspired answer beats any thing I could give. Certainly Jesus did not go to hell and preach at any time. Those who are in hell, God's great prison (Penitentiary) are where preaching will do them no good. Instead of guessing that Jesus died and during the three days his body was in the grave he went to hell and preached, instead of making such a guess don't you think it better to take the inspired answer as I gave it exactly without changing a word as I have given it above?-B. M. B.

REMARKS

The above article by the "Honorable Right Reverend Ben M. Blowhard, D. D., LLD.," is copied from the Orthodox Baptist Searchlight of October 10, 1941, just as it appeared in that sheet. What a powerful searchlight that sheet is! "If the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness." The thing really does not give as much light as a firefly. Note that this learned (?) gentleman says that "Jesus did this preaching through Noah to the spirits that are now in prison, preached to them before they went to prison," etc. If that were the truth, then He did not preach to the spirits in prison. But the apostle says that He preached to the spirits in prison. If they were not in prison when the preaching was done, then He did not preach to the spirits in prison. They were in prison while the ark was a preparing, and He preached to them while the ark was a preparing. But did He do the preaching through Noah? Bogard says He did; but the apostle did not say so.

What did the apostle say about that? He said, "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit; by which also He went and preached unto the spirits in prison." The apostle says He preached unto the spirits in prison by the Spirit; but Bogard presumes to know more about it than the inspired Apostle Peter, for Bogard says He did the preaching through Noah. "Yea, let God be true, but every man a liar." -(Romans 3:4). Bogard says "the fact they refused to believe Noah they were put in prison of hell." If that does not make the preaching of Noah the ministration of damnation, then language does not mean anything. If Noah had not preached to them they would not, and could not, have refused to believe the preaching; and if they had not refused to believe the preaching, they could not have been sent to hell for refusing to believe it. So, according to Bogard, if no preaching had been done, they would have all been saved in heaven! Such is the beauty of Blowhardism! According to Bogard, all who were drowned in the flood, not believing the preaching of Noah, were sent to hell. They all went there, according to Bogard- men, women, children, babies, and all! Who advocates the idea that there are infants in hell? Not the people Bogard delights to call Hardshells, and whom he delights to slander-but Bogard himself. "Thou art the man." The preaching unto the spirits in prison in Noah's day was done by the Lord Himself, and by that preaching they were delivered from the prison house of sin. Sinners were delivered from sin and from its ruinous consequences in Noah's day the same way that they were when the Saviour was here in person, and the same way now that they were then. Sinners have been delivered from the prison house of sin the same way, and by the same power, in every age of the world. They were saved the same way before there were any preachers that they are now; and they are ' saved now the same way that they have been saved in every age of the world. Let us read ((61:1) (Isaiah 61:1-3)) "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord has anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that He might be glorified." Now let us read ((6) (Luke 4:16-21)) "And He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up; and, as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up for to read. And there was delivered unto Him the book of the Prophet Esaias. And when He had opened the book, He found the place where it was written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. And He closed the book, and He gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on Him. And He began to say unto them, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears." This shows clearly, if language means anything, that it is the Lord Himself who delivers out of the prison house of sin. He sends no others to do that work for Him. He does not do this by proxy. It would please the Pope of Rome no more to find that the Lord does His work by proxy than it would please the "Reverend Doctor" Blowhard. But such teaching is not in the Book. It emanated from another source. May the good Lord have mercy on his poor soul. C. H. C.

Tour In Illinois

December 4, 1941

We left home at two o'clock on Sunday morning, October 19, 1941, for Illinois, to fill appointments as arranged by Elder W. E. Wright, of Alma, Ill., and others. We went direct to Greenville, Illinois, from home, arriving at that place at about 5:15 Sunday evening. Brother Mike Mollet and Elder A. D. Brumfield met us at the train, and conveyed us to Brother Mollet's home. Then service was held at Mt. Nebo Church that night, and also on Monday, Monday night and Tuesday. Then we filled appointments at the following named places, or churches: Girard, Waverly, Champaign, Hindsboro, North Fork at Willow Hill, Dundas, Long Prairie, Crooked Creek at Iola, Liberty at Alma, Mt. Vernon, home of a Brother Shuster, New Hope and Rector. The last appointment was at Rector Church on Sunday, November 16. For two weeks or more, from the beginning of the trip, the weather was extremely bad - rain almost every day or night. We are sure that the weather being so bad kept many away from the meetings. We met the following ministers along on the trip: A. D. Brumfield, L. E. Sutton, Baxter Hale, N. F. Graves, Chas. Moore, W. E. Wright, D. H. Knight, A. T. Weatherford, O. L. Weatherford, E. L. Curneal, R. F. Upchurch, and Ariel West. Besides these, we met several brethren who are exercising in a public way who have not been ordained. One of these was Brother L. P. Lockhart, of Granite City, Ill, whom we knew years ago in the bounds of the West Tennessee Association. We were glad to see him once more. We also met Brethren Lloyd Clapp, of Champaign, H. C. Allen, of Springfield, and Joel Wright, of Vandalia. There were probably others, but we kept no record of their names, and we may not remember the names of all. But we love and appreciate them, just the same. Elder W. A. Shutt, of Nashville, Tenn., was with us two days at Girard.

Some of these churches we remember to have visited in the years gone by. We were at Waverly (Head of Apple Creek is the name of the church) in December, 1913. Elder J. A. Conlee was living there at that time. Account of that trip may be seen on page 211 of Volume 2 of our Editorial Writings. We were also at Mt. Nebo Church on that same trip. Elder John Willeford was living there then. We loved both of those brethren, and esteemed them highly. Brother Mike Mollett married a daughter of Elder Willeford, and they are living at the old home place. We also met Elder L. E. Sutton on that same trip. Most of the preachers we met on that trip are gone to their long eternal home. Those people love the doctrine of grace, and the principles of truth which have ever characterized the Primitive Baptists as being a peculiar people, different and separate from the world, and they appreciate the minister who will go among them preaching peace by Jesus Christ. They were kind and good to us. They proved by their actions that they love the glorious principles which we have been trying to contend for during the fifty-one years of our ministry. May the Lord bless them and sustain them in all their trials and conflicts, and give them strength and Christian courage to continue to "stand in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein," and continue to find rest for their souls, {see (Jeremiah 6:16)} is our humble prayer. We humbly ask that they please remember us and our loved ones in their prayers. We trust some of these brethren in the ministry will have a mind to come this way some day; and may the Lord thus direct them. We trust the Lord may spare us to meet again on earth; but if we are not permitted to meet again in worship and service here, we have a sweet hope that we will meet in that better country, where separations and wars never come. Close of Volume 56

We now come to the time to write an article at the close of another volume of The Primitive Baptist. This issue completes the fifty-sixth volume, the fifty-sixth year of the publication of this periodical. What changes have been wrought during these fifty-six years! Not many are now living who were members of our churches fifty-six years ago, or who were readers of the first issue of this publication. Words are not sufficient to express our deep regret that we do not have the first book containing the names of the subscribers who received the first issue of this paper. We wonder if there is a present subscriber who has a copy of that first issue of The Primitive Baptist? If so, we sure would be glad to hear from that subscriber. Although there have been so many changes, yet there are some things which have not changed. The God of Israel has not changed. His love has not changed. His power has not changed. His faithfulness has not changed. His mercy still endures, "for His mercy endureth for ever." He is still longsuffering. He is the same loving heavenly Father that He has ever been. Notwithstanding our many shortcomings, our many wrong doings, our waywardness, our un-kindness to our brethren and to one another, our forgetfulness of Him, our many sins and transgressions - notwithstanding all these things, yet He still remembers us in mercy. What great reasons we do have to be thankful to Him! When we think of the sad and distressing conditions which exist in the old world, the great war that is going on in the old country, and of the slaughter of the millions on the other side of the great waters, and remember that we still have the great and wonderful and blessed privilege of assembling ourselves together, as it were, under our own vine and figtree to endeavor to worship and serve our God as we understand His Word to teach, and according to the dictates of our own conscience, where none dare to molest or to make us afraid - How thankful we should be! and should we not consecrate our lives anew to His blessed service? It is deplorable that there is such a spirit of war and bloodshed, which seems to be pervading the whole known world. That spirit seems to be pervading all the nations, and it seems to be prevailing even in our own land, in a great measure. Think of the immense sums of money being spent in preparation for war, calling it defense measures, and of the young men of the nation being called from their homes, from the company and care of the mothers and fathers, and taken to camps and receiving military training-teaching them to kill and how to kill, and how to use weapons of warfare most effectively! Think of what all these things mean! Lord, help us, we pray. Then think of the spirit of war and destruction that pervades the ranks of the old church-the kingdom our Master established while He was on earth, for a home and resting place for His poor little crippled children while they tabernacle here in this world of sin and distress. Men have crept in who write as if they are for peace, and yet secretly work for the destruction of the brethren, and do things which they certainly should know can only bring strife and war and division. Some things have been done that there was no excuse for the persons doing them to not know they would be destructive to the peace and unity of the brotherhood. Some will say that they are for peace and unity, but will reject brethren whose life has been an open book, and who have never brought confusion among the churches. These things we know to be true. It is sad and deplorable that these things are true. But God will not leave Himself without witness. There have been troubles, trials, wars, conflicts, distresses, dark and cold days, and lowering clouds along the years of the past. We do not, and we need not, expect to reach a time in this poor life when there will be none of such things to endure and to pass through. As long as we stay here in this old world we may expect to have such things to encounter. But, thank God, the troubles the Lord's poor and afflicted people have to endure are all in this life. Many of our friends and loved ones have already crossed over the river and are now at rest. The gathering storms, the lightnings, the thunderings, and the noise of the guns on the battlefields—none of these things disturb them now. Their souls are resting in the presence of the Lord, and their bodies are quietly sleeping that sleep which knows no disturbance. And we will soon reach the end of the way. All our readers—may God bless you—will soon come to the end of life's toilsome journey. We are all one year nearer to the last end of our warfare than we were when we wrote, or copied, the article at the close of the fifty-fifth volume, one year ago. Many of our brethren, sisters and dear friends have passed on during the past year. We miss them. We loved them, and we know they loved us. Our hearts are sad that we will greet them no more on earth. But we anticipate the blessed day when we shall meet them in a brighter, better world above. Let us try to thank and praise our Lord that things are no worse with us than they are. They may grow worse—and, in some things they likely will. But let us try to remember that our Lord will never forsake His little ones. How poor and needy we feel to be. We are not ashamed of the principles we have tried to contend for in these columns or from the sacred desk. Those principles are eternal, and will stand when time is no more. We are willing to trust our destiny on those principles. May the Lord bless you, dear brother, and help us to strive for the things that make for peace in Zion, and for the unity of the whole brotherhood. Jerusalem is a quiet habitation. Let us try to do nothing to disturb the quietude of that habitation. And please do remember us and our loved ones in your prayers. Farewell until 1942. C. H. C.

Church Organized

---December 18, 1941

A number of brethren and sisters living in Shreveport, La., and vicinity sent a request to Cane Creek Church, in Thornton, Ark., and some other churches to grant their ordained help to meet with them in Shreveport on Saturday and the fifth Sunday in November for the purpose of organizing a Primitive Baptist Church in the city. In compliance with that request, fourteen brethren, ministers and deacons, met with them on Saturday afternoon, November 29, at the American Legion Hall, near the home of Brother S. B. Price. We had service at 2:30. They had agreed among themselves that the work of organization be attended to that night, as some who expected to go into the organization could not be present that afternoon. On Saturday night quite a congregation assembled, and the brethren and sisters desiring to go into the organization expressed themselves as being satisfied with the brethren present to organize themselves into a presbytery and to organize them into a church. Accordingly, the following named brethren, being present, some of them by request sent to their churches, and some by personal request, formed themselves into a presbytery for the purpose stated: Elder A. H. Garner, Ephesus Church, near Ruston, La.; Elder J. F. Autry, New Prospect Church, near Mena, Ark.; Elder W. J. Blackmon, Cool Springs Church, near Logansport, La.; Elder C. H. Cayce, Cane Creek Church, Thornton, Ark.; Deacons M. B. Claggett, Cane Creek Church, Thornton; J. B. Webb, Fellowship Church, East Mountain, Texas; T. W. Kent, R. L. Sawyer, and J. W. Kent, Bethel Church, Shreveport; J. L. Hammett and H. A. Wiggins, New Providence Church, Jamestown, La.; and J. L. McBride, Jesse Swanner and Henry Swanner, Zion's Rest Church, near Jonesboro, La. The presbytery organized by electing Elder A. H. Garner, moderator, and Elder C. H. Cayce, clerk. The covenant upon which they agreed to be constituted was read, and signed by all parties—eighteen from Bethel Church, near Shreveport, and one from New Providence Church, near Cameron, Texas, and one from Fuller's Chapel Church, North Little Rock. Their letters were presented, and recognized as being in order by the presbytery. Then the Articles of Faith and Rules of Decorum were read, and recognized as being sound and in accord with Baptist practice. Then the members extended the hand of fellowship to each other. Then the presbytery pronounced them to be a Primitive Baptist Church organized in gospel order, and the hand of fellowship extended to them by the presbytery and the visiting brethren and sisters present. The church then went into conference, and agreed that the name of the church should be Temple Primitive Baptist Church, and that their regular meeting time should be Saturday night and fourth Sunday in each month, and that their communion season should be in May and October. They made choice of Elder J. F. Autry as pastor and moderator, and Brother T. W. Foshee as clerk. On Sunday morning they met for service, and had preaching by Elder Garner and the writer, after which the opportunity was extended for any to present themselves for membership who might wish to unite with them. Three came forward with letters from Bethel Church, and three offered themselves for membership, desiring baptism. They were joyfully received. It was a most delightful meeting. Brother Claggett and Sister Grace and the writer had to return home that afternoon; but we learn they had another delightful meeting Sunday night, and that one more united with them by letter and one more by experience. The four were to be baptized on the first Sunday in December, at the regular meeting at Bethel. This starts them with twenty-eight members from the first meeting. May the good Lord prosper and bless them, and enable them to keep house for the Lord in such a way as to be pleasing to Him and to make it a delightful place for the Lord's poor pilgrims here on earth, is our prayer. INTRODUCTION TO VOLUME 57

With this issue we are entering on the fifty-seventh volume of The Primitive Baptist. The war clouds are hovering all over and around us. After we wrote the article as the close of the fifty-sixth volume, our own country was plunged into the dreadful world-wide war. Japan made an unwarranted and a surprise attack on some of our islands in the Pacific. They made this attack while their representatives were in Washington in a pretended effort at peace with our president and secretary of state. Of course, there was nothing left for our country to do but to fight, or to meekly give up and surrender to such pirates. Well, of course, there has been no surrender. Every man, woman and child will be called upon to do our utmost to help win the war against the Axis powers. May the good Lord help us; and may He grant that peace may finally prevail, and the blessed privilege of freedom still be handed down to our children and children's children, for generations to come. In the ages of the past, as well as in some countries at present, many have been and are, denied the privilege of the freedom of the press, freedom of speech, and the freedom of worship according to the dictates of their own conscience, which we are yet permitted to enjoy. These blessings and privileges are priceless. They are blood-bought. The blessed privilege of the freedom of worship was bought for us by the blood of the crucified and risen Redeemer on Calvary's cross; and they were bought by the blood of our ancestors, who laid down their lives on the bloody battlefields, that freedom and liberty might be gained, and the same be handed down to us of this present day. We wonder if we appreciate these blessings and privileges. Again we are called upon to give our sons, and to give what we have, that these blessings may not be taken from us. May God grant that these blessings may be continued. God grant that when the war is over that these blessings may still be for us or for our children to enjoy. There would be little left worth living for without these glorious blessings. May the Lord pity us all and help us to consecrate our lives anew to His service, and to the things that are worth while, and that are to His glory, and to the help and benefit of one another while we are permitted to still live in this sad world of turmoil. May we endeavor to do as the apostle said, in (Philippians 3:1-14): Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. The apostle did not claim that he had attained unto a state of perfection; "but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." There is something before-not behind-that is worth while. There is a race set before us; and it will continue to be before us until we reach the end of our journey here. "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." - (Hebrews 12:1-2). There is a race set before the Lord's children, and we are admonished to run the race. Let us endeavor to forget the things which are behind, and let us reach forth unto those things which are before; let us endeavor to press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling. May the Lord help us, as your editor, and those who are associated with us in the publication and sending forth of The Primitive Baptist, thus to do, is our humble prayer. And will you pray for us to this end, and that the Lord will help us, and that He will bless every reader throughout this New Year, and all through the journey of this life, and finally receive us all in a better world, where there are no wars, no troubles, no bereavements, no distresses; but one eternal day of unsullied bliss and glory, where all the redeemed will have and enjoy eternal rest. C. H. C.

Longing For A Home

Dear Brother and Sister Cayce: Esteemed Friends

If indeed I have any right to relate myself as such. I have, and have had for a long time, a desire to make known unto you, as near as I may have words to express my feelings, how much I hope and trust I appreciate your humble lives as an example, though I am not supposed to be a judge. I feel very deeply that we never will, or never have had any better. Brother Cayce, there is only one who knows how much good it does me, how edifying it is to my soul to hear you preach the truth with such given power as you have. Yet, like a little girl in The Primitive Baptist, "Why can't I rejoice without tears?" How I have secretly prayed that you might be spared many years, and given strength through grace to fight on as nobly as you've done in the past. I do not have the pleasure of attending many sweet meetings, but it seems that every added one is sweeter than the one before. It gets harder and harder for me to go on without them-without being one of the little band I love so dearly. I can't think of anything more beautiful than the picture of-----marching so anxiously down to the water for baptism. Maybe you know how much I wanted to go; but something held me back-I know not what. I am sometimes so uplifted and happy that it seems that it would be easy to go before my friends and ask for the home I hope I desire. Then the next moment I am fraught with fears that I am only deceived and would be a disgrace to the church, and that my own conscience would call me a hypocrite. If that isn't why I don't even want my own mother to think I am even interested I don't know why it is. Did you ever know anyone so wicked? Brother Cayce, will you, if you can stoop so low, pray for me, that if indeed I have the duty to go forward and ask for a home, that I may do so, and that I may never do anything that would be shameful and dishonoring to the dear old church- Primitive Baptist? If I can have that courage while you live here in this world are you willing to baptize such a creature as I? We all need your prayers. Come this way whenever you have a mind. Your visits are so encouraging. I feel that I should not take so much of your time. A little sister in Christ, I hope, P. S. By no means is this for print or an answer.

If such as the above is not from a child of grace, we confess that we do not know what such evidences are. See, the statement that the letter was not for print or an answer. How could we answer the question? Well, the above is the letter; but all names are omitted, so no person can know who the writer is, but the writer and us. What is the evidence when one so much enjoys and loves to hear the truth preached? Let us see what God's Book says about it. Let us read (I Corinthians 2:11,14): For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. The apostle plainly teaches us in this a matter which we all know to be true, that one knows the things of a man by the spirit of man which is in him. We all know very well, in nature, that one must have the spirit, or life, of a man in order to know the things of man. One must have natural life in order to know, or to comprehend, natural things. The same thing is true in grace; for the apostle says, "Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." Even so means just like that. Just as the one is true, so is the other also true. This being a fact, one must first be in possession of the Spirit of God in order to know the things of God. Note, too, that the apostle says, "Which things also we speak." We speak the things that are of God. If the minister really speaks the things that are of God, and you know them, it is because you already have the Spirit of God. This is clear and positive evidence that you are already a child of God; for "He that hath the Son hath life." The apostle also tells us, emphatically, that "the natural man receiveth not the thing's of the Spirit of God." The things of the Spirit of God here under consideration by the apostle are the things which we speak. The natural man is the unregenerate man. The unregenerate man does not receive the things of the Spirit, which things we speak. If you do receive them with joy and gladness of soul, it is because you are a child of grace, and you have the Spirit of God, which enables you to receive them.

Gospel preaching is foolishness to the unregenerate, so the apostle here informs us. If he told the truth, and he did, and the glorious gospel of the grace of God is not foolishness to you, then you are a child of God; and you should come out from the world and enlist under the banner of your King, to engage in His delightful service while you stay here in this world of turmoil and sorrow. There is sweet and delightful rest for you in company with His humble followers. Let us here have some of the language recorded by the beloved disciple. In (I John 4:4-6) we have this language. Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is He that is in you, than he that is in the world. They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them. We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error. The they who are of the world are the false prophets, or false teachers. Being of the world, of course they speak of the world. The doctrines they preach are of the world; and the world hears them, of course. Then the apostle says "we are of God." The true gospel minister is of God in his teaching. He preaches the doctrine of God; he preaches the truth. Who does not receive the preaching of this man of God? The people who are included in the term world; those who are not of God; those who know not God. Who receives the preaching of this man who preaches the truth? Those who know God; those who have been born of God; those who know the Lord in the free pardon and forgiveness of their sins. Just as sure, then, as the apostle told the truth, and he did, and as sure as the minister is of God in his preaching, and is preaching the truth, and it brings peace and joy and consolation to you, and feeds your hungry soul, just that sure you are a child of grace. Here is blessed and sweet assurance to you. In speaking to some unregenerate persons the Saviour said, in (John 8:43) "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word." Those people did not understand His speech; they did not understand His teaching. The Saviour said the reason why this was so was because they could not hear His word. Why could they not hear His word? The Saviour answers this question in ((7) (John 8:47): "He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God." Then, one must be of God, must be born of God, must be a child of God, in order to hear God's words. Then, if one does hear God's words it is because that one is already of God. If the gospel of God's grace is heard by you with joy and gladness, if it brings joy and comfort to your soul, it is because you are one of His children; it is because you are of God. Again, the inspired Apostle John says, in (I John 3:14) "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." If you love the humble followers of the Lord; if you love those who give you evidence that they are children of God, this is evidence given you by the inspired apostle that you have passed from death unto life. This is God's blessed and eternal truth, and is just as true as that God lives and reigns in glory. And if you love the Lord, you also love His children; and if you love His children, you also love Him. "Everyone that loveth Him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of Him." - (I John 5:1). If you love the one, then you also love the other. And Jesus has so kindly and lovingly and tenderly addressed you in this language, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." -(John 14:15). The best way in the world to show and to prove that we love Him is by keeping His commandments-" go home to your friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee." Yes, we tried to hide our feelings, too, when we were traveling the road you are now traveling. We tried to keep the matter hid from our precious sainted father and mother; but they knew more about it than we thought they did. No doubt in our mind but that your dear mother has seen and knows more about how you feel than you may think she does. You are afraid you will deceive her by telling her your feelings and desires in these matters which so much concern you; but you would not deceive her that way. No doubt you would get some relief by unbosoming yourself to her, who is your best earthly friend, instead of trying to keep the matter from her. Yes, if you would offer yourself to the church, and obtain fellowship with them, manifestly, and they receive you (which we confidently believe they would do), and it should be your desire for the unworthy writer to baptize you, and the church should be willing to grant your wish in the matter, we would cheerfully go with you down into the water, and bury you in baptism, for you to rise to walk in newness of life. We are sure you would enjoy a peace of conscience you will never enjoy any other way in the world. Any of our ministers would cheerfully baptize such a one as you manifest yourself to be in the above letter. You tell the feelings of those who have been born again. You speak the language of Canaan. May the good Lord bless you, and all those who are dear to you, and give you grace and strength and courage to go home to your friends, and to live in that good home, and to live in such a way as to be an honor to the cause you love, is our prayer. Remembrances

We have received a great many kind holiday remembrances - Christmas and New Year cards. Besides, some tokens of Christian love and fellowship of a financial nature. We do not have words to express the thankfulness and gratitude of our poor hearts for these kind and good expressions of love and fellowship from our dear friends, brethren and sisters. We know there were many who were thinking of us, and these things have drawn us closer to you. We wish we could write to each one of you personally and tell you how much we appreciate your kind thoughtfulness of us, but that would be a great task and would take much time and expense, as there were so many of them. Will each of you take this as a personal note from us, and be assured that we hold each one of you in high esteem and love you dearly for Jesus' sake, and for the truth's sake? May the good Lord shower down His richest blessings upon each one of you and upon all those who are dear to you, is our humble prayer. C. H. Cayce and Wife.

