Answer. Let me answer your question by asking you one. Can a woman who has justly forfeited her respectability, good character and standing with good society be restored to her former or good character and standing in society? If so, how? Or can a church by the act of restoring such a character as the one now under consideration give, impart to, or cause him to have the good, blameless character which God's law requires him to have? Can the church by such act of restoration cause the churches generally to love, and have confidence in him as a faithful minister and to be received and welcomed by them, if not as an able minister, yet as a faithful and true servant of God--cause him to be an example in word, in faith, in purity, to all the flock, and cause him to have a GOOD REPORT of them which are without? If she can do all this, then she can consistently restore him: otherwise, her attempted act of restoration is nothing but a sham and a farce. A true minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ, while he feels and confesses his inbred corruption of sin, and is made to mourn on account of it daily, yet maintains a good character with his brethren and before all men; but a minister of bad or suspicious character, loving his own sensuality, lust or greed more than he does the church and people of God, will do all he can to sustain himself--will lie, defraud and resort to all the tricks and trades of the hypocrite to sustain himself. A true minister would rather shut his mouth and abide on the outside forever than to be the cause of reproach and suffering to the church and people of God.

5. Does not the blessed Jesus, His apostles and the spirit and tenor of the whole Bible teach that we should forgive, bear with, and labor with one another, and that, if we forgive not, neither shall we be forgiven, and so on?

Answer. It certainly does; but these directions and admonitions relate to the everyday life and conduct of the people of God and church members in their relation to each other; for we all, being weak, fallible, and sinful in our very nature, are prone to do wrong, and we do wrong, more or less, daily, and if we do not bear with and forgive one another, we never can live together in peace, love and harmony; but such directions should never be so construed or interpreted as to shield and retain members, whether they be private members or ministers; for to do so is a misapplication and hurtful perversion of the Scriptures relating to private offenses or trespasses against one another, to the sustaining of corruption and disorder. I am sorry to have to confess that we, in many places and instances today, are guilty of perverting God's law of discipline as any other people are in reference to the doctrine of grace. Did the Lord direct the first church to labor and bear with Ananias for lying, which was a gross public offense? No; for He killed him at once for it. Did Paul direct the church to labor with and forgive the fornicator? No, but he directed them to put that wicked person from among them. But you may ask, Did not Peter lie, and was not that a gross public offense? Yes, Peter, under the excitement of fearful events and of natural terror, lied in saying that he did not know Christ and was not His disciple; and under the excitement of unexpected personal danger, any of us are apt to do just what Peter did; but oh! notice; just as soon as Peter came to himself and realized what he had done; how sincerely, deeply, and bitterly he repented and wept! It is not such a liar as that that is so abominable and offensive; it is the cool, calculating, premeditated liar that you cannot put up with, but must exclude. - Suppose a man steals or commits unjustifiable murder, and then repents, confesses and asks the church's forgiveness. Can she forgive him and retain him in her body? Show me one instance in the New Testament where a gross public offender, guilty of willful, deliberate public offense was labored, borne with and retained by the church, or where the church is directed to do such a thing. There are sins unto death, and for which we are not directed to pray. (I John 5:16).

6. If, after all, there is a preacher of bad or suspicious character, and the churches of his section, knowing of it, allow him to go on anyway and refuse to deal with and stop him, and suppose that you know all this, and that preacher were to come to your section and church, would you recognize him and preach with him? Answer. I would not, any more than I would an Arminian in an official way, for the reason that, if churches ignored the law of the Lord, then I certainly would ignore them to the extent of refusing to honor and recognize him as a minister of Jesus Christ. The fact is, I' am not able to command language sufficient to express the wickness, horror and abomination of such things; and, if it were possible, there ought to be a disciplinary dynamite placed under all such disorder to explode it into invisibility. EXTRACT FROM BOOK OF MORMON

---August 22, 1916

A few weeks ago we were with Elder J. H. Phillips at Pleasant Grove Church, in Henry County, Tenn. A Mormon apostle was there, and seemed anxious for a dispute. In conversation with him we stated that the Book of Mormon taught that all are saved who do not hear the gospel preached. He denied it, and asked us to show it. As we did not remember the exact wording of the language in the book, and did not remember just where it was, not being familiar with that book, we could not show it to him, but promised that we would find it and publish in our columns. We give the language below just as it appears in the Book of Mormon, from the Second book of Nephi, chapter 6, verses 48 to 56, inclusive:

And he commandeth all men that they must repent, and be baptized in his name, having perfect faith in the Holy One of Israel, or they can not be saved in the kingdom of God. And if they will not repent and believe in his name, and be baptized in his name, and endure to the end, they must be damned; for the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel, hath spoken it; wherefore he hath given a law; and where there is no law given there is no punishment; and where there is no punishment, there is no condemnation; and where there is no condemnation, the mercies of the Holy One of Israel have claim upon them, because of the atonement: for they are delivered by the power of him: for the atonement satisfieth the demands of his justice upon all those who have not the law given to them, that they are delivered from the awful monster, death and hell, and the devil, and the lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment; and they are restored to that God who gave them breath, which is the Holy One of Israel. But woe unto him that has the law given; yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation; for awful is his state!

This language so clearly teaches that those who do not have the law--or what they preach, as gospel--are saved on account of the atonement, that it does not take a Solomon to understand it. Evidently, the law is that those who hear the preaching are required to repent, believe, and be baptized; and when they hear the law proclaimed, that they cannot be saved unless they obey it. Hence, it is certain damnation to those who hear it and fail to obey it. On the other hand, there is no punishment to those who do not hear the law, for the law is not given to them; and "where there is no punishment, there is no condemnation." It necessarily follows that all would be saved, if no one heard the preaching. The preaching, therefore, sends people to hell, according to the Book of Mormon. Again: those who do not hear the preaching are saved by the atonement of Christ. Those who hear the preaching are saved by obeying the law. Hence, there are two ways of salvation, according to the Book of Mormon. Not only so, but those who hear the preaching are not saved by the atonement of Christ. This being true, according to Mormonism, then Christ died in vain, for the apostle has said, "For if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead is vain. "(Galatians 2:21). Mormonism not only denies that sinners are saved by the atonement of Christ if they hear the preaching, but it teaches that Christ died in vain, and teaches that preaching is the ministration of damnation, for all would necessarily be saved if the law was not given by the preaching. This is only a small part of the inconsistency of Mormonism.

A CONTRADICTION

---August 29, 1916

We have received a copy of two letters written by Elder J. B. Hardy which we think our readers should see. Hence we give them space below. The reader can see the contradictions without comment from us. The Fort Worth council which he endorses was a council held by those who advocate the absolute and unconditional predestination of all things that come to pass, both good and bad. The first letter below was dated September 8, 1903, and the second one was dated December 1, 1908. Since the second letter was written we copied an article written by him, and replied to it, in which he advocated the idea that nothing is lost by disobedience and nothing gained by obedience. If he wants recognition among orderly Baptists he should get himself straight, and no orderly Baptist should want to recognize him until he does that. We feel it a duty we owe our brethren to let these things be known. We have nothing personal against Elder Hardy, and our only intention and desire is that people be consistent. C. H. C.

FIRST LETTER

MRS. TOM TAYLOR:

My Dear Friend and Sister in Christ, I Hope-I have just heard a letter read from Sister Rogers to my brother, in which she says your mind has become dissatisfied, and that you are desirous of uniting with the church. I rejoice that your mind is thus exercised. Sister Rogers also informs me that J. S. Newman came to Blum, following me, and told you that I was agreed with him in doctrine, and offered this as a pretext to induce you to unite with his party. My sister, do not suffer yourself to be deceived. I am not agreed with J. S. Newman, neither in doctrine nor practice. J. S. Newman would not endorse what you heard me preach; and if you believe that, you cannot join his disorderly party. My father and I are perfectly agreed with my brother who was with me at your place, and J. S. Newman is not agreed with either of us; and he should not seek to thus deceive you.

I was at the Fulton meeting, but did not endorse all they did there; and they published my name in connection with their work, without my consent. If J. S. Newman was there, he knows that I publicly objected to some things they did. I do believe the London Confession of Faith, every word of it; and so does my brother. I also endorse the findings of the Fort Worth Council, and J. S. Newman does not. So we are not together.

Now if you wish to become a member of the Primitive Baptist Church, go to Elder Rogers' church and join. Yours in hope,

J. B. HARDY

Eldorado, Ill., September 8, 1903.

P. S.-I write this to prevent a deception being palmed off on you. J. B. H.

NOTE.-The brother referred to by Elder Hardy in the above is Elder J. R. Hardy, a rank Absoluter.-C. H. C.

ELDER W. J. TAYLOR:

I have often heard of you, Brother Taylor, and have always had a great anxiety to meet you, and my anxiety has increased ever since I had a debate at Urbenett last summer and the brethren told me of your humble, godly life, faithfulness in our Master's cause and ability as a minister of the gospel. I hoped to meet you at the debate, but failed; and my desire has become so great to meet you that I have decided to pay you a visit. If it would be agreeable I would like to visit every church in your association, and get acquainted with your brethren. I do love to meet and counsel with humble, faithful servants of my Master, who have been, and are, faithfully protecting the little children of God from the approaching enemy, and gathering in the little lambs. If I am not mistaken, you and I are perfectly agreed in doctrine. I understand, from the report I have had of you, that you are not an extremist; that you are opposed to the extreme views on predestination held by some, and do not hold conditional time salvation in such a way as to exclude the necessity of grace in obedience. While this has been charged upon us, I never heard one affirm any such thing, and I am sure none of us brethren believe it. You will find my views set forth by the Fulton Council. I was there. I would like to say so many things to you, but hope to be able to meet you soon and talk with you for our mutual strengthening and comfort. If it is agreeable for me to visit the churches of your association, I would desire and expect you to be with me at each church; for in this perilous time it becomes us to know what is being preached in our midst and to our brethren over which the Holy Ghost has made us overseers. Besides, my visit there would be as much to see you and enjoy your godly counsel. I could be there Tuesday, the 22nd of this month, and continue thirteen or fourteen days. If you make appointments for me, let them close near Elder Davis. I want to visit him, and would like you to go there with me. Please let me hear from you soon. I am, I hope, your brother in Christ,

B. HARDY

A Debate

---September 5, 1916

We have agreed, the Lord willing, to meet C. M. Stubblefield, of Paducah, Ky., in a debate of four days, to be held at Mt. Moriah Primitive Baptist Church, near Elva, Ky., to begin on Monday, October 9th. The following propositions will be discussed:

1. The Scriptures teach that God gives spiritual or eternal life to alien sinners without conditions on their part. C. H. Cayce affirms and C. M. Stubblefield denies.
2. The Scriptures teach that faith, repentance, confession, and baptism, are, to the alien sinner, conditions to be performed and complied with, in order to salvation, or remission of sins. C. M. Stubblefield affirms and C. H. Cayce denies.

Two days will be devoted to each proposition. The speaking should begin promptly at 10 o'clock each day. C.H.C.

Article Copied

---September 5, 1916

On another page in this paper will be found an article from Elder D. Hopper, which is copied from the Primitive Baptist Signal of July 18, 1916. Elder Z. Stallings replied to this article in a late issue of the Trumpet, and copies of the Trumpet were scattered broadcast in some sections of the country containing his reply. Some brethren who did not know just what the elder was replying to have asked us to publish the article written by Elder Hopper, so that they could see for themselves whether Elder Hopper had advocated heresy or not. In accordance with that request we are giving the article space in this paper. Read it carefully for yourselves and see if it is not just the way Old Baptists have always preached. It is a brand new idea to us that some are now advocating that the body does not take any part in the service of God, or that the body plays no part in the service. It is a brand new thing to us among Old Baptists that the body of the child of God is yet a child of wrath, and is no part of the child of God. But read the article from Elder Hopper and compare it with the Scriptures of divine truth. God's word is the standard to measure the article by. C. H. C.

The Curtain Raised

---September 5, 1916

NOTICE.-The following articles on this question which we reproduce from our writings are not put in this book with any desire to wound the feelings of any brother, or to dig up these old matters, or to make any brother feel bad. We reproduce them because we do not feel that we would be dealing honestly or in sincerity to leave them out. At that time there was a war on among the brethren.

Since then the trouble has been adjusted between many of them, or most of them, and at this time they are together and dwelling in peace, so far as that old war is concerned. The putting these articles in this book, and what may follow in additional volumes, since those matters have been settled, will show that Primitive Baptists can adjust and settle their differences when they try. C. H. C.

Our readers are well aware of the fact that a war has been waged in some sections for some time. In Texas the war has been on for quite awhile. One side has been charging the other side with believing what they term the "whole man" doctrine. Elder J. S. Newman and those who are in line with him, or who affiliate with him, have been charged with believing that doctrine, although he and others have repeatedly denied believing it. For some time there have been some who have been charging the same thing upon us. In our issue of November 16, 1915, we gave our views on the question of regeneration, and hoped that would satisfy those who had been thus charging us; but it seems that it failed to satisfy some. For a good while those who are in line with Elders Webb, Redford & Co., of Texas, would not say whether they endorsed our editorial or not. Finally two of these preachers came out in an article in the Trumpet in reply to our article. We have continued to remain silent and to take no part in this unholy war, trusting or hoping that it might cease, and that these brethren who seem determined to have strife and confusion would tire of their unholy course and stop their unbrotherly thrusts and unholy warfare. But it seems that they are determined not to even hush, and are determined to make us engage in war with them. Some have been saying that we had been working in a secret way; and it has been told to some of the members of our home church that we had something hid, behind the curtain, etc. Now, it seems to be our imperative duty to remain silent no longer. It is not only our duty to defend ourselves, but we feel that we owe it to the cause of the Master to speak out now and expose false ways and defend the truth, as we understand it. We trust that we realize the great responsibility resting upon us as we take up our pen now in defense of the time-honored principles of our fathers. We realize our own weakness and our own liability to err and go wrong. We do not ask a single reader to follow us because we advocate a thing. Do not follow us because we are editing a paper. Do not follow us because our sainted father was a preacher and an editor before us. Please do not follow us, only as we follow Christ. "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ. "(I Corinthians 11:1). If we know our heart our desire is to present the truth, and to do so in the love of the truth. We desire to speak the truth in love. (Ephesians 4:11-25).

We are also conscious of the fact that when a person goes to an extreme and another person begins to contend against that extreme, it is a very easy matter for him to go to an extreme also, but in the opposite direction. We realize our weakness here, too, and our liability to get wrong, if we are right now. Hence we realize our dependence upon the Lord for the guidance of His Holy Spirit, and for His sustaining grace.

Having all these things in view, and asking an interest in the prayers of our readers that the Lord may, in mercy, guide and direct us in the right way, we here take up our pen to enter the fight for the principles which have characterized our people in ages past. In doing this, we are not promising our readers a paper filled with controversy and wrangling, but we do promise to expose false doctrines and false ways. We do not propose to spare any man or set of men. It makes no difference to us who advocates a wrong, it shall be our intention to speak against it. We are aware of the fact that things have been said on both sides of this war which should not have been said; and expressions have been used which should not have been used, and which have been misconstrued. There has been too much hair-splitting. The truth of the matter is, in our humble judgment, that hair-splitting is the cause of much of the trouble and differences. Another cause is that some have evidently set themselves up as standards, and all others must use their words in expressing themselves or else they are heretics. We have had some experience with some who seemed to think that we must use their words or else we are not "in it" at all. Now, before we go further we wish to make this statement: We have no money to throw away, but we will give any man twenty-five dollars who will produce an article that has ever been published over our signature that we will not re-publish and endorse the doctrinal sentiments of it now. We will also give any man twenty-five dollars who will produce any article which has ever appeared over our signature, or any letter which we have ever written, that crosses or contradicts a doctrinal sentiment in any other letter or article which we have ever written. Just here we wish to re-affirm a statement we made in our article on regeneration which appeared in our issue of November 16, 1915, as follows:

It seems to us that we have been plain enough in the foregoing for anyone to know that we do not believe the "whole man" doctrine; but for fear some person might not remember, we will say, most emphatically, that WE DO NOT BELIEVE THE "WHOLE MAN" DOCTRINE. When we say that we do not believe a thing there is no man under heaven who has any right to say that we do, and no honest man who reads this will hereafter do so. Some have accused us of believing that, but every honest man who has thought so will say it no more, and will be willing to correct his statements that we did.

We also wish to quote a statement from our "Introduction to Volume Thirty-one, "in our issue of January 4, 1916:

We have learned that some are still trying to make it appear that we believe the "whole man" doctrine; and some have even gone so far as to say that we said some things which we did not say, and never even thought of saying. No honest man will do this. We must again call attention to what we said on that line in the issue of November 16, 1915. So far as we are concerned the discussion of that matter is at an end, either publicly or privately, and we have no more to say concerning it. When the articles were written from which the foregoing extracts were taken, it was our intention and full determination that we would have no more to say concerning this matter; but we have been censured because we have been saying nothing, and the charge has been made, as already stated, that we have something hid, that we have something behind the curtain, and other like things have been said, until it has become absolutely necessary for us to have more to say-so it seems to us, and many of our good brethren have advised and insisted that we remain silent no longer.

Now, perhaps we have had something behind the curtain. If so, we are now going to raise the curtain and let our readers see some of the things which are there. The first thing we mention is the fact that we received the following declaration of non-fellowship, which was sent to us by Elder S. N. Redford, with the request that we publish the same in our columns:

Whereas, Elder J. B. Downing has, in our own stand and from the pulpit of his own church, affirmed, contrary to (Galatians 5:17), that it is not the flesh or physical being of man, but the sinful principle in man, that is opposed to God and holiness; and

Whereas, He holds that the flesh (which we know to be natural, vile, sinful, unholy, and corrupt) is an essential constituent or part of the now real child of God; and

Whereas, There are some among us who hold that there is some kind of change of quality or condition produced on the flesh in regeneration;
We, Harmony Church of Christ, believing the above-named things to be heresy, do therefore solemnly declare that we have no fellowship for said heresy; and hence, have no fellowship for its advocates, and will not affiliate with them.

Done by order of the church while in conference February 28, 1914. ELDER R. V SARRELS, Mod.

H. H. WARREN, Church Clerk.

The above resolution shows for itself what has been advocated by some who are charging that others are advocating what they call the "whole man" doctrine. In the first place, this resolution denies that it is the sinful principle in man that is opposed to God and holiness, and sets forth the idea that it is the material body, the body of flesh in the abstract sense, that is opposed to God and holiness. We know that Old Baptists have always contended that it is the sinful life or nature which man possesses that is opposed to God and holiness, and that this is the teaching of the apostle in (Galatians 5:17). In that text the apostle says, "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." The apostle could not have meant in this that the material body, the mere lump of flesh, "lusteth against the Spirit." There could not possibly be any such thing as lust in the flesh, the material body, in the absence of life. Hence, he must have meant that the natural life, which the man possesses, lusts against the Spirit. Or, in other words, he meant that the old, sinful, depraved nature we possess lusts against the Spirit. In verses 15 and 16 he says, "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another. This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh." If the apostle had reference to the material body when he used the term flesh in verse 17, then he must have had reference to biting and devouring done by the material body or mouth in verse 15. Do you suppose the apostle had reference to such biting as men do sometimes when they are mad and engaging in a "fisticuff" fight? He certainly did not have reference to that. It is evident, then, that the expression he used as to biting and devouring one another is a figurative expression, meaning that by wrong talking and wrong acting their love and fellowship is destroyed, and their happiness is marred. This being true, it must also be true that the term flesh in verse 17 does not have reference to the material body but to the sinful life or nature which we possess. The child of God has two natures. So this text teaches. Old Baptists have always said that this text teaches that the child of God has two natures-one sinful and corrupt, and the other holy and divine. The sinful and corrupt nature is received in the natural birth, and the divine nature is received in the new birth, or in regeneration. In regeneration it is the man, the sinner of Adam's race, that receives the divine nature. That divine nature is implanted in the soul or spirit of the man by the direct and immediate operation of the Holy Spirit, and the man then possesses two natures-the sinful nature and the divine nature. These two natures are opposite to each other. They spring from opposite sources. They are contrary to each other.

The child of God would live a perfectly holy and sinless life. This is the desire of every child of God. Have you not that desire? Though this be your desire- though you would do that-yet you cannot, because you still have the same old sinful nature which you have always had since your natural birth, and which you will have as long as you stay in this world. Here is where the warfare within springs from. It is from the fact that you have these two natures which are contrary to each other, and which come from sources that are contrary to each other. If this has not always been Old Baptist teaching, we confess that we have never known what the Old Baptist doctrine is. But we have been trying to preach this for a little more than twenty-six years, and we never heard of that doctrine being objected to by one claiming to be an Old Baptist until we received the above declaration of non-fellowship.

Now, we confess that we have kept this thing quiet, hoping those brethren in Texas would get their troubles settled, and that it would not come to Tennessee, We confess that we should have raised the curtain sooner, perhaps, and showed the brethren what we had behind it, but if we erred in not doing so, we trust we erred on the side of charity. But the curtain is up now, and you can look upon the scene in the first act. Look at that beautiful, wonderful, inspired declaration of non-fellowship! Is it not a beautiful thing?

According to that declaration, it is down-right heresy to say that the body "is an essential constituent or part of the now real child of God." There you are! If the body is no part of the now real child of God, then real children of God are spirits only, and the bodies are children of wrath, or children of the devil, as you may be pleased to term it. Then if the spirit only is the child of God, and the body is no part of the child of God, then the child of God lives in the Adam man, or in the child of wrath, until the Adam man dies; and the Adam man dies and goes to the grave a child of wrath. If he is raised in the last day, he will be raised a child of wrath, or else he will be changed some time between death and the resurrection. And again: If he goes to the grave a child of wrath, an unjust character, and if all persons go to the grave that way, then there would be no such thing as a resurrection of the just-for there would be no just to be resurrected. And if the resurrection is regeneration, then all who are resurrected at the last day would be regenerated. If all who are resurrected at the last day are not regenerated, then the resurrection is not regeneration.

Again: If the body is no part of the now real child of God, then no part of the child of God goes to the grave, unless the soul or spirit goes there. But the soul or spirit does not go to the grave; therefore, no part of the child of God goes to the grave, if the body is no part of the child of God. If this is true, then, that the body is no part of the child of God, then there is no resurrection at the last day for the children of God, for none of them would go to the grave. Let us frame the argument another way:

1st. The body, which is no part of the child of God, goes to the grave. -Sarrels.

2nd. The soul or spirit does not go to the grave.

3rd. Therefore, no part of the child of God goes to the grave.

This would be the inevitable conclusion of the position that the body is no part of the child of God. Now let us have another argument showing the truth of the matter:

1st. The body, which is the mortal part of the child of God, goes to the grave.

2nd. The soul or spirit does not go to the grave.

3rd. Therefore, the mortal part of the child of God goes to the grave, but the immortal part does not.

At the resurrection the body of the child of God will be raised and made immortal, made spiritual, and glorified. It is the body of the child of God which is thus raised at the last day; and, therefore, the body is a part of the child of God.

A denial that the body is a part of the child of God is eternal Two-Seedism. That is precisely what the eternal Two-Seeders would say. If we have to say that the body is no part of the child of God in order to be an Old Baptist, we have never been

one. But we do not have to say that in order to be an Old Baptist, for the Old Baptists have never believed any such heresy.

With this we drop the curtain, closing scene one of act one. We will raise the curtain again soon, and show you another scene from what we have hid behind the curtain. We hope to be plain and candid, and we hope that we may be able to write in the proper spirit.

C.H.C.

Elder J. B. Little

---September 12, 1916

Some of our readers will remember that some time ago we made a statement in this paper that Elder J. B. Little, of Abbott, Ark., is in disorder, and that we had been informed that associational rule was not a matter in dispute in that section. Since that time Elder Little's party gained the church property in a suit in the courts of the state. We do not know who is in the wrong mainly, but it is usually the case that there is wrong on both sides. The association recognized the party who is with Elder Barton. We make this statement in justice to all parties, as we see it. It seems in the briefs prepared for the Supreme Court there was some little dispute between the parties as to the authority of associations. It seems that some brethren who have examined the briefs think that Elder Little and his party are in the right. They may be. We do not know, and we do not care to have anything more to do with the matter as it stands now. C. H. C.

Curtain Raised Again

---October 3, 1916

Since our issue of Sept. 5, in which appeared our article under the heading, "The Curtain Raised," we have received the following letter from Elder R. V Sarrels, of Texas, whose name was signed to the declaration of non-fellowship as moderator of the church which passed the said declaration:

Anson, Texas, 9-21-16.

DEAR BRO. CAYCE:

Today I read your article, "The Curtain Raised," and I was simply shocked to know that you would publish that Resolution as now being on record as a permanent expression of the faith of my church and me. I wrote you Oct. 12-14 and renounced that 2nd statement of the resolution and told you that my church was going to do the same thing the next meeting. At the very next meeting she officially revoked the 2nd part of that resolution. I am not simple enough to try to score you, but unless you have a letter at Temple promising positively to clear up that false impression that you have made I am going to expose you in the debate and in every Primitive Baptist periodical that will permit me the use of their columns. And also I aim to make it known to each of your Associate Editors. -

If you write me at Temple, Texas, send it in care of G. M. Halbert. In hope,
R. V SARRELS.

P.S: We are going to raise the curtain "Higher."

As the above letter refers to a letter which Elder Sarrels wrote us dated Oct. 12, 1914, we give that letter below, just as it was written:

Anson, Texas, Oct. 12, 1914.

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

I have just received a letter from Elder S. N. Redford and he has inclosed a letter that you have written to him. I am glad that it has been sent on to me. I note in this letter that you have refused to publish some resolutions which have been adopted by my home church. Now I tell you that I am glad that you have not published them. While I think that in the explanation you will find that there is enough said to convince one what was intended by my brethren. We surely do not want to do anything that is wrong in the sight of God and in the light of His truth. When those resolutions were adopted there was a crudeness about the heresy that they were meant to oppose, and as a result there was a crudeness about the statement against the heresy. My church aims to change to matter and state in words more definite the real issue.

When Elder Downing began to claim what he does in regard to the work of God in Regeneration he was not very clear in making us see just what he believed and as a result we were thrown in a cramp in stating the matter just as it ought to be stated. But there was one thing that we all realized about the matter and that was that he was contending that Regeneration does something for a man in his entirety. This my brethren did not believe, and they were forced to take some kind of a stand against it. You saw what we had to say in regard to the matter. Now since that time we have been able to get him to say just what he does believe on this subject and we are going to change what we have done in that particular complaint and put it just as he has said it. He made use of the following statement when he was being questioned about the matter: "I believe that in Regeneration man is made a real child of God through and through, soul, spirit, and body, just like the Holiness believe that a man is sanctified allover." This I do not believe and neither do my brethren believe this and they are not going to live with it in the church. This very idea is what we were making our complaint against and I want to say now that if you believe this they surely declared against you.

Now brother Cayce, Elder Downing wrote to you and you immediately made a reply favorably to his position. I wrote to you and you did not answer me. I wrote to you again and you have not noticed me. I wrote to several other of the Eastern brethren at the same time and they have all answered me, and have done so favorably to what I have been contending for. I have often wondered why you did not answer me! Are you afraid to take a stand on the matter? If not, I should certainly be pleased to know why you have remained silent on the matter. You certainly would have done me a favor by writing to me and telling me what you thought about the matter.

1st: The Scriptures teach that in Regeneration man is made a real child of God in soul, or spirit, only.

R. V SARRELS Affirms.

J. S. NEWMAN Denies.

2nd: The Scriptures teach that in Regeneration man is made a real child of God in soul, spirit and body.

R. V SARRELS Denies.

J. S. NEWMAN Affirms.

There is one thing that is certain; we must accept one or the other of the above propositions, or we must accept nothing. There is no middle ground in this matter. I am made to wonder which one you are going to take! I have tried to get those who have challenged my position to sign the second proposition and we shall discuss the matter. No man has done so. I wonder why! Will you sign the second statement? If not, then you are forced to acknowledge the truthfulness of the first one, or else you do not believe anything about Regeneration. Elder Newman has made his brags about what he is willing to do, and yet when he is brought square to the point he will never do anything. He is simply aware of the weakness of the second statement.

I have never meant to claim that the body is no part of a child of God. I Believe that man is made a real child of God: but the body is part of the man, therefore the body is part of the child of God. I have ever preached that man is the subject of God's salvation, and that it is man who is made a child of God by Regeneration. But I notice in your letter to elder Redford that you believe that "The Scriptures abundantly teach that a man is a being composed of soul, body, and spirit; and the Saviour says: 'Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God.' The man who is composed of soul, body, and spirit must be born again and the one who is born is a child of God." Now, is a man born again in soul, spirit, and body? If not, and if it takes Regeneration to make one a child of God, will you please explain just how this man is a real child of God to a greater extent than he is born of God? Now, brother Cayce, you or no other man on this globe can show this matter up in any sense. I have been grossly misrepresented in regard to what has been advocated here on the subject of Regeneration. Some of you eastern brethren have sat over there with one side of the matter in your hands and rendered a verdict. You must know that you have some power but we Texas people have sense enough to attend to some things. We appreciate your proffered service in regard to the councils here in Texas but wish to tell you that we have a way of doing things here and if you are not willing to put up with it you have my permission to withdraw.

I am sending you one of my pamphlets on Regeneration, and when you have read it I do really want you to tell me what you think about it. I want you to notice that I stress the point that it is man who is the subject of salvation, and that something that is foreign to man is not that that is saved. I want you to notice that I claim that man is saved or born again in soul, or spirit, and that since it takes Regeneration to make a real child of God, this man is by Regeneration a child of God just like he is regenerated. Will you deny this? It is not given to me to say what part of Paul was a child of God, for I verily believe that this idea that the spirit is the child of God is wrong, but we do certainly have a right to tell just how Paul was a child of God. I believe that man is born again now in his spirit, or soul, and it is very easy for me to see that this man is a real child of God just like he is born again. Man is now born again in part; man is now a real child of God in part.

Now, there is one thing that we Texas Baptists want you to know, and that is that we are ever ready to defend, in any right way, what we believe, with you or any other living man on this globe. Please remember this, and know that we should be glad to have some of these fellows who are doing so much talking about what the Bible teaches to come up to the real issue and prove what God does for a man in The work of Regeneration. We are going to sit down in the halls of justice and judgment and wait for some man to quit "skimming in top-water" and get right into the life core of this matter and render a satisfactory explanation of his position. We simply want the matter explained. And until you or some one else does this we are going to continue to preach that God works on the inward parts of a man and that as a result of this work this man is saved in his inward parts that the very same work that is done for the soul in the new birth will be done for the body in the resurrection; that this dual person is the subject of gospel address; that there is something about each child of God that will lead him away from the fold of God, and that this something is the unrenewed part of this man. I am yours in hope, R. V SARRELS.

We received a letter from Elder Sarrels before we received the above, and it may not be amiss to let our readers have the benefit of that letter also. Here it is, dated April 25, 1914:

Anson, Texas, April 25, 1914.

DEAR BRO.:

Feeling that you are a man of mature judgment I have a desire to submit to you a few questions, Your honest opinion is what I want. Your expression of belief on the following point has been made public property in our vicinity. I feel that the question has been put to in a general sense only: There is a disturbance among some in my immediate country over a point of doctrine, and the question concerns a fundamental truth in its last analysis; Will you please help us by noticing and replying to the following:

From some remarks found in a letter from several of the brethren I am sure that some of you have been asked whether it is incorrect to say that the body is no part of the child of God; I am sorry that things have been said that have forced a strict analysis of this thing, but we are driven to state the matter in a way that will stand a rigorous test. I do not deny, but grant, that man as a complex being is scripturally addressed as a child of God; I do not deny, but believe, that the body is an essential constituent of the being that is now born of God in spirit; But I give verbatim a statement that is causing us trouble: "I believe that in Regeneration a man, is made a child of God through and through, soul, body, and spirit," Do you believe this statement? If not, how would you meet it? Dear brother, I want to know and defend the truth of God: I believe that the sinful body is not in Christ. It is not regenerated, and hence is not the new creature. It is an essential constituent of the being whose regenerated spirit is the new creature, but the body is not the new creature. The renewed soul and the sinful body are ONE in constituting the human being, man; but they are not ONE in constituting a spiritual entity. The sinful body is not reckoned as being equal to or consistent with the renewed spirit, but as being Opposed to it. The body is not in the new birth brought into the holy family of God, and hence is not in the STRICT sense of the term a child of God. The question that concerns us here is, not what beauty and perfection an omniscient God can see in the glorified bodies of His saints, but what the real condition of the body is now. Before Regeneration no part of the man is a real child of God. In regeneration the spirit of the man is made a spiritually existing, holy subject of the eternal kingdom of God. But this is just what the body is not made. Whatever the new birth does for the spirit, this is just what is not yet done for the body. I believe that man as a complex being is a subject of gospel address. To him are given the holy commandments, and by him are they kept or violated. But I do not believe that this complex being is a spiritual entity. The spirit of this complex being is a spiritual entity, but the spirit and body taken together do not now compose a spiritual entity.

I am a man only twenty-four years old and have been trying to preach for the Old Baptist for a little over seven years. I wish to know the truth and how to defend it. If I am right on the point of doctrine herein considered, please tell me so and advise me how better to defend it. If I am defending an unholy cause, please be faithful with me and tell me so, giving reasons for your objections.

I remain an unworthy brother interested in a suffering cause.

R.V SARRELS

P. S. No one in my knowledge has ever used such an unguarded expression as to say the body is no part of a child of God.

R.V.S.

May I have an immediate reply?

Now we wish to call attention to some statements in the above letters, and especial attention to the fact that the declaration of non-fellowship published in our issue of Sept. 5th was dated in February, 1914. Now, notice this statement in the postscript of the above letter dated April 25, 1914: "No one in my knowledge has ever used such an unguarded expression as to say the body is no part of a child of God." In April, 1914, Elder Sarrels says no one in his knowledge has ever used such an unguarded expression as to say that the body is no part of a child of God; but in February, 1914, Elder Sarrels' name appeared signed to a declaration of non-fellowship for the idea that the body is a part of the child of God. The resolution declares that it is heresy to say that the body is a part of the child of God, and Elder Sarrels' name was signed to it as moderator of the church, but two months after said resolution was passed, Elder Sarrels had no knowledge of it. Then in October, 1914, he had knowledge of it! If that is not getting things somewhat twisted we confess that we do not know how statements could be twisted.

Just here let us call attention to the fact that Elder Sarrels says that man as a complex being is a subject of gospel address, and that the commandments are given to him, and that by him they are kept or violated. We will have use for this before this series of articles are finished.

Now, we wish to call attention to the statement in the first letter above, dated Sept. 21, 1916, that he wrote us Oct. 12, 1914, and renounced the second statement in the resolution, etc. Compare this with the statement made in the letter of April 25, 1914, that no one had said such a thing. Now, let us have the statement made in the letter of Oct. 12, 1914: "When those resolutions were adopted there was a crudeness about the heresy that they were meant to oppose, and as a result there was a crudeness about the statement against the heresy. My church aims to change to matter and state in words more definite the real issue." This is a plain and simple admission that they did not know what they were declaring non-fellowship for. He further says: "He was not very clear in making us see just what he believed," etc. This is an admission that they did not know just what Elder Downing believed, but they declared non-fellowship for it any way! If they did not know just what he believed, how could they know that he believed a heresy? It appears, though, that according to the best understanding they had as to what Elder Downing was teaching, he was advocating the idea that in regeneration the man, the sinner of Adam's race, was made a child of God. Evidently his idea was that the body is the mortal part of the child of God. But this is what Elder Sarrels declares non-fellowship for. This is according to his own admission in the above letters, and what the resolution was, no matter how he may try to explain it away. It will not be explained away.

He says they all realized that Elder Downing was contending that regeneration does something for a man in his "intirety." We suppose he meant entirety. If we grant that this was what they meant to declare non-fellowship for, then we must conclude that they do not believe a single thing is done for the body in regeneration. If they do not believe that, then they believe that not a single thing is done for the body in regeneration. If they believe that, and if they believe the truth, then the man does not receive a single thing in regeneration that yields a better influence over the body.

Again, he says: "I believe that the sinful body is not in Christ." If the body is not in Christ, in any sense, then in death the body is not asleep in Christ. If the soul or spirit does not sleep in Jesus, then nothing sleeps in Him, if the body is not in Him.

It is the MAN that is in Christ after regeneration, or else inspiration is a lie, for the apostle said, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." As it is the MAN that is in Christ, and the body is a part of the man, then the body is a part of the MAN that is in Christ. The body, then, is the mortal part of the child of God, and sleeps in Jesus. So far as we are able to see, Elder Sarrels and those who are with him had as well deny the resurrection and be done with it.

Again, he says, of the body, that it "is not in the strict sense of the term a child of God." Then, we suppose the body is a child of wrath, and the regenerated spirit in the body is a child of God. According to this notion the child of God dwells in the child of wrath until the child of wrath dies, and then the child of God goes to heaven, and the child of wrath goes to the grave. This denies any resurrection from the grave, for a child of God, for it is not a child of God, but a child of wrath, that is in the grave. If there is any resurrection of the body at all, according to this notion, it is a universal resurrection to condemnation, for the child of wrath will be resurrected to condemnation.

Poor Sarrels! This young "smart Alex" is wise above what is written. That is what is the matter with the Old Baptists—they have some young preachers who are too smart. They have learned more than is written, and more than our fathers knew. And they have some preachers who have not been made better by regeneration, and who claim that they love sin as well as they ever did.

We have some letters from Elder John M. Thompson which we will publish soon, in which he denies that regeneration makes a man better. We will publish his letters so our readers can see for themselves what he says. We want no man to preach in our churches who is not made better by regeneration.

We now drop the curtain, and let you think a while on the second scene. We will raise it again soon, and may raise it higher if it is necessary. C. H. C.

CURTAIN RAISED AGAIN

---October 10, 1916

We promised last week that we would give some letters from Elder J. M. Thompson soon, and we do that this week. In our issue of Nov. 16, 1915, we published our views on regeneration, and stated that we would not publish more on that question, hoping the brethren would drop the matter and not continue the unholy war. Elder John M. Thompson evidently did not endorse our article, so he wrote us the following letter on Jan. 18th, 1916:

-Tipton, Ind., 1-18-16.

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:-

Dear Brother-In sorrow I write you owing to the strange position you have taken on the vital subject of regeneration. Regeneration is one of the essentials in the eternal salvation of sinners, on which there should be agreement.

Regeneration implies previous generation. When God generated man He produced an entity, a natural being. Created, {(Genesis 1:27)} is from bara. "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground," etc.-(Genesis 2:7). Formed is from yatsar. - He formed man of dust, which He had previously created. That is he formed man in body of dust He had previously created-natural dust formed into a natural body. The body, or the man in body, that was formed of dust returns to dust. This is not true of man in his entirety. The regenerated man departs from the body, which returns to dust, and is with Christ, (Philippians 1:23). Created (bara) man in his own image does not mean that he formed (yatsar) man of the dust of the ground.

Therefore man, in the Bible, is spoken of as complex, consisting of parts. God says, I will put my law in their inward parts. Paul says, For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? "Save the spirit of man" in this passage signifies that the spirit of man is a than. "What man save the spirit of man." Jesus promised that if a man believed in him he should never die. This can not mean the body, for it does die. Then it is evident that there is an inward man that believes that does not die when the body dies.

In your article on regeneration, P. B., p.p. 5,9,10, Nov. 1915, you say regeneration is a spiritual work by the Spirit of God upon the spirit of man; that in that work the sinner is formed anew in his soul, or spirit, or heart; that the body is not formed anew in regeneration, but that it will be formed anew, will be made spiritual, in the resurrection; and you quote as your belief: "The apostles' doctrine teaches that it is the man that is dead in sin that is quickened...that is made a child and fellow citizen." In this I understand you to teach, that in regeneration the spirit of man is formed anew, is made spiritual, but the body is not, but that it will be formed anew in regeneration (we suppose he means to say in the resurrection.-C. H. C.), will then be made spiritual; that man in spirit is quickened in regeneration, is made a child of God. Yet, strange indeed, you say, that the work of regeneration does not take the old nature away, but gives him another nature. This you say of that that is regenerated-the spirit. But Paul says that old things have passed away and all have become new with the new creature (man) in Christ. You say that the generation of vipers were not good because their hearts were not made good; that God makes the heart good, which makes the man a good man. According to your former position and what follows you taught that it was not the body that was made good, formed anew, made spiritual, -but the spirit, or soul, or heart; that it gives him (the man that is formed anew, made spiritual) a new nature. You say the work of regeneration is an inward work; that he (the man) has been made a child of God by the operation of the Holy Spirit in his heart or soul. You also say that in the resurrection the body will be made spiritual, immortal and incorruptible; that then the entire man will be made pure, holy, sinless, and be in the perfect image of Christ. This may by some be construed to mean that the entire man, body, soul, and spirit, will be made pure, holy, sinless, in the perfect image of Christ in the resurrection, at the last day. But I construe your statements to mean that the body only, in the resurrection, will be made pure, holy, sinless, spiritual, in the perfect image of Christ, for you further say of the resurrection of the body, this is what is done for it. I understand you to teach that man, except his body, is formed anew, made pure, holy, sinless, in the perfect image of Christ, in regeneration by the Holy Spirit of God, and that regeneration is instantaneous when the man in spirit or soul is quickened, is made a child of God. Amos I correct?

You teach that the evil man is made good by the Lord making his heart good. Then you say, "If that does not make a man a better man, we confess that we do not know what would make him better." Primitive Baptists have held and do hold that alien sinners are totally depraved, not good. If not good naturally, by nature the children of wrath-Paul-morally depraved, how is it possible that regeneration can or does make them better? Man prior to regeneration is a good man if regeneration makes him a better man-good, better, best. He has to be good before he can be made better. So the Newman-Collings contention cannot be true.

As to the two natures in regenerated people, Paul locates the bad nature in the body, but never in the regenerated soul, spirit, or heart. I cannot conceive that it is possible for a man in spirit, soul, or heart to possess a vile-nature according to your presentation of the great change in regeneration in soul, spirit, heart.

You inform us that communications arguing regeneration will go into the fire. Strange! Truth relative to regeneration cannot be argued and error exposed! A fundamental tenet of our faith suppressed! thus it appears to me. I feel constrained to request that my name be discontinued and your paper to me be discontinued. -

I am for principle regardless of financial consideration. The Lord bless truth and faithfulness. J. M. Thompson

The above letter came as somewhat of a surprise to us. We were surprised at some statements it contained. We had neither time nor inclination to discuss these matters by private letter, and we had no desire to have the matter discussed through our columns. If we were to take up a discussion of these matters with every brother who writes us, we would have to employ one or two special stenographers, and then have no time to devote to anything else. We simply cannot discuss every matter of difference in private correspondence, and it is folly to think of doing such a thing. We sent the following letter to Brother Thompson in reply:

Feb. 19, 1916.

ELDER JOHN M. THOMPSON:

Dear Brother-I am very much surprised at the tone and contents of your letter of Jan. 18th.

According to your statement and argument a good man is no better than a bad man; a good tree is no better than a bad tree; and if a thing that is bad cannot be made better, then the soul or spirit of the unregenerate must be good, or else they are not made good in regeneration, and are, therefore, still bad. I am utterly surprised that you would take such a position. My brother, please do not think me presumptuous or impertinent when I tell you that you know too much about language to make such an argument, or to take such a position. I am sorry to see that you would do this.

Now, I wish to say that I do not care to discuss the matter further. I have said my say in the paper, and there is no room for misunderstanding. You and others may read things into the article which I did not say, but I am not responsible for that. I have no more to say concerning the matter.

I have today had your name taken off the editorial staff, and also had your name dropped from the mailing list, as you requested.

I hold no ill feeling nor malice toward you. I trust that after you have carefully considered the matter you will feel differently to the way you manifested in your letter. Yours in sorrow,
C. H. CAYCE.

In reply to this letter Brother Thompson wrote us as follows:

ELDER C. H. CAYCE: Martin, Tenn.-

In as much as you impertinently charge me with insincerity, with making a false statement, and misrepresent me, I do not consider it proper that I address you as I would otherwise have done.

In language good is positive, better is Comparative, and best is superlative. Bad is positive, worse is comparative, and worst is superlative. An alien sinner is a bad man in soul. Regeneration makes him good or righteous in soul, but it does not make him better in soul. He would have to be good in soul before regeneration for regeneration to make him better in soul. If you understand grammatical comparison of adjectives you know I am right in this. You surprise me in your opposing note.

You can exercise your pleasure concerning any further say. I am confident I am correct, and am willing to submit the question to any unprejudiced scholar. If you see your error and scripturally confess it will correct your unjust offense. J. M. Thompson.

P. S. If a thing that is black can be made whiter (which is impossible) then it might reasonably be said that a bad man morally can be made a better man morally. A thing has to be white before it can be made whiter, even so a man has to be a good man morally before he can be made a better man morally. When a thing is black it may be made to be white, but not whiter, even so a bad man morally may be made to be a good man morally, but not to be a better man morally.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS COPIED

In or about the first part of the year 1913 Elder J. L. Collings, of Glen Rose, Texas, sent out a list of questions, which we suppose was sent to quite a number of brethren. A copy of them was sent to Elder John M. Thompson, and he replied under date of May 21, 1913. We have before us a copy of the questions and a copy of his reply. We give the questions and his answers as follows:

Q. Do you believe that regeneration makes a man better morally?

A. I do not believe that regeneration makes a man better morally. I believe it causes a man to think, desire and do better morally. It makes him better in soul morally but not in act. It enables him to do better morally. "Makes" is too strong here as pertains to his actions morally.

Q. What according to the Scriptures is the child of God?

A. The inner man in regeneration is the child of God; God is the Father of spirits. - Paul.

Q. To whom are the Scriptures addressed-to the inner man or the child of God as a complex being?

A. The Scriptures are addressed to the regenerate soul, -not to the body, which is only natural, without spiritual discernment.

Q. Do the righteous acts of men make them better at heart, or are the righteous acts fruits of the righteous heart?

A. Righteous works are fruits of the righteous heart. They do not make men better at heart.

Q. Does a Christian obey because he is better in heart, or does he obey to become better in heart and soul by God's grace?

A. A Christian obeys because he is better in heart. God's grace makes them better in heart.

Q. Does grace in the heart make men better or worse, or does it change him at all?

A. Grace in the heart makes men better in heart. The change is in the inner man. Grace does not force obedience: "Let us come boldly unto a throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."- {(Hebrews 4:16)} not to force.

Q. I believe the sinner is passive in regeneration but active in obedience. Do you?

A. I do believe the sinner is passive in regeneration.

Q. Do you believe that Paul persecuted the church of God after regeneration, either in whole or part?

A. I do not believe Paul persecuted the church after regeneration, if regenerated on his way to Damascus.

Q. Is it the whole man doctrine to say that regeneration makes an immoral man better morally?

A. The whole man doctrine as I understand its advocates, is, that the body as well as the inner man, is born of the spirit, - born again; and not to say that regeneration makes a man better morally. Both statements are wrong. Regeneration causes men to do better morally, but does not make him do better, does not force him to do better.

Q. Is it the whole man doctrine that in regeneration the man, in body, soul, and spirit, is made spiritual, sinless, and pure?

A. It may be, and it may not be the whole man doctrine that in regeneration man is made spiritual, sinless and pure; some may teach that way, and others to the contrary. The contention in Texas is wrong. "Make" is too strong in the use some make of it.

The above answers were signed by Elder John M. Thompson. From these answers it appears that, according to Elder Thompson, regeneration made a man better in soul in 1913; but from his letters it appears that regeneration does not make a man better in soul now. Since he boasts of his scholarship (so it appears to us; we do not mean this as an insinuation), we wonder what institution of learning he has graduated from during the past three years. Any how, his answers to those questions and his letters show a change. We wonder whether that change was wrought in the "inner man"-that is, in his soul or spirit-or was it in his material body of flesh? Evidently there has been a change with him. We wonder if that change was wrought by the direct and immediate operation of the Spirit of God upon the inner man. Perhaps it was just the inner man that has been changed, and not Elder Thompson at all. If that is the way of it, we humbly beg Elder Thompson's pardon for even thinking such a thing as that he has changed; and we humbly beg the pardon of that inner man in him for charging what he had done to Elder Thompson. Of course, if the inner man is made as pure and sinless in regeneration as God is, and the inner man in Elder Thompson has been regenerated, then the inner man in Elder Thompson never does wrong or makes a mistake. - And if that inner man never does wrong nor makes a mistake, and if that inner man wrote those answers, - then they were correct when written. And if that be true, then in 1913 regeneration did make men better in soul, but it does not make them better now. So, according to this, regeneration did something for men then that it does not do now. We wonder why it does not do as much for them now as it did then. Perhaps that infallible inner man can tell us. If he can, we would be glad for him to do so. But perhaps that inner man did not write both, the answers and the letters. If not, we wonder which or what part of the writing Elder Thompson did himself. It is really Elder Thompson we would like to reply to. We do not know how to preach or write to spirits.

Elder Thompson does not wish to call us brother. Very well. Our letter to him was intended to have been written in the very best of feeling, and we told the truth when we said we had no ill feeling toward him. The reader can judge for himself as to whether we misrepresented him or not. Now, this was not Elder Thompson that does not wish to call us brother. It was Elder Thompson's regenerated spirit saying this to our flesh; and as his regenerated spirit is the child of God, and as our flesh or 'body is no part of a child of God," of course we are not brothers. He was not saying this to our spirit, of course. Perhaps Elder Thompson would admit that our spirit is a child of God, and perhaps he would not.

But Elder Thompson says that the "spirit of man" in (I Corinthians 2:11) signifies that the spirit of man is a man. This is another new thing to us. We never knew before that the spirit of man was a man. According to this, there is a man in a man, and the man in the man is regenerated. The man who has the man in him is not regenerated. It is the Adam sinner, then, who has the regenerated man in him, and the Adam sinner is left out of the matter entirely, only as he is tormented and worried and crossed with and by the child of God that is in him- for awhile. This is evidently Elder Thompson's view of the matter, for he says that the regenerated man departs from the body. As the regenerated man departs from the body, then the body is no part of the regenerated man. This simply leaves Adam sinners out, and they are not regenerated at all. So far as we are concerned, if it is not us, it makes no difference to us if it should be a mule. But in (Philippians 1:21-26) the apostle is teaching no such thing as that the regenerated man departs from the unregenerated man; but he is teaching that there is a better life for him beyond this vale of tears, and that he had a desire to depart this mode of existence, and to be present with the Lord. - There is nothing in the apostle's language that even intimates that the body is no part of the child of God, or that there was a child of God dwelling in him, and that he was not a child of God. Instead of such an idea being conveyed by the apostle, the idea is very clearly embraced that Paul himself was a child of God, and that he would be given to dwell with Christ on that very account.

It is true, and the Scriptures abundantly so teach, that the spirit or soul does not die when the body dies. When the body dies the spirit goes to God. The body dies because it is mortal, and on account of sin; but it is the mortal part of the child of God.

The Saviour said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."-(John 3:3). To Nicodemus He said, "Ye must be born again."-(John 3:7). He was not talking to a spirit when He said this, but He was talking to a MAN. In this new birth the Spirit of God operates on the spirit of man, and that operation of the Spirit makes the MAN a child of God. It does not make the body of the man spiritual; but it does make the man a child of God, and that child of God has a mortal body. We know that the Scriptures teach this, no matter what we may think about it, and no matter how mysterious it may appear to us. There are mysteries about this thing that no man on earth can explain, and all this effort to explain an inexplainable thing only serves to mystify the matter all the more. And that is what causes the trouble among the Old Baptists, too.

Again, we know that the MAN is made partaker of the divine nature. See (II Peter 1:3-4). Peter was talking, or writing, to men and women when he used the language recorded in the place referred to. Turn and read it. Those men and women had been made partakers of the divine nature, and they still had the same old sinful nature, which they had before regeneration. As they still had that sinful nature, which they were liable to follow, the exhortation was necessary which the apostle gives in the verses which follow.

But Elder Thompson claims now that regeneration makes a bad man a good man in soul, but does not make him a better man in soul, and he also claims that in regeneration the soul or spirit is made pure and sinless. If regeneration makes the soul pure and sinless, we do not see how it could be made any better, unless it can be made better than pure and sinless. If regeneration makes the soul or spirit good, and it cannot be made better than pure and sinless, then we do not see how the soul or spirit of the child of God could be made any better. So it seems that, according to Elder Thompson's contention, the soul or spirit is not simply made good in regeneration, but it is made as good as the best! If the soul or spirit is made as pure and sinless in regeneration as God is, and is made good, as Elder Thompson claims, and can then be made better, as he says, then God can be made better, too.

We know that good is positive, better is comparative, and best is superlative. When two good things are compared to each other, we know that one would be called good and the other called better. We also know that when three good things are compared to each other, we would say that one is good, another is better, and another is best. But suppose we had four articles of a kind, and not one of them bad, and no two of them exactly alike-then what? Would we say that one is good, another is better, and another is best, and another is-what? Nothing? Where are you now? Oh, grammar! Grammar! GRAMMAR! Now, you see what you have done with your wonderful knowledge of grammar! We know that the grammatical comparison of adjectives is simply a comparison of objects, one with another. An adjective is a descriptive word. It simply describes the object. An object may be described as being bad, and another object may be called worse, in comparison with that object. An object may be described as being black, and another may be described as being blacker, in comparison with that one. The object described as being black is not so black as the one described as being blacker in the comparison; but, according to Elder Thompson's statement, it is no whiter than the object which is blacker, for he says that a thing must be white before it can be whiter. Strange logic, indeed.

Again, according to his contention, a good man in soul is no better than a bad man in soul. If a thing has to be made good before it can be made better, then a good thing is no better than a bad thing. We have always thought that a good thing was better than a bad thing, and we confess that we think so yet. But Elder Thompson says that he is willing to leave it to any unprejudiced scholar. Perhaps he could not find One that is unprejudiced. If a scholar should say he is wrong, of course he would be prejudiced. If Elder Thompson is right in his contention, then a sound apple is no better than a rotten one; sound meat is no better than tainted meat. Suppose some of the good sisters try him by putting a dish of tainted meat on the table for him and ask him if it is good meat. Of course he would say it is not good. Then put a dish of good meat on the table before him--meat that is sound--and ask him if that is not better meat. Any sane person knows that he would say it is better.

Perhaps it would not be amiss to give Webster's definition of a word right here. According to Webster's International Dictionary, published by G. & C. Merriam Company in 1915, to regenerate is "To cause to be spiritually born again; to subject to regeneration. Hence, to make a radical change for the better in; to reform completely." This being true, it follows that the regeneration of the sinner makes a radical change for the better in the sinner. Hence, regeneration makes men and women better. To deny this is simply to deny the meaning of words, as well as to deny the teaching of the Scriptures. The word regeneration in (Titus 3:5), in the original, means "rebirth, reproduction, renewal, re-creation; * * * hence, moral renovation, regeneration, the production of a new life consecrated to God, a radical change of mind for the better."-Thayer's New Testament Lexicon. This is Thayer's definition of the Greek word translated regeneration in (Titus 3:5), and Webster says that to "regenerate is to make a radical change for the better in." It is, therefore, true that regeneration makes men and women better. We would not want a man to preach in our church who is not made better by regeneration, for we would not think regeneration had done anything for him if it had not made him better. We have always thought that the grace of God in the heart made men and women better, and we have been trying to preach it that way for a little more than twenty-six years, and no one professing to be an Old Baptist ever objected to it until this new theory now being advocated was invented, or brought into our ranks.

Elder Thompson says that “the Scriptures are addressed to the regenerated soul- not to the body, which is only natural, without spiritual discernment.” The commandments, admonitions, and exhortations, then, are all given to the soul or spirit in the man, and not to the man himself. And the regenerated soul or spirit is pure and holy and cannot sin, and therefore cannot disobey. And the body is still a child of wrath, still dead in sin, like the unregenerate sinner, and cannot obey, and is not even required to obey. No commandment is given in which it is embraced.

((6) (James 5:16) says, “Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed.” We wonder what was the matter with them. Remember that Elder Thompson says the Scriptures are addressed to the regenerate soul, and the regenerate soul is as pure and sinless as God is; yet they needed a healing of some kind. Do you not wonder what was the matter with these pure and holy and sinless spirits? And again, can anything that is pure and sinless as God is have any fault? If so, then God may have some faults. But God is without fault; and anything that is pure and sinless is without fault. Then the regenerated soul has no faults to confess. The regenerated soul, then, could not obey this command; and the body could not obey it, for it has no spiritual discernment, so Elder Thompson says. Others say it is still dead in sin, just like the alien sinner, and cannot obey. Pray, then, who could obey this command? The spirit could not, for it has no faults to confess; and the body could not obey it, for it is still dead in sin like the alien sinner; besides, it is not required to obey it, for Elder Thompson says the Scriptures are addressed to the spirit.