Advocate and Messenger Sold

---January 1, 1942

We received our copy of the Advocate and Messenger for December, 1941, and find the announcement therein that it has been sold to Elder T. P. Dalton, son of the late Elder T. S. Dalton, of Catonsville, Maryland. The magazine will still be printed and mailed out from Front Royal, Va., as formerly. Elder T. S. Dalton was the editor of Zion's Advocate for a number of years. This was a number of years ago. We are sure that Sister Pittman has labored under great and many difficulties in sending the Advocate and Messenger out since the death of dear Elder Pittman. We wish Elder Dalton success in his undertaking. The Primitive Baptist and the Advocate and Messenger have labored and co-operated together during the past many years, and we trust the same cooperation may be continued with that good magazine under the new management. May the Lord bless you, Brother Dalton, in your undertakings and labors in His vineyard. The foregoing was written just as we were going to press with our last issue, but too late for that issue. C. Ordination of Deacons

---January 15, 1942

AT OAK GROVE, LOUISIANA, DECEMBER 14, 1941

Examination by Elder C. H. Cayce of the Brethren to be Ordained.

There are not only some qualifications laid down in the Bible for the deacons, but there are also some laid down for their wives-not that we expect to ordain their wives. I have known places where, when they ordained the deacons, they ordained their wives, but I don't so understand the Book to teach. But there are qualifications that need to be looked into concerning the wives of the brethren to be ordained. I want to read some, and as I read I will call attention to a few things, and will also ask the questions that I may think of, or that come into my mind. Here in the sixth chapter of Acts we find the record where the first men were put into the office of deacon. "And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations." Daily ministrations means the daily distribution of the funds that were contributed to be used for the purpose of relieving the widows; and this rested, up until this time, in the hands of the apostles, and they attended to that business; but the disciples were multiplied in number so that the apostles could not attend to their work as ministers and to this also; and hence the complaint that some of their widows were neglected. "Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God and serve tables." That is, it is unreasonable. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report." Now, the word seven is a complete number, a round number, a full number. That is, look out among you every one that is qualified. Now, if you have brethren in your midst, in your membership, who possess the qualifications, then it is, your duty to follow the example- set them apart to that office. If one does not possess the qualifications, you will no more make a deacon of him by ordaining him, than you will make a preacher out of one by ordaining him as a preacher. You are not authorized to ordain a man to the work of the ministry unless he possesses the qualifications; neither are you authorized to ordain a man as deacon who does not possess the qualifications. What are those qualifications? "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report." That is the first qualification that the inspired apostle laid down here-" of honest report." That is, that his reputation is that he is an honest man. If there is a place in the church of God that a man should fill and should have the report that he is honest and upright in his dealings, it is the office of deacon. Why should that be important? Ordinarily it would be taken for granted that to be a member of the church he should be of honest report. Why, then, should it be more important for a deacon? For the reason that the deacon is a man that is to handle the finances of the church. The church has no business in the world putting her finances into the hands of a man who is not of honest report. If he does not possess this qualification, some might say he is not of honest report, and the church has put money into the hands of a man whose honesty is questionable, and suspicion may arise that the money is not rightly used or rightly applied. If he is of honest report nobody will have that suspicion. He must be of honest report. Brother Griffis (spokesman for the church), are these brethren of honest report? Yes, sir, I think so. Brother Griffis, let me say this. We are going into something now that is important. Tell me, do you know these men are of honest report? Yes, sir. That is the way I want you to answer. "Of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom." Is the evidence such that you feel sure in your heart that the Holy Spirit, in its divine influence and power, dwells in the hearts of these brethren? Yes, sir. Have they manifested the fact that they have wisdom in conducting the affairs that belong to the church of God? I think so. Not only wisdom in the management of the affairs that pertain to the church, but in the management of the affairs that pertain to their homes and in their dealings with their fellowmen? Yes, sir. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." That is a business matter-not commercial-but it is business that pertains to, and belongs to, the house of God, the church that our blessed Redeemer established while here in this world. "But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch: whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them." In Paul's first letter to Timothy, (I Timothy 3:1-7), he gives the qualifications that should be, and must be, possessed by one set apart for the work of the ministry. "This is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity: (for if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?) Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil." Then, beginning with the eighth verse, "Likewise must the deacons." The deacons, just like the ministers, "must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil." "Likewise must the deacons be grave." The word must is in italics, supplied by the translators, to give the full meaning that is in the original language. Must is a very emphatic word. "Must the deacons be grave." Do they possess that qualification? Yes, sir. "Not double-tongued." Do they talk one way today and another way tomorrow? I have not found them that way. "Not given to much wine?" No, sir. "Not greedy of filthy lucre?" No, sir. Greedy means to possess an inordinate desire. They don't have that for filthy lucre? No, sir. They do not engage in questionable practices for financial gain? No, sir. "Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience." That faith that was one time for all time delivered to the saints-do they hold to that in a pure conscience? Yes, sir, to the best of my knowledge. "Let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless." Then here is something about their wives. "Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things." Do they possess these qualifications? I don't think we have any that beat them. They don't tell tales on folks? No, sir. Are they sober in their conduct and in their way of living, modest, quiet, and faithful in all things? Yes, sir. "Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well." Do they fill that qualification? Yes, sir. "For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." "Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience." The one who speaks for the church in answering these questions could answer every question fully, except one, and that was to the best of his knowledge, and that is as to these brethren holding to the faith; to the best of his knowledge they do. I think it is prudent and well to ask these brethren themselves some direct questions as to their faith and belief. That becomes necessary for this reason: As officers in the church of the Lord and Master, they are, in a measure, to guard that church against the intrusion of false teachers, and to exert their best efforts and their influence to keep such things out of the church. In order that they be able to do that, they themselves should know something of the doctrine, what this Book teaches, and what God has authorized to be taught in the gospel of the Son of God. Hence I am going to ask some questions of these brethren that they themselves can answer, and no one else can answer positively but them. You may have heard them speak along this line or that line; but now we come to a solemn thing, and a place that is sacred in the house of the blessed Master, and they should answer these questions without equivocation. I am not going to examine them as fully as I would if we were ordaining them to the ministry; and I am not asking the questions, or going to ask them, because I don't love you brethren. If I know my heart, I love you brethren, and you have my deepest sympathy, for I know that in endeavoring to fill an office in the house of God there is a great responsibility, and there will be trials along the way. Brother Jones spoke something about the trial..” There will be things to endure. Brethren, do you believe, or not, that there is an eternal, ever-living, self-existent being that we call God? Do you believe that this God has all power? Do you believe that He possesses all wisdom and knowledge? Do you believe that He has ever learned anything? Has He ever forgotten anything? Do you believe that this God is present everywhere, at one and the same time, and nowhere absent? (One brother answered: Can't believe anything else and believe the other.) I wanted to see if you would catch that. Do you believe that God is a God of mercy? Do you recognize Him as a God of justice, as well as a God of mercy? Do you believe that there are three persons, if we may so define it, in the Godhead? that there is just one God. and that this one God is composed of more than one, expressed in the Book as the Father, Son and the Holy Ghost, and that these three are one? Do you believe that they are one in purpose, one in power, one in divine essence and one in glory?

Do you believe that this God, in the office of Father, made choice of sinners of Adam's race to salvation, that they should be saved in glory - that they were chosen and embraced in covenant? Do you believe that covenant was an everlasting covenant between Father and Son? Do you believe that as the Father made choice of persons that the choice embraced a definite number? Do you think any could be added to it or taken from it? Do you believe that in the morning of time the eternal God spoke this world into existence by the word of His power, created all material things, the earth, the sun, moon, and stars, all beasts and fowls of the air? Do you believe, strictly, the Bible account of creation? You don't believe, then, that the first appearance of life was in some little something that is not big enough to be seen by the natural eye, and that this little something divided and subdivided, then “evoluted” up to man? Do you believe that in the morning of time God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and that God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and that man became a living soul, or a living being? Do you believe that God gave that man a law? Do you believe that the law God gave was a just law? If He gave a law that was just, then man could have kept that law, could he not? If he could not have kept the law, then the law would not have been just. A law that is just is one that can be kept. He did not have to violate the law. The man violated that law without constraint. The penalty of that law was death, was it not? Do you believe that when the man violated the law that man died in trespasses and in sins, and the life that man lived became poisoned with sin? The law being just, the man becoming dead in trespasses and in sins, if he is ever delivered out of that state or condition, must not that be alone, wholly and solely, by the grace and mercy of God, or can the man himself do something to get out? It is all of God's grace then, is it? Do you believe that God saved sinners in Noah's day just like He does now? Do you think God is making experiments and that He may try some other way later on? Just one way. God is one and His way is one. Do you believe that when Jesus died on Calvary's cross He made complete, full satisfaction and atonement for the sins of His people? The Father made choice of them and gave them to the Son, and now He has made atonement for them. Do you believe it is the work of the Holy Spirit now to make this known to the subjects of that atonement and to regenerate sinners, and does He do that work through any outside agency? He does that work then alone, wholly and solely. It is accompanied by the operation of the Spirit of God upon the spirit of man. Is that work always effectual? Then do you believe that all of these that the Father chose and gave to the Son and the Son atoned for, will be regenerated by the Holy Spirit here in time, and do you believe that they will all be finally saved in glory? Do you believe when the Saviour was here in the world that He was the second Person in the Trinity, Jesus the anointed Son of God?

Do you believe that He was the anointed Son of God born of the Virgin Mary? Do you believe He established a kingdom or a church? How many did He establish? Just one. Well, do you think that if He had wanted any more than one that He would have established more? I don't think He has changed His mind about it. Was that church established or set up to be a home for His children here, a resting place for them? And was that for their glorification? God's glory. It is the place where we can give glory to Him while we are here, is that it? That is the place for His children then. Do you believe that His children, when the opportunity presents, should become identified with that church and then live in that church in a way that is honoring and glorifying to their Master? Do you think that ministers are given to that church? Were those ministers meant to be lords and masters over the church? Were they given to be servants? Is it not a fact that every office that the Lord has put in His kingdom, that those filling those places as officers in the church, are servants of the church, as well as servants of the Lord? Do you brethren believe that this is a great responsibility? Do you sisters think that this is a great responsibility? Do you sisters realize the fact that there is an obligation now resting on you to be helpers to your husbands that they may fill the office that God has placed them in and that the church sets them apart to? Many times there will be an obligation resting upon them, a duty to discharge in their service in the house of God that they will need your help, that they will not only need your encouragement, but they will need your help to go right with them in the discharge of some of those duties and obligations. (The questions were all answered satisfactorily.) Brethren, I am satisfied, and am willing to proceed. (Elder C. O. Stegall suggested that the candidates be questioned as to their belief in the eternal punishment of the wicked.) They have answered that the Lord made choice of His people and made atonement for them, and that they will all live with God in eternal happiness. Our Saviour instructs us in Matt. xxv. that He is going to divide the people, separate the sheep from the goats, divide the sheep from the goats, that He is going to place the sheep on His right hand, the others, designated as goats, on the left hand. And of these on the left hand He says "These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." Regardless of our feelings in the matter, and regardless of what men may teach, here is the statement laid down by our Master. The word here translated everlasting is the same word, letter for letter, mark for mark, dot for dot, which is translated eternal in the same verse with reference to the life of the righteous, It is a word in the original language frequently used in speaking of God, the everlasting or eternal God. If the life of the righteous is of endless duration, the same word being used in regard to the punishment of the wicked, then that is also of endless duration. It is the same word, and if it means that the righteous are going to always live and never die, it also means that the others are going to suffer punishment that will never end. One must be of equal duration with the other. Now, if there is no such thing as eternal punishment, punishment of endless duration, then Jesus did not save anybody from anything; for we all have our sufferings here; we have our sorrows and afflictions and disappointments and bereavements here; and if Jesus died and He did not save anybody from these things, and there is no eternal punishment, then He did not save anybody from that. If there is no place of eternal torment, or eternal punishment, then there was no such thing for Him to save them from, So if He saved them from anything at all it was from eternal punishment. If He did not save them from that He did not save them from anything. Do you brethren believe that? Universalists will tell you there is no such thing as that. Most of you remember Elder W. H. Lee. I frequently think of what I heard him say more than one time. I made a trip in his country before he united with the church. He was a Universalist. That was his belief, and he "scrapped" with the Old Baptists on that, and with other folks, too. He could whip the other folks. When I came through that country he came out to hear me and I got on that point in my discourse that day. I did not know there was any Universalist there, but I said I would measure platforms with anybody - "I will measure platforms with the Universalist and I will show that my platform is broader than his, better than his. Brother Universalist, did Jesus save anybody from suffering? No. Did He save anybody from sorrows? No. Did He save us from having troubles? No; we all have our troubles. Did He save any from natural death? No; we all have to die. The Brother Universalist says there is no such place as eternal punishment, no such place as that, no use for that; for we are all going to heaven when we die. If there is no such place as that, if there is no such place as an eternal hell, according to the Universalist platform, or doctrine, then Jesus did not save anybody from anything." I knocked all of the Universalism out of him. It was not long until he joined the Old Baptist Church. How faithful, true and devoted he was! But I thank the Lord for it. Denying that very principle of truth has brought more disturbance and confusion in the minds of the people than any one thing in this country, and whenever that is introduced in the Old Baptist Church, brethren, I advise you to keep it out. Brother Burch: This is one particular place that I would like to have an expression of every one of the brethren that we are agreed on this point. I could not work with anybody that does not believe that point of the doctrine of God our Saviour. I could not work with anybody that does not believe the punishment of the wicked is of equal duration with the joys of the righteous. If the Bible does not teach that they are of the same duration, I have no knowledge of the teachings of the Bible. I ask that it be recorded here today. I would like for it to show that this church is firmly established that the punishment of the wicked will be of the same duration as the joys of the righteous. Just one point I would like to stress in the Scripture that Brother Cayce read. I think there is one thing of particular interest to every child of God holding membership in the church. He says they shall be on His right hand. In referring to the goats, they shall be on the left hand-not on His left hand, but on the left hand. I am certain that if the goats were on the left hand of God that would be worth something, but they were not to be on the left hand of God. Elder Cayce: Let me call your attention to the fact that these that shall be placed on the left hand-that they are left out. They are on the left hand and they are left out. They are left out on the left hand. Do any of the rest of you have any questions? This one more statement; if the punishment of the wicked ends, the life of the righteous will end in the same instant. The rule of our own language, the English language, to say nothing about what the words mean in the original, the rule of our own language is that when two things are set up in opposition, one to the other, that the one must be of equal duration as the other. That is the rule of our language; and if we take a position in which we have to deny language to sustain it, then the position is wrong. One must be of equal duration with the other. It follows that just as long as the righteous live, and that will be without end, just that long will the punishment of the wicked continue. If the punishment of the wicked ends, the life of the righteous will end. I repeat, one is of equal duration as the other. Another point; the goats are on the left hand, left out. If the position be correct that has been advocated by some, that these goats are merely disobedient children of God, in the final windup the disobedient children of God will be left out, and that is final apostasy, for they are left out. Those on His right hand enter into life eternal and those on the left hand are left out. They do not enter into life eternal. If they had it one time, now they have lost it, for they are left out.

Charge Delivered by Elder C. H. Cayce to the Church and to the Brethren Ordained to the Office of Deacon, at Oak Grove, La.

The apostle, when delivering the charge to Timothy, a young preacher, said, "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead." The charge delivered to the deacons should be before the same divine authority; not simply before men, but before God, for there is an obligation that is placed upon you brethren by the Lord of glory. While, in a measure, you are responsible to the church (in some things you are), but first and primarily you are responsible to your God. The first thought and the first consideration which should be had by you in filling your office, or endeavoring to do so, is as to what would be well pleasing to your heavenly and divine Master. I want to present to you brethren this Book in this way that you let this be the man of your counsel. What God's Book teaches, let that be your instructor. In order to do that it is necessary that you study it-not just simply read it casually- but to study it; and to study it it is necessary that, as you read it, you study what each sentence means, and what each word in that sentence means, that you may be sure as to what that language teaches. It is true, in order to get the full conception of it and to see the spiritual import and the right application of it, in a measure, and what the results will be, you will need wisdom from on high. Hence, as you study and meditate, it becomes your duty, as well as your sweet privilege, to approach the throne of grace and ask God to give you wisdom-not knowledge. Wisdom is one thing and knowledge is another. God gives wisdom and understanding. By searching and studying we get knowledge. So we need wisdom in order to get knowledge, and the Lord gives wisdom and understanding. So you have the privilege, as well as a duty, to go to Him in prayer and ask Him to give you wisdom that you may understand; and then it is your duty to study the Book, and take that and what it teaches as the man of your counsel. Now there is not only a charge that should be delivered to these brethren, but there is a charge that should be delivered to the church. You said by your action in making choice of these brethren to put them into the office of deacon, that you wish them to serve you in that capacity; and then today you have said by your act, in the presence of God and before us as witnesses, that you are satisfied with them to set them apart to that office and you have said that you are satisfied with the presbytery. When you said that you were satisfied with them and to put them in office, you not only said that in our presence as witnesses, but before God. His all-seeing eye beheld and is beholding all that transpires. In the presence of God you said that. In saying that you want them to serve you as deacons, you have thereby obligated yourselves that you will make them able to do what you have put them in office to do, and if you don't do it, these brethren are not responsible for that, except they should become negligent of what their duty is in insisting on you doing what you obligated yourselves to do. They have a right-not only a right, but it is a solemn obligation resting upon them-they are put under an obligation from which there is no discharge until the final wind-up with them-to insist on you doing your duty. God has never required at their hands to discharge the duties that rest upon you. Now notice at the very beginning of the examination of these brethren, the very first requirement that God's Book put down for their work was for the ministration of help to widows. That is the first thing that gave rise to it, to distribute the means that were contributed for that purpose, not that they were to go down in their pockets and administer those things to the widows, or that they were to furnish the things to those widows, but they were to distribute the funds that the church supplied. Now if you do not supply them with funds, you tie their hands and don't let them do the things you said you wanted them to do. Now, if you want them to do what you said you want them to do, there is but one way under heaven for them to do it, and that is for you to furnish the things to do that with. You have solemnly obligated yourselves that you will stay behind them and work with them, and that you will enable them and put them in a position that they may do the things that you set them apart to do. If you don't do it, you are the one that falls down on the obligation; and if you don't furnish them with the means for them to discharge that obligation, don't you go to complaining or rinding fault with them, don't you go to saying hard things about your deacons, or that they are no good, when you are the ones that are no good. Amos I too rough on you? That is God's truth. Now if we are not guilty it won't hurt us. If we are guilty, the Lord knows we ought to quit it. It makes me think of one time when a fellow told me he was going to leave his church and join the Old Baptists. He said, "Every time I go to my church, all I hear is money, money, money, and I am tired of it. When I go to the Old Baptist Church, I don't hear that. For that reason I am going to leave my church and join the Old Baptist Church." I said, "Is that the only reason you are going to join the Old Baptists?" "Yes," he said, "that's the only reason." I said, "For God's sake don't do it. We have enough stingy ones already." Another fellow told me once that he had belonged to the Old Baptist Church twenty years and in all that twenty years it had cost him only twenty-five cents. Do you know what I said? I said, "May God Almighty have mercy on your stingy old soul." Now, the primary work of the deacon pertains to the financial affairs of the church. Suppose, before your next meeting time, suppose during this coming week, the deacons learn of some poor widow or of some orphan children in the community, that some of them are sick, and they need some medicine and need a physician, and they need him right now, and they have nothing in their hands to supply the wants with. Are they going to have to wait until the next conference and report it? The poor widow may be dead by that time. Are you going to do what you said you would when you set them apart? Are you going to have funds in their hands to administer to such cases at the time it is needed? Are you going to do it? That is what you promise when you do this. What about it? If you don't use the deacons you have; if you don't use the five that you now have, let me ask you kindly -and I want it to go down in your heart, not to wound your feelings-if you don't use the five you now have, for God's sake don't call on me to help ordain any more. The financial affairs should be handled by your deacons. That is what the Book teaches. They are to serve tables-not just one table-but tables, in the plural. Whatever table pertains to the finances of the church, these deacons are to serve in that capacity. You have testified that they are in possession of wisdom, and if they have not the wisdom to administer the funds that you solemnly obligate yourselves to supply them with, then you put them in a place that you said by putting them there that they are capacitated to fill; and now when you don't supply the funds, you say you don't think they have the capacity to fill it. You have crossed yourselves. Are you going to do that? There is more of a charge to be delivered to the church than to the deacons. They cannot do anything unless you supply them. It is an obligation now that rests upon you to see that they are able to discharge the duties of the office where you put them. All of the finances of the church ought to be handled by the deacons and attended to through them. Even what you do for your pastor should be done through your deacons. How many of you know what was done for me when I was pastor here? I am not complaining. Do you know what was done for me? Do you know whether my gasoline bill was paid or not? Do you really know? If there is one that knows, raise your hand. You don't know, do you? I am not complaining. You did well by me. You did much better than I feel to deserve. I loved you then and do yet; but what you do for your pastor should be handled through the deacons. I am going to give you an illustration. Suppose a few members of the church donate to your pastor, assist him on his way, help him. There is more resting upon the pastor than simply coming to the church and preaching for you once or twice a month. That is a small part of the job. We have but few men who really do the full work of a pastor. Suppose just a few help him along, contribute to him, and there are some who do not. I will tell you what human nature is now, if you don't know, and I know by several years' experience. He will think, or feel, that "this brother and that brother appreciate my service, for they help me along." He will get to thinking that the brother who helps him appreciates his service. He will say to himself, "I appreciate that, and I love those brethren." What's the matter? Why, that is just human nature. It is just bred in the bones. It is right there to stay. Instead of looking upon that church as a body and feeling that the whole church appreciates his service, they appreciate his efforts. But if the work is done through the deacons, he will feel that "I know the church appreciates my service and labors, because they contribute to me as a whole; so I love that church;" otherwise, I love these brethren. Instead of causing that brother to think more of the church as a body, it will cause him to think more of some individuals. In order that there be a full co-operation from the membership it is necessary that the whole church think of the pastor, and the preacher be thinking of them as a body, and not as individuals. So it should be handled through your deacons. At my home church the deacons have charge of the finances, and we keep some funds, not a great big amount, but we keep something in their hands. Every meeting, in conference, one of those deacons who keeps the record makes a report to the church how much has been paid in and paid out. He has a record of how much is paid in and how much is paid out and the balance on hand in the treasury. If a visiting preacher comes along, the deacons have the money to help him along. If you are not willing to risk the deacons, you have no business to put them in the office. We have electric lights in our church house, and it is necessary to pay the light bill. Sometimes it is necessary to have a little work done around there, and the deacons have the money.. We made an agreement in our church, an obligation between ourselves, that, in addition to this regular fund in the hands of the deacons, for the regular routine matters, we have an agreement that we would set aside a special fund, lay by for some unexpected thing that might come up. Brother Claggett is the one appointed to take charge of that special fund, not to go in the regular expense of the church. We expect to help our association next year out of this fund. He reports the balance on hand at each meeting. The funds for the regular routine expense is also in the hands of the deacons. I think we are going along on the right line and that we are following the Scripture, "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." That does not mean to put it in something for your own use, but for matters that need to be attended to in the service and in the house of God. If we will do that, whenever some necessary expense should be attended to they have the money. They don't have to wait until the church meets in conference. It might be all over with by the time the church meets again. I want to charge you brethren to administer those funds, and ask God to give you wisdom that it may be done right and proper and in the right way and to the right person. In addition to that, I want to charge you that it is an obligation resting upon you as an officer in the church of God to look after, see after, to encourage, any poor little trembling child who is discouraged, and feels to be alone in the world, who may feel he is of no use anywhere, no benefit anywhere, and that he had as well stay at home. Encourage them to come to the house of the Lord. Let them know there is something here for them. Let them know that the church loves them. We are prone to get down in the valley, in doubts and fears, and feel that we are not worth anything, and that nobody cares for us, and feel' like giving up. I have been there myself, and I know what it means. Go to see them and encourage them to come out. Let them know that the church thinks of them and that there is something here for them, that they cannot get anywhere else; and if there is something in the way, hindering them, help to remove it. Maybe it is necessary to go and inform some of the other brethren and get some of them to help you remove whatever difficulty there is in the way. It is your duty to keep in touch with the membership of the church, and to know something of the attitude and feeling of the membership of the church, and thus to labor with your pastor, and help him along in the service; and when you meet together you can say that everything is all right, and that is encouraging to him, and will be encouraging to the church and good for all parties concerned. Brethren, I could talk to you for an hour longer about these things, the solemn obligation that is resting upon you, but I must quit. May God bless you, give you grace, courage and fortitude to discharge the duties of your office well, for in that you purchase to yourselves a good degree. Study God's Book that you may know its teachings, that you may be able to meet the arguments of the world against the principles that you stand upon. May the Lord bless you, is my prayer for you.

Question on Divorce

---January 15, 1942

Dear Brother Cayce: Where a wife departs from her husband and sues for a divorce, would the church of her membership (both being members) be taking right steps to prefer charges against the sister -or a brother of the same character? Please answer through The Primitive Baptist for my information and for the good of any who might be interested. I am, I hope, your brother in Christ. J. E. Chastain. R. 3, Edmond, Okla.

OUR REMARKS

It has always, so far as our knowledge extends, been against the rules of the Primitive Baptist Church for one member to go to law against another member for any cause without the consent of the church. Under this rule, if a person forsakes the companion and sues for divorce, the church should prefer a charge against that person for going to law against the other member. The church would do this, if they observe that rule. If both parties are members of the church, and they are willing to fellowship each other as members of the church, and as Christians, although they cannot live together in peace as husband and wife, there is nothing for the church to prefer a charge against them for, so long as they continue to live single, or without another companion, and do not bring suit at law against the other. They may live alone, and fellowship each other, and still retain membership in the church. Someone might say, or think, the church would have a right to prefer a charge against them for not living together. That would not do, for the simple reason that people may have Christian love and fellowship for each other, and yet not be suitable to each other as companions, or as husband and wife. Do you not know some whom you love and esteem as Christians and as members of the church, and yet it would be horrible for you to think you had to live with them as husband and wife? C. H. C.

Messenger of Zion Bought

---February 5, 1942

It may come as a surprise to some of the Messenger of Zion subscribers, but we have bought the subscription list of that paper from Elder Ariel West, and consolidated that paper with The Primitive Baptist. The consolidation takes effect with this issue of The Primitive Baptist, and those who have been receiving the Messenger of Zion will receive The Primitive Baptist instead. Elder West will be assistant editor of The Primitive Baptist. He will be associated with us, and will make his home in Thornton. The Messenger was published only once a month, so that those of you who were taking that paper and were not taking The Primitive Baptist have been getting only one paper a month; but as this paper is published twice a month, you will now get two papers each month. Please note that this paper is dated the first and third Thursday of each month, and not the first and fifteenth days of the month. By this you may know about what time to look for your paper. Those of you who were taking both papers will get full credit on our books for the time you had paid to on either or both papers. A letter sent to the Messenger of Zion subscribers will explain this more fully. No subscriber will lose anything by this combining of the two papers. We humbly trust that this move will prove to be for the good of the cause of the Master, which we profess to love. And we trust that all those who were subscribers for the Messenger, and who worked for the extending of the circulation of that paper, will now do your very best to help in extending the circulation of The Primitive Baptist. We are aware of the fact that some of you brethren have worked faithfully for both papers, and we appreciate what you have done. We are sure that in this we also voice the sentiment of Elder West. But if we all work together now for one end and toward one purpose, perhaps we can accomplish more. May we rely on you to do your best? We believe in you, and have confidence in you, and fully believe that you will not disappoint us, or Elder West, either. Both Elder West and the writer will be disappointed if we do not have your full co-operation now in our earnest effort to labor for what we both feel is for the good of the cause of our Lord. As stated above, Elder West is moving to Thornton, and will be associated with us as assistant editor, and will have an interest in the paper. We humbly pray that the move we are making in this matter will prove to be for the good of our beloved Zion. We have been with Elder West quite a lot during the past year or so, and we have freely exchanged views with each other as to what we understand to be the teachings of the Bible in both doctrine and practice, and as touching the order of God's house. If there is a matter upon which we do not agree, or which we do not see and understand alike, we do not recall it. This being a fact, all our readers may be assured of the fact that the policy of The Primitive Baptist will not be changed, but that the paper will still be published along the same lines that it has been for the past fifty-six years, even from the first issue on January 1, 1886, by our sainted father. The writer will still have editorial management and control of the paper, but will have the assistance of Elder West. And we are trusting that this assistance will be of help to your editor, who is now growing old and needs more rest than he once did. Besides this, Elder West being now associated with us as assistant editor, he will get some experience, in addition to what he has obtained since he began editing and publishing the Messenger, which may be of help to him in carrying on the editorial work of The Primitive Baptist, when we can no longer do the work-if that work should fall upon him. Many and various things were thought over and considered, and we tried to pray over the matter, before we took the step we have here announced. May we have an interest in your prayers? And may we have your help in every way that you can help? We would be glad to hear from each one of you, especially those who were subscribers for the Messenger; and may heaven's rich blessings rest upon each one, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Corresponding Editors

---February 5, 1942

In taking over the subscription list of the Messenger of Zion we do not take over the editorial staff. There would be several reasons for not doing so, of course. It might not suit them for us to do so. They might not desire to be on the editorial staff of The Primitive Baptist. And as Elder West is to be associated with us as assistant editor, it may not suit those who have been on our editorial staff to continue under the new set-up. We have not been in a position to consult with them in regard to the change we have made in taking over the Messenger. After trying to carefully and prayerfully consider the matter we have decided, just as we are ready to go to press with this paper, that the best course to pursue right now is to remove all corresponding editors and start all over again with a clean slate in the new set-up-start "from scratch." We humbly trust that not one of those who have been associated with us as a corresponding editor will feel that we have not treated them with due respect in taking this step, for we are not meaning the least disrespect toward a single one of them. Our association with them has been pleasant and delightful on our part. We trust that they will continue to write for the paper, and we hope they will also take an interest in working to extend the circulation. Some have written very little, and some have done very little in the way of sending subscriptions to us. Others have written for the paper, and some have done good work in sending subscriptions. We appreciate what each one has done, and pray God's richest blessings to rest upon each one and upon the labors of each one. We trust we may meet each one again some day. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you; and please pray the Lord to direct us aright, and to give us grace and strength to walk therein. C. H. C.

Receiving the Word

---February 5, 1942

A brother has written us and requested that we write on receiving the Word. He says a preacher told him that receiving the Word was a condition on the one receiving it. We are sure that preacher has sometimes received word of something, or concerning something, which he did not want to receive. Why did he not refuse to receive it, and not do so, according to his free-will doctrine? A man receiving the word of a thing is absolutely passive in receiving the word, or news, of the thing. If one is passive in receiving a thing, then it ceases to be a condition on the part of the one receiving it. Performing a condition, or complying with a condition, requires activity on the part of the one performing or complying with the condition. If the preacher knows anything about grammar, as he claimed to know, he knows this is a fact; and if he is an honest man, he will admit it. How can the unregenerate sinner receive the word, or receive the gospel, since Paul has said {(I Corinthians 2:14)} "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned?" How can he receive them, since he cannot know them? If this is a condition which he must perform in order to receive eternal life, and he cannot perform the condition, how could he ever receive eternal life? This would forever close heaven's doors to the last one of all the race of Adam-unless they do that which they cannot do; or unless they perform that which they cannot perform. Poor preacher! He is trying to get people to do what God's Book says they cannot do, thinking they will get to heaven by doing that which inspiration says they cannot do! Poor preacher! He sure has a hard job on hand-trying to get people to do the impossible thing. C. H. C.

John 11:48

---February 5, 1942

We have been requested to give our views on (John 11:48), which reads: "If we let Him thus alone, all men will believe on Him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation." This is recorded just following the account given of the raising of Lazarus from the tomb, and how that many believed on Him. The chief priests and the Pharisees desired to put Him to death, because they hated Him-not because He had done them any injury or harm. In verse 47 they said, "He doeth many miracles." The miracles which He performed proved that He was divine and from heaven. The more people who believed on Him, the more they were angered, and the more they desired to put Him to death. But though they did finally crucify Him, yet they did not put an end to His people believing on Him. Those wicked people were fearful that He would become a king over national Israel, and that they would lose their job. They did not know that His kingdom was not, and is not, of this world. It is a spiritual kingdom, and is not a natural kingdom. C. H. C.

Luke 2:52

---February 5, 1942

We have been requested to write some on this text, and the question was asked, "Just why the expression, 'In favor with God?'" The verse reads: "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." Remember that Jesus was verily man, as well as God. He was both man and God. As man He increased in wisdom; as God, He never learned anything. As man, He grew in stature, as other people do who are born into this world. Being both God and man, as man He grew in favor with God-God's blessings were showered upon Him, and it was manifested, from time to time, that He had the favor of His Father. This was shown by Him being enabled to, and blessed to, perform the miracles which He performed. More and more the love of the Father was manifested as resting upon Him; and more and more people were brought to love and adore Him and to follow Him. C. H. C.

Unconditional Election

---February 19, 1942

A brother has written us that he has always believed that one of the fundamental principles upon which Primitive Baptists base their faith is God's unconditional election. He says there are some who believe and are beginning to preach that it was God's foreknowledge of the faithfulness and good works He foresaw in the elect, rather than in the non-elect, induced Him to make the choice. He says they use ((Pet 1:2) (I Peter 1:2) and (John 6:29) as proof texts. He asks, "Can these Scriptures or any others be so construed?" We do not know who it is in our ranks that believe such as this. It is Fullerism, pure and simple. It is the doctrine preached and advocated by the rank and file of the Missionary so-called Baptists. It is not the doctrine of the Primitive Baptists, and never has been. That doctrine denies every principle of grace in salvation, and makes the salvation of the sinner depend upon righteous works done by him. Let us look at ((Pet 1:2) (I Peter 1:2) "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied." The elect means the body of persons chosen of God for salvation. They were chosen according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, and this was through the sanctifying work of the Spirit, and was unto the obedience and the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. It was that they might be made partakers of the benefits of the obedience and blood of Jesus. They are made partakers of the benefits of the obedience and blood of Jesus because the Father made choice of them to that end. If the Father made choice of them, elected them, because of a foreseen good thing they would do, then they are not made the beneficiaries of the obedience and blood of Jesus because God made choice of them to that end, but because of the good thing God saw that they would do. The other text referred to {(John 6:29)} reads, "Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." Suppose it be true that one does the work of God in believing on the Son of God, does that prove that one is embraced among the elect of God because God knew he would believe? If one is embraced among the elect because God foreknew that he would believe, and the elect are all saved, and none are saved, but the elect, then they are not saved because God elected them to salvation, or because God chose them to salvation; but they are saved because they do what God foresaw they would do. This not only makes their election to be based on their doing, but it makes the whole of their salvation to be based on what they do. Hence, it destroys the very idea of grace in their salvation; it is a flagrant denial of the doctrine of salvation by grace. But the Saviour meant to teach no such idea in (John 6:29). Let us look at (Ephesians 1:18-20) in connection with the text above: "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to usward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him on His right hand in heavenly places." Paul here having told the truth about the matter, it follows that it is by the working of the same mighty and divine power in the heart of the sinner which was wrought in the body of the Christ when He was raised from the dead that one believes in Him. This being true, is just as the Saviour taught in the above reference, that it is by the working of the divine power of God in the heart that a poor sinner believes in Him. This all being true, it is preposterous to say that the sinner was elected because God foresaw that he would believe. It is the height of folly to say that the sinner was elected to salvation because God foresaw he would do anything-believe, or do anything else. The truth of the matter is that God made choice of the sinner, and then, in time, according to, and in harmony with, and because of, that election He works in the heart of that chosen sinner and causes him to believe in Jesus, from an experimental knowledge of Him, as his Saviour. Thus the salvation of the sinner is all of grace; his election (being embraced in the number of the elect) is of grace; it was of grace that God made choice of him; it was a matter of grace that God predestinated that same sinner to be conformed to the image of Jesus; it is grace that this same sinner is regenerated, born of God, born from above; it is a matter of grace that this same sinner is preserved in Jesus Christ, kept by the power of God unto eternal glory; it is a matter of grace that Jesus shed His precious blood for him, and thereby redeemed him all the way to God; it is a matter of grace that when the body of this unregenerated sinner dies a natural or physical death, his soul or spirit will go to God who gave it, and will be permitted to rest in the presence of the Lord until Jesus comes back to this earth again to raise the sleeping bodies of His saints; it is a matter of grace that the body of this saved sinner will be raised from the dead and made spiritual and fashioned like the body of his blessed Redeemer; it is a matter of grace that then all the redeemed family will be taken into the presence of the Lord, and will be glorified, and by grace permitted to eternally live with Him in unsullied bliss and eternal glory. It is "grace for grace" -" grace upon grace." This is all of grace -not a mixture of grace and works. We might go on and on showing that the Lord did not choose sinners to eternal salvation because of what was foreseen as good in them. God looked down one time upon the children of men, and none of them did good when He looked that time. Did He take another look? If so, where is it so recorded? Where did you get your information? If you have such information, you must be "wise above what is written." We say this in kindness, but it is true. If one (among us is advocating such a doctrine, we would kindly admonish such a one to quit it at once; and we will say, also kindly, that if you refuse to do so, the church should admonish you as many as two times, and if you do not then quit it at once they would be obeying the divine injunction to withdraw fellowship from you. May the Lord add His blessing. C. H. C.

Ishmaelites

---March 5, 1942

In the so-called Apostolic Times, published in Nashville, Tenn., by one self-opinionated James A. Allen, who is a typical Campbellite preacher, the gentleman takes it upon himself to copy a few extracts from an experience written by one of the Lord's humble followers and published in our columns some time since and to comment on the same. Such effusions as the writer put out, we consider to be unworthy of notice, and we would not notice the same were it not a fact that we have been requested to do so. Such blatant mockery and evident stooping beneath the dignity of one professing to be a Christian, much less one professing to be a minister of the gospel, is not worthy the notice of people professing to be respectable, to say nothing of the dignity of Christianity. Who would expect a "water-soaked" Campbellite preacher to know anything about an experience of grace, or to have any experimental knowledge of the Lord's dealings? Who would, or could, expect anything else than that an Ishmaelite would mock? The Campbellite church was born out of wedlock. Alexander Campbell is their ecclesiastical daddy, for he is the founder of the sect. He carried with him on a trip abroad a letter of introduction written by Henry Clay, in which Mr. Clay said: "Dr. Campbell is among the most eminent citizens of the United States, distinguished for his great learning and ability, for his successful devotion to the education of youth, for his piety and as the head and founder of one of the most important and respectable religious communities in the United States." -Memoires of Alexander Campbell, by Robert Richardson, Vol. 2, page 548. Alexander Campbell acknowledged the statement to be true, that he was the head and founder of this sect, by taking this letter with him on his journey. Campbell acknowledged, and plainly stated, that his movement was a project. He said: "None of us who got up or sustained that project was then aware of what havoc that said principle, if faithfully applied, would have made of our views and practices on various favorite points." - Preface to Christian System, by Campbell, Jan. 2, 1835. Not only did Campbell admit in this that his movement was a project, but it is an admission that he had changed in his views on various points. He and several others formed themselves into a so-called church at Brush Run, Washington County, Pa., on May 4, 1811. On June 12, 1812, Alexander Campbell and several other members of his congregation were baptized by Elder Matthias Luce, a Baptist minister. In 1813 he and his church united with the Redstone Baptist Association, upon a written statement of their principles-a "confession of faith." Opposition arose in the Redstone Association to the new ideas and doctrines which he began to preach among them, so he left that association and united with the Washington Association in the Western Reserve of Ohio in 1823. In 1827 the Baptist Churches withdrew fellowship from him and his followers. In an article furnished by Mr. Campbell for the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, after telling of the Baptists withdrawing fellowship from them, he says: "Thus by constraint, not of choice, they were obliged to form societies out of those communities that split upon the ground of adherence to the apostles' doctrine." Thus, we see clearly and plainly the origin of the Campbellites. They are no more the church of Christ than the Catholics are. The Catholics are several centuries older than the Campbellites. The Campbellite so-called church is a sect born after the flesh, just as Ishmael was born after the flesh. Ishmael was a mocker, and was born out of wedlock, being a son of Hagar. Sarah got uneasy about the promise of God being fulfilled, and gave Hagar, her handmaid, to Abraham. The result of this coming together of Abraham and Hagar was the birth of Ishmael, a mocker. The Campbellite church is far too young for Christ to be the husband. As He is not the husband, she is a woman without a husband, and the desolate hath many more children than the married wife. The man who makes sport of an experimental knowledge of the Lord only manifests the fact that he does not have such experimental knowledge and that he knows nothing about it. We pity him in his lost state- lost to a true knowledge of God; and we pity him in his dark ignorance of the truth and the true teachings of God's Book. C. H. C.

What School?

---March 5, 1942

We often hear the question asked, "What school are you attending?" Upon the answer we can formulate an idea as to what that special individual is interested in. For, usually, one studies or devotes more time to those things he is especially interested in. This is true in natural things. How about spiritual things? A few months ago, Elder Clevenger wrote a series of articles on "The Lord is my Shepherd." The articles were published in The Primitive Baptist. How comforting! How beautiful! A few times in life I have felt that the Lord was my Shepherd. I feasted upon those articles. Where did Elder Clevenger get such beautiful thoughts? What school did he attend? Have I gone to the same school? Can we sing the same Alma Mater? In looking through some old copies of Zion's Advocate, I came across an article written by Elder J. R. Daily, in 1898. The article is "The Lord is my Shepherd." Did Elder Clevenger and Elder Daily attend the same school? Have you and I attended the same school? Elder Daily's article will be in the March issue of For The Poor. If you are not a subscriber to For The Poor, subscribe now and compare these articles and see if you have attended the same school? Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

May Be Too Late

---March 19, 1942

We expect, if not providentially prevented, to get the next issue of The Primitive Baptist printed a week ahead of time. The next issue will be dated April 2. The regular time for printing it would be Monday, March 30, and the regular time for putting it in the post office would be Wednesday, April 1. But in order to get that issue of the paper off the press to make way for other work we need to do on the press, we expect to print that issue of the paper on Monday, March 23, but it will not be mailed out until the regular time, April 1. As we expect to print the paper a week ahead of time, it will be necessary for any notice needing to appear in that issue to be sent to us at least a week earlier than would otherwise be necessary. If you have any appointments or other notices you want in that issue of the paper, remember that you must hurry them to us in order to get them in that paper. Please bear in mind the following facts, always, not only in this case, but always: On account of the Federal labor law, we work our employes only five days a week. We do not work them on Saturdays. Hence, when a paper is due to come out on the following Thursday, the last type set for that paper is on the Friday before, and the type is made up and made ready to put on the press Monday morning, and the press runs on Monday. Hence, in order to get a notice in the paper it is necessary for it to get to us on Thursday, just one week before the date of the paper. Sometimes we do delay the running of the press on Monday morning in order to get something of importance in that issue, but that entails extra expense, and we are having to eliminate that expense. So, remember that anything reaching us later than Friday before the day of going to press will not get in that issue-it will be too late. In this case-the next issue-matters reaching us later than March 20 will be too late for next issue-April 2. C. H. C.