Elder Thompson says that the spirit is the child of God, for God is the Father of spirits. So is God the Father of all men, in the sense of creation. He is the Creator of all men. If He is the Father of spirits in the sense of begetting them, or in the sense that is contained in Elder Thompson's contention, then the unregenerate sinners have no spirits. If they have no soul or spirit, then when they die they “die all over,” and there is no eternal punishment. If there is eternal punishment, and they have spirits, and God is the Father of their spirits, then some of God's children suffer eternal torment. Again, if God is -the Father of spirits, and there are no spirits but what God is Father of, then God is the Father of the devil. Do you not think, according to this, that He has at least one awfully bad son? Or, if like begets like, is he not really a good devil? And are not all spirits good? We have always thought that there were some bad spirits, and we think so yet; and we think that some who are holding these new theories have manifested a bad spirit.

We here let the curtain drop again, and promise that we will soon raise it again and let you look behind it. We have some more things that are interesting. There are some folks closer to home who have given us some things that we have kept back; but we are going to let you see them. - C. H. C.

Questions and Answers

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-Please answer the following questions for me. There are a few in our country who believe in the absolute predestination of all things that come to pass, and they call us who don't believe as they do, “so-called Primitive Baptists.”

1. Who are the so-called Primitive Baptists, the Absoluters or the ones that contend against them?
2. Do you have to believe in the absolute predestination of all things that come to pass, good and bad, to be a Primitive Baptist?

3. Are God's children driven by a higher power to obedience than the privilege God gives them to obey?
4. Don't God's children receive blessings in obedience that they would not receive out of obedience?
5. Who is it that sins against the Holy Ghost?

6. Who was the multitude that Christ was preaching to on the mount?
7. Who is it that denies the Lord that bought them? Brother Cayce, please answer the above questions through your good paper. Your brother in Christ, I hope,
J. M. HICKS
Rominger, N. C.

OUR ANSWERS:

We haven't space to answer the above questions at length. They have all been answered or discussed through our columns time and again for years. We will simply answer them by number.

1. The "Absoluters" are not the Primitive Baptists, though they claim to be.
2. No.
3. God gives them the ability to obey. Service requires action. If they are passive in what they do, they do not obey at all.
4. Yes. See (James 1:25).
5. We have written on this question, and cannot answer it here and give any reason for our position, as we haven't the space. Hence we only say here that all sins not atoned for by Christ are directly against the Holy Ghost, and such persons never have forgiveness.
6. If you have reference to the sermon on the mount, as recorded in the fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of Matthew, He was not talking to the multitude, but to the disciples. See the first verse of the fifth chapter.
7. False prophets. Some of God's people deny Him and are destroyed so far as the true Christian life on earth is concerned; but we have thought that the expression in the text in mind from which this question sprang has no reference to buying in the sense of atonement, for the language in the original has in it the idea of a despotic ruler. Hence, the Lord has rule over them, as over all His creatures, and they are under His rule, as under a despot. He rules over such characters by His inflexible law, and not by parental government. This may be the sense of that text. C. H. C.

An Enquirer

---October 31, 1916

In your paper of May 23 L. H. writes a grammar lesson, and puts forth a strong letter on man being saved before he has faith. If that is the case, and I believe it is true since reading the grammar lesson and the Bible on the subject, now I want to ask how or why all this money spent through the Southern Baptist Convention, purposely to convert the heathen, when God will convert them at His own will? Now we are taught in (Romans 10:9), that "If thou wilt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." And in verse 13, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. Now how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent?" Verse 17, "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

Explain the above; also the 18th verse. I have been taught all my life that the gospel was the power of God unto the sinner, or to the one who was unsaved.

Yours in Christ,

J. R. SCOTT

Grenada, Miss.

We cannot write at length here on the question submitted above. We will offer only a few remarks.

“So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.” Hearing comes by the word of God. This is by the speech of God. That is, God speaks and gives the hearing ear, or the ability to hear. Then faith comes by hearing. God calls and sends His ministers out to preach the gospel; and they go, preaching. None hear the preaching only those to whom God has given the ability to hear. Gospel faith is produced in those who do hear, which faith is a belief of the truth, a belief of the doctrine of God our Saviour. It seems that this faith has been produced, to some extent, in Brother Scott by the servants of the Lord proclaiming the gospel through the press, and all this shows that the Lord has, at some time in the past, spoken to Brother Scott, by the operation of the Holy Spirit, and given him the ability to hear.

Curtain Raised Again

---November 14, 1916

In our last article we promised to let our readers see some things concerning some parties nearer home. According to that promise we now raise the curtain again and let our readers see some of the productions from Elder W. E. Brush.

Under date of May 9, 1916, he wrote us the following letter while we were in Georgia filling appointments in that country:

Greenfield, Tenn.,

May 9, 1916.

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

My Dear Brother-After long and due and prayerful consideration, as I hope, have decided that it would be best for me to come off the staff of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST paper. It's indeed sad to me for us to come where the ways separate (and I don't mean by this that I declare non-fellowship for you), as I have been with the paper so long, and have walked together with its former editor, Elder S. F. Cayce, your dear father, and my father also in the ministry, and a man whose sacred memory lingers still, and shall ever linger in my poor heart, and it's with tender emotion that I remember his kindness to one so unworthy as myself. And since his departure to the better land our association together has been just as sweet and pleasant until this unhappy affair came up in Texas, and from there came on to this country to the extent, at least, that it has caused confusion among our dear brethren.

But now to get at my reason for coming off the corresponding staff of the P. B. is because I feel that you are in sentiment lined up with the Primitive Baptist Signal, of Texas, edited by Elder Collings, in which such statements as the following are found, and that, too, from the pen of Elder M. W. Miracle, who is the editor of the “Good Old Songs Department” of the P. B. to-wit: “I am forced to the conclusion that man in his completeness or complexity is born again in the change we call from nature to grace. No man can arrive at any other logical fact from the context. It is to say that man is born again in spirit, but such an expression does violence to the whole tenor of the Scriptures. Just as well say that a man is out of debt in part."-P. B. Signal, Jan. 4, 1916. Now Elder Miracle has come out plainer in this statement than anyone that I have read after, but I only think the more of him for that. But now, Brother Claud, if the above statement is old or primitive doctrine, or in other words, the doctrine of the Bible, I have never known nor believed it yet. One thing I know, and you know it as well as I do, that doctrine like the above statement contains has not been advocated among the Old Baptists for the past twenty years, and if very many of them receive it today I will be very much surprised. The only way to get very many of them to accept it is to get them to believe that you don't believe it; and that has been the great effort of most of its advocates, and is yet. Now, my dear brother, you may say that you don't believe what Elder Miracle has said. If you don't, why do you keep him as the editor of the "Good Old Songs Department" of your paper? And if you do believe as Elder Miracle, why don't you come out plain and above-board and say so, so the Baptists would know where to place you? There are not very many of your readers that read the Signal, and therefore have no opportunity to know the doctrine that is being advocated by the Signal, but are led by the writings of Elder Lee Hanks, especially, to believe that the Newman faction in Texas are the sound element of Baptists out there. Well do I remember how he would make reference to them as sound orderly Baptists and as being in line with the Baptists of the East, while he was on his tour out there last year. I don't pretend to say that all the disorder in Texas has been on one side. I don't think that. Neither do I think that all the error has been on one side, for I condemned Elder Sarrels' idea that these bodies, or the bodies of the saints, do not render service to God. But, as I told Elder Newman, in my condemning his erroneous idea that our bodies did not serve God, I did not mean that our bodies had been quickened or made alive-but simply meant, as I have believed all the way along that it's the man that is born again, but not born again all over. If he is born again all over why not come out and say so. And, as it presents itself to me, if I object to you saying that man is born again in part, I certainly must believe that he is born again in whole. If I don't, please tell me what I would believe. Now, my dear brother, if any man on earth can work out this problem for me he certainly will do me a great favor. When a man says, "Oh, it won't do to say that man is only born again in part," and then, in the face of this statement, say that he don't believe that man is born again in whole-now then the man that neither believes that man is born again in part nor in the whole, pray, for the sake of truth, tell me what that man does believe. With this question I come to the feet of all my brethren that have taken this position, and wait for them to answer this question. Will they do it? Or will they make an attempt to do so? Or will they do as some have done-pass it by without even making an attempt to answer it. I will wait and see.

Dear Brother Claud, as stated already, I have been a corresponding editor of the P. B. for some time, even before your father's death. In fact, I went on the staff by his request; and now permit me to briefly outline what I have ever understood the dear paper to contend for. Now if I am wrong, I want you to be faithful and point out to me wherein I have been mistaken all this long time. First, it has stood for the doctrine of election and predestination, and that unconditional on the part of the sinner. That is, that God did, from all eternity, because He loved them with an everlasting love, choose for His own glory a people; and that this same unchangeable God did predestinate that these same people should be conformed to the image of His Son, and that this same God, for His great love that He had for these people; sent His only begotten Son into this low ground of sin and sorrow to suffer and die for these chosen people; and that He (Jesus) did, in keeping with His Father's will, suffer and die for the elect, and for them alone; and that, by His suffering, dying, being resurrected and ascending home to glory, obtained eternal salvation for all of the elect-that is, every one that was embraced in the choice of God, predestinated by Him, died for by Jesus, will, one sweet day, be with Him in glory, freed from all the troubles of a life like this. And now all that God the Father chose in Christ, Christ died for, the Holy Spirit (the third Person in the divine Trinity) will, here in time, make known to the heirs of promise what God the Father and Jesus Christ have done for them, by going where they are and revealing this one most noble truth to them. And now in this revelation I have understood the P. B. to teach that men and women, together with children as well, were taught to know God, whom to know is life eternal; and that in this teaching they were taught to know God only in soul, spirit, or heart; that this work of regeneration or the new birth did not teach men to know God in the flesh. Amos I right? Or have I been mistaken all this long time as to what the P. B. taught on this point? I never understood it to teach that this revelation that the Spirit makes to the heirs of promise here in this life, with its purifying power, reached the entire man and partially purified him all over; or in the revelation, or the work of quickening the heir of promise, it left him, in some mysterious way unexplainable, quickened, both soul and body that is, it did not leave any part of him dead in trespasses and sins, and if not dead in trespasses and sins, then necessarily alive in Christ. Now if the P. B. stood for this late (to me) heard doctrine, I confess I never knew it until a recent date. But at this point, and with reference to this point of doctrine, I always understood the P. B. to stand for this principle-that in the work of the new birth, or regeneration, or quickening, or giving His sheep eternal life (and many other expressions that have reference to the same great change), that this work was wrought in the soul, or spirit, or heart, of God's people while they yet live here in time; that this change was an inward work, and only brought eternal life to the soul, or spirit, or heart, and left the body just as it was before the Spirit of God entered the heart; that is, it left the body in an unquickened state, or in an unregenerated state. Amos I mistaken with reference to this point? If I am, will you please explain to me wherein I have been mistaken all this long time? Further, at this point I have understood the P. B. to believe that where Jesus said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish," that the Spirit in this work gives eternal life to His people in soul, or spirit, or heart. Amos I right or wrong? Will you tell me? Is it not a fact, my dear brother, that THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST paper has ever (until late) stood for the truth that in regeneration the saint receives eternal life in his soul or heart, and that while this body is still natural, that God's people may and can, and, in fact, ought to bring this old body under subjection by the Spirit, that we should present these vile bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service; that we should mortify the deeds of the body. Then I have always understood the P. B. to teach that the saint is two in one, composed of an inward and an outward man, the inward man being the renewed soul, or spirit, or heart of man, and the outward man being this old body that is still subject to death and must die, because it has no eternal life. Paul said, {(II Corinthians 4:16)} "Though the outward man perish, the inward man is renewed day by day." I have ever understood the P. B. to believe and teach that the outward man was this old body, and the inward man was the renewed soul, or spirit, or heart, of God's people. Amos I right? And as this mortal body of clay comes on down to the tomb, to which it's fast coming, perishing, as it were, by degrees as it gets older and grows weaker, the inward man grows stronger in the Lord, or in the most blessed faith that was once delivered to the saints; and the nearer death he comes, the stronger, in this sense, he is. His hope of heaven and immortal glory beyond this life grows brighter as the days go by. And, as David said, our flesh shall rest in hope. Yes, I have always understood you and your dear sainted father to teach that in regeneration the souls, or spirits, or hearts, of God's children were prepared for heaven and immortal glory, and that these vile bodies had to await the resurrection at the final and last day for the preparation that would prepare them also for heaven, when the soul that was purified in time by the operation of the Spirit shall be reunited with the body; in this you know of any other state that men may occupy, please tell me where it is and what it is and go to the grave, as you know as well as I do, and stay there until the Lord of heaven shall come the second time without sin unto salvation and shall call all the sleeping bodies of His children from all places where they have fallen. Then, and not until then, will these mortal bodies be out of a state of death and in possession of the Christ life.

Dear Brother Claud, it's with a sad heart that we separate in this way, but I cannot, with a clear conscience, stay with the P. B. paper any longer, conditions being as they are; yet I hope that you dear brethren will see what I think is the mistake of your life. May the God of all grace help you to do so. I still desire that we be friends, though we can't see alike. I read in the Scripture where two men of God came to the place that they could no longer walk together. So I yet esteem you as a servant of the Most High God, but feel sure that you are wrong at this point, and with reference to the teaching of God's word on this subject; and an error never does harm as long as it lies still, but when you begin to stir it then it will cause trouble. Your poor brother in hope of heaven, W. E. BRUSH
P. S.-Brother Claud, here is what Elder Sylvester Hassell says on the subject under consideration, in the three questions asked by himself or some other one, and answered by him, as found in his paper of a recent date:

1. What is regeneration?

A. It is the impartation of spiritual or eternal life to a human being.

2. What part of that work takes place in time?

A. The impartation of such life to the soul, or spirit, or hearts, of men. (Romans 2:29); (Jeremiah 31:33).

3. When is the body regenerated?

A. At the final resurrection at the second personal coming of Christ to the world.

(Romans 8:23); ((20) (Philippians 3:20-21).

Dear Claud, in the above is found just what I believe on this very important subject, and just what I have understood Old or Primitive Baptists to believe on this subject. I accept it without qualifications. Do you? Will you please let me know if you accept the above as Elder Hassell sets it forth; and if not, wherein do you not accept it? for I am anxious about the matter, for I realize that without a change this matter will speedily go east of the Mississippi River, just as it's gone west, and Brother Claud, I hate to see this. It makes my heart sad to realize that conditions are such that every day we live is drifting us further and further apart. I hope that you shall find it in your good heart to prayerfully and carefully answer the questions that I have asked you in this letter, for if you can show me that I am wrong I assure you that no man would be more ready to lay down or surrender than myself, and, as far as I would be able to do so, make amends for the mistakes that I had made. So, hoping to hear from you at an early date, and also hoping that you are well and enjoying the other blessings that it takes to make an Old Baptist preacher enjoy himself in this life, which is the holy presence of Him who walked quietly on the sea of Galilee and bade the waves and sea be still and they obeyed Him. May you ever feel His holy presence in your soul to that extent that you shall be satisfied with the goodness of God's house. In hope,

Concerning the foregoing we have to say, first, that this paper stands for the same principles and the same truths which it has stood for since the first issue was sent out on January 1st, 1886. In our issue of Sept. 5, 1916, we offered to give any man twenty-five dollars who would produce any article or letter containing any doctrinal sentiment contradicting the doctrinal sentiment contained in any other article or letter we had ever written. No one has yet produced such an article or letter. This is evidence that it cannot be produced. If it could be produced, they would have produced it before this time. Hence, this paper is standing for the same principles which it stood for before Elder Brush joined the Old Baptist Church, and which it stood for when he was ordained, and which it stood for when he went on the editorial staff, and which it stood for when we began the work of editing it, and which it has stood for during those years; and we are standing upon the same principles which we were standing upon when we united with the church in August, 1889, and upon which we stood when we were ordained in December, 1896, and upon which we stood when we began our editorial work upon the death of our dear father in August, 1905. There has been no change on that score. The last sermon our father delivered in our church at home was on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1905, and his text was \(Jeremiah 6:16\), "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." We have felt that this discourse was for our especial benefit, and the words spoken were our father's dying words to us. It has been a special warning to us not to leave or deviate from the same old principles which he had advocated in this life. Therefore, as we stand where we have always stood, if Elder Brush and we have come to the parting of the ways, it is Elder Brush who has left the old path and not us. If we have left it, let him produce the article or letter from our pen which shows a departure from a doctrinal sentiment before held to. We again state that we will give him twenty-five dollars to produce it. It cannot be produced. Elder Brush once agreed with us. This he admits; but he declares that he does not agree with us now. But we stand where we have stood all along the line. Therefore, Elder Brush has changed. This is the logical conclusion, as proven by our offer of twenty-five dollars reward for evidence of a change on our part, and his admission that we were once agreed and are not agreed now.

As to what Elder Brush says he has always understood the paper to stand for, we will attend to that point further on.

Concerning Elder Miracle we have this to say: When we established the "Good Old Songs Department" and arranged with Elder Miracle to edit that department we knew that he was a great "Sacred Harp" singer and a lover of the old songs and took great interest in the cause of sacred music and the old songs. For this reason we procured his services to edit the "Good Old Songs Department." We did not know then how he stood in regard to the fight in Texas, and did not ask him. But we learned afterward that he proposed to remain neutral, which he did until driven by the Webb faction to take sides, and then he lent his sympathy to the other side. Now, this is the truth of the matter, whether some believe it or not. Now, because we do not "fire" Elder Miracle off the paper, these fellows have turned all their batteries loose on us, but we propose to go on attending to our own affairs.

Again, it seems that these brethren would have us drop Elder Miracle, and have nothing to do with him or with Elders Newman and Collings because some expressions have been used by them, or by some brethren on that side, which they do not endorse. What would they have us do? Evidently the only course they would have us pursue is the one they are pursuing, which is to "line up" with Webb, Redford, Sarrels & Co. This is what Elder Brush and, those with him are doing. Now, suppose Elder Miracle has used an expression we do not approve of, and which we have not seen proper to use. Is it a "killing crime" for us not to throw him away on that account? If so, what is Elder Brush doing in "lining up" with Elder Sarrels, since he says he dead state of death! As though there may be such a thing as a live state of death!

Again, Elder Brush said, "Is it not a fact, my dear brother, that THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST paper has ever (until late) stood for the truth that in regeneration the saint receives eternal life in his soul or heart, and that while this body is still natural"-and then these words follow with a pencil mark through them-"or carnal or a child of"-Now, what did he start to say? Could he have started to say anything else only that the body is still a child of wrath? Why did he mark those words out and not finish his sentence? Evidently that is what he believes now, and what he started to say. Has Elder Brush always believed that? Let the following article answer, which is copied from the Primitive Baptist Signal of April 1, 1915: Jan. 21, 1915.

ELDER R. V SARRELS:

My Dear Brother-I have read your article in the Trumpet of Dec. 17 on the subject of the new birth, and it seems that the subject is very clear to you, but to me your article is very confusing. But I know that I am ignorant and don't know very much about the less mysterious subjects in the Bible, and more especially this great subject that has puzzled the minds of some of the greatest gifts that the church has ever had. No doubt it was to the new birth, together with other fundamentals, the apostle had reference when he said, "without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness." Now Elder Sarrels, there are sometimes more than one side to a proposition, and we may only see one side, and not see IT in the right light. We come now to notice your text at the head of your article already named, "Therefore, if any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature." Now, the first question I want to ask you is, What does it take to constitute the man? Paul said it was the MAN that was in Christ Jesus. It makes no difference how it may appear to us, nor to what extreme we may go on either side, it still remains a fact that Paul said the MAN. Our Master said to Nicodemus, "Except a MAN be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." This was a mystery to this ruler of the Jews, nevertheless our Master did not modify it to suit his understanding. Now, my brother, if you can, tell me how a MAN can be in Christ and his body in no way changed or affected, when he is not a man without his body and the MAN is in Christ-not simply his spirit, but the MAN. That is what the Bible says. It makes no difference what you may think about the matter, nor what I think; our think so's do not weigh very much, unless they are in keeping with a "Thus saith the Lord."

My brother, is it not a fact that it takes soul, body and spirit to make man? If it does, and the MAN is in Christ, is not the body in Christ in some sense of the word? If not, please explain how the MAN could be in Christ, and at the same time the body, which is one of the component parts of MAN (in fact, if it were not for the body there would be no man), is not changed in any way at all no not so much as to be under the commandments of Christ, for I note that you say in your article that no living man can prove by God's word that we serve God in our flesh or body relation. Now I suppose that you mean by this statement that we don't serve God in, or with, our bodies. Why don't you come out plain and above-board so people of ordinary sense would know just what you mean? I take it for granted that you mean that no living man can prove by the Bible that men serve God with their bodies. If this is not what you mean, please tell me what you do mean.

Paul said to the Roman brethren, "I beseech you, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. "-(Romans 12).

1. Now, Brother Sarrels, if this one text don't plainly command of the Lord's children the very thing that you said "no living man can prove by God's word," I have misunderstood you, and I do not think that I have. My dear young brother, I am not so much surprised at you making a break like this as I am at your fathers in Israel not calling your attention to the matter. Is it possible that jealousy would cause God's ministers to do as did Saul of old-shut their eyes to everything but one, to-wit, the death of the Lord's anointed, and go plunging on to their own destruction, as did Saul? I know that young men are often led by Satan to think more highly of themselves than they ought to think, and to decide that "I am able to explain matters better than men who have been in the ministry longer than I have been living, but of course have not had the opportunity to know things as I have, and are therefore not able, like me, to explain matters."

I am sure you will agree with me that it's only in service to God that we can glorify Him, and if so, we can serve God in our bodies as well as our spirits. "For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." (I Corinthians 6:20).

I note in your same article you say, "I think it is not safe to say that the body is not a part of the new creature." Now, how could the body be a part of the new creature without having been changed in some sense? Please answer this question, for it is one of great importance. Could not the soul or spirit just as well be a part of the new creature without a change as the body? If not, why not? seeing that the entire man is alike contaminated in sin-or, in other words, the whole man is dead in trespasses and sins. Now, I have never understood, neither do I yet understand, that a man is so changed that he cannot sin in any sense of the word. We know that John said, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, for His seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." The same writer said, "If we say that we have not sinned, we make Him a liar, and His word is not in us."

Then I believe just as Elder J. S. Newman expressed himself to me in a letter, "I believe that eternal life is implanted in the heart or soul of man, but it so affects his whole being that -it makes him hate the things he once loved and love the things he once hated. Yes, the very lips that we used to curse with, we now praise God with; and the feet that once carried us to the ballroom now carry us to the church of God." My dear brother, if you had a neighbor that had been a wicked man, and he claims to have been changed from nature by grace, and yet he still lives the same wicked life that he has been living heretofore, what evidence have you that he has met with any change? Paul, in addressing the Corinthians, said (after naming whoremongers and drunkards, and a number of other wicked things men practice), "And such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified." Paul, how did you know that these people had been washed, and that they were not the same vile persons that they once were? It must have been because of the lives that they were living. Yes, they must have been living different lives from what they had formerly lived, otherwise the apostle would have had no evidence that they had met with a change.

Elder Sarrels, it does seem to me such a pity for the Baptists of Texas to divide over nothing but preacher jealousy. I feel sure that if there were, or had been, one-half dozen preachers taken away from Texas, and not allowed to return, that you would have had NO trouble over the WHOLE MAN DOCTRINE as it is called. Indeed, I hope that you will take what I have written you in the spirit that I hope I have written in, for I know that I do not aim to be too severe. What I say, I aimed to say in the spirit of my Master. Yet, sometimes we all need rebuking in the spirit of Jesus. So I hope you will not think me your enemy because I am telling you the truth. The best friend that a man has on earth is the man that comes to him with his faults. The great trouble with many of us today is we go to the other man and tell him how far Brother So and So has gone wrong, in place of going to the brother ourselves and in the spirit of Jesus telling him of his wrongs. In doing this we become a violator of God's law ourselves.

When you have been in the work of the ministry as long as I have, then you will know by experience things that you had never thought of taking place. Dear brother, let's be careful that we don't take a position that we will meet ourselves coming back before we get far. One of the hardest struggles of a preacher's life is to keep off of extremes. At least, I have found it so in my case-if indeed I am worthy to be found among the number. I am so much of my time in doubt.

I pray God's richest blessings to rest upon you all through life, that He may give you to know the truth as it is in Christ Jesus the Lord, so far as it is His holy will to reveal it to you, and then give you grace to be reconciled to abide in the calling wherewith He has called you; that you may ever be found among the number that is content to spend their time preaching Jesus the way, and not spend your time (for it is valuable), as some of our dear brethren are doing, wrangling about words to no profit. God's word forbids such. If you can find it in your heart to do so, pray for me and my family.

Your brother in hope,

W. E. BRUSH.

This letter from Elder Brush to Elder Sarrels will serve as an answer to the letter from Elder Brush to us. Elder Brush has a long article in the Trumpet of Oct. 19, giving us "down the country." This letter of his to Elder Sarrels will serve as an answer to that also. We simply answer Elder Brush with Elder Brush. It appears to us that he should observe a little of the advice he gave Elder Sarrels-"Let's be careful that we don't take a position that we will meet ourselves coming back before we get far." Elder Brush has simply met himself coming back, and did not get far, either.

When Elder Brush wrote this letter to Elder Sarrels he certainly knew that he was then occupying the same ground that our father occupied in his lifetime, and that we were occupying, and that this paper had occupied from the time he first became acquainted with it. If "every day we live is drifting us further and further apart," it is only because you are getting farther and farther from the position you formerly occupied, and not because we have gone anywhere. We have gone nowhere. In January, 1915, we stood upon the very position advocated by Elder Brush in his letter to Elder Sarrels. We had stood there all the time, and we stand there yet. We would now plead with you, Brother Brush, and with others who are doing like you are, to lay these vain speculations and notions down-quit this eternal fault-finding, speculating, hair-splitting, and striving about words, and stop going farther from the truth, and come back to the ground that you once occupied, and let us live in that peace and fellowship which was left us by our blessed Master, and which is destroyed by nothing else only our own striving for mastery, envy, hatred, malice, jealousy, and wrong doing.

The foregoing shows who is responsible for all the confusion and trouble at this time, and not another thing is necessary to show this, but we have a little more yet behind the curtain. We shall show that soon, and we will soon be done with this series of articles. It is not our intention to continue them indefinitely, but we do expect to show what we started in to show. It is not pleasant to us, but we feel obligated to do it.

The New Birth

---December 12, 1916

The following article was written by Elder F. A. Chick, and was first published in the Primitive Monitor of February 15, 1890, and was copied on the editorial page of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of September 13, 1894. Elder R. W. Thompson was editor of the Monitor when the article appeared in that paper, and is still the editor of that paper. This article shows what position our father occupied at that time, and what this paper stood for then. This was before Elder W. E. Brush became a corresponding editor, and is what the paper stood for when his name was put on the staff; and it is where we stand, and where this paper now stands. What man in Texas or Tennessee objected to the sentiment contained in that article in 1894? We never heard any "kick" against it in our country then. Who has changed? We hope the brethren may see the error of the way they are going and the wrong in waging the present war and cease the strife. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

And now, as I take my pen to write upon this subject embraced in your question, I only wish to kindly and candidly express my views, with some of the reasons for them, and I trust what I may say will hurt the feeling of no brother or sister, even if they feel compelled to differ with me. First, you ask me what I understand by the terms old man and new man. These terms occur but twice in the New Testament. In both cases they are the language of Paul. In (Ephesians 4:22); (6:24) he says, "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lust, and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Here he says to his brethren at Ephesus, that the teaching of Christ is that they should put off the one and put on the other. In ((9) (Colossians 3:9-10), he says, "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him." Here he declares that his brethren have already put off the one and have put on the other, and upon this fact bases some admonitions to the conduct of his brethren. First, I desire to call attention to this one consideration, viz.: that the "new man" is not addressed and told to put off the old man, neither is the "old man" addressed and told to put on the new man. But Paul is addressing his brethren, saints at Ephesus and saints at Colosse, just as I am now addressing you, Brother Tompson, and the readers of the Monitor. And he says to these believing men and women that they should do this, or that have done this, viz.: have put off the old man and have put on the new. Here, if I may so speak, are three men instead of two. But, indeed, the expression, old man and new man, are simply figurative expressions for the two opposing principles which every believer finds dwelling in his own heart and waging ceaseless warfare there. We are not to suppose for a moment that the apostle means that we are to understand by these terms two fully developed men, with soul, body and spirit in each, and both dwelling in us, you and I, who constitute a third distinct man or woman. It seems to me that anyone who has the slightest acquaintance with the use of figures of speech would see at a glance that the apostle had no such meaning as this. Neither does he mean by the "old man" the body and by "new man" the soul. When told to put off the old man he does not mean that we shall commit suicide. In (Romans 7:23), we read, by the pen of this same apostle, "But I see another law in my members warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin, which is in my members." Here we have Paul speaking of the two men, but under the terms, "Law of my members" and "law of my mind." Notice again, here is Paul the speaker, and in Paul are the two laws, or the "old man" and the "new man." The figure of speech has changed, but the idea presented is the same. In (Galatians 5:17) Paul says, "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." Here he calls the "old man" the flesh and the "new man" the Spirit. And here again, notice that he says these are contrary the one to the other, - so that "ye" believers cannot do the things ye would. All the way along he addresses men and women, and tells them that in them are two opposing and enduring forces, the one of which they are to put off, and the other to put on. Sometimes this "new man" is called "the hidden man of the heart." But by whatever name they are called, Paul always means the same thing. On the one side he means that tendency to evil which grace makes manifest in every child of God; and on the other he means that disposition to serve God which grace implants in every heaven born soul. The one he calls "the flesh," the other "the spirit;" the one, "the law of the members," find what all these things mean. And every narration of Christian experience tells the simple truth about all these things. No one ever heard a child of God say, "my old man," or my "new man," felt, said, or did so and so. But always I saw, heard, or acted so and so. We all say when we are telling the simple story of our experience, and we have no "axe to grind:" "I saw myself a great sinner; I could do nothing to save myself. I grew worse and worse, and at last Jesus was revealed to me as my Saviour." We never say, "my old man," or "my new man," felt all these things, but I myself. When in (Romans 7)., Paul says, "I sin," straightway he says, "Yet not I, but sin that dwelleth in me." It is I, and yet not I, and yet it is I all the time. And so, on the other hand, when Paul says, "I labored more abundantly than they all," immediately he corrects himself and says, "Yet not I, but the grace of God, which was with me." His language appeals to all our feelings on both sides. I do not know that a volume would make it all any plainer. I labor, but yet I must be humble, for it is not I that labor, it the grace of God. How humbling this is! In one place Paul speaks of the Spirit crying, Abba, Father. In another place he speaks of the Spirit by which we cry, Abba, Father. Now, both are most blessedly true. The Spirit cries Abba, Father, but it is, after all our cry. We are not left out. I have introduced these texts for the purpose of showing the terms "old man" or "new man" do not shut out the believer, but that in every child of God is found the warfare caused by these two men, or laws, or principles. It matters not by what name they are called. I do not understand that the "old man" is the "Adamic man," but a law or principle in the Adamic man. And the "new man" is also a law or principle in the same Adamic man. The old man is not redeemed, and neither is the new, but the Adamic man is redeemed from the dominion of the "old man" and to the dominion of the "new man." -The "old man" is not born again, and neither is the "new man," but the Adamic man is born again.

And the new birth is when this new man comes in and abides, to go out no more forever. The old man is sin and death, the new man is life and righteousness. From the one we are redeemed and to the other we are redeemed. Neither the old or new man are redeemed. The one needs it not and the other is that from which we are redeemed. The "new man" is indeed an entirely "new man," and his origin is God. He is a "new man" so far as we are concerned, but he is elder than the hills. This new man is the law of truth and holiness, and they are eternal. But we receive this in our hearts when born from above, and so it is new to us. With us that which is natural is first, and then that which is spiritual. But in reality the spiritual world is first, only we do not see or enter it until we are born again, or born from above. No greater mistake was ever made than when the two terms, "old man" or "new man," were supposed to present two literal, whole men, in a literal sense. Out of this grew all that absurd theory about the sinner of Adam's race not being born again, but a spirit of some sort or kind. I have read and heard much about this last named theory, but have never got a clear conception of the theory in my head, and my heart rejects it at once.

Again you ask, "Who is the new creature?" "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature," etc. "For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature." What you have written about on your letter seems to me more satisfactory than anything that I can write. I certainly think the subject of the "new creature" is the "new creature." Of the "new creature" Paul says, "For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." The apostle says here we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus, etc. If, therefore, we are created in Christ WE must certainly be "new creatures." I did not know that it was claimed that any other being than a renewed, quickened sinner was called the "new creature." There is a text in the eighth chapter of Romans which seems to me to bear upon the same matter, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us." Mark it is in Us. Now he goes right on to talk about the same under the name "creature," saying, "For the earnest expectation of the creature" (the same new creature, the man in Christ) "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God," and so on in the verses that follow, all along in these verses in (Romans 8). The new creature is indeed meant, but it is the "new creature" which we ourselves become as the workmanship of God, created in 'Christ unto good works. We are never called new creatures, except as we possess the Spirit of Christ, and the Spirit of Jesus is not called a new creature, except as it is one of the sinners where it dwells. Indeed, the term "creature" could not belong to an eternal spirit or being of any sort. But it may well belong to us who have begun to be. Naturally and spiritually the sense in which the man in Christ is a new creature is seen as we glance further on in the text: "Old things are passed away; behold all things are become new." A wondrous change has happened to him. He is not yet the same man he was before in many ways. And to be born again and renewed in the spirit of his mind is all that will avail him. Circumcision or keeping the law avails nothing. Rejecting circumstances avail nothing either. To become a new creature is the essential thing; and to be a new creature is the result of the work of God in us. All is done for the sinner, all is done in the sinner. There is no "new creature" but the saved sinner. What a wonderful contrast -between the "old creature" and "new creature."

Time Salvation

---January 2, 1917

Brother P. D. Burns, of Bentonville, Ark., requests our views on what is called time or common salvation. It seems to us to be unnecessary to write on this question now. It has been threshed out time and again, and nearly every issue of the paper contains something connected with the subject. However, we will say that we are not a stickler for the term "time or common salvation." The Scriptures teach that there is a salvation enjoyed by the child of God as a result of his walking in obedience, and that enjoyment is here in time. Hence it is called a "time salvation." If a brother prefers to call it by some other name, we have no objection, just so he holds to the truth which is meant to be expressed by the use of the term.

In (John 13:17) the Saviour said to the disciples, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." In this language there is, most assuredly, a happiness promised the persons addressed provided they do the things. He was speaking to the disciples, and they were children of God. The first thing necessary, however, is to know these things. Then, "if ye do them" a happiness follows as a result. They do not get that happiness if they "know these things" and fail to do them. The happiness is promised "if ye do them." True, this language was spoken by the Saviour at the time He washed the feet of the disciples, but the same principle is true concerning every act of obedience which the Lord requires. Hence, there is a rest, a happiness, enjoyed by the Lord's children as a result of their obedience to the Master. This is not a promise of rest or happiness beyond this life, or in the world to come, but a promise of happiness now-right here-for "happy are ye" is the promise. The happiness is now. Hence, they are saved from sorrow, leanness of soul, a troubled mind and conscience, by doing "these things."

In (I Timothy 4:16), the apostle says, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." This language was addressed to Timothy, who was already a child of God and a minister of the gospel. He had eternal life already. Hence, so far as eternal life is concerned, he was already in a saved state. He was brought into that saved state by the grace, mercy, power, and work of God, and not by doing something himself, nor by another man doing something. But here the apostle says that "in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." He would save himself by "doing this"--so the apostle affirms. He does not get eternal life, or eternal salvation, by doing; but he saves himself by "doing this." He does not save himself from an eternal hell by doing; but he certainly does save himself from something else. By taking heed unto himself and unto the doctrine, and continuing therein, he saves himself from many "gins and snares" set by Satan; he saves himself from walking in, or going into, many places where he might go, and where a child of God should not go. He saves himself from the doctrines and commandments of men. He saves himself from false ways, from false doctrines and practices. By doing this, he not only saves himself, but he also saves those that hear him. Those who hear him are those who have already been made alive from the dead by the Spirit and power of God. "Why do ye not understand my speech? Even because ye can not hear my words. He that is of God heareth God's words. Ye therefore hear them not; because ye are not of God," says the Saviour. Hence, those who hear are already of God---have already been born of God, They are already children of God. But they are to be saved from false doctrines and practices, just as Timothy was. And this was to be accomplished by Timothy in "doing this"-taking heed unto himself, and unto the doctrine, and continuing in them. This saving is not regeneration, and no part of it. Regeneration is first; and then they need to be saved from false ways by having the gospel preached to them. But the man's preaching is not worth much, unless his walk is right. He must take heed to himself. That is the first and most important thing for the minister to do, and in doing that and taking heed to the doctrine he will save himself, and those who hear him, from wrong doctrines and practices. This is a saving which follows as a result of doing something. Eternal life is not given men and women as a result of their doing something. Hence, this is a saving which is not eternal. It is a saving which takes place here, and the benefits of it are here in time, and not in eternity. God's people in eternity who have never heard or known the truth here will be just as happy, and as much glorified, as those who have known the truth here. They will miss nothing in eternity on account of not having known the truth here. But those who do not know and practice the truth here miss something here. They are not saved from false doctrines and false ways.

In (Hebrews 2:1 to 4) the apostle says, "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will?" Here the apostle teaches that under the law dispensation every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward. In that dispensation the Lord punished His children, or chastised them, for their disobedience. There was no escape then. Now, if that was true then, it is much more certain and sure now, under the gospel dispensation-"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation." This is a stronger way of saying that we cannot escape. Condemnation is the opposite of salvation. By neglecting this salvation we receive the opposite, which is condemnation, and there is no escape. If this salvation is eternal, and we neglect it, then we cannot escape the opposite, which is eternal condemnation. But our escaping eternal condemnation does not depend upon our not neglecting. We do not escape eternal condemnation by our zeal or diligence in the service of God. Escaping eternal condemnation, and receiving eternal life, having eternal salvation, is the free and unmerited gift of God. But here is a salvation which God's children are required not to neglect; and we are told that we cannot escape the opposite of the salvation if it is neglected. The condemnation is not eternal, and as that is the opposite of the salvation, then the salvation is not eternal. Hence, here is a salvation, a joy and pleasure and delight which follows as a result of zeal and diligence in the service of God, as He requires.

These are only a few of the many places in God's word which might be produced along the same line. How necessary that we study the - Scriptures, and search them diligently, to know the truth as it is therein revealed. May the Lord help us to search for and know the truth, and then practice the same,

Revelation 12:7-8

---January 9, 1917

Brother W. C. Clark, of Upton, Texas, requests our views concerning (Revelation 12:7-8), in connection with ((0:18) (Luke 10:18)). The language referred to in Revelation is, "And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven." In Luke the Saviour said, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven." This heaven, we think, refers to the Jewish heaven, or law heaven. It does not refer to the place of final happiness for the Lord's people. If it did, they would not be safe when they get there, for they might sin then and be cast out of that place. Evidently it refers to the Jewish age, or law dispensation, or law heaven. The first verse of (Revelation 12) says, "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars." This woman certainly was the church, and the church was set up by the Saviour in the last days of the law dispensation, or Jewish heaven. Verses 9, 10, 11, read, "And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world." He was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him. "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night. And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death." As to the time, we refer to (John 12:31), where the Saviour says, "Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out." These are a few things we would call attention to in connection with the text referred to by Brother Clark. But whatever the heaven is, it cannot be ultimate glory. C. H. C.

It has been charged that we have changed-that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed-that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of July 5, 1894. C. H. C.

THE NEW BIRTH-MAN BORN AGAIN

There appears in this issue, on page 210, an article from Brother P. J. Howard, headed, "The Dalby Doctrine," in which he seems to object to the idea of dividing up man by arguing that one part or another "part of man" is born again, for he says, "The question is not what part of man is born again." But while he objects to the idea of dividing man he makes two men out of one. Nor does he wait until after man is "born again" to make him two men, but he presents the unregenerate man, the man who has been born of Adam only, as two men, i. e., a flesh man and a spirit man.

We intended, first, simply to write a few remarks to follow Brother Howard's article, and in reply to him, but thinking we could not do justice to the subject in so short space we concluded to write an editorial under the above heading, and notice, first, some ideas advanced, and expressions made, by Brother Howard. In his two men theory he contradicts what Paul says: Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.-(I Corinthians 15:46-48).

Of course the apostle does not mean, here, that the first man, the Adam man, has no spirit, but he simply means that he is only a natural man, bearing the image, possessing the nature, etc., of the earthy. When we are born of Adam, we come into the world bearing his image, possessed of his sinful, corrupt, nature. Hence the Saviour says, {(John 3:6)} "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." And He certainly does not mean by this expression, "is flesh," to refer only to the real body or fleshly substance of man, separate and apart from his soul or spirit, for that would convey the idea that man born of Adam, born of flesh, was nothing but flesh, had no spirit, for the Saviour continues (in same verse), "and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit," which would convey the idea that man, the entire man, born of Adam, born of flesh, "is flesh;" has nothing about him except flesh, else he has (before regeneration) been born both of the flesh and of the Spirit. Hence by the expression, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," the Saviour must have meant that man, the entire man, soul, body and spirit, is in an unregenerate state, having been born (only) of Adam, of the flesh, "is (therefore) flesh." Not that this entire man, in substance, is nothing but a body or lump of flesh, but the idea is simply this: Inasmuch as everything, not only man, but from man down to the very lowest order in the animal kingdom, and everything also in the vegetable kingdom, partakes of the nature of that from which it is born; it follows that man, the children of Adam, partake of, and are born with, his nature, and his only; hence the expression, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." And this being true makes it absolutely necessary for us, for this man, this man who, in this sense, "is flesh," and only flesh, only natural, to be born again. Hence the Saviour says, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." But remember that He could not have meant in the expression, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," to refer to the flesh in substance, when He said "is flesh," for, as we have seen, that would convey the idea of man, born of flesh, being nothing but a lump of flesh. So, then, it must also be true that in the expression, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit," the Saviour did not refer to the spirit of man abstractly, but simply meant that as we, in being born of Adam, are flesh, natural, even so in being born of God we are made "partakers of His divine nature", {(II Peter 1:4)} are made spiritual, become spiritually minded, can then discern the things of the Spirit. {(I Corinthians 2:14-15)} Man who is born of the flesh, being only flesh, only natural, corrupt; being a portion of that stream which comes from a corrupt fountain, the Saviour said to Nicodemus, {(John 3:3)} "Except a man (the man, Nicodemus, not the spirit man, or the spirit of man, but except that MAN who has been born of the flesh) be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." And again, he says (verse 7), "Ye (Nicodemus) must be born again." Peter writes to persons who had thus been born again. They were born, first, not partly born, nor born in body only, but as men and women, children of Adam, they were born, first, of Adam, of the flesh, and as such were only flesh, corrupt, sinful, defiled in soul, body and spirit; hence the apostle said of -them:
 For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away. -{(Pet 1:24) (I Peter 1:24)}. But as they had afterwards been born of God, born of the Spirit, born again, Peter said, also, of these same people: Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.----{(Pet 1:23) (I Peter 1:23)}.

In being born of Adam we receive, or partake of, his nature, his natural, sinful, fleshly nature, and when we are born of God, born again, born of the Spirit, we are made partakers of the divine nature. Hence the expression, already quoted, from the Saviour: That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.-(John 3:6). Having thus been born of Adam, born of the flesh, and afterwards born again, born of incorruptible seed, born of God, the individual is a complex being, one composed of, or possessing, two distinct natures-the nature of Adam, which "is flesh," corrupt, sinful, natural, and the divine nature, {(II Peter 1:4)} which "is spirit." This was the case with the Apostle Paul, and he calls these two natures, possessed by himself, the inner and the outer man, and says: For that which I do, I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law, that it is good. Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh), dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not. For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man. But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. O wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then, with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.- (Romans 7:15-25). Notice he says, "so then with the mind (not with the spirit, but with the mind) I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." He certainly does not mean to say that he serves sin without any mind, or that his natural mind never serves sin. The experience of every child of God would contradict such a statement, for they very well know that they are continually harassed with vain, foolish, and wicked thoughts which arise in their minds. Hence in the expression "with the mind" the apostle certainly refers to the divine nature received from God, in being born of God, and in the expression "but with the flesh," etc., he means that nature which is of the flesh or that we receive in being born of the flesh. Paul also calls these two natures the old and the new man, saying: That ye put off, concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts.-(Ephesians 4:22). Of course Paul did not mean that they should put off their fleshly bodies, as such, but that they should endeavor to keep the fleshly nature in subjection, not live after the flesh, the desires, propensities, doings, etc., of the fleshly nature, but that they should through the Spirit mortify the deeds of the body, and as such he says: And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. (Ephesians 4:24).

Again we would say, Paul did not mean for them to put on the Spirit as a guide or covering to themselves, for this no man can do, but he meant for them to put on or be led by the promptings of the new man, the divine nature which they had received, or been made partakers of, in being born of God. To show that these thoughts are not new among Baptists and that the idea did not originate with Geo. Dalby, we will now give a few quotations from "Gill's Exposition of, or Commentaries on, the New Testament." We have already shown, however, that Paul taught the very doctrine denominated by Brother Howard as the Dalby doctrine. Hence we did not learn it from Dalby (having never heard him nor seen any of his writings). Neither did we learn it from Gill, for the writer held the very views, and entertained the ideas already advanced, before he had ever examined Gill on the subject or had ever (even) seen his Commentaries. But while this is true it is a great source of comfort to know that the very ideas held by the poor, weak, and imperfect writer, as stated above, in our weak way, were held and advanced by such a learned and gifted man as Elder John Gill, more than one hundred and fifty years ago. In his comments on (John 3:6) he says:

“That which is born of the flesh is flesh,” etc. Man by his natural birth, and as he is born according to the flesh of his natural parents, is a mere natural man; that is, he is carnal and corrupt, and cannot discern spiritual things; nor can he, as such, enter into, and inherit the kingdom of God; see (I Corinthians 2:14); (15:50). And therefore there is a necessity of his being born again, or of the grace of the Spirit, and of his becoming a spiritual man; and if he was to be, or could be born again of the flesh, or ever so many times enter into his mother's womb, and be born, was it possible, he would still be but a natural and a carnal man, and so unfit for the kingdom of God. By flesh here, is not meant the fleshy part of man, the body, as generated of another fleshy substance; for this is no other than what may be said of brutes; and besides, if this was the sense, spirit, in the next clause, must mean the soul, whereas one soul is not generated from another: but by flesh is designed, the nature of man; not merely as weak and frail, but as unclean and corrupt, through sin; and which being propagated by natural generation from sinful men, cannot be otherwise; for “who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one;” ((Job 14:4) (Job 14:4)). And though the soul of man is of a spiritual nature, and remains a spirit, notwithstanding the pollution of sin; yet it being defiled with the flesh, and altogether under the power and influence of the lusts of the flesh, it may well be said to be carnal or fleshy: hence, flesh, as it stands opposed to spirit, signifies the corruption of nature; (Galatians 5:17); and such who are in a state of unregeneracy, are said to be after the flesh, and in the flesh, and even the mind itself is said to be carnal; (Romans 8:5-6,7-8). And that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit: a man that is regenerated by the Spirit of God, and the efficacy of His grace, is a spiritual man; he can discern and judge all things of a spiritual nature; he is a fit person to be admitted to spiritual ordinances and privileges; and appears to be in the spiritual kingdom of Christ; and has a right to the world of blessed spirits above; and when his body is raised a spiritual body, will be admitted in soul, body, and spirit, into the joy of his Lord. Spirit in the first part of this clause, signifies the Holy Spirit of God, the author of regeneration and sanctification; whence that work is called the sanctification of the Spirit, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost; ((Pet 1:2) (I Peter 1:2); (Titus 3:5)). And spirit, in the latter part, intends the internal work of grace upon the soul, from whence a man is denominated a spiritual man; and as a child bears the same name with its parent, so this is called by the same, as the author and efficient cause of it: and besides, it is of a spiritual nature itself, and exerts itself in spiritual acts and exercises, and directs to, and engages in spiritual things; and has its seat also in the spirit, or soul of man. And, also in his comments on ((2) (Romans 7:22-23)) he says:

For I delight in the law of God, etc. This an unregenerate man cannot do; he does not like its commands, they are disagreeable to his corrupt nature; and as it is a threatening, cursing, damning law, it can never be delighted in by him: the moralist, the Pharisee, who obeys it externally, do not love it, nor delight in it; he obeys it not from love to its precepts, but from fear of its threatening; from a desire of popular - esteem, and from low, mercenary, selfish views, in order to gain the applause of men, and favor of God: only a regenerate man delights in the law of God which he does, as it is fulfilled by Christ, who has answered all the demands of it; and as it is in the hands of Christ, held forth by Him as a rule of holy walk and conversation; and as it is written upon his heart by the Spirit of God, to which he yields a voluntary and cheerful obedience; he serves it with his mind, of a ready mind freely, and without any constraint but that of love; he delights together with the law, as the word here used signifies; the delight is mutual and reciprocal, the law delights in him, and he delights in the law; and they both delight in the self-same things, and particularly in the perfect obedience which the Son of God has yielded to it. The apostle adds, after the inward man; by which he means the renewed man, the new man, or new nature, formed in his soul; which had its seat in the inward part, is an internal principle, oil in the vessel of the heart, a seed under ground, the kingdom within us, the hidden man of the heart, which is not obvious to every one's view, it being not any thing that is external, though never so good; this in its nature is agreeable to the law of God, and according to this a regenerate man delights in; but then this restrictive limiting clause supposes another man, the old man, the carnal I, according to which the apostle did not delight in the law of God; and proves, that he speaks of himself as regenerate, and not as unregenerate, or as personating an unregenerate man, because no such distinction is to be found in such a person; nor does such a person delight at all, in any sense, upon any consideration in the law of God, but is enmity against it, and unsubjected to it; nor can he be otherwise, without the grace of God.

But I see another law in my members, etc. That is, he saw, he perceived it by experience; he felt the force and power of inbred corruption working in him, and as a law demanding obedience to it; and which he might well call, another law, it being not only distinct from, but opposite to the law of God he delighted in; the one is good, the other evil; this other law is a transgression of the law of God, and which he observed to be in his members, i. e. in the members of his body; not that it had its seat only, or chiefly in his body, and the parts of it, but because it exerted itself by them, it made use of them to fulfil its lusts: the same phrase is used in the Targum on (Psalms 38:3); which renders the words there thus, there is no peace in my members, because of my sin: now this law was warring, says he, against the law of my mind; by the law of his mind is meant, either the law of God written on his mind in conversion, and which he delighted in, and served with his mind, as renewed by the Spirit of God; or the new nature in him, the principle of grace wrought in his mind, called the law of it, because it was the governing principle there; which reigns, and will reign in every regenerate person through righteousness, unto eternal life, though the law of sin opposes all its force and power against it; that is not only contrary to it, lusts against it, but wars, and commits acts of hostility against it: the state of regenerate persons is a warfare, they have many enemies to combat with, as Satan and the world; but those of their own household, within themselves, in their own hearts, are the worst of all; there is an intestine war in them, as it were a company of two armies, flesh and spirit, sin and grace, combating together; and so it will be as long as this life lasts.

Then, again, in his comments on (Ephesians 4:22,24) he says: That ye put off concerning the former conversation, the old man, etc.] Which is the corruption of nature; why this is called a man, and an old man, see the note on (Romans 6:6): the putting him off, is not a removing him from the saints, nor a destroying him in them, nor a changing his nature; for he remains, and remains alive, and is the same old man he ever was, in regenerate persons; but it is a putting him off from his seat, and a putting him down from his government; a showing no regard to his rule and dominion, to his laws and lusts, making no provision for his support; and particularly, not squaring the life and conversation according to his dictates and directions; and therefore it is called a putting him off, concerning the former conversation: the change lies not in the old man, who can never be altered, but in the conversation; he is not in the same power, but he retains the same sinful nature; he is put off, but he is not put out; and though he does not reign, he rages, and often threatens to get the ascendant: these words stand either in connection with verse 17; and so are a continuation and an explanation of that exhortation; or else they point out what regenerate souls are taught by Christ to do, to quit the former conversation, to hate the garment spotted with the flesh, and to put it off: for the allusion is to the putting off of filthy garments, as the works of the flesh may be truly called, which flow from the vitiosity of nature, the old man; which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; the old man, or the vitiosity of nature, has its lusts: and these are deceitful; they promise pleasure and profit, but yield neither in the issue; they promise liberty, and bring into bondage; they promise secrecy and impunity, but expose to shame, and render liable to punishment; they sometimes put on a religious face, and so deceive, and fill men with pride and conceit, who think themselves to be something, when they are nothing: and through these the old man is corrupt; by these the corruption of nature is discovered; and the corruption that is in the world is produced hereby; and these make a man deserving of, and liable to the pit of corruption; and this is a good reason, why this corrupt old man, with respect to the life and conversation, should be put off.

And that ye put on the new man, etc. Which some understand of Jesus Christ, who is truly and really man, and a new or extraordinary one, (Jeremiah 31:22); and as such is God's creature, and is made after His image, and which appears in His perfect holiness and righteousness; and the phrase of putting on well agrees with Him, (Romans 13:14); (Galatians 3:27); whose righteousness is a garment, pure and spotless, and which is put on by the hand of faith: though rather by the new man is meant, the new nature, the new principle, or work of grace in the soul, elsewhere called a new creature; and it bears the name in opposition to, and distinction from the old man, or corruption of nature, before spoken of; and because it is de novo, or anew, put into the hearts of men; it is not what was in them naturally; nor is it any old principle renewed, or wrought up in another and better form; but it is something that is infused, that was never there before: and because it is new in all its parts; such who have it, have new hearts and new spirits given unto them; they have new eyes to see with, and new ears to hear with, and new hands to handle and work with, and new feet to walk with; and they live a new life and conversation; so the Jews say of a man that truly repents of sin, and does not return to it, that he is a new man; now to put on this new man, is not to make ourselves new creatures; for this is not by the power of man, but by the Spirit of God; this is God's work and not man's; it is He who made us at first, re-makes us, and not we ourselves; besides, these Ephesians the apostle writes to, were already made new men, or new creatures; but to put on the new man, is to walk in our lives and conversations agreeably to the new man, or work of grace upon the soul; as to put off the old man, respects the former conversation, or a not walking as formerly, and agreeably to the dictates of corrupt nature, so to put on the new man, is to walk according to the principles of grace and holiness formed in the soul: and of this new man it is further said, "which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness;" the principle of the soul is created, and therefore is not the effect of man's power, which cannot create; it is peculiar to God only to create; it is a creature, and therefore not to be trusted in, and depended on; for not grace, but the Author of grace, is the object of trust: it is created after God, by His power, according to His mind and will, and after His image, and in His likeness; which greatly consists in righteousness and true holiness; called true, in opposition to the typical and ceremonial holiness of the Jews, and to the pretended holiness of hypocrites; and denotes the truth and genuineness of the Spirit's work of sanctification upon the heart; unless this should rather be considered as the effect of His grace upon the soul; for so the words may be rendered, unto righteousness and true holiness; for the new man is of such a nature, and so formed, as to tend to acts of righteousness and holiness, and to engage men to the performance of them: some copies read, in righteousness, and holiness, and truth; and so the Ethiopic version seems to have read.

This is certainly sufficient to show that Gill, as already stated, held the same views advanced by the writer. Not only so, but the quotations show that he did not hold to the idea of sanctification, or sinless perfection, in the flesh. Neither did he teach that for MAN, the man who is first born of the flesh and "is flesh," in being born again, born of God, had his sinful nature (that received from Adam) removed or eradicated; but he did- teach that MAN thus born again was made partaker of a divine nature, and in this way becomes a complex being, a being composed of two natures, hence the warfare which - goes on, and will continue to go on, in every child of God so long as his pilgrimage lasts in this world.

We had thought enough had been said, sometime ago, in our columns on this subject, and as we do not wish to publish continued controversies between nor among our brethren we had stated that nothing more would, then, be admitted on the subject. But as nothing has recently appeared in our columns on the subject, we cheerfully give space to Brother Howard's article, and at the same time offer our own thoughts or ideas in connection with the extracts from the great gift (perhaps the greatest since the days of the apostles), Elder John Gill, all of which we request all our readers to read carefully and prayerfully, comparing all with the great standard of truth, the Book of books, and here let the subject rest.

May the Lord bless us all with a spirit of forbearance and brotherly love, is our prayer, for Christ's sake. Amen. C.H.C.

REMARKS TO ELDER W. L. SMITH

---January 23, 1917

What Brother Smith is begging and pleading for in the above is just what we have been pleading among our brethren here, both in conversation and in correspondence; but our pleadings have been in vain. We have never felt disposed to quarrel with our brethren about what part of the man is born again in the work of regeneration. - The Saviour said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." We have been satisfied with it that way, and we are satisfied with it that way yet. We do not think the brethren should be engaging in a war on this question. We have begged for peace; but it has been said publicly that "The man who is always pleading for peace, is always in the wrong." If we are wrong on this question, we have been wrong all the while. We occupy the same ground we occupied when we made our first effort to speak in the name of the Master twenty-seven years ago, and the same ground our sainted father occupied. We see no reason why we should change now. May the Lord help us. C. H. C.

The Real Issue – An Old Editorial

---January 23, 1917

It has been charged that we have changed-that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed -that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of November 1, 1894. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Brother Potter, in the Church Advocate of October 1, certainly does us an injustice, whether intentional on his part or not. It will be remembered that in our issue of July 5, current volume, there appeared an article from Brother P. J. Howard, of Benton, Ill., under heading "The Dalby Doctrine," in which Brother Howard labored to show who or what it is that is "born again," and in so doing said:

The question is not, what part of man is "born again," but what man is it that is born again? Is it the man we see, the flesh man, or is it the man we don't see, the spirit man? This is the question. That it is "man" that is "born again," no one questions; but which one of them, "the inner man" or "the inward man," or "the outward man?"

In the same issue of our paper appeared an editorial headed, "The New Birth, Man Born Again," in which we undertook to show that man (though possessed of both soul and body) born of Adam is only natural, and that we, in being born of Adam, receive or partake of his nature; and that in the new birth the "man" is born again, and that he (the man) then receives or partakes of the "divine nature" and becomes, therefore, a child of God. Be it remembered, however, that we did not say, nor intimate, that man (either before or after the new birth) had no soul, but on the other hand, in commenting on (I Corinthians 15:46-48), we said: Of course the apostle does not mean here that the first man, the Adam man, has no spirit, but simply means that he is only a natural man, bearing the image, possessing the nature, etc., of the earthy. When we are born of Adam, we come into the world bearing his image, possessed of his sinful, corrupt nature. Hence the Saviour says, {(John 3:6)} "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." And He certainly does not mean by this expression, "is flesh," to refer only to the real body or fleshy substance of man, separate and apart from his soul or spirit, for that would convey the idea that man - born of Adam, born of flesh, was nothing but flesh, had no spirit.

It can certainly be seen, from this, that we did not wish to be understood as conveying the idea that man has no soul. Not only so, but we showed that Brother Howard's exegesis of the Saviour's language, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit," involves that very idea, for Brother Howard argued that the Saviour meant by this expression that it is the spirit of man (only) that is born of the Spirit of God, or that it is the spirit of man, abstractly considered, that is born of the Spirit of God, and we showed that if this was what the Saviour meant, it would follow that when He said, in the same verse, {(John 3:6)} "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," He would have meant that man "born of flesh is flesh," only, or has nothing about him but flesh (until born of God). In arguing thus we said:

Hence by the expression, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," the Saviour must have meant that man, the entire man, soul, body and spirit in an unregenerate state, having been born (only) of Adam, of the flesh "is (therefore) flesh." Not that this entire man, in substance, is nothing but a body or lump of flesh, but the idea is simply this: Inasmuch as everything, not only man, but from man down to the very lowest order in the animal kingdom, and everything also in the vegetable kingdom, partakes of the nature of that from which it is born, it follows that man, that children of Adam, partake of and are born with his nature, and his only, hence the expression, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." And this being true makes it absolutely necessary for us, for this man, this man who, in this sense, "is flesh" and only flesh, only natural, to be born again. Hence the Saviour says, "That which is born of the Spirit is spirit." But remember that He could not have meant in the expression, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," to refer to flesh in substance, when he said "is flesh," for, as we have seen, that would convey the idea of man, born of flesh, being nothing but a lump of flesh.

Notice that we here wrote of "man, the entire man, soul, body and spirit, in an unregenerate state," and we now ask in all candor, how could we, or why would we, do this if we thought man had no soul? Notwithstanding our language conveys no such idea, but on the other hand really contradicts the idea of man having no soul, and notwithstanding we wrote on the subject of the new birth, heading our article "The New Birth, Man Born Again," Brother Potter, in the face of all this, says: We have seen men who seemed to try to go around the word "soul," as though it was dangerous to even say "soul." We repeat that here is the real issue. The question is not whether it is the man that is born again, but has man a soul that lives after the body dies? This is the question. Some men say "no" to this question, and we say "yes." We do not believe as some we have heard talk. Elder Skeeters said to us at one time, that we were commanded to pray, lifting up holy hands, and he wanted to know where we got holy hands unless they were made holy in the work of regeneration, in time. This is the Dalby doctrine, and Skeeters and Dalby were fellow-advocates of that doctrine, and in the division of the Baptists of three or four associations on that question, and some other troubles, Skeeters and Dalby stood together. Elder Payne stood with them, and we knew all three of these men personally, and have talked with them, and Payne, at one time, in correspondence with us, admitted that there was a distinction of soul and body, so we asked him where the soul went to when the body died, and his reply was, that if we would tell him where light went to when we blew out the lamp, he would tell us. He fought the very idea of any part of man going to heaven when the body died. All that it took to constitute man, they claimed, went to the grave, and slept until the resurrection. Those fellows are very noisy in preaching that MAN is born again. This is the Dalby doctrine. Does Brother Cayce believe that doctrine? He declared that what Brother Howard thought to be the Dalby doctrine was the apostles' doctrine, and referred to Dr. Gill to disprove Brother Howard's position, and then afterwards stated that he had learned that Dalby was not in good standing, and that he did not wish to defend a man that was not in good standing, as though he must defend a man in order to defend his doctrine.

In all candor, we would ask: Between whom is this an issue? Has there been any dispute between Brother Howard and us, as to whether "man has a soul that lives after the body dies?" If so, how did Brother Potter find it out? Certainly not from our editorial. Why, then, should he ask: "Does Brother Cayce believe that doctrine?" Does he not know that when we spoke of the "apostles' doctrine, and referred to Dr. Gill to disprove Brother Howard's position," that we did not, at all, intimate that the apostles taught that man has no soul? Doesn't he know that we simply argued that the apostles taught that it is "man" that is born again? Doesn't Brother Potter know that the extracts from Gill correspond precisely with our own views, as stated in our editorial? Doesn't he know, also, that we did not quote Gill to disprove the idea of man having a soul? We would further state that while we believe the Scriptures teach that the "man" is born again, we do not mean, nor understand, by this that the sinful nature is removed or eradicated from man in the new birth, but that he is, in this, made partaker of the divine nature. We also believe that in this work Spirit operates upon spirit, and that it is, therefore, a spiritual work. While on a tour once, in the state of Arkansas, we fell in among, or visited, some churches where a difference had arisen among brethren on the subject of the new birth, and the question of what is it that constitutes the outer and the inner man, and these questions, with some others, had caused a division which we greatly deplored and, as such, labored to bring them together. To effect this we drew up a "Basis of Agreement," upon which we thought they could consistently come together and which both parties said they were willing to adopt. And as the fourth and sixth resolutions in said "Basis of Agreement" embrace points which have recently been discussed we will here state them, believing that all who have written on these subjects through our own columns or through the Church Advocate, will endorse them:

Fourth As there has been a seeming difference in our opinion on the subject of the new birth, and as we desire to be understood by each other and by our brethren abroad, we would hereby express our belief on that question as follows: We believe that the new birth is brought about or produced by the work of the Holy Spirit, and that in this work Spirit operates upon spirit, and as such, that our bodies are not wholly sanctified, nor the sinful disposition of the flesh removed. We believe, however, that sinners are the characters benefited in the new birth, and that they (the sons and daughters of Adam) are, in this, born again and thereby become children of God. But while this is true, we do not believe that they become sanctified in body, but just as is expressed in the minutes of Salem Association: "We believe the Adam man is the man that is regenerated and born again; and we believe that the Adam man before regeneration is in possession of a soul, or spirit, which is evil from the fall of Adam; and when the Adam man is regenerated, then and there he is in possession of two natures, which we call a division-the "inner and the outer man." And we believe these two natures, or two principles, is what keeps up the Christian warfare, which we think will continue until our pilgrimage on earth winds to a close. We further believe that our mortal bodies will then go to the grave, or be sown, mortal, and that they, the same bodies, will, in the resurrection, be raised immortal, sown natural but raised spiritual.

Sixth-As there is and has been a difference among us as to what constitutes what is termed in the Scriptures the "inner man" some claiming that the "inner man" is that new principle or "the divine nature" received in regeneration and that there is, therefore, no inner man until after regeneration, while others of us hold, or believe, the soul to be the "inner man," be it, therefore, hereby agreed that we all believe, fully, that man has a soul or spirit prior to regeneration which will continue to live or exist beyond or after the death of our mortal bodies. And we further agree that whether it be correct to call this the "inner man" or not, that it is an internal or invisible something which cannot be seen nor explained, and is that which gives man a pre-eminence over the brute.

Of course all who can subscribe to the above must believe that man has soul, whether the soul be what is termed the "inner man" or not, and that the soul does not die with the body, but lives on beyond and after the death of the body. And as we wrote said "Basis of Agreement," it is very evident that we believed then, as we do now, and as we did when we wrote our editorial on the subject of the new birth, that man has a soul. Hence the injustice done us in Brother Potter's editorial.

The Resurrection - Old Editorial

---January 30, 1917

It has been charged that we have changed-that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed-that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of June 21, 1894. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.--(John 11:25).

Brother S. J. Rosson, of Lonelm, Ark., has requested, some time since, our views or understanding of the above text. In attempting to comply with his request we feel our weakness and inability, but having a desire to comfort the dear people of God, and to give them full benefit of any light we may have upon any portion of God's word, we will endeavor to give Brother Rosson, together with all others into whose hands THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST may go, our understanding of the text. Be it remembered that this language was spoken by the Saviour to Martha when she was weeping over the death of her brother, Lazarus. When she heard that Jesus coming was she arose and went to meet Him, and then said to Him:

Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee. Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again. Martha saith unto Him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.--(John 11:21-24). Notice, Martha said "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." Notice, too, that the Saviour did not say nor intimate that she was laboring under a mistake. He did not say anything whatever that could possibly be construed to mean that Martha was mistaken, or that there would be no resurrection of the dead. Instead of teaching, or telling, Martha that she was laboring under a mistake or a delusion, He gives her some comforting assurance that her hope is not in vain; not a mere fancy nor an imaginary delusion. What a comfort to hear the words, "I am the resurrection and the life." Jesus being the very life of His people, it follows that to have Christ in us the hope of glory is to have eternal life. Hence He says (verse 26), "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." But while this is true-positively and absolutely true-it is also true that all have to die; the verdict has gone forth, "dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Some might think this a contradiction; but not so, for we learn. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.--(7) (Ecclesiastes 12:7).

This not only proves that the spirit in man, or of man, does not die, but the language of the Saviour (already quoted, (John 11:26)) shows that in spirit he will continue to live with God, not simply to exist in death, eternal death, but NEVER DIE. - Not only so, but his dust, that which has returned to dust, shall be brought forth again from the dead; hence the Saviour said in the language of the text: "He that believeth in me, though he were dead (or though he die), yet shall he live." The Saviour says: Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.--(John 5:24).

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.--(John 6:47) Which shows again that the children of God have a life which is everlasting, cannot die, though their mortal bodies do die. Hence the Saviour would comfort Martha with the assurance that Lazarus was yet living, in spirit, and that his body was only sleeping in Jesus. This being true of the children of God, when they pass away from this mode of existence, that they only fall asleep in Jesus, Paul says: For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.--(1 Th 4:14) (I Thessalonians 4:14). Not only so, but those who are alive, yet living, when the Saviour shall come will also be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye; hence the apostle goes on to say: For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord.-((Th 4:15) (I Thessalonians 4:15-17).

This certainly shows that both those who sleep in Jesus (die) and those who remain (are living) unto His coming, will all be changed. The bodies of all the saints will be fashioned like unto the glorious body of the Son of God, and as such Paul says: Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold! I shew you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?-(I Corinthians 15:50-55).

And in the same chapter he (Paul) shows that this glorious change does not consist in an exchange of these mortal, corruptible bodies of ours, being exchanged for immortal, incorruptible, spiritual bodies but it is a CHANGE from mortal to immortal, from corruptible to incorruptible, from natural to spiritual.

It is sown in corruption; it is raised in corruption. It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.- (I Corinthians 15:42-44).

These expressions show that the same body sown (or buried) is the body that will be raised, resurrected, brought forth from the grave. Hence Paul preached a resurrection in which the grave will lose its victim. He therefore said the saying will then be brought to pass, that "Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" All this being true, the apostle could say, with assurance:

And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the spirit is life because of righteousness. But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you.- (Romans 8:10-11).

And this again shows that if we have been born of God, made alive in Christ, that the spirit is life, and that, in this sense, those who are believers in Christ never die; and it also shows that their mortal bodies will be quickened, made alive, raised from the dead. Thus will be fully and entirely freed from sin with all its disturbing results, freed from sorrow, bereavement, pain, sickness, and death, as well as all the temptations of the wicked one, and forever at rest with our blessed Saviour, together with all the redeemed family of our God. Then shall we sing:

And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation.- (Revelation 5:9).

No wonder that the Saviour could comfort Martha, in the language of our text, saying, "I am the resurrection and the life," for it is in Him that we live by faith, by Him that we have been made alive, in spirit, and by Him that our vile bodies will be changed, and by Him that we will live forever as priests unto our God.

May this be the happy lot of Brother Rosson, together with all the dear children of God into whose hands THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST goes, is our prayer, for Christ's sake. These lines, written at the home of Elder H. J. Clark, Waco, Ky., while on a preaching tour in Kentucky, are submitted to Brother Rosson and all our readers in the hope that they may be blessed of the Lord to your comfort, and with an earnest desire that you remember this poor feeble editor at a throne of divine grace.

Brethren and sisters, one and all, "pray for me and mine." May the Lord bless you all. C. H. C.

PLEADING FOR PEACE

REMARKS TO A. R. YARBROUGH

---January 30, 1917

We are sorely grieved over the deplorable state of affairs in Zion, but we are powerless to stop it. For months and months we tried to keep out of the war, and remained out as long as we conscientiously could. We were falsely accused and misrepresented because we would take no part in it. We had to enter the fight or be a traitor to the cause. It was forced upon us. Those who brought the trouble can stop it by simply ceasing the fight. We expect to publish only a few more articles under the heading of "The Curtain Raised," but we do not expect to surrender any of the principles for which this paper has stood for thirty-one years. The Lord will not leave Himself without witness, and He will have people prepared to love and enjoy His truth while the world stands. Our subscription list has grown during the past six months, and is still growing, though some have prophesied that the paper would go down. Perhaps they desired it. Our trust is in the Lord. C. H. The Inner and Outer Man

AN OLD EDITORIAL

---February 6, 1917

It has been charged that we have changed-that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed-that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of August 19, 1892. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

We have been requested to write our views as to the inner and the outer man, also to state when it is that the children of God partake of flesh and blood. And in attempting to do so we feel our inability to write anything that will be of any benefit to God's humble poor, and especially so when it comes to writing upon any subject that is not alike understood by the household of faith. But in the fear of God and with a desire to see the children of God more united and more of one mind I will offer such thoughts as I have, hoping that the good Lord may bless the same to the benefit of His dear people.

The text which speaks of the children being partakers of flesh and blood will be found in (Hebrews 2:14). But before quoting this I would first call attention to verses 9--13: "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. For both He that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause He is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee. And again, I will put my trust in Him. And again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me." All this shows that Jesus tasted death for His people, tasted death for "every man;" that is to say, every one that lives (eternally), or has eternal life, has that life through Jesus Christ. And the expression: "Behold I and the children which God hath given me," shows very conclusively who are embraced in the expression "every man." Not only so, but the connection shows that the mission of Christ was to save sinners, sons and daughters of Adam by nature, but as they were the chosen of God, the elect of God, and had eternal life treasured in the Lord Jesus Christ for them, it became necessary that Jesus Christ suffer in their room and stead and meet the demands of the law in their behalf; and to do that He had to take upon Him a body of flesh and blood. His elect were sons and daughters of Adam, and in that sense were partakers of flesh and blood, and as such Jesus, their surety, their Redeemer, had to appear in the world as a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." The term, "partakers of flesh and blood," then, has no reference whatever to the work of regeneration nor to anything done at that time, but is only expressive of the kind of characters Jesus came to save-not eternal spirits, but sinners, "partakers of flesh and blood," those embraced in the covenant of grace and heirs according to promise. And as they are under the law and under its curse, it was necessary that Jesus Christ, their surety, come under the law in order that He meet the demands of the law, in all its requirements, and thereby release them from all the demands of the law, yea, redeem them from all iniquity. Hence the Apostle Paul would say, in the language of the text (v. 14): "Forasmuch then as the children are (not that they become, but are) partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil." This certainly shows that the term "partakers of flesh and blood" is only expressive of the kind of characters Jesus came to save, those who are "by nature children of wrath, even as others," and that to do so He appears, too, in a body of flesh and blood; and so the Apostle Paul continues: "And deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. For verily He took not on Him the nature of angels; but He took on Him the seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behooved Him to be made like unto His brethren, that He might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people."

Having shown that we understand this term, "par-takers of flesh and blood," to be expressive of the kind of characters Jesus came to save, or of the condition His covenant people are in, or who they are, I will next give the three places in which Paul uses the expression "inner" or "inward" man, in one of which it will be observed that he also uses the term "outward" man, and of course the idea of such a term (outward or outer man) is conveyed in the other quotations also, as the inner or inward man is mentioned. "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man."-((2) (Romans 7:22). "For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day."-(II Corinthians 4:16). "That He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man.”- (Ephesians 3:16). A careful reading and examination of these verses, and their connection, will certainly show that Paul was referring to two natures, or two principles, possessed by the child of God, one of which he calls the inner or inward man and the other the outward man. Not that there are two persons (or men) dwelling in the body, it (the body) being only a hull or dwelling place for the two; that is not it at all. But the child of God, having been born of the flesh first, born of Adam, has a nature or principle about him that is of the flesh or of Adam, and this Paul calls the outer man, and as he has been born of God, born again, he has also another principle, nature, or disposition about him, which Paul calls the inner or inward man. Especially does the apostle make it plain in (Romans 7) (entire chapter) that this is what he means by the expressions, inner, or inward, man and outward man. Having been born of Adam and afterwards born of God, Paul, like all others who have been born again, was a complex being- had a principle or disposition that was common to his nature as a child of Adam and also another principle or disposition that was the result of “being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.”

Paul not only calls these the inner, or inward, man and the outward man, but he also denominates them the “old man” and the “new man.” He says in ((9) (Colossians 3:9-10): “Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him.” No one will presume that Paul meant to teach or say that they had put off their natural bodies, their flesh and blood, but that they had put off that old principle or disposition of living after the flesh, living in the love and practice of sin, and had put on the new man, that new principle or disposition which they had received in being born of God. They had done according to the teaching of the apostle in (Romans 8:13): “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.” And as such Paul would admonish them: {((2) (Colossians 3:12-17))} Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord - Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him.

All this shows that Paul not only calls that new principle or disposition which we receive in being born of God the new man, but he admonishes us to live after, or follow, its leadings or promptings and to keep in subjection the leadings or promptings of the old principle or disposition, the leadings of the outward man. And Peter also would teach the same lesson in his instruction to the sisters of the church, ((Pet 3:3) (I Peter 3:3-4): “Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.” We would love to see the dear brethren and sisters everywhere endeavoring to observe these admonitions and laboring to keep the unity of the spirit in bonds of peace, instead of caviling and contending about words to no profit. Brethren sometimes fail to consider the connection of a text, or the subject that is being treated upon, and in that way draw a wrong conclusion, or make an erroneous deduction from the text, though they are sound in the faith of the gospel; but another brother, who sees the text in a different light, having, perhaps, noticed more carefully the subject treated upon, will discover the mistake, but instead of obeying the injunctions of the apostle himself he brands his brother (because of his mistaken view of the text) as believing in two seeds in the flesh, or of being an Arminian, and in his zeal to prove that such is the case, he will make an explanation of some other text that is just as foreign from the idea intended to be conveyed by the writer as is the opinion of the other brother in regard to the text explained by him.

Hoping that the good Lord may bless these hastily written thoughts to the good of His people and that the time is not far distant when the dear saints of God, who profess to be members of the true church of Christ, Primitive Baptist, will not be so much disposed to cavil and speculate over deep, mysterious and unrevealed things, but seeing eye to eye, loving and esteeming one another better than themselves and watching over each other for good, will all pull together as a band of brethren and sisters in the Lord, I submit the same to their consideration. And would also beg to be remembered in their prayers and that they remember our dear loved ones at home while the humble editor is, at this time, on a tour trying to preach the gospel of the Son of God to the dear brethren and sisters in the state of Ohio.

The Christian Warfare

---February 13, 1917

It has been charged that we have changed-that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed-that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by Elder R. A. Biggs, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of January 25, 1888. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

ELDER S. F. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-I thought this evening that I would pen down a few lines for the consideration of the many readers of our family paper, THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, at the request of Brother Joel Little, on the following text, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"-(Romans 7:24). By noticing the connection, it will be seen at once, that the apostle is here setting forth the spiritual conflict going on in the believer's heart, or, in other words, is describing the Christian warfare. By noticing the sixth verse of the preceding chapter, we will find the "body of death" that the apostle and every child of God desires to be free from. What is it? Listen to the apostle: "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him (Christ), that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." So Paul sees himself, and in himself he sees the law of sin, the law of the members, the old man, the body of sin; and on the other hand he sees the law of holiness, the law of his mind; and these two laws are what he calls "the old man" and "the new man." This brings to view the "Shulamite." And what do we see in the "Shulamite?" As it were, a company of two armies, striving for supremacy. The "Shulamite" is the sinner saved by grace. One of these forces, "the old man," "the body of sin," the sinner is redeemed from; and being quickened by "the new man," the spirit of holiness, becomes conscious of the fact that when he would do good evil is present with him. Again Paul speaks to somebody when he says, "Put off the old man, and put on the new." He does not speak this to the old or new man, but to the real man, the Christian, the believer; put off the old and put on the new man. The old man, the body of sin, will never be saved; but we, the believers, shall be saved from him. The new man needs no saving, but comes to the sinner to deliver him from the dominion of the old man, "the body of sin." So here are three men, or rather one man in whom are found two opposing forces or principles, which figuratively are called "men." Paul and all the children of God hope to be finally saved from the one by the other. Then Brother Little and others will understand us, that the body of death, in our text, that the apostle desires to be delivered from, is, in our understanding, the body of sin, the old man. The children of God are, all their life, subject to this bondage, but will, ere long, be delivered. For the earnest expectation of the creature is that it will be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, notwithstanding our wretchedness and shortcomings. This is our expectation and hope. Then, dear children, press forward and upward, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. Not having time to finish this, as I would like, I send it as it is. In love to all saints,

It has been charged that we have changed-that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed-that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by Elder R.A. Biggs, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of October 8, 1888. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Selden, Texas, September, 1888.

ELDER S. F. CAYCE:

Very Dear Brother-I send you the following article to insert in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, at the request of several brethren. The article was published in the Landmark of October 15, 1886, and is as follows: verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now"-is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live."-(John 5:25). This is the language of our Saviour, and all lovers of truth ought to acknowledge His word as the truth. "Thy word is truth." Then what are we to learn from this truth stated in the text? There are two grand leading truths in this text. What are they? Answer: First, Man is dead. 2. Men live only by hearing the voice of the Son of God. This is the truth plainly stated by our Saviour, and is a confirmation of truth stated in the penalty announced to our foreparents in the garden of Eden, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." This is the first testimony we have on record of this death; and again, "you hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins. "-(Ephesians 2:1). This is another plain testimony of the truth, "Even when we were dead in sin hath He quickened us. "-(Ephesians 2:5). "And you, being dead in your sins," etc., "hath He quickened. "-(Colossians 2:3). This is a direct Scriptural account of the state of fallen man. This is a true statement of our fallen, depraved, condition before God. In this condition we do not love God, neither can we love Him. And why? Because we are dead to God and godliness; hence, to love or know God we must live; and how do we live? They that hear the voice of the Son of God live, and those alone live unto God.

Preaching the glorious gospel of Christ is a wonderful thing, and for a glorious purpose; but the preaching of the gospel does not give life to the dead in sins, but ministers of Christ proclaim, or preach, a power that can, or does, quicken or make alive the dead. Just back of all of our preaching is a miracle of grace performed by God Himself, and that is to give or impart life to the sinner, hitherto dead in trespasses and in sins; and then such a one is influenced by and through the preaching of the gospel of the Son of God, for the Scriptures say: "He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." It will be noticed that such as heard believed; hence, hearing is not in order to life, but is evidence of life; hence, when I see a sinner that hears the gospel, as the word of the Lord, and believes on Jesus as his Saviour, I take it that such a one is passed from death unto life, and his hearing and believing are evidences of the fact that such have eternal life. It is the voice of the power of God's Spirit that gives the hearing, seeing and understanding heart; and being thus alive spiritually, repentance and belief follow as a sequence, and believing, hope springs up, as a consequence, that is both sure and steadfast. I cannot put anything between the Spirit and the sinner dead in sins. If we do, it is not the immediate, or direct, operation of the Spirit, and the Scriptures tell us it is the "Spirit that quickeneth." The Spirit is the life. I wonder if in the resurrection of the dead from their graves, there will be a preacher, or a Sunday school, or any other medium besides the immediate and direct power of God in calling them from their graves? If so here, why not there, for both are brought from death the same way, for our Saviour tells us so. Our text says the hour is coming, and now is, that the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God and live, and then in verse 28 He tells us: "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth." It seems to me that if God uses any means outside of the immediate, direct, and effectual operation of His Spirit in quickening of the sinner, dead in sins, He will also in the quickening of the dead in the grave. If the voice of the Son of God can only be heard, life imparted by or through preaching what some term the gospel, the same means will be needed in the future resurrection of our vile bodies from their graves, or else we will not hear the voice of the Son and come forth, and we know such will not be the case then: neither do I believe that such will be the case here; but that God and God alone gives life, and then the dead live, and are then capacitated to be influenced by the preaching of the gospel to repent, to believe the gospel preached, and believing they rejoice with joy that is unspeakable and full of glory. All these fruits may come by the influence of preaching, but these fruits are grown on live trees, not on dead ones. Kill the sinner to the love of sin, and then he will love God, and this is God's work; "I kill and I make alive." Where there is no life there is no hearing, seeing, feeling, tasting nor acting; but having life one can and does feel, and is conscious. Just so, spiritually; if we are sorry for sin, and grieve on account thereof, it is because we are alive spiritually. That is what caused the three thousand who heard Peter's preaching to cry out, "what shall we do?" They had feeling, or his preaching would not have pricked them in their hearts; that is, his preaching taking effect on them, shows that they were alive, for we might prick a dead man a hundred times, and that in his heart, but it would be of no avail. But Peter's words, as the word of the Lord, fell into three thousand hearts that were circumcised by the Spirit of God, and hence they felt it and cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" "The Lord opened Lydia's heart, and she attended dead do not realize that they are lost. Paul influenced the jailer because he was alive, and all such may be and are influenced by the living; and God does, no doubt, use preaching and His written word to convict such as this jailer, to lead such to repent, to believe, to obey the ordinances, and follow in all the good works enumerated in the Bible. But back of all this, as before stated, there is a miracle that is wrought by the Spirit, or power of God, as manifested in the case of Lazarus. The Son of God cries, "Lazarus, come forth;" and he obeys Him. Then He says to His disciples, "loose him, and let him go." In love to all the saints, R. A. BIGGS.

Circular Letter

---February 20, 1917

The following Circular Letter was written by Elder W. N. Tharp, of Liberty, Ind., and published in the minutes of the White Water Association for 1911. Elders John R. Daily and E. W. Harlan were appointed as a committee, in connection with Elder Tharp, to examine the letter before it was published. We copy the letter just as it appears in the minutes. We believed then what the letter teaches, and we believe that way yet. As to whether others believe that way now or not is not for us to say. C. H. C.

THE LETTER

The White Water Primitive Baptist Association in session with the East Fork Flat Rock Church, in Rush County, Indiana, to the several churches composing our body, greeting:

In token of our love and fellowship we send you this annual epistle, and as a subject we desire to call your attention to the words of Jesus to Nicodemus, (John 3:7), "Ye must be born again."

That which must be is essential; without it we cannot obtain that for which it is accomplished. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God," nor enter into it. Whatever other qualification we may have for the kingdom of heaven, the lack of this prevents us from entering.

"Born again" clearly implies a second birth. The same person that was born of the flesh must be born of the Spirit. Jesus said to Nicodemus, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit;" but this must not be construed to mean two persons, lest we contradict our text, which says, "Ye must be born again."

The first birth delivers us unto the environments of the material world through the flesh. Without this birth we could have no personal individuality nor any tangible relation to material things. The second birth delivers us into the environment of the spiritual world through the Spirit, by the Spirit; and without this second birth we could have no personal individuality in the kingdom of God, nor any knowledge of the things that God has prepared for them that love Him.

The second birth is sometimes spoken of as a change; that the person is changed. The word birth does not imply an entire change of the one born, but a change of relation; delivered from their former dependence into such a relation with the things about them that makes them desire the things that pleasantly affect their senses. In the first birth we are brought into relation with good and evil, and in our depraved state we are not able to choose between them; and laying hold on whatever gives us present pleasure, we run headlong into sin, finding more pleasure in the ways of sin than in the ways of righteousness; abusing all the appetites and passions of the body and mind, which are given to us as blessings, thereby bringing disease, sorrow, and death.

But thanks be to God! we are "born again," and into an environment where there is no sin or evil. Nothing but good is in our way. This is why John said, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." There is no sin in this new heaven and new earth. Peter said, "We, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness;" therefore we cannot sin. Our sin is in the flesh and must remain while we live in this world, because we are not removed from its environment.

The change in the walk and conversation of the child of God is not the result of the destruction of the fleshly desires, but it is the result of a new life, giving him a knowledge of better things, which can only be enjoyed by those who are born again. We still often find ourselves engaged in our former practices of sin in thought, word, or deed, which, with the mind, we hate, but with the flesh we love. For this reason Paul said, "With the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." All our thoughts and actions with the old environment are mixed with sin, but all our thoughts and actions within the new environment are holy, righteous and pure, being above the law and emanating from the spirit of holiness. By being born again we receive a "measure of the Spirit," "an unction from the Holy One," which causes us to love and seek the things that are above, where Christ sitteth, and to think on "whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report." -

Admitting that the child of God is at the same time in both environments, it is easy to understand how it is that he is sometimes disobedient. The child of God may walk in sin, but he cannot live in it; it is death to him. "How can we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" "To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." When we go astray it is not that we cease to love God, or the things in His kingdom, but that we are drawn away by our own lusts (fleshly desires). "Wherefore," says James, "my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath; for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls." The change for which we are waiting is still in the future, and will be consummated when we pass from this mortal state to the glorious immortal state. Job said, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." Paul said, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." This new birth of which we speak and write is wholly the work of God. "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Man made Christians are like those who made them, without any spiritual life, therefore without any knowledge of spiritual things. As Jeremiah said of the wooden idols, "They must needs be borne, because they cannot go."

Good Meetings

---February 27, 1917

On Saturday before the first Sunday in January we had the pleasure of being with the church at Round Lick, near Watertown, Tenn., once more. The congregation was small, but the meeting was pleasant.

On Sunday and Sunday night we were with the church called Bethel, in Nashville, Tenn. Elder J. H. Phillips was with us there. Elder Phillips had just closed his singing school at that place. The improvement in the song service had been great. We were delighted to see such improvement, and so much interest manifested. At the night service a young Brother Reid, son of Brother J. H. Reid, and young Sister Dorothy Monroe asked for a home in the church. They were joyfully received.

On Thursday afternoon, January 25, we went to Jackson, Tenn., and spent the night with Elder D. Hopper very pleasantly. We enjoyed the visit with him very much. Friday morning we left Jackson and went to Hattiesburg, Miss., where we were met at the train, and spent the night with Brother McDonald. Sister J. D. Davis, of Braxton, had learned that we were to be at Ideal on Saturday and Sunday, so she went from Braxton with us. On Saturday morning Brother A. N. Vance came for us and conveyed us out to the church, where we had meeting on Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday Brother S. A. Odum and wife and Sister Davis asked for a home in the church, and were gladly received. They were baptized Sunday morning by the unworthy writer.

On the first Sunday in February, and Saturday before, we were with the church at Palestine, near Laurel, Miss. Several brethren from sister churches were present, and the meetings were sweet and delightful. The Lord's sweet presence was manifested at the meetings at both these churches.

On Wednesday night we were with the church in North Chattanooga, Tenn. Elder Golston was with us there, and also on Thursday. The meeting was a pleasant one. We were disappointed that we did not get to meet Elder Raulston there, but he was away filling appointments that had been published in the paper for him.

On Thursday we were at Woodville, Ala., and also at night. The meetings there were good, and we enjoyed our visit among those good people. They are a lovely band of brethren and sisters, and fellowship abounds among them.

On Saturday and Sunday we were at old Flint Church. This is the oldest church (Baptist Church) in the state of Alabama. Elder Harvey Houk, the pastor, was with us there. Elder Andrew Houk was also present on Sunday. Other brethren in the ministry were also present. The meetings were delightful, and we felt that the Lord was present. Where the Lord manifests His delightful presence, there is joy and peace. The brethren there, and at other places where we have been, are satisfied with the "good old way" that our fathers have trod, both in doctrine and practice, and want none of the new-fangled notions of men, nor any of the wrangles over questions that gender strife.

On the third Sunday, and Saturday before, in February, we were with the church at Brush Creek, Graves County, Ky. Elders K. M. Myatt, J. R. Scott, J. B. Halbrook, and R. L. Perry were present. Again the Lord's delightful presence was manifested, and the meetings were sweet and delightful indeed. The congregations were not large, but the Lord graciously manifests His sweet presence in small congregations as well as in large ones; and where the Lord is present with speaker and hearer, the meeting is glorious, whether the congregation is large or small. We shall not soon forget this delightful meeting at old Brush Creek. May the Lord graciously grant to continue His heavenly blessings with and upon them, is our humble prayer.

We ask that our readers please remember us in their prayers. We are dependent upon the Lord to sustain and keep us, and feel to be poor and needy.. C.H. C.

A Pleasant Tour

---February 27, 1917

We left home on Friday before the third Sunday in October, 1916, in company with Elder H. L. Golston, for the Amite Association, in South Mississippi. We attended that association on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, and it was a pleasant and enjoyable meeting. Several ministers were present. Then we filled appointments at most of the churches in that association, as arranged by Elder C. L. Clark. There were some additions to some of the churches at some of the meetings. Then we went into Southeast Mississippi and filled appointments as arranged by Elder J. A. Ford. There were several additions to some of the churches at some of those meetings; and the meetings were all pleasant and delightful in that section. Then we went into the bounds of the Antioch Association and filled appointments as arranged by Elder J. W. Jones. After filling those appointments we went to Glenwood, Ala., and filled an appointment there. At that place we had the great pleasure of meeting Elder J. E. W. Henderson, whom we had never met until that time. Then went on to Southeast Alabama and filled the appointments as arranged by Elder M. E. Petty; then to Phoenix City, Alexander City, and Goodwater, then Decatur. The meeting at Alexander City was rained out. There were some additions at some of the churches in Southeast Alabama, also; and the meetings were usually sweet and delightful. For several weeks during the first part of the trip we suffered a great deal with a rising on our neck, but we had a good nurse along in the person of Elder Golston, who took good care of us. He was good and kind and tender in dressing the sore every day for quite awhile. We missed one appointment on account of illness, and only two or three appointments were missed on account of bad weather. Taken all in all this was a pleasant tour, and shall not soon be forgotten by us. We were with Elder Golston ten weeks, -and it grieved us much when the time came for us to separate at Decatur. We arrived home on Sunday morning, December 24, and found all as well as usual, for which we felt so thankful. That was our regular day at home. The meeting at home was sweet and delightful. At the request of the brethren and sisters we had meeting on Monday also. The Lord's divine presence was sweetly manifested - at least, many of us felt that way about it.

We shall ever remember the great kindness manifested to us by the brethren and sisters while we were on this tour; and the many expressions of love, sweet fellowship and sympathy, and endorsement of our feeble efforts to speak in the name of the Master, are held in grateful remembrance. May heaven's richest blessings be showered down upon them all, is our humble prayer; and we ask that they all still remember that we need their prayers.

This is late for an account of this tour, we know, but we have neglected writing it sooner, and have had so much to do that it seemed we could not find the time. We cannot now go into detail, but only make this brief statement. Too much detail is often given to accounts of tours, any way, we think. C. H. C.

Glorious Hope - An Old Article

---February 27, 1917

It has been charged that we have changed - that we are not advocating now what we advocated a few years ago. We publish the article below to show that we have not changed - that we believe now just exactly what we did when the following article was written by Elder K. M. Myatt, and published in THE PRIMITIVE Baptist of April 1, 1889. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

ELDER S. F. CAYCE: -

My Dear Brother-Through the mercy of a crucified Redeemer, I am spared to the present; the afflictions of my body are so I am at home.

I do not want to be conspicuous; neither do I want to crowd out better matter, but I have a desire to communicate a few thoughts to the readers of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, but if in your judgment you think my thoughts unprofitable cast them aside. Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ, wrote to "them that are sanctified by God the Father, . preserved in Christ Jesus, and called." Paul said to the brethren at Rome, "whom He (God) did predestinate, them He also called; whom He called, them He also justified; and whom He justified, He also glorified." Question: If He calls all men in a numerical sense, will not all that He calls be sanctified and justified and glorified? Again: If any that He (Jesus) calls go to that awful place called hell, will they not go there justified? Paul said to Titus that "the grace of God that bringth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us" how to live in this evil world, looking forward to the blessed hope, which is Jesus, who gave Himself for all that were sanctified, preserved and called. What for? "That He might purify unto Himself a peculiar people." Why are they peculiar? Because they are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, peculiar for good works. The call is prerequisite to good works. Ephraim said he was a cake unturned, but when the Lord turned him, he was turned, and then he repented. Again, "turn me, O Lord, and I will run after thee." Prior to the call they are dead in sin, but when Jesus calls, they hear; and they that hear, live, from the fact they are called by His word, and His word is Spirit, and His word is life; and "the promise is to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." So we find that this call is effectual. Therefore they are blessed, from the fact they are chosen. "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest and causest to approach unto thee." Again, "Blessed is the man that standeth not in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful," etc., "but his delight is in the law of the Lord, "from the fact that he is blessed with the Spirit of God, which is eternal life, and that life causes action, as Paul said to the brethren at Philippi: "It is God that worketh in you to will and to do." Again, to the brethren at Rome: "Know ye not that it is the goodness of God that leadeth thee to repentance?" So repentance and all good works are the fruit of the Spirit, which make manifest that the subject has been called with an holy calling, and that calling is according to His (God's) own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began; but His people are saved in time according to that purpose, and those that are saved are sinners of Adam's race, and those Adamic sinners are born again. Old things are done away and all things become new, but at the same time old nature is the same; "for the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, -but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope." So the dear child looks forward to the consummation of all things, because "the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." So when I awake in His likeness I shall see God and be satisfied; and all of God's sanctified ones are called from nature to grace, and in the resurrection morn they will be called from corruption to incorruption, and that by the Spirit of Jesus. Then the ransomed of the Lord can sing the sweet anthems of praise to Him who hath called them from darkness to light. Solemn thought! Will I be there to chant His praise?

ORIGIN OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS

---March 6, 1917

Brother Joel M. Rogers, of Williston, Tenn., writes us as follows: "I would like for you to give me the reference to the author of the first Sabbath school, and date and purpose; also the first church-taught Sabbath school."

As authority on this question we refer to the Schaff Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, and to the International Cyclopedia, published by Dodd, Mead & Co., or to any other reliable encyclopedia. For the benefit of our readers, as well as for the benefit of Brother Rogers, we copy the following from the International Cyclopedia:

Sunday schools were founded about the close of the year 1751 by Robert Raikes, a printer in Gloucester C. H. C. Business leading him into the suburbs of the town, inhabited by the lowest class of the people, he was struck with concern at seeing a group of children, miserably ragged, at play. He was informed that "on Sunday the street was filled with a multitude of wretches, who, having no employment on that day, spent their time in noise and riot, playing at chuck, and cursing and swearing." To check this deplorable profanation of the Lord's day he engaged four women, who kept dame schools, to instruct as many children as he should send them on the Sunday, in reading and the church catechism, for which they were to receive one shilling each. In a short period a visible improvement was effected both in the manners and morals of the children, who came in considerable numbers; they attended church with their mistresses, and a great many learned to read and say their catechism. Such was the origin of the Sunday schools. Within the last forty years the Sunday school has entered upon a third stage of its history. The improvement and multiplication of week-day schools obviate the necessity for teaching reading in Sunday schools, so that they have gradually become restricted to religious instruction.

This is enough to satisfy the mind of an honest enquirer as to the origin of the Sunday school, and as to what its original purpose was—the education of the poorer classes who were unable to attend the literary schools during the week. It is noted that they were taught to read the catechism; but it may be said that the catechism was used in all literary schools then—at least, this was the general rule. The object of the school was purely for literary training. C. H. C.

---March 13, 1917

We have agreed to meet Mr. F. O. Howell in public discussion at Vaughn's Chapel, the discussion to begin at 10 a. m., on Tuesday, March 27, and continue four days. Mr. Howell represents the people calling themselves Christians. Vaughn's Chapel is on the Trenton road, between Idlewild and Trenton. All are invited to attend.

Romans 6:17

---March 13, 1917

Brother J. B. Adams, Farmington, Ky., requests our views of (Romans 6:17), and asks, "Why should God be thanked that we were once the servants of sin?" - That text reads, in the King James translation, "But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you." It is not the teaching of the apostle here that we are to thank God that we were once the servants of sin. At least, that is not what we think he meant to teach. The idea is that he thanked God that they are not servants of sin now, though they once were. - The original language, as is more clearly expressed in the Revised Translation, has in it the idea that could more clearly be expressed in modern English in this way, "But God be thanked that, whereas ye were servants of sin, ye have obeyed from the heart," etc. Another idea which is not clearly brought out in the King James translation is that they were delivered, and that, for this reason, they are no more the servants of sin. The idea is, "unto which, ye were delivered." They were delivered from the power and dominion of sin; though they were once the servants of sin, Paul thanked God that they were no more the servants of sin; they have been delivered from that and have obeyed from the heart that form of teaching or doctrine unto which they had been delivered. Their hearts were made good when they were thus delivered. Hence they obeyed from a heart that had been made good. They were first made children of God, and then they obeyed.

This is the teaching of the apostle in this text, as we see it, expressed in few words.

Remarks to Elder J. W. Richardson

---March 13, 1917

The above from our dear old brother is appreciated. We have ever understood the Old Baptists to teach that regeneration is by the direct and immediate implantation of life, without any means or instrumentality whatever, and that people are converted through persuasion, or by arguments. One may be converted through the instrumentality of preaching-if you wish to use the term instrumentality-but one is not regenerated that way.

There is a legal repentance required of every violator of law. If one is guilty of the violation of law-let it be God's moral law, or any other righteous law-it is his duty to repent; it is his duty to turn from such violation or wrong doing, and live in obedience to the law. Then there is a gospel repentance required of gospel subjects. As Brother Richardson says, if these things are kept in view, the difficulty would be removed. C. H. C.

Letter to Elder Leonard

---May 8, 1917

The following was written as a private letter, and returned by Elder Leonard with request for it to be published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.-C. H. C.

ELDER WALTER LEONARD:

My Dear Brother-Your letter concerning your experience and ministerial life was received on March 12th, and was placed by the clerk in the office among the letters for the paper, and I have just now read it for the first time. I wish to say that there are trials and conflicts all along the way, if I know anything about the matter. Many times have I been greatly discouraged. Often the way has looked dark and gloomy to me, and I could see no ray of light at all. Remember the afflictions of Job. He lost all that he had. Satan was allowed to take all that he had, but could not touch his life. The Lord's humble poor, and especially His ministers, are often sorely tried. Their faith is often tried. When they are tried sufficiently, they shall come forth as gold; for they are tried as gold is tried. The gold is put in the furnace in being tried, and the Lord's children are tried in the furnace of affliction. In the midst of all the trials and conflicts, the Lord is a stronghold. He is a stronghold in time of trouble

We can only trust Him; and the best that we can do is to try the best we can to do what we feel to be our duty. We should not shun to do what we feel is our duty to do. The Lord is faithful. We may often be unfaithful, and we may deny Him, and refuse to do what He requires at our hand. God is not mocked. If we only try to do what is right, we may leave the result with the Lord. We may often not be able to see the Lord's hand with us; but He will make things manifest in due time. In due time we shall reap, if we faint not. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous; but the Lord delivereth him out of them all." We may not be delivered just when, or how we would like to be; but this is the Lord's sure promise. He is faithful that has promised. "All the promises of God in Christ are yea and amen to the glory of God." I have sometimes been to the end of the way, as it seemed to me. I could see no way of escape. Then in an unexpected way deliverance would come. I have endeavored to go on in the discharge of duty, as I felt was required, until the very last moment; despair and ruin staring me in the face; that all was gone in a seeming moment more. Then deliverance would come from an unexpected quarter, and when hope of deliverance was gone. This has been my life along the way. Still, I may be a poor deceived mortal. I cannot say that I am a servant of the Lord. I cannot say that I know I am a child of God. I can only hope and trust. All my trust and hope and confidence is in Him. If I die, let me die trusting in a gracious and merciful Redeemer. My dear brother, my humble prayer is in your behalf. If I was able and could do so, I would every burden from you. I will do what I can. I enclose a little mite. May the Lord grant to bless you, is my humble prayer. Yours in love and fellowship, C. H. CAYCE.

The New Birth

A brother asks us this question: "When does the new birth take place? Is it at the time one is quickened, or is it when one is delivered from the burden of sin and guilt?"

Different figures are used in Scripture representing the work of regeneration. Although different figures are used, they all represent one thing, and that one thing is becoming in possession of eternal life, or the impartation of that life. Becoming in possession of eternal life is represented in Scripture as a birth, as a resurrection, as a creation, as a translation, as a deliverance, etc. All these different figures represent the same thing. To quicken is to make alive from the dead. It is to raise up out of a state of death into a state of life. It is a resurrection. See (Ephesians 2:1-6). This is an instantaneous work. This is done by the Lord speaking to them, and when He speaks to them He imparts the divine life. See (John 5:25).

The lesson taught in all these figures is that the sinner is passive in receiving eternal life. We cannot very well get more out of a figure than is intended to be taught in it.

The very fact that a child cries is unmistakable proof that a living child has been born. So when one begins to mourn on account of sin and to cry unto the Lord, begging for mercy, it is positive proof that he has been born of God. Then one may ask, "Why does he mourn if he has been born of God?" We answer, Because he does not know he has been born of God. When the fact is made known to him that Jesus is his Saviour and that he has been born of God, then he rejoices. The fact is one thing, and the knowledge of the fact is another thing.

Our brethren all agree that the sinner is passive in receiving eternal life, and that it is by the sovereign will and work of Almighty God. This is the fundamental point, and we are all agreed on it. We should not, therefore, cavil over the minor matters.

John 3; John 5

---July 3, 1917

The text reads: "Jesus answered" and said unto him (Nicodemus), "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." There is a difference of opinion among brethren as to what the Saviour meant by the expression "of water and of the Spirit." Some conclude that the water referred to is water baptism, but if that be true no individual can possibly be "born again" without, nor except in the act of, water baptism, for remember that this "being born again" is the subject under consideration. The Saviour had said to Nicodemus, "except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Other brethren, realizing this, and seeing that to say the water referred to is water baptism would, as we say, involve the idea of baptismal regeneration or of baptism being necessary in order to the new birth, conclude that the water spoken of by the Saviour was the amniotic water or the water of the mother's womb in the first or fleshly birth, but we do not so understand the text.

Now, brethren, let us be considerate and endeavor to understand what the Saviour is teaching. Is He teaching the necessity of being born of the flesh, or of being born of an earthly parentage? Or is He teaching the necessity of being born a spiritual birth, of being "born again?" It will certainly be admitted by all that He is teaching the necessity of another birth, a spiritual birth, in which we are "born again;" for, as already seen, he had said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus, however, could not understand how this could possibly be. He, of course, knew that in being born of the flesh, in being born of an earthly parentage, he had first to be in his mother's womb; hence he asks the question, "How can a man be born when he is old? Can he (the man who is old) enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" Then comes the Saviour's answer to the question, or questions, propounded by Nicodemus, and in answering says, in the language of the text, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man (old or young) be born of water and of the Spirit, he (the man) cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Now, brethren, can't you see, that if the Saviour meant by the expression water, the water of our mother's womb, that (we) man would, sure enough, as Nicodemus imagined, have to enter the second time into his mother's womb; for the Saviour said, "except a man be," which shows that he (man) had not been, "except a man be born of water and the Spirit," thus connecting the "water and the spirit;" not that He had under consideration two births, one of water and another of the Spirit, but He does have under consideration another birth-not the first, but another, a second birth, a new birth, a "born again," which "born again," is to be born of water and of the Spirit. This water, then, we understand to be that which purifies or cleanses from sin. Man who is born of the flesh is corrupt, is defiled with the pollution of sin, hence needs to be purified or cleansed. The Lord Jesus Christ, however, loved His people, the church, even while dead in sin; "and gave Himself for it (the church), that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." This water, or the water mentioned by the apostle in this text, viz., (Ephesians 5:26), we understand to be the same cleansing element, the same water, referred to by the Saviour in our text, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." It will certainly be admitted by all our brethren, that none can enter the kingdom of God without this sanctification, this cleansing; and this being true, Paul lets us know that Christ gave Himself for that purpose; gave Himself for the church (His people) “that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word. Neither can any enter the kingdom of God without being “born again. Being “born again,” then, and being cleansed “with the washing of water by the word” must be one and the same thing. Both are expressions showing that poor sinners, who are polluted with sin, yea, dead in trespasses and sins, need to be made new, even “new creatures” in Christ, “created in Christ Jesus.” And as the Saviour is talking about the necessity of this work, this is certainly what He means. Again, Paul says, (Titus 3:5), “Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost. This “washing of regeneration” is the same thing that is referred to by the apostle in the expression “washing of water by the word,” and this word is Christ. Hence this “washing of regeneration” must be the same work or process that is referred to by the Saviour in our text, “Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.” This being “born of water and of the Spirit,” or “being born again,” is brought about or effected by the Spirit of God, and is therefore the work of God; hence it is “not by works of right hence, in the expression, “and renewing of the Holy Ghost,” it is the creature, and not the Holy Ghost, that is renewed, for the Holy Ghost needs no renewal; but man, being unclean, being defiled with sin, needs to be renewed, needs to be made anew, and this renewing is done by the Holy Spirit; hence called “the renewing of the Holy Ghost.”

The water mentioned in the text as well as that referred to by the apostle in the expression “by the washing of regeneration” and “with the washing of water by the word,” all, according to our understanding, represent the grace of God and the blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. In ((4:8) (Isaiah 44:8), God says, “For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed.” The Saviour also says, (John 4:14), “Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life;” and again, vii. 38, “He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.” All these expressions of Scripture show, not only that a cleansing, a washing, or a new birth, is absolutely necessary in order that poor sinners be prepared for heaven, but they also show that the element by which they are cleansed, or that which is applied by the Spirit in their cleansing, is represented as “water.” Hence the Saviour continues, verse 6, “That which is born of the flesh is flesh;” but some brethren conclude that this explains His expression “born of water,” but we should notice that He did not say born of water and born of the Spirit; but said (all in one sentence) “born of water and of the Spirit.” This does not embrace two births, but one birth, a new birth, a “born again” birth, and also shows the element in which or through which that birth is effected, “of water,” meaning of or through the grace of God, the blood of Christ. The text also shows by what power or agent this birth of water, this birth through the grace of God, is brought about, i. e., “and of the Spirit.” Hence the Saviour, after showing the necessity of this birth by saying “that which is born of the flesh is flesh,” and by this also showing that if the second birth was effected in the way that Nicodemus imagined or mentioned, that the man would yet be a natural man only, would yet be born of the flesh only. He therefore adds, “and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit,” showing that to be “born of water and of the Spirit,” to be born again, is a spiritual work. And He then continues, “Marvel not that I said unto thee,

Ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth (or pleaseth, blows sovereignly or independently of man's will or agency), and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." That is to say, as it was with Nicodemus about the wind, or as he could not tell from whence the wind came nor whither it goeth, "so is every one that is born of the Spirit;" he cannot tell how nor whence it came nor whither it goeth; but he does know that, like the blowing of the wind, it was all independent of his natural will or agency. Nicodemus, however, could not understand this, hence asks, "How can these things be?" But the Saviour said, "If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell' you of heavenly things?" Meaning, by the term "earthly things," things which take place on the earth or in this world. But notwithstanding this "new birth," this being "born of water and of the Spirit," this being "born again" takes place, with the children of God, HERE IN TIME, that does not enable man with his natural mind to comprehend or understand it, and as the Saviour said, (John 10:26), "Ye believe not because ye are not of my sheep," and again, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit, because they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

May God help us who have reason to hope, or believe, that we have experienced this birth and thereby given the ability to comprehend spiritual things, "things of the Spirit," not only enable us to understand these things, but may He give us cause to rejoice in and feast upon the glorious results or benefits that are manifested unto us in the same. And may we all be found walking in the "ordinances of the Lord blameless," thus proving or showing our "faith by our works," is our prayer, for Christ's sake. Amen. -

This is what I believe."C. H. C.

Card Playing

---July 3, 1917

A short time ago we received the following letter, which explains itself:

Dear Brother-Would be glad if you would answer a few questions in regard to members of the Old Baptist Church playing cards "-for past time," of course. They have a game here called Rook. Other churches are criticizing. Even the ones that "are reaching over with the long-handled hoe" are losing faith in us; but knowing this, they still play. Also, what do you think of the deacon of the church having a party? Maybe I am too old-fashioned; but I think I love the Old Baptists, and it pains me to have them "slurred." I stayed at home from church Sunday because it was communion time, and I did not feel like taking part in the service unless I had the right feeling in my heart for the brethren. Was it wrong to stay away?

It is strange to us that any church, claiming to be an Old Baptist Church, will tolerate any such conduct and practice by her members. Fashionable so-called churches have their societies and card parties and amusements, but the church of God has never engaged in such, and she has never tolerated such. These so-called churches, in some places, have rooms fitted up and prepared for their adherents and friends to meet and play cards and engage in other games, such as pool, billiards, etc. They claim that they do this to prevent the people going to other places to engage in such amusements. Thus they confess that their members love the world and worldly amusements, and have not been killed to such. But the Old Baptists have always held that the humble followers of the lowly Saviour have been killed to the love of such things, and that the church of God has never needed them. Card playing at home, unless it is a game that is of actual benefit, in which the person can and does learn something of real value, has a bad influence. It may be fascinating and somewhat exciting, and is. Human nature loves fascination and excitement. Having learned and tasted the fascination and excitement in card playing, the person is then more easily tempted and persuaded to engage in the card game in the gambling den, or gambling hall. The influence is bad. Most of those who frequent the gambling dens, and who are gamblers, got their first "taste" of card playing at the social card table. An Old Baptist who engages in such practice has very little respect for himself and for the church of God. The church should not tolerate such. The church of Christ is above the world, and true Old Baptists have been called out of the world. Even the world expects better things of them than they do of other people.

And then a deacon giving a party at his home! Shame! Shame on the man wearing the name deacon who would do such a thing! And shame on the church wearing the name Primitive Baptist that would retain a man in her fellowship who would do that! A deacon is supposed to be a man of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom. See (3) (Acts 6:3). It is preposterous to suppose that those men who were set apart by the apostles to the deaconship ever did such - a thing as give a "party" at their homes. The qualifications of the deacons are plainly laid down in (I Timothy 3:8-10): "Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless." Turn to the chapter and read it all. The deacons should set such examples as are worthy of emulation.

If the Old Baptists engaged in all such practices as other people engage in, what would be the difference between the Primitive Baptists and other people? The Lord's people are a peculiar people zealous of good works. God's people are crucified unto the world and the world unto them. They are dead to sin and alive unto God. At least, that is the way the apostle expressed it. If they love the world, and the things of the world, and love sin as well as they ever did, then they are not dead TO sin; they are not crucified to the world, and they have no right to membership in the church of Christ. We simply say, most emphatically, that such conduct and such practice should not be tolerated by an Old Baptist Church, and no true Primitive Baptist Church will continue to tolerate it.

You should not stay away from your meetings because some of the members are doing wrong. Two wrongs will not make a right. You should go to your meetings, and you should labor to restore such erring ones, to get them to forsake such wrong conduct, and if they cannot be reclaimed, then the church should withdraw fellowship from them. After all due labor, patience, and forbearance, if the church will not do her duty in the case, then those who stand upon gospel order and practice can and should withdraw from such disorder. The identity of the church would be with those who withdraw from the disorder.

These are some of our thoughts concerning the matters mentioned. May the Lord help us all to live right, to live in such a way as to honor Him and to honor the profession which we have made. May He help us all to live in such a way as to prove our claim true that the Primitive Baptist Church is the church of Christ.