Church News

---March 19, 1942

By request of the brethren involved in a disturbance in Antioch Church, Birmingham, Ala., and the other churches in the Wetumpka Association, a meeting was held at New Harmony Church, Lomax, Ala., for the purpose of investigating and adjusting the trouble between them. Elders J. A. Monsees, Atlanta, Ga.; J. R. Wilson, Martinsville, Va.; J. W. Hardwick, Booneville, Miss.; W. A. Shutt, Nashville, Tenn.; S. W. Etheredge, Ozark, Ala.; B. F. House, Phenix City, Ala., and the writer were requested to serve as a committee to hear the evidence and to make recommendations to them whereby they might come together in peace. The committee heard all the evidence, the meeting continuing through Friday, January 23, to Monday, January 26. On Monday the recommendations were read twice in the open meeting and unanimously approved by all present. On the third Sunday in February, in accordance with the recommendations, all who were members of Antioch Church when the trouble started met together at the place where they have always held their meetings, and unanimously adopted the recommendations, thereby all confessing and forgiving all wrongs, and came together in a meeting of joy. We are glad the trouble is adjusted, and trust they will journey together in peace in that section. According to the recommendations there will be but one Wetumpka Association held this year, which will be at the Coosa River Church at the regular time, as was agreed in 1940 before the trouble came up. This will be the one hundredth session of the association. At the meeting at Antioch, just mentioned, a brother was restored who had been out of the church for some few years. May the Lord be praised for His mercy, and may He bless these good people. C. H. C.

Eternal Punishment

May 7, 1942

On January 26 to 28 inclusive a meeting was held at New Harmony Church, Lomax, Ala., to investigate and adjust differences which had caused trouble in the Wetumpka Association. Elders J. A. Monsees, J. R. Wilson, J. W. Hardwick, W. A. Shutt, S. W. Ether-edge, B. F. House and C. H. Cayce composed the committee of investigation. The recommendations of the committee were unanimously approved in the meeting, and the adoption of the same by the churches resulted in a burial of the trouble and all coming together and peace being restored. They are all again united in peace and fellowship. An account of this was given by us in our issue of March 19. On a point of doctrine the following was in the recommendations of the committee, and we believe the same should have careful reading and study by our readers. Hence we reproduce the same for the benefit of the readers. C. H. C.

ON A POINT OF DOCTRINE

Now, as to the doctrine, permit us to say that the doctrine that there is no such thing as eternal torment, or eternal punishment, for the wicked after this life is not Primitive Baptist doctrine, and never has been. If that doctrine is true, then the Primitive Baptists, as a body, have always been wrong; and if they have always been wrong, then the Primitive Baptist Church is not the church of Christ, and never has been. There are some passages of Scripture which have always been relied on by Primitive Baptists to prove the doctrine that there is an eternal punishment for the wicked beyond this life. If those Scriptures do not prove what they, as a body, have always said they do, then the Primitive Baptists have been wrong all the while; and if this be true, then again they are not the church of Christ. But they have not been wrong all along the line, and the Primitive Baptist Church is the church of Christ. To prove the doctrine that there is an eternal punishment they have always relied upon such passages as ((5) (Acts 24:15); (17:31); (John 5:28-29); (Matthew 25:31-46); (Revelation 20:12-15); and (Revelation 20:10), besides other Scriptures along the same line. Remember that there cannot possibly be any such thing as torment, punishment, or suffering without conscious existence. Remember, too, that there is such a thing as always dying; that is, never ceasing to die. The very primary meaning of the penalty of the law God gave to Adam had that very idea in it. Our translation says, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." The literal meaning of that expression in the original is that "dying thou shalt die." That is, always dying, or never ceasing to die. That very penalty can mean nothing short of eternal or endless suffering of death. The Scripture recorded in (Matthew 25:31-40) most clearly and positively teaches this doctrine. In that place the blessed Master uses the sheep and the goats as representing the two classes. One class He calls His sheep. Did the Saviour know what to use to show His teaching? Would He use the sheep and goats to represent two classes if sheep and goats are all one class, the only difference being that one class was His disobedient children and the other class being His obedient children? If they were all children of God, and this was the only difference, then He did not lay down His life for His disobedient children, for He said, "I lay down my life for the sheep," and "The good Shepherd giveth His life for the sheep." To say that the goats were His people in disobedience is to deny that He laid down His life for them. If He did not lay down His life for them, then there is no salvation for them. This would involve the idea of final apostasy. If the sheep and the goats are the same people, only one being obedient and the other disobedient, why did the Saviour use two different words-one word, the goats, and the other word, the sheep? These two words which the Saviour used are entirely different words and are in no way related. Would the Saviour use two words, which are in no way related to each other, if they were all His children? If the Saviour made no mistake in using two words which are in no way related, then does it not follow as an inevitable conclusion that the goats and the sheep are in no way related in a spiritual point of view? It is bound to be Scripturally and inevitably true that the goats and the sheep are two different classes. This is also true from a true scientific standpoint. Things of the same species can be crossed; but there are impassable gulfs between species, so that it is impossible to cross different species. Different species may have some things in common, but they will not cross. Goats and sheep will not cross, for the simple reason that they are different species in the lower animal kingdom. The Saviour said, in verse 41, that He would say to those on the left hand, the goats, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." Everlasting is translated from the same word which is used throughout the New Testament in describing the life of the righteous as being an endless, or eternal, life. The same thing is true in verse 46. The same word translated everlasting is the word translated eternal. If one is endless, so is the other endless. There cannot possibly be anything else true in the matter. The Primitive Baptists have been right in this all along the line, and it is the true church of Christ. Whatever may have been your understanding, or misunderstanding, of each other during and in the confusion which has been among you, we humbly beg you to accept these truths, and let this be the end of the matter. It is no comfort to us that the Scriptures teach, or to believe, that there is such a thing as eternal punishment beyond this life; but it is a great comfort and consolation to us to believe that Jesus has saved us, and will save us, from that eternal punishment.

For Our Boys

May 7, 1942

We are sure that many of our boys are in the service of our country who would be glad to get The Primitive Baptist. It is being sent to a few. Many county newspapers are being sent free to the boys in the army from the communities where those papers are published. In that way the boys get news from their home communities. We are sure there are not a few who are in the service who would be glad to get news from their brethren and sisters in the Lord. We appreciate those boys who are in the service. We appreciate the great sacrifices we know they have to make. We are sure they need the comfort and consolation and encouragement they may be able to get. As our heart goes out to them, we desire to be all the help to them that we can. To this end we ask our readers to send us the name and address of any of the boys who are dear to you, and that you think would appreciate reading this paper, and we will gladly put their names on our list and send The Primitive Baptist to them for the duration of the war, or as long as we can do so. This is a free service we desire to render for those boys. If your boy is in the service, and if he would appreciate reading this paper, send us his name and address, and we will be glad to send the paper to him. May God bless and keep those dear boys, and comfort the hearts of the dear fathers and mothers, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Romans 8:8-10

A brother has asked us to write our views on (Romans 8:8-10) and (Matthew 9:17). We wrote an article on (Matthew 9:17), which was published in our issue of September 19, 1935, and may be found on page 131 of Volume 6 of our Editorial Writings. An article on the same subject, but in connection with ((21) (Mark 2:21), may be found on page 181 of Volume 1, and was in The Primitive Baptist of May 14, 1907. It is not necessary to take space to write on this again. You can get what we had to say on that subject from either of these books, especially Volume 6. We will try to write a little on the text in Romans, which reads as follows: So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His. And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness. To be in the flesh, in the sense of this text, is to be in an unregenerate state. One who has not been born from above is in the flesh, in the sense of this text. If one has been born from above, that one has the Spirit of God dwelling in him, and he is then not in the flesh. That is, one who has the Spirit of God dwelling in him is not in the flesh. When the Spirit of God takes up His abode in the heart of a poor sinner, then that person is no longer in the flesh, but in the Spirit. "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." - (I John 5:12). That one who has been born again, born from above, who has the Spirit of God dwelling in him, can please God-can do something other folks cannot do. They have been capacitated to render acceptable service to God. They have been brought into the spiritual realm and are thereby capacitated to do spiritual works. Spiritual works are such things that the Lord has commanded to be done in the spiritual realm, and it is pleasing to the Lord for them to do the things which He has commanded. Without the Spirit of God it is impossible for one to please God, for "they that are in the flesh cannot please God." If those who are in the flesh cannot please God, then what can they do in order to be born again, or in order to become children of God? Who can tell us about what time one can do that which he cannot do? If one cannot do a certain thing, is it not impossible for him to do that thing? When will, or when can, one do that which is impossible for him to do? If the unregenerate sinner, one who has not the Spirit, must do something pleasing to God in order that he be born again, or in order that he enter heaven, is it not a fact that heaven's door would be forever closed against the whole race of Adam? Does it not look like it is a hard doctrine to teach that one must do that which he cannot do in order to become a child of God? What could possibly be a harder doctrine than that? Are you not glad this is not the doctrine of the Bible? "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." In this statement the apostle affirms the negative side of the question. "He is none of His" simply means that he is not one of His. He has not been brought into divine relationship with Him; he has not been born into the heavenly family. The other side of the question, the affirmative side of the question, would necessarily be, "If any man have the Spirit of Christ, he is one of His." He has been brought into divine relationship with Him; he has been born from above; he has been born into the spiritual realm; he has been born of God; he has been raised up out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ Jesus. He has been capacitated to do that which he could not do before; he has been capacitated to do that which is pleasing to God; he can now please God, by doing the things which God has commanded to be done in the spiritual realm. He now has the Spirit of Christ dwelling in him. "And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin." If means "in case that; granting, allowing, or supposing that; -introducing a condition or supposition." -Webster. Hence, "in case that Christ be in you, the body is dead." Then, in case Christ is not in you, what then? If the apostle meant that "if Christ be in you, the body is dead in sin," then the body is not dead in sin if Christ is not in you. To be dead because of sin and to be dead in sin are two different things entirely. To be dead in sin is one thing, and to be dead because of sin is another thing. Jesus was once dead because of sin, but He was never dead in sin. He died for our sins-He died because of our sins, and to make satisfaction for our sins; but He never did die in sins-He was never dead in sins. Neither does the apostle teach any such thing as that the body is dead to sin. There are two things the apostle brings to attention here-one of those things concerns the body and the other concerns the spirit. If he means to teach that the body is dead to sin- apart from the spirit-then the spirit is not dead to sin. There is one thing brought out concerning the body and another thing concerning the spirit. What are they? The true literal meaning of the apostle's teaching in this text is that "If Christ be in you, though the body dies on account of sin, yet the spirit lives on account of righteousness." This text is an everlasting death knell to the soul sleeping doctrine. But the apostle does tell us, in (Romans 6:11) "Likewise reckon ye yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." That one who has the Spirit of Christ dwelling in him, that one who has been brought into divine relationship with God, has been killed to the love of sin, and is, therefore, dead to sin. Yet, although he is dead to sin, the body is still mortal and corrupt and subject to physical death, and will die that physical death, and will return to dust from whence it came. Although the mortal body, the physical body, of the child of God does die, and goes to dust, yet the spirit does not die. The body dies on account of sin; but the spirit lives on account of righteousness-righteousness of Christ. The spirit (or soul) goes to God who gave it, and continues to live as a conscious entity in the presence of God and His Christ, where it will remain until Jesus comes back to this earth again to raise these bodies from the grave. He will raise their bodies again, and they will be changed, and made spiritual, and the child of God will then, in soul, body and spirit, be given to dwell with the Lord, and be like Him, and sing perfect praise to Him, in all the ages of a never ending eternity. May this be the happy lot of the reader, is our humble prayer, for Jesus' sake. C. H. C.

All Alike

---May 21, 1942

In our debate with Mr. Srygley in Nashville, Tenn., in 1911 we said that there are two kinds of sinners -saved sinners and unsaved sinners. We believed that then, and we believe that yet. So far as we know, there was no Primitive Baptist who objected to that then. We never heard of one objecting to that then. Unsaved sinners are all sinners alike by nature. Unsaved sinners are unregenerated sinners, and all un-regenerated sinners are unsaved sinners, and they are all alike by nature. "And were by nature children of wrath, even as others." -(Ephesians 2:3). While in an unregenerate state they were just like all others by nature. The nature they possess while in an unregenerate state, and the only nature they possess, is a nature that is poisoned with sin. All men in an unregenerate state have that same nature. They receive that nature by inheritance in the natural birth. They all spring from the same source-from the same parentage. In generation and birth, the thing generated and born receives the same nature and life of the parent. The first parent of the human race transgressed God's law; and when he did that, the nature and life which he had became poisoned and contaminated with sin. All his posterity, springing from him, and being reproduced from him, are born into this world with the same poisoned life and nature which he had. His children are bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh. They are only Adam multiplied. Hence, they all have the same poisoned life and nature which he had. It is, therefore, necessarily true that, so far as nature and life are concerned, they are all alike. There is no difference, so far as nature and life are concerned. It is true that on account of different environments, different training and restraints, they do not all practice sin and wickedness to the same extent. They are not all alike so far as activity is concerned; but they are all alike by nature; they all have the same nature. One crabapple tree may bear more apples than another, but every crabapple tree is of the same nature as all the other crabapple trees. And no crabapple tree bears sweet crabapples. The crabapple tree bears crabapples because it is a crabapple tree. It does not bear crabapples in order to become a crabapple tree. No amount of training or cultivation will change that tree and cause it to bear sweet apples. This is not brought about by training or cultivation. The tree must receive another nature before it can ever bear any other fruit than crabapples. Transplanting the tree in the orchard with sweet apples will not bring about that necessary change. A higher power must act sovereignly upon that tree in giving it another nature; and with the crabapple tree this is done by grafting. The sweet apple bud is grafted into the old stock. Then that tree may bear sweet apples. The sweet apples spring from the sweet apple nature which has been grafted in, or imparted to it. The tree must first be made good in order that it bring forth good fruit. And remember that without this change being wrought all crabapple trees are alike by nature. When the Lord placed Adam in the garden of Eden He gave him a law, which law said, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." -(Genesis 2:16-17). The real literal meaning of the expression, "thou shalt surely die," is "dying thou shalt die," which means always dying. That is "thou shalt be always dying." This was the penalty of the law. As all the race of Adam are simply Adam multiplied, this is the condition of the whole race as they stand related to Adam and under the law. They are all alike in this respect. The only difference is what grace makes. By the mercy and grace of God, and by His own divine power, He takes some out of that deplorable and lost and dying condition, and gives them a higher order of life, brings them into divine relationship with Himself, and prepares them to live eternally with Him in glory. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the comfort of some poor reader, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

From A Soldier Boy

Elder C. H. Cayce:

I guess you will be surprised to hear from such a poor worm of the dust as I feel to be. I have been thinking about writing to you ever since I have been over here, but have just gotten to it. I received your paper one day this week, which was very highly appreciated. I have read nearly all of the paper, and certainly did enjoy it. I was surprised to hear that you and Elder West had gone together in the interest of the cause through one paper. I certainly hope you can be as successful together as you were when separated (separated in publishing two papers, he means. -C. H. C.) Two great men as I feel you both to be should be able to do great things in the interest of one cause, with the help of our Maker. When I left the U. S. I did not think I would be able to get the reading matter from you that I have always enjoyed. Since I have been able to read I have been reading your wonderful paper, and rejoicing in the fact that such a weak person as I could say that he had some of the same thoughts pass through his mind that were revealed through your paper. I do not remember when I first began loving those great principles, but I have loved them ever since I can remember. I have learned to appreciate and respect them more and more as I have grown older. I have not been able to learn half as much about them as I would liked to have done. I hope some day to be where I can get more of the joys out of the good old Book that I love so well today. It seems since I have gotten away off over here that I am alone in the world, with no church of my belief, that I know of, to visit. I certainly would love to hear some of you able ministers back there deliver a sermon again. I wish I was able to put in words my feelings, but I don't suppose it is intended for me to have that ability. I wonder, most of the time, can a person be a child of God without having an experience of grace, or experiences as I have heard told when I was sitting around listening to you older people talk. I have often wished I could have a proof like I have heard told. I know I love the truth in my mind, but whether it is of the Lord or of the teaching I have always received. I hope it is of the Lord. I have tried to believe otherwise, but I just can't see that there is any possible way that it can be any way except "as it is written." Why people get all mixed up on the truth is a mystery. I am writing you this because I have confidence in you. There are things in this letter that I have never mentioned to anyone-not even to my most beloved wife. I don't guess I would have written them to you, but they have been bearing on my mind, and I thought maybe I could relieve it by writing to someone. Please excuse me for taking up so much of your valuable time, but if you can find it in your prayers to pray for me, please do so. And write to rue if you have time. A letter from you would be highly appreciated by this humble body. Your friend in the Lord, I hope, Warren Etheredge. My address is Pvt. Samuel W. Etheredge, Co. B, Armored Force, Schofield Barracks, T. H.

Remarks-

We have written a private letter to this dear boy. He has been taught in the school of grace. We have taken liberty of giving this letter to our readers. We are sure he would enjoy reading a letter from any of you brethren who may feel a desire to write to him. May heaven's richest blessings rest upon the dear boy, and may he be brought safe home to his wife and loved ones, is our humble prayer. And may God grant that his service in defense of our country may not be in vain, and may our religious freedom be continued for him and his children and our grandchildren to enjoy, is our-humble prayer. C. H. C.

Recent Survey

The Religious News Service has recently made a survey of the religious press. They sent questionnaires to editors of religious publications and others connected with the work. The questionnaires were sent to thirty-three representative national church magazines. The survey reveals some interesting matters. Very few are self-sustaining, and many are largely supported by subsidies from churches and others—that is, by donations and help from other sources than the income from subscriptions and advertising. The survey was made by Kennet W. Underwood, Yale Divinity School student. This survey only shows the fact again that very few religious publications are self-supporting. Most all of them must have help from some other source than their subscriptions in order to stay in the field. Church papers have a “hard row” to weed in order to stay in the field. Loking this fact in the face, we feel to thank the Lord, to take courage, and to feel that the Lord has been good to us. The Primitive Baptist is self-sustaining, and the only income is from the subscriptions. We have only two advertisements in our columns that pay—the others are free, to help our brethren or some poor widow, and to aid in the distribution of good religious literature. In 1941 we received only $69.75 for advertising. That amount does not go very far in paying the cost of getting the pajper out. Although the paper is self-sustaining, yet the subscription list is not what it should be. We should have twice as many subscribers on our list as we do have. It is by the very strictest economy and cutting out every expense possible that we make the subscriptions pay the cost of publication, and by the members of our own family working hard, often late at night, in order to save expenses. Our wife works in the office, and makes a “full hand,” whether we are away or at home. Often we both work late at night to keep the work going. But the Lord has been good to us, and we trust we feel thankful to Him and to our loyal subscribers. May the Lord bless each one of our subscribers, and may He help us to publish His truth in our pages, that the same may be of spiritual benefit and help to each one. Will you pray for us, to this end? C. H. C.

We Will Do Thee Good

And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, We are journeying unto the place of which the Lord said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel.--(Num 10:29) (Numbers 10:29). This language was spoken by Moses while the children of Israel were in the wilderness as they were journeying to the land of Canaan, the land which the Lord said He would give to Abraham and his seed after him. “And the Lord appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land.” -(Genesis 12:7). “For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.” -(Genesis 13:15). This land was a goodly land. “And I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.” - (Exodus 3:8,17). The Lord gave this land unto Abraham and to his seed after him for an everlasting possession. The land belonged to the Jews, the Israelites. It was theirs by gift and by birth. But though it was theirs by gift and by birth, it was necessary that they obey the Lord, keep His statutes and His ordinances, in order that they be permitted to enjoy the blessings of the land. They had to do what God said do in order to eat of the milk and the honey. The milk and the honey is the glory of the land. The blessings of the land were in that land, not in another place. In the land were vineyards which they did not plant. The fruits of the vineyards were to be had no other place, only in that land. They had to go over Jordan and enter into that land in order to eat the fruits of the vineyards. The Lord commanded them to cross over Jordan and to take possession of the land which the Lord had given them. So, they had to do what the Lord said do in order to have and to enjoy the blessings and fruits of the land, which were in the land. This land cannot, or could not, represent heaven, for no one enters heaven by doing something. Poor sinners are saved in heaven by what Jesus has done for them; this is all of grace and mercy, and is wholly the work of the Lord; but they entered into the land of Canaan and enjoyed the fruits of the land-not in order to become Israelites, or in order to become children of God, but in order to enjoy the blessings of the land. They were already children of God, as a nation. The Lord had made choice of them, and brought them out of Egypt. He had made choice of them, to put His name among them. Then He gave them the land of Canaan as a delightful place for them to live and serve Him and glorify Him. But they rebelled and served idols, and the chastening rod was laid upon them. Yet they are still His people. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." - ((Sam 15:22) (I Samuel 15:22)) "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good." In order that the little child of God enjoy this good it is necessary to "come with us." True, there are trials and conflicts met with along the way in the service of the Lord, in traveling the way He directs; yet there are sweet and precious promises also met with along the way, and they are not to be enjoyed elsewhere. They are worth more than the whole world combined. "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer afflictions with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward." -Hebrews xi. 24-26. Turn to your Book and read the context. Here is a reward which is worth more than all the treasures of this poor world. Heaven is not a reward, but an inheritance, and is all of grace; but here is a joy and a richness in the service of the Lord. "Come thou with us." We have rich things that the world knows not of. "We will do thee good." You need the company and association and fellowship of the Lord's little children, His humble followers. Come and cast your lot with us, and "we will do thee good." We cannot do thee such good until and unless you come with us. For almost fifty-three years we have been with the Lord's humble poor in His kingdom, the antitype of the land of Canaan, and they have done us good- more good than we are able to tell, or ever will be able to tell. True, there have been trials and conflicts along the way; but, with all that, they have done us so much good that we have no desire to turn away from going with them. "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me." -((Ruth 1:16) (Ruth 1:16-17). If they will bear with us, in our weaknesses and imperfections and shortcomings, we shall stay with them the few remaining days we have allotted to us to remain in this world of troubles and distresses. We have already lived out our allotted "three score years and ten," and one more beside-now living on what is called "borrowed time." Perhaps the "borrowed years" will not be very many, and it will not be many years for them to bear our mistakes and shortcomings. They have done us good all these years. "The Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel." May His richest blessings rest upon the reader, is our humble prayer; and will you pray the Lord to keep us what few days we yet have to stay here? C. H. C.

A Stranger

---June 18, 1942

My Dear Mr. Cayce:

It seems to me I want to talk to someone of your belief, as I do not live close to a Primitive Baptist Church. I have what I think to be one of the strangest cases of anyone on this old earth. First of all I want to tell you I was reared by Primitive Baptist parents, and very well remember seeing both of them baptized. I remember the good old days when we would go to the church once a month and listen to different ones preach, and would look forward to the coming of some visiting preacher that was to be at the old church at a certain time. In my early youth when I would sit and listen to these men preach I decided that the doctrine they preached was the only one that would reach my case. I would read every text they would have and follow their discourse as best I could; and would go and hear other denominations preach, and they would preach so different it would make me think more of the Primitive Baptists. My parents have been gone from this world for a good many years, but they both lived and died as strong in that faith as they could, and would not have anything to do with that which did not sound according to the Bible. I would enjoy hearing them, and the neighbors talk on the Bible. I remember hearing you preach twice in life. I can never forget somethings you said, although that has been more than thirty years ago; they are still very plain to me. I have never heard any other denomination preach that way. I have always found this difference. It is what makes me love the doctrine of salvation by grace. I once lived at a place, and all the preachers heard I was not a member of any church. They began to invite me to come to the church; and as there was a big revival going on, the preacher set Sunday for me to be sure and attend and he would preach a special sermon for me. So I promised I would be there, and as I walked in the church he motioned me to a certain seat which was in plain view of him. His text was (John 3:16). He preached for a good long time. He was a highly educated man, and all the while he was preaching he did not seem to take his eyes off of me. As he was closing he pointed a finger at me and made these remarks: "You know how well you love your children. Well, God loves you seven times better than you love your children; but before He would save your soul, unless you make the step, He will see you die and go to an eternal hell." I became more disgusted with that than with all of his other sermon, and did not go any more. Mr. Cayce, what seems to make my case more strange to me is, as I have said before, I truly love the Old Baptist doctrine. I love them as a people, and truly believe that the doctrine of salvation that they preach is according to the Bible. I have never joined any church, for two reasons-first, I did not believe the other fellow's doctrine, because it did not suit my case; and the reason I cannot join the one I love is due to the fact that I simply am not worthy, and feel like I would be a dishonor instead of an honor; and as I am growing old I am unworthy to have a home anywhere on this old earth. So what will become of a poor sinner like me? The trials grow harder as the years roll on, on account of our world conditions today. I have two boys in military service and don't know that I will ever see them again. I began to take your paper, The Primitive Baptist, last September, and enjoy it very much. I wish I could write and talk of the good things of life as some of the writers do. I feel when I read their letters that they are the children of God, and how I would like to have a hope in this world like them, but I feel there is no hope for me. I hope you will pardon me for taking up your valuable time with this letter. This is just the thoughts of one who is growing old and too unworthy to live with the people I love, and do not see how God would answer the prayers of one so vile as I. If it is not asking too much of you, please remember me while at the throne of prayer, for my sins are like mountains, and am too vile to ask for my own self. Yours truly, L. L. Connor.

Vaiden, Miss.

Remarks.-

Paul claimed that he was less than the least of all saints, and that he was the chief of sinners. If that is your feelings, and if it was his, and he was a child of grace, then so are you. John said "We know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." You cannot bear any better evidence than that, we think. Go to the church and tell them of your feeling of unworthiness, and let them be the judges as to whether you are entitled to membership or not. C. H. C.

Is This The Morning Or Evening Of Civilization?

---June 18, 1942

The following is an article written about twenty years ago by John W. Hedgepeth as an editorial in the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal. Mr. Hedgepeth is now one of the publishers of the Enterprise, at Ripley, Tenn., and recently reproduced the article in that paper. It is good and timely, and we think it is worth reading, and then worthy of careful consideration. There is need of a great awakening in this land of ours. Read the article, and hand it to others to read. We are copying the article from the Publishers Auxiliary. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

We are living in a great age, but what are we doing to safeguard civilization? Is it a fact that the pleasure god has the whole nation bowing at his shrine? Have we sidetracked the big things of life and become an amalgamated bunch of money-chasers? Are we indulging in wanton extravagance and spending more than we make? Is work really held in disrepute? Is the soul, conscience and heart of man keeping pace with the wonderful development of the intellect? Are we training our boys and girls in the school of nature as well as giving them higher education? Are we teaching the coming generation the dignity of labor and the importance of work? Are we drilling the youngsters in right thinking and Christian living? Are we holding up the Christ, the Master Mind and the world's greatest Servant as an example to the growing child, emphasizing His virtues and marvelous teachings? Have we allowed the American home, the one institution that has largely made American civilization, to become a cafe where the inner man is satisfied and the soul is dwarfed for want of spiritual nourishment? These are some questions worth pondering over. In the 20th century wonderful discoveries and inventions have been unfolded, astounding to the human mind. Are we schooling the people how to conserve these multiplicity of "implements" of civilization to the good of humanity and the glory of God? They are as miraculous to our generation as was the walking of the Master on the sea to those Galileans some two thousand years ago. No, we stand amazed at the pace the old world is traveling as the Author of Life and the Builder of the universe whispers into the mind of man and reveals to the geniuses, one by one, the hidden mysteries that have been in the mind of the Infinite from the beginning. God is simply telling men how to perform the "impossible," that's all. A century ago we had no railroads, no telephones and no telegraphs. Now the earth is belted with railroads, telegraph and cable lines. In this good day we can cross the ocean in the magnificent floating palaces in from four to five days; we can reach every civilized country by telegraph and cable; we can talk across our continent; we can speed by rail a mile a minute and fly in an airplane at the rate of over one hundred fifty miles per hour. We can ride at a moderate speed in automobiles or run a mile a minute, if we do not value our life and have no concern for the safety of others. We can sit in our home or office and receive the market reports by radio and listen to a prima donna sing five hundred miles away. These are a few of the many great things of this age. There is a great army of men delving into the bowels of the earth bringing out to light evidences of buried civilizations that perished thousands of years ago. Discoveries are being made that give a pretty fair insight of the peoples and their customs centuries past. It is claimed that armies can now be annihilated with poisoned gas and great cities laid waste by the same force. If we learn how to use and control the mighty discoveries and inventions for the pleasure and uplift of humanity, they will prove a blessing; otherwise many of them will be as hazardous as placing an automatic pistol in the hands of a six-year-old boy. If we educate the heart and soul along with the intellect it will be well. If we become reckless, through lack of understanding, the colossal forces and energies turned loose within the past century and less, may prove a means of our own unmaking, and we will have to pay the penalty. The divine plan is to run this old world without friction. But man, unless he is in harmony with the motives and purposes of the Infinite, can play havoc. In perfect accord with the will of God, man can conquer and make all things serve him. We must also get back to fundamental principles. Under the Constitution, the greatest document extant, every man has a right to work and seek happiness so long as his efforts do not interfere with the inalienable rights of others. A deeper respect for the Constitution is needed. The country must ever hold patriotism as a cardinal virtue. We must love the American flag and the protection the flag offers. Whether this be our native country or the land of our adoption, we must swear allegiance to the American government, American institutions and American ideals. So long as we claim citizenship in this country we must love and, if need be, die for the perpetuation of our band of brotherhood and democracy, the wonder and admiration of all nations. We have a complex population, a diversity of interests. This country is great in natural resources and possibilities. No matter what your avocation or profession, opportunity extends the glad hand to every citizen every morning and challenges your best efforts to work and contribute to the greatness of this republic. We must remember no country can long exist without keeping morally pure and patriotically sound. Let's not abuse our privileges of living in the greatest country under heaven. May our people be teachable, thoughtful, prayerful. Let us learn how to conserve the stupendous forces and energies of this age and make them build rather than destroy civilization.

Election and Predestination

---July 2, 1942

These two subjects are very closely connected, or interwoven with each other. The doctrine that God did, before time, make choice of, or elect, a portion of the human race, and predestinate their salvation, is and has been a distinctive doctrine of the church all along the line. The Primitive Baptists hold to this doctrine. Baptists believed and preached this doctrine before John Calvin was born. But Calvin, one of the great Reformers, did advocate that doctrine. He went further with his teaching, however, on that line than the Baptists did. The old Westminster Confession of Faith (the Presbyterian Confession by John Calvin) said: By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels are predestinated unto everlasting life, and others foreordained to everlasting death. We quote this from the "Constitution of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Containing the Confession of Faith," etc., published in 1822. When the Baptists met together to frame the London Confession in 1689 they copied the Presbyterian Confession as far as they could conscientiously do so. The way they put this down in the London Confession reads this way: By the decree of God, for the manifestation of His glory, some men and angels are predestinated or foreordained to eternal life, through Jesus Christ to the praise of His glorious grace; others being left to act in their sin to their just condemnation to the praise of His glorious justice. Notice the difference in the reading in this matter. The Baptists did not believe in the doctrine of unconditional reprobation-or that some of the race were foreordained to everlasting death. God's predestination or foreordination has never injured anyone. When God made choice of some He did nothing to the others. They are simply left where they are by reason of sin and transgression. The Lord simply passes them by, so far as this matter is concerned. Yet, in nature all are alike. All are sinners, and God is, or was, under no obligation to do anything for any of the race. What He has done, and does do, and will do, is all a matter of grace-a stoop of mercy. In His mercy, and by His grace, He made choice of some of the race, and predestinated their salvation -predestinated that they should be conformed to the image of His Son. In this we find that election and predestination are joined closely together-that is, if this doctrine be true. What we here have in mind to do is to candidly investigate this doctrine, especially from a Bible standpoint. If this doctrine be true, then it follows that the Primitive Baptists are right in the principles which they hold to. If it is not true, then they are altogether and entirely wrong. And if they are wrong, we wonder, who, or what people, are right? The people who contend that there is something which the sinner has to do in order to become a child of God or in order to be born again, differ as to what and how much the sinner has to do. If we go to them to find out from them what one must do in order to have eternal life, we find a perfect babel. It seems reasonable to us that if they are right in their contention that there is something for the sinner to do in order to obtain eternal life, then they might be able to agree as to what it is the sinner must do in order to that end. It seems reasonable to us to conclude that if the sinner must obey one command required in the Bible in order that he obtain eternal life, then he must obey every command laid down in the Book. If he must obey one of the commands in order to that end, then he must obey each and every one of those commands in order that the end be reached. So it seems to us. Another inconsistency which we have seen in some who hold that the sinner must do something in order to obtain eternal life is this: Some of them teach that the sinner can and must "get salvation," and then claim that after he gets it he cannot lose it. It has always seemed reasonable to us to conclude that if a man can get a thing, he can lose it after he gets it. What a man can get, he can also lose. It seems inconsistent to teach that a person has to do something in order to obtain a thing and then to deny that he has something to do in order to keep that thing. Surely, if a man has to exert himself to get a thing, he would have to exert himself in order to keep that thing after he got it. It seems logical to us that if a person has to perform a condition in order to obtain salvation, he would have some sort of condition to perform in order to keep that salvation. Hence, it is inconsistent to teach that sinners have to perform certain stipulated conditions in order to obtain eternal life, and then to teach the final preservation of the saints, and that it is impossible for a child of God to fall away and be finally lost. This makes the salvation of the sinner conditional upon his part before he is born again, or in order to be born again, and then makes his final salvation in heaven after regeneration to be unconditional on his part. It seems to us that if one is conditional the other is also conditional; or, if one is unconditional on the part of the person, so is the other. Not one of these inconsistencies are encountered in the doctrine of personal and unconditional election of sinners to be saved in glory. We have had in mind for several days to write a little article on the doctrine of election and predestination.

As we began the writing these matters came into our mind, and this article is now long enough for one issue of the paper. So we stop here with the promise to try to look into the subject more directly in next issue. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

---July 16, 1942

In our last issue (July 2) we promised to try to write more on this subject for this issue. In order to an intelligent investigation of the subject it is well to first see what the word election means, and what the word elect means, and what the word elector means. We will take the last word first. Elector is one who elects, or has the right of choice. If persons of Adam's race were chosen to eternal life, or chosen to be made children of God, or to be conformed to the image of Christ, we may ask, Who did the choosing? Who did the electing? If such choice was made, then someone must have made the choice; someone must have done the electing, or the choosing. They either did the choosing themselves, or some other party must have done it. If they did the choosing, then they themselves would be the elector. If they constitute the elector, then they must have existed before the electing was done. Elect, as an adjective, means chosen; taken by preference from among two or more. Theologically it means chosen as the object of mercy or divine favor; set apart to eternal life. An adjective is a descriptive word. If the word elect is used any place in the Bible to describe any person or persons, it is there used as an adjective. If the Bible speaks of any person, or persons, as the elect of God, as a descriptive term, the word is there used as an adjective, and it means that they were chosen as the objects of mercy or divine favor; it means that they were set apart to eternal life. Elect, as a noun, means one chosen or set apart. Theologically, one elect; -now only as collective; as, "Shall not God avenge His own elect?" -Luke xviii. 7. Elect, as a transitive verb, means to select; to determine by choice; to decide upon; to choose; to select or take for an office by vote. Theologically, it means to designate, or choose, or select, as an object of mercy or favor. Election is the act of choosing; choice; selection. Theologically, it means divine choice; especially, as one of the "five points" of Calvinism; predestination of individuals as objects of mercy and salvation; also, those elected. The foregoing definitions are taken from Webster's International Dictionary, which is conceded to be authority on the meaning of words in the English language. The dictionary gives the meaning of words according to their accepted use in the language. This being true, we are aware of the fact that such definitions as we find in our dictionaries are not always the same as the words meant in the original languages in which the Bible was written. The Old Testament was written in Hebrew, and the New Testament was written in Greek. Those languages are dead languages, and have undergone no change since the Bible was written. The English language is not a dead language, and is undergoing changes all the time. Some words are going out of use, and others are being coined, and some words are used today in a different sense than they were years ago. As an example of this, take Webster's definition of baptize. He gives it as from the Greek word "baptizo, to dip in water," and then defines the word baptize as "to dip or immerse in water, or to pour or sprinkle water upon," etc. This shows that the meaning of the original word in Greek was to dip in water, which is to bury or immerse; but in later years some have engaged in sprinkling or pouring water upon a person and called it baptism. But what the word meant in the Greek language when the New Testament was written is just what the word means in that language today. This all being true, it is well that we look into the original language now and see what the words elect and election mean in that language. Let it be remembered that what the words meant when the New Testament was written is what they mean now. That language, or the meaning of words in that language, has undergone no change in all these centuries. In every place in the New Testament where we find words elect, elected, or election, the word is translated from a word which means "to pick out; to choose, select; to choose out as the recipients of special favor and privilege; chosen out, selected; chosen as a recipient of special privilege; elect; specially beloved; possessed of prime excellence; exalted; choice; precious; the act of choosing out, election; election to privilege by divine grace; the aggregate of those who are chosen, the elect." These definitions are given in Bagster's Analytical Greek Lexicon. We have not taken space to divide up and give each different ending and case of the word, for they all sum up to the same thing. Strong's Exhaustive Concordance gives the meaning as "to select; make choice, choose, choose out, chosen." Liddell & Scott Unabridged Greek Lexicon gives the meaning thus: "To pick or single out, to pick out for one's self, choose out." In Thayer's Lexicon we find this, in defining the original word: "To pick or choose out for one's self; * * * so that the ground of the choice lies in Christ and His merits. * * * (Ephesians 1:4)" It seems that we have here produced sufficient testimony as to the meaning of the words; and if one will not believe, from the evidence here produced, neither would he believe, though one rose from the dead. The doctrine that God has made choice of a certain, or special, people, without regard to their works, or special fitness, may be repugnant to human nature, and contrary to the exalted opinion one may have of self; but that is no argument or evidence that it is not the truth. Let us next look into the meaning of the word predestinate. Webster defines the word as an adjective thus: (From Latin praedestinatus, perfect participle of praedestinare, to predestine; prae, before; destinare, to determine.) Predestinated; predestined; foreordained; fated; theologically, foreordained by God's decree or eternal purpose." As a transitive verb he defines it thus: "To predetermine or foreordain; to predestine; theologically, to appoint or ordain beforehand by divine purpose or decree; to pre-elect." The word in our English is translated from the Greek word pro-or-id-zo, which means "to limit in advance, predetermine; determine before; ordain, predestinate." The word is from pro, "in front of, prior to; above, ago, before, or ever;" and horidzo, "to mark out or bound, to appoint, decree, specify; declare, determine, limit, ordain." These definitions are taken from Strong's Concordance, and we find the same in the other Lexicons which we have before us, as Bagster's, Thayer's and Liddell & Scott's. This is sufficient as to the meaning of the word. With these facts before us, do we need to refer to the Scriptures and quote what we find recorded therein in order to prove the doctrine we maintain in this matter? If you would read for yourself, and keep these definitions in mind, it seems to us that no argument would be needed to convince one that the doctrine is taught in the Bible. But we do not wish to let the matter go at that. But we have written enough for this issue already, and will promise to write more on the question for the next issue. C. H. C.

To Our Soldier Boys

---July 16, 1942

We are sending The Primitive Baptist to several of our soldier boys in the camps. We wish to make this special request of each one of the boys who are getting this paper: If you should be moved, and your address changed, please notify us at once where the paper should be sent to, so that you may not fail to get it. If you enjoy the paper, and desire to read it, we are glad to send it to you. We wish to do all we can to help you to bear your burdens and to help you on the way. We are always glad to hear from any of the boys. May the good Lord be with you and protect you and finally bring you safe home, is our prayer for you. If you die away from home, or on the battlefield, remember your Master is there and will take you to that better country, where there are no wars. May God bless you. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

---August 6, 1942

In our last issue (July 16) we promised to write some more on this subject. So we will try to comply with that promise. There are so many passages in God's Word treating upon this matter that we hardly know which passage to introduce first. Suppose we start by reading the following: Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God. For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.--(Th 1:4) (I Thessalonians 1:4-5). Please bear in mind that the beloved Apostle Paul penned this language by inspiration of God-that he was moved by the Holy Spirit to pen the language in the original which is translated as above. Paul said, "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God." If he did not know it, then he was moved by the Holy Spirit to say he knew what he did not know. If he was not moved by the Holy Spirit to say he knew what he did not know, then he did know their election of God. Remember, too, that the Thessalonians were not apostles. It has been said by some that the Lord did choose or elect the apostles, but not others. But the Thessalonians were not apostles, and Paul said he knew their election of God. Their election was of God. As it was of God, then it was not of themselves. God is the one who did the choosing or electing; hence their election was of God. Since Paul knew their election was of God, then he knew that the doctrine of election was the truth. As we said in a previous article, this doctrine may not suit our carnality, or the doctrines of men, but Paul knew it was the truth. If it was the truth then, it is the truth now. Principles are eternal and never change. How did Paul know their election of God? He tells us how he knew it: "For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." The gospel comes to unre-generate persons in word only; it does not come to them in power; nor does it come to them in much assurance. The unregenerate man may hear the words uttered by the minister as he proclaims the riches of God's grace, and as he tells of God's work in the salvation of poor lost sinners, but it is an idle tale to such persons. True gospel preaching is foolishness to them. "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness." -(I Corinthians 1:18). The gospel comes to such persons in word only. But to the Thessalonians the gospel did not come in word only, but also in power. They not only heard the words, but there was a power in it to them. This was a sure evidence to the apostle that they were of the elect of God. They were not the elect of God because the gospel came to them in power; but the fact that the gospel came to them in power was proof to the inspired apostle that they were the elect of God. This same inspired man said, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." -(Romans 1:16). Please take notice of the fact that Paul did not say "it is the power of God in order to salvation" -but unto salvation. How under heaven could the gospel of Christ be the power of God unto salvation if salvation did not already exist in the person before the gospel got there? How can one thing be unto another thing if the other thing is not already in existence? The gospel is the "power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." It is not the power of God unto salvation to one who is not a believer. A believer is one who has already been born of God. "Even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." - (John 1:12-13). Those who now believe, in the present, were born of God, in the past. So the gospel coming to one in power proves that such a one was born of God before the gospel thus came to him; and one who has been born of God was chosen of God before he was born of God. Being born of God and the gospel coming to him with power is inspired proof of the fact that such a one was embraced in the election of God. The gospel does not bring assurance to those who have not been born of God, or who are not of the elect of God. But it does bring much assurance to some. To whom does it come with much assurance? It comes with much assurance to those who are of the elect of God, and who have been born into the heavenly family. If the gospel has come to you with much assurance, it is an infallible proof, according to the inspired apostle, that you are embraced in the number of God's elect. The same which was said to the Thessalonians by the inspired apostle in our text may just as truly be said to you, "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God. For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." The eternal God, in His mercy and grace, made choice of you, elected you to salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord; and the apostle has said that he knew this fact, and knew it to be a fact. Well, we have only brought out one leading text in this article, but we feel that we have taken enough space for this time, and will stop for the present, with the promise that we will try to write more on this subject for the next issue. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