Debate Postponed

---July 10, 1917

The twenty-fourth of July is the time agreed on between Elder J. L. Davis and the writer for a discussion in Texas; but circumstances over which we have no control are such that we cannot go to Texas just now. Hence, the debate will not be held at that time. We wrote Elder Davis several days ago asking that the debate be postponed until the latter part of October or until November. We have not yet heard from him; but as we cannot go in July, and as the time is about up, we are publishing this notice now, so that our brethren may know how things are. There are duties which have come up unexpectedly which require us to stay here at home, or in this vicinity, for the present. So we simply take the liberty to call the debate off for the present time, and will try to get an agreement with Elder Davis for a later date. We trust that it may all be arranged in a way that will be satisfactory to all parties. C.H.C

A Progressive Mixture

---July 10, 1917

In the Pilgrim's Banner for July, 1917, a Progressive paper edited by Elder R. H. Barwick, of Columbus, Ga., we find an account of a tour by Elder J. T. McArthur, of Cordele, Ga. Elder McArthur is identified with the Progressive (organ) party of Georgia, and the Banner is published in the interest of that party. Elder McArthur first visited the disorderly faction of the Sequachee Valley Association, near Chattanooga, Tenn., a faction that has no recognition among the orderly Baptists of Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, or elsewhere, that we have any knowledge of. Then he visited some of the churches in the Elk River Association, which is another faction in disorder, and which has no recognition among the orderly Baptists. Both these factions have secret order affiliation and other disorders among them. In the last named association Elder McArthur was with Elder W. A. Pinkstaff, and affiliated with him. Then he says:

After leaving the above named churches it was my privilege to meet with the brethren of the College Street Church of Nashville, Tenn., where we had services for two nights. Dr. J. Bunyan Stephens is the pastor of this church, assisted by Elder W. L. Murray, of Nashville. I was received very kindly by the church and above named elders. After leaving Nashville I went to Dresden, Tenn. Was met by Elder A. B. Ross, who conveyed me to Shiloh Church, where it was my privilege to preach to his congregation morning and evening. Elder Ross, I learned, is an able defendand of the doctrine we love. He and his brethren received me very kindly. He and his church is a member of the Greenfield Association and Elder Ross is their moderator. From this church I was conveyed over to Palmersville, where I met with the brethren of this church at their regular meeting time, Saturday and fourth Sunday in April. This is a strong and flourishing church, pastored by Elder J. J. Kirkland. Elder Kirkland is much beloved by his people. After leaving this church I came back towards Nashville and spent several hours very pleasantly with Elder W. E. Brush, at McKenzie. Elder Brush is moderator of the Obion Association. Most likely Elders Brush and Ross will pay our people in Georgia a visit some time this year.

I visited the homes of all the above named elders while in Tennessee, and was very cordially received by them and their brethren. I also visited Brother W. W. Mullins at his home while in Nashville. Brother Mullins is editor of the Regular Baptist, published at Nashville, Tenn. After leaving McKenzie I boarded the train for Knoxville, a distance of over three hundred miles, to visit the Baptists of East Tennessee, which I will give you a report later.

This extract from Elder McArthur's account of his trip is sufficient to show what some folks are mixing up with. Elder J. J. Kirkland and his church at Palmersville have no recognition among orderly Baptists. That church was with the Elders Kirkland in their departures a few years ago, and has not been recognized by the churches of the Greenfield Association for a number of years. The churches which Elder McArthur visited in East Tennessee were churches which went with the Kirkland departure from the Powell's Valley Association several years ago. W. W. Mullins is with the Burnam party, who separated from the orderly Baptists years ago on the means question. They hold and teach that God uses means and instrumentalities in the regeneration of sinners. If Elders Brush and A. B. Ross wish to visit that Progressive party of Georgia, we have no desire to hinder them, and we do not publish this in order to stop them from making the visit. We only give space to this as a matter of news, so that the brethren generally may know what some of the preachers are doing, and what they are mixing with. We do not know what this Brush, Ross, excluded Progressive, Kirklandite, Burnamite mix-up means; but it looks like there is going to be a general union of forces of disorder and excluded factions. An Old Article

Nothing is of more interest to us poor Adam sinners than the subject of salvation. This subject, and what inspired writers have said on the same, has given me more concern than any subject encouched in the Book of all books. The subject of salvation will, or ought to, interest anyone who has had a knowledge of same shed abroad in their hearts. We have learned that to be saved from destruction or eternal punishment we must be delivered by the all powerful hand of Almighty God. We have been taught by a direct and immediate operation of God's Holy Spirit that we were lost, ruined and unable to pay our indebtedness, and being sinful and corrupt were wholly unable to satisfy divine justice. The law of God being a just and holy law and we, being unjust and unholy, were wholly unable to meet its demands. Hence, we can only say, "Worthy art thou who wast slain and hast by thy blood redeemed us to God." We can only praise Him for this precious salvation that was treasured for us so long ago. Paul says of this salvation, "By grace are ye saved." Again, he says it is "by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, not according to our works, but according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world." No one of God's humble poor would undertake to say that we are delivered from sin and condemnation, raised from a life of ruin and degradation to a life akin to God by our work, or even according to our works, because our works were evil like ourselves. But don't conclude because a child can't assist in its birth that it never does, after birth, become able to obey the orders of its parents. Anyone who has been taught to know the source from whence this valuable deliverance comes ought to then read the Holy Bible and learn that we are delivered in a timely sense according to our works. This same Paul, speaking directly to the same person says, first to Timothy, "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this, thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." "Save thyself." By grace you are already saved. If Timothy must save himself by doing something after that he was a saved man, and was even preaching the everlasting gospel of the Son of God, does it not follow that it was according to how he took heed unto himself and unto the doctrine, continued in them, etc.? "All that hear thee." Those who heard Timothy in the sense that they repented of their wrong way of living, living after the flesh, and joined the church and were baptized, of course were saved from many hurtful things in time. Only those who were saved with an everlasting salvation could hear Timothy in the sense spoken. No one would believe for a moment that they could hear Timothy in the sense spoken independent of the gracious influence and sustaining presence of God's unerring Spirit. Yet there are some things required of us, and while we are happy to admit that we must have God's gracious influence and strengthening presence to guide and uphold us in order that we do the things required at our hands, we insist that sometimes we have to repent of our wrongs and get in the straight and narrow way where Jesus ever abides before we can have Him with us. The way that leads unto life here is straight and narrow, and to have the gracious presence of Jesus we must get in the way. We must not conclude because we go to the right of the way and have to suffer under the chastening rod of God that the way is not still strewn with the good things that are ever ready and waiting for those who deny themselves and walk in the way. We don't find the straight and narrow way many times because we follow our own sinful lusts for the sake of other things. Again on the day of Pentecost some who had been delivered from sin and degradation felt condemned because of the way they had been living, and they enquired of the apostles what they must do. Don't take my word, but take the dear old Bible, and read and see if the apostle didn't tell those persons to repent and be baptized, because their sins had been untoward generation-not from eternal ruin; but come out from among those evil persons and be separate; in that you join the church and be baptized, and instead of living like you have heretofore you follow Jesus in the straight and narrow way. If those very enquiring persons couldn't come out from the world, why, tell me, did the apostle waste breath and time admonishing them to do it? The apostle knew that they could turn from their evil ways and live right. Hence the exhortation, "Repent and be baptized, everyone of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for (because of) the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Some say to me sometimes that God only requires or enables part of His children to obey Him. But Peter failed to leave such impressions in the above text, since he exhorted every single one to repent. Some Baptists try to say, because they stay at home and run after the almighty dollar and don't attend their conference meetings as they should, that God doesn't work in all of His children to go to church. The apostle said that we are to present these very old Adam bodies of ours a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God and he left the impression, as did Peter, that he meant every one of you, not just a part. When we live after the flesh and die in the sense spoken, remember that this is one of the many things that we do that are displeasing to God, and as sure as we live after the flesh that sure we may expect to die to our usefulness, die to our influence and to our happiness and enjoyment as Christian sons and Christian daughters. If you are tempted don't say that you are tempted of God, or that it is according to God's pleasure, because "God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man." When we fail to hear Timothy and save ourselves from the things under consideration, let us not say that we went to the straight and narrow way, but failed to have divine influence to guide us on, but let us confess when we live wrong and talk wrong that the wrong is of our own selves and according to our own sinful lusts, and not because God failed to fulfill any promise of His. "The Lord is not slack concerning His promise." If there is but one salvation, and that eternal, there is not any more harmony or consistency in the Bible than if harmony and true consistency had never been known.

In hope,

Z. STALLINGS.

John 11:39

---July 17, 1917

Take ye away the stone.

It seems to have been the custom in those days that a stone be placed over a grave or sepulchre. A stone was placed over the sepulchre where the Saviour was buried, and the women who went to His grave early in the morning of the first day of the week said, "Who will roll away the stone?" The stone over the grave of Lazarus has no reference whatever to a stony heart. It simply shows that Lazarus was dead, and that he was buried according to the usual custom. In the resurrection of Lazarus was a wonderful display of the power of God. He could have raised Lazarus just as easily without the stone being rolled away as after it was taken away. The stone being over the grave did not hinder His ability to raise Lazarus. But if He had raised him without the stone being first taken away then those unbelieving Jews would have said it was all a "sham" and that Lazarus was not dead. Then the question might be asked, Why did the Saviour not roll the stone away Himself? We answer, It was not necessary that He roll it away. They could do that themselves. They could not give life to Lazarus, but they could roll away the stone. The Saviour did what they could not do. So He tells them to roll away the stone, and when it is taken away, they Can see Lazarus lying there now dead, and "behold he stinketh." Now, the Saviour cried with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth," and he obeyed, the Saviour imparting life with the command. They have seen Lazarus was dead, and they have seen that life was imparted to him, and he came forth. There is absolutely no room to dispute the fact that the dead was raised. Hence this is a wonderful display of the power of Christ, showing that He had power to raise the dead. Even so now He has power to raise the sinner out of a state of death in sin to state of life in Christ.

The sinner is not commanded to take the stony heart away, or to take the stony heart out of the flesh. In ((9) (Ezekiel 11:19-20) the Lord says, "And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God." Here we have the positive promise of the Lord, the God that cannot lie, that He will take away the stony heart and that He will give a heart of flesh. He does not tell us to do what He has promised to do for us, and He does not promise to do for us what He commands us to do. Having the stony heart taken away, and a heart of flesh given, is equivalent to being born again, and sinners are nowhere commanded in God's word to be born again. This taking away of the stony heart and giving of a heart of flesh is something the Lord will do "that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances and do them." Then the stony heart must be removed in order that acceptable obedience be rendered to the Lord; then the stony heart must be removed before the sinner 'obeys. So, if the Lord commands the sinner to remove the stony heart, and the sinner cannot render acceptable obedience until the stony heart is removed, and the Lord cannot or will not save the sinner until the stony heart is removed, it looks to us as though there is no hope for the poor sinner. They do get it somewhat mixed, sure enough. But the Lord takes away the stony heart and gives them a heart of flesh and puts a new spirit within them. The Lord thereby qualifies them for His service. But someone might ask, "Does not the Lord somewhere command somebody to purify their hearts?" Certainly He does, but He is not talking to alien sinners. ((8) (James 4:8) says, "Draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded." James is not talking to unregenerate sinners; he is talking to the brethren, to children of God, those to whom the Lord has given a heart of flesh. In the eleventh verse he says, "Speak not evil one of another, brethren." He uses the term "brethren" all along in different places, so it has no application whatever to the unregenerate. Some brother, then, might ask, "How are they to purify their hearts?" Peter tells us how. ((Pet 1:22) (I Peter 1:22-23): "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." They purified their souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit. To obey the truth through the Spirit, one must first be in possession of the Spirit, or must have the Spirit before they obey. Then they do not purify their souls unto eternal life, but unto the unfeigned love of the brethren. They are in possession of the Spirit before the obedience is rendered; and the Lord promised to put a new Spirit within them, and when the Lord puts that Spirit within them they are "born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." All the Lord's dear children, to whom the Lord has given a heart of flesh, should endeavor to "purify their souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren." C.H.C.

Galatians 3; Galatians 6:18

---July 17, 1917

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

To our mind this text represents our becoming in possession of eternal life as being baptized into Christ. To be baptized into Christ is to pass out of a state of death in sin into a state of life in Christ; is to be killed to the love of sin and made alive to the love of holiness. It is to be quickened into divine life; it is to be raised up together with Christ. It is also set forth in Scripture as a regeneration, being born again, born of God, begotten again, being translated; and other figures are used to represent the same thing.

This becoming in possession of eternal life is called being baptized into Christ, because a true baptism signifies that the one baptized is dead to sin, has become dead to sin, and is alive unto God. So, in becoming in possession of eternal life one dies and is made alive at the same time—they are become dead to sin and alive unto God at the same time. So, to be baptized into Christ is to be killed to sin, killed to the love of sin, and made alive in Christ. It is to be raised up into a state of life in Christ. This baptism is not a water baptism. It is a baptism of the Holy Spirit. John, who baptized the Saviour and those in the region of Jordan, said of Jesus, "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire."

The Apostle Paul, in (I Corinthians 12:13), says, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." To be baptized into one body is to be baptized into Christ; it is to be baptized into the body Christ. The redeemed of the Lord are represented as being the body of Christ. To be baptized into the body of Christ, or into Christ, is to be brought into the family of the redeemed, or into the heavenly or spiritual family. This is not done by many preachers, but by one Spirit; it is a work of the Holy Spirit.

There is a washing in baptism. In water baptism there is an outward washing which is a symbol or figure of the inward washing by the Holy Spirit. The baptism or washing of the Holy Spirit is an inward work, and it is the work which brings us into a saved state, or into Christ, or the body of Christ. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour. --(Titus 3:5-6). In this text it is expressed as the "washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." It is a work of washing or cleansing by the Holy Ghost. So by one Spirit we are baptized into one body, baptized into Christ. In this work the Holy Spirit comes in direct touch or immediate contact with the heart. In water baptism, the outward washing, the water comes in direct touch or immediate contact with the body or person baptized. So in the - inward washing or cleansing, the Holy Spirit comes in direct touch or immediate contact with the heart or soul. C. H. C.

An Oversight

---July 31, 1917

In the last two issues of the paper there were some appointments for Elder C. A. Clemmons, sent us by himself, in the bounds of the Fellowship Association. These appointments were inserted without being called to our attention. We are sorry that it becomes necessary for us to say anything about this people in our columns; but the publishing of these appointments make it absolutely necessary, as we see it. This association declares non-fellowship for the Mt. Zion, Powell's Valley, Sequachee Valley, Mud Creek, Flint River, Hillabee and Wetumpka Associations. In fact, they declare non-fellowship for everything north, west and south of them. Elder Clemmons baptized a preacher who had been excluded from the Sequachee Valley Association. That is, he baptized the man when he stood excluded from a church in that association. The Fellowship Association appears to have the wrong name. The name Non-Fellowship Association appears to be more befitting them. As to whether they are in proper condition or not, we merely refer our readers to the little pamphlet entitled "Church Order," which may be had from this office at the price of one copy for 15 cents, or two for 25 cents. The advertisement of this pamphlet appears often in our columns. We would be glad for every Baptist in the land to read it.% C. H. C.

McARTHUR SQUEALS

---August 14, 1917

In the August, 1917, issue of the Pilgrim's Banner Elder J. T. McArthur rants on us and our people at a considerable rate on account of our copying the extract from his account of his visit as published in the July issue of that paper and the short comment we made on the same. Elder McArthur now charges our people with all sorts of disorder, crime, and ungodly conduct. Now we care little for his ranting, nor for his charge. Of course, all reasonable and sensible people will know that all his charges are true, because Elder McArthur and his people are anxious to get among our people and to get recognition by them. If our people are so ungodly, and we are such reprobate sinners, why do Elder McArthur and his people seem to be so anxious to get among them, and why are they so anxious for our people to recognize them? If our people are such corrupt profligates as Elder McArthur represents them to be, why does Elder McArthur want to visit them, and preach among them? Truly, "The legs of the lame are unequal."

We care not for his ranting. We have said all that we care to say now concerning him and his people. We do not care so much about the course of Elder McArthur and his people now, anyway, as they are separate from orderly Baptists, and have no recognition by them, and it was not so much the movements of Elder McArthur that we wanted our people to know about, as it was what others were doing. "Requiscat in pace," Elder McArthur. C. H. C.

Will Not Publish

---August 14, 1917

We hereby serve notice that we will not publish any more appointments for any of those brethren who' are going around among the churches riding a hobby on regeneration, and how much of the man is a child of God, and that the body of the child of God is still under the law of sin and condemnation like the alien sinner, and who are stirring up strife and confusion among the brethren on these things. We say we will not publish any more appointments for any of these brethren if we know it. Some of them will write and address us as "dear brother" and will then do all they can, seemingly, to injure us, and will tell that we are advocating things which we do not advocate. It seems that some are even trying to slander us, and it comes to us that some have said some very ugly things about us. We would here simply suggest that some parties might better be careful what they say. This is said for the benefit of some who are posing as preachers, and the guilty party will know who we refer to. C. H. C.

What Shall We Do?

---August 14, 1917

For quite awhile we have been pondering the question seriously, and, we trust, prayerfully, "What shall we do?" If we know our own heart our desire is to do the right thing, and to pursue the proper course. Now, here is the cause of this serious enquiry with us: Our readers know that a war has been waged for some time, and that some have been charged with advocating the whole man doctrine, or whole man change doctrine. This disturbance began in Texas, and we tried to keep the matter out of our columns. We kept silent on the matters of difference and said nothing for quite awhile, as our readers generally know very well. Because we were saying nothing some were accusing us of believing the whole man doctrine. To try to satisfy the minds of some on the matter and let all know where we stand, we wrote an article expressing our views and published the same in our columns in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of November 16, 1915. Then we had no more to say on the subject, except to refer to the matter in our introduction to volume thirty-one, for awhile. Still, some continued to charge us with things we did not believe nor advocate. They began to say we had something hid, had something behind the curtain, that we had things wrapped up, and other such charges. This continued until a number-yes, many-brethren were asking us about these things, and rather demanded, or insisted, that we come out again. Finally we were forced, seemingly, to defend our position and our course and expose some things, or else be a traitor to the cause we espoused years ago. Hence we wrote several articles under the heading of "The Curtain Raised." Then some of the parties who were charging us with having things hid behind the curtain "raised a howl" because we were speaking out. Then we quit writing again, hoping the brethren would cease their ungodly attacks; but since we have quit having anything to say again, they have continued making attacks upon us and charging us with things which we have never believed nor advocated. As proof of this, we have but to refer to most every issue of the Trumpet for a number of months past. Almost every issue of that paper for several months has had an article making attacks upon us. We have been charged in that paper with advocating the whole man doctrine, the soul-sleeping doctrine and we hardly know what else. Recently we were accused of duplicity, even, in an article in that paper. Now, seeing all this, we have often, as stated above, seriously pondered the question, "What shall we do?" We have finally been able to reach a conclusion as to the course we should pursue.

There was an appointment for us to be at New Hope, near Milan, Tenn., on Tuesday, June 26, 1917. The appointments for the tour were published in several issues of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. Elder Insko, the moderator of the association (the Big Sandy), accompanied us on part of the tour. New Hope Church is in the Big Sandy Association. We went to New Hope, according to the announcement, accompanied by Elder Insko. When the hour for service came Elder R. C. Taylor, who is joint pastor of the church (if we are not mistaken) with Elder Z. Stallings, said to us and to Elder Insko, "It is preaching time; go into the stand." Accordingly, we walked into the stand, Elder Insko going with us, and took a seat by our side. When they had finished singing that song Elder Stallings walked into the stand and said, "The time has come that we must have an understanding before we can go any further with this business." He then proceeded to state that the brethren there had had an understanding among themselves that we could not preach there until we gave our reason for not publishing some appointments which he had sent us for Elder J. M. Thompson and Elders Carter and Bishop and make apology for not publishing them, whereupon we walked down out of the stand, and Elder Insko did the same. He (Elder Stallings) stated that this was not a church act, but simply an agreement by and among some of the brethren. We stated our reasons for not publishing the appointments, which we do not deem necessary for us to state here. There was some discussion, and finally a motion was made and seconded that we be not allowed to preach in their stand until we make apology for not publishing the appointments. The motion was put to a vote. We counted nine votes for the motion and seven against it. Elder Stallings counted ten for the motion and eight against it. We were informed that one of the parties who voted for the motion was not a member of the Old Baptist Church at all, at New Hope or any other place. We suppose Elder Stallings was acquainted with all the parties voting. We asked that a copy of the motion be given us in writing, and it was finally agreed, and by motion and second, which was carried, the clerk was instructed to furnish us with a copy of the same. Up to this good hour (August 8, 1917, at 5:30 p. m.) we have not received what they agreed we should have. At the union meeting of the first district of the Big Sandy Association at Mud Creek Church, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 27, 28, 29, we saw J. S. Browning, the clerk of New Hope Church, and asked him for the writing. He said that the brethren agreed at the last meeting at New Hope not to put the matter to record yet, and told him to wait about sending the writing to us. He said that this was not an act of the church, but simply an agreement among the brethren. Our readers may judge as to the good order of such proceeding. We told them that there was evidently something else wrong besides the mere fact that we did not publish the appointments. We have evidence that this is true. Now, these brethren have drawn the line against us, and we have been able to decide as to what course we would pursue. We are sorry the brethren are determined to have war and trouble and confusion; but we can see but one of two things to do—one is to step down and out, betray the cause we love, or else we must fight and defend ourselves and defend the cause we hold sacred. We do not propose to quit the field. We do not propose to be a deserter. We do not propose to be a traitor. We do not propose to be a dastardly coward. The only thing left for us to do, then, is to fight, and make proper defense of the principles we have ever stood for since we united with the Old Baptist Church at Greenfield, Tenn., on the second Sunday in August, 1889, and which we have tried to defend since the first effort we made to speak in the name of the Master on Saturday night, January 4, 1890. We want to make our defense in the proper spirit, and with the right motive in view; still, we shall be plain and shall show no favor. We ask no favor, and shall show none. Our trust and confidence is in the good Lord, who has sustained us through many dark trials and sore conflicts. His grace has been sufficient all the way, and we yet trust Him. May His loving hand still guide, direct, and protect us, is. our humble prayer. We ask every lover of truth who reads these lines to beg the Lord in our behalf, that He may direct us aright, and enable us to go in the right, that He would protect us from the hand of the enemy, and enable us to fight the good fight of faith in the spirit of the Master, and that we may be able to rightly expose every false way, and to rightly expose every man who would sow, and is sowing, discord among brethren. God hates the man who sows discord among brethren. See ((9) (Proverbs 6:19)). It is even an abomination unto the Lord. We trust we may never be guilty of that act, but we promise now that we will have something to say in the future. We trust that we may say it in the right spirit. C. H. C.

Elder Murray's Statement

---August 14, 1917

Below will be found a statement from Elder W. L. Murray in regard to the quotation made a few weeks ago from Elder McArthur's account of his trip in Tennessee. We also publish a statement from Brother W. A. Shutt, who was present when Elder McArthur made his first visit to College Street Church in September, 1916. The reader will note that the visit referred to in McArthur's account, which we quoted from, was in April 1917, and was his second visit to that place, made at the invitation of some of the members of that church.

We do not deem it necessary to make further comment.

Question to Elder Murray: On May 30, 1917, our brother, O. F. Cayce, wrote you asking that you make correction of a misrepresentation you made of him in the Trumpet of January 4, 1917. Why have you not made the correction? And do you intend to do it? Will you tell? C. H. C.

THE STATEMENT

In THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of July 10, 1917, appears an extract from Elder J. T. McArthur's account of a trip he made in Tennessee, as published in Pilgrim's Banner. From Elder McArthur's account of his trip one would think he received a very cordial welcome at College Street Church, in Nashville, Tenn. I was present at his appointment at this church, and I know whereof I speak. He was given what I consider a very cold reception. Dr. Stephens announced the appointment the third Sunday night in April, the appointment being for the Tuesday night following. I was present when the appointment was announced. I knew Elder McArthur was in disorder. I felt, however, that the members present were not informed as to his standing, although he had been there once before in company with another elder, at which time it was reported that he was in disorder. So I felt that it would not be best to protest publicly at that time, but that it would be proper to inform the members privately of his standing. This, I proceeded to do as opportunity afforded; however, I did not advise anyone not to go to hear Elder McArthur preach. So he filled his appointment, and was met by a congregation of eight persons, only four of them were members of that church. On being informed who Elder McArthur was, and that he was the man who had been there once before in company with Elder Pinkstaff, one sister called some of the other members and advised them not to go to hear him, so I was informed afterwards.

After services I returned home in company with one of the brethren who was present, he being the clerk of the church. We had not gone far until he told me that he did not like such preaching. The other brother who was present said the same thing, later. The next night being prayer meeting night Elder McArthur came back. He was invited to do so by a brother who was not a member of that church. As opportunity afforded I talked to the members of the church privately, and informed them as to Elder McArthur's standing among the Baptists. Then at the June conference I mentioned the matter publicly, calling their attention to the fact that Elder McArthur had been affiliating with the disorderly faction of the Sequachee Valley Association, and therefore, it was not expedient for them to receive him into their house. It was suggested by one of the members at this conference that the church take some action against Elder McArthur preaching there any more. And, if I had urged it, I feel assured that the church would have passed a resolution to that effect, but I told them that I didn't suppose it was necessary to do that. It was agreed, however, if he sent another appointment that he would be informed that he was not wanted.

Now, I know this is a correct statement of the matter. So, the reader may judge for himself how "kindly" Elder McArthur was received by College Street Church. After referring to me and other ministers whom he had met in Tennessee, Elder McArthur said, "I visited the home of all the above named elders while in Tennessee and was very cordially received by them and their brethren." Now, I say emphatically that this statement is incorrect. He did not visit my home; and that isn't all: he was not invited to go to my home. I have made this statement that those who read it may know the truth of the matter, and the present attitude of College Street Church toward Elder McArthur. Hoping that this will be satisfactory to our good brethren everywhere, I am your unworthy brother in hope,

BROTHER SHUTT'S STATEMENT

Elder C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-On September 11th and 12th, 1916, Elders W. A. Pinkstaff and J. T. McArthur preached at College Street Church at night, and were heartily received by Elder J. B. Stephens and the rest of the members of the above named church, and were invited to come back and to give them an appointment whenever they could. A number of the members of Bethel Church were present at both meetings, and upon our arrival at the church house we saw Elder Pinkstaff walking up and down the sidewalk in front of the church. I went in the house and there met Elder McArthur and sat down by him and asked him where he had been, and he informed me that he had been to the Elk River Association. I asked him what preachers were present, and he told me that only the home preachers were there. I asked him who they were and he said that they were Elders Pinkstaff, Woodfin, Willis, and himself being the only visiting preacher present. I told him I had heard of all these except himself. I asked him if they came direct from the Elk River meeting to Nashville, and he said, no, that they stopped over at Murfreesboro. I asked him if they had meeting at Overalls Church near Murfreesboro, and he said no, that they went out to Brother Willis' church, New Providence. Then he asked me where Brother Pinkstaff was, and I informed him that he was outside the church walking up and down the sidewalk. He got up and went out, saying he wanted to see Brother Pinkstaff a minute. When he went out I informed the brethren and sisters present who were members of College Street Church that these men were not in line with our Baptists, that they had just come from the Elk River Association, and that the Elk River had no correspondence except the Red River Association, and that the Red River and the Elk River people were all mixed up with secret orders, Absoluters, Progressives, and everything else, but they went ahead and preached them after being warned about them, and they also preached them the following night. Elder Pinkstaff said in his discourse that "God had to raise a man above the law before He could save him," and Elder McArthur said, "The righteousness of Jesus Christ would not take any man to heaven."

It being circulated around over the city that these men were not in order and that they were from among the Absoluters and Progressive element, they took up quite a bit of time defending themselves as to the absolute doctrine, branding it as a false report, but did not say they were not Progressives. The first night after meeting, these men wanted to meet the preaching brethren of the city, saying they understood there were some of them in the city. Elder J. B. Stephens arose and said, "They meant they wanted to meet with Elders Womack and Stansel, which was right; the preachers ought to visit each other more than they do." Now you remember Stansel was excluded from College Street Church a few years ago, when he with several more declared non-fellowship for College Street Church, and was afterwards received by the Absoluters and was ordained by them to the work of the ministry, and Elder Womack is known far and wide as being an Absoluter, and is pastor of the University Street Church that was dropped from the Cumberland Association a few years ago. Sister Erwin and I were talking to McArthur and asked him if he was in fellowship with Elder Ranks, of Georgia, as we understood he was from the same state, and he said he was not. I told him that the Cayce, Ranks, Morris, and Hassell line of Baptists were the only ones that we recognized here in this country, and he informed us that when he had to tie up with any certain line of Baptists in order to be recognized as an orderly Baptist he would get out of the ranks. McArthur told Sister Erwin he would like to visit Bethel Church sometime and preach for us, but we never gave him any invitation, as we only want sound preaching among us. We have no time for the Progressives, Absoluters, secret order, nor any other kind of preachers that are not in line with the sound element of Baptists. We do not want any dissecting tables set up in our little church, and if anyone comes along and sets up one to dissect man on, we will certainly kick the legs out from under it in a very few minutes. We only want to be plain, true-blue Old Baptists, not wanting anything preached that is calculated to cause discord among the brethren. Yours in a sweet hope of brighter days, 908 Acklen Avenue,
Nashville, Tenn.

Made Acknowledgment

---August 21, 1917

Last week we told of the action of New Hope Church, near Milan, Tenn., in forbidding us preaching in their stand. On August 9th they had conference and the church confessed her wrong and asked our forgiveness and the forgiveness of any others who might be offended at what she had done. So far as we are personally concerned they are forgiven, and we think the confession will be satisfactory to Martin Church. We make this statement in justice to New Hope Church, and also because we are glad that they have seen the error of their course and act. If all who have done wrong would confess their wrongs, and all would mutually forgive, and bear with each other, it might not be such a hard matter to settle troubles.

Explanation by Elder Ross

---August 21, 1917

Elsewhere in this paper will be found an explanation from Elder A. B. Ross, in which he proposes to tell how he became associated with Elder McArthur. We do not care to go into detail in the discussion of this matter, as it is unnecessary. We publish Elder Ross' statement, and the readers can judge for themselves. We would only call attention to the fact that Elder Ross admits that he casually remarked that maybe he would go to Georgia sometime. This was said to Elder McArthur when that elder requested him to visit the Progressives in Georgia. This is equivalent to an admission that he left the impression on the mind of Elder McArthur that he would visit his people sometime. It is evident, too, that he left the impression on the mind of Elder McArthur that he would visit them sometime, or else Elder McArthur would not have said what he did. Elder McArthur seemed to think it probable that Elder Ross would visit them this fall. This looks like something more than the casual remark was made that he might visit Georgia sometime. The reader will take notice, too, that Elder Ross admits that he was suspicious that Elder McArthur was not in order before he made the appointment for him at Shiloh. The following is a letter we received from Elder Lee Hanks, written July 12, 1917:
ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

My Dear Brother and Fellow Laborer in the Church of God-I deeply regret to see some that are determined to have division. I have written privately and publicly and labored most tenderly for peace. At the suggestion of Elder Oliphant I wrote that "Basis of Union," hoping to unify our people thereby. I have felt all the while that we are one people, and that those lines were wrong to be drawn between precious brethren. I still feel that we are brethren and ought to be together. I regretted to see those lines drawn in Texas and division brought on over minor differences. On the grand essentials we are one people. Divisions are so destructive to our peace and the welfare of Zion. Two years ago when I was in Tennessee I found the good Baptists there sweetly united in love. They loved you and you loved them. All received me so kindly. I shall never forget them. I was at the home of Elder A. B. Ross and visited his churches, and he and his churches received me most cordially. He told me at his home that Elder Sarrels' book on regeneration should be replied to-that he did not want it numbered among Old Baptist literature. He condemned it, and spoke of writing to Elder Stallings on this line. The Trumpet came while I was there; he threw it down, and one of the children tore it. He seemed to me to look upon the Trumpet with disgust on account of their extreme measures. He told me he wanted to come to our country in the early fall of 1915 and visit a number of associations in company with Elder Newman. He wanted to take the tour with Elder Newman, and wanted Elder Newman to go through his section of Tennessee, and assured me lie endorsed him and would gladly make his appointments. It was a surprise to me recently to see Elder Ross has now received and preached a Progressive minister who is not in fellowship with orderly Baptists here at all. I like him as a man and Christian, but could no more recognize his order than I could the Missionaries, until he sets himself right. And then notice the Progressive minister went with the Kirkland church and the Arminian secret order excluded Kirkland faction of East Tennessee and helped ordain a minister for them. Of course that is his business. I met Elders W. L. Murray, A. B. Ross, J. C. Ross and Z. Stallings on my tour, who treated me kindly and brotherly. I am sorry to see them drifting away. I am sure you are advocating the same doctrine today you did the first time I met you. Your sainted father took a bold stand against the Wallingford-Smoot doctrine of no-change, hollow log, etc., about thirty years ago, which gave us trouble then. Elders Respass, your father, Bentley, Chick, Gold. Mitchell, Henderson, J. J. Byrd, Tharp, Biggs and I condemned that doctrine then, as you have shown from their articles. I am sorry to see a spirit that "you have got to say everything like I do or be denounced." W~ should not make a brother an offender for a word. We have no popes in the Old Baptist Church. We are brethren; and preachers belong to the church, and not the church to them. Elders Webb and Newman came through our country preaching, and both preached good sound doctrine then. Neither one came among us riding hobbies. (We think Elder Webb's visit to that country was several years ago.--C. H. C.) I am sure all the good brethren in your country and Texas, too, endorse the sentiment in that "Basis of Union," if they will lay down prejudice. I wish all would accept it and let us all live in peace. We are brethren and should strive for things that make for peace. I pray that God may save His poor afflicted people from division. Yours in hope, LEE HANKS.

This letter above shows very plainly where A. B. Ross stood when Elder Hanks visited this country in the spring of 1915. But this is not all. When Elder Hanks was at our place on that tour he told us of the contemplated visit of Elder A. B. Ross to Georgia with Elder Newman. As we knew that the weather was more likely to be good in Georgia in November and December than in this country, and thinking it would be better for Elder Newman to come here in September and October and then be in Georgia in November and December on account of the weather, we suggested to our brother (O. F. Cayce) that he write Elder Ross in regard to the matter, which he did on May 25, 1915, as follows:

ELDER A. B. ROSS:

Dear Brother-You remember me letting you have a copy of Elder Sarrels' book, "The Bible Doctrine of Regeneration?" I intended to ask you what you thought of it every time I would see you but never could think of it. I guess you have read it. Please write me what you think about it. I will appreciate it. I am reading it closely now, and think I will finish it soon.

Brother Hanks told me that Elder J. S. Newman is going to visit his country this fall, and said that he and you had something to say about him coming through here. What do you think about it? Brother and Brother Phillips say they would be glad to have him. If he were to come do you think it would be a good idea to get him during the meeting of the associations if we can? And then have him visit the churches too?

Please let me hear from you about both the above things.

We are depending on you to be with us at our next meeting, as I understand you promised Brother Phillips you would. Be sure not to fail us. Your brother, O. F. CAYCE

In reply to that letter the following was received, which is dated May 27, 1915:

MR O. F. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-In reply to yours of the 25th will say that I think some of Elder Sarrels' expressions are far-fetched. If I understand him I cannot endorse his position; in fact, I do not believe his writing can be harmonized. Yes, I think it all right for Brother Newman to visit this country. I favor it, though I do not think that he can be here during our associational meetings, as I think he is to be in Georgia at that time. I told Brother Ranks that I thought I would visit his country at the same time Brother Newman is to be there, and we would arrange for Brother Newman to come back home with me, though I do not yet know whether I will go or not. Anything you may do regarding his coming will please me. I do not know of a man who I had rather would visit us than Brother Newman. Yes, I intend (D. V) to be with you next meeting. Amos to start this afternoon to the Obion union meeting.

Fraternally,

A. Bunyan Ross.

The following letter dated May 28, 1915, was sent in reply to this letter:

Elder A. B. Ross:

Dear Brother-Your letter of yesterday was received this morning. I showed it to Brother Claud, and when he read it he told me to write you to make no arrangements to leave our association this fall until after our association meets. He talked to Brother Hanks about Brother Newman coming and Brother Hanks agreed for him to come here first and be at our corresponding associations and then go from here to his (Brother Hanks') section of country. Brother intends to take the round with Brother Newman and tells me to ask you to be sure to wait until after our associations are over and then go to Georgia if you want to, as (he says) every one of our ministers will be needed this fall because it is a critical time in some sections and we want to try to keep every bit of trouble and extreme views out of this section. He also asks that you please do your best to attend all our corresponding associations that you can. It is his intention now to be at all of them but perhaps one-the Big Sandy. He can't be there as he is under promise to go to two associations in the north, one of them on the fifth Sunday⁹in August and the other the first Sunday in September. He will go from the Highland to the one that meets the fifth in August. After being in Indiana on the first Sunday in September he intends to come back here and go with Brother Newman on part of his round at least.

Say, suppose you make your arrangements to go to Georgia with Brother Newman after our association, instead of before? I know you would enjoy it. Brother also says that the last of October and in November is a much better time to go to Georgia than it is to come here. What do you say?

Of course we haven't got Brother Newman's promise to come here at all, but we are both writing him today, and I ask that you please write him also. I believe it would do good for him to come, and you know the more invitations he has the more he will feel like we really want him. Can't you write him? His address is Elder J. S. Newman, McGirk, Texas.

Amos glad you are making your arrangements to be with us next meeting. Don't forget that I am expecting you to spend one night at least with me. I have some correspondence that I want to show you.

Please let me hear from you further about the above matters.

Your brother in hope,

O. F. CAYCE.

The next reply was a postal card addressed to Elder C. H. Cayce, dated June 1, 1915. The contents of the card shows that Elder Ross wrote us something before in regard to one Mr. Morgan with whom he had held a discussion at Shiloh, near Dresden, Tenn., and that Elder Ross wanted another debate with Mr. Morgan. The following is what Elder Ross said:

ELDER C.H.CAYCE:

Dear Brother-The reason I wrote you about Morgan was because he said in one of his letters to me that he was not afraid to meet me nor our champion Cayce. In reply I told him that our people would want an abler man than he was to meet our champion Cayce; that if he would call out Hardman we would call out Cayce, and they could take up the propositions that we (Morgan and myself) discussed at Shiloh, as I could not get him to repeat the discussion with me I sent in the propositions to him, but cannot get him into it. I sent your book today. I wish for you victory in your debate. Wish I could be with you. I will write Brother Newman and try to get him to come during our associational meetings and put off my trip to Georgia later.

In hope,

A. B. Ross.

Now, the above correspondence speaks for itself. No comment is necessary. It shows very plainly where A. B. Ross stood up to June 1, 1915, if he was honest and sincere in what he wrote. Perhaps all this was only a "casual remark," as he states with reference to what he said to Elder McArthur. Not only does this show where Elder A. B. Ross stood at that time, but it also shows that we were not working secretly, as has been charged. The following is a letter dated July 26, 1916, which speaks for itself:

ELDER JOHN FUQUA:

Precious Brother-

You will find enclosed a copy of a letter written by Brother O. F. Cayce to Elder John R. Daily and Elder Daily's reply, which speaks for itself. We are aware of the fact that they are trying to hide the real issue, and thus mislead good brethren. They may succeed in this for awhile, but I am sure the Lord knows and that Revelation will make it manifest. Brother John, no man is more grieved over this sad state of affairs than I am, but we are not the aggressors in this fight. We have only acted in the defense. We stand just where we have always stood, and where the Primitive Baptists have stood from time immemorial. Elder Cayce set in to turn the Primitive Baptists of this country and the south to the Newman faction in Texas, and to down the Webb and Redford side in Texas. The real issue is that the Newman side is, and has been, teaching that the body of the child of God is changed in regeneration. We do not believe that the body is yet changed, but it will be in the resurrection. Elder Potter wrote a pamphlet in the year 1895 against the whole man change theory, and he says on page 50, "He simply believes that to have the Spirit of Christ is to have Christ in you. And if Christ be in you, we do not think that it necessarily follows that the body is quickened, for although He be in you, the body is dead because of sin, for it has undergone no change, and although the body is dead, and the spirit is the very opposite." This quotation from Elder Potter expresses what we believe. I call attention to another quotation from Elder Potter that I am sure is applicable at this time, page 56, "For those who advocate the error to say, that if we oppose them we will stir up strife, is to simply ask us to be quiet until the error - has such a hold on us that we cannot shake it loose." Brother John, if we sit still and let an error get a hold on our people, are we faithful? Has it not always been the case that those who introduced error into the Old Baptist ranks have tried to keep the main issue in the background until they can get a hold? Error will always find followers. Our association stands just where she has always stood, and by the grace of God we expect to stand there. We shall be very sorry if any of our brethren are misled and thereby turned against us; but time will bring to light. We are not uneasy about our brethren turning against us that understand the real situation. Brother Claud has been at work on this privately for some time before we knew it. After I found it out I said to him more than once, "Let's not bring the Texas trouble here." When he was wanting to bring Newman here I told him, "Let's not invite either one to come here." That was last summer. The Newman side in Texas found out that he stood with them on the subject of regeneration before we did. They knew it when he took Elder Redford off of the editorial staff, but at that time we did not know it. We thought he did it to keep the Texas trouble away; but if that was it why did he put M. W. Miracle, a Newman man, on? It is true they are not having much to say on the subject in the P. B., but they boost the Newman side in Texas, who are coming out on the subject in the P. B. Signal, a paper published by J. L. Collings in Texas. Now, my dear brother, don't be misled in this matter. I wish I could see you. I wish you could be at our union, which meets next Friday. Brother Fuqua, I know that there is an effort being made to make it appear that there is a spirit of jealousy in this association, but there isn't a word of truth in it. I want you to come to our association this fall. You will find us just where we have been all the time, and I feel sure we will have no trouble in our association. Elder A. B. Ross and I are sending you some extracts from both sides which present the real difference, and which also clear up some misrepresentations with respect to a man being a better man after regeneration. It has also been told that child of God in body does not render service to God. Now, my brother, we believe that the child of God renders service

P. S.-Write me soon.

The above letter, as stated, was dated July 26, 1916. In this we are charged with dishonesty, and working secretly. And we are also charged with falsifying. We have stated more than once that we discontinued the Southwestern Department, edited by Elder Redford, in order to try to keep the matter out of our columns. Article after article had been sent us for the paper from Texas. The last straw was the declaration of non-fellowship against all who hold that the body is a part of the real child of God. The name of Elder Sarrels was signed to that declaration as moderator of the church. Long after that declaration was passed Elder Sarrels wrote us that he knew of no one who had said such a thing. He advocated the same idea in his book on regeneration. As we have stated before, so we state again, that when we got Elder Miracle to edit The Good Old Songs Department we did not know which side of the Texas affair he was on, or whether he was on either side. We did not know, and we did not ask him. After that department was started, we learned that Elder Miracle was proposing to be neutral, and not taking sides at all. He continued thus neutral until the Webb and Redfordites drove him to speak out to defend himself, just as the Rosses have done us here in Tennessee. These things we know to be facts, and Elder Ross knew that we had so said when he wrote the above letter; and hence, a charge that we had lied. As to the charge that we were working secretly, we have only to say that Elder Ross knows that we are not of the sneaking kind. All people who know us are very well aware of the fact that we are inclined to be open and candid in what we do. They know that it is not our make-up to do things in an underhand way. Elder Ross knows that this charge is absolutely untrue and without foundation. It simply had its origin in his vain imagination and the wicked spirit by which he is being governed in this affair. We are sorry that this is true, but we must say that it is a fact, however much we may deplore it. We would be glad if he would lay this matter down, and retract his wrong statements and pursue a godly course in his future life.

Again: Elder Ross says that he said to us, "Let's not bring the Texas trouble here." Let it be remembered that Elders S. N. Redford and J. G. Webb had both recently been to this country, and that they had the trouble up in Texas when they were here. Not only so, but they have continually affiliated with the Webb party. Note that in the Webbite papers they are continually being requested to visit this country. This is clear evidence and positive proof that the brethren, Elders J. C. and A. B. Ross, were not really for the position herein intimated-of having nothing to do with either side; but that they really wanted to line up with and recognize only the Webb and Redford side of the affair. The reader will note, too, and please remember, that this is in the face of what Elder A. B. Ross said in his correspondence with us in the year 1915. Elder A. B. Ross may say that he was deceived, and that he did not understand the matter as to what is being taught by the Newman side, as Elder J. C. Ross terms them. But Elder A. B. Ross went with us to Rock Springs in the year 1915 and read an article to us which he said he was writing to the Signal. He said that he had been requested to go on the editorial staff of the Signal, and that he had decided to do so, and was writing an article for that paper stating his belief on the question that was agitating the minds of the brethren in Texas. We know that the sentiment he read to us, which he said was his article, was the same sentiment we have held to and advocated all the time, and which we hold to now, and which he now denounces as the whole man doctrine. If we believe the whole man doctrine now, he believed it then, if he told us the truth. Now, he may take either horn of the dilemma which he chooses. If he believed then what he said he did, and does not believe what we do now, then he has changed, for we now believe what he said was his belief then. So, no difference what Elder A. B. Ross may say regarding the matter, his contention is untrue, one way or the other. The reader will also note that Elder J. C. Ross virtually denies that any believed or advocate the idea that the child of God does not serve God in, or with, the body. Now, we are sure that he has been a reader of the Trumpet all this while, and also that he has read Elder Sarrels' book on regeneration. We haven't the space to take up these matters in this issue, but we will show later on what some of them have advocated. We make no charge against them as to what they have advocated along this line, but what we can produce in black and white from their own pens. In a recent issue of the Trumpet is a long article from Elder A. B. Ross, in which he takes us to task for the article published concerning his affiliation with Elder McArthur, and then he also says some other things. This article was sent to the Trumpet after we had told him that we would give space for his explanation of the matter, and against the advice of Elder J. N. Wallace, of Providence, Ky. Elder Wallace told us that he tried to get Elder Ross not to send that article off for publication. We will pay some attention to it later on. One more thing we wish to state in this article is that we were in Georgia and Alabama in the latter part of June and the first of July, 1915. We went there understanding that Elder A. B. Ross wanted Elder Newman to come to this country, according to his statements in the letters published above. We had no idea but what it would be agreeable with Elder J. C. Ross also. But when we returned home, after having had an agreement and understanding with Elder Newman and the brethren who were to arrange appointments in the south, that he would be excused from that country in September and October to visit our section, we found the Elders Ross raising a great and strong objection to Elder Newman coming to this section. When we learned about this, we wrote Elder Newman that there were objections to his coming, and requested him not to come. We also wrote Elder Hanks, who had the arranging of his tour in that country in hand, to go ahead and arrange for him in that country. This, remember,"in the face of the correspondence published above. This shows whether we were trying to bring trouble here or not. We are giving space to these things in order that our readers may know precisely how some matters have been, and how we have tried to have no war with these brethren, and what we have had to bear from them. We know that they have hurt themselves, but we have to make some defense now or be traitors, as we said in last week's paper.

Again we ask an interest in the prayers of all our truth-loving readers. C. H. C.
ELDER ROSS' STATEMENT

Inasmuch as I have been shown up in the wrong light by Elder C. H. Cayce in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of July 10th, no doubt because he did not understand the situation, I now offer the following explanation:

That in April, about the 9th, I received a letter from Elder McArthur, from Springfield, Tenn., asking that I send him my views on the subject of regeneration; also, a minute of our association. Mind you, this is the first time I ever heard of Elder McArthur. I sent as per request my views on regeneration, also the minute. On Sunday following, after preaching at Little Zion, my regular appointment, Brother Tyson, who is a member of Palmersville Church, which we have no connection with, had me to announce an appointment for Elder McArthur, of Georgia, at that church the following Sunday, the 4th. Remember, this is the first that I knew that Elder McArthur was from Georgia, nor did I yet know of a certainty that he was the same who had written me. When I arrived at home Sunday afternoon I found a letter from Elder McArthur, written from Murfreesboro, Tenn., in which he stated that he was preaching through Tennessee and would be at my town, Dresden, on Thursday morning on the early train, and that he was going to stop off and stay over with me a day or two, and that if I thought advisable I could have an appointment for him at Shiloh Thursday, and one at Little Zion Friday. I now became uneasy about his standing, as I had announced the appointment for him at Palmersville Church, which is in line with the Progressives, and with which we have no connection whatever. Not knowing what to do, and not desiring to misjudge an elder till I knew his standing, I went to Elder J. B. Halbrook for advice, and stated to him just as I have stated above. He advised that I let him come on, that perhaps Elder McArthur had met Elder Kirkland, pastor of the Palmersville Church, and did not know he and his church was in disorder, and as I did not know Elder McArthur's standing if he proved to be a Progressive I would not be to blame for respecting him. So, I made an appointment for him at Shiloh, but none at Little Zion. So he came Thursday and preached, and spent the night in my home. After we came home from church I told Elder McArthur all about the standing of Palmersville Church, that we considered her and her pastor, Elder J. J. Kirkland, in disorder, and that we had no connection whatever with her. When Elder McArthur took his leave next morning he insisted that he and his people had been badly misrepresented, and that he would be glad if I could come and see for myself, to which I casually remarked: That maybe I would come to Georgia sometime, with no thought under the sun of ever visiting Elder McArthur's people. Hence, the write-up by Elder Cayce. My brethren at home know just how this is, and that I have stated the truth, and that I have always opposed errors of all shades. Neither are they uneasy about my yoking up with any disorderly faction.

In conclusion will say to my brethren at large, If I have made a mistake tell me, and I am willing and ready to make amends. What I did I did ignorantly.

In hope,"

A False Statement

---August 28, 1917

In the Baptist Trumpet of July 19, 1917, the following statement appears. We copy the letter in full, so that our readers may have the whole thing:

Inasmuch as Elder C. H. Cayce is denying a departure and is lining up with Elders Newman and Hull and their followers of Texas, I feel called upon to make the following statement, that the brethren may see his departure. That after attending the Forked Deer Association in 1913 (while Elder Redford was in this country), while on my way from Brother Arnold's home to the train, accompanied by Elders C. H. Cayce and John Grist, Brethren O. F. Cayce and Arnold, the question of the whole man change doctrine, as advocated by Elders Hull and Newman (for it is a fact that Elder Hull was the first to advocate it, and later taken up by Elder Newman) was discussed, and that Elder Grist remarked during the conversation that a number of brethren would not have it, and then, referring to me, said, "There sits (we were all in the hack) an old brother now that will not have it." To which I replied, "Yes, I am here to fight it whenever it springs up." Elder Cayce then said, "Hush, now brethren, hush (putting - his hand over Brother Grist's mouth), it is not time for it yet; it is the truth but the brethren must be educated to it." During this association Brother O. F. Cayce said to me, "Who ever heard of a man being born again in part?" Because I contended that man was born in spirit or soul, I asked, if this is, and has been the doctrine of our people all along, why not time for it? Why must our people be educated to it? Why is it now causing so much trouble? I am old now, about ready for the grave, I have been a Baptist almost half a century, and I do know that the doctrine of body change as held by Elder Newman is not, nor never has been Old Baptist doctrine; and what these brethren can hope to gain by trying to force it into recognition to the division and destruction of the churches, I cannot understand. I know the brethren in this part who have espoused the cause of Elders Hull and Newman, deny believing their whole man change theory, to which I will reply, a man is known by the company he keeps; and the best way to convince the brethren that you do not believe it, is to quit trying to force into recognition those whose expressions certainly teach (regardless of their denial) that they do believe it. I might be ever so sound in the doctrine of truth, but try to force into recognition the modern Missionary doctrine, I would be just as guilty of the trouble caused by it as though I was advocating the Missionary doctrine. If you do not believe the whole man doctrine, why such expressions: "Who ever heard tell of a man being born again in part, soul or spirit?" It is an evident fact that man is born again in part, or he is born again in his entirety. In your denying man being born again in part (soul or spirit only) you affirm that he is born again in his complexity.

May the dear Lord save His children from every false way and the snares of designing men. Your old worn out brother in a sweet hope,"

W. T. JACKSON.

Fulton, Ky.

Now, go back and read that statement again. What do you think of THAT? Right here, once and for all, we will most positively and emphatically say that no such conversation we ever had. W. T. Jackson, and no other man, woman, or child, ever heard such a conversation between us and Elder John Grist, or between us and any other person, living or dead. Besides that, we are told that Brother Arnold says he did not go with us to the train from that association. He sent his son with us, so we are told that he has said. Write to Brother James Arnold, Bradford, Tenn., and ask him, if you want to know whether he went with us, or if he sent his son. And ask him if he ever heard such a conversation. We have not asked him a thing about it. But we do know that no such conversation was ever had. It seems to us that if age would have anything to do with it W. T. Jackson is getting almost old enough to learn better than to make such statements as this. But it seems that some people never learn to tell the truth. And it seems that some 'people advocate the idea that the body is still under the law of sin and death, and is still in the same condition as the alien sinner, and then try to prove their doctrine to be true by their conduct and course of life, and by the things they say. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."-(Matthew 12:34). A man is known by the company he keeps, and he is also known by the words that he speaks. May the good, Lord pity and have mercy on those who would thus falsely accuse - and falsely charge their fellow men, is our humble prayer.

Elder John Grist read the article in the Trumpet and wrote us the following letter concerning the same:

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-I see an article in the Baptist Trumpet of July 19th, 1917, over the signature of W. T. Jackson, in which he says he feels called upon to show that Elder C. H. Cayce is denying a departure and lining up with Elders Newman and Hull, then makes reference to a trip with myself and Elder C. H. Cayce, O. F. Cayce and Brother Arnold from Harmony Church to the train. He says that the question of whole man change doctrine was discussed, and that Elder Grist remarked during the conversation that a number of brethren would not have it and referred to him, to which he says he replied, "Yes, I am here to fight it whenever it springs up." "Elder Cayce then said, 'Hush, now brethren, hush,' (putting his hand over my mouth) 'it is not time for it yet; it is the truth, but the brethren must be educated to it.'

When I read the above I could but wonder if it was only a dream, for I surely know that I never heard such a conversation in my life, neither has any man ever put his hand over my mouth to stop me; and I further know that Elder Cayce has ever agreed with me that in being born again the flesh of the alien sinner (to speak of it in an abstract sense) is not changed, nor have I ever heard a man claim that it was. Also, I will further say that I never heard it preached by Elder Hull. I have heard him preach more than any man I have ever met. I could not tell how many times I have heard him say publicly that the flesh is not changed in regeneration. So I ask, what in the world is the matter?

I close, in love to all,
JOHN GRIST
Friendship, Tenn.

Elder Newman has stated, time and again in public print, that he does not believe that the flesh is changed in regeneration. He has said that he believes that the man's life is changed, and that regeneration makes a bad man a good man, that it makes men better, and so on. Elder Newman has been falsely accused, as we have. But he is able to take care of himself. Those who accuse him, as a rule, know that their charges are untrue, just as W. T. Jackson knows that the above statement is not true. We know that it is not true, and we know that he knows it. If his church is faithful, and desire to retain none but truthful people in their fellowship, they will see after this case and attend to it accordingly. We shall see what we shall see. No further statement from us is necessary at this time. We will only add that this is a sample of some statements that are made by some others concerning us. Our readers may know by this something of the way some folks are doing who are accusing us of advocating the whole man doctrine and of believing the soul-sleeping doctrine.

May the Lord pity them, and enable us to "bear all things." "C. H. C.

HAIR AND RAIL SPLITTERS

---September 4, 1917

We are in receipt of a letter from a dear brother in a distant state which contains the following language:

I have been greatly interested in the controversy among you brethren in Tennessee and Texas, and I have read your statement in the last week's issue of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST stating what you will do. I hope your course is for the best, but I don't know. I love you, and pray that God may direct you. I would be so glad to see peace and union again among the brethren; and I hope a division may not result. I think it so uncalled for, if I rightly understand the contention over the doctrine of regeneration. I endorse your article on that question, and I think most Baptists would, and to me it seems to be more a war of words than of principle, when the brethren really understand each other. Can't you get some of your "hair-splitting" brethren to quit that business and go to splitting rails? I believe it would be better.

We have been trying to get them to quit the "hairsplitting" business. We had not suggested for them to go to splitting rails. We are sure it would be better for them and better for the cause if they would follow this suggestion.

We are sorry of the trouble, and have been pleading for peace; but our pleadings have been to no avail. Some of them have said that the man who pleads for peace is always in the wrong. We heard this statement made in a discourse delivered by one of them, and the statement was sanctioned by others of them who were present. We thought of the statement made by the apostle, "Be at peace among yourselves." -((Th 5:13) (I Thessalonians 5:13). And "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." -((Hebrews 12:14). And "The fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." -(James 3:18). We wondered if Jesus was wrong, or if He had the wrong name applied to Him. The prophet said, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given: and the government shall be upon His shoulder; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." -((9:6) (Isaiah 9:6). We thought of other passages of similar import, and which are along the same line. We love peace in the nation, in the state, in the county, in the civil district, in the town, in the neighborhood, and in the home. We do not love war. But some of these brethren have said that nothing but a division would satisfy them. We have not wished for either a war or a division. Neither have we wished to "ride a hobby" on regeneration, or any other question. We have not been disposed to "make a brother an offender for a word." We have been willing to allow each brother the privilege of expressing his views in his own language. But we are not allowed that privilege. Unless we accept every word that they use, and use the same words to express our views that they use, then, in their esteem, we are heretics. If we had such a disposition as that, and were to conduct ourselves in that manner, would it be less than high-handed presumption? Would it be any worse for us to be that way than for others to?