In our last issue we promised to try to write some more on this subject for this issue. We will try to fulfill that promise. In this article we will call attention, first, to ((9:15) (Psalms 139:15-16)): My substance was not hid from thee, when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them. In this language David was representing the Saviour speaking; he was impersonating the Lord Jesus. His substance is the same as His members; that is, the members of His body. These members of His body, His substance, are those He gave Himself for. They go to make up the number for whom He gave Himself. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it; that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." (Ephesians 5:25-27). The washing of water by the word is the washing, or cleansing, by the power of His speech. "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." - (John 6:63). The Father saw every member of Christ's mystical body, though the number is beyond the power of man to enumerate. It is an innumerable company, which no man can number. He saw them before any of them existed. They were not hid from Him. The father saw them when they were yet unperfect, when they were not completed, or when they did not yet exist. All these members of His body, the finally saved, those who shall finally live with Him in glory, were written in God's book "when as yet there was none of them." This was before they had existence. As it was before they had existence, it was too soon for them to do something in order to be written in that book. And as it was before they had existence, then they did not always exist-that is, they did not always have being. As they were written in that book before they had existence, or "when as yet there was none of them," it follows, as a necessary conclusion, that God made choice of them before they existed, even before time, and wrote them in His book. That is, it is necessarily true that God made choice of them whom He did write in His book. They were fashioned in His mind and in His choice before they were brought into existence, before the foundations of the earth were laid. This text being true, it follows that the doctrine of salvation wholly by the grace and mercy of God, without any works of any creature, is true. They being written in God's book before there were any of them in existence, God making choice of them and writing them in that book, it follows that even this was of His mercy and grace; and they are finally brought home to glory by His grace. This is all of grace, from first to last. It is grace upon grace. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance." ~ (Psalms 33:12). That nation whose God is the Lord is that people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance. If a person is embraced in the inheritance of the Lord it is because God has chosen that person. If God has not chosen a people for His own inheritance, then the Lord has no inheritance. All those people who go to make up the inheritance of the Lord are those people He hath chosen for His inheritance. Does the Lord want all His inheritance? If not, why not? And will not the Lord get all His inheritance? If not, why not? And if the Lord does not get His inheritance, who will get it? If Satan is able to get a part of the Lord's inheritance, could he not get all of it if he wanted to? If not, why not? If Satan gets a part of the Lord's inheritance, and does not get all of that inheritance, and the Lord gets only a part of His inheritance, does it not follow that the Lord gets only that part which Satan would not have? Would it not be true, then, that those who are finally saved are saved by the grace of Satan, and not by the grace of God? If not, why not? The Lord has chosen a people for His own inheritance; and Jesus redeemed them by His blood, and sends His Holy Spirit into their hearts and thereby regenerates them, brings them into divine relationship with Himself; and they are preserved in Jesus Christ, and kept by the power of God unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. Hence, they will all be finally landed on the shores of eternal bliss, and will be glorified and will live with Him in all the ceaseless ages of eternity. "Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth, and causeth to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple." -((4) (Psalms 65:4). The reason why any poor sinner has ever approached the Lord, or ever will approach Him, is because God had made choice of that sinner, and caused him to approach unto Him. No one is perfectly satisfied in this world of sorrow and turmoil. We may have a moment of satisfaction here, but it is only for a moment, and even then it is not perfect satisfaction. But the glorious day is coming when some will be perfectly satisfied. Who will be finally perfectly satisfied? Those whom the Lord has chosen and caused to approach unto Him. If we object to the doctrine of God's choice, we object to the very principle upon which a poor sinner ever approaches the Lord, and upon which any poor sinner will ever reach heaven and be satisfied. Those who approach the Lord, and who will finally reach heaven and be satisfied, are those whom the Lord has chosen and caused to approach unto Him. If you have ever approached the Lord, at the footstool of His mercy, realizing your need of His mercy and grace, and have implored His mercy from a feeling sense of your need, it is because God had made choice of you and caused you to approach unto Him. And all such persons shall be satisfied with the goodness of His house, the house not made with hands, and which is eternal in the heavens. You will be satisfied, after this poor wearisome life is over, with His holy temple. You will be prepared and qualified and capacitated to live with Him in glory, and you shall be satisfied. Surely, that will be enough. Well, we are not through with this subject, and will try, the Lord willing, to write more for the next issue. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you. Remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

Complainings

---August 20, 1942

For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil. The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!- (Luke 6:33-34). There were some people in that day who were not satisfied without they were busy complaining and finding fault. They did not like it because John neither ate nor drank. The Saviour both ate and drank, and then they were not satisfied with that. We often wonder what it would take to satisfy some folks, and how it would be possible to please all. If an editor of an Old Baptist paper publishes some experiences some will complain about that, and say the experiences should not be published, as they often discourage some child of God who has not experienced such things in his own life. Others sometimes say they enjoy the experiences of grace in the paper, and that they would rather read the experiences than anything else in the paper. So, what shall the editor do? Is it not a pity that some who object to a bright experience being published were not present to tell Paul that he should not write and leave on record such a bright experience as he had, because it would discourage many of the Lord's dear children, and cause them to feel that they are not children of God, because they did not have such an experience? David said, "Thou didst make me hope when I was upon my mother's breasts." -((9) (Psalms 22:9). Is it not a pity that some were not there to tell David to not put that down and publish it for the generations following to read, for many of them have no such experience, and they will become discouraged by reading such as that? The experiences of the Lord's children are pictured in the book by the experiences different ones of the ancient worthies had. Surely these things are left on record for the comfort and encouragement of others who have traveled the same road. If it were right for such experiences to be put on record then, why is it not right now? Who are you that would complain and object to such things? What is the editor to do?

If an editor should publish an account of the life and experience of some of the Lord's servants who are yet living, for the comfort and encouragement of the Lord's humble poor now-perhaps one who is fearing to take up his cross to endeavor to speak in the name of the Lord--or if he should publish an account of the life and experience of a dear old servant of God, who was faithful in the house of God; one who may yet be perhaps remembered by some old saint of God yet living, and who may read that account, and thereby have comfort and joy by refreshing his memory, and thus be encouraged in his declining days--will you complain about it? Why do you complain? Are you so selfish that you want nothing in the paper only what you most enjoy? Are you thinking more of self than of your poor old brother or sister who has stood the heat and burden of the summer's day, and who so much enjoys remembering the days of joy in the past of their lives? Do you object to having the minds of the Lord's children called to those old servants who bore the burdens in the past that the church might be handed down to you as it was? Do you appreciate the labors and the service rendered by those old servants who have already been called from the walks of men? If so, would you complain about the space being taken in a paper giving an account of their lives, their experiences, and the Lord's dealings with them? Do you appreciate the servants the Lord has blessed you with in the present? If so, would you object to reading about the Lords dealings with them, as they write of some of their experiences along life's rugged way? Or, do you cave anything about the Lord's dealings with others than yourself-and even in that, do you wish to say just what shall come your own way, and that everything must be as you choose and to your liking? Perhaps an editor may publish something in his paper about some trouble some place, other than where you live. Perhaps you complain about that, even though you do not know all the circumstances, and that what the editor does in that line puts some of the Lord's children wise, so that they do not become entangled with some trouble. Then perhaps there may come some trouble your way, but the editor does not deem it wise, for certain reasons, to allow it to appear in the columns of his paper. Then do you complain about that? If it should be published, there will be complaints. Then what shall the editor do? Should he not follow what he conscientiously believes to be the right course in the matter? Will you still complain and find fault? Constructive criticism is good, and we invite it. But if you have any to offer, come to the editor with it, and try to help him to be a better editor and to publish a better paper; but if you have respect for the Cause of the Master do not be whispering among others. Do not be a "kicker." Do not be a complainer. Do not be a faultfinder. May the Lord help us all to exercise more the spirit of forbearance, and help us all, as His humble followers, to pull together for the advancement of His blessed cause, and for the comfort and consolation and encouragement and help of His humble poor. Suppose you try to run an Old Baptist paper for awhile. Can you do a better job of it than our editors are doing-at least some of them? Perhaps there is no preacher which the Lord has made that is just to your liking. Suppose you try looking at two sides of a matter for a short time. Suppose you try to get the viewpoint of the other fellow, that you are complain-in about. Perhaps the Lord would put a better feeling in your heart, and you might not be so free to find fault and to complain. No man can please all the people. Frankly, we are not going to try. As for our-self, our desire and effort shall be to please the Lord, and to do what we feel in our heart He would have us do. May the Lord pity His poor bleeding Zion, and have mercy on us poor complainers, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

---September 3, 1942

We promised again in our last issue to try to write some more on this subject for this issue. We will try to do as promised. The last text we used in our last article was ((4) (Psalms 65:4), which reads as follows: "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple." We also used this text: "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance." -(Psalms 33:12). We wish to refer to these passages again because it has been argued by some that it is not persons, abstractly, that God made choice of, but that He chose character and not persons: thus teaching that one must be of such and such character in order to be embraced in the election. For instance, it has been argued that one must be a believer in order to be embraced in the election; that God chose only such as become believers; that the choice is, or was, based on the fact of them becoming believers; thus contending that it as not persons, as such, that He chose, but such and such characters.

Let us here call attention to the fact that David said in (Psalms 33:12), "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance." A nation is composed of people; people, not character, make up and compose a nation. That nation whose God is the Lord is a blessed nation And David, most emphatically, says the people are blessed whom the Lord hath chosen for His own inheritance. If David told the truth, and he did, then God chose people; and people are persons of Adam's sinful race. Hence, God made choice of sinners of Adam's race for His inheritance. And in ((4) (Psalms 65:4) he said, "Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth, and causeth to approach unto the." It is the man which God chooses, and not character, and then He causes that man whom He has chosen to approach unto Him. If one approaches unto Him in repentance and faith, or in faith and repentance, it is because God had made choice of him and caused him to thus approach unto Him. It was not the faith and repentance which God hath made choice of, nor because of the faith and repentance that God made the choice; but God chose the man and then caused the man to approach unto Him. The choice was first, the man was chosen, and the faith and repentance were some of the ends to be reached as a result of the choice and the Lord causing the one chosen to thus approach unto Him. Hence, the faith, or belief, and repentance are evidences-inspired evidences-that the person was chosen of God. If one approaches the Lord, it is because God had made choice of that person and caused him to approach. God made choice of him first, and then, after the choice, caused him to approach unto Him. No poor sinner has ever yet approached the Lord, or ever will approach unto Him, upon any other principle other than that the Lord had made choice of him and caused him to approach unto Him. If any poor sinner ever has approached the Lord, or ever will approach unto Him, upon any other principle than this, then it was not necessary for the Lord to make the choice and cause the person to approach unto Him; and if it was not necessary, then the Lord has done an unnecessary thing. A thing done which was not necessary to be done is a thing; by which no good is accomplished. But good is accomplished by that which the Lord has done and does do. It is good for the Lord to possess His inheritance. Hence, it was not an unnecessary thing for God to choose sinners of Adam's race and cause them to approach unto Him; and as a result of the choice which God has made, and the work which He does in causing poor sinners to approach unto Him, He will have all His inheritance, and will bring all of them home to glory; and they shall be satisfied. This is consoling to poor sinners of Adam's race who have been given to see and to realize their lost condition by reason of sin-that, notwithstanding their deplorable condition. God made choice of them and caused them to approach unto Him, and will finally bring them off more than conquerors through Him that loved them and gave Himself for them. Let us here quote (Luke 18:1-8): And He spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint; saying, There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man: and there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary. And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me. And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith. And shall not God avenge His own elect, which cry day and night unto Him, though He bear long with them? I tell you that He will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth? In this Scripture we have the lesson taught us that the unjust judge avenged the widow who cried unto him. It was not done by him as an act of mercy, or because he feared God or regarded man; but it was because he might be wearied by her continual coming to him. But this is not the reason why God will avenge His own elect. God is not an unjust judge, nor is He unmerciful. He is both just and merciful. He will avenge His own elect because He loves them, and hath mercy on them; and He will avenge them speedily. "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." - (Romans 12:19). Here is language uttered by the blessed Son of God Himself. In it He tells us that God has an elect. As God has an elect, He made choice of them; He did the electing or choosing, and they are His own. How may they be distinguished from others who are not of His elect? They cry unto Him day and night. They do not cry unto Him in order to become elect, or in order to be elected. If so, they cry before they are elected; and if they cry before they are elected, then some cry unto Him who are not yet elected. And if some cry unto Him who are not yet elected, then the Saviour made a wrong statement when He declared that His elect cry unto Him day and night. Those who cry unto Him are those who have already been elected, already chosen. God had made choice of them, and now they cry unto Him. Have you been brought to cry unto the Lord? If so, the Saviour here describes you as one of the elect of God, and assures you that the same one who has chosen you will care for you and project you, and that He will arrange your adversary. He will preserve and keep you, because He loves you with an everlasting love, and He changes not. "I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." - (Malachi 3:6). Blessed and glorious promises and assurances are these which the Lord, in His love and mercy, hath given for the comfort, consolation and encouragement of His little ones here in this low ground of sorrow. Dark clouds are hanging over the world today; but God will take care of you, dear children. His elect, the objects of His love and choice. We often wonder if we are embraced in that number. These things here have been of some comfort and consolation to us along life's ragged way. and we feel today to be willing to risk it, and to rely on His precious promises. May the Lord bless you, and comfort your hearts in this dark and cloudy day, is our prayer. We will try to continue the subject in our next issue. C. H. C.

What Will Men Not Say?

---September 3, 1942

While we were in Memphis on the second Sunday in August, 1942, the following clipping from a paper published in that city was handed to us: God has a plan for every life, Rev. Charles L. Morgan, will say in his sermon, "The Peril of Resisting God," at 10:50 a. m. tomorrow at Prescott Memorial Baptist Church. "All who believe the Bible agree that God has a plan for every life," he will say. "All nature tells us of a planning God. All revelation teaches it. We have the message direct from the lips of our Lord, 'As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you.' "God had a noble purpose for Pharaoh to begin with. The reason he ended as he did was not because God did not love him. God did love him and did His infinite best to save him, "It was because Pharaoh resisted and resisted, rebelled and rebelled, till at last he threw himself a corpse upon the shore of the Red Sea. "The message we hear from his clammy lips today is this, 'Look at me and see what a terrible things it is to rebel against God,' " Training Union of the church will have a social Tuesday night at Overton Park and members will meet at the church at 5:30 p. m. to go in a group. In our youth, when some fellow would make some rash, or far-fetched, statement, some person might say, "That takes the cake." We would say that the foregoing takes the whole bakershop! According to the statement of "Rev. Charles L. Morgan," whoever that "reverend" gentleman may be, the Lord has a plan for every life, and as evidence of it he quotes the language of the Saviour, "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." Of course, he intends to teach that the Master sends all men, or would send all men if they would consent to go, or to be sent. But the Master never said that to a multitude, but to His i'ew disciples, as recorded in (0:21) (John 20:21). Take your Bible and read the chapter and you can plainly see for yourself how the language is misapplied. We honestly believe the preacher knew better. Now read the next paragraph. "The reason he (Pharrah) ended as he did was not because God did not love him. God did love him and did His infinite best to save him." Go and read the ninth chapter of Romans and see for yourself what God's Book teaches concerning the matter. Two classes are shown forth in that chapter, represented by Jacob and Esau; and God emphatically said, "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." God did not love Esau, and neither did He love the people Esau represented; and the apostle emphatically declares this to be "that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth." The "reverend" preacher declares that it is of works. According to this modern divine the reason why Pharaoh was not saved was because "he resisted and resisted, rebelled and rebelled, till at last he threw himself a corpse upon the shore of the Red Sea." But of all the great and wise (?) sayings which we have ever read, this outranks them all: "God did love him, and did His infinite best to save him." According to that statement God exerted His infinite power, a power that is without limit or capacity, to save Pharaoh, and yet Pharaoh would not let Him save him! Pharaoh, according to that, had a power above a power that is without limit or capacity, and in the exercise of that power which is above a power that is without limit or capacity, he "resisted and resisted, and rebelled and rebelled, till at last he threw himself a corpse upon the shore of the Red Sea!" How under heaven could any being have a power above a power that is infinite, a power that is without limit or capacity? If Pharaoh had such a power, perhaps he tore hell all to pieces after "he threw himself a corpse upon the Red Sea." God saith unto Pharaoh, "And in very deed for the cause have I raised thee up, for to shew in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth." -((9:10) (Exodus 9:10). In (Romans 9:17) Paul quotes that language as follows: "For the Scripture saith unto Pharaoh, Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might shew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth." God was not fooled nor thwarted in the matter. He carried out His purpose, and fulfilled it; and Pharaoh did not thwart God's plan or purpose. May the Lord pity such men who will teach such stuff before and to a supposedly intelligent people. Folks who will drink down such rot and tomfoolery must be as ignorant concerning the teaching of God's Book as the most ignorant Jap, Chinaman, Hindoo, or Hottentot. May the Lord pity them! Why will not some people read the Book for themselves, instead of paying some deceiver a high salary to preach such rot? C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

---September 17, 1942

We promised again to try to write some more on the above subject; so we will try to write a few more lines on the same, This time we will begin by quoting (Deuteronomy 7:6-7,8): For thou, art an holy people unto the Lord thy God: the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto Himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth. The Lord did not set His love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people: but because the Lord loved you, and because He would keep the oath which He had sworn unto your fathers, hath the Lord brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh King of Egypt. Here we have the plain statement that the Lord had chosen Israel to be a special people unto Himself. He set His love upon them, and chose them, not because they were more in number than other people. Neither did He choose them because they were a good people, or better than other people.

(Deuteronomy 9:6) "Understand therefore, that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiff necked people." The Lord did not choose them because they were better than other people. True, this choice was not unto eternal life, but they were chosen by Him as a special nation, and He set His love upon them as a nation. But national Israel were, a typical people, and typified spiritual Israel. Abraham was chosen of the Lord, and was the father of this great nation. God promised him that He would make of him a great nation, and promised him an heir. Isaac was the promised heir. "Now, we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." -(Galatians 4:28). Ishmael was not the child of promise. He was born after the flesh. His mother was a type of the old covenant given on Mount Sinai. Sarah was a type of the covenant of grace; so, in the type, Isaac represented the children of the covenant, the children of God, the children of promise. "And if ye be Christ's, then ye are Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." -(Galatians 3:29). So was Jacob a promised child, and was a type of the Lord's children. The Lord made a promise concerning Jacob before He was born, and even before he was born God said He loved him. "The Lord's portion is His people; Jacob is the lot of His inheritance." -(Deuteronomy 32:9). The Lord chose Jacob, to bestow the blessing upon him, and passed Esau by, and did not love Esau. He did Esau no harm, but simply left him alone. He was under no obligation to bless either Esau or Jacob; but He saw fit to bestow mercy and grace upon Jacob, and bestowed the blessing upon him, God loved Jacob and chose him before he was born to bestow the blessing upon him. Jacob's name was changed to Israel. "And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name." -(Genesis 35:10). Israel, as a nation, were God's chosen nation, and were a type of spiritual Israel, God's chosen people. God did not choose national Israel because they were good, or because they did good, nor because they made choice of Him. This choice was without any condition on the part of Israel, and without any good in them causing Him to choose them. But He made choice of them that they be a peculiar people unto Him. This being true, the Lord made choice of His spiritual Israel without any good in them causing Him to make the choice. The choice was made without any reference to good in them. He did not choose them because they were better than other folks, but of His own will and good pleasure. It was just because it was His will thus to do; it seemed good in His sight. If sinners in nature were left to themselves not one would ever choose the Lord. One would necessarily be compelled to first think upon the Lord in order to choose Him. David says, "The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God: God is not in all his thoughts." -(Psalms 10:4). If the Lord had not chosen the sinner, and after the choice, and according to that choice, given the sinner a new heart and a new life, that sinner would never have even one good thought about the Lord; for while he is yet in that wicked state God is not in his thoughts. It follows, then, as a necessary fact and conclusion, that the sinner must be changed first in order that he have one right thought of the Lord. It is the Lord's work to give the sinner a new heart; and as it is His work to do this, He certainly has chosen to do that work when He does it; and if He has chosen to do that work, He has, most assuredly, chosen the ones in whom He does the work. If you are Christ's then you are a child of promise. God the Father promised you to His Son; He gave you to His Son. "I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." -(Psalms 2:7-8). The Father gave some to the Son. But this was before we had existence. So you were given to Him before you had existence. The Son chose those whom He asked for, and the Father chose those whom He gave to the Son. The choice of the Father and the Son were the same. And the Son has left this statement on record for our consolation and comfort and assurance: "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which He hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." -(John 6:39). Paul's hope of living with God in the glory world was based alone on the promise of God and His power and faithfulness to perform and to fulfill His promise. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." -(Titus 1:2). From this we see very clearly that Paul's hope was based alone on the promise of that God who cannot lie. We also learn from this that God promised eternal life before the world began. He did not bestow or impart eternal life to anyone before the world began, but He made the promise before the world began, and eternal life was the thing promised. As He made this promise, persons who did not yet exist must have been embraced in the promise. He either promised eternal life to all the race of Adam, or to a part of the race, or to none of the race. If He made the promise to none of the race, then none of the race will receive eternal life. But either some of the race or all of the race will receive eternal life. If all the race receive eternal life, then Universalism may be the truth. The Universalist says there is no such thing as an eternal hell, or place of eternal punishment. If there is no such place as that, then the Lord Jesus did not save a single one of all the race of Adam from anything at all; and so His death was all in vain, and He accomplished absolutely nothing by His suffering and death. This virtually denies that He was the Son of God, and to deny that He was the Son of God is to virtually deny the Bible being the truth; and to deny the Bible being the truth is to virtually deny the very existence of God. But some of the race receive eternal life. As God cannot lie, and as He promised eternal life before the ages of time began, then all who were embraced in the promise will receive eternal life. He promised eternal life to all those who were given to the Son. It must be true, then, that He made choice of those who were embraced in the promise. If your hope of heaven is based alone on the promise of God, and His faithfulness and power to perform what He promised-based alone on the work of the infinite Jehovah God, and not on any worth, or merit, or righteousness of your own- not even your thinking on His name, nor on your choice, nor your acceptance of Him, or anything under heaven that you have done, or can do, or may do- just as Paul's hope was based alone on the Lord, then you are a child of promise, and God made choice of you before you ever had existence; and He has brought you into divine relationship with Himself by the work of the Holy Spirit, the third Person in the Holy Trinity; and the Lord Jesus will raise you up at the last day in His own image and likeness; and eternal joy and bliss will be yours. May His richest blessings rest upon you, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Carcass and Eagles

---September 17, 1942

(Matthew 24:28). The above is the language of the Master. He certainly knew what

He was talking about; and in this we have a lesson that would do us good, if we but take heed to its teaching. But let us get a better idea of the eagle before proceeding further to get the lesson here by turning to (Job 39:27) (Job 39:27-30) and reading what the Lord said to Job, as recorded therein: Doth the eagle mount up at thy command, and make her nest on high? She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock, and the strong place. From thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off. Her young ones also suck up blood: and where the slain are, there is she. Here we have it that her young ones suck up blood- they are blood-suckers. They destroy life; they kill; and "where the slain are, there is she." They eat dead carcasses-rotten meat. They feed on carrion. That is the characteristic of this kind of eagle. They are akin to a vulture; they are of the family of the buzzard. A dead carcass sends forth a stench; and where the dead carcass is and the stench is being sent forth, there the buzzards gather together. These things are facts, and no sort of argument can possibly set aside or destroy facts. Where facts are presented, or where facts exist, arguments cease. No fact can be argued away. What lesson may we get from these facts? Where there is a stench, as the stench of a carcass, and we see a gathering there, and those gathering at the place manifest a delight, and that they are pleased with the things they find, what do they manifest? Evidently they manifest the disposition of the eagle, a buzzard. If one does not have the disposition of a buzzard, who makes his appearance on the scene where there is such a stench, he is not pleased with such, and instead of approving and being delighted with what he has come in contact with, he will either have a strong desire to get away, and will get away from that place, or else he will endeavor to put the stinking thing out of sight. It should be burned or buried, so that the stench will forever cease to give offense. Look out for a preacher who likes such stinking things, and beware of the bunch of preachers who mix and mingle around where the stinking carcass is. They would look like a bunch of buzzards to us. Can there be anything more like a carcass than immorality practiced by a preacher? If it is an evident fact that a preacher has been guilty of immorality-and can it be more evident if a preacher confesses that he is guilty of immoral conduct?-how much could a thing in the church of more like a stinking carcass? Now, to us, for a lot of folks-preachers included-to gather around such a person and approve him being retained in the fellowship of the church, and aiding and abetting such a man, who is guilty of immoral conduct,-to us they appear like a bunch of buzzards. It is an old saying', and conceded to be a true one, that "birds of a feather flock together." If you desire to "flock together" with a thing like that, you have a desire which we confess we do not have. We also confess that if the church of our membership should have such a desire as that, we would not wish to retain membership in that body. It seems very evident to us that we are now living in a time that the Apostle Paul warned us of, and of which he told us, in (II Timothy 3:1-9) "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away, 'For of this sort ate they winch creep into houses, ana lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts, ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. Now as James and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth; men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith. But they shall proceed no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all men, as their's also was." If the apostle does not here well describe a large per-cent of the people of this time we confess that words do not mean anything. Not only does the apostle warn us here that; such folks are in the world, but he warns us that they will creep into houses, and lead captive silly women, Certainly the word houses may well be taken to mean churches, and silly women led astray certainly means silly churches are led astray by such men. The apostle tells us in (Romans 16:18) how they manage to do this. He says: "For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." In (Romans 16:17) he says: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." What is the doctrine which ye have learned? Is it that ungodly and immoral conduct should be practiced and upheld in the church which the Master established here in the world? We do not so read the Book. How can the church let her light shine by pursuing such a course? Let us look, for a moment, at the description of some persons, given in the text quoted above from Paul to Timothy: One epithet he uses is incontinent. That word mean's "unable to contain, keep, or restrain; uncontrolled: not restraining the passions or appetites, particularly the sexual appetite; indulging unlawful lust; unchaste; lewd." The apostles also say, "for their folly shall be manifest unto all men." Of course he means such men as do not approve of such conduct, and who will not condone such in the church of God. Folly means:" 1. State of being foolish' want of good sense; levity, weakness or derangement of mind. 2. A foolish act or idea; an inconsiderate or thoughtless procedure: weak or light-minded conduct; foolery. 3. Scandalous crime; sin; specifically, wantonness; lewdness." We frankly confess that where there is evidence of immoral conduct in a preacher we do not wish to associate with him. If you wish to do so we know of no civil law prohibiting it, but we do know that "water seeks its level;" and we have no desire to go down with you. We would much rather see you "pull up stream" and keep good company. "A man is known by the company he keeps." If you are determined to keep bad company, we prefer not to keep company with you. We know this is plain, but plainness becomes the house of God. "For this I know, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears." -((0:29) (Acts 20:29,31). Webster tells us that the European wolf is "crafty, rapacious, and very destructive to game, sheep, and cattle. It is usually cowardly, but sometimes attacks man. Wolves readily breed with dogs." Evidently they are of the same species, and we are told to beware of dogs. May the good Lord help us all to keep His house as He gave it to us. C. H. C.

We promised again in our last issue to try to write some more for this issue on the subject of election and predestination. We will now try to comply with that promise. This time we will call attention to (Ephesians 1:1-5) "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus: grace be to you and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love: having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will." In this language we find Paul embraced, and the saints at Ephesus are embraced, and all the faithful in Christ Jesus are embraced. The expression, "Faithful in Christ Jesus," means all those who are full of faith in Christ Jesus. That includes all who are full of faith in Christ Jesus in every age and every clime, in all the habitable parts of the world. The word our embraces Paul, the writer, and the saints at Ephesus and all those who are full of faith in Christ Jesus. It embraces the writer and those he was writing to—all the persons addressed. God is our Father; and the Lord Jesus Christ is ours. It is our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul's language means that "He is mine, and He is yours." Then the word us embraces the same people, the same number—no more, and no less. He "hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." Has He done this according to what we have done? Has He done this according to, or in harmony with, or in consequence of, some good thing done by us? No. What, then, is it according to? "According as He hath chosen us in Him." The pronoun Him refers to Christ; "according as He hath chosen us in Christ." He hath chosen in Christ the Apostle Paul, the saints at Ephesus, and all those who are full of faith in Christ Jesus. Did He choose them in Christ because they first made choice of Him? No. They did not exist before the foundation of the world, and they would have to be in existence before they could make choice of anything. He made choice of them before they had existence, for He made that choice "before the foundation of the world." Before the foundation of the world was laid He made that choice. The expression, "before the foundation of the world," literally means "before the ages of time began." Before time was, before time began, He made choice of them. The choice was in Christ, for He chose them in Christ; and He did this before the ages of time began. God did not save people before the ages of time began; but persons who did not then exist were chosen in Christ before time was. The Father had a definite purpose in view in making this choice. What was that purpose? Was it to give them an opportunity to become children of God? Was it to give them an opportunity to be saved, or to become holy and without blame by doing His commandments? No; that was not the object of the choice. What was it, then? It was "that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love." He chose them to be holy, and not because they were holy, or because they would be blameless by their doing. The end of His choice was that they be made holy and without blame, and not that He chose them because they became holy and without blame. The choice was first, and they are made holy and without blame before Him as a result of that choice. To say that they were chosen in Him as a result of, or because of, them becoming holy and without blame reverses the order and puts the effect for the cause, and the cause for the effect. God's choice is the cause; and the effect of that cause is that they are made to be holy and without blame before Him in love. It is because God loved them, and not because of something in them. There is no cause of God's love, as here brought out, outside of Himself. The cause is all within and of Himself. Certainly, language could not be any plainer that God made choice of persons of Adam's race; and that this choice was made before the ages of time began. We remember being in conversation years ago with a man who denied the doctrine of election. We read these verses to him, and when we read the fifth verse we read it this way: "Having predestinated us unto the apostleship by Jesus Christ to Himself." He interrupted us to say, "There it is; you see He did not predestinate that people should be saved: but He predestinated to make some apostles." Well, you know, we had to laugh right in his face. Then we read the text just as it is in the Book, and as quoted above: "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself," The apostle here plainly tells us that some were predestinated unto the adoption of children. How many were predestinated unto the adoption of children? All those who were chosen in Christ before time began. God determined beforehand that all the chosen ones should be adopted and brought into His heavenly family. He predestinated them unto the adoption of children. Those who are made to be His children, those who are finally brought into His heavenly family, were chosen in Christ to that end, and the choice and purpose existed before time began. They are brought into divine relationship with Him, and will be adopted into His family in heaven, as a result of His choice and predestination. God does not save sinner;; by accident; but He saves them on purpose, and according to His choice. God purposed to save the sinner that He does save, and the purpose was before the saving was done. God intended to save the sinner before He does the saving'. It was God's purpose and intention to save every sinner that He does save. If any are saved who were not embraced in God's choice, and that God did not purpose to save, then some must be saved that God did not choose to save, and that He did not intend to save. If any are saved that God did not choose and intend to save, then God does not save them. And if God does not save them, please tell us who does save them? God has a place to put all those whom He saves-and that place is called heaven. Where will those be placed that God does not save? Some other place will have to be fixed up for them, because the place God has fixed will be filled with those that He saves. Where is your faith fixed? Are you depending on societies, churches, preachers, or some other human being for your salvation? Do you expect to get to heaven by and because of what you do, or can do, or expect to do? If so, is your faith in Christ? If your faith is in Christ, then your dependence is all in Him: your whole trust and confidence is in Him; you are depending alone upon Him and upon what He has done. and is doing, and upon what He has promised to do, for your home in heaven-that place where His people will finally be landed. And if your faith and hope and trust and confidence are all in Him, then it is true that you were embraced in God's choice. God made choice of you before time began, and predestinated you unto adoption of a child. You will be taken home to live with Him in eternal glory, when all the trials and conflicts of life are over. You will live with Him in that world where sorrows and trials can never be. There will be no wars there. There will be no sin there. He wept that we might weep; Each sin demands a tear: In heaven alone no sin is found, And there's no weeping there. There'll be no sorrow there; There'll be no sorrow there; In heaven above, where all is love, There'll be no sorrow there. The Lord willing, we will try to write some more on this subject for next issue. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

In our last issue we again promised to try to write more on the above subject, So we will try to carry out the promise. Before we proceed, we wish to say that the article on this subject in the last issue was numbered wrong. It should have been marked "Article No. 7." And the article in September 17 was also numbered wrong; it should have been marked "Article No. 6." If you are keeping your papers, find those issues and mark the articles correctly. We regret the error. We will here call attention to what Paul said in (Romans 9:7-16): Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children; but, In Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God but the children of the promise are counted for the seed. For this is the word of promise, At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son. And not only this; but when Rebeca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac; (for the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works; but of Him that calleth;) it was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated. What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. For He saith to Moses. I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth but of God that sheweth mercy. Here is text enough for more than we will be able to write for this issue. The first thing we wish to call attention to is the fact that Isaac was a promised child, and that he was born contrary to nature. Abraham was old and Sarah was past the age of child-bearing. But God made promise that at a certain time He would come and that Sarah should have a son. That son was Isaac. Ishmael was born of Hagar, and Ishmael was not the promised heir. He was born after the flesh. His mother was a type of the law covenant, and he was not to be heir with the child of the free woman. Isaac was a child of promise; and so is every child of God a child of promise. "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." - (Galatians 4:28). Turn to the book and read the chapter, especially from (Galatians 4:21 to the end of the chapter). "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." -(Galatians 3:29). This is a clear and positive demonstration of the choice and purpose of God. The efforts of Sarah and her handmaid did not result in the birth of the promised child; but resulted in the birth of a mocker. Even so to this day-the efforts of all the societies in the world and the works of men do not result in the spiritual birth of one into the heavenly family. God comes, as He did then, in the power and might of His Holy Spirit, and the promised child is born into the heavenly family; and Jerusalem which is above, and is free, is the mother. This Jerusalem is the covenant which is everlasting, and is ordered in all things and sure. They were embraced in that covenant before they had existence, "when as yet there was none of them." Here is the doctrine of election, God's choice, and God's purpose clearly demonstrated. Then the apostle refers to Rebecca, the wife of Isaac To Rebecca and Isaac two boys were born, and they were twins. It seems that Paul was not satisfied to demonstrate and show forth the doctrine of God's sovereign choice and His predestination by the use of Isaac and Ishmael, so he now brings out two more boys -twin boys, who had the same father and the same mother. Though they were twins, yet Esau was born first. Under the law the family blessing was always to go to and be bestowed upon the elder, or the oldest boy. But God had not so chosen in this case. Before the boys were born the Lord told their mother that "the elder shall serve the younger." The word elder literally means the greater and the word younger literally means the lesser. Here is a promise of God concerning these boys before they were born. God made choice of the lesser, or the younger-Jacob-that he should serve the greater, or the elder-Esau. Here is a display of God's choice in the matter; and it was not the law by which it was manifested or done, but it was a display of His mercy and grace and His sovereign choice. God loved Jacob and bestowed the blessing upon him. God hated Esau, He did not love Esau, and passed him by and bestowed the blessing upon Jacob. This was not done because Jacob had done good and Esau had done bad, for it was before they were born, and neither of them had done any good or evil. "For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth." -(Romans 9:11). Here the apostle positively and unequivocally declared that in this is the doctrine of election and God's purpose or predestination set forth. Why try to "wrest" this to try to make it teach something else? When and if one does that, is it not a clear demonstration of the fact that he is not satisfied with the teaching of God's Book?

Years ago a lady said to us, "I do not believe that doctrine; I do not care if it is in the Bible." Why not be candid about the matter, and do as that lady did, just say positively that you do not believe the Bible? God made choice of Jacob, and Jacob was a type of all God's people. "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel. For the Lord's portion is His people; Jacob is the lot of His inheritance." - (Deuteronomy 32:8-9). Jacob, then, represented the Lord's portion, the Lord's people, the Lord's inheritance. God loved Jacob before he was born; and He loved His people before they existed. He loved them from everlasting, and will love them to everlasting. His love is eternal. He loved them from eternity, and made choice of them, and purposed to save them in eternal glory; to deliver them from the curse of the law-to save them from their sins. Just where the Lord found Jacob is where He finds all His people-in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness. And as He did with Jacob, so He does with each one of them. "He led him about, He instructed him, He kept him as the apple of His eye." Is there unrighteousness with God because He does all this? Some people think so; for some will tell us that if God thus makes choice of one and saves that one without conditions upon his part, and does not give all the others a chance, that He is unjust. We have even heard some say that if He does this He is meaner than the devil. But the inspired apostle did not thus view the matter. He asks the question, in anticipation of what some say about the matter, even in this so-called enlightened day, "What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God?" Then He answers the question in positive language, "God forbid." It is God's sovereign prerogative to make choice of a poor sinner and deliver that sinner from eternal destruction from His presence-from eternal suffering in an endless torment. Hence "He saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion." In His declaration to Moses He declared His sovereign choice of sinners and His purpose to save them. He saves whom He wills to save. He has compassion on whom He wills to have compassion. He has mercy on whom He wills to have mercy. And it is alone the mercy of God by which a poor sinner is saved, and not what the sinner does. And God bestows that mercy upon whom He wills to bestow it. He has made choice of them, and saves them according to that choice and purpose. He made choice of them, and predestinated to save them. Hence He bestows His mercy upon those He has chosen and predestinated to save. Hence the salvation of the sinner is "not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy." The unregenerate sinner has a will, but his will is wrong; he runs, but he runs in the wrong way. The will the sinner has, and the running which he does, has nothing under heaven to do with his salvation. "It is of God that sheweth mercy." His salvation is all of God, and not partly of God and partly of his own will or work, or running. Have you learned and felt this truth in your own heart? If you have, you have been taught of God. God was your teacher in bringing you to know this great truth. And if God has been your teacher, then you are a child of God; for the prophet said, "And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children." -((4:13) (Isaiah 54:13). Everlasting peace is yours beyond this world of turmoil and war. So by experience I do know There's nothing good that I can do; I cannot satisfy the law, Nor hope, nor comfort from it draw. My nature is so prone to sin, Which makes my doing so unclean, That when I count up all the cost, If not free grace, then I am lost. May Heaven's blessings rest upon you, is our prayer. Pray for us. We will try to write some more on this subject for next issue. C. H. C.

Again in our last issue we promised to try to write more on the above subject. So we will try again to comply with the promise. This time we will start our little article by calling attention to (Zechariah 13:1), which reads as follows: In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness. The word shall is used in different ways or senses. Sometimes it is used in the sense of prophecy-simply telling beforehand what will come to pass at some time in the future. Sometimes it is used in the sense of a mere statement of fact. Sometimes it is used in the sense of a command, or in the giving of a command. Sometimes it is used in the sense of determination; it carries with it the idea of determination on the part of the speaker. Let us look, for a few minutes, at ((Dan 12:10) (Daniel 12:10) "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." In this text the word shall is used in the first place in the sense of determination-" many shall be purified, and made white, and tried." This is not something which they do themselves. It is something to be done by another, and done for and to them. They "shall be purified, and made white." The Lord determined that they should be thus made-made pure; they "shall be purified." Poor sinners are made pure by the work of the Lord. God the Holy Spirit makes the application of the blood of Christ to them, and thus they are purified and made white. The Lord determined to do this; and He chose those for and to whom this would be done. He chose those whom He would purify from their sins, and make white in the blood of the Lamb. The next clause says; "but the wicked shall do wickedly." They do not do wickedly because God determined that they should; but they do wickedly because it is their nature to do wickedly. Hence, that is simply a statement of a fact. It was that way when the language was written; it was that way before the language was written; and it is that way yet, and it will continue to be that way. The wicked have always done wickedly because it was their nature to do wickedly; and they will always do wickedly because it is their nature to do that way. The next clause says: "and none of the wicked shall understand." Why is it that none of the wicked shall understand? The Saviour answers that question for us very plainly. In (John 8:43) He said to some wicked Jews, "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word." The reason why the wicked shall not understand is because they cannot hear His word-they cannot understand it. "None of the wicked shall understand" because they cannot understand. Something must be done for the sinner which he cannot do for himself in order that he be able to understand-he must be changed first, in order that he understand. In our text at the beginning of this article the Lord declares that in a certain day a fountain shall be opened. This carries with it the idea that the Lord had determined the fountain to be opened, or that it should be opened. He was going to see to it that this would come to pass; He was going to bring it to pass. This certainly carries with it the idea that the Lord determined this beforehand. That is God's predestination. Not only did He determine that this fountain should be opened, but He determined that a certain end should be reached- a certain thing should be accomplished by, and as a result of, the opening of this fountain. Note, carefully, that the text says "in that day." This signifies a certain day, a fixed day-not "in those days," but "in that day." The Lord determined to do this, or that it should be done, in a certain day. The day was fixed, or determined, as well as the thing to be done was determined. The Lord determined that this should be done at a determined time-in a certain day. "In that day there shall be a fountain opened." The Lord determined to do what He does, and determined the time that He will do it. When the Lord does a thing, it is but the fulfilling, or bringing to pass, what He determined beforehand to do; and He does it at the time He determined to do it. He never gets behind with His work, nor does He get ahead with His work. He always does His work on time, and at the right time. It is always at the right time for the thing to be accomplished which He determined to be accomplished. The Lord did not say, in this text, that the fountain should be opened for the benefit of all mankind, or that all mankind might have access to it. Neither did He say that it would be free for all who would accept it; but it "shall be opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem." The fountain is opened to these special people. It was not to be opened to the Amorites, the Hittites, the Jebusites, or the Perizzites, or the Hivites-but to the Israelites; the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. The Lord made choice of those to whom the fountain should be opened. The fountain was not to be opened a part of the way, and they to come the rest of the way-but the fountain was to be opened to them; it was to reach them, and to benefit them. It was to do something for them and to them, or in them. The fountain was not to be opened in order that there might be sin and uncleanness; but to take away sin and uncleanness. "The blood of Jesus cleanseth us from all sin." It is not baptism that takes away sin, or that cleanses from sin; but it is the blood of Jesus which does that. A fountain is self-sustaining. It requires no power outside of itself to sustain it. A fountain is self-purifying. Place poison in the fountainhead of a stream, and the fountain will remove and carry the poison away itself. No power outside of itself is needed in order that the poison be removed. All the sins of the chosen people of God were laid on Jesus. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." -Isaiah liii. 6. But the fountain has carried all those sins away into the land of forgetfulness, and the Lord has said, "and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." -(Hebrews 8:12). When the blessed Redeemer hung on Calvary's cross and bowed His head and gave up the ghost, and poured out His blood on Calvary's hill, the fountain was opened. It is self-sustaining. It needs not the help of men or angels in order that it be sustained; nor does it need the help of men or angels to make it sufficient to carry sins away into the land of forgetfulness. "For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." - (Matthew 26:28). The blood of Jesus is sufficient to remit sins; hence baptism is not necessary in order to the remission of sins. This fountain was opened to, and for the benefit of, all spiritual Israel, the chosen of God; and He predestinated their salvation; He predestinated that all their sins and iniquities should be taken away by the efficacy of this fountain, and that they should all finally be brought home to glory, to live with Him in that glory world. He predestinated that they should be glorified. There is a fountain filled with blood Drawn from Immanuel's veins. And sinners plunged into that flood. Lose all their guilty stains. The dying thief rejoiced to see That fountain in his day; I hope that blood was shed for me, And washed my sins away. Dear dying Lamb! Thy precious blood Shall never lose its power, Till all the ransomed church of God Are saved to sin no more. E'er since by faith I saw the stream Thy flowing wounds supply, Redeeming love has been my theme, And shall be till I die. When this poor, lisping, stammering tongue Lies silent in the grave, Then in a nobler, sweeter song I'll sing thy power to save. We will try to write some more for next issue on this subject, the Lord willing. May His rich blessings rest upon you, and may these articles be blessed to the good of the readers. Please remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

No Objection Then

---November 5, 1942

In March, 1913 (see The Primitive Baptist of March 11, 1913), we said; For five years we worked on this hymn and tune book, and do not hesitate to say that we believe it to be the best that can be found. Every song has been selected with the utmost care, and dozens of books have been examined in making these selections. We have tried hard to get every line of unsound sentiment out. Our people have depended on books, for years, containing songs that have been changed by others to suit their theories. We should sing the truth, as well as preach it. If it is wrong to preach heresy it is wrong to sing it. We heard no objection to this then. If one objects now who did not object then, is he like he was then? We still hold to the same sentiment today as was expressed by us in the foregoing, as to singing the truth, and that was nearly thirty years ago. We here copy from an article written by Elder Lee Hanks, which appeared in the columns of The Primitive Baptist of January 28, 1913: Our esteemed brother, Elder C. H. Cayce, has gone to much expense and given much of his time, too, in getting up one of the best hymn and tune books I ever saw. He has selected the good old music from the old Sacred Harp, Christian Harmony and Southern Harmony. It contains between 700 and 800 songs, embracing all the good old songs that we so much love to hear, in Lloyd's and other books. All of us should put' our shoulders to the wheel and aid him in this laudable undertaking. It is a shame to hear these little fast Freewill songs in an Old Baptist Church. We should sing the good old songs that correspond with what we preach. All who want this book send Brother Cayce the money at once.---Every family should have one or more, and our churches should have a number of them.---We need a singing school taught in this book in every Old Baptist Church. Principles are eternal and never change. What was truth then, is truth now. The Good Old Songs is the same book now that it was when first published, except several songs were added in the second edition. If you want a book that is free from Freewillism, and music suited to the "city of our solemnities," use the Good Old Songs. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