When these brethren have the matter decided and worked out to their own perfect and entire satisfaction as to just how much and what part of the man is born again, and how much and what part of him is a child of God, if any part of him is, and the whole thing is fully and satisfactorily settled, according to the plain declarations of Holy Writ, we have another question we want them to decide and settle for us. In Revelation we read of a beast that had seven heads and ten horns. We want them to give us a Scriptural and scientific answer to the question as to which head had the most horns on it. And then, when they get that question settled, we have another question for them. C. H. C.

NOT CHANGED

---September 11, 1917

The following letter was not written for publication, as the reader will see, but we take the liberty of giving it space in our columns. We appreciate what the dear brother says concerning our contending for the same doctrine which we have been for the time he has been reading the paper. We sympathize with him in his afflictions, and also rejoice with him in the manifestations he has had of the love of God and the sweet fellowship of his brethren. May the Lord graciously grant to continue His great blessings upon you, dear brother. C. H. C.

EXTRACT FROM THE LETTER

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother in the Lord, I Hope-I have a great desire to write you a few lines, not for publication, but to let you know as far as words will express how I appreciate your views on regeneration. I notice that someone has said that you had changed. But I know that you have not changed in the last three years, for I have been reading your paper that long and I know that you are contending for the same doctrine that you was then; and I am willing to risk it when I come to die. And I want you to know that I endorse Brother Hanks' peace plan, as published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. But I feel too little and too sinful to be worth anything as an endorser.

Brother Cayce, when at a throne of God's free grace remember me. Farewell.

REMARKS TO W. R. MOORE

---September 11, 1917

We trust that we rightly appreciate the above kind letter. We feel unworthy of such expressions of endorsement, confidence, love and fellowship. We trust the good Lord may enable us to retain the love and fellowship and confidence of His dear people, and also enable us to earnestly contend for the faith that was once delivered to the saints, and to expose every false way. All our trust and confidence and hope is in Him. "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him," said Job. May the Lord bless you, dear brother, as well as others who have expressed such love and fellowship and sympathy for us in these trying times. C. H. C.

WAS HE A MASON?

---September 11, 1917

On page 341 of Elder W. A. Chastain's book, called "A Discussion on the Worship of God," we find this language:

Elder Gregg M. Thompson, who lived in Georgia for years and who was one of the ablest debaters our people have ever had, and who met Elder Burgess, a Campbellite and a champion debater, and made a grand defense of our people and doctrine, which debate is down in history as one of the grandest victories for our people that has ever been won was a Mason, so I have been told. Yet the Georgia Baptists did not non-fellowship him. But this would not make Masonry right, understand. I am not saying this in defense of any secret order, but to show that this is no test of soundness of doctrine.

Our readers are aware of the fact that there has been no advertisement of Elder Chastain's book in our columns since the same was published. We bought a copy of the book, and have glanced over its pages. We have not yet had the time to give it a careful reading all the way through. But the sentence quoted above is enough to keep us from endorsing the book, though we have noticed that several have expressed endorsement. We wonder if some of them did not overlook this expression, as well, perhaps, as others.

Secret order membership and affiliation may not be a test of soundness of doctrine, but it is a test of soundness of practice. It is a well-known fact, clearly demonstrated from history, that it has ever been held by Primitive Baptists, as a body, that her members should not have membership in and affiliate with secret orders. This has been a well-known tenet of this people. When Elder Chastain devotes so much space in his book to show that the Primitive Baptists in that country have so long affiliated with secret orders, he only shows that they have long been engaged in a practice contrary to the teaching and belief of the Primitive Baptists as a people. This is all that he can possibly accomplish by that kind of proceeding. His effort to show that they have thus affiliated with secret orders does not help his people in the least.

The reader will notice that Elder Chastain emphasizes the statement that Elder Gregg M. Thompson was a Mason, and then adds, "so I have been told." To this we wish to say that Elder Chastain should have better informed himself before making such a statement, if he did not know. Elder Thompson has gone to his reward, and is not here now to defend himself. It seems to us that this great man had enough to contend with while he was living, without a thing of this kind being published to the world about him when he has gone to his long eternal home, and is not here to defend his own practice. But, fortunately, Elder Thompson left on record his position and principles as to how a member of the church should live, and what the church member should belong to.

In describing the true church of Christ, and telling what a true church is and should be, and how the members are to live, Elder Gregg M. Thompson says, in the "Measuring Rod," page 217:

Its practice must be according to the teachings of the New Testament; and it must reject all -human institutions, laws or ordinances. It can have no Boards, Associations, Societies, or auxiliaries, to help it execute the laws of Christ, or do His work on earth.

On page 220 he says:

She never persecutes for conscience sake, but holds all human societies to belong to this world, and will not mix up, or mingle, with any of them; and, in this way, maintains her distinct visibility.

On pages 221, 222, and 223 he says:

With these landmarks before us, we may leek around and see who are the people entitled to be called the church of Christ. Who is it that mingle and mix with no other societies? Who is it that holds and teaches the doctrine here set forth? Who is it that have no Boards, Conventions, or councils to do the business of their church? Who is it that have no societies as auxiliaries to their church, to aid them in doing the work Christ has committed to them? Is it not the Primitive Baptists, and them alone? If so, all who desire to belong to Christ's church should seek fellowship with them, and withdraw from every other society or institution. Christ prayed that all of His people might be one; and a system is established in the New Testament upon which they all may be one. Upon that platform Christian union and communion can be enjoyed, and upon no other. If our brethren, who have gone off after worldly societies, will return to the old paths, and place themselves upon the old New Testament platform, we are ready to receive them, and again live in Christian union with them. And if we have, in any point, left the platform, make us sensible of it, and we will return. Many of our Missionary brethren acknowledge that they have left the old landmarks, and that that part of their practice to which we object is "unknown to the gospel."

Now, brethren, will you net throw away what you acknowledge to be wrong, and, like Christians, come back to the old paths, that we may all walk together in love? No Bible principle, either in doctrine or practice, can be sacrificed for union. Upon the apostolic doctrine the church can stand united, and on any other foundation it is not the church. On that foundation the gates of hell shall never prevail against it. Men may persecute, and the powers of darkness may strive-but in vain-to destroy it, for God is its defense, and the Holy One of Israel its King; it has salvation for walls and for bulwarks.

Can the reader imagine that the man who wrote this was a member of any secret order, or that he affiliated with any of them? He says the church will not mix or mingle with any human society. This means that the members of the church do not do that. Can it be supposed that he was in affiliation with the Masons when he said that those "who desire to belong to Christ's church should seek fellowship with them"---that is, with the Primitive Baptists-"and withdraw from EVERY OTHER SOCIETY OR INSTITUTION?" This language is too plain to be misunderstood or misapplied. He simply teaches, as plainly as it can be taught, that the members of the Primitive Baptist Church should have membership in no other institution on earth, and that they should affiliate with no other institution in the world. This is plain and positive protesting against the members of the church affiliating with those societies. It is not only this, but Elder Thompson assuredly teaches, also, that the practice of Such affiliation, which Elder Chastain defends, is to cease to be the church of Christ. Elder Thompson puts the matter strongly.

Elder Chastain referred to the wrong witness in this matter, sure. Perhaps the unregenerated part, or the part of Elder Chastain which is yet dead in sins and under the law of sin and death, under the law of condemnation, did this. Of course that part of him which he says is born of God and is made pure and sinless and holy as God Himself, could not make such a mistake as this." C. H. C.

PEACE RESTORED

---September 11, 1917

We have just returned home from the meeting of the Forked Deer Association, which was held at old Gibson Church on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 7, 8, 9, near Humboldt, Tenn. The introductory sermon was preached by Elder Z. Stallings. The ministers present were Elders J. W. Adams, Z. Stallings, C. F. Caruthers, and John Grist, who are members of that association; and the visiting ministers were Elders W. E. Brush, McKenzie, Tenn.; W. S. Broom, Tioga, Texas; R. C. Taylor, Milan, Tenn.; S. E. Reid, Henderson, Tenn.; A. B. Ross, Dresden, Tenn.; J. C. Ross, Greenfield, Tenn.; J. N. Wallace, Providence, KY.; J. W. Lomax, Bold Spring, Tenn.; L. D. Hamilton, Lexington, Tenn.; B. P. Simmons, Rives, Tenn.; J. B. Halbrook, Dresden, Tenn.; J. R. Scott, Murray, Ky.; and C. H. Cayce, Martin, Tenn. Elder J. H. Phillips, of Martin, Tenn., was present on Friday and preached after the introductory. After the discourse by Elder Phillips the preaching service was continued by Elders Broom and Halbrook. On Saturday the preaching was done by Elders Brush, Scott, and A. B. Ross. On Sunday the preaching was done by Elders Lomax and Cayce. From the very first it seemed that the Spirit of the Master was present and manifested. All seemed to have hearts that were touched by divine love.

There was a getting together of those who had personal feelings against each other, and confessions of wrongs were made, and forgiveness asked. This was done privately. Elders J. C. and A. B. Ross and Z. Stallings asked our pardon for wounding us. Elder J. C. Ross did this a week before at the Big Sandy Association. Elder Brush did the same thing. We feel in our heart that we freely forgive them of everything which they have done which has been an injury to us, and we also trust that they have it in their hearts to forgive us if we have ever, in any way, wounded their feelings, or if we have done them a wrong.

At this meeting the preaching was all in the spirit of love and good will. All reference to matters of difference was avoided; that is, no reference was made to matters of difference. Mooted questions were let alone. The preaching was all like the Old Baptists used to preach when there were no questions of difference among them. All enjoyed the discourses which were delivered. Besides the preaching, as above stated, there was preaching at different places by some of the brethren at nights.

The brethren, in talking privately, seemed to agree that there should not be a division among us here in this country, and that we should all stop and thus end the war. An instrument of writing was read to the brethren by Elder Wallace, which we give below, and which all agreed to. At first it was only thought that we would all mutually agree to accept the same and abide by it, but it was afterward thought proper to publish the same so that the brethren generally might know just how the matter was settled and see what we had all agreed to and we all then thought proper to put our names to it, so that it might be known who had gone into the agreement, that all may know, too, that we are wanting peace and union whose names appear to the agreement. Following is the agreement:

We, the Primitive Baptists, agree, as there is a question of difference in opinion or belief among us on the subject of regeneration, that the difference is not fundamental; we do not believe any fundamental principle of doctrine is involved, when the question of difference is explained by both parties, each one explaining what and how he believes it. So we agree to drop the controversy of the subject, and let each one explain for himself, so he does not controvert or debate the subject, and does not cast reflections on the brethren on the opposite side of the question; and that we all ask forgiveness and forgive each other of all the wrongs that we have done or said, and that we all live together in fellowship and love, as we have in the past before this question came up among us. And as the Baptists in Texas are divided on this subject, that we agree that we will not let that divide us here in this country; and we further agree that we will not recognize one party of Baptists in Texas or elsewhere to the exclusion of the other; and if either side wants to come through our country and preach for us, if he will leave off controversy of this subject, and not cast reflections on the brethren on the opposite side of his belief, that we recommend to the churches to let him come, and thus let the matter drop and die, and let the wound be healed; however, if any church is opposed to his coming, on either side, and is not willing to submit, let him pass by this church and go on to another one that is willing to receive him, and not make his preaching among the churches that are willing to receive him a bar to fellowship, so he has a good moral standing and is in order with his home church and churches, and that there is nothing against him but this question of difference--and thus save a division among our dear people in Tennessee and Kentucky, and elsewhere in the United States.

Elders J. N. Wallace, A. B. Ross, J. C. Ross, S. E. Reid, John Grist, B. P. Simmons, J. B. Halbrook, J. W. Adams, C. F. Caruthers, J. R. Scott, L. D. Hamilton, J. W. Lomax, Z Stallings, R. C. Taylor, C. H. Cayce, W. E. Brush.

It will be noted that Elder Broom was at the meeting, yet his name does not appear to the agreement. We explain this by stating that as his home is in Texas, and not in this section, he was not requested to sign it, nor was he present when we had the agreement, or when we were conferring together. We also state that Brother Phillips left on Friday afternoon, which was before this took place.

We wish we could describe the scene and the feeling manifested when these brethren were together agreeing to the above, how that tears flowed from their eyes, they shaking hands with each other, embracing each other in their arms, and asking and expressing forgiveness of each other. We just cannot describe the scene. We cannot describe the feeling of love and sweet fellowship which was manifested. It seemed that the heart of everyone was full and overflowing with love for each other, and with gratitude and thankfulness to God.

It was also mutually agreed that if either side in Texas or elsewhere, where this trouble exists, refuse to recognize us because we recognize the other side, that we will stand together here, and that the side which refuses to recognize us will be let alone. In other words, if those in Texas which we may designate as the Newman side, refuse to recognize us because we agree to recognize either side, then we will stand together and let the Newman side go. On the other hand, if those which we may designate as the Webb and Redford side refuse to recognize us because we agree to recognize either side, then we will stand together and let the Webb side go.

We feel that this will result in our people remaining together in this country, and that the trouble is now settled among us.

On Saturday the association passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is the judgment of this association that the extreme views on regeneration which are being agitated by some of our brethren is and will continue to cause trouble among the Master's children.

Resolved, That we, of the Forked Deer Association, ask our members to cease agitating such views, either publicly or privately; also that our sister associations do likewise, or our correspondence with them will have to cease. Also, that we hereby serve notice that we do not want any of the preaching brethren who will not leave off such extreme views to come among us. What we mean by extreme views is such expressions as will leave brethren on the one hand to think we believe the hollow log doctrine, and such expressions as will leave brethren on the other hand to think we believe the whole man doctrine.

A similar resolution was passed by the Big Sandy Association on Saturday before the first Sunday in this month at New Hope.

This resolution is in perfect harmony with the agreement which the brethren signed. Our heart is glad. We feel to rejoice that all our differences are now laid aside, and that we have come together in peace and sweet fellowship. May the good Lord help us to continue, from this time on, to strive for the things that make for peace. Let us all endeavor, to our utmost ability, to strive to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Let us all bear with each other, watch over each other for good and not for evil. Let us endeavor to help each other to bear the trials, burdens, and conflicts of life. Let us never try to destroy each other. We need each other. We need to live together in love and sweet fellowship. Our enemies would rejoice to see us divided and to see our fellowship destroyed. Let us try to please our Master instead of gratifying our enemies.

On Sunday at the close of service four willing souls came forward asking for a home among the Lord's humble followers, and were received with gladness. Many rejoiced, and some shouted aloud the Lord's praise. These people are to be baptized on the next regular meeting time at Gibson, which is the fourth Sunday. These three days were days of rejoicing. We were never in a sweeter or more delightful meeting.

On page ten of this issue an article will be seen which was printed on Saturday while we were away. The latter part of that article would not have appeared had it not already been printed. We have held up the printing of this side of the paper, and delayed sending the paper out, in order to have the good news of this settlement of trouble in the paper this week. We know that many hearts will be made glad upon reading this.

One more thing now which we wish to mention is this: We stated a short time ago that Elder Wallace told us - he advised Elder A. B. Ross not to send an article to the Trumpet which we mentioned, and which we said we would reply to. We intended to say in the same article that Elder Wallace also told us that he thought we did wrong in publishing what we did concerning the matter of Elder McArthur's visit, but we inadvertently overlooked that. We make this statement in justice to Elder Wallace. But this is all settled between us and Brother Ross, and also Brother Wallace. We do not now intend to make any reply or explanation concerning the article from Brother Ross. We have mutually forgiven each other for all wrongs, and that settles it, so far as we are concerned. If these matters are not mentioned until we do so, they will be forgotten.

We trust that we can now give our readers articles that are free from controversy. Write us about the good things of the kingdom, and of the riches and glory of the Master. Let us encourage each other to higher and better and nobler things, and let us try to pray for each other, and let brotherly love continue.

Brethren, our hope and trust and confidence is yet in the good Lord. We still need the direction of His guiding hand. Please remember us in your prayers. May His blessings rest upon every reader, is our prayer.

PEACE PREVAILS

---September 25, 1917

Our readers will remember that in THE PRIMITIVE-BAPTIST of September 11 we gave an account of the settlement of the differences among the brethren in this section, and that we published the agreement which was signed by the brethren in the ministry who were present at the Forked Deer Association. We also published a verbal agreement which the ministers all entered into who were present.

We attended the West Tennessee Association at Turnbull Church, in Dickson County, Tenn., on the third Sunday in this month, and Friday and Saturday before.

At that meeting the agreement which was entered into verbally at the Forked Deer Association was reduced to writing, and was made a little more lengthy. All the ministers present signed it, and also authorized their names to be placed to the agreement entered into at the Forked Deer Association.

We have thought it to be a good idea to publish the agreement again which was published in the issue of September 11, and give the names of all who have signed it. It is as follows:

(We deem it unnecessary to take up space in this book to reproduce that again.

You will find it on page 248 of this book.-C. H. C.]

Those present at the West Tennessee Association who authorized their names to be put to this agreement, and who had not already signed it, were:

Elders J. M. Fuqua, T. J. Daily, J. A. Roberson, S. H. Reynolds, T.J. Chandler, D. M. Still, I J. Hutchinson, J. A. Pope, H. M. Sanders, A. D. Oliphant, David Wauford, A. L. Graves, T. M. Phillips, W. R. Rushton, J. T. Bryant, W. L. Murray, N. J. Hinson, M. C. Deal.

The additional agreement, which was only verbal before, is as follows:

As it was mutually agreed by the Primitive Baptist elders who were present at the Forked Deer Association on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, 1917, in our settlement of the agitation and controversy on the subject of regeneration, as the Primitive Baptists in Texas and other sections of the country are divided, we said that if one party in Texas would not recognize us nor come among us because we would recognize both factions, that the faction which would not come among us because we recognize the other could go by, and that the party that does recognize us, that we would receive them if they do not agitate this question and thus keep up strife between the two factions.

We, the elders who are present at the West Tennessee Association, further agree that we will not receive that faction, or factions, who continue to agitate this question in their writings and preaching, but if they cease to agitate and controvert this subject and do not cast reflections on the brethren on the opposite side of their belief at home, or here, or elsewhere, we are willing to receive them-that is, for them to come among us and preach for us, and we are willing for our brethren to go among them and preach for them; and now, dear brethren in Texas, or elsewhere, that are divided on this question, we do not believe that there are any fundamental principles of doctrine involved, upon which our churches are founded, when each party explains for himself. What we mean by this is that if there is any real difference it is too insignificant to cause trouble or division. Now, dear brethren, let us beseech you, in brotherly love, to drop the controversy of this subject and forgive one another of all that has been done or said on and about this controversy in a general way, and let us all live together in sweet peace and love and fellowship; and if there is any personal difference among any of the brethren let them settle that. Let them take gospel steps, as our blessed Master says, "if thy brother trespass against thee, go tell him his fault between thee and him alone. If he will not hear thee, take one or two more. If he will not hear them, tell it to the church."

The ministers present at the West Tennessee Association, and who signed this, were:

Elders J. M. Fuqua, T. J. Daily, J. A. Roberson, S. H. Reynolds, T. J. Chandler, D. M. Still, I J. Hutchinson, J. A. Pope, C. H. Cayce, H. M. Sanders, A. D. Oliphant, David Wauford, A. L. Graves, T. M. Phillips, J. W. Lomax, J. R. Scott, W.R. Rushton, J. T. Bryant, W. L. Murray, J. C. Ross, J. N. Wallace, N. J. Hinson, M. C. Deal.

Elder L. D. Hamilton was also present at this association and we thought he signed this also, but we do not have his name. There were two copies of the agreement written out, and we do not have the one which had the names signed originally. It may be that Elder Hamilton's name is on the other copy and that we missed his name in copying them. Will Brother Hamilton please write us as soon as he sees this, and tell us whether or not his name should be to this agreement. We do not wish to leave any out who have signed it, or who will sign it.

On Monday we had an appointment at McKenzie. We tried to preach there that day (Monday, September 17). A very good congregation present, and a pleasant meeting was enjoyed. This is Elder Brush's home, and we spent a great part of the day very pleasantly with him. He signed the above agreement that day.

The meeting of the association was very pleasant indeed. The association while in session on Saturday endorsed the agreements as above. The preaching was all a unit, and the brethren seemed to enjoy sweet liberty in speaking. May the good Lord be praised. Let us all try to pray and labor for the peace of Jerusalem.

REMARKS TO ELDER JAMES DUNCAN

---September 25, 1917

Your remark, dear brother, that there is a beam in your own eye, and your request that we help you pull it out, reminds us that too many of us have a beam in our own eye sometimes. Perhaps the trouble often is that we have a beam in our own eye, when we think there is something great that is wrong with a brother's eye. Perhaps if each one would try to attend to his own eye, and let the eye of his brother alone, there might not be so much trouble in Zion. The Saviour's instruction is for one to pull the beam out of his own eye, so he may see clearly how to pull the mote out of his brother's eye. Often when we get the beam out of our own eye, we discover that there is not so much the matter with the brother's eye as we thought. Suppose we all try this plan for awhile, and see how it works.

WILL NOT BE PUBLISHED

---September 25, 1917

We have quite a number of communications on the question which has been in agitation for some time which will not be published on account of the settlement of the matter among, and by, the brethren in this section. We will not publish the letters we have on this question, because we have all agreed to lay the matter down and to drop the controversy. We trust that all will do according to that agreement. Brethren, please do not send us any articles containing reflections on any brother who may differ from you, and please do not discuss these small differences any more.

BIBLE EVIDENCES

---November 6, 1917

The following article was written by our father and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of March 22, 1894. It is good and timely, and we republish it for the benefit and enjoyment of our present readers. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God.-
(Romans 8:16).

Wishing to comfort and encourage the dear saints of God, we will offer a few thoughts upon the Bible evidences of salvation, or call attention to some of the Bible signs of the Lord's people. The children of God often inquire, "Amos I His or am I not?" and the unworthy writer has often remarked that, "If I could be as well satisfied that I am embraced in the doctrine of grace, the doctrine believed and advocated by the Primitive Baptists, as I am that this doctrine is true, I would certainly be a happy mortal." And when the poor, little, weak and trembling child of God hears the gospel of God's grace he feasts upon it, but yet feels to inquire, "Amos I embraced in this glorious doctrine of God our Saviour?" For the encouragement of such we wish to offer the following evidences which will, as we think, point out the Lord's people and give to such inquiring ones some assurance that they are children of God.

As a foundation for what we may write upon this subject, we have selected the text heading this article, viz.: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

The apostle, in this text, does not refer to that evidence that comes directly to the child of God by revelation, giving him to realize that Jesus is his Saviour, and lifting him up above his burden, thus giving him to rejoice in a Saviour's love and in hope of an immortality beyond the grave. Such evidence is given by revelation to the poor, mourning soul, and as such Paul says: "But, as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. But God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. "(I Corinthians 2:9-10).

And the Saviour said to Peter: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. "(Matthew 16:17).

But this manifestation, this evidence by revelation, revealing, or witnessing, to the poor soul, for the first time, that Jesus is his own personal and individual Saviour, is not what the Apostle Paul had under consideration in the text heading this article. He does not say in this that the Spirit bore witness to our spirit, or that the Spirit hath borne witness, but "beareth witness"- does yet-does "now--bear witness with our spirit." And, in order to ascertain whether or not we can appropriate this language to ourselves, feeling that it embraces us, and that our readers may have some assurance that they are embraced; that the "Spirit bears witness with their spirit, that they are the children of God," we will notice some of the evidences, some of the things testified to by the Holy Spirit. If we present to you, dear brethren and sisters, some of the things testified to by the Holy Spirit, some of the evidences of the Spirit, and you are conscious that you have realized the same things in your own hearts; have an experience agreeing or corresponding with the things presented, why, then, sure enough, the "Spirit beareth witness with your spirit," and if so, if the Spirit does thus bear witness with your spirit, the conclusion is that you are children of God; for this is the end to which this evidence points. To find the things testified to by the Spirit of God we will turn to the Bible, for we learn "For the prophecy came not in old time by the -will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." -(II Peter 1:21). "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness. "--(II Timothy 3:16).

These passages show that whatever is contained in the Bible is, therefore, the testimony of the Holy Spirit; the testimony, we might say, of God. And, in this Book of testimony, this Book of evidence, we find therein expressed, the character of God, also the character and condition of man, and we find also evidence concerning the Lord Jesus Christ, His mission into the world, what He accomplished, etc., etc. Then we find some evidence of how He appears to poor sinners in delivering them from the power of darkness and translating them into the kingdom of His dear Son; how He quickens them into life, bringing them up out of a state of death into a state of life in Christ. And, in addition to all this, we find also expressed the Lord's protection and preservation of His people, all of which corresponds, as we will endeavor to show, with the Christian experience.

First, then, we will look into this Book of testimony, for a short time, with reference to the character of God. Isaiah says: "Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else: I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure."-(9) (Isaiah 46:9-10). "Remember these, O Jacob and Israel; for thou art my servant: I have formed thee; thou art my servant: O Israel, thou shalt not be forgotten of me. Tell ye, and bring them near: yea, let them take counsel together: who hath declared this from ancient time? who hath told it from that time? have not I the Lord? and there is no God else beside me; a just God and a Saviour; there is none beside me."- ((21) (Isaiah 45:21). And the Prophet Malachi says: "For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed."--(Malachi 3:6).

We might give many more quotations showing that God is a sovereign, possessing all power both in heaven and in earth, and that "what His soul desireth even that He doeth," and that He does not need the assistance of man to assist Him in the work of salvation, but the above are sufficient on that line, and we would therefore ask: Do you, dear reader, realize your need of such a God? Do you realize that you have no power to save yourself? Do you realize the truth of what Isaiah says, or that you are only a particle of nothing? "Behold the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold, He taketh up the isles as a very little thing. And Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt offering. All nations before Him are as nothing; and they are counted to Him as less than nothing, and vanity."-((0:15) (Isaiah 40:15-17). If so, the Spirit is bearing witness with your spirit, in that you realize your need of just such a God as the Bible, or testimony of the Spirit, represents Him to be. But the Bible contains, as stated before, some evidence of what man is, and some of this we wish now to notice: "Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more. The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores; they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment."- (Isaiah 1:5-6). "The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." ((2) (Psalms 14:2-3). "What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin; as it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one. Their throat is an open sepulcher; with their tongues they have used deceit: the poison of asps is under their lips: whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: their feet are swift to shed blood: destruction and misery are in their ways: and the way of peace have they not known. There is no fear of God before their eyes.”-(Romans 3:9-18).

In these quotations we have clear and unmistakable evidence of the entire or total depravity of man, the corruption of our nature; but the question comes next, have you, dear doubting one, realized such depravity in your heart? Have you realized that there was nothing good in you? that you had nothing nor could do nothing whatever to recommend you into the favor of God? Have you realized the truth of what the Saviour said- (Matthew 19:26): “With men this is impossible.” If so, then we would again say the Spirit is yet bearing witness with your spirit, and that you are, therefore, a child of God.

Let us next examine this Book of evidence with regard to the mission of the Saviour: “And she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call His name Jesus: for He shall save His people from their sins. “-(Matthew 1:21). “Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.”-((2) (Acts 4:12). “Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins. “-((31) (Acts 5:31). “This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation. that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.”-(I Timothy 1:15).

These passages are sufficient to show that Jesus Christ came into this world as a full and complete Saviour, and that His mission was to save sinners, not merely to offer salvation, nor to try to get people to accept salvation, nor to save those who would voluntarily turn away from their sins and cease to be sinners-get to be good folks-but to “save His people from their sins.” This being the case, Paul would say: “For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.”-(Romans 5:19). Which shows that sinners are not saved, not made righteous, by their own obedience, but by the obedience of Jesus Christ. And we would again ask, Do you realize your need of such a Saviour? Do you feel that “If not free grace, then I am lost?” Do you realize that if your salvation depends upon your good works, your obedience, faithfulness, etc., that you are gone, world without end? Let me assure you, dear one, that if this is your experience, if you have realized all this, then the Spirit is now bearing witness with your spirit, and the testimony points to the fact that you are a child of God. If you realize that you need just such a Saviour as the Bible represents Jesus Christ as being, why, then, this is but proof that He is your Saviour.

Next we will notice some of the evidence in regard to His protecting care and preserving grace; how it is that He watches over His people and protects them through dangers, both seen and unseen to them, and brings them off “more than conquerors” over all their trials, tribulations, afflictions, temptations and distresses, until the last enemy is destroyed, and that He, in fact, is the very life of His people: “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.”-((Pet 1:3) (I Peter 1:3-5). “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life. “-(John 5:24). “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.”-(John 6:47). “My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand."-(John 10:27-29). "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory."-(Colossians 3:3-4). "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover, whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor -angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come; nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. "-(Romans 8:28-39).

From these quotations we learn that the children of God are begotten unto an inheritance which is undefiled and that fades not away, and that they are kept by the power of God unto this inheritance. And we learn also that those thus begotten, those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, have everlasting life, which life preceded their belief, and enabled them to believe, and that having this life, which is eternal, they shall not come into condemnation; that nothing, no power, misfortune, nor adversity, can separate them from the eternal and everlasting love of God; and that when Christ, who is their life, shall appear, then shall they also appear with Him in glory. But we come to the question again: Do you feel to need such a Saviour? Do you realize the fact that if you were your own keeper you would certainly sink down in despair? Do you feel that nothing short of the preserving and sustaining grace of Almighty God would prevent your final and eternal apostasy? Do you realize the fact that you could not possibly retain an interest in heaven upon any other principle than the immutable love and sovereign power of God? If so, the Spirit is yet bearing witness with your spirit. You realize your need of such favor and such power, having no worthiness of your own, nor no power within yourself to withstand the temptations, storms and turmoils of this life, and the Bible lets us know that He is just such a God and that He has such love for His people; hence, as stated already, the Spirit, in this, is bearing witness with your spirit that you are a child of God. But you may say, "O I am so little, it must be that I am deceived." This, however, is only another expression showing that you have experienced the very feeling realized by the Apostle Paul; for he said, "Unto me who am less than the least of all saints is this grace given," etc. You may say, "Yes, but I am such a great sinner." -In this, however, you are again in company with Paul, for he said, "It is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." If you feel to be a great sinner you are only realizing what Paul here expressed concerning himself, and as he not only experienced this but was also led by the Spirit of God to write it, what he says is therefore the testimony of the Holy Spirit, and as such the "Spirit is bearing witness with your spirit," and, as such, you are a child of God.

Not only does the Spirit bear witness with your spirit in all these things, but the fact that you feast upon the gospel of Christ as preached by the true servants of God is also proof that you are children of God. We learn from the testimony of the Holy Spirit: "Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." -(I Corinthians 2:12-14).

And this proves that we must first have the Spirit of God before we can "know the things that are freely given to us of God;" and it also shows that the natural (or unregenerate) man does not receive the things of the Spirit, the things spoken by Paul. But the question comes, do you receive those things? Is the preaching of salvation by grace a comfort to your poor soul? Do you gladly receive the things taught by the true servants of God? If so, you are something more than a mere natural (or unregenerate) man (or woman, as the case may be) and have therefore been born again, "not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever." Remember that the Saviour never commanded Peter to feed goats, no more so than He commanded him to make sheep, but the command was "feed my lambs," "feed my sheep," "feed my sheep;" and if you have been fed by the true ministers of Jesus Christ it is only an evidence that you are a child of God. And in this, as in other respects, the "Spirit beareth witness with your spirit that you are a child of God," for the testimony of the Spirit is that the ministers of Christ are commanded to feed sheep, and you realize that you have been fed by them. We might continue, almost indefinitely, the Bible signs or evidences of the Lord's people; but these are certainly sufficient to encourage the poor, trembling, tempest-tossed child, and to strengthen his -hope, to some extent at least. To such little doubting ones are these thoughts submitted in the hope that the good Lord may bless them to your comfort. So fare you well in the Lord.

These lines were written at the residence of Elder H. Temples, of Bulloch County, Ga., while on a preaching tour in this country.

GOSPEL BAPTISM AND COMMUNION

---November 13, 1917

We have been asked many times in our traveling among the brethren, sisters and friends, "Why do not Primitive Baptists recognize baptism (so-called) administered by other people, especially those who have been immersed? and why do not Primitive Baptists invite all Christian people (so-called) to commune with them?"

And feeling sure there are many more, who are pondering over these things in their minds, we copy the following editorial, written by our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, and published in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of May 10, 1894, which we trust will be of benefit to some poor, halting, trembling and inquiring one. We trust the blessings of our heavenly Father will accompany the same to His honor and the good of Zion.

THE ARTICLE

DEAR BROTEER CAYCE:

If I am worthy to call you brother-I am not a member of the Primitive Baptists, but claim to have been born again. I have been requested to write you and get your views of what is called "close communion" and "re-baptism." Why do you require a brother from any other church to be re-baptized? Hoping to hear from you through your paper. I am a subscriber, and very truly yours,

W. L. HAMM.
Appleton, Ark.
THE REPLY

Our readers will remember that we expressed a few thoughts relative to what is termed "local communion" in our issue of April 26 (week before last), and as Brother Hamm wishes our views on the subject of "close communion" (we suppose as practiced by Primitive Baptists) and "re-baptism," as it is termed, we will have to go over some of the same ground (notice the same Scriptures) in complying with his request; but as we were very brief before, we suppose this will be admissible. But, as baptism comes before communion', we will consider that question before taking up that of communion. And, in the first place, would call attention to the fact that there are three things which are essential in order that any baptism be a Scriptural or gospel one: Inasmuch as baptism. is taught in the Bible, it must be that the Bible describes the character whose duty it is to be baptized, or that is a proper subject for baptism. We must have a gospel (or Scriptural) subject, or the baptism would not be a gospel baptism. For instance, none would suppose an unregenerate, impenitent sinner to be a fit subject for baptism. The Bible certainly teaches that there must first be a work of grace in the heart; that the individual must be quickened into life; must be born of God, born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever, before he is a fit subject for baptism. Even those who regard baptism as being a condition (one of them) upon which eternal life is promised, admit that no impenitent character, no unbeliever, is a fit subject for baptism; and, if impenitent persons are not' fit subjects for baptism, they must be made, or must become, penitent before they are ready for baptism; and, as unregenerate persons are not penitent, they must be regenerated before they become penitent; and as regeneration is the work of God, and to be regenerated (of God) is to be begotten of God, and to be begotten of God is to be born of God; hence, none are fit subjects for baptism until born of God. One of the essentials, therefore, for gospel baptism is that we have a gospel subject-one who has been born of God, and has given evidence of this fact to the church. Our object, however, in requiring persons to relate their experience, give a reason of their hope, is not to make them fit subjects for baptism, but that the church may, in this way, ascertain whether or not they are (already) fit subjects. When one has petitioned or asked admission into the church, and when the church has heard his (or her) experience, the reason of his (or her) hope in Christ, and are satisfied with the same-believe the brother or sister to be a child of God-why, then, they have before them a gospel (or Scriptural) subject-one whose duty it is to be baptized.

Next, would say, as the Bible teaches us that such persons are proper subjects for baptism, and as the Lord commands such to be baptized, it certainly does teach us how to baptize, and teach them how to be baptized. In other words, as the Bible teaches baptism, it certainly must (and does) teach the gospel (or Scriptural) mode of baptism. It would be unreasonable to suppose that the Lord would command His people-His children-to be baptized, and yet not teach them what it takes to constitute baptism. If He has not given us 'any instruction as to the mode, or as to what baptism is, why, then, sprinkling or pouring will do fully as well, and might as well be called baptism as immersion; but if, indeed (as is the case), the Lord has taught us that to be baptized is to be immersed-buried in water-why, then, nothing short of this can be gospel (or Scriptural) baptism.

The two essentials mentioned above-a gospel subject and a gospel mode-are recognized by a great many who do not seem to realize that we must also have a gospel (or Scriptural) administrator. Baptism, to be valid-to be a gospel baptism-must be administered to a gospel subject, in a Scriptural manner, by the proper authority (by authority of the church of Christ) and by a gospel administrator. As the Bible teaches who are proper subjects for gospel baptism, and teaches also what it takes to constitute gospel baptism (the mode, immersion in water), it also teaches who are the proper or gospel administrator of baptism. And, as this is the case, that which-is administered by any other than a gospel administrator cannot be a gospel baptism, for we would have as much right to change the mode as to have the baptism administered by any other than a gospel administrator. As the Bible teaches that it takes immersion-a burial in water-to constitute a gospel baptism, a few drops of water sprinkled or poured on one's head cannot be baptism. And as none are proper (or gospel) subjects for baptism save those who have been born of God, an unregenerate, impenitent character is not a gospel subject. Not only so, but as the Bible teaches that baptism must be administered by authority of the church of Christ, and by one authorized by the church to administer the ordinances thereof-a gospel administrator-nothing short of this can be gospel baptism. If either of these three essentials are wanting, there is no baptism. For instance, if we have a proper (or gospel) subject and a true gospel preacher-one authorized by the church to administer the ordinances- the baptism would be valid if administered in a Scriptural manner. But, suppose that a gospel preacher should take a real gospel subject (for baptism) and sprinkle or pour a few drops of water upon his head, could we call it baptism? Certainly not. Neither would the gospel preacher (one authorized by the church to administer the ordinances) have any right or authority whatever to take an unregenerate, impenitent character (even though he be a moral man) and immerse him as a subject for baptism. Why not? Simply because the unregenerate sinner is not a proper or gospel subject. In either of such cases (water sprinkled or poured by a gospel administrator upon the head of a gospel subject, or the immersion of an impenitent person by a gospel administrator), it is not gospel baptism. However, we would have as much right to say it was gospel baptism as we would to say that the immersion of a gospel subject by a man not authorized by the church is gospel baptism. No one ever supposes that a private member, not even a deacon, has any right or authority to baptize, and as such would not be willing to receive baptism at their hands; yet some are willing to hold on to an immersion administered by those who are not even members of the true church of Christ. They say, "But the preacher who baptized me was a good man." Suppose he was, does that give him authority to baptize people? Certainly not. There are a great many good men in the church; our deacons are (should be) good men; but that does not give them authority to baptize. A gospel administrator is one who has been called of God and has been set apart (ordained) by the church to the work of the ministry, and one who preaches the doctrine of God our Saviour.

Having said this much, in a general way, we will now call attention to a few Scriptures which clearly and unmistakably show that the three things mentioned are really and absolutely essential in order that we have a gospel baptism. First, we remember that some demanded baptism of John who were not gospel subjects, and as such he declined to baptize them: "But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. “-(Matthew 3:7-8,9).

We will not dwell here, however, but let us have further testimony, and we will find that the Saviour Himself demanded that His baptism be administered by one having proper authority to administer the ordinance: “Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan, unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade Him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering, said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered Him.”- (Matthew 3:13-14,15). Notice, the Saviour said to John, “For thus it becometh us” (you and me), which shows that none but John was authorized to baptize Him. The Saviour had, therefore, to be baptized by a Primitive Baptist preacher in order to “fulfill all righteousness, “in order that His baptism be valid; and as the children of God are commanded to follow Jesus, they, too, must be baptized by Primitive Baptist preachers, else their baptism is not valid. Neither do we follow Christ in being immersed in water by any other except Primitive Baptist preachers, else their baptism is not valid. Neither do we follow Christ in being immersed in water by any other except Primitive Baptist preachers. John was a Baptist, named so by the Lord, and he must have been primitive for he was the first one called a Baptist. And those are Primitive Baptists, now, in doctrine and practice who are in line with John and with Christ and the apostles in their preaching and in their practice, those who are “continuing steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine.” Again Jesus said to the apostles: “All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.”-(Matthew 28:18-19,20).

We learn from this that we are commanded to “go,” because of the fact that “all power is given unto me,” and as such those who “go,” being called of God, always preach the power that sends them. Hence, all those who preach any other power in the salvation of sinners than the power of God are not going under the authority of God, and as such are not authorized to baptize. Those who are called of God to preach the gospel are commanded not only to teach or preach and to baptize, but they are to “teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you;” and as such those who teach things not commanded, things not authorized in the Bible, have no authority to baptize. This being true, immersion administered by them is not baptism, no more so than immersion administered by one who makes no pretension whatever, in a preaching way.

Next we will notice (Acts 2:41-42): “Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.” Here we have evidence that those baptized were such as had “gladly received” the word preached, which no unregenerate character ever does; for the Saviour says: “He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.”-((7) (John 8:47). To be of God is certainly to be a child of God, and to be a child of God is to be born of God; and as the Saviour lets us know, here, that none hear God's word save those who are of God, those born of God, it follows that none “gladly receive the word” save those who hear in the sense of this text. The Say-jour did not mean that none heard His vocal voice, or the mere sound of His words, save those who are of God, but that none hear to profit, none hear with gladness of heart, save those who are of God, those born of God.

Again, Paul says: "Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. "(I Corinthians 2:12-14). This shows that the natural or unregenerate man does not receive the things taught by the true servants of God in the preaching of the gospel. But those added unto the church on the day of Pentecost were such as did receive, "gladly received the word," hence they had been regenerated, born of God. Not only so, but they were added unto the church, added unto, and baptized by, that people who were steadfast in the apostles' doctrine, and no immersion administered by a people who are not "steadfast in the apostles' doctrine" can be considered valid baptism.

This brings us to the subject of communion, but having said so much on the subject of baptism, will be very brief on this. The quotation already made from Acts ((Acts 2:41-42)) shows that those baptized were such as had gladly received the word, and that they were added unto a people who were steadfast in the apostles' doctrine. Not only so, but we see from this that those who communed, those who broke bread together, were such as "continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine." Of course none can continue in that which they have never been in; and as such, those who preach for doctrine the commandments of men are not continuing in the apostles' doctrine nor have never been in that doctrine, so far as their preaching is concerned, and as such they have never been added unto (in a church capacity) those who are steadfast in the apostles' doctrine, have never been added unto the visible organization or militant church of Christ. Neither can they who are "steadfast in the apostles' doctrine," those who have been added unto the true church of Christ, commune or break bread with them without violating the apostolic practice, as their practice was to commune or break bread with those with whom they were in (church) fellowship, those who had been "added unto them." Hence our practice of what is sometimes called close communion is apostolic. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the good of Friend Hamm, as well as all others into whose hands THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST goes, is our prayer, for Christ's sake.

THE YOUNG MEMBERS

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother in Hope-For some time I have had a desire to write you regarding some questions which I have been deeply interested in here of late. Many times I have started to ask some of the brethren here these questions. I would then think that maybe it is just me and I would not say anything about them. And you may think if I were what I professed to be I wouldn't think anything about such. But nevertheless, I think of them in spite of all I can do, and I am often reminded of them by people who have been members of the church long before I can remember.

On several occasions here of late I have been invited to social parties, and to my astonishment have been encouraged to go. I said that I thought Primitive Baptists didn't attend parties. They would tell me that it made no difference as to whether the young people went or not, just so they did not dance. I can't see, for the life of me, that it would be any more harm for the old people to go than it would be for the young people. And to me it looks like that gives the young people the same privilege to partake in worldly things they have always had, and I didn't think Old Baptists

I have found in most all experiences I have heard or read that they hated the things they once loved, and loved the things they once hated, and according to that I cannot see how they can still love parties unless parties were some of the things they once hated, and I think that is giving away too much to the young people. Some are very easily led astray. Some may think that I am holding myself clear of all this, but not so, for I fall far short from doing as I should. I see my many mistakes day by day, and find, "For the good that I would, I do not, but the evil which I would not, that I do." Now to the questions:

Is it right for Primitive Baptists to attend parties?

How about young members just saying "hello" to one another when they go to church?

What do you think about one you meet one Sunday and they are just as friendly as can be, and the next Sunday will rub against you and won't speak?

When you meet a brother or sister that looks like they are trying to keep from speaking to you, is it right for you to speak, whether they do or not?

Is it right to go to church and not speak to any of the members except the pastor?

If you think I have done wrong in asking these questions please excuse me, for I will have done it through ignorance. Although I know what has been done cannot be undone, yet repentance promises forgiveness by laws divine. Therefore, I hope you will forgive me if I have done wrong in this, for I have done, it with no hard feelings against anyone. But I think some of us young members ought to wake up better to our duty and leave some things alone that we do, thinking it will be all right because none of the brethren and sisters won't know anything about it. Yes, indeed, we can keep it from the brethren and sisters, but God above knows all things. Often I am made to think of the poem:

Much we talk of Jesus' bleed,

But how little's understood

Of His sufferings so intense.

Please cast the mantle of charity over my many imperfections. If not asking too much of you, when at a throne of God remember me. A poor little querist.

OUR REPLY

The writer of the above sent a stamped envelope for a reply by private letter, but stated that we might reply through the paper, and requested that the name be withheld if we replied this way.

We thought that our readers should have the benefit of what the writer said in the letter, so we decided to publish the letter and answer the questions the best we can in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

In reply to the first question we will say that we do not think it right for members of the Primitive Baptist Church to attend the social parties which are generally attended and participated in by the young people of the world. How would you like to die at such a gathering? How would it look for your obituary to be published in the church paper, and the statement made in the obituary that you died at a party?

How do you think your pastor would feel while preaching your funeral under such circumstances as that? You should never go to a place that you feel ashamed for it to be said that you died there. We are commanded to abstain from every appearance of evil. The church of God is not of the world, and her members are not of the world, and they should not act like the world. More is expected of them than is expected of other people. Do you think your Master would have gone to those things?

To the second question we will say that it is as much the duty of young members to speak as it is the duty of the older ones to do so. The brethren and sisters should all give and receive a friendly greeting at the church, and at other places, too, for that matter. It is expected that Primitive Baptists love one another, and they claim to do so. This love should be manifested. Where there is love there is always respect, and respect should always be shown the members of the church. We should show respect to each other. There is evidently too much coldness manifested in some places. When the love we have, or should have, for each other is not manifested as it should be, the love grows cold, and we become indifferent. This is wrong, and we should guard against it. It is the duty of both old and young to manifest the love and proper respect for the other members of Christ's kingdom. In answer to the third question will say that a person is doing wrong to act that way. Such a thing might be done unthoughtedly, but it is the no less wrong. It is grievously wrong for one brother or sister to refuse to, speak to another. It might be possible for one sometimes to fail to see the party, and not speak on that account. In such case, no wrong is intended or done; but when the brother or sister is seen, it is very wrong not to speak.

To the fourth question we would say that we think it right to speak, whether the brother or sister does so or not. It is right to always speak to a brother or sister, and one wrong does not justify another.

The answer to the third and fourth questions answers the fifth. It is no more wrong to fail to speak to the pastor than to the other members. The pastor should be treated with due courtesy, and this is true with regard to all the members of the church.

We do not see that the writer has done wrong in asking these questions; but it manifests the fact that there is an interest in the church and in the cause of the Master. If all were manifesting the interest that should be manifested, there would have been nothing to cause the writing of such queries. It grieves us often to see such coldness and indifference manifested as is shown by some in regard to the church and the duty of the membership.

It is true that the child of God hates what he once loved, and how one can claim to be a child of God and still manifest a love for the world the same as the unregenerate do, is something we do not understand. If we love the church and the service of God, and hate the world and its vanities and sinful pleasures, we should prove it by our lives. We should show our faith by our works. May the good Lord help us all so to do, is our humble prayer. "C. H. C.

CLOSE OF VOLUME THIRTY-TWO

---December 18, 1917

Another year with its joys and sorrows, disappointments and bereavements is closing, and we cannot tell what another year will bring. But let us try to hope it will be a year of peace and quietude, especially in the dear old church of God. We shall, by the help of the Lord, be found contending for the same doctrine, principles and practice THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST has contended for since its establishment by our dear father, Elder S. F. Cayce, January 1, 1886. We hope to be able to write more for its columns during the year 1918 than we have been able to do this year. We hope our corresponding editors, the brethren and sisters as well, will write for its columns; and let us all write the things that make for peace, and the things whereby one may edify another. Do not write us of your local troubles and ask us to publish them. Try to settle them at rather than publish them abroad. Let every lover of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST do all they can to help us put the paper in every Primitive Baptist home. Should we not try to have good, sound, wholesome reading matter for our children? The Arminian world keep their children supplied with their literature. Shall we appear to think less of the church of God and have less concern for our children than they? Surely not. We desire that all the dear brethren and sisters remember us in your prayers, that we may have the guidance of the Holy Spirit in our efforts to preach the gospel of Christ, and in our efforts to edit THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST to His glory and Zion's good.

C. H. C.

INTRODUCTION TO VOLUME XXXIII

---January 1, 1918

With this issue we begin the publication of the thirty-third volume of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. Thirty-two volumes of the paper have been completed. What is in store for us during this year we know not. The past has been mixed with joys, and sorrows. Sometimes sorrows and troubles have come thick and fast; but there have been some joys and pleasures along the way. Were it not for the few joys and sweet seasons which we have passed through, this' world would be a gloomy place, sure enough.

In the beginning of this new year we are in the midst of wars and confusion. Nations are at war with each other, and there are dissension's in the nations. It seems that there is a spirit of war and unrest in almost the entire world. Humanity seems to be blood-thirsty in almost every respect. There are wars and dissension's among the religious denominations, as well as nations. Strife and confusion seems to prevail everywhere. Let us hope that the dove of peace may soon hover over us all.

In the beginning of another volume of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST we trust that we have no other object in view than the comfort of the Lord's humble poor, and the glory of His adorable name. Our chief desire, if we know our heart, is the furtherance of the Lord's kingdom on earth, the consolation of His children, and His glory. It is our desire that the paper be conducted in such a way that it may be a medium of pleasant correspondence for the Lord's tried and tempesttossed children; a means of their instruction; a paper filled with good news and glad tidings for the poor. "The poor have the gospel preached unto them." It is our desire that in the columns of the paper we may have proclaimed nothing but "peace by Jesus Christ." "How beautiful are the feet of them that bring glad tidings of good things." Let us all try to keep out everything but the things that are good, and that we are all glad to hear. We are never glad to hear of trouble and divisions. Let us keep those things out of the paper. Suppose we all try for one year to say nothing about trouble and confusion. Let us all try to see how close together we can get, instead of trying to see how far apart we can get. Our people are one people, and we should not be divided as we are. Persecution would drive us closer together than we are, and we may have to pass through a siege of it, as many have done in the ages past.

Not long since we received a letter from a brother who seemed to think we now have no freedom or liberties. We often wonder if we all really appreciate the liberties and freedom which we now have. We have the freedom and liberty of meeting together, under our own vine and fig tree, to worship God and serve Him in a public way, as we understand His word to teach that we should, where none dare to molest or lawfully make us afraid. We have the privilege of publishing and reading our religious periodicals, setting forth the truth as it is taught in the Scriptures, and no one dares to interfere with us in the same. These are privileges that are blood-bought, and that were handed down to us by our fathers. Do we appreciate them? They may not be ours to enjoy for very many years. We know not when these blessings may be taken from us. Seeing that we enjoy such blessings and privileges, should we not be zealous and ready "to every good work?" May the Lord help us to consider these things, and help us to be faithful and true to His service, and help us to be kind to each other, and help us to be devoted to His cause.

We ask that our readers pray the Lord to direct us in the right way, and enable us to walk therein.

CONSOLIDATION

---January 8, 1918

Last week we made the following announcement of the consolidation of the Signal with THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. We expected when the article was written that we would have the list of Signal subscribers in time to send them a copy of last week's paper, but we did not get the list of names in time. Hence very few of the subscribers to that paper have seen the article. For that reason we are inserting it again in this issue. This issue of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST will be sent to the Signal subscribers. All who were taking the Signal will get THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST from now on in place of the Signal. Those who were owing Brother Collings for the Signal should now remit to us, and those who had paid Brother Collings will get credit on our books at the rate of one dollar a year. That is, if you had paid Brother Collings to January 1st, 1918, we will give you credit to that date.

All the associate editors of the Signal are retained in that department, except those who were already on the staff, either in our own department or in the Southern Department. Those who were already on the editorial staff in the Southern Department were retained there, and those who were already on our staff were retained there. We suppose this will be satisfactory to all parties.

Statements will be sent to all the Signal subscribers as soon as possible, showing what date they have been marked paid to, so that if any mistakes have been made we can get them corrected. We desire to have the books as clear of errors as possible. We all make mistakes, but we desire to correct ours when we find out about them.

We trust that all will be pleased with this change, and that all will help us to conduct the paper in a way that will be to the comfort and benefit of the Lord's children, and to the glory of His name. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

We have recently bought the subscription list of the Primitive Baptist Signal, which has been published at Glen Rose, Texas. Elder J. L. Collings has been publishing the Signal for some time. There will be a Signal Department in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, which will take the place of The Good Old Songs Department. We are sorry to have to discontinue The Good Old Songs Department; but we have found no one to edit that department since the death of our dear brother, Elder M. W. Miracle, and we do not have space in the paper for that department and for the other also. Hence we discontinue The Good Old Songs Department. Brother Collings will edit the Signal Department. We trust that this consolidation will be for the good of the cause of Christ, and for the benefit of His humble poor. We shall try to publish only such matter as will be for the comfort of the Lord's children, and such things as will make for peace. We hate strife and confusion, and we trust that we may all try to write such things as make for peace.

Those who have paid for the Signal will get credit for the same length of time on THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. That is, if you have paid for the Signal until July, 1918, and you are not already a subscriber for THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, you will get credit on our books until July, 1918. That is, we will send this paper for the same length of time as you have paid for the Signal. If you were taking both papers, we will give you credit on THE PEIMITIVE BAPTIST for all the time that you have paid for the Signal.

We suppose we will receive the Signal books in a few days, perhaps by the time this goes to press. We will immediately go to work putting the names on our list, and giving the credits. There may be some instances where one member of the family is getting one paper, and another member getting the other paper. In such cases, and only one paper is wanted, let us know at once which name to send the paper to, and we will give the proper credit and send the one paper. If you get two papers, we have no way of knowing it, unless you let us know it. Please do not put it off, because we want the list correct. There are probably some mistakes, and will probably be other mistakes made. If there are, please do not get irritated or out of humor with us, but write and tell us about it, and explain the matter to us, and we will gladly and cheerfully correct the same. We know that we make mistakes, like other folks, but we are willing to correct them as soon as we find them out. In fact, we want to correct them.

As soon as we can we will notify each Signal subscriber as to what time his subscription expires, according to the records we have. If there is any mistake, we desire that we be informed of it at once, so we can get it corrected.

We sincerely ask that all parties help to extend the circulation of the paper. In these times of war and war prices, all business is in a very unsettled condition, and the papers are suffering the consequences more than any other class. The grocery man or the dry goods man pays more for his goods, but he simply adds more on to that cost for his profit, and you pay the difference. In the paper business, paper costs more, ink costs more, and other things cost more; but the price of the subscription is just about the same as it was before the war. It is by hard work and "stinting" that the paper man "gets by." We cannot raise and lower our prices to conform to conditions just any day like the merchants can and do. When you pay for the paper for a year, you get the paper for that price, no matter what the publisher has to pay to get it out. Prices may go "sky high," but he cannot charge you any more for that year, for the year's supply has been paid for. Please think about these things, and do what you can to push the paper along.

We trust we may have the prayers and help and cooperation of all our readers and corresponding editors. C. H. C.

WELCOME TO COME

---January 15, 1918

In the Baptist Trumpet of January 3, 1918, is the following article over the signature of J. S. G., which is Elder J. S. Griffin, of Queen City, Texas, one of the associate editors of the Trumpet:

For some time I have had a mind to visit the brethren in Tennessee, and it seemed that this fall the way had opened up so that I was able to make the trip; and I consented for appointments to be made; but for fear my presence at this time would be a hindrance to their peace agreement, I feel sure it is best for me not to go. I hope that the brethren who made the appointments and were so anxious for me to come will not think hard of me for not coming. I love you brethren, and, if it is God's will, I hope to come to see you when my presence will not give an offense.-J. S. G.

We wish to say that we do not know of any who would be offended in the least for Elder Griffin to visit Tennessee. Our peace agreement was that we would recognize any of the brethren who would come among us without hobbies, preaching peace by Jesus Christ. If Elder Griffin will visit this section, we will gladly and cheerfully make appointments for him.

In our peace agreement we say that we do not believe there is such a difference that it should cause division. That is our opinion now. Our brethren should not be divided. Come on, Brother Griffin, and feel at home among us. We will try to make you feel free and at home. We will try to make you feel welcome. We do not believe our people would object to your coming. We meant what we said when we signed that peace agreement, and will stand by it. Brother Griffin, may we arrange some appointments for you? C.H.C.

CANNOT SIN

---February 5, 1918

The following article, written by the late Elder W. M. Mitchell, was first published in the Gospel Messenger of October, 1896, and copied in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST of January 18, 1897. We have been requested to publish the article again. No doubt many of our present readers have never seen it, and those who have read it once will receive no injury from reading it again. Hence we give it space, and suggest a careful reading of the same."C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for His seed remaineth in him and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.- (John 3:9).