---November 19, 1942

Again we will try to write a few lines on the above subject, according to the promise we made in the last issue of The Primitive Baptist. This time we wish to call attention to (Romans 8:28-33), which reads as follows: And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Before taking up a line of thought in connection with the subject of election and predestination, we wish to say a few words concerning another matter contained in the Scripture above quoted. We wish to say a few things concerning the words all things in the text. Here is a real need of rightly dividing the word of truth, as the Apostle Paul taught Timothy, in (II Timothy 2:15), where he said, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." To rightly divide is to rightly apply-apply each Scripture where it belongs. To quote a text and apply it where the Lord did not put it is to wrongly divide the word of truth. To put it where it belongs, and apply it to what the Lord has applied it, is to rightly divide it. He did not say to divide truth from error. That will take care of itself when the truth is rightly divided, or rightly applied. Everything taught in the Bible is truth. The Bible is the truth. But every truth in the Bible belongs just where God has placed it. Let us illustrate this fact in this way: In (II Timothy 1:9) the apostle said, "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." Here the apostle tells us, emphatically, that this is a saving which is not according to our works. Our works, whether good or bad, do not have a thing in the whole wide world to do with this saving. The things which we do, or the things which we may leave undone, do not have a thing in the world to do with this saving. This is a saving which is not according to what we do. Can we rightly divide the word of truth by saying there is no saving at all that what we do has nothing to do with? Let us see what the same apostle has said in (I Timothy 4:16) "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." In this text the apostle tells Timothy he would save himself and them that hear him by doing this. Here is a saving, then, which this minister was to accomplish by doing what the Lord here commanded him to do, or by doing that which he was instructed to do. Timothy would not save himself in heaven by doing this. He would not make himself to become a child of God by doing this. It was too late for him to save himself in the sense of being regenerated by doing this, for he was already a child of God and a called minister of Jesus Christ. He had already been born from above; and hence it was too late for him to do this in order to be born again. But it was not too late for him to save himself from false doctrine, or from the doctrines and commandments of men, by doing this. It was necessary that he do this in order to save himself from false doctrines, or from the doctrines and commandments of men. By doing this, he would not only save himself from these things, but he would save them that hear him. The word hear, as it is used in this text, means to take heed, or to observe the teaching. It does not simply mean to hear the vocal sound of your preaching, but to take heed to it. This means to understand and then to observe the teaching. The unregenerate cannot understand gospel preaching, or gospel teaching. "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word." - (John 8:43). Jesus said this to some wicked unregenerated Jews. In ((7) (John 8:47) He said, "He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God." One must first be of God in order to be able to hear God's words, or to hear the gospel. "We are of God; he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us." - (I John 4:6). Those who really hear the gospel preaching are already of God; and the true minister is to save such persons, as well as himself from false doctrines, from the doctrines and commandments of men. This matter is very important for the benefit, instruction, and comfort of the Lord's humble poor, as they are pilgrims and strangers here; but this does not have a thing in the world to do with them reaching heaven, or with their happiness in the glory world. One time when we were in discussion with a gentleman he asked, "What in the world do you preach for? Why do you spend so much time in that work, and so much labor in that line? You say that no one is saved as a result of the preaching you do; then what do you preach for, if it is not to save somebody?" We replied that we do try to, and expect to save some folks, by our preaching, the Lord helping us. He then wanted to know what we expected to save them from. We replied by saying, "We expect to save some from the heresy which you teach." We are sure that by the Lord's help many of His little children have been saved from heresy here in the world by the preaching which has been done by the Lord's true ministers. Here is a plain distinction which shows clearly the necessity of rightly dividing the word of truth. We need to apply the word saved where it belongs where and when we find it in God's blessed Book. The same thing is true regarding other things taught therein. Suppose we apply the expression all things, as found in our text, to everything that exists in the world. If we do that, we are sure we would not be rightly dividing the word of truth. Will it do to say that God and Satan are working together? We were told, once, of a preacher who said, "God cannot lie; but He raised up a nasty little devil to do His lying for Him." God did not raise Pharaoh up to lie, but to show His power in him, and that His name might be declared throughout all the earth. If that preacher told the truth, then God wanted some lying done, but was ashamed to do it Himself, so He "raised up a nasty little devil" to do that for Him. The only job the devil has, according to that, is what God raised him up to do, and what God wanted him to do-the things the Lord is ashamed to do Himself. So, according to that, they must be working together. Perhaps, according to that, they went into partnership, and are working harmoniously together, and God is as well pleased with the devil and his work as He was, or is, with the work of His dear Son. This may be true, but we confess that we have not so understood God's Book to teach. Satan has been working, from the first account we have of him, contrary to God; and he is doing that yet. Again, we are told of two things which do not work together: "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." -Gal. v. 17. Here are two things which are contrary the one to the other. As they are contrary the one to the other, they are not working together. They are working contrary to each other. Here is wherein there is a warfare going on in the child of grace. That one who has been born of God, or from above, still is in possession of that old sinful nature, the flesh, and he is also in possession of the Spirit; and these are contrary the one to the other. From hence arises the warfare within; and this is a warfare that will never cease while they live here in the world. These two things are contrary the one to the other. It has always been that way, and always will be that way, here in this world. They do not work together. One influences and leads in one direction, and the other leads and influences in the opposite direction. We cannot rightly divide the word of truth by applying the expression in our text, all things, to these two things which are contrary the one to the other. The all things in our text, then, does not mean all things numerically, but it applies to the all things under consideration-to the all things which the Lord will give us, as expressed in verse 32, which the apostle says, or teaches, that the Lord will give us. We have now just reached the text, or the part of the text, bearing directly upon the subject, but we have written enough for this time; so we will try to continue the matter in our next issue. Perhaps we have written enough on this subject. Unless our readers desire that we continue the subject further, we may try to conclude with our next article. May the Lord bless our readers. Please remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

In our last issue we promised to write again on the above subject. We did not get through with writing on (Romans 8:28-33). In order that the reader may have the text before him. we will here quote the language again: And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all. how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose." Those who love God are those who are the called according to His purpose. They do not call themselves. They are called by another, and God is the one who does that calling. "Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me His prisoner; but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God; who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." -(II Timothy 1:8-9). God does this calling, and He does it according to His purpose. He does not call a poor sinner out of death into life, or out of nature's darkness into His marvelous light, by accident. He does that on purpose. He purposed to do the calling before He does it. If and when a sinner is called with this holy calling, God does that according to His own purpose and grace. It is a fulfilment of His purpose. It is but God doing what He purposed, or intended, to do. Those who are thus called by the Lord of glory, by the Holy Spirit's work, are thereby brought to love God; and the all things the apostle is talking about in our text work together for their good. The Father will, with Christ, give to these same persons the all things which work together for their good. "How shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" This last statement is in the form of a question, and is the strongest way of saying that "He will with Him also freely give us all things." Here is God's purpose, plainly stated by the apostle. To purpose to do a thing is to predestinate to do that thing. Remember that predestinate means to determine beforehand. To determine a thing beforehand is to purpose a thing before it is done. As those who are called according to His purpose, and God does the calling, then God purposed to call those who are called. As some of the race are called, and some of the race are not called, it follows that God made choice of those He does call. Here is election and predestination; and no one can dispute it without disputing the plain and positive and emphatic statements of the Word of God. And if this part of the Bible is not the truth, who can tell whether any of it be true or not? "For whom He did foreknow." There is a sense in which God foreknew and does foreknow all things- everything that has ever yet existed, or that will ever exist; everything that has ever yet transpired, or that ever will transpire-but here is a particular sense in which He did foreknow some that He did not foreknow others. The apostle did not say "what He did foreknow" -but "whom He did foreknow." He foreknew that every person would exist that ever has existed or that ever will exist. But these were foreknown in His everlasting covenant of grace, and the others were not. They were embraced in the covenant, and thus foreknown. He made choice of them and gave them to the Son in the covenant. "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son." Those who love God are those who have been called; those who have been called, and who love God, are those He foreknew in the covenant; they are those whom He chose and embraced in the covenant; and those He foreknew He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son. He determined beforehand that these same people should be conformed to the image of His Son. He predestinated that somebody should be conformed to the image of Jesus; and He calls every one that He predestinated. Every person that He predestinated to be conformed to the image of Jesus, He also calls out of nature's darkness into His marvelous light. "Whom He called, them He also justified." How did the Lord justify them? "Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him." -(Romans 5:9). They are justified by the blood of Christ. Who are justified by the blood of Christ? Those for whom that blood was shed; and He shed His blood for every one the Father predestinated to be conformed to the image of His Son. And every one that is justified by His blood shall be saved from wrath through Him. What is the final end to be accomplished through all this? "Whom He justified, them He also glorified." The final glorification of each one whom He foreknew in the covenant is the end to be reached. He predestinated just as many to be conformed to the image of His Son as He did foreknow; and He calls just as many as He predestinated; and He justified as many as are called; and as many as were justified will be finally glorified. There will be just as many in the number glorified in the final windup as were in the first thing mentioned. There will be no increase in the number, nor will there be any decrease. Sure enough, "what shall we then say to these things?" What do you say, dear reader? Do you object to being conformed to the image of Jesus? Do you object to being glorified and qualified to live with God in glory? Do you love God? If you love the Lord, it is because God made choice of you before time was, and embraced you in His covenant-knew you beforehand in the covenant-and predestinated that you should be conformed to the image of His Son; and Jesus died for you on Calvary's cross, and justified you by His blood; and the Holy Spirit has called you out of nature's darkness into divine relationship with Him, and thus brought you to love Him; and as certain as God lives you shall live also; and you shall live in a glorified state beyond this vale of tears. You shall live with Him where there are no wars, no bloodshed, no sorrow, no pain, no sickness, no sin, and no death. There will be no dark seasons there. Loved ones will not be called away to war. There will be no night there. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" If God be for you in foreknowledge, in predestination, in calling, in justification, and in the final end of it all, your glorification, then who can be against you? Satan, with all his emissaries, can never be able to drag you down to eternal night. The Lord will, with His Son, freely give you all things necessary to your final glorification, and you will see Him as He is, and be like Him. Since the Father delivered up His Son for you, how shall He not with Him also freely give you all things necessary to your final glorification and your eternal happiness beyond this life? These people the Father delivered up His Son for are His elect. "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" God has an elect people-they are people-folks-sinners of Adam's fallen race! they are persons; not some imaginary, invisible, intangible something; but tangible human beings. They are God's elect; He chose them; He embraced them by choice before the world was, before they had existence; He foreknew them as His in the covenant; He predestinated them unto the adoption of sons; He justified them by the blood of Jesus; He calls them out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ; they are preserved in Christ Jesus; He will see to it that they are all finally glorified. Since it is God that justifies them, who can lay any thing to their charge? Who can condemn one that God justifies? If one be condemned that God justifies, then the case must be appealed from God's high court in heaven to a higher court than His. Is there a higher court to which the case of one the Lord justifies can be appealed? Since God's court is the highest court, then there can be no appeal taken. And as no appeal can be taken to another, or to a higher court, then their justification is an eternal or everlasting justification-it will never be any other way only that they stand justified before the Three-One God-the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. It is God that justifieth. God does this. God is the supreme Judge in His court, and His court is the Supreme Court. God Himself, through what His Son has done for you, justifies you; He absolves you and makes you free from all guilt. Your guilt has been removed through what Jesus has done for you. "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered." - (Romans 4:7). The righteousness of Jesus is imputed to you and covers all your sins; and thus you are made pure in the sight of the Father. As your sins are covered, put out of His sight, He declares you innocent. The righteousness of Jesus is yours and in His righteousness you are innocent; and you stand justified in the sight of God. Well might the poet say:

Let me, my Saviour and my God,
On sovereign grace rely;
And own 'tis free, because bestowed

On one so vile as I Election! 'tis a word divine;
For, Lord, I plainly see,
Had not thy choice prevented mine,
I ne'er had chosen thee.
For perseverance, strength I've none,
But would on this depend,
That Jesus, having loved His own,
Will love them to the end.
Empty and bare I come to thee
For righteousness divine;
O! may thy glorious merits be
By imputation mine.
Free grace alone can wipe the tears
From my lamenting eyes,
And raise my soul, from guilty fears,
To joy that never dies.
Free grace can death itself outbrave,
And take the sting away;
Can sinners to the utmost save,
And give them victory.

We beg the Lord's richest blessings to rest upon you; and may He bless what we have written to the comfort of His poor and afflicted children who may read the same, is our humble prayer. We beg an interest in your petitions at the throne of mercy. We do not promise now to write more on this subject for the present. That depends upon the way we may feel impressed to write when the time comes. C. H. Cayce.

Then and Now

---December 3, 1942

In The Primitive Baptist of April 8, 1913, under the heading, "Do You Love the Truth?" we said the following: If so, you should love to hear it sung, as well as preached; it matters not in what way it appears, it is the truth just the same. There is not an Old Baptist anywhere but what honestly and conscientiously believes that we, as a people, preach the truth. It is edifying, upbuilding and comforting to the Christian, because it is truth and he is of the truth. Now, it is inconsistent to preach the truth and sing songs tainted with Arminian sentiment. There is a tendency among our people in some sections to drift into Arminianism in their song service- they sing Arminian songs, when they would not endorse or fellowship a man who would preach the same sentiments they sing in their worship. We appeal to every Old Baptist everywhere to contend for and sing the good old songs our fathers and mothers sang. They are sound in sentiment, and call to memory the sacredness and solemnity of our song service in bygone days. In order to perpetuate those good old songs and stop the encroachments of Arminianism into our raiuis in the form of fast "Yankee Doodle" songs, we have worked hard for five years for something to meet that demand, and we've got it-a hymn and tune book of 420 pages and containing 715 of the good old songs, with not a single Arminian sentiment in all of its makeup. We are doing this writing today-October 22, 1942 - just 29 years, 6 months and 14 days since the above appeared in print in our columns. We heard no complaint then among our people concerning the sentiment we expressed at that time. We stand now just where we did then. Do you stand on the principles now that we set forth in the foregoing more than twenty-nine years ago? If you stood there then and do not stand there now, you are not like you were then. How about it? Where do you stand now? Have you "wobbled on the gudgeon?" May the Lord help us all to stand true to His cause and blessed truth. C. H. C.

Election and Predestination

---December 17, 1942

In our last issue we did not promise to write more on the above subject, but that our doing so would depend upon the way we felt impressed when the time came to write. We have had so many requests to continue the subject that we have decided to write a little more on the same. This time we will call attention to the following language: Paul, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness; in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began; but hath in due time manifested His word through preaching, which is committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Saviour.-(Titus 1:1-3). Here we have it that Paul was a servant of God. He served the true and living God. He was a loving servant. He was not this by nature, or while in an unregenerate state. While in an unregenerate state he thought he should do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, which things he has told us he also did. But the Lord, in His rich mercy and grace, arrested this poor sinner and changed him from a persecuting Saul to a praying Paul. The Lord made him a prisoner; "Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me His prisoner." -(II Timothy 1:8). While it is true that he was a prisoner, he was brought to love his Captor. He was brought into divine relationship with God, and thus brought to love the Lord. Hence he was made to be a willing prisoner. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." -((0:3) (Psalms 110:3). God's power was manifested in turning this man from his evil way, and made him to become a willing servant. Paul was not only a servant of God, but he was an apostle of Jesus Christ. There were already twelve apostles-one for each of the twelve tribes; but this man was made to be an apostle to the Gentiles. He was our apostle. God had a people among the Gentiles, as well as among the Jews, and in the person of this man the Gentiles had representation in the office of the apostleship. In the work of an apostle to the Gentiles the Lord had a work for an educated man, to do; and He knew where to find the man, and He was able to call him and to put him into the ministry. He was able to make him a minister-He did not need the aid or assistance of any man or set of men to make this man an able minister; He did not need the aid of some theological school to give him the finishing touches. When the Lord has a work for an educated man to do, He knows where to find the man, and He is still able to call the man and to put him into the ministry. "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the word to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in His presence." -(I Corinthians 1:26-29). This was according to the faith of God's elect. God had an elect; His elect were, and are, His chosen people. As they were God's elect, God did the electing, or the choosing. They were chosen in Christ before the ages of time began; see (Ephesians 1:4). They were chosen before they did either good or evil. As the choice was made before they did either good or evil, it necessarily follows that the election was unconditional upon their part. They were chosen too soon for them to do good in order to be elected; but they were the elect of God. God cannot lie, and He promised eternal life. As He promised eternal life, persons must have been embraced in the promise. Persons were embraced in the promise before they had existence, for the promise was made before the world began. The phrase, before the world began, literally means before the ages of time. Before time began the Lord made promise of eternal life. He promised eternal life to all the race, or top. part of the race, or to none of the race. If He promised eternal life at all, as the apostle says He did, then He must have promised eternal life to a part of the race or to all the race. If He promised eternal life to all the race, then all the race will receive eternal life. If all the race receive eternal life, then the doctrine of election is not true, and God does not have an elect. To elect one is to choose that one and leave others. As God has an elect, then He chose them. They were embraced in His choice. Then as God has an elect, He did not promise eternal life to all the race, but He did promise eternal life to some of the race, and they were His elect who were embraced in the promise. As God cannot lie, it follows that every one will receive eternal life who was embraced in the promise; or eternal life will be imparted to every person who was embraced in the promise; every person who was embraced in His election or choice will receive eternal life. Certainly God did not promise eternal life without any intention of fulfilling the promise. He certainly intended to fulfill the promise when He made the promise. If He made the promise without an intention of fulfilling it, then He would be guilty of double dealing. As He cannot be guilty of double dealing, because He cannot lie, then when He made the promise, His intention was to fulfill it. It was God's purpose to do what He promised. He predestinated to do what He promised-give eternal life to each one embraced in the promise. As He does not change (see Malachi iii. G), then He will not decide later to do some other way than the way He promised. Paul's hope of life eternal was based alone on the promise of God and His power and will to fulfill the promise. Was his hope well grounded? Upon what is your hope based? Is your hope of eternal life, your hope of living with God in glory, based upon your good deeds? Is it based upon the good things you have done, or may do, or can do? If so, your hope is not based upon the same thing Paul's hope was based upon. Is your hope of heaven and eternal glory based alone upon the promise of God, and His power and will to fulfill that promise? Is it based alone upon the Lord, and what He has done and what He has promised to do for poor sinners? If so, then your hope has the same foundation the apostle's hope had. Was Paul a child of God? Yes, most assuredly. If Paul was a child of God, and your hope is based upon the same thing his hope was based upon, then so are you a child of God, and you were embraced in His election; you are one of the objects of His sovereign choice, and you will be given to live with Him in eternal glory. May

He give you more and sweeter assurance of your acceptance with Him, especially in these dark and gloomy times, is our humble prayer. We may try to write more on this subject, if we feel impressed so to do. Please remember us in prayer. C. H. C.

Holiday Greetings

---December 17, 1942

From our earliest recollection it has been a custom during the holidays-Christmas and New Year-for people to say, "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year." We confess that at this time we hardly know how to say that-and yet we wish for each one of you a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." While we really and sincerely wish this for you, yet we are well aware of the fact that this will be a sad Christmas for the inmates of many homes into which this paper goes. But we wish for you as sweet and pleasant a time as the circumstances and conditions will allow. May God grant that each sorrowing and grieved person who reads this may have the blessed and sweet manifestation of His glorious and divine presence to soothe your sorrows, to ease your aching hearts, and to give you blessed peace in your souls. May His richest blessing rest upon each one of you, and those who are dear to you, is our sincere wish and prayer for you. May He give you grace to trust Him, and to rely upon Him, and may Hosea bless you with the assurance that He will not leave you nor forsake you. C. H. C.

CLOSE OF VOLUME 57

---December 17, 1942

This issue closes the fifty-seventh volume of The Primitive Baptist. When it has been our lot at times to write an article for the close of a volume we have sometimes wondered if that would be the last article on that line for us to write. We know we are another mile on our journey to the end of our pilgrimage on earth. We have had trials during the past year, as in every year of our pilgrimage. We believe we knew something of what Paul was talking about when he spoke of the perils of false brethren. We know what it is to be persecuted by men claiming to be the ministers of the Lord Jesus. We know what it is to be misrepresented. We know what it is for things we have written and said to be garbled, and what it is to be accused of saying things we did not say, and that we had no thought of saying. We know what it is to be accused of knowing things we did not know. But, thank the Lord, He is the Judge of men's hearts. We are glad that the Lord knows; and we are glad that He has said, "Vengeance is mine: I will repay, saith the Lord." A year ago our beloved country was plunged into the awful world conflict. We have had trying times during the past year, with almost the whole world engaged in the bloodiest war that the world has, perhaps, ever known. Battles are being fought on land, on sea, and in the air. Our young men have been taken from the fond embrace of fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, sweethearts, wives and children; and many more will be called before the awful conflict is over. We have a son-in-law who is somewhere in the distant lands. We have two boys who may be called to the colors before the conflict is over. They have been deferred to finish training that they have been taking. May the good Lord bless and keep them all who are on the bloody battlefields. We are sure that the Lord is in all the habitable parts of the world, and He is able to reach them, no matter where they are, by the power and presence of His Holy Spirit, and to save them from eternal ruin and destruction, Men may kill their bodies, but they cannot kill the soul No other but the Lord can shield and protect and save them. Our feeble prayers go out for them, and for the loved ones who are left behind. It is professed that we are fighting for our freedom. May God, in mercy, grant that our freedom may not be taken from us. We may all truthfully confess that we have been unmindful of God and His goodness to us. We have not all been as faithful as we should have been. Many have tried to destroy each other, instead of trying to live as close to each other as we should, and have disobeyed God's righteous law. when we should have been walking uprightly. If we will but consider the wickedness in the world, we may not be amazed that we are being visited with the judgments of God. May the Lord help us to repent in dust and ashes-not only as individuals, but as a nation. May God have mercy, and pity His poor and afflicted people, is our prayer. And may His blessings rest upon our readers. Our prayers go out, especially, for the boys w7e have in the bloody war in distant countries.

With this we bid you all farewell for this year. The year with us now passes into history. The pages are written, and cannot be unwritten by us. Farewell, C. H. C,