Various have been the views and comments of brethren concerning the time, meaning, and proper application of the above text. And while we have had no particular objection to the doctrine presented by some of our beloved brethren on this text, we have had serious doubts as to whether they had given the proper application of the text, or presented the main and special point of doctrine contained in the text. We have thought it possible that one might speak or write the truth, and yet not expound or give the meaning of the particular text he claims to be expounding.

It is generally conceded by nearly all whose writings we have seen upon this text, that the words "cannot sin," refers to that divine nature and holy principle implanted in and received by the sinner in the new birth, and that it doth not commit sin, and that it (and not the man) cannot commit sin, because IT, and not the man, is born of God. But does not this view of the text pervert its meaning and - conflict with the plain wording of the text itself?

If it is something else than man that is born of God, why should the word "whosoever" be used in the very beginning of the text? Why not have all parts of the text to agree, and say, "Whatsoever is born of God" (or as one brother did say, "that thing" which is born of God), "doth not commit sin, and it cannot sin, because it is born of God." It is true that this perverted wording of the text would be in harmony with the views which some have given upon it. But is this right? The Holy Ghost in the holy apostle has made no mistake in saying, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin," and why should any faithful steward of the mysteries of God wish to change the word to "whatsoever" and "it?" Would it not be better that our views harmonize with the text, rather than to change its wording to make it harmonize with our views? If it is not the man, a real person, an accountable human being that is born of God, and cannot sin because he is born of God, who is it and what is it? Some say that part that is born of God does not sin, but the body, or flesh, of the Adamic man, sins continually. Now, this may all look very plausible and consistent with our daily experience; but, after all, is this the correct solution and meaning of the words: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin?" We think it is not. There is nothing said in the text about that part of man that is born of God, nor of that thing, or spirit, that is born; but the words "whosoever" and "he" in the text, show that it is a real person whether Jew or Gentile, wise or ignorant, rich or poor, old or young-who, if born of God, in the sense of the text cannot sin, because he (not it) is born of God.

But before proceeding further we wish to remind the Christian reader that the proper application of the text we are considering does not, in any way, conflict with any other text in the Scriptures. Nor does it conflict with the daily struggle that each believing child of God has in striving against sin. It does not conflict with what the Apostle Paul has expressed and what each believer has experienced, more or less, every day of his Christian life. Each can witness that "when I would do good, evil is present with me;" and further, each may say in truth, "I know that in me (that is, in my flesh) dwells no good thing." Romans vii. And, again, the very same apostle who wrote the text which we are considering also said, concerning the same characters embraced in the text, that "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us. ----(I John 1:8). And again he saith: "My little children, I write unto you that ye sin not; but if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." Now, when we take into consideration that all these last quoted texts are in perfect harmony with the words, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin," we are forced to the conclusion that, as it is man that is and must be born of God, there is some Scripturally qualified sense in which "he cannot sin, because he is born of God." About forty or forty-five years ago we remember seeing a published article from an aged minister, in which he quoted the words of Jesus: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. -(John 3). After quoting this, he said: "If this birth refers to the man mentioned in (Genesis 1:26) then I know nothing of any such birth." This was a startling expression to me, and one that I had never heard or read from any Primitive Baptist before; and though he was an aged and orderly minister of good standing, we could not well refrain from calling the attention of our brethren to the remark, and expressing our dissent from the sentiment contained in it.

In (Genesis 1:26) is written: "And God said, Let us make man in our image." Now, this is the only man that we know anything about, whom God, the Creator of all things, ever made, and in whom all other human beings were embodied; and he is the only man to whom God ever gave a law having a bearing upon all human beings that ever should be in the world, and he is the only man whose sin and transgression became the sin and transgression of all the progeny of Adam, who were created in him, and represented by him in his act of transgression. Death passed upon all when it passed upon him, for in him they all sinned, and in him they all die. And the law of God that was thus given to Adam and to all his posterity in him is the only law ever given to men which has a bearing on his future and eternal destiny beyond this world. It is the first and original law ever made binding upon man, and the transgression of it is the first and original sin ever imputed to man. That law, in all its force and perfections is the same today as when first given to man. It has never been repealed or modified in any particular. If it required perfect and perpetual obedience at first when Adam was a pure, good and innocent creature, it requires the same perfect obedience up to this very hour, and will so require it forever, if not fulfilled and its curse removed by our Lord Jesus Christ as the Surety, Husband and Redeemer of His chosen people.

Now, to be begotten and born of God is to be begotten and born of the same Spirit, power and life that raised our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead. And none are thus born but those whose sins are put away by the sacrifice of Christ. He has fulfilled the law and redeemed His people from the curse of the law, by being Himself made a curse for them. It can curse them no more, neither can they ever again commit sin, in the eye of that law, from the curse and condemnation of which their blessed Surety has redeemed them. The law, or the power of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made all who are born of God free from the law or power of. sin and death. And if thus free from the power of sin and death, it is because they are born of God into the kingdom of Christ and raised up with Him above the penal demands of the law. "And if we be dead with Him," it is not unreasonable nor unscriptural to believe that "we shall live with Him. -(II Timothy 2:11).

And now, as we must bring this article to a close, suffice it to say that when it is said, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, and cannot sin," it is nothing more or less than we find, in substance, in quite a number of other texts, such as, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life."-(John 5:24). None but those who are born of God are true and genuine believers in God the Father and in Jesus Christ the only begotten Son of the Father. They cannot commit sin any more under that law from which they are made free, and as they cannot commit sin in the eye of that law, they shall never more come into condemnation under the curse of that law, neither in time nor in eternity. "Christ hath obtained eternal redemption for us." "By one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." To be born of God is to be born from the dead; it is to pass from death to life. But let us remember it is the sinner that is saved, the man that is born of the Spirit, and it is the work of the Spirit and not of the flesh.

According to the views we have long entertained concerning this text, and which we have been trying to present to our readers in this article, it harmonizes with every other portion of the word of the Lord and does not require that we should say "that part of man that is born of God doth not commit sin." It is man that is born of God, and it is man that cannot sin, because he is born of God. This is the plain declaration of the text.

But let us remember that this man that is born of God, is also said to be “delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son.”- (Colossians 1). And while he cannot sin so as to ever again come under the curse and condemnation of the law from which he is redeemed and made free by the blood of Christ, yet he can and does sin and violate the law of Christ, because he is born into the kingdom of God's dear Son, and is, therefore, under law to Christ. Hence the Scriptures speak of those who are born of God sinning against Christ- sinning against the brethren- sinning against the church and against their own souls. “When ye sin so against the brethren and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ.”-(I Corinthians 8:12). We see, therefore, that the Scriptures do recognize the fact that, in some qualified sense, even those who are born of God can and do commit sin; but this sin is against Christ, because they are under law to Christ, and it subjects the offenders to be beaten with many stripes. God dealeth with them as with sons, and they have the blessed privilege of claiming that relationship, and in prayer say in truth “Our Father, who art in heaven * * * forgive us our sins.” As sons they sin, and mourn, and repent, and plead in the name of Jesus “forgive us our sins.”

If, therefore, there is not some Scriptural sense in which those who are born of God cannot sin, and also a sense in which they do sin, why should both these things be ascribed to them? If they cannot sin in any sense whatever, why should they be admonished to 'sin not,' as in (I John 2:1)? And if they cannot sin in any sense, why should it be said by the apostle, “If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death?” This is disciplinary, and applies to Christians in their church relations; but it shows conclusively that in their relation one to another in the church they are under law to Christ, and that according to the requirements of that law they are to “bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.” (Galatians 6).

To do what the law of Christ forbids, or to fail to do what it commands, is sin; but it is not a sin of an eternal bearing-or, in other words, there is no sin that a child of God who is under law to Christ can commit, that the consequences of it will follow him any farther than in this mortal life. Our God and Father will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and iniquities He will remember no more. But it is the law of His gospel kingdom that “He that doeth wrong shall suffer for the wrong that he doeth, and there is no respect of persons.”

We regret that this article is so lengthy, and now we close by quoting the words of Paul to Timothy: “Consider what I say, and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.”“ W. M. M.

REMARKS

We give space to the above editorial from Elder Mitchell in Gospel Messenger of October, 1896, because we believe most of our readers have not read it, and because we believe it to be the true exegesis of the text. The writer has advanced the same idea, or made the same exegesis of this text twice, while in discussion with Campbellites, and we believe it to be the true meaning of the text; but this article of Brother Mitchell is the first we remember to have ever seen in print giving such an explanation of the text. ELDER J. B. LITTLE

---February 12, 1918

Some of our readers will remember that about two or three years ago we made a statement in this paper that Elder J. B. Little and some others were excluded from Little Flock Church, in the Salem Association, in Arkansas. The party which claimed to exclude Elder Little and his party were recognized by the association. A suit was had for the church property, and in the Chancery Court the decision was in favor of Elder Little and his party. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, where the decision of the lower court was affirmed. This was some time ago. A copy of the evidence and pleading was prepared by both sides and carried before the higher court. A copy of each of these briefs were placed in our hands a good while ago, but we neglected investigating them, as we have had so many things demanding attention, and have had so many things to keep us worried. Recently we have looked carefully over these briefs, and have studied them as best we could, and must say that from the evidence here produced it appears to us that the decision of the court was a righteous one.

We have also received a minute of the New Hope Association, of which Elder T. B. Little is moderator, and we find that Elder J. B. Little and those with him were received by that association into her body as Little Flock Church.

From all this it appears that we were wrong in saying that Elder Little and those with him were excluded, for the evidence here is that they are the Little Flock Church.

We are sorry that we made the statement referred to above, and sorry of any injury done. The other side may have been honest and sincere in all that they did. We would not question the motive of any of them. Neither would we presume to say that all the wrong is on one side. No doubt both sides made some mistakes. We are sorry of the trouble and division, not only in that church, but in every place where trouble and division exists. We would be glad if all little differences were buried and forgotten, and for the brethren all to come together in love and peace and sweet fellowship once more. May the good Lord grant to give us all a longing desire for peace, and make us willing to "bear all things" for the sake of peace. C. H. C.

NOTE.-After the above was written and put in the paper we were convinced that the party which excluded Elder Little was the church and should be recognized as such. So when we moved to Arkansas, in the bounds of the New Hope Association, we did not put our membership in that association until the churches had said by their act in conference that they favored dropping Elder Little and his party from the association. The matters in the law briefs were hard for us to fully understand; and we know, too, something about how hard it is for a true Old Baptist Church to get proper results and decisions in the civil courts. We do not say this to find fault with the courts; but church matters and civil matters are entirely different things. Church matters have no business in civil courts, or the courts of the land.- C. H. C.

Ephesians 1; Ephesians 6:24

---February 19, 1918

Brother T. E. Washburn, Oneonta, Ala., requests our views of (Ephesians 1:13). He wishes us to explain "the word" and "after that."

(Ephesians 1:12) reads: "That we should be to the praise of His glory, who first trusted in Christ."

(Ephesians 1:13) reads: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise."

The meaning of the twelfth verse is "For us, who have fore-trusted in the Christ, to be to the praise of His glory." These people obtained an inheritance in Christ, because God had predestinated them to that end; and on this account they trusted in Christ. These were the people among the Jews whom God had predestinated to the inheritance.

The gospel was first preached to the Jews; the glad tidings of salvation was first preached to them. God had a people among the Gentiles as well as among the Jews. The Gentiles heard the gospel after the Jews had heard it. That is, the gospel was first preached to the Jews, and then to the Gentiles. Then the Gentiles trusted in Christ, "having heard the word of truth, the glad tidings" of their salvation. They were first saved, then heard the glad tidings, or good news, of their salvation; then they trusted in Christ; then they were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. They were saved before they were sealed. The sealing is not the saving. They were first saved; then they heard the news of their salvation; then they believed; then they were sealed. This is the order, and the language will admit of no other construction, neither can any other conclusion be consistently drawn from it."C. H. C.

Song Service

---February 19, 1918

A few weeks ago we copied some articles on the subject of singing from the Messenger of Peace, written by Elder Walter Cash. We have been requested to write some on the subject, and feel a desire to offer just a few thoughts.

For a long time we have noticed that our people, in many places, were lacking in their singing. They have not had the training and practice which they should have. Where they had books with notes, and had the training and practice, the books contained much of the modern "jig" music, suited only for pastime, and not at all suitable for congregational singing, or the true worship of God. Many of the songs were not sound in sentiment.

In the Bible we are commanded to sing and to make melody in our hearts unto the Lord. We are also required to sing with the spirit and with the understanding also. It seems to us that in order to sing with the spirit one must sing the truth. We have thought, too, that it is just as much wrong to sing a false doctrine as it is to preach it.

If our singing is not good, and all out of time and harmony, it is not edifying to the hearers. In fact, it may often "grate on their nerves." We have often heard singing when we wished they would stop-perhaps some of them would be about two lines - ahead of the others; perhaps some singing one stanza and some singing another; perhaps some singing too high, and some singing too low-we might say, a regular jargon. We cannot sing; the Lord has not seen fit to give us a voice for singing; but we do enjoy hearing good singing. Many times our heart has been comforted as we listened to the sweet music and the glorious sentiment proclaimed in song.

In the "Rudiments of Music" in the "Good Old Songs" we said: "Our great heavenly Father has graciously blessed most of us with the faculty of music, and has given us talents that we should improve in that sacred and heavenly science. Should we not be careful as to how we use them? They should be used in such a way as to glorify His name. All who have these talents given them should try to improve them and learn how to sing, and try to sing with the spirit and with the understanding, 'making melody in your heart to the Lord.'" This was our sentiment when that work was first published, in 1913, and it is our sentiment yet.

We like to see a whole congregation join in the singing. "All who have these talents given them should try to improve them." In order to improve the talent for singing, one must sing. Taking a back seat and listening to others will not improve one's talent. There is a song we have seen, and heard, called "The Model Church." An old man had been to meeting and on his return home he told his wife he had found the model church that day. He went on to tell her of the good old songs which were sung, and how that the preacher said, "Let all the people sing." Exclusive choir singing was not had that day, and the poor old soldier of the cross was made to rejoice. He tells how he joined his feeble, trembling voice in once more singing that melodious tune, "Coronation," to those beautiful and soul-cheering words, "All hail the power of Jesus' name." Once more he sang as in his youthful days. He felt like some wrecked mariner who gets a glimpse of shore. He had another glimpse that day of the heavenly shore just beyond the dark and rolling stream of death, and his poor old heart was made glad, and he rejoiced once more in the blessed hope of immortality beyond.

We cannot, in the communion service, ask all the people to partake, or to join with us. The Lord's table is in His kingdom, and one must come into that kingdom in order to have a right to partake of the emblems of His broken body and shed blood. Baptism is a prerequisite to the communion. Baptism is the ordinance which initiates one into the Lord's organized kingdom on earth, and one must be in the kingdom in order to have a right to eat at the table which is in that kingdom. But baptism is not a prerequisite to singing.

We are glad to say that we have observed a great improvement in the singing in many places of recent years. We have tried to encourage churches to have schools taught and classes organized. We are sure they are a great help in the singing. We trust many more places may do this. We are sure they will never regret it. There are teachers who are reasonable in their charges, and will make low prices for their services. They love the service of God, and love the good old songs which made glad the hearts of our mothers and fathers who have gone on to that better home, and have joined in the song of that celestial city, and whose happy spirits sing the glad notes of perfect redemption. Let us try to improve the talent the Lord has given us, and encourage all to do so that we can.

These thoughts are submitted in love for the cause and in the love of the truth, as we trust C. H. C.

---March 5, 1918

Brother T. S. Murrie, of Proctor, Okla., asks our views on ((Josh 24:15) (Joshua 24:15)), and asks if Joshua was talking to the heathen. The text says: "And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Joshua was addressing the Israelites. He was not talking to the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Gergashites, the Hivites, the Jebusites, nor any other "ites," only Israelites. This is clear and indisputable, as will be seen from the reading of the first verse of the chapter, which says: "And Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to Shechem, and called for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they presented themselves before the Lord." Verse 2 says: "And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor: and they served other gods." Verse 3 says: "And I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed, and gave him Isaac." Any person who says that Joshua was talking to the heathen nations displays a lack of knowledge, and shows a lack of reading. The language above is too clear to admit of controversy as to whom the prophet was addressing.

This language is often "quoted at" by the Arminian world to prove that the sinner is required to choose between God and Satan; that the right of choice is given to the sinner. If it be true that the right of choice is given to the sinner, and the sinner exercises the right and chooses Satan, or sin, and is sent to destruction for it, then he is sent to destruction for doing what God gave him a right to do. If God has given the sinner the right of choice, then the sinner has the right to his choice. If he has a right to his choice, there could be no just punishment for his exercising his right; unless it is wrong to exercise one's right. If it is wrong, then it is not right, unless it is wrong to do right. This reduces the proposition (that God has given the sinner the right of choice) to an absurdity; hence, it is untrue.

Israel had forsaken the true service of God, as He required, and were worshipping and serving idols. They were plainly commanded in verse 14 to put away the idols from among them and to serve the Lord in sincerity and in truth. But if it seemed evil unto them to serve the Lord, and if they would not serve Him, then they might choose that day as to whether they would serve this or that set of idols. One set of idols was served by their fathers on the other side of the flood. Another set was the gods of the Amorites, among whom the Israelites were then dwelling. One set of these idols was just as good as the other; neither of them were any good. Both were worthless. It would be as well for them to serve one set as the other; it made no difference whatever. What was true then is true now. One false god is as good as another. They are all wrong.

Much more could be written, but this is enough to show that the language is to Israel, and applies only to the Lord's people." C. H. C.

---March 5, 1918

Brother Enoch Bledsoe, of Blackwater, Va., requests our views of (Revelation 16:13), which reads: "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet." We do not feel an inclination, or desire to offer more than a few remarks in connection with the text.

Note that the unclean spirits came out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. They were the same unclean spirits which came out of the mouth of one that came out of the mouth of the others. The false prophet prophesies falsely; unclean spirits come out of his mouth. The Lord had true prophets, and there were false prophets, which were not the Lord's prophets. The Lord has true ministers, and there are false ministers, which are not the Lord's ministers.

The unclean spirits were like frogs; they were not frogs, but they were like them. Frogs usually make more noise as spring approaches. As you travel along, and come near a low, swampy place, in spring time, you can usually hear a great noise. So, there are some spirits which make a great noise as spring approaches. As the weather turns warm, and there are signs of approaching spring, the noise of the "big meetings" begin.

Frogs are amphibious-they live in water or on land. Yet they are usually more often found in low, marshy places; that is, some of them are. Others (as toads) usually hide during the day and come out to feed at night.

Some species of them are hatched in the water-perhaps most of them. At first they are tadpoles. They change from tadpoles to frogs when the tail disappears. As tadpoles they live in the water. As frogs they live in water or on land.

Some spirits say you can't have Christians without water. They have to gather 'round the water to make Christians, or rather, to make children of God. That's like the frog.

There is another kind of frog called the tree frog. It turns the same color as the article it is on. If it is on a gray bark it will turn gray. Put it on a brown leaf, and it will turn brown. Put it on a white article, and it will turn white. Put it on a black stump, and it will turn black. Put it on a green leaf, and it will turn green.

There is a spirit like that. Some folks are always of your opinion when they are with you. Put them with others whose opinion is different, and their opinion will be different. They always agree with those they are with. They can shift in opinion as quickly and as conveniently as the tree frog can change in color.

Some frogs will hide under bushes and leaves, and will come out readily when it rains. The sprinkle suits them all right; but they seldom get in the water. So, there are some who like sprinkling all right; they seldom get in the water.

Comparisons might be made still farther. Study the nature of frogs, and compare the same with the spirits, and you will find that these are only a few that may be correctly made." C. H. C.

A Debate

---July 16, 1918

We are in receipt of a letter from Elder J. M. Fuqua, of Dickson, Tenn., in which he tells us he had written us some time ago where people would be met who wished to attend our debate with Elder Daugherty. The debate is to begin on Tuesday, August 6, 1918, at Liberty Hill meeting house. Brother Fuqua says that conveyance will be at Burns on Monday for all who wish to attend the debate. We suggest that those who intend going write to Elder Fuqua, as above, so it may be known how many to have conveyance for.

Prayer Book

---July 16, 1918

Some time ago we received a letter from a brother in Texas telling us that a certain sister out there saw an advertisement of prayer books in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, and that she said she had not read a copy of the paper since, and that she wanted an explanation of the matter through our columns. If she does not read the paper she may never see this explanation, but we only have this to say:

Our advertising department is in the hands of---of---It is true that we have the right to reject any advertisement which we think is fraudulent, or of an unreliable firm. Many advertisements are inserted for people that we know nothing about. This is a matter that is simply unavoidable. Any person who knows anything at all would know that it would be impossible to go all over the United States and investigate every concern for whom an advertisement is sent us. We know, too, that parties advertise things in our paper sometimes which will not pay them. That is, parties sometimes send us an advertisement and we know that they will receive no benefit from it, or at least, very little benefit. The advertisement of a prayer book will serve as an illustration. The editor was not aware that an advertisement of that kind had been inserted in the paper. If we had known it, we would have known that the advertiser was spending money from which he would get very little, if any, returns. We know that our people do not use prayer books. While that is true, some of them may sometimes wish to get such a book so that they can see and know for themselves what people are doing, and what the religious world is doing. So far as we are concerned, we have no more confidence in written or printed prayers than the sister has; but we have a prayer book in our library, as well as a good many other books which the Arminian world has published. We have them because we wish to know what they are doing and what they are advocating. If some people who are so particular could take an editor's place for a week or two they might not be so quick to find fault. We know that editors make mistakes, and so do other folks. If people would always remember the Saviour's teaching about the beam and the mote, they might sometimes pursue a course a little different to the one they do pursue.

We suppose that when we get to the point that we can conduct a paper that will suit every person exactly, and to which no fault can be found by anyone, no matter how perfect that one may be, then we will have a subscription list so large that it will tax the United States Government to the utmost capacity to provide mail facilities to deliver the paper to the subscribers, and the long-talked of millennium will have come. That appears to us to be so far in the future that we have no hope of living to attain such an end.

May the good Lord help us all, and, if it can be His will, remove from us the spirit of war and bloodshed which is in the churches as well as in the nations.

Red Cross and Woman Suffrage

---September 3, 1918

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother in Hope-If not asking too much, would like to have your views about Old Baptists joining the Red Cross Society, and Old Baptist women voting in primaries or general elections. I disagree with some of our members about these things and would like to have your opinion. Also would like for Elder D. Hopper to write on (Isaiah 2:4). Has that prophecy yet to come before the end of time? A little sister in hope of eternal life,

MRS. MAGGIE HOWARD

REMARKS

In reply to the above questions we say that we think it is all right for our people to contribute to the Red Cross for the benefit of our soldiers on the battlefields of France, who are fighting for the preservation of our freedom and the liberties that have been handed down to us by our ancestors. We have to win the war against Germany, or else be brought under German control and military rule. This is the condition of affairs, and, therefore, we must win the war. The boys who are in the trenches are fighting that these liberties may still be handed down to our children. They are fighting for us; for this reason it is our duty to do what we can for their comfort and health. We can do this without becoming members, of the Red Cross. We are not a member, but we have contributed for the benefit of our soldiers. As to women voting, we have to say that we think it better for the good women to be home makers rather than be mixing in politics. The greatest influence is in the home, and a woman can do more good there for her country than she can ever do in other ways. Read (Titus 2:1-5)." C. H. C.

Church Organized

---September 17, 1918

On Saturday before the fourth Sunday in August the following elders and deacons met at Shady Grove, a few miles south of Fulton, Ky., for the purpose of organizing a church at that place: Elders J. B. Halbrook, B. P. Simmons, M. J. Perry, R. L. Perry, and C. H. Cayce, and Deacons J. A. Littlejohn, E. Perry A. M. Perry, and C. J. Russell. Elder J. B. Halbrook was chosen to serve as moderator, and Elder C. H. Cayce as clerk of the presbytery. The covenant, articles of faith, and rules of decorum were read, upon which they proposed to be constituted, and by which they proposed to be governed, which were approved, and those who signed the same were pronounced a gospel church in order, after their letters of dismission had been read. After the church had thus been organized, they sat in conference and made choice of Elder R. L. Perry as pastor and moderator, and Brother Will French as clerk. Their regular meeting time will be on the fourth Sunday, and Saturday before, in each month. They will be glad for brethren to visit them at any time. C. H. C.

A Debate

---September 17, 1918

We have agreed to meet Mr. I. B. Bradley in debate near Burns, Tenn., to begin on Monday, September 23, and holding five days. The place is Gentry's Grove, about two miles from Burns. Notice should have been given before this time, but we have been waiting to hear from Mr. Bradley concerning a request we made of him, but no hearing has been received from him. We trust all the brethren will be there who can go.

Government Rulings

---September 24, 1918

On account of the scarcity of coal, and on account of paper shortage, the Priorities Board of the War Industries Board has made some rulings which materially affect our business. The amount of paper used by each newspaper must be reduced 15 per cent. In order to make that reduction the following rules have been made by the Board, and the following notice sent to us:

To PUBLISHERS OF COUNTRY WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS:

The Priorities Board of the War Industries Board has listed paper mills as an essential industry, and has rated them in fourth class for priority for coal, on the distinct understanding that the greatest possible economy in the use of paper be exercised, and that the reduction in the use of paper by the newspapers shall be 15 per cent.

Each paper mill will be put upon the priority list for coal, conditional upon their signing a pledge that they will furnish no paper to any consumer who will not also sign a pledge in duplicate that he will exercise the greatest possible economy in the use of paper, and will observe all rules and regulations of the Conservation Division and of the Pulp and Paper Section of the War Industries Board. These pledges are now being prepared and will be furnished shortly. One copy will be left on file with the mill and the other will be sent to this office.

The war committee of weekly newspaper publishers feels that the necessary saving of 15 per cent should come out of the industry as a whole, and in order to accomplish this purpose, made the following suggestions, which were accepted by the Pulp and Paper Section of the War Industries Board and are to be effective September 1, 1918.

Each publisher shall eliminate the following wasteful practices. If for any reason a publisher desires to continue any of these practices, he must adopt some other methods to accomplish at least a 15 per cent reduction in paper used. If by November 1, 1918, a saving of 15 per cent has not been made in the industry as a whole, the matter will be reviewed by the Pulp and Paper Section and further curtailments will be necessary.

1. No publisher of a weekly, semi-weekly, or tri-weekly newspaper shall use in its production any paper except newsprint, and of a weight on the basis of not heavier than 30~x44-50lb. (basis, 24x36---321bs.)

All stocks now on hand may be used whether newsprint, machine finished, or sized and super calendered, and regardless of weight.

2. No publisher may continue subscriptions after three months after date of expiration, unless subscriptions are renewed and paid for.

3. No publisher may give free copies of his paper, except for actual service rendered; except to camp libraries and huts or can-teens of organizations recognized by the Government, such as Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., or K. of C.; except to the Library of Congress, and other libraries which will agree to bind for permanent keeping; except to Governmental departmental libraries which use said publications in their work; and except for similar reasons.

4. No publisher shall give free copies to advertisers, except not more than one copy for checking purposes.

5. No publisher shall accept the return of unsold copies from news dealers.

6. No publisher shall print extra copies, for stimulating advertising or subscriptions, or for any other use than those specified in these regulations, except not to exceed 1 per cent of his circulation with a minimum of 10 copies.

7. No publisher shall send free copies in exchange for other publications, except to such other publications as are published within the county, or within a radius of 40 miles from his point of publication.

8. No publisher shall sell his publication at an exceedingly low or nominal subscription price.

9. No publisher shall sell his publication to anyone below the published subscription price.

10. No publisher shall offer premiums with his publication unless a price is put upon the premium for sale separately, and the combined price is at least 75 per cent of the sum of the individual prices.

11. No publisher shall conduct voting or other contests for the purpose of obtaining subscriptions; subscriptions obtained in this way will not be considered bona fide subscriptions.

12. No publisher may issue holiday, industrial or other special editions.

13. Publishers shall, so far as possible, procure paper and all other materials from the nearest available source of supply, provided it is consistent with price, quality and service.

14. Publishers of papers of more than 8 pages in size will reduce the pages in excess of 8 pages 25 per cent. This reduction shall be an average reduction over one month's period.

15. Any publisher of a 4 or 8 page paper will be considered to have fulfilled the requirements of this order if he immediately puts into effect paragraphs numbered 1 to 13 inclusive, and in addition thereto reduces to the lowest possible point all press room waste.

No newspaper may be established during the period of the war, except those for which arrangements had been made and plants purchased previous to the issuing of this order, or unless it can be shown that a new newspaper is a necessity.

A sworn statement will be required from each publisher on November 1 as to how many of these rules have been put into effect by him, and what results in the matter of reducing paper consumption have been obtained. Yours very truly,

THOMAS E. DONNELLEY.

Chief of Pulp and Paper Section. August 22, 1918.

The reader will see from the foregoing that there are certain requirements which we have to meet that will make some changes necessary in the rules we have been following.

Rule No. 2 forbids the sending of a paper more than three months on time. In order to meet the requirements of this rule we will have to discontinue sending the paper to our subscribers after the time paid for expires. Our rule heretofore has been to notify the subscriber when his time was out and continue sending the paper for as long as one year on time unless notified not to send it. In order to meet the requirements of our War Board we will have to discontinue that rule, and stop the paper when the time paid for is out. This is not left optional with us or the subscriber, but is required-by the government.

Rule No. 3 forbids the giving of free copies of the paper, except for actual service rendered and for libraries. The sending of our paper free is no longer left optional with us. We will have to stop sending the paper free to all those brethren and sisters we have been giving the paper to. This is another thing that is not left optional with us. We will have to drop the names from our list who are getting the paper free.

Rule No. 7 forbids the sending of papers in exchange for other papers, unless the other papers are published within forty miles of Martin, Tenn. To meet the requirements of this rule we will have to stop exchanging papers with others. We will have to subscribe and pay for the papers we get, and others who wish to get our paper will have to do the same thing.

Rule No. 9 forbids us selling the paper to anyone below the published subscription price. We have not been doing this, but some have asked us to do so. If we desired to do what they have asked, it would be a violation of the law for us to do that now.

Rule No. 14 requires that the papers which have more than eight pages must be reduced. That is, a reduction of twenty-five per cent must be made of all pages more than eight. Our paper has sixteen pages. Hence, we have to make a reduction of twenty-five per cent in the number of pages more than eight. This reduction may be made as an average over a period of one month. In order to meet this requirement we will have to issue a paper one-half size each month. This will give us the reduction required, lacking a small fraction. In order to meet this requirement, we are having to send out this issue of the paper just half size.

We ask our subscribers to read and study these rulings made by our government, so that they may all understand the position we are placed in. We trust that no one will think hard of us or censure us for trying to carry out these requirements. We also trust that all will cheerfully accept the situation. We are involved in a great war, fighting for our freedom and our liberties, and we should be willing to make these sacrifices to save material for our government which is needed to prosecute the war.

The date to which every subscriber has paid is on the paper or wrapper opposite the name. Look at the date on your paper, and if your time has expired, please renew at once, as we will have to soon drop all subscribers who have not paid up. We will have to do this to comply with the law. A great many of our subscribers have been paying at the end of the year instead of in advance, but this order prevents us sending the paper that way any more. Please attend to this matter at once. We do not wish to drop any names from the list, but we must comply with the law. C. H. C.

The year 1918, with its joys, sorrows, anxieties, heartaches and brought tears, - has passed and has forever gone, and what another year will bring is altogether unknown to us. We have heard the shouts of joy and praise of God's dear people. We have seen the faces of many aglow with joy and gladness, and we have felt to rejoice with them. We have looked into the faces of many who were the very picture of sadness and sorrow. We have visited the house of mourning-fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters mourning the loss of someone who was near and dear to them by the ties of nature; and we have sorrowed and mourned with them. Many are now sleeping the sleep of death that were with us one year ago, and we are left sad and lonely; but this serves to call our minds to the fact that we, too, are swiftly passing to our eternal home, and to wean our minds from the perishing things of this fleeting, sinful world, and direct them to Him who is the Creator of all created things and the Giver of every good and perfect gift. It is through and by Him we have our being and that we are blessed with food and raiment, together with all spiritual blessings. Hence, to the Lord we owe our lives, and the same should be devoted to His service and the welfare of each other, instead of striving after the perishing things of this life to the neglect of these things. How much better it would be for us, and how much more happiness there would be in this life, if we would try to live for each other and the honor and glory of God's great and holy name. We have but a few more days, at best, to spend in this world and we, too, will be called to say farewell to our loved ones and all we may possess of the goods of this world. Will this be a joyful hour with us, or will it be one of regret? The Lord has promised not to forsake His obedient children, but to be with them in all their troubles, trials and afflictions. He will lighten up the pathway of death for those who have lived obediently and walked humbly before Him, and to such it will be a joyful hour; but to those who have lived a life of disobedience to His holy commands, following the promptings of the evil one instead of the gentle wooing of His Holy Spirit, it doubtless will be an hour of regret. Then let us try to live in such a way that His name will be glorified and that death will be a welcome visitor when he comes.

With this issue of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST we bid our readers adieu for the year 1918, hoping to come to you again January 7, 1919. We have desired to give our readers a paper that would be a comfort and consolation in their many trials and troubles, and that would unify, edify and build them up, instead of dividing and scattering them, and to this end we have labored; but with what results we leave our readers to judge.

The Lord willing, we shall endeavor to follow the same line in the coming year, contending for the same time-honored principles of our fathers as we have ever done. To this end we beg an interest in your prayers, realizing our weakness and imperfections and our dependence upon an independent God." May heaven's blessings be yours." C. H. C.

A Breakdown

---January 14, 1919

While printing the papers for our issue dated December 24, in some unexpected manner our large press was badly broken. - We lacked some 1,500 or 2,000 papers being done printing. As the press broke before they were all printed this many of our subscribers failed to get that issue of the paper. We assure you that we hate the accident much more than you do, because it will cost us possibly $100 or $200 to have the press repaired.

We are trying to issue some kind of paper for you, but if you are disappointed in any way please be as patient as you can, and remember this accident, and also that the "flu" is still raging in our office, and that ten or twelve of our hands are, or have been, sick with it during the past four weeks. Such illness has almost demoralized certain branches of work in the office. We hope to get back to normal soon. C. H. C.

Elder John R. Daily in the Daily-Hughes Debate

We have received permission from Elder John R. Daily to publish the speeches he made in the Daily-Hughes debate. Elder Hughes was a Universalist. We wrote Elder Daily and asked him if we could publish these speeches because we consider them among the ablest we have ever read. We believe every one of our readers will receive great benefit, instruction, encouragement and enjoyment by reading them; hence, beginning this week Elder Daily's speeches will be published serially as fast as possible, as much in each issue as we can use.

We ask everyone of you to read every argument carefully, and don't fail to get the leading thought throughout the discussion-that it is sinners of Adam's race who are regenerated, or born of God, by the Spirit of God being implanted in their hearts; that it is sinners of Adam's race who are finally saved in heaven, and that these sinners of Adam's race are men and women, human beings. If you will bear this in mind continually you will receive great benefit from the reading.

Notice, also, that Hughes argued that God's people were a family of invisible spirits, while Elder Daily denied this all the way through the book. C. H. C.

NOTE.-It would take too much space to put Elder Daily's speeches in this book.

Some Questions

CAYCE PUBLISHING COMPANY:

Dear Brethren-I am sending you some questions to publish in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST and would like to have a public hearing from Elders Cayce, Petty, Bullard, Wilson, Newman and Golston. These brethren have all been in my home, and I would love for them to visit us again. In love,

A. N. VANCE

Hattiesburg, Miss.

THE QUESTIONS

Is it right to have a singing class at a Primitive Baptist Church, and have a song service before and after services?

Has the leader a right to say who shall sing and who shall not sing; or is it right for the leader to invite all who are in the congregation, that feel like singing, to take part?

Do we have the same right to invite people up in the communion service as we have to invite them to sing? If so, give the chapter and verse.

Is there anything written that is above the Bible?

How old are the articles of faith that the Primitive Baptists have subscribed to?

Isn't the Bible the only rule of faith and practice?

How old is the Black Rock Address, and who wrote it?

How old is the London Confession of Faith and who wrote it? Doesn't it contain some Absolutism?

Isn't it possible that a man can be a stockholder in a bank, be a merchant, or county officer, and carry on any kind of legitimate business and be a member of the Primitive Baptist Church?

Is it possible for a preacher to get wrong? If so, how will you start to get him right?

How far does the Bible require the members to follow the preacher?

Is it right for a preacher to entirely depend on the members for the support of himself and family?

When a preacher accuses a church of something, and the church proves that she is not guilty, and the preacher still contends that the church is guilty, where will the evidence have to come from to convince him?

What three words in the English language covers more space than "grace," "peace" and "love?"

When preachers differ on some point of doctrine or order, should it be a public or private difference?

Give the symptoms of a prejudiced and jealous preacher and also remedy? In love,
A. N. VANCE

Hattiesburg, Miss.

OUR ANSWER

Brother Vance asks our opinion concerning the things asked about, as well as the views of other brethren. The other brethren are at liberty to answer for themselves, and we will answer the questions according to our own view. We will simply answer by number.

1. We think it is. We are commanded to sing spiritual songs and to make melody in our hearts unto the Lord, who has graciously given most of us a voice and organs with which to sing, and a talent for singing. This God-given voice and talent should be improved. In order to the proper improvement of them, it is necessary that classes be taught, or that the person be taught, and this is conveniently and economically and best done in classes.

2. It is certainly proper to invite all to sing, or to take part therein. It cannot be wrong to invite those present to sing.

3. No. The communion service, or partaking of the sacramental supper, is an ordinance of the church and in the church; singing is not.

4. No. There is nothing written that is above the Bible; but sometimes men "become wise above that which is written."

5. So far as we know the London Confession of Faith is the oldest confession of faith put forth by the Baptists, now in print.
6. Yes. Our articles of faith so state.
7. The Black Rock Address was written September 28th and 29th, 1832, at Black Rock, Baltimore County, Maryland, in accordance with a call in a circular prepared and published by elders and brethren at the preceding session of the Baltimore Association.
8. The London Confession of Faith was written by messengers and ministers of upwards of one hundred congregations in England and Wales while in session July 3 to 11, 1689. The following short address, or preface, precedes the confession: "We, the ministers and messengers of, and concerned for, upwards of one hundred baptized congregations in England and Wales (denying Arminianism), being met together in London from the third of the seventh month till the eleventh of the same, 1689, to consider of some things that might be for the glory of God and the good of these congregations, have thought meet (for the satisfaction of all other Christians that differ from us in the point of baptism) to recommend to their perusal the Confession of our Faith, printed for and sold by John Marshall, at the Bible in Grace-Church Street. Which Confession we own as containing the doctrine of our faith and practice, and do desire that the members of our churches respectively do furnish themselves therewith." This is signed by the following names in the name and behalf of the whole assembly: Hanserd Knollys, John Harris, Hercules Collins, Leonard Harrison, Isaac Lamb, Benjamin Reach, Thomas Vaux, James Hitt, William Facy, Christopher Price, John Ball, William Pritchard, Richard Ring, Toby Willis, James Webb, Robert Knight, William Phips, Samuel Ewer, Charles Archer, William Kiffin, William Collins, Robert Steed, George Barrett, Richard Adams, Andrew Grifford, Thomas Winnel, Richard Tidmarsh, Samuel Buttal, Daniel Finch, Edmond White, Paul Fruin, John Tomkins, John Carter, Richard Sutton, Edward Price, William Hankins, Edward Man. We do not think it contains what is now termed "Absolutism." One section (Chapter III Sec. 1) may be construed by some to teach that doctrine, but when proper notice is taken of each word, it may be seen that it is not embraced therein.
9. Yes, most assuredly.
Yes, they often get wrong. They cause most of the trouble among the churches. When one gets wrong, the church should take the same steps with him as with any other member.
Just so far as the preacher follows Christ, and no farther.

We think that when a preacher is not preaching, or spending all his time that way, he should follow some honorable work for the support of himself and family, if he is physically able.

We do not know where the evidence would have to come from.

Those three words embrace a great deal-possibly as much, or almost as much, as any other three words in the language.

Little differences should be borne with, and should be private differences. No one is perfect-at least, if one is perfect, we would like to see him, for we do not think we have yet met such a person-and we should be willing to bear with each other on minor points.

16. These symptoms are usually so plainly manifest that we hardly deem it necessary to mention many of them here. One symptom we will mention is that the one who has become tainted with the disease will sometimes use a brother for his text in his little preaching, instead of preaching Christ and Him crucified.

Another symptom is that if the brethren invite, or request, another brother to render a service for them, instead of asking him, he becomes offended; refuses to even be present at the service rendered; thinks he has as much sense, or is as smart and as well prepared to have rendered the service, as the brother requested; thinks he is as well balanced and as level-headed as any other Old Baptist in that whole section of country. These are a few of the symptoms. One more is that every brother must use his words in expressing his views or else he is a heretic. Another symptom is that he will talk or write things (sometimes) that are not true in order to injure the brother and to create suspicion in the minds of the brethren against him. These are a few of the symptoms. You may recognize them, as well as others. The best remedy we know is to exclude the brother who has contracted the disease, but it is one that is seldom applied. The usual rule is for some brethren to fall in with him and stir trouble and confusion, and sow discord among the brethren, and cause brethren to become alienated and fellowship to be destroyed all for no reason on earth only the malice, envy, jealousy, and hatred of some preacher who aspires to leadership, and who is determined to rule or ruin. We are sorry it is so, but these are facts. May the good Lord help us all and deliver us from the perils of false brethren. C. H. C.

Preacher Not Wanted

---June 10, 1919

Brother C. A. Hall, of New Albany, Miss., asks us to answer the following question through THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST:

Is it order for a preacher to go and preach at a church, when said preacher knows that several of the members of the aforesaid church do not want him to preach in said church, owing to his preaching causing confusion in said church?

If a brother's preaching causes confusion in an Old Baptist Church something must be wrong, either with the preaching or with the church. The church might be wrong-having been led wrong by some man-so that she will not receive the truth on some point. Then, on the other hand, the brother may be preaching wrong. He might preach the truth, yet not preach it in the right way. He might be making a hobby of some point, and that point be true. Many things might be considered in a case of the kind mentioned in the question; and yet we do not know that Brother Hall had any particular case in view when he asked the question. We know that we have no particular case in mind in our answering it. We are not so sure that it constitutes disorder for a preacher to preach at a church where there are objections on the ground mentioned, yet we think it is usually a safe rule for a brother to follow not to visit a church, or preach at a church, under such circumstances as mentioned in the question. Still, circumstances might be such as that it would be perfectly right for him to preach at a church when such an objection might be made. Circumstances in the case should govern. It depends upon why such complaint or objection is made. " C. H. C.

A Magnetic Healer

---July 1, 1919

We are informed that Elder R. V Sarrels has become a "magnetic healer," and that he "heals" people now. We may be a little late in announcing this fact to our readers, but we have simply overlooked it, until the present. We wonder if Luke, the "beloved physician," was a "magnetic healer." C. H. C.

Some Questions

ELDER C.H.CAYCE

Dear Brother-Do the gates of hell prevail against the church or kingdom that is set up in this world for the indwelling of His people? When we join this church does it put us in bondage? Please answer these questions, giving your views and chapter and verse through THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. Your unworthy brother,

E.E.HUDDLESTN

R. 8, Booneville, Miss.

The gates of hell do not prevail against the church to the utter destruction of the church. The church may become extinct in any one locality, but it will be planted some other place. "Unto Him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end."-(Ephesians 3:21). "Unto Him be the glory in the church," and this is "throughout all ages." Daniel said that the kingdom should stand forever; ((Dan 2:44) (Daniel 2:44)). The church has come through flames of persecution, and has not yet been destroyed.

When one becomes a member of this church, they come under the rules and regulations that govern in the church. A member is under obligation to observe the rules and regulations of the church. Read the church covenant and you will see the obligation there. If one loves the church it is not a prison to him, and it is not a service that is grievous. If it is grievous for one to observe the rules, it is evidence that he does not love the church as he should. The child of God is free from law service, or is not obligated to render law service. Yet he is under law to Christ, and is under obligation to render service unto the Lord. This service is not unreasonable service; (Romans 12:1). In the service of the Lord there is a warfare, and one who engages in a warfare is a soldier. A soldier is under obligation to the kingdom for which he is fighting. He is under obligation to his captain. Jesus is our Captain; (II Timothy 2:3). He has made us free from the elements of the world, and we should show forth His praise by rendering the service unto Him that is due; (Galatians 5:1). C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 15:29

---July 1, 1919

Sister T. B. Harlan, of Reagan, Texas, asked us sometime ago to give our views on the above Scripture. We do not have the time now to write at length, though the text embraces a great deal, but will make a few remarks. The text reads, "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptized for the dead?" This shows that the person baptized is dead. They are dead to sin, and dead to the love of it. The dead are buried and will rise again. In baptism the person baptized is buried and raised again-hence baptized for the dead. The text shows clearly to us that baptism is a burial and a resurrection. If there be no resurrection, then the baptism is wrong. But as the doctrine of the resurrection is true, then the baptism representing it is right. This is one of the things necessary to constitute Scriptural or gospel baptism."C. H. C.

Wrong To Gamble

---September 23, 1919

We are in receipt of a query from Louisiana, which says, "Is it in order for a Primitive Baptist to raffle off his horse, or is it not orderly?"

It seems to us that a question like this has but one answer, and that every person who has a sense of moral rectitude and right should be able to answer promptly, and should need no instruction from others as to what is right or wrong in such a procedure. The question might as well be asked, "is it order for one to gamble?" for raffling off a horse or anything else is gambling, pure and simple. If a member of the Primitive Baptist Church has been engaged in such practice as raffling off his horse, the church should bring a charge against him for gambling at the first conference meeting and notify the guilty party of the charge, and then deal with him accordingly."C. H. C.

Questions of Order

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-Please publish this query and answer same for the benefit of all. Brother P and Brother C differ on a point of doctrine and Brother C has Brother G to bring a charge against Brother P, and in the settlement Brother C comes to church and asks the church to exclude him by rescinding the act of receiving him, for the reason that he is not in fellowship with the doctrine of that church. Can that church fellowship any other church that receives Brother C? Next, if Brother P is pastor of the church that rescinded the act of receiving Brother C, is it orderly for Brother C to be invited in the stand by Brother P's home church, when his church knows that Brother C is in disorder with the church that excluded him?

Please publish this in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. In hope,
N. V PARKER.

Pocahontas, Tenn.

OUR REPLY

In answer to the above query, we give it as our judgment that no other orderly church can fellowship the church which receives Brother C.

In answer to the second query will say that in our opinion it is not orderly for Brother C to be invited into the stand or to take part in the service of the home church of Brother P. If the home church of Brother P knows that Brother C is not considered in order by the church that dismissed him, it would be a flagrant disregard of order for them to invite him to take part in their service, or to preach in their pulpit.

We would add in addition to above that the church would make a mistake in allowing Brother C to have his original letter and rescinding the act of receiving him. The proper course to have pursued would have been to have excluded Brother C for coming to them as though he was in line and in fellowship with them, when he really was not."C. H. C.

A CHILD BY BIRTH

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-I feel impressed to ask you some questions. They may sound silly to you. When does the Adam sinner become a child of God? Is it not a fact that the sinner becomes a child by being born of God and related to God? Would the elect be saved eternally without being born of God and made heirs? So the question is, are we saved by the washing of regeneration, or were we saved before we were born of God? If so, when? Yours in hope,

W. J. HULL

Headland, Alabama.

OUR REPLY

In answer to the above question will say, most positively and emphatically, without fear of successful contradiction from any quarter, that the Adam sinner becomes a child of God by birth or by being born again, or from above. If one is a child of God before being born of God, then when he is born of God he is no more a child of God than without regeneration. It is true the Scriptures teach that the heirs of immortal glory are God's children in purpose before the ages of time began, but to be a child in purpose and to be divinely related to the heavenly Father are two different things. When one is born from above, or born of God, it is hut the manifestation of the purpose which God had before time; hence one is made a child of God by being born of the heavenly parentage. We are "saved by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost." This is what the apostle says about this matter, and we have been of the opinion, and our opinion yet is, that he knew what he was talking about. If the sinner is saved by the washing of regeneration, then he is not saved before regeneration. It is true that the sinner, is saved by the washing of regeneration, "according to God's purpose and grace"-so says the apostle. If the sinner is saved before regeneration, then he is not saved by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost according to God's purpose and grace. If the elect are saved eternally without being born of God, then we see no reason why one should be made to partake of the divine nature by the new birth in order that he be prepared to live in and enjoy the spiritual realm. If any person could be saved eternally without being born of God, we see no reason why the infant could not be saved that way; but our people have always said that the infant is saved the same way that the adult is saved, and have always contended that infants that die in infancy are regenerated by the operation of God's Holy Spirit, and that, therefore, they are saved in heaven. If it is necessary that the infant be regenerated, it is just as necessary that the adult be regenerated.

Not only is the above true, but it is also true that our people have always contended that one becomes a child of God by birth. We think our people have always been right in this contention. We believe it is Scriptural, logical, reasonable, sensible, and cannot be any other way. - C. H. C.

Moved

---November 18, 1919

We have moved from Martin, Tenn. to Fordyce, Ark. We left Tennessee on the morning of October 29th, and arrived in Fordyce on the morning of the 30th. On account of this moving we have been unable to get the paper out as it should be. Before leaving Tennessee we made arrangements with the Baptist Builder to get out several issues for us just half size. They could not get out the full size at all for us. For some time before we left there we were short of help, and could not get our mailing list corrected up. On this account many of our subscribers have not been getting the paper regularly. We are sorry of all this delay and trouble, and we hope that our subscribers will be as patient with us as they can.

There has been much complaint about the paper coming out only half size. This was the very best that we could do under the circumstances. The prospects are not very good now for us to be able to get the blank paper to print on at all. The prices have been going up by leaps and bounds during the past few weeks, and we noticed a few days ago that some New York newspapers are bidding as high as thirteen cents a pound for paper, and could not get a mill to furnish them. It is not going to be a question of price, but it looks like it is going to be a question of getting paper at any price. -Fortunately we purchased some paper at five cents a pound, but we do not know how long the stock will last. We bought it to be shipped as we need it. Our supply will not last many weeks longer.

We have written to the company who handle our advertising, and have given them notice that we wish to leave out all advertising. We have to give them a few months notice, according to the contract which we have with them. But as soon as possible we intend to leave all the advertising out of the paper.

We hope that none of our subscribers will quit taking the paper because we have been sending out the small size, or because we had to miss an issue or two. If you will all consider the high cost of everything, you will realize that the price of the paper is very low in comparison with other things.

We are having a time getting things straightened up since we arrived here, but we are getting things in some better working order now, and hope to soon have things straight. We are expecting more help in a few days, and will try to get our mailing list corrected up to date as soon as possible.

We have met with many good and kind people since we came here, and believe that we will like the place for a home. We know that this is a much better place so far as printing is concerned. We request all to remember to address us from now on at Fordyce, Ark.

NEW WAY OF SALVATION

---January 6, 1920

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Sir- I enjoy reading THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST very much, for I believe the doctrine it contends for. They have a lot of what is called preaching here, but not much preaching by the Old Baptists. They have preaching once a month. I go every time I can. I believe they preach the same doctrine they did when Christ first sent them out. I believe Mr. Gallimore and Mr. White are saved men. I enjoy hearing them preach.

There is a man here who claims that he was saved before he was born by the prayers of a pious mother."Please give me your views on that. Your friend,

J. M. BYERLY

R. 2, Lexington, N. C.

REMARKS

That gentleman has a new way of salvation-a way that the Bible knows absolutely nothing about. There is only one way of salvation. Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me." The word "man" means "any one," or "no one." It is by what Jesus does that one is -saved, and not by what a pious mother does. The gentleman should read his Bible more.

The Small Size

---January 13, 1920

For some time past we have been issuing THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST only half size. When we were arranging to move to this place from Martin, Tenn., we made arrangements with the Baptist Builder Publishing Company, at Martin, to get out four issues of the paper for us. They could get the paper out only half size. The last issue they got out was Nov. 4, 1919. We thought that we could get moved and partly straightened up here, so that we could get the paper out after that date. But it took longer than we expected to pack and ship the office, and to get here and get arrangements made and get the business to going. We bought the plant and business of the Smith Printing Co. here and took charge of the business Nov. 11. On that day we were just one week late with the paper. The next issue was due to be mailed on that day. But we still had to unpack the material we brought with us, and some things were left with the Builder people, which they had to use, which had not been received. All these things put us still further behind. Besides this, we had only one operator to set type on the machine, and he could not set the amount of type that was needed. Then on the very day that we took charge of the business here, the motor which runs the machinery went to the bad, and there was not another motor in town that we could get. We finally found a three-horse power kerosene engine which we rented and had put in the office, but it would not pull the press which we had to print the paper on. After trying that for several days, we found a six-horse power engine at Thornton, belonging to Elder John R. Harris. We got a man to go there and get that engine, and finally got it installed in the office. By this time we were a way behind. It was then impossible to get out a full size paper, as we were still short of help to set type. All our help is either inexperienced or our work is new to them. Several were inexperienced entirely in a printing office.

Well, we have had troubles galore. Now, the motor has been repaired and again installed, at the last of the month of December.

Now, the price of news print paper is simply "out of sight." The last two shipments we have received the price was seven and one-half cents a pound. The plain white paper for one issue of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST the regular size would cost, at the last price, $100. And there is no reduction in sight now. Some large daily papers have been bidding as high as thirteen cents a pound for paper, and could not get the mills to contract to furnish them with it. This was the report. The house we buy from is urging us all the time to use as little as possible, as they do not know how long they can furnish even a small supply at any price. One week we had to wait several days to get the paper to finish printing that edition.

In October we notified the advertising agency who sends us all the advertising that we publish that we desired to discontinue all advertising after Nov. 4. They objected and contended that we should give them ninety days notice and then fill out all unexpired contracts. The contract which we had with them requires that ninety days notice be given, which we overlooked when we wrote them. As soon as we can, we wish to leave all the advertising out of the paper; but we cannot leave it out until we can do so honorably.

One sister has written us that she takes a thirty-cent story paper, and that the editor of that paper has to pay a high price for all the matter which he publishes, and that the size of that paper has been reduced only two pages from about thirty pages; that the editor of that paper has made no complaint; that we have reduced THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST one-half; that we are complaining to the subscribers; and that all the matter we publish in the paper is furnished free to us; and that we publish so much advertising, and that we are not living up to our contract with the subscribers, etc.

We mention this to show how some people consider things-the idea of comparing a religious paper with a thirty-cent story paper! Perhaps the story paper does pay for the reading matter which it publishes, and perhaps they have from thirty to fifty or seventy-five thousand subscribers, while we have only about twelve thousand-perhaps not quite so many if we had had the help we needed to take all the names off the list which have been due to come off for some time past. And the story paper does not depend upon the subscriptions for the paper (the subscription receipts) for its support. It is depending on the advertising; and where they get dollars for an advertisement, we get pennies. The story paper is supported by the advertising, while the advertising receipts for THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST only replaces a part of what we spend for the cause of the Master. We are not complaining; but we are stating facts. The sister will know to whom we refer when she reads this; and we will say that we are ready to refund the money which she paid for the past year, and if her feeling remains the same as manifested in her letter, if she will only write and tell us so, we will refund her money and take her name off the list, for we do not want her name on our list at any price if she feels as expressed in that letter. It may be possible that she is really a little out of humor because some of the matter she has sent was not published, or not published as soon as she thought it should be. We are not out of humor in the least, but do think it is rather hard to receive such letters when one is doing the very best that he knows how to do, or the very best he can under the circumstances. When we read the letter, we thought of the article published some time ago from the pen of our dear brother, Elder J. H. Phillips, on the subject of stoning the preacher, and felt like a few rocks had come our way, whether we were the preacher or not.

Now, we will say that it may be only a short while that we can get paper at any price to print THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST on-even half size. There is a scarcity of news print, and we do well to get enough to print the paper half size each week. We wish to say again, however, that we will do the very best that we can. We will get the paper out the regular size just as soon as we can. Remember, though, please, when you think that the price is too high for the size of the paper, that one time the price of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST was $1.25 a year, when all other things were much lower in price than now. We never knew news print paper to be as high as it is now. We have seen the time when we could buy all we wanted at one and three-quarter cents a pound.

On account of being scarce of help the work of correcting the mailing list is far behind, and some have worked on it that did not understand the work very well, and on this account two papers are being sent to some, and many dates have not been changed. We are working on this now all that we possibly can, and will get that work up as soon as we can. We wish to assure all that we will make good all the time that they miss, if we can but know how much to make up.

We beg the indulgence of all our good brethren and sisters, and all our subscribers. We feel sure that if you could all be with us for a few days and see how things are, that you would not be impatient the very least. And we feel, too, that those who love the paper, and the cause it defends, will try to be patient with us. We do feel to insist that you do not quit taking the paper because it has failed to reach you regularly for the last few months, or because we could not get out the regular size; but that you stay with us and help us to pull through this crisis which is upon us on account of high prices. One dollar and fifty cents a year does not amount to much to one, but a large number of them will amount to much with us who are trying to keep the paper going the best we can. Many papers have been forced to suspend publication entirely on account of the scarcity of help and the high prices. We do not expect to have to do that, but we will need our subscribers and friends to stay with us through these strenuous times to bring THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST through the strain and still be on a firm footing.

May we count on you staying with us, and having your support? And above all, may we have your prayers-that the good Lord may lead, guide, guard, protect, and keep us in the right way? Many times we do not know what to do, or what way to go.

Lord, help us.

What Shall Be Done In The Case of Disorderly Elders or Preachers? -

IS IT A PROBLEM?

---February 3, 1920

The following article by Elder G. W. Stewart is copied from the Gospel Messenger for January, 1920. As long as such men are shielded and held in fellowship by the churches, it is no wonder that there is trouble in the camps of Israel and churches are divided and sweet love and fellowship is destroyed. For our part, we would rather be alone than to fellowship some things that are winked at. We recommend a careful reading of the following article.

C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

An elder whom I have known and loved a long time, writing to me about certain disorderly elders or preachers among us in certain sections, says: "When I think of David with the wife of Uriah, and him a man after God's own heart; and of Solomon with his many wives, and he a type of Christ; of Peter denying the Lord profanely right in His presence; of Thomas saying, 'I will not believe it is the Lord till I put my fingers in the nail prints,' and of the woman taken in adultery, whom Christ told to go and sin no more, carrying with it the idea she was guilty, etc., I must admit these are hard problems to solve, and bring me right to the footstool of Sovereign mercy."

Now, some who are inclined to tolerate and uphold disorderly preachers and others, would be ready to construe such language as this into defense of, or palliation of, upholding, winking at and sustaining such characters as those just mentioned; but knowing the brother as I do, I am confident that such is not his purpose for he is too good a man for that; but let us investigate the matter carefully and in the light of the real facts, in the different cases as presented in the Scriptures. Because it is said that David was a man after God's own heart {((Sam 13:14) (I Samuel 13:14))} we are not to conclude that God approved of, winked at or condoned David's great sin in connection with Uriah; for while the Lord pardoned David in that sense that He did not take his life, yet God did punish him severely, for by Nathan, the prophet, He told David that because of his sin against Him the sword should never depart from his house and that He would raise up evil against him out of his own house, etc., etc., in fulfillment of which David's own son, Absalom, arose in rebellion against his father, drove him from his wives and from his throne and from Jerusalem into the wilderness, where he became a wanderer, fleeing from his own son in his old age, weeping as he went, and the people fleeing and weeping with him; and to make his punishment more humiliating, there went along over against him an enemy, a bad man, a son of Belial, who cursed King David as he went. Besides all this, think of the death of his beautiful, beloved and rebellious son, Absalom, and of how David wept over him when informed of his death. "And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept: and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom, my son, my son, Absalom! would to God I had died for thee. O, Absalom, my son, my son." This is enough, I think, to show that King David was punished severely for his sin against Uriah, which was against God-a punishment in preference to which many would choose death even in this day. (See an account of the punishment foretold by the prophet, ((Sam 12:7) (II Samuel 12:7-13)))

Solomon went off after strange gods in old age and was guilty of adultery, on account of which the Lord punished him by rending the kingdom from him, and making one of his servants, Jeroboam, king in his stead over ten tribes of Israel, yet for David, his father's sake, left him two tribes, Judah and Benjamin, which separation or rending occurred soon after Solomon's death.

Hence, we see that God did punish both David and Solomon for their sins-David for his carnality and gross immorality, and Solomon for his idolatry.

Consider what Paul has to say of the sins of Old Testament saints, for he shows that every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, {(Hebrews 2:2)} and in his letter to the Corinthians, ((I Corinthians 10:1-12)), says that the sins and disobedience of God's people after the flesh were written for our example, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, etc., as they did, hence were not written that we should refer to them or adduce them as examples to justify us in this age in our sins, or in tolerating disorder in the ministry or in the church; for, when we do this we are doing the very opposite of what the apostle exhorts us to do.

Peter-I see no similarity between the lying of Peter and Ananias, for although Peter had been forewarned of his fall, and all the disciples plainly told that Jesus would be betrayed, and crucified, and would then rise from the dead, all the record and circumstances plainly show that they did not understand what was meant by it all. {See ((3) (Luke 24:13,25))} So it was under the excitement of fear and of great personal danger that Peter sinned, or lied, a thing which any of us are liable to do even to this day. The scenes and circumstances under which he committed this great sin, never occurred before, and never will again in all history. Nothing in Peter's case to encourage the willful, malicious, cool, deliberate, calculating liar.

As for the adulterous woman of (John 8:3; 11), she was not a disciple of Jesus, nor member of His visible church. Jesus did not condemn her to be stoned to death, because to have done so would have been a violation of the Roman law, and hence would have involved Him in trouble with that power; for it was not lawful for the Jews to put anyone to death. Jesus did not come to take life, but to save it. The blessed Saviour was too wise to be caught by His crafty enemies. The whole lesson is a beautiful example of letting each one attend to his own business in his own sphere. Nothing in this is in conflict with (Romans 16:17-18), and ((Th 3:6) (II Thessalonians 3:6)). What is said about Peter applies also to doubting Thomases. We find nothing in all these cases in conflict with the law of the Lord concerning the qualifications and character of gospel ministers, as expressed in (I Timothy 3), and (Titus 1) in particular, and the 'three letters of Paul to those young ministers and others of the New Testament in general.

It will be seen according to these high and holy laws or rules for the ministry that no man of immoral, bad, doubtful or suspicious character has the right to officiate in the gospel ministry. Let churches and ministers read these rules carefully and prayerfully, and let us at the same time remember how transgressors were punished under the Old and New Testament dispensations, and ask ourselves in what sense disorderly ministers of today are punished if they are tolerated and fellowshiped by the church. Shall we undertake to explain or interpret the plain rules of the order of the New Testament by types, Old Testament characters or doubtful passages, when these laws concerning the character of ministers are expressed in such simple and plain language without a shadow, without a parable or allegory? Shall we undertake to interpret a plain passage by a doubtful or obscure one? If the sins of either Old or New Testament saints, and our own weakness and unworthiness, cause us to stumble and doubt what we should do in case of a bad or disorderly minister, for the same reasons should we not be in doubt, and hesitate to oppose and non-fellowship the minister that advocates Arminianism, apostasy, non-resurrectionism, or the human religious institutions of the day, such as popular missionism, Sunday and theological schools, etc.? Why in the name of consistency and the Scriptures should we be so prompt and zealous in opposing what we consider false doctrine and so ready to hesitate in opposing immorality in a preacher?

The Scriptures require that the daily life of the minister shall be an encouragement, an inspiration and a defense of the humble believer; hence, it is said that "A good example is the best sermon;" and "better an ounce of good example than a pound of doctrine;" and "He who lives well is the best preacher;" and "preachers can talk but never teach, unless they practice what they preach." The preacher without a blameless character honors God with tongue but obeys the devil with foot; presents a form of doctrine, but denies the power thereof in his walk; professes that he knows God, but in works denies Him; and so it may be truly said of all those preachers or elders that tolerate, fellowship and uphold him and such disorderly elders and all that tolerate him will ere long bring down upon themselves the judgment of the great Head of the Church, who will remove their candlestick and cause them to become a byword and a reproach among the people. Then let us remember that it is in vain that we try to uphold the truth and doctrine of the Lord, while we at the same time are associated with corrupt men in the ministry. I am glad to know that such things are not generally known among us, but in some instances, O shame upon us, they are to be found, to the suffering separation of loved ones, the heart-ache and anguish of soul of some of the noblest and purest among us.

May the Lord help us to be valiant for truth in His holy and blessed name.

G.W.STEWART.

What Next?

---March 2, 1920

We are just in receipt of a letter from a sister in Mississippi stating that some brethren there understood us to be condemning Elder G. W. Stewart in our comment upon the article we published in our issue of February 3, which article was written by him and published in the Gospel Messenger for January, 1920. How anyone could get such an impression is beyond our comprehension. What we said was simply a plain endorsement of the article, and a condemnation of such men as Elder Stewart described and condemned. We simply endorsed the article without any qualification whatever, and recommended a careful reading of the article, and would recommend it again. And we would repeat that as long as such men as Elder Stewart condemns in that article are retained in the church, and are shielded and protected by the church, it is no wonder that there is strife and confusion in the camps of Israel. No wonder there is coldness and barrenness in the churches. Now, we wonder what will be said next? C. H. C.

PAPER SHORTAGE

---March 9, 1920

Our readers will remember that we said something in our issue of January 13 about the shortage of paper, and that it was hard to get paper at any price. They will call to mind that we said something about what a certain sister wrote us. She still does not seem to understand the matter. She thinks that if the editor of the 30 cent story paper could get his paper out and not make any complaint to the subscribers, that the editor of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST could do the same thing. Well, perhaps so; but the editor of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST is not the only one who has complained about the paper shortage. In the Globe Democrat, of St. Louis, about January 29, the following statement was made:

“Because of the acute white paper situation throughout the United States the publishers of the Weekly Globe Democrat are forced to restrict the size of this edition. An effort is made to print all news of importance. Advertising to the amount of thousands of dollars has been omitted from this issue. It is hoped that the paper situation will be relieved soon.” Notice that they say “an effort is made to print all the news of importance”

-they only make an effort to do so. They had to restrict the size of the paper-why? Because they could not get the paper needed or desired-that is why. The situation is no better yet, but seems to be growing worse. It is just as hard to get paper now as it was a month ago, and the price is no lower. There is no telling what the end will be. Many papers have already been forced to suspend publication. We do not intend for THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST to suspend as long as we can get some paper to print it on, even if the price is so high-just as long as we can get the paper, and can pay our printers, just that long the paper will be published. Paper may get so scarce that we may have to get the paper out only twice a month, but it will continue to be published. We expect to continue to do the best we can with it, and we still ask our subscribers to stay with us. The paper still contends for the same time-honored principles which we have advocated all along the line, and we see no reason yet why we should change.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

---April 20, 1920

Mr. Bryan is perhaps one of the greatest traveling evangelists of modern times. He traverses the world at such a rate that his enemies call him “a bird of passage,” and he comes nearer speaking to the multitudes twenty-four hours a day than any man living. If men who preach the gospel would do it with the same industry and ability that Mr. Bryan uses in preaching democracy, no adding machine could compute the number of souls that would be saved.

The above statement is copied from the Gospel Advocate of April 8, 1920, published in Nashville, Tenn. It appeared under the heading, “Said in Paragraphs, by James A. Allen.” We suppose that Mr. Allen is the author and that the Advocate endorses the sentiment. The statement that we wish to call attention to is that “If men who preach the gospel would do it with the same industry and ability that Mr. Bryan uses - in preaching democracy, no adding machine could compute the number of souls that would be saved." According to this, the men who preach the gospel are not as industrious in that work as Mr. Bryan is in his work, or not as industrious as they might be, or as they should be. If they were as industrious as they should be, then a great number of souls would be saved who are not saved. Then, a great number of souls are eternally lost on account of a lack of industry on the part of the men who preach the gospel. They are not sent to hell on account of what they have done, nor on account of what they have not done, but on account of a lack of industry on the part of the preachers. We understand from the Scriptures that God is a God of justice. "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face. "-((9:14) (Psalms 89:14). "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth:"---(Jeremiah 23:5). These passages teach us that the Lord is a God of justice, and that the Son of God would execute justice in the earth. We cannot understand upon what principle of justice the Lord would send countless numbers to eternal perdition on account of a lack of industry on the part of preachers. It appears to us that this would be sending one class to an eternal hell on account of the neglect of another class. If this be true, we feel sorry for the preachers; for if the Lord executes justice in the earth, then the preachers would be sent to hell as well as the countless numbers who are sent there on account of their neglect. We feel to thank God that this doctrine is not the truth.

Question of Order

---June 1, 1920

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-I am now "overboard," and want to ask some questions for information through your valuable paper:

When something in the order of church discipline is introduced and is persisted in till the body of churches become grieved over it, and the association comes together and cuts off the contending churches, according to her rules of decorum, and the churches cut off contend for the identity of the association and calls for a council of elders and the council justifies the excluded churches and preachers, and requires the orderly churches and preachers to remain in the body without any effort to restore peace and fellowship, is that a godly gospel ruling? Tell us all plainly, and "let the chips fall where they may." Because I cannot accept of such ruling, I am without a home in the church of God. After laboring in the ministry fifty-two years, my own church was going to exclude me because I could not agree with the ruling of that council. How could the identity of the church be sustained with such ruling? Now, I just want the Baptists to know that I have withdrawn my membership from my own church and from every church that wants me to submit to such ruling as to force order and disorder to live together.

I would like for the Gospel Messenger and the Landmark to copy your answer to this, so that my brethren can know my situation and gospel standing. As ever, a poor old way-worn sinner in tribulation,

Wampee, S. C.

REMARKS

We have long since discovered and decided that no question of order can be answered with a certainty of being correct, unless all the circumstances of the case were surely known. Every individual case must be decided upon its own merits, considering all the facts connected with it. It would appear to us that if the rules of decorum are right, that if a church is dropped according to those rules, then those dropped are not in order. This is the way the matter would appear to us. There is no council which can righteously rule that a church should act contrary to the rules of decorum, if the rules are right. A council has no right to make rules, any way. A body of brethren may be called together to advise and to try to bring about reconciliation between brethren or churches who are at variance, but they have no right to make rules or to control. The church of God is the highest ecclesiastical authority on earth; and the church has no right to enact laws. The only authority which the church has is to execute the laws which her Lawgiver has made. Jesus Christ is the only Lawgiver. It is right for the church to execute those laws; and just as long as a church continues to do that, just that long that church is in order. There is no higher court above the church. From the righteous decision of a church in the disciplining of her own members there is no appeal. Every church has the inalienable right to discipline her own members. When a church has labored with a refractory member, and finally withdrawn fellowship from him, he is excluded from gospel church privileges, and no other church can righteously restore him. The place to find a thing is where it was lost. Taking sides with excluded persons and recognizing them has always been a source of trouble and confusion in the church of God. The only righteous course to pursue when a church has thus dealt with a member, is for all parties to let that person alone, and only advise him to be reconciled to his church where he was dealt with. The only right place for him to get back in, is where he got out.

Submitted in love.

Malachi 4:2; Isaiah 58:8; Isaiah 30:15

---June 1, 1920

In November, 1918, Sister Mary Saltsman, of Alexander City, Ala., requested us to write on the above passages of Scripture. Often we are requested to write on some portion of Scripture when we have no mind to write on it then. Besides, it is almost impossible to comply with all the requests we get of that kind. We will try to say a few words in connection with these references now.

((2) (Malachi 4:2) reads as follows: "But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in His wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall." It is evident, from this, that some fear the Lord. The wise man, Solomon, tells us that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. The reason why a man fears the Lord is because the Lord puts His fear in his heart. "I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me."-(Jeremiah 32:40). The man who fears God is one who has been born of God. He is one who has been made a child of God. This fear is not a slavish fear, but a loving, filial fear. The child of God fears that he will not do those things that are well-pleasing in the sight of God. He does not fear the devil, nor does he fear eternal torment. He fears God. Unto such, "shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in His wings." They have their dark places to pass through. The night follows the day, and the day as surely follows the night. The night may seem to be long and dreary, but the Sun of righteousness will surely arise after awhile. When the day does come, and the Sun of righteousness arises, how glorious is the day! How the heart is made to rejoice, and joy and gladness fills the soul. The night may be so dark, and seem to be so long, that the child feels, as David, that "the Lord is clean gone forever." His prayer may be, "Lord, restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit." He may feel that he has surely been deceived in the whole matter, and thus dwell for a time in "doubting castle;" but the Sun of righteousness shall most surely arise with healing in His wings. The bright sunshine of the day will surely come, and the dark clouds will be dispelled, and the heart will be filled again with joy and sweet peace. Then they "shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall." They grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the truth. They are revived again, and rejoice in the sweet assurance that Jesus is their Saviour, their Prophet, their Priest, and their King. The hope is brighter and sweeter and more precious than ever before. Sometimes they can exclaim with the servant Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." How sweet and precious is the promise in this text for the poor little pilgrim here, whose home is beyond this vale of tears.

((8:8) (Isaiah 58:8)) reads: "Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and thine health shall spring forth speedily: and thy righteousness shall go before thee; the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward." In order to understand the meaning of this verse it is necessary to notice some things in the context, or in other verses in the chapter. By reading the preceding verses it will be seen that these people had been engaged in doing things which the Lord had not commanded, and had been leaving undone things which He had commanded. They had been fasting, as though they were humble before the Lord, but leaving off the doing of the things He said for them to do. They were not loosing the bands of wickedness, nor undoing the heavy burdens, nor letting the oppressed go free, nor breaking any grievous yoke; they were not dealing bread to the hungry, nor caring for the poor, nor clothing the naked. These things the Lord had commanded; but they were not doing them. In referring to these things, Isaiah is doing what is commanded in the first verse of the chapter: "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins." Now, when they do those things which the Lord has commanded, "Then shall thy light break forth." When? Then. Verses 9 and 10 read: "Then shalt thou call, and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and He shall say, Here I am. If thou take away from the midst of thee the yoke, the putting forth of the finger, and speaking vanity; and if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry; and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noon day." These commandments were given to Israel; they were not given to any people to observe in order to become Israel. No place in the Bible can a commandment be found given to any person on earth to observe or to obey in order to become an Israelite. But there were many commandments, admonitions, and exhortations given to Israel; and Israel were the Lord's people. He had chosen them; they had not chosen Him. They were His people as a nation. They were a typical people, typifying spiritual Israel. They were required to show forth the Lord's praise by observing His commands; so spiritual Israel today are required to "show forth the praises of Him who hath called them out of darkness into light" by observing His commands. When Israel observed and obeyed the Lord's commands anciently, they enjoyed the blessings which were in the land of Canaan. So, today, when the Lord's little children observe and obey the Lord's commandments, when they do what He says do, and leave undone the things which He has not commanded, they enjoy the blessings which are in the gospel Canaan, which is the Old Baptist Church. See the widespread desolations that exist today! Why, Oh, why are the Lord's people so divided? Why are they so factionized? Why is the glory of Zion departed? Why is there so much strife and confusion? Are we not failing to observe and keep the commandments of the Master? If all were trying to walk as the Lord commands; and all trying to "bear each other's burdens;" and all looking over each other for good, and not for evil; if all were acting toward each other as from a principle of love, instead of from a principle of envy and strife; if all were willing to suffer wrong rather than do wrong- if all were thus living, would not the Old Baptists be nearer together today? Would they be divided into factions as they are? Would not their light be shining? Would not sweet fellowship and love be more enjoyed by us? Would not we realize more of the glory of the Lord's presence with us? We feel sure that we would enjoy these things more. May the good Lord look in pity and compassion upon us, and help us all to live nearer to Him, is our prayer.

((0:15) (Isaiah 30:15)) reads: "For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel; in returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength: and ye would not." The Lord here graciously told them where their strength was, and where they might find peace and comfort, but they would not. Does this not look very much like the condition of the Lord's people today? But the time will come some day when the Lord will be gracious to His children, and will have them brought together. They may pass through the flames and be tried in persecutions again, as they have been in days gone by. Persecutions will drive them together, and cause them to cease so much striving among themselves. When they were persecuted anciently, they were not so greedy then to destroy each other. Their love for each other was made manifest then. They were glad to see each other, and glad to get to meet together to serve and worship the Lord. They did not spend their time then in quarreling over some minor point which no man can understand, but were glad to spend the time they could be together in talking of the goodness of God, His love and mercy, and in praising His name. Oh, Lord, if it can be thy will, spare thy children from the sore persecutions which many of them have endured, and grant that they may be drawn together in love and sweet fellowship. C. H. C.

Question on Discipline

---June 15, 1920

Elder W. A. Clark, of Delvalle, Texas, asked us in April for our views on a case like this: A church has a number of members living far from the church, and they do not write the church or let the church hear from them, and some of them have been gone for two, three, and four years. Brother Clark wants to know what the rule is in such cases. We believe that the late unwritten rule is to let them alone and retain their names, though the church may never hear from them or know what has become of them. However, we do not think that this is right. If a member moves away from the bounds of the church where his membership is, and is out of reach of that church so he cannot attend the services, he should move his membership to a church of the same faith and order which he can attend, or which is in reach. If there is no church in reach, where he can attend the service, then he should write to the church of his membership. If he does not love the church well enough to write now and then and let the church know how he is getting along, and to express his love for the cause, and to let them know that he has not lost interest, then he does not love the church well enough to have membership there. Such dead material is a dead weight to the church. Let a minister go to such a place, and ask how many members are enrolled, and he be told that there are so many, and he sees only about half that number are in attendance, he will most likely think that there is something wrong. We certainly think such members should be looked after.

Remarks To A Letter

---June 15, 1920

Such letters as the above encourage us to press on in the service of the Master and in the publication of THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. Sometimes we feel to be very much cast down and discouraged, and often feel that it would be as well for us to give up in despair. Prospects look dark and gloomy to us in some respects. We feel that the blessed privileges which we now enjoy will not last always. The clouds look dark to us. Unless the good Lord preserves and keeps us by His grace, we will fall. We have always tried to give all the reading matter we could for the money in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. We -have not tried to make money out of the paper, but simply to just make it pay its expense. This being so, as prices are soaring so high, and still going higher, we have had to raise the price of the paper. Our last bill of paper was priced at twelve cents a pound, and it takes twelve hundred pounds of paper for this issue. Somehow we have felt that if the Lord is in the matter the way will be open and all things come out right in the end. We trust that we may still have an interest in your prayers."C. H. C.

Mark 12:31

---June 15, 1920

Mrs. T. L. Kitchens, of Cornwell, S. C., requested us to give our views on ((31) (Mark 12:31). Beginning with ((28) (verse 28)we have this language, "And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that He had answered them well, asked Him, Which is the first commandment of all? And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." We give verses 28 to 30 so that the reader may have the connection. These were of the ten commandments given to Israel.

The neighbor is not always the one living next door. The neighbor is one who is a friend in need, and a friend in need is a friend in deed. No man in nature, perhaps, has ever loved another as he loved himself. "Self preservation is the first law of nature," is an old saying, which is a true one. If a man loves his neighbor as he loves himself, and has only one dollar in the world, he would as soon his neighbor had the dollar as to keep it. One young man who went to the Saviour claimed that he had kept all the commandments, and expected to get to heaven, or to receive eternal life, on account of the things he had done. The Saviour tried him on his own platform, and manifested the fact that the young man had not loved his neighbor as himself. He was not willing for others to have his possessions. He loved himself more, and did not desire to divide. No man can ever receive eternal life as a result of his own doings. But the one who has the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost loves all those who give him evidence that they have been born from above, and desires to help relieve them in their sufferings and sorrows. His heart goes out in sympathy to them, and he is willing to divide all that he has with them. This is but another evidence of a gracious state. "If we love Him that begat, we love him also that is begotten of Him." "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." If we love the brethren, as we should, we will not fail to manifest that love. We should show our love. "Love not in word only." It does not amount to much for us to talk a whole lot about how much we love the brethren, and how much we love the cause, and never show that love, or prove it, by the way we do. We have had some to tell us they loved us and esteemed us, and then do what they could for our injury. Such as that is not Christ-like, but is hypocritical. We would much rather a man would never tell us that he loves us, or thinks well of us, than for him to tell us that, and then act differently. We should be faithful and true to our convictions, and true to our trust. We should act in a way that all may be confident that we are sincere, and have no just cause to say that we are not. Let us prove our love for one another.

Appreciated Gift

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother in the Lord, I Hope-I will write a few lines to show my love and respect to you. I have been reading THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST a long time, and I have enjoyed it very much; but I am getting so I cannot see how to read much now, but I am thankful I can read it a little yet. You will find enclosed fifty cents to carry my paper on this year.

Brother Cayce, I will send you a present, and I hope it will not make you mad or hurt your feelings. I will send you a pair of socks that I knit myself. I finger-picked the cotton, and washed it, and dried it, and carded it, and spun it, all myself, and I will be eighty-eight years old the 11th of July, if I live to see that day. I am the mother of fourteen children, and am the grandmother of ninety children, the great-grandmother of eighty-two children. I have been a member of the church sixty-seven years, and lived a deacon's wife about fifty years, and have lived a widow twenty-two years.

Brother Cayce, I have longed to see you and hear you preach, but I guess I never will. I saw Brother Hanks when he was very young. If I never meet you in this world, thank God, I have a sweet hope that I will meet you beyond this vain world of sorrow where it will be happiness and joy. I would not give that hope in exchange for all this world. Remember me in your prayers. May God bless you and your family and all of your labor. Press on and spread the good news all over the world. Goodbye.

MRS. S. E. WEBB

We cannot find words to express our gratitude for such expressions and manifestations of Christian love and sweet fellowship from this dear and precious old mother in Israel. Tears of gratitude flowed from our eyes as we read the above letter and as we examined the socks this dear old sister sent. We feel like we want to keep them as long as we live in loving remembrance of this dear sister. They are sure a beautiful piece of work; the thread is white and smooth and even, and every stitch is even, and we know that every stitch was taken with thought of Christian love and esteem. May heaven's richest blessings rest upon this dear old sister, is our humble prayer. We would be glad to see her and hear her talk of the wonderful love and mercy and sweet promises of our heavenly Master, and of His faithfulness. We have little hope of ever having this privilege on earth, but we have a sweet hope of meeting beyond this vale of sorrow. We trust we may have an interest in the prayers of this dear sister, as well as of others." C. H. C.

Judas' Feet Not Washed

---July 1, 1920

A. J. Akers, Dana, Ky., asks if the Saviour washed the feet of Judas when He washed the disciples' feet and if it was at the same supper at which Jesus gave Judas the sop that the disciples' feet were washed. In reply will say that the sacramental supper was instituted at the close of the eating of the last passover supper which Jesus ate with His disciples. In the eating of that last passover supper the Saviour had the conversation as to who should betray Him. That conversation is referred to in the thirteenth chapter of John. It is also referred to by Matthew and Mark. During the eating of that passover Jesus dipped bread in the sop (or gravy) and gave it to Judas, then Judas went immediately out. See John's account of the matter. Then when Judas had gone out, Jesus took the bread and the wine, the substance of the passover supper, and instituted the sacramental supper. Then when the sacramental supper was ended He washed the disciples' feet. Judas was present at neither the sacramental supper nor the washing of the disciples' feet. He had gone out during the eating of the passover supper."C. H. C.

Heresy

---July 1, 1920

Brother John R. Havens, of Santa Anna, Texas, asks us to give our views as to what Bible heresy is, and the Bible characteristics of heretics. Heresy is a fundamental error in doctrine. There may be an error that is not fundamental. There have been differences on minor points of doctrine among brethren all along, and these differences should be borne with, and we should have forbearance with each other on those minor points. The fundamental principles of the doctrine of God our Saviour are election and predestination; that God made choice of His people in Christ before the world began, and predestinated their salvation and final glorification; that these people are sinners of Adam's race; the direct, immediate, and effectual operation of the Holy Spirit in the heart of the sinner in the work of regeneration, and that all the elect of God will surely be regenerated in time; the final preservation of all the saints or children of God by grace to glory; that baptism is by immersion, and true believers are the only proper subjects; that the ordinances of the church are to be administered by those who have been called of God and been set apart for the work by a presbytery authorized by the church; that God is eternal, omnipotent, omniscient, the fountain of truth, the embodiment of justice and mercy; that there are three divine Persons in the Godhead (not three Gods, but one God composed of three), the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one; that the Son of God is equal with the Father in all His divine perfections; that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments were given by inspiration of God, and are the only divinely authorized rule of faith and practice, and are given for the benefit of the Lord's children. These are some of the main points of the fundamental principles of the doctrine believed by the Primitive Baptists and taught in the Scriptures. A doctrine that contradicts these fundamental principles is heresy.

A heretic is one who persistently advocates a doctrine that is in direct opposition to the fundamental principles of the doctrine of the Lord, some of the points of which are mentioned above. We are commanded to reject a heretic after the first and second admonition. This does not mean to reject him without any admonition. He should be admonished one time, and if he still persists in advocating the heresy, he should be admonished again; then if he persists, he should be rejected. The only way we know of to reject him is to withdraw church fellowship from him. If one advocates a heresy, it is wrong not to admonish him. If it is right to admonish him, as we are taught, then it is wrong not to do so. It may not be a pleasant task, but it is a duty enjoined upon us in God's word, and should be obeyed, no matter how unpleasant it may seem to be.

May the Lord help us to discharge our every duty. We need His guiding hand and His sustaining grace every day." C. H. C.

Desire To Encourage

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear and Precious Brother in the Lord-I greatly desire to say a word of encouragement to you. I know your burdens have been, and are yet, heavy. I feel sure you have done the best you could. Dear brother, let me encourage you to press on, and be as patient with those who are impatient as you can. May the Lord enable you to suffer all the abuse without any complaint. May God be your helper in every time of need.

I feel sure you are wearing yourself out in and for the cause of your Master. You will surely be missed when you are gone. I feel that the Lord has sustained you thus far, and will never leave nor forsake you. We of the Amite Association greatly desire you to visit us, especially this fall at our association. I am sure I speak the mind of all our brethren and sisters. I will send you some subscriptions if I can. The Lord bless you, and all yours and all His everywhere. Pray for us. Yours in hope,
G. W. SANDERS

McComb, Miss.

REMARKS

We feel unworthy of such expressions of Christian love and fellowship as the above letter contains. We are unworthy of the very least of the Lord's great blessings which we feel have been bestowed upon us. The church can get along without us. It existed and got along several hundred years without us, and will still get along without us when we are gone. When we step off the stage of action we will be forgotten in a few short weeks. The world will move on just the same. There may be some few tears of sorrow shed when the news of our death goes out, but the wound will soon be healed, and the people will go on as though we had never lived in the world. We know that we have many good friends-they have proven true; they will be sad, we feel sure, when the news is heard by them that we are gone. Others will be glad; for we know that we have enemies as well as friends. Some have proven that they are enemies. They will rejoice while others may weep. But we are willing to rest our case with the Lord. Our trust is in Him, and He will do as seemeth good in His sight. We would be glad to visit the brethren in the Amite Association again, but do not know when we can do so. We have no idea now that we can attend the session of the association this year. Please remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Debate In Alabama

---July 15, 1920

As announced in our last issue, we have agreed to meet Mr. J. D. Tant in debate at or near Winfield, Ala., to begin on Tuesday, August 3, and continue four days. Four propositions are to be discussed, as follows:

The Scriptures teach that God gives eternal life to dead (alien) sinners without conditions on their part. C. H. Cayce affirms; J. D. Tant denies.

The Scriptures teach that faith, repentance, and water baptism are conditions of pardon, or salvation, to an alien sinner. J. D. Tant affirms; C. H. Cayce denies..

Scriptures teach that in regeneration the Holy Spirit operates directly or immediately in the sinner's heart. C. H. Cayce affirms; J. D. Tant denies.

4. The Scriptures teach that a child of God may so apostatize or fall away as to be eternally lost. J. D. Tant affirms; C. H. Cayce denies.

One day will be devoted to each proposition. The speaking, we presume, is to begin at 10 o'clock each day-at least, this is the usual rule. The number and length of speeches will be agreed on by the speakers after we get there. We hope to meet a great many of the brethren there." C. H. C.

Two-Seed Doctrine

---July 15, 1920

Brother W. A. Beggs, Jacksboro, Texas, has asked us to explain the difference between the eternal Two-Seed doctrine and the doctrine of the Primitive Baptists. We hardly deem it necessary to show the contrast and show what the differences really are, as we suppose the brother understands what the teachings of the Primitive Baptists are and have been on the points which we shall mention.

The eternal Two-Seed doctrine is that God made choice of certain persons from among the human family for His children to dwell in for awhile here in time. Hence, they claim to believe in the doctrine of election; but they do not believe that sinners of Adam's race were chosen to be saved in heaven. They teach, as stated, that God made choice of persons of Adam's race for His children to dwell in for awhile here on earth.

In the work which we call regeneration they teach that there is an eternal spirit or child which comes down from God out of heaven and takes up its abode in the Adam man, and remains in the Adam man and torments him until the Adam man dies; when the Adam man dies, this eternal child goes back to God where it came from and the Adam man goes to the ground where he will always remain.

The eternal Two-Seeder claims that the body of the Adam man is no part of the child of God; that the child of God is on the inside of the Adam man; the child of God is a man on the inside of the man you see. They carry this doctrine to its logical conclusion and deny the resurrection of the body, claiming that the body remains in the dust, and will not be raised again.

The eternal Two-Seeders also hold that God unalterably fixed and decreed all the wickedness that men do, and that wicked men and devils are doing God's will in their nefarious crimes and meanness as much so as is being done by His children rendering gospel service and living a life of righteousness; that the devil does the will of God as much as Jesus Christ did in His perfect life of obedience to the law of God.

These are some of the fundamental principles of the teaching of the eternal Two-Seeders. Primitive Baptists do not teach those things, and never have taught them. Those things are not Primitive Baptist doctrine, and never have been." C. H. C.

Some Questions

---August 1, 1920

Brother George W. Weedman, of Hondale, New Mexico, asks us several questions, and requests that we answer them through THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST. In order to save space we will give his questions in the order which he has presented them, and answer them the best we know how.

1. What is the spiritual meaning of Moses and his death on Mt. Nebo?

Answer: We do not know. If it has any spiritual meaning we do not know it. Some brethren may be able to get something of that kind out of it, but we have not been able to do so yet.

2. What was Judas ordained to?

((4) (Mark 3:14). He was ordained to preach, or to the ministry. Read the text cited. Also read ((7) (Acts 1:17), he "had obtained part of this ministry." He was a bad man in the ministry, and there are some bad ones there yet.

3. Did Christ know all things at His birth?

((2) (Luke 2:52). Yes, as God, but not as man. He was both God and man. As man He grew in wisdom. As God He did not grow, for as such He was the embodiment of wisdom.

4. Was Judas lost?

We think so.

5. If the Spirit of Christ from heaven knew all things before being conceived in the womb of Mary, why would He not know all things as soon as He was born?

As man He did not know all things as soon as He was born. As God He knew all things before and as soon as He was born. He was both God and man. He was verily God, and He was verily man. As a man He had a soul, as other men. As God He was perfect in wisdom and knowledge.

6. Does God make each and every individual's spirit and put it in the body before it is born? If so, at what time?

We think not. God made the first man. "Of one blood made He all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." Men now come into being through the process of generation and birth, or procreation. Man is a being composed of soul, body, and spirit.

7. Which is the cause of death-the body dies and the spirit leaves, or vice versa?

We think the one is the same as the other. At any rate, they are simultaneous-both at the same time.

8. Do the soul and spirit go to the same place at death?

We think so. No man is able to divide between the soul and spirit. The Lord, who is called the Word of God, can and does divide between them, but we cannot.

Is there any distinction between soul and spirit after death?

Not that we know of. If so, God is the one who can distinguish, and we cannot.

Don't you believe Christ would have been put to death by the Holy Ghost if He had not been crucified, seeing He had to die?

Not necessarily so. The Roman soldiers who crucified Him did not take His life. They may have thought that they did, but they did not. He says, "I lay down my life; no man taketh it from me; I lay it down of mine own self. I have power to lay it down and I have power to take it again." He could have laid down His life without being crucified; but those wicked men were allowed to carry out their wicked desires to the extent that they crucified Him. Their wicked desire was to kill Him; but they were not allowed to do that; He laid down His life Himself.

11. I don't believe He was ordained to be crucified by wicked hands as He was, do you?

Our answer to the tenth question answers this also.

Did those saints appear in their natural bodies and go back to the grave?

We do not remember that the Scriptures say, but our opinion is that they ascended to glory with the Lord.

13. Did Christ ascend in His natural or spiritual body?

We do not understand that He was raised with another body, other than the body He had before His crucifixion. Neither do we understand that the saints will be raised with another body. The same body that is buried will be raised again. The child of God does not exchange this body for another body; but the body-the same body-shall be changed. The body Jesus had after His resurrection was the same body that was crucified. When the body is raised from the grave it is made a spiritual body-not exchanged for a spiritual body. -

14. He will come next time in His spiritual body, will He not?

We think so. He will come in His glorified state.

15. Is there anything pointing to the end of the world in the near future?

We do not know. We do not know a thing in the world about when this material world will end, and we do not believe any man on earth knows. The signs of the times point to some great radical change in some way; but we cannot say what the change will be. At least, it appears to us that a serious and radical change is in the near future. It is a time of gross idolatry and false worship and false religion, just as it was in the close of the Jewish age or the law dispensation. It looks to us as though we are drawing near the time of the fullness of the Gentiles.

At present this is the best we know how to answer these questions. You may have them for what they are worth.

C. H. C.

Some Questions

---August 1, 1920

The following questions were written by one John J. Oliver, of McEwen, Tenn., and handed to S. E. Hurt, of that place, to be sent to us, with the idea that they would completely tie us up, we suppose.

THE QUESTIONS

1. Are those who believe in time salvation being led by the Spirit of God? If so, why do they claim that it depends on themselves?

2. If God works in you to will and to do, do you do it? If not, is God all powerful?

3. If God saves His people with an eternal salvation, does that include this life? If not, why does God lead them in time?

4. Can a sinner do good when not led by the Spirit of God? If so, why has God said that "there is none that doeth good?"

5. In obedience, does faith control the man? If so, why do some say that it depends on us? "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

6. Does man follow God as God wills him to? If not, does God work all things after the counsel of His own will?

7. Can man suggest a better path than the one in which God is leading His people?

8. If Paul could not do the things he would like to in this life, would he shine among them who believe in time salvation, seeing he did evil when he would do good?

9. Do those who believe in time salvation receive chastisement? If so, is it for obedience or disobedience?

10. Does the wild olive, when grafted in the tame olive, bear fruit after the graft or root?

Were the wicked good when they were created? If so, what does God mean by saying that He created the wicked for the day of evil?
Did God create the devil? If not, why has He told us that His hand has formed the crooked serpent?

OUR REPLY

In the first place, we wish to say that we are not a stickler for the term "time salvation." In fact, it is a term that we very seldom ever use. We are not so particular about the term that may be used in expressing an opinion; it is what is intended by the term that concerns us. If a brother uses a term which we do not like, or approve of, we wish to know what idea he intends to convey by the use of the term. If the idea is in harmony with the Scriptures, then the term used does not matter so much with us. It is the sentiment intended to be conveyed that we are concerned about. So, we will try to answer the questions by number.

1. We do not know of any who believe in what is called "time salvation" claiming that it depends on themselves. They all feel to thank the Lord for every blessing which comes from His bountiful hand, and for the will, the inclination, and the ability to walk in obedience to His commandments. They do not walk in the commandments of the Lord without receiving the power from Him to do so; neither do they claim it. To charge that they do claim such, is to charge them falsely. If one walks uprightly, walks in obedience to the commands of the Lord, doing so from a principle of love- because he loves the Lord, and loves His service-he is following the leading of the Spirit in so doing. The spirit of the wicked one does not lead one to live that kind of life. In living that way one is living after the Spirit; he is walking in the Spirit. "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh."-(Galatians 5:16). This command, or admonition, was to the church at Galatia. They had the Spirit of God dwelling in them, and by that Spirit they had the ability given them to thus walk; and by so walking, they would not fulfill the lust of the flesh.
2. Yes, God is all powerful. If God does not work in His children to will and to do of His good pleasure, and they fail to do on that account, then they are not blameworthy; and if not blameworthy, then they could not be chastised or punished on account of their disobedience upon any principle of justice. When the Lord chastises His children for their disobedience, it is upon the very strictest principles of justice; and therefore their disobedience cannot be charged to the failure of the Lord to work in them. The Lord has all power; He has the power to work in them, and does so. "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence - only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure.-((2) (Philippians 2:12-13). The text says it is God which worketh IN YOU. God does that. It does not say that God works out, but that He works in; and they are commanded to work out. They are not commanded to do what the Lord says He will do, and the Lord does not say He will do what He has commanded them to do. As the Lord says He works in them, and as He does what He says He will do and what He says He does do, then He gives them the power to work out as He works in. If they fail to work out, it is not because God fails to work in. If it is, then God does not do what He says He does. We may, and do, often fail but God does not fail.
3. God saves His people in time with a salvation that is eternal. If there is not a salvation which is eternal, we wonder why the apostle would speak about eternal salvation. God purposed before time began to save His people in time with a salvation that is eternal; hence, they stay saved. He makes them His by regeneration-makes them akin to Him-and they remain His children. They are sometimes disobedient children; but they are His children, whether obedient or disobedient. Though they may be disobedient, and may fail to walk as He has commanded, yet He preserves and keeps them, and delivers them from everlasting destruction. "Though he fall seven times, he shall not be utterly cast down; for the Lord upholdeth him with His hand." (Psalms 37:24). They need His preserving care here in this world of sin, so He careth for them.

4. The alien sinner is not led by the Spirit of God. The alien sinner does not do good, from a spiritual standpoint. The alien sinner may be a moral man, but morality is not spirituality. The alien sinner cannot please God. This question implies a charge that we teach that the alien sinner can do good from a spiritual standpoint, which is a false charge, and we are of the opinion that the one who makes the charge knows that it is false. It is either a willful misrepresentation or willful ignorance, in many instances.

5. In this question the same charge is repeated that appears in question 1. The expression, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin," is to be found in (Romans 14:23). In that connection the apostle is treating upon the question of eating meat that is offered to idols. Some could eat the meat thus offered without having respect to the idols, and some who would observe them eating the meat might follow the example of eating, but would do the eating having respect to the idols, and thus led to offend by one who was not thus eating. Some would be grieved at a brother thus eating the meat offered the idols. Beginning with verse 14 we have this language: "I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean. But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably. Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died." Here the apostle tells them emphatically to "destroy not him with thy meat for whom Christ died." If there is no sense in which one for whom Christ died can be destroyed, we wonder why the apostle used such language. It would be nonsense and meaningless-absurd in the extreme. He continues: "Let not then your good be evil spoken of: for the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men." If "he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God," then it is true that he that in these things serveth not Christ is not acceptable to God; and these are God's children that the apostle is talking about. Hence, the one who does not thus serve Christ is in some sense not acceptable to God. God does not approve of his manner of living. But - the apostle continues: "Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another." We wonder if the man who submitted such questions as those above is doing what the Lord here commanded by the apostle? It does not look that way to us very much. Instead of looking for peace, it is looking for confusion and strife. Some people claim to be great lovers of peace, and yet are continually looking for strife, and trying to stir up strife. But let us see what the apostle says further: "For meat destroy not the work of God." It seems from what the apostle says that some had destroyed the work of God. We wonder if the Lord is all powerful if some man had destroyed some of the work of God. We wonder if the Lord wanted them to do that, or if it was as He willed it? If He did want them to do that, why did the apostle tell them not to do it? Would he, by inspiration, tell them not to do what was God's will for them to do? Would he thus tell them to disobey the Lord? If some man should tell your child not to do what was your will for him to do, how would you like it? Would you want that man in your home? We guess you would not like it, and that you would not want him in your home. You would not think it very good advice to give your children. Neither is it good advice to give to the Lord's children, and the Lord does not approve of such. The guilty man is a wicked rebel against God in his works, no matter how sincere he may be. We know this is plain, but it is the truth, and we care but little who it hits. If you do not want to be hit, stay out of the way. But let us go on with this language of the apostle: "All things indeed are pure; but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence. It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak. Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth. And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." There is absolutely nothing in this about faith controlling the man; yet it is true that one must be in possession of faith in order that his service be acceptable to the Lord. God does not accept the service that might be rendered by one who is not in possession of faith; and that one who is in possession of faith is a child of God. The child of God has faith; one who has faith may render acceptable service to the Lord; therefore, the child of God may render acceptable service to the Lord.

6. Some of God's children do not do according to God's will. If all men do God's will in all things, as the question implies that the querist believes, then all men are mother, brother, and sister to the Saviour. "For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same- is my brother, and sister, and mother. "-((0) (Matthew 12:50). If the devil does the will of God, as we presume the querist believes, then the devil is brother, and sister, and mother to the Lord Jesus. "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. "- (Revelation 3:15). This language was to the church at Laodicea. They were neither cold nor hot. God's will was that they be either cold or hot-so He said, and we think He told the truth. They were not doing His will. No matter what our querist may think the consequence is, nor what he may think about it, God says they were not doing His will. Yes, God works all things that He does work after the counsel of His own will; but God does not work what men and the devil work.

7. No, man cannot suggest a better path than the one in which God leads His people; neither can they suggest a better path than the one the Lord commands them to walk in. But we think a better path can be suggested than the one some of them do walk in. Some of God's people are not walking in the old paths. "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein."-(Jeremiah 6:16). They said they would not walk therein, and they did not. To walk in the old path would have been a better way than the way they went. We suppose, from the question propounded by the querist, that he thinks the Lord leads His people every way they go. If so, He told them to go one way, and then led them another way in this instance; and He would, thereby, be guilty of double dealing. May the good Lord deliver us from believing a doctrine that would charge the Lord with double dealing.

8. Whether Paul shines or does not shine, he taught the doctrine which we are contending for. We presume our querist would rather believe the doctrine of devils than to believe in what he calls time salvation, even though Paul taught it. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will?"- (Hebrews 2:1-4). Condemnation is the opposite of salvation. The escaping of eternal condemnation does not depend upon their neglecting or not neglecting their salvation, or anything else that they may do or not do. But the apostle here teaches that by neglecting the salvation under consideration they cannot escape the opposite of that salvation, which is condemnation. If that salvation is eternal, then if they neglect it, they cannot escape eternal condemnation. This would make the eternal salvation of those people depend upon their not neglecting the same. This doctrine we do not believe; and therefore we are sure it was not eternal salvation which they were admonished to not neglect. Not only so, but these people were already children of God and in possession of eternal life. Hence, the apostle would not admonish them to not neglect eternal salvation in order that they might receive eternal life; but he did admonish them to not neglect that salvation under consideration, and taught them that by so doing they would escape the opposite of it. You may call that salvation a time salvation, or what you please-we do not care what you call it-this is the teaching of the apostle, and we believe it. Our querist does not believe it; therefore he does not believe the Bible, and one who does not believe the Bible is an infidel.

9. Yes, those who believe in what you call time salvation receive chastisement, and they receive it for disobedience. But if, according to the belief of our querist, the Lord's children always do according to God's will, then they never do wrong, unless God's will is wrong. If they always go according to the way the Lord leads and directs, then there is no such thing as disobedience; and if they are chastised, it is not for disobedience. If the doctrine of the querist is true, then the Lord is meaner than we believe he is. We do not believe he would chastise his children, if he has any, unless they disobey him. If he chastises them it is for their disobedience, and not for obeying him. He would not be so mean to his children as to chastise them for obeying him. If the Lord does that, then the Lord is meaner to His children than our querist is to his. We do not believe the Lord is meaner to His children than men are to theirs.

10. The grafting which the querist refers to in this question has no reference whatever to regeneration, but to gospel service. You will find the teaching of the apostle on this question in (Romans 11). If it has reference to regeneration and eternal life, then the Jews apostatized. The Jews were the natural branches in the olive tree; but they were broken off because of unbelief, and were, therefore, eternally lost, if eternal life was the thing under consideration. Not only so but the apostle says, in verse 21, "For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest He also spare not thee." Verse 22, "Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in His goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off." This simply has reference to Jews being cut off and the Gentiles grafted in to the gospel service.

11. This question refers to the language recorded in ((4) (Proverbs 16:4), "The Lord hath made all things for Himself: yea, even the wicked for the day of evil." We suppose that if God made them wicked, then the devil would be without a job, unless it is the devil's business to make men. We suppose, also, that if God made them wicked, then God made some men proud in heart. Then the very thing that God made is an abomination to Him, for the next verse (verse 5) says, "Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord." We wonder if the Lord did not know beforehand that they would be as they were, since our querist seems to think they were just as God made them. If He did know, then it must be that He just did the best He could-He would have made them so that they would not be an abomination to Him as they were made if He could! We have but one account of God's creation, which is found in (Genesis 1). After telling of the creation from the first thing to the last thing, (verse 31) says, "And God saw everything that He had made, and, behold, it was very good." If one thing God made was wicked and not good, then the Lord inspired this prophet (Moses) to write a lie! "Yea, let God be true, but every man a liar."- (Romans 3:4).

12. If you wish to know why God did a thing, when He has not told us why, suppose you ask Him. The first account we have of the devil was in the garden of Eden. We do not know where he came from-we have not looked up the genealogy of your father, Mr. Oliver. So you will please excuse us for not telling you where he came from. C. H. C.

Paper Not Wanted

---August 15, 1920

The following letter was received some time ago. It was dated April 20, 1920:

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Sir-Enclosed find money order to pay for THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST to the first of May, and then stop it, as I don't like it. I find some good articles in it, but too much that is entirely wrong. I notice an article written by Elder J. S. Newman that appeared in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST in 1906, and had been submitted to twelve other Primitive Baptists for publication, and none of them published it but one. I don't wonder at them not publishing it, for it is a mighty silly article. He talks about a person being a child of God and living in adultery. Anyone ought to have sense enough to know that a child of God, one that has been born again, is not going to live in adultery. That is nonsense to think about. The Bible teaches that we shall know them by their fruit. If a person does not live a righteous life, we know that he has never been changed, and we need not have a doubt about it. The Bible is too plain about that for any possibility of a mistake.

And then I notice that Elder J. R. Wilson, of Danville, Va., gets off his stuff that is just as rotten as can be.

And then, again, you call your paper THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST, which is wrong. It is not a Primitive paper, for it does not hold to the Primitive faith, neither the London Confession of Faith nor the Philadelphia Confession, and the London is the oldest that we have any account of since the Reformation; and those Baptists that formed the London Confession got it from the Bible and knew that was what the Bible taught, and every sensible person who is not ruled by the carnal mind knows that is right and what the Bible teaches. Of course that kind of doctrine looks horrible to the carnal mind, but the truth has always looked that way to the world and the carnal mind. Of course the Primitive Baptists are right, but all are not Primitive Baptists who call themselves that. The true children of God are as scarce today in the true church as they were under the prophetic age or the Mosaic law. You will see that I am no scholar and a very "sorry" writer, but the above is the truth. I can understand the Bible just as well as the best scholar in the world. I am sorry to have written you this way, but you will see when the judgment day comes around that I am right.

Yours very truly,
SAMUEL WILSON.

Cosby, Tenn.

REMARKS -

Well, now, did we not get a jolt when we received the above tirade? Brother Wilson would do well to read the article again from Elder Newman which he refers to. It was not submitted to twelve other papers for publication. It was submitted to churches for endorsement. Some refused to endorse it. Why? Because they favored retaining such characters in the church who were separated from their companions without a Scriptural reason and married again. That is why. Elder Newman was writing against that practice. But Brother Wilson says no child of God will live in adultery. Perhaps not. We are not in favor of them doing so; neither are we in favor of the churches retaining such in fellowship; we have no fellowship for it in the church of God. But if none of them ever live in adultery, then David was not a child of God; Solomon was not a child of God. Others mentioned in the Scriptures who did that way were not children of God, either, according to Brother Wilson. David, the inspired prophet of God and king of Israel, was not a child of God, because he lived in adultery. Although he was guilty, yet he was a child of God, and he was sorely punished on account of his wrong doing.

Brother Wilson does not say what Elder J. R. Wilson said that he objects to so much; but no matter whether Brother Wilson believes the sentiment contained in the articles from Elder Wilson or not, the same is true. Brother Wilson seems to think he knows it all, and that settles it.

He says we do not endorse the London or Philadelphia Confession of Faith. We do not know how he found that out. Since he knows, we are wondering what part of it we do not endorse. Wonder if Brother Wilson can inform us on that point also. We would be glad he would do so if he can, seeing we do not know ourselves what part it is.

Perhaps the reason why the doctrine advocated in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST looks so bad to Samuel Wilson is because that doctrine looks so horrible to the carnal mind. Perhaps that is the reason why Brother Wilson does not like it. Since the true children of God are so scarce in the church today, according to Brother Wilson, we wonder if he is one. We wonder if he is one who has crept in, as others, who have no business there.

Yes, we noticed, Brother Wilson, that you are no scholar, and we took the liberty of correcting the language of your letter before allowing it to come before the public gaze. If you have no gratefulness in your heart for anything else, you should be grateful that we did correct it, even if you are so well advanced in knowledge and understanding otherwise. If we have to wait for the judgment day to come around before we find out that Brother Wilson is right, we will have to wait a long time-too long, we fear, for it to be of any benefit to us.

“And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.”-(I Corinthians 8:2). C. H. C.

During and about the years of 1919 and 1920 we had several articles in the paper concerning the high cost of production, cost of paper, lack of space for some things, small size of the paper, and such like matters, that we do not reproduce in these books, as we do not deem them to be of interest to the present readers, or that would be a benefit to the cause now. A Misrepresentation

---May 15, 1921

The following statement was sent to us for publication some time ago and was headed as above. A copy of the minutes of the proceedings of the conference was also sent, and which we publish. It will be seen that the notice was sent to us with the request that we publish the same. We grant the request of the church in giving space for the statement and also the minutes of the conference.

THE STATEMENT

ELDER C. H. CAYCE:

Dear Brother-We feel that we, together with Elder J. H. Rawls, our pastor, have been hurtfully misrepresented by Elder R. O. Raulston, who preached at our church (Chapel Hill, Pine Grove, Ark.) on Wednesday after the fourth Sunday in August, 1920, which preaching (or fighting) we did not enjoy. And now Elder Raulston says in an article in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST that he had been informed before he reached Chapel Hill that the preacher in charge was a rotten and strenuous Absoluter. Now the man who informed Elder Raulston that Chapel Hill had a rotten and strenuous Absoluter for her pastor is due Chapel Hill an acknowledgment, as Elder Rawls has been pastor and assistant pastor of Chapel Hill Church for a number of years, and is a peace-loving Baptist.

Now, dear brethren, Primitive Baptists, one and all, and especially preach brethren, we do not consider the terms "absolute predestination" or "conditional time salvation" as being Scriptural terms, and we are taking no stock in preacher fights over these unscriptural terms; and we hold some sacred rights of our own, to invite or reject, as we see fit, those who preach for this church. And we do hereby invite all who want to fight over these unscriptural terms to stay at home.

With much love to all peace-loving Primitive Baptists we submit these few lines. This written by the clerk and adopted by the church at Chapel Hill, and ordered sent to THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST for publication.

Done on Friday before the fifth Sunday in January, 1921.

BROTHER BILLY MARTIN, Moderator pro tem.

J. T. EVERITT, Church Clerk.

THE MINUTE

On Friday before the fifth Sunday in January, 1921, the church met at Chapel Hill for the purpose of considering the resignation of Elder J. H. Rawls as pastor; and when we all have understood each other we all find ourselves one people, and the misunderstanding that had been troubling the church was cleared away. Then the church requested Elder J. H. Rawls to continue as pastor of the church, when Elder Rawls agreed to be with us at our next regular meeting and would then let us know whether his home church would give him liberty to give up the church he is now serving.

The church then agreed that she would not invite any preach brethren to preach for this church who have raised bars to fellowship against the doctrine of the predestination of all things until they withdraw their bars.

No other business, conference closed in order.

BROTHER BILLY MARTIN, Moderator pro tem.

As to the report which Elder Raulston heard, and of which he spoke in the article he had in this paper some time ago, and which is referred to in the foregoing, we suppose is immaterial here. We only wish to call attention to one or two things in this matter. We have been to Chapel Hill a few times, and believe that there are some good Baptists there. We love them, and have fellowship for them. But we did not go there without being asked to do so. But now we understand them to ask us not to go there any more. This is all right with us.

Now as to Elder Rawls we only have this to say, that on the day which Elder Raulston preached at Chapel Hill Elder Rawls said that he had a miserable comforter there that day. He replied to Elder Raulston, as those are aware who were present. In his reply he said that if God predestinated his salvation He also predestinated his sins. This was not a hearsay matter. Now, Chapel Hill Church says that she is taking no stock in this matter, which she calls a preacher fight; but she will not invite those to visit her who declare that they do not believe this doctrine. Some of the churches in this section passed an act several years ago declaring non-fellowship for the doctrine that God predestinated sin and wickedness. If Chapel Hill Church does not believe that doctrine, then no bar to fellowship was put up against her. But by her act it seems to us that she puts up a bar against those who have a bar up against those who do advocate that doctrine. This is the way it looks to us. This is all we care to say in regard to the matter, and we trust this may give satisfaction to the Chapel Hill members. C. H. C.

Guilty of Robbery

---May 15, 1921

Some time ago we received a copy of the Daily Oklahoman which contained a news item from McAlister, Okla., containing the information that Elder L. M. Harkey, of McAlister, had confessed to being a member of a party who robbed the home of a Mrs. Bostella, and that he had paid back $200 which he claimed was his share of the loot. We are sorry, indeed, that such as this has occurred. It is a shame that one posing as a Primitive Baptist minister will be guilty of such an act as this man has confessed to being guilty of. We make mention of this matter so that our brethren everywhere may be informed in regard to it. We think the brethren should know about it. We wrote to the sheriff of the county and asked if the matter is true, and he replied that it is a fact. Shame! C. H. C.

Suppose You Try It

---September 15, 1921

Some person mailed a card to us from Whitmell, Va., which had no name signed to it, giving us some instructions as to what we should put in the paper and what we should not put in it. The writer complains that we have not printed things that have been sent us within the past year. We are well aware of that fact; but we do say that all our space has been filled. The matter we did put in the paper was sent us with the request to be published. We cannot please all. We would suggest to the writer of the card that if you think you can do a better job editing the paper, you are welcome to try it. Just come on over here and take the place and try it for a few weeks. We are of the opinion you would decide in less than a month that it is not what you thought it to be. Come on and try your hand at it for a while, and when you have done that, then fire in with your faultfinding all you please. We believe you would have a different viewpoint if you would try it for a few weeks yourself.

We are well aware of the fact that we make mistakes. We know that we are not perfect. We are always glad to listen to any suggestion made by any brother or sister which is made in the right spirit; but we have little patience with this fault-finding spirit manifested by some. To be plain and candid about the matter, we do not care whether such people are pleased with our course or not. We desire to do what appears to us to be the best course to pursue, and then our conscience is clear. May the good Lord help us to follow that course.

The Sacramental Supper

---October 15, 1921

Elder W. M. Little, of Lawn, Texas, writes us that the church called Pilgrim's Rest, at Dewey, Texas, could not obtain wine for use in the communion service, and that they postponed the communion, or agreed to leave off the communion, until they could get the wine, declining to use any substitute. He asks us to give our views of the matter in THE PRIMITIVE BAPTIST.

We think that if it was impossible for them to get wine for that purpose they did right in deciding not to go into the communion until they can get it. We have no right to substitute anything in the service of the Master. The Saviour instituted the sacramental supper at the time that He ate the last passover supper with His disciples. What the Saviour used in instituting the sacramental supper was the same thing that the Jews used in the passover supper. Wine-the fermented juice of the vine-was what the Jews used in the passover supper. The Jews did not use the unfermented juice of the vine. As the Saviour used the same thing that the Jews did, then He did not use the unfermented juice of the vine. As the Jews used the fermented juice, and the Saviour used the same thing they did, then He used the fermented juice of the vine. It was wine that He used. If something else would do as well, He would have used something else. We have no right to substitute something else.

We would say, make the wine needed for use in the sacramental supper, and do not substitute. C. H. C.

The Service of God

---December 1, 1921

We have been asked if a child of God can serve God and not live in the church. We suppose the querist wishes to know if we think one can serve God as well without being in the church as he can by being in the church. If that is what the querist wishes to know, we would say that one cannot serve God as well out of the church as he can in it. It is true that there are some things which God requires of His children which they can do without being in the church. But there are some things which He requires of them as members of His church, and they cannot do those things without being in the church. There is one thing He requires which they cannot do without going to the church. He commanded the Gadarene, out of whom He had cast a legion of devils, to "go home to your friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee." The friends of the poor child of God are those who are keeping house for the Lord in the home He has prepared for them here.

That is the church. To do this thing which the Lord requires, one must go home to the church.

The Lord requires His children to follow Him in baptism. They must go to the church to do this. The ordinances have been committed to the church for keeping. Baptism is one of the ordinances. Hence, to be baptized, as the Lord requires, one must go to His church. One cannot serve God as well without doing this as by doing it.

“Unto Him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end.” -(Ephesians 3:21). Here the apostle says, “Unto Him be glory in the church”-not out of the church, but in it. This is clear proof that one cannot give the Lord the glory which belongs to Him without being in the church. One cannot serve God as well out of the church as in it. We give glory to the Lord here on earth by serving Him. That glory which belongs to Him is given Him in the church, if at all. No doubt very few of those who are in the church give Him the glory which they should-that is, it is doubtful if more than a very few do this who are in the church-but it is surely not done out of the church. “Unto Him be glory in the church.” May He help us to give Him the glory which we should.

Beginning with 1922

By Elder C. H. Cayce

Volume IV, 1938, CAYCE PUBLISHING COMPANY THORNTON, ARKANSAS

TO My Beloved Wife who has untiringly labored with me and for me during these many years, and TO My Sainted Father and Mother who cared for me when I could not care for myself, and to My Dear Brethren and Sisters who have been so kind and good to poor me all these years is this and any following volumes Lovingly Dedicated

Preface

PREFACE

We deem it unnecessary to write another preface for this volume. We will, therefore, just copy the same preface we used in Volume III, and give it the present date, on which we are beginning this present volume, Volume IV We have received many words of endorsement of the previous volumes. This volume, and the volumes which may follow, if we are permitted to continue the publication of our editorial writings in this form, will show clearly that we are still endeavoring to maintain the same principles upon which we have stood during all these years. They will also show that our people are still standing where they have always stood. If we know our poor heart our desire in the publication of these volumes is the glory of God and the advancement of His blessed cause, and the benefit of His humble poor. We desire that the Lord's dear children who are blinded by false teachers may be enabled, by the reading of some of these pages, to see where the true church is, and where the truth may be found. May the blessings of our Lord rest upon the reader, is the humble prayer of The Author Thornton, Arkansas, March 9, 1938

Where Are We Drifting?

For some time we have been wondering and asking the question in our mind, over and over, "Where are we drifting?" It seems that vice and immorality is on the increase everywhere. It is not only in matters of state that we find corruption and immorality, but we find it in the different institutions of the world, as well as in the institutions professing to be the church of God -institutions which profess to stand for morality as well as Christian advancement. Not only are such things to be found in all these places, but we find it in the church of Christ-the Old Baptist Church. It is deplorable that vice and immorality is practiced by those holding membership in the church of God, but it is true -and what is worse, it is sometimes "winked at," and the guilty parties retained in the church. Lying, stealing, forgery, adultery, false swearing, truce breaking, and other like crimes are gross sins, and those who are guilty have no place in the church of God. Surely the time foretold by the Apostle Paul is now upon us: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." -(II Timothy 3:1-5). Without us naming the instances of guilt of some of the things here enumerated, we are sure that many of our readers can call to mind some guilty party, and yet we find such retained in the church sometimes. Any church that will retain such in her borders is not worthy of the name church. These things and other such crimes are open and plain violations of the moral law, and of the command of our God, and are not to be tolerated in the church for a moment. Persons who are guilty of such things should be excluded from the membership of the church at the very first conference after the evidence is produced. If the church refuses to hear the evidence, she is no better than the guilty party she thus protects. She is in open rebellion against the King, the only Lawgiver in Zion. She is party to the crime. The party who helps to conceal a crime is guilty, as well as the party who commits the crime. The church is no reformatory. If people are guilty of immoral and wicked practices who are members of the church, they should be excluded, and let them reform on the outside of the church; and not let the church bear the reproach of their guilt. The apostle, in the language quoted above, emphatically instructs, "From such turn away." We have been informed that a certain perjured man has been restored by a certain Old Baptist Church. As for us, we do not propose to fellowship any such. This is plain language, we know; but if there has ever been a time when people need to be plain, it seems to us that it is now. We know that we make mistakes, and that we do wrong; but we do not propose to fellowship such gross immorality in the church of God as some people have been guilty of. The lovers of truth and righteousness need each other; but we do not need immorality in the church. We do not need to retain those in the church who are guilty of any of the things enumerated, as well as some other gross sins that might be mentioned. One thing that caused the division in the church which gave rise to Romanism was the church having those among them who were guilty of gross immorality. Novatian contended against such being retained in the church. Others advocated the reception and retaining in the church those who were guilty of immoral and wicked practices. This brought about a division or separation. As for us, we prefer another separation rather than fellowshiping such practices. Those who are eligible for membership in the church of God are those who are spoken of as being zealous of good works-not zealous of wicked works. If a man's life is such as to dishonor the cause, he should not have membership in the church. If he is a member, he should be excluded. If he is not a member he should not be received for membership until he has proven that he has reformed. Reformation should be outside of the church, for as we said before, the church is not a reformatory. We do not mean by this that if a church makes a wrong step she cannot or should not reform. Churches do wrong; they make mistakes. It will be that way as long as the church is composed of imperfect men and women. Of course, if the church is composed of sinless spirits, she would not do anything wrong. But the church is composed of men and women who are imperfect beings, and therefore the church sometimes does wrong. When the church does wrong, she should repent-turn from the wrong-reform-and do that way no more. We should profit by the mistakes we make, by not doing the same thing twice. But when a member commits a gross sin, he should be excluded so that the church does not bear the reproach of his wrong doing. When a member has been thus dealt with, all the members should be submissive to the church. We may have one who is near to us by the ties of nature who has been guilty of some gross wrong, and it may grieve us much; but we should submit to the act of the church. We may believe that the guilty one is a child of God; but we should remember that a child of God can so act as to deprive himself of the privileges of the gospel church. He can so act as that he has no right in the kingdom of God here on earth. "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die." "There is a sin unto death. I do not say that ye shall pray for it." The world is watching the Old Baptist Church, and more is expected of them than is expected of any other people on earth. How necessary that the discipline of the church be administered and strictly attended to. It should be done in love and in the fear of God, without malice or prejudice-but should be attended to regardless of fleshly ties. May the good Lord help us all to attend to the business of His kingdom, and to administer the laws of the same, which He has given, without fear or favor, relying upon Him, and knowing that He will not leave or forsake those who walk as He has commanded. One Hundred Years Old

The church at Briar Fork, Madison County, Ala., is one hundred years old, and met on Friday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1921, to celebrate their hundredth anniversary. They had preaching by Elders L. M. Walker, S. F. Best, and E. J. Joiner. This church has stood firm through the storms of a century, and are yet standing upon the principles of the old-time doctrine. Elder B. G. Stephens is their faithful and humble pastor. They invite all the brethren of the same faith and order to visit them. They sent us a minute of their conference meeting, but we deem this notice to be of the same interest to our readers, and we gladly give space to tell our brethren of them. C. H. C.

That Peace Move

---February 1, 1922

On another page of this paper will be found a letter from Brother J. H. Carroll, of Andalusia, Ala., in which he asks us to speak out on the question under consideration. A few issues back we made just a few remarks concerning this matter following a letter from C. C. Little, of Abbott, Ark. Now, we wish it distinctly understood that we are not opposed to any right and Scriptural method of obtaining peace or a union of the different factions of Primitive Baptists. But we would have it clearly and distinctly understood that we are opposed to any wholesale coming together of all factions everywhere, and the wholesale reception of all work done by all factions. In our issue of January 15 we plainly told of some things which we have no fellowship for, and stated that we would prefer another division to the retaining in the church those who are guilty of such gross sins and immorality. We have no fellowship for fornicators and adulterers, perjured persons, trucebreakers, and those who are guilty of like criminal conduct. We have no fellowship for such conduct as having a house sold in which others are interested, and then writing one of the partners that no money has been received, when the whole thing had already been paid in cash and was placed in bank to the man's credit. This may be in harmony with the Christian life; but if it is, we confess that we "have not so learned Christ." We have no fellowship for such things as these. A wholesale coming together would mean the fellowshipping of all these things. We may be in fellowship with some of them now, but if we are we do not know it-and will not if we know it. Not only are these things true; but it is also true, as we think we said before, that some in every faction will object to such a move. Some in every faction may approve of it. Suppose those in every faction who do approve of the move should come together, what would be the result? It would simply be that some would come out of all the different factions and unite into one faction-thus making still another faction, and not eliminating a single one. That would be the result of a universal and wholesale movement to come together, or to bring together all the different factions. Then, you may ask, what have we to suggest? We simply have this to suggest-that every case in every locality should be dealt with according to its own individual merits. It is a matter to be dealt with locally, and not universally. In some localities they may be tired of living apart, and they may be essentially one people. In such cases they should come together and live in peace as one people, which they are. In other localities there may be prejudices and no fellowship or love existing. In such cases, no matter what others do, they will not come together. There will be no coming together until the prejudice is overcome. So, we say that it is a matter that can be dealt with in no other way only as the local conditions warrant. This is the way we see the matter; but we do not intend now to raise any fight against the movement until we see that it brings us into fellowship with some such things as we have objected to and that we have no fellowship for. May the good Lord keep us all in the right way and guide our feet in the paths of peace, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Christian Conflicts

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Sir- Tonight I am thinking of my sinful self, and often wonder if such a sinner as I am will ever reach the kingdom of God. This will, no doubt, sound foolish to you, but that is the way I see my poor sinful self tonight. Sometimes I feel lost and downcast in this world, and forever lost in the world to come. I don't know what would become of me if I were called to die. For some cause I have been thinking of writing to you, to see if you ever knew one that got in this condition, and at the same time keep that same old path they had been traveling, and when they would do better they do worse than ever. This is the condition I find myself in every time I examine to see where I am. I don't want to serve the devil all the time, but it looks like that is what I do. I like the Old Baptist Church more than any I have ever seen. I feel like they are right, if I know what right is-but as for myself, I am wrong all the way through. If not asking too much of you, I would like to have your views on the matter asked about. Please answer through your paper, and excuse me for bothering you. I believe you are a worthy man, and that is the reason I have written you as I have. Yours truly, Anderson B. Boyett. R. 3, Kenly, N. C.

OUR REMARKS

In another place in this paper will be found a letter from Anderson B. Boyett in which he asks us in regard to one desiring to do good and yet doing evil, etc. Desire springs from life. There can be no such thing as desire for natural things without natural life first. There can be no such thing as holy and righteous desires without the righteous life. The life is first. When the Lord gives a poor sinner the divine life He does not take away the natural life. The natural life- the Adamic life- has a nature peculiar to itself. That nature is poisoned and contaminated with sin. Having that nature, sin is mixed with all we do. The divine life which God gives by the direct operation of His Spirit on the spirit of the sinner, has a nature peculiar to itself. It is called the divine nature. From that life, which is a holy life, and which nature is divine, springs all our hatred of sin, and all our desire to live a holy and righteous life. From that life springs the desire to "do good." "When I would do good, evil is present with me," says the eminent apostle to the Gentiles. This shows clearly that he had both natures- the divine nature, by reason of which he "would do good." It was his desire to do good all the time. Though he had such a desire, yet "evil is present with me." This shows that he also had the evil, or sinful, nature- "evil is present." That evil nature remains with us as long as we live in the world. These two natures are contrary to each other. They are not in harmony. They do not work together, but at variance. This is the reason of the warfare within-a continual fighting. There is no cessation of hostilities." I find, then, a law in my members warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin, which is in my members," says Paul. Here are two laws, two natures in the one man, in the child of God. He was a child of Adam and a child of God-both at the same time. Being both at the same time, he had both natures at the same time. Having both natures at the same time, there was a continual warfare all the time. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." -Paul. Here are the two natures again-and they are contrary to each other. One is the opposite of the other. One is holy and divine; the other is depraved, poisoned, and contaminated with sin. One is against the other. There is a continual striving-a continual warfare, "so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." What would you do? You would live above sin; you would live free from sin; you would live without the conflict and warfare here-but" you cannot do the things that ye would." We cannot attain unto such a state of perfection and happiness here-yet it is required of us, and we are encouraged, to press forward; always we should strive for the things that are good. Paul said that he had not attained unto perfection, and did not expect to attain unto it here, yet he says, "I forget those that are behind, and press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ." To "press toward the mark" requires a continual exertion. There is to be no "letup," no quitting. We often make resolutions, and then break them. Still we have the desire, the will, to do good. We remember once, years ago, in our young days, a brother said, "Brother Cayce, you say you desire to do better; you want to do better, and yet you don't do better.. Now, why don't you do better?" We answered, "There may be several reasons why I do not do better. Sometimes it may be for one reason, and sometimes it may be for another reason. Sometimes it is laziness." The brother asked no more questions about it. We gave a Scriptural answer. "Thou wicked and slothful servant." Slothfulness is laziness. We are so often slothful, or lazy, in regard to religious matters. If we were all as slothful and lazy in our secular affairs as we are in church affairs, many of us would starve to death. No wonder so many of us are starving religiously. No wonder the poverty! No wonder the emaciated condition so many of us are in. We have been slothful, lazy, indolent, careless, unconcerned-"no matter; just any way will do." Just any way will not do. God's way is the only way that will do. "If a man will not work, neither shall he eat." This is God's way, and there is no avoiding it. But we have wandered. Not so much, either, but a little from the original question. We remember one New Year's day a long time ago as we were going to our office to work we met two sisters who were busily engaged in conversation. Now and then they would stop and turn, facing each other. They did not observe us until we were within a few feet of them. One of those good sisters long since "crossed over the river," and we are sure she is resting from all her trials and conflicts here. The other sister is yet living and may remember the circumstance. As we approached the sisters who were thus so busily engaged in conversation, we said, "What in the world are you all talking about? What is it that is so interesting?" They turned to us and said, "Brother Cayce, we were just telling each other of the many good resolutions we have made, especially our New Year resolutions, and how we have broken all of them, and how it seems that we get worse all the time, instead of better, and how we felt that we had as well quit making good resolutions-had as well quit trying. Brother Cayce, how is it with you?" In a second it flashed into our mind to show by a joke the absurdity of such a thing as to quit trying. So we said, "Well, I have just about decided to do as the boy I once heard of who was late at school one morning. That morning the ground was all covered with sleet and ice. When Johnnie arrived, so late, the teacher said, 'Johnnie, what is the matter? Why are you so late today?' Johnnie replied, 'Every step I took, I slipped back two.' Then the teacher said, 'At that rate, I do not see how you got here at all.' Johnnie replied, 'I just happened to think about turning around.' Now, I have been trying, and making resolutions to do better and to live better, and it seems that every step I take, I slip back two. So perhaps it would be better if I would turn around and try to see how mean I can be. Perhaps I may slip back two steps each step I take, and get there that way." We felt that Johnnie's absurd position, or statement, of turning around was a fitting illustration of the necessity of us continuing to try, though the obstacles may seem to be insurmountable. We should endeavor to continually follow that holy and righteous desire to live a Christ-like life. The fact that one has such a longing desire is good evidence of the possession of the righteous life. May the Lord help us to constantly strive to keep the old nature in subjection and to follow the influence and teaching of the new or divine nature. C. H. C.

Should Make Acknowledgment

---May 1, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Christ-I wish to ask a few questions through the columns of The Primitive Baptist, and hope you will answer them.

1. If an elder's application is received by secret orders and he a servant of a church, what should be done? Is he due the church an acknowledgment?
2. If he preaches with other orders, such as Missionaries, Methodists, and Free Will, must he be retained as moderator, or is he not to be retained? Is not an elder called a watchman placed on the walls of Zion, and if he sees the enemy coming is he not to cry aloud and spare not? If he engages in these things is he not bringing the enemy in instead of crying against it?

3. If these things are named in the church and he says he has no acknowledgment to make, and the church is in confusion most all the time in his care, what is best to do? And if the church is partly against these things and part for holding with him, what is best?
4. If he casts reflections on other members is he in the right spirit?
5. Does not the New Testament condemn all this? Hoping you will be blessed to explain all this for the benefit of poor weeping Zion, and with best wishes, I remain, as ever, Your little brother in hope, C. M. Baldwin. Cedar Bluff, Va.

OUR ANSWER

We will try to answer the above questions by number.

1. If an elder, or any other member of the Primitive Baptist Church, sends in his application for membership in a secret order, he should be promptly excluded from the fellowship of the church, unless he promptly makes confession and acknowledgment for his wrong.
2. A man may preach with ministers of other orders under certain conditions or circumstances without bidding them godspeed. It is a general custom of the Primitive Baptists, so far as we know, to engage in funeral services with ministers of other orders when called upon or requested to do so, though we are aware that some brethren refuse to do so. Again, when one of our brethren engages in preaching with a minister of another order, the express and avowed object of which is to disprove the other man's position and to show that his doctrine is wrong, it is not objectionable. The apostle fought with beasts at Ephesus. He most certainly disputed with somebody there on the question of the resurrection. On the other hand, to preach with others, and to affiliate with them, and to take part in their services, is to bid them godspeed and to be partakers of their evil deeds. This is plainly condemned in the New Testament.
3. If the church is not agreed, and they cannot settle the matter among themselves, the rule is to call for help from sister churches, to get them to come and help to settle the matter.
4. If he casts reflections on other members, he is most certainly not in the right spirit.
5. This question is already answered in the answer to the others. C. H. C.

To "One In The Woods"

---May 1, 1922

In our last issue was a letter written to "One in the Office" and signed "One in the Woods." We wish to inform the writer of the letter that we know who he is. He thought he was disguising his hand-writing, but he failed. We know his name, and the number he has in his family, and the name of all his children except one, which is a very young one, and a girl. Now, brother, are you not ashamed that you have stooped so low as to do the thing you have done? Do you not profess to be an honorable, upright man? And do you not profess to be an Old Baptist? Do you think you have acted in a way that is becoming an Old Baptist? Your letter was mailed on the train, and we know the train you mailed it on, and the time the train is due at your place. You should be ashamed of yourself, if you are not. This is all we care to say about the matter just now. C. H. C. Note.-The party referred to above is "in the woods," and has been for some time, before we began publishing these writings in book form. C. H. C.

Parson Crook(ed) Again

---May 15, 1922

Below we give space for another harangue from one Parson" Heady Egotistical" Cook. The reason why we use this expression with reference to this gentleman is because of the language he has used from the beginning in his reference to the Primitive Baptists and the claims he has made for himself. He has pretended that he is so wonderfully versed and has done such great things in overthrowing Brother Copeland's arguments, with reference to language as well as the Scriptures, that we have decided we would publish his letters this time" verbatim et literatim" -just as he wrote them, word for word and letter for letter. We have been spending the time to correct them heretofore; but since he has used the language which he has, we have decided that we will not accommodate him that much this time. Mr. Cook refers frequently to Brother Copeland violating the rules of honorable controversy; but is so careful to observe the rules as to say," I haven't been in but one hole, and that was when I went into it to drag you out into the air and sunshine of God's eternal truth, to get some of the stench of decay off of you, and I almost had to hold my nose while I was doing it." Poor thing! Who ever did, before this, hear of a skunk having to hold his nose? But here are the letters. Note.-We do not think it necessary to up take space in this book with the letters referred to. Below are remarks we made following the letters. Parson Cook must be a hell-sent preacher. He is preaching the same doctrine that Dives preached. Dives argued that his brethren might escape that place of torment though preaching, and Cook advocates the same thing. Note that Cook says to Brother Copeland:" My Lord, and you accuse me of adding to and taking from God's word. When did I ever do such a thing? Point out just one instance, or stand as a false accuser." That is, according to Cook, if Brother Copeland does not show where Cook has added to or taken from the word of God, then Copeland has lied. Brother Copeland, we suppose, overlooked this, and we wish to call the attention of the reader to just one instance in Cook's letter above. He pretends to quote (II Peter 1:10), but cites (II Peter 1:6). He quotes it this way:" Give dilligence to make my peace calling and election sure." He does not add a word by way of explanation, as Brother Copeland did, but writes it as though that is the way it reads in the Book. Here is the way it reads: "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure." NOW WHO LIED? C. H. C.

Should They Be Retained?

---May 15, 1922

Brother Cayce, should an Old Baptist Church retain a member who plays cards, dances and gets drunk? I would love to see you and hear you talk of Jesus and His love. I wish you would come out through the West sometime. Please pray for me and mine when you have a mind to do so. Your brother, I hope, Oren P. Greathouse. Harrisburg, Nebr. Most assuredly an Old Baptist Church should not retain a member who practices such things as mentioned. A true Old Baptist Church will not do so if they know it. C. H. C.

An Endorsement

---May 15, 1922

We heartily endorse what Brother Davis (Elder J. T. Davis) has said concerning repentance and forgiveness; but there are some things that are not to be forgiven and fellowshiped in the church of God. And some of those very things are connived at, winked at, covered up, fellowshiped, and carried in churches claiming to be Primitive Baptists. As we said before, so we say again, that we do not, and WILL NOT, fellowship such in the church of God. A man guilty of perjury, or a man guilty of adultery, has no more business in the Old Baptist Church than a hog has in a parlor. And yet they are there! Do you ask us to fellowship that? If so, you ask what we cannot do. Now, we can name some of the churches and guilty parties. Ask us, if you want to. C. H. C.

Baptism In The Name Of The Lord

Quite a while ago we received the following request: What is meant in the last chapter of Daniel, where it says that it shall be for a time, times, and a half; and there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Also, the nineteenth chapter of Acts, where the people were baptized over when they had been baptized unto John's baptism. Why do the people now baptize in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, when the apostles baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus? I understand it that Jesus was in the name of the Father and the Son, and to Him the Holy Ghost was given. If the apostles had not understood Jesus, it looks like He would have told them while He was here. Please answer these questions, and explain (Acts 8:16). The language of Daniel was prophetic, and a "time" is generally understood to mean a prophetic year, or three hundred sixty years; so a time, a time and a half, would be twelve hundred sixty years, the time the church was hid in the wilderness. In verse 11 the same time is stated in different words, with an addition of thirty years, in which years other things in connection were to occur. It is not a settled fact that those people referred to in ((9:3) (Acts 19:3-5)) were baptized again. John Gill contended that they were not. Verses 3 to 5 read: "And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on Him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." What Paul said is included in the language beginning "John verily baptized," and ending with "When they heard this they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." That is, Paul said those people who heard John's preaching were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

To be baptized in the name of the Lord was the same as being baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The Saviour commanded the apostles to go teach all nations," baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." If they were not thus baptized they were not baptized in the name of the Lord, or in the name of the Lord Jesus. There were and are three Persons in the one God-that is, God is one composed of three. Hence, to be baptized in the name of the Lord one must be baptized in the name of the three. There is no inconsistency here. C. H. C.

What Do You Say?

Again we feel called upon to call the attention of our readers to the move that is spreading and that is being advocated among our people to recognize and fellowship those who may agree to fellowship each other. Of course a perjured wretch can fellowship any who will fellowship him. We know of a church which has restored a man who was excluded for false swearing. There were other charges besides. Some of the other charges were such that it would be necessary to settle before being restored, but no effort was made to settle the same. Now, are you willing to fellowship that? The church where he was excluded has restored him. Yet no settlement was made of the trouble for which he was excluded. Therefore, gospel discipline was ignored. Suppose the association retains that church, and the church fails to undo her wicked course? Then will you the fellowship whole thing? Shall the association and the church be fellowshipped, when the church retains such as that in her border, and the association retains the church that does that? We think not. It is true that many times a whole association should not be non-fellowshipped on account of disorder in one church; but if a church has such disorder in it, and the association retains such a church, then the whole association should be non-fellowshipped. If a man is guilty of fornication or adultery, and his church refuses to hear the evidence of his guilt and exonerates and retains him, and the association retains the church, then the whole thing should be non-fellowshipped. Not only the whole association, but just as many churches and associations as recognize and fellowship such should be non-fellowshipped. We wish to say again that we will not fellowship such things as these. Reader, we put the question to you: How do you stand on this? Some of the things that have been sent to us seem to us to indicate that things like this will be fellowshipped. What do you say? What does your church say? May the Lord help us. C. H. C.

An Old Circular Letter

---June 1, 1922

In this issue of The Primitive Baptist we copy an old circular letter. It was written by Elders W. A. Bowden, J. K. Stephens and Wm. Howard, and published in the minutes of the Bethel Association in 1878. The churches of that association were in Southwest Kentucky and Northwest Tennessee. It was endorsed by the Greenfield Association in 1911, and published in their minutes for that year. The Greenfield Association met that year with the church at Shiloh, Weakly County, Tenn. Elder A. B. Ross was the moderator. The following ministers were members of the association at that time: Elders J. C. Ross, A. B. Ross, C. H. Cayce, W. T. Jackson, K. M. Myatt, J. K. Stephens and W. I. Moore. The following are the names of the visiting ministers who were at the association that year: Joshua Cabbage, J. N. Wallace, L. F. Wallace, A. H. Insko, D. Hopper, J. H. Phillips, John Grist, W. C. Freeman, J. B. Halbrook, E. M. Verell, W. L. Murray, J. L. Butler and W. E. Brush. When that circular letter was read before the body at Shiloh there was not a dissenting voice against the adoption of it. Elder Stephens had the old minute of the Bethel Association containing the circular, and it was read by perhaps a large number of brethren before it was read before the body. It was read slowly and carefully and was heartily endorsed. We believed the sentiment then that is contained in that circular, and we believe it yet. We stand today on the same principles that we did then. We have seen no reason why we should change. It is not only true that there was not a dissenting voice against the adoption of the letter in and by the association, but there was never any complaint against it from any quarter when it was published. It contains the main principles for which the Old Baptists have contended all along the line. C. H. C.

Hot Shot Objected To

---June 15, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-You may be surprised to get this from me. I want this to be published in your paper, The Primitive Baptist. It is my desire to know the real truths of the Scriptures. We cannot change its truths. We may believe them as they really are, or we may believe to the reverse, but that does not change it a particle. We cannot change our destiny by believing the truth or by believing an untruth. I have your "Hot Shot" pamphlet before me and I think it is somewhat hard on some folks, but I think, also, that some questions indicate an opposition to some of the other questions. I may be in error myself but I stand ready to give up any belief that I now have if I am shown by the Scriptures and good logic. I do not expect to take up the questions that I think indicate an opposition to some others in this letter, but may some time if I should ever write again. I want to begin as follows: I understand the Scriptures to teach that God, only, inhabiteth eternity; that God, only, is eternal; that God, only, is immortal. Is this what you believe? Answer yes or no, as the case may be. If this is true, and it certainly is, then at one time, or before time, there was not anything except God. This being true, it certainly follows that whatever God made was made in time or at the beginning of time, and that they are time creatures only. They could not be, or any part of them, eternal, because, to be eternal they would have to be without beginning or without ending. They must be time creatures, mortal, finite; of the earth, therefore earthly. They had a beginning, they will have an ending. Is this what you believe? If so, you believe what I think is unavoidably so. But if you, on the other hand, believe that some part of man is eternal, immortal, as most you hear speak about it believe, then I want to know how he got it. That which is first is Spirit, that which is second is natural. The natural was produced, or made, by the Spirit, or God. Many believe that God, in creating and making all things, made some part of the things eternal and some not eternal. I do not think God could create an eternal thing, as I said above, as an eternal thing cannot have a beginning. If anything is or ever will be eternal it will be a part of God Himself. For a thing to be eternal, it must be a part of God. Eternal life comes directly and immediately from God to whatever has it. It does not come through man, or by man, in any way or form, but it must be transmitted directly from God, and it is God. Natural men and women can beget and give birth to natural children only. By them mortality, only, is transmitted. They cannot transmit both mortality and immortality. If they cannot transmit both mortality and immortality, then how can part of the natural man be mortal and part immortal? If man in nature can transmit both, it undoubtedly uproots every fundamental sentence in the Scriptures. If not so, give me some tangible reason, so that I, by my dull reasoning faculties, may understand. If that can be done, then why cannot fine watermelons and fine pumpkins both grow on the same vine? No, nature produces nature only; God's Spirit produces or puts His Spirit, only, in man; God's Spirit is put in man in the act of regeneration. And when it is put in there it is there to stay. It does not just change man's natural spirit, which is his natural life, but He puts His Spirit in there to bear witness with our spirits. That is the way we learn anything about a change. That is what gives us reasons for our hope, or is what makes us hope. It makes us believe sometimes that we are the children of God. There are but two universal groups of things. First is the great spiritual or eternal group. Second, is the great natural or material group. The first group includes all things that were not created. The second group includes all things that were created, both of animate and inanimate things. The nature that was given any specific thing at the beginning has continued from then until now, and will continue the same as it was when God made it until time shall be no more. When time is no more, there will be no more nature. That will leave nothing but the great spiritual or eternal group. Then all things will have been put under Him who rules all things. If God is a sovereign, which He is, that means that He is the ruler of all things. All things mean just what He created and made. What He created and made are all the things that are, or ever were, or will ever be.

I must close for this time. I certainly hope, Brother Cayce, you or anyone who feels an interest in me, will show me wherein I am wrong, and give your Bible as well as your logical reasons for it. I hope it is my humble desire to know the truth as is revealed by the word of God and corroborated by His divine Spirit. J. I. Caneer.

OUR REPLY

On another page in this paper will be found a letter from Brother J. I. Caneer, of Los Angeles, Calif., in which he says that he has a copy of our pamphlet called "Hot Shot," and has asked us a few questions, to which we wish to reply, and we desire to do so in a brotherly way. He says that some of our questions in the pamphlet seem to indicate an opposition to some of the other questions, but that he does not expect to take up those questions in this letter. This is the very first thing that Brother Caneer should have done, if he has found objections to the contents of that pamphlet. The very first thing required would have been to show the inconsistencies. Brother Caneer says he understands the Scriptures to teach that God, only, inhabiteth eternity; that God, only, is eternal; that God, only, is immortal. Then asks, "Is this what you believe? Answer yes or no, as the case maybe." To this we say that we believe what Paul said in (I Timothy 1:17) "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever and ever." We also believe what Paul said in (I Timothy 6:15-16) "Which in His times He shall shew, which is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting." We suppose this answers the question. We do not believe that God only hath immortality; but we do believe that God only "hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." A distinctive doctrine of the Baptist Church has ever been that man possesses an immortal soul- not immortal in the sense that God is immortal-that is, dwelling in the light-but immortal in the sense that it never ceases to exist, or will never cease to exist. We say that this has ever been a distinctive doctrine of the Baptist Church. We also hold that "Whatever is Baptist is Scriptural." That is, whatever the Baptists have ever taught-whatever has been a distinctive doctrine of the Baptist Church-is Scriptural. If this is not true, then the Baptists have been wrong all along the line; and if they have been wrong all along the line, then the Baptist Church is not the church of Christ. If this be true, then the Primitive Baptists should surrender the claim that they make that the Primitive Baptist Church is the church that Christ established while He was on earth, and that it is therefore the church of Christ. But we are not ready to surrender that claim. The Primitive Baptist Church is the church that Christ established while He was on earth, and it is the church of Christ. This being true, that church is Scriptural in doctrine. As that church is Scriptural in doctrine, then whatever is Baptist is Scriptural. No man can deny this conclusion without denying that the Primitive Baptist Church is the church of Christ. Brother Caneer must admit the one or deny the other. Surely he is not ready to admit that the Primitive Baptist Church is not the church of Christ. As evidence that the Baptists have held that man has an immortal soul, we quote from the London Confession of Faith as follows, Chapter 5, Section 2: "After God had made all other creatures He created {(Genesis 1:27)} man, male and female, with {(Genesis 2:7)} reasonable and immortal souls, rendering them fit unto that life to God for which they were created, being {(9) (Ecclesiastes 7:29); (Genesis 1:26)} made after the image of God, in knowledge, righteousness and true holiness; having the law of God {(Romans 2:14-15)} written in their hearts, and power to fulfill it; and yet under a possibility of transgressing, being left to the liberty of their own will, which was {(Genesis 3:6)} subject to change." This Confession plainly says that man, male and female, God made with reasonable and immortal souls. The Baptists as a body have believed this all along the line. In "Word and Works of God," written by John Gill, is a chapter on the "Creation of Man." This chapter was published in The Primitive Baptist of May 21, 1896 -twenty-six years ago. There was no objection raised against this at that time. We will quote here just a little from that chapter: "These are two, body and soul. They appear at his first formation. The one was made out of the dust, the other was breathed into him; and so at his dissolution, the one returns to the dust from whence it was, and the other to God that gave it. And, indeed, death is only the dissolution, or dis-union, of these two parts: the body without the spirit is dead; the one dies, the other does not." "The soul is * * * * immaterial; and so immortal." "It is better to let this difficulty lie unresolved, than to give up so certain a truth, and of so much importance, as is the doctrine of the immortality of the soul." Buck's Theological Dictionary says: "The immortality of the soul may be argued from its vast capacities, boundless desires, great improvements, dissatisfaction with the present state, and desire of some kind of religion. It is also argued from the consent of all nations; the consciousness that men have of sinning; the sting of conscience; the justice and providence of God. How far these arguments are conclusive I will not say; but the safest, and, in fact, the only sure ground to go upon to prove this doctrine is the word of God, where we at once see it clearly established; ((0:28) (Matthew 10:28); (25:46); (Dan 12:2) (Daniel 12:2); (II Timothy 1:10); (Th 4:17) (I Thessalonians 4:17-18); (John 10:28)" These references and extracts are enough to show that the Baptists have ever held to this principle. The above also cites Scriptural proof. The reader can turn and read those passages for himself, and it is not necessary to quote all of them here. We will refer to only one or two. (Matthew 25:46) reads, "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." If "these" do not possess an immortal soul, and have only an existence in time, we do not see how they could go away into everlasting punishment. And remember that the word translated everlasting with reference to the punishment of "these" is the same word that is translated eternal with reference to the life of the righteous. One is of equal duration as the other. Again, ((0:28) (Matthew 10:28)" And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." If the soul is not immortal, and does not live after the death of the body, then men are able to kill the soul as well as the body. If a man kills the body, and the soul does not continue to live after the death of the body, then he kills the soul also. But the Saviour said that men cannot kill the soul. Therefore, when a man kills the body he does not kill the soul. As he does not kill the soul, then the soul continues to live. If man does not possess an immortal soul, then when a man dies that is the last of him, and there is no such thing as future punishment; there is no such thing as an eternal hell, or a place of eternal punishment. Most articles of faith of Primitive Baptist churches say "we believe that the joys of the righteous and the punishment of the wicked will be eternal." They say that or that "the punishment of the wicked will be everlasting and the joys of the righteous eternal." They mean the same thing. We wonder if these articles of faith have been wrong all the time? We wonder who has advanced so far in learning as to inform the Primitive Baptist Church that they have been wrong all along the line in one of their fundamental principles? As for us, we are satisfied with what has been the distinctive doctrine of the Primitive Baptist Church all through the ages. We are not yet ready to surrender a single one of her principles. Others may side step, and become wise above what is written, but we are still content with the same old time-honored principles which our fathers loved and advocated. As for the "Hot Shot," we are aware of the fact that some of those questions are rather hard on some things which have been advocated; but we can answer every one of them in perfect harmony with the doctrine of the Bible, and in harmony with the principles upon which we have stood ever since we have had a name among the Primitive Baptists. Brother Caneer says, "If anything is or ever will be eternal it will be a part of God Himself. For a thing to be eternal, it must be a part of God." We wonder when space began to be? We wonder if there was no such thing as space before time was? We wonder if space is a part of God? If so, we wonder what part it is? True, God is as boundless as space, but space is not God, nor is it any part of God. We wonder what kind of god Brother Caneer claims to have, since he has made the statement that he did. He says, too, that God could not make an eternal thing. We suppose he got that from his "think so," as we do not remember the text that says so. The Bible says that God cannot lie, and that He could swear by no greater than Himself. It also teaches us that He cannot do a thing that is contrary to His divine attributes. But we do not remember any of His divine attributes that would forbid His being able to make a thing eternal. The only way we can reach that conclusion is from the simple and finite reasoning that the maker must exist before the thing made. From the same principle of reasoning one might deny that Jesus Christ is, or was, equal with the Father. The reasoning would be that the father must, of necessity, be older than the son; and for this reason the Son is not the eternal Son of God-that He could not be eternal, being the Son, and the son cannot be as old as the father. Such as this would simply be a denial of the Lord Jesus Christ. This shows the fallacy of the reasoning. Brother Caneer also says, "Eternal life comes directly and immediately from God to whatever has it. It does not come through man or by man in any way or form, but it must be transmitted directly from God." To this we agree; but he adds, "and it is God." Now we cannot understand that eternal life is God any more than the natural life which a man has here is man. The man is not the life. If so, what is he when the life has become extinct? How could there be any such thing as a dead man if the life is the man? Life is a state or condition, a conscious or animate condition, an organic condition; the opposite to inorganic or dead condition. God exists in a living condition, and always has existed in that condition, and always will. He has always been just as He is now, and always will be. But the life itself is not God. He possesses life, and always has, and always lives. He is the fountain and source of life. Life comes from Him. And life is always imparted directly and immediately. There is no such thing as a medium in the impartation of life. If the life and the thing living are one and the same thing, then that "which is born of God is God." According to that, when a man is born of God (" whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." -1 John 5:1), he is then God. We would have an innumerable company of little gods, according to that. This is clearly fallacious, and further argument is unnecessary. Brother Caneer wants a tangible reason so that he can understand. Now we are sure that he believes some things which are true that he cannot understand, and which no man can explain. Surely he believes and is sure that the lily grows; but he cannot explain it. Neither can any other man do so. Surely he believes that Jesus was the son of Mary and the Son of God at the same time. He cannot explain that, for it is above the comprehension of finite mind; it is too wonderful for man to understand and explain it. But it is the truth all the same. And all the hope we have of a better home beyond this vale of tears is based on that great and sublime truth, though it is far beyond our being able to give tangible reasoning upon it so that we may understand how it can be. It is true, even if we cannot understand it. Yes," the Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." -Rom. viii. 16. If that Spirit bears witness to the truth, then those in whom the Spirit of God dwells have been made the children of God. It is not simply something in or about them that is a child of God; but they are children of God. The Spirit does not bear witness to our spirit that our spirit is a child of God; but it bears witness WITH our spirit that WE are children of God. We are not gods, but children of God; that is, those are who have this witness of the Spirit. This cheers us along life's rugged pathway, and gives us hope of a better home beyond. C. H. C.

Elder C. H. Cayce:

My Dear Little Brother-I don't feel like saying it, but that is just the way I feel about it. I have known you so long, and all the boosting you have ever got never has made you feel big. Now I will try to explain myself. I have been reading The Primitive Baptist ever since the first issue. I have not been a subscriber all the time, but I always found it among my Baptist friends. If it has changed in all these years I have not got sense enough to see it. I have a box of old papers here by me now. I have just been reading "The Work of The Church," by Elder D. Bartley, copied from the Gospel Messenger and printed in The Primitive Baptist of November 4, 1892. Well, I have been reading again "This Good Old Hymn" (Jesus, lover of my soul), written by dear Sister, Mrs. W. F. Waddell, June 27, 1911. Oh, my dear ones, entreat me not to leave thee, nor to return from following after thee. I can't be here long. My dearest friends are over there. Surely I have drunk of the bitter cup -so many of my family have outstripped me and gone my dear husband and twenty-five little ones, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Wonderful, indeed! The natural mind cannot comprehend it! Just think one moment how sweet it would be to hear thirteen little girls and twelve little boys all dressed in white singing "Home, sweet home," and dear old grandpa enjoying the music. Now change your mind to heavenly things. Oh, how sweet! Grandpa, Jennie, Newton, and Becca, together with those little ones, all join in singing the song the angels cannot sing. Now that is not all my family -there are here in this world of sorrow nine children, fifty-one grandchildren, thirty-nine great-grandchildren, besides the "in-laws," making 125 living. Now I am old, will soon have to enter the pale nations of the dead. The same hand is leading me that never has failed. I am still trusting with child-like simplicity-just waiting to hear the welcome applaudit, "Child, come home." Oh, my Lord, I may be deceived in it all, but I am not deceived about them that have gone on before -my dear one that left me December 17, 1920. We had lived together fifty-four years, ten months and four days. Three days before he left me the Lord gave me a song and I began to sing "There'll be no sorrow there." I sang three verses and my soul was lifted above the troubles of this world. I commenced shouting and went to him and told him the Lord had promised to keep me. He said, "I know He will do it, Old Woman." The power of the Almighty gave me strength to see him breathe his last breath. I feel so sad and lonely, but I do not wish him back. I thought of your dear mother many times, and dear Sister Rachel. Brother Miller has been at my house. That was not long before he died. He came to Brush Creek, and he was so humble I thought he surely was one of the little ones. Oh, will you, dear beloved sister, just pray for the least one, if one at all? May the Lord bless His people everywhere. S. J. Perry., Dresden, Tenn.

REMARKS

Dear sister, we have read the above with a feeling sense of our unworthiness, yet we trust that we fully appreciate your kind words. We feel that you are prepared to judge as to the course we have pursued, and as to whether we have changed, or whether we are occupying the same ground the paper occupied when it was started by our sainted father the first of January, 1886. You have been through wars in the camps of Israel, as well as the natural wars, and you know what those old servants of God advocated when the writer was a boy-even before he ever claimed a hope, perhaps. Please pray the Lord that we may be enabled to continue in the good old way. We wish we could see you once more. May the good Lord bless and keep you, is our humble prayer. You have our sincere sympathy. We feel to know how to sympathize with those who are in trouble. C. H. C.

A Suggestion

Dear Brethren Webb and Newman:

My Very Dear Brethren-I have been impressed for some time to write you brethren, and I am taking advantage of The Primitive Baptist to reach you both. Very dear brethren, I write you both this short letter to ask you both, for the sake of the dear children of God throughout the state of Texas, won't you both agree to meet each other at some special point in Texas, and also serve notice in the several Baptist papers for as many brethren and sisters as can to meet you both, and become reconciled to each other, forgiving each other, as our Master has commanded, and thereby bring peace and fellowship back home again to God's little ones? Dear brethren, that would be the day of days, if you dear brethren would and could see fit in yourselves to do the great deed of your lives. Won't you, for your own comfort, as for others, do this? Well do I remember twenty-five years back when you were young fellows preaching the same grand truth, going hand in hand, seeing the same great truth together, trying to further the blessed gospel of the dear Saviour. I feel sure the flesh has dominated somewhat in both of you. It would be a happy day in Texas for the Baptists if those differences between you dear brethren could be adjusted. Now, dear Brother Newman, I have got back home. Would love so much for our dear people to get together again. You and Elder Webb and I haven't got many years on earth to do things for each other and our dear people and to please our Master.

So let us be in haste to do the things that make for peace and love and Christian fellowship. Away back down the way, twenty-five years ago, I kept you both in my home all night, and we were all happy. Won't you blot out all the little things that have severed you and be happy again before we die? May God, in His richest mercy, help you both to prayerfully consider this proposition. Cayce Publishing Co., would you, if it isn't asking too much of you, give this letter a place in your paper? And many thanks. J. G. Grant. Hico, Texas.

We feel duty-bound to offer just a few remarks in regard to the above proposition. In the first place we wish to say that it would have been well if Elder Webb and those who joined with him in the unholy war in their accusations against their brethren to have considered the matter of striving for the things that make for peace before they had destroyed the peace and fellowship of the church as they have. A boy can take a timepiece all to pieces, and then not be able to put it together again. He may take a club and break a watch to pieces so that it cannot be mended. If he wants a timepiece, he should consider that matter before he uses his club. Next, we wish to say that while we do not wish or propose to justify Elder Newman in any wrong which he may have done, yet we wish to say that he has, more than once, stated publicly that he is sorry for every wrong thing that he did in the trouble, and begged all to forgive him. We do not know how much more could be asked of him. Next, we would suggest that if Elders Newman and Webb should get together and settle any personal difference that may exist between them, that would not bring the Baptists of Texas together. Churches and associations are divided and torn asunder. In order for them to get together, it will take more than for these two preachers to get together. This is one trouble now in the church of God-preachers control too much. They are too much like lords and masters, instead of "your servants for Jesus' sake." Next, we wonder if the Baptists of Texas want to fellowship such a thing as that "shady transaction." The idea of a man having a house and lot sold, in which several parties are interested, and the deal being a cash transaction, and several days after the deal was made and the check delivered and the money put on deposit in the bank, then write one of the parties interested that the property has been sold, but no money received yet, and the man who had the deal made letting his son have the money to be paid back in installments! Nice thing for an Old Baptist preacher! Do orderly churches crave to fellowship that? Does a man who loves honest living crave a home in the church where that is fellowshipped? Has that all been wiped out? Again: And again: Well, we might mention several things, but we will "drop the curtain" here for the present. May the good Lord help us, and may He grant that we may keep a clean house. C. H. C.

Where Are We At?

Please read what we here have to say, and then please answer the question above for us, if you can. We moved to this place from Martin, Tennessee, the last week of October, 1919. Elder S. C. Bozarth moved here from Kentucky, in the bounds of the Highland Association, or thereabouts, before we came here. In Kentucky he was a member of Antioch Church. He got a letter of dismissal from them in good standing and full fellowship. Elder J. B. Hardy, who lives in Cleveland County, Ark., had been visiting the churches in Kentucky where Elder Bozarth lived, so that Elder Bozarth was acquainted with him. When he came to this section he put his letter in Elder Hardy's church. He soon discovered that he was not at home, and that these people were not like those he was with in Kentucky. On the second Sunday in April, 1920, Elder Bozarth was at Thornton at meeting there. He had been at several services with our people at different places just before that. At that time he asked Elders T. B. Little, Jno. R. Harris and us what course to pursue to get with our people. He said that he thought Elder Hardy was in line with our people, but that he had found that there was a difference; that he had put his letter in one of Elder Hardy's churches, and did not know how to proceed. We all three advised him to write to Antioch Church in Kentucky and tell them where he had disposed of the letter, or where he had deposited it, and that Elder Hardy's church was identified with the Baptists in this country called "Absoluters," and ask them to grant him another letter or to authorize the clerk to send him a duplicate, so that he could unite with the people who are not identified with that doctrine. Elder Bozarth wrote to the clerk of that church, Antioch, in Kentucky. He received the following reply: Madisonville, Ky., April 18, 1920. Elder S. C. Bozarth: Dear Brother-I received your letter a few days ago. Was glad to hear from you, but sorry to learn you had gotten into trouble. My health is some better. I still have a bad stomach; have to be careful what I eat. Hope you are all well. Say, brother, what kind of trouble did you get into with the elder? Was it on doctrine? If so, state it, and give me those names you said in your letter-not that I doubt your word; but I guess it would be best, so I can put it before the church. I think they will grant your request. I talked to Brother Pilate and Brother Bud Clayton. They thought it best to get the names of the elders you referred to. They think we can give you another letter. So I want to attend to it next meeting, if I can, 2nd of May. We can say you have always proved to be sound in doctrine and practice, and we can't say anything else. I hope everything will work out all right and you can have a home with the people that advocate the doctrine of old Antioch. So let me hear from you soon. Your unworthy brother in hope, D. F. Siria. P. S. -I can tell any people, or set of people, that you have been, ever since I knew you, sound in doctrine and practice. I am sure the whole association will say the same. You have always preached good sound doctrine, if I know anything about what the Bible teaches. Yours. Now on Saturday before the second Sunday in May, 1920, Antioch Church authorized the clerk to send Elder Bozarth a duplicate of the letter they had granted him before that time. Here is the letter the clerk wrote him in regard to it: Madisonville, Ky., May 10, 1920. Elder S. C. Bozarth:

I will answer your letter and also send you a duplicate of the church letter. We are as well as usual. Hope you are all well. We had communion and feet washing Sunday. Had a good meeting. Wish you could have been with us. Hope you will come out all right in the church affairs. Answer and tell me how you made it when it suits you. Your brother, I hope, D. P. Siria. P. S.-Hope this will be all right. This shows that the duplicate letter was authorized by the church, and that it was sent to Elder Bozarth on the 10th of May, 1920. The duplicate was authorized by the church on Saturday before the second Sunday in May. On the second Sunday in June, or Saturday before, Elder Bozarth was at Thornton again (Cane Creek Church then meeting in Thornton) and presented the letter and was received by the church on the letter. Cane Creek Church is in the New Hope Association. About twelve years ago there was a division in the New Hope Association on the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things. Elder Hardy's church is identified with the side known as the "Absoluters," and the Cane Creek Church is with the side that they call "Conditionalists." There was a division in the Highland Association, in Kentucky, a number of years ago on the same question, and Antioch Church is with the party there that are called "Conditionalists" by the other party. Now, Elder Hardy goes among the people in that section that are thus known in that country, just as Cane Creek, and those with her, are known here. Now, on Thursday before the third Sunday in October, 1920, we organized a church in Fordyce. Elder Bozarth got a letter of dismissal from Cane Creek, in Thornton, and was one of the charter members of our church here. Now, in the Messenger of Zion of July 21, 1920, published by Elder J. D. Shain, in Madisonville, Ky., the following statement may be found on page 2: To All Whom It May Concern:

Whereas, Elder S. C. Bozarth, formerly a member of Antioch Church of Kentucky, and whereas in September, 1919, he was granted a letter in full fellowship and later joined Pine Grove Church in Ark., by this letter. And whereas the said Elder Bozarth did by letter of May, 1920, request our clerk to send him a duplicate of the letter of dismissal which he had received of Antioch Church and saying nothing about the action of Pine Grove Church in excluding him from their fellowship, that Antioch Church did instruct the clerk to send Elder Bozarth a statement certifying that he had been granted a letter in full fellowship. Therefore, we, Antioch Church, desire to make this statement to all whom it may concern that: We do not intend to reinstate Elder Bozarth, nor to repudiate the act of Pine Grove Church in his exclusion; and be it further known that the certificate sent Elder Bozarth is only to certify that he left us in good standing, and has no bearing on his standing now. We warn all Baptist churches that Elder Bozarth is not a member of Antioch Church, and cannot be received into fellowship of any orderly Baptist Church on that certificate. We make this statement for the sake of peace and for the good of all concerned. Done and signed by order of the church called Antioch while in conference this May 12th, 1920. Elder J. P. Clayton, Moderator. D. F. Siria, Clerk. The reader will note that the clerk sent the duplicate letter on May 10th. Then on May 12 Antioch held conference again and had the above statement made. But on the second Sunday in June, or Saturday before, the duplicate letter authorized by the Antioch Church was received with the bearer in Cane Creek Church in Thornton. Then on July 21 following, the above statement appears in Elder Shain's paper. As already stated, Elder Hardy's church is identified here with the party known as "Absoluters," there having been a division about twelve years ago in the New Hope Association on that question, and Elder Hardy is with that side of the New Hope. Thus it is seen that Elder Shain and his people in Kentucky will not, or do not, recognize the "Absoluters" there, but recognize them here in Arkansas. We wonder if that suits his corresponding editors? And we wonder how it suits the Baptists all over Southwest Kentucky, in Tennessee, and in North Mississippi, and some in Southern Illinois, and in Missouri? Now, it appears a little strange to us that the church would authorize that duplicate letter on the 8th day of May, the clerk forward it on the 10th, and then on the 12th (Wednesday) the church hold another conference and authorize the statement published in the Messenger of Zion of July 21. Elder Bozarth was received on the letter in good faith on June 12th by Cane Creek Church, in Thornton, before the statement was published. Now, our question at the head of this article, "Where are we at?" Can you tell us? It seems to us that we are in the clear. If not, why not? Will those churches in Kentucky recognize the "Absoluters" in Arkansas and refuse to recognize them at home? If so, why? We would be glad if somebody can "untangle the hank" for us. C. H. C.

Secret Order Insurance

---July 1, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-Please answer these three questions through The Primitive Baptist for the benefit of Brother James C. Flowers:

1. Do the orderly Baptists keep in fellowship members who keep their policy paid up in a secret order?
2. Is it right to keep them in the church if you know it?
3. Would it be wrong to contend against it?

ANSWER

There has been, and we suppose is yet, a difference of opinion in regard to this matter among the brethren. Some brethren think it is wrong to retain a member who has nothing whatever to do with the order but the paying of his insurance dues. Not only is this true, but there are a few who would refuse to fellowship one who carries old line insurance. Our people-the Primitive Baptists-as a body, have held that insurance in an old line company, where there are no secrets and no lodge meetings, is purely a matter of business, and that there is no faith denied in a transaction of that kind. Some brethren, who think this way about it, also think that it is a bad business transaction, and admit that we cannot afford to exclude a brother because he makes a bad trade. If we were to do that, not many of us would be left. While we were living in Martin, Tenn., and our church was in the Greenfield Association, we had a member in our church who was keeping his insurance paid in a secret order, although he never visited the lodge, nor had anything to do with them, and had not done so since before he united with the church. We knew of other members in the association who were doing the same thing, and we suppose they are doing so yet. We do not know whether they have quit it or not. But we heard of some complaint against our church on account of the matter, though no complaint was ever heard about the others. So the church took the matter up with the brother and he laid his insurance in the order down. We then held that a brother should be willing to lay down even a financial connection with a secret order for the sake of peace in the church, and we think that way yet. This complaint which we mention- was not an official complaint. It was not made by any church, but was some talk among some of the brethren in the association. Now we think that this is a sufficient answer to the above questions-that a brother should be willing to lay down his insurance in a secret order for the sake of the peace of the church. Though he may have no affiliation with the order, he is contributing some of his means to help sustain the order. We think the safe thing to do is to have nothing whatever to do with those things-even if it were permissible, and no objection raised against them. Such insurance is not sound insurance. That is, it is not on a sound financial basis, and they will all fail, unless they work on the old line plan with adequate rates; and few, if any, of them do this. We once had a list of the names of about eighteen hundred assessment insurance companies that failed in twenty years. Many hundreds of poor people lost all they had paid in. Better stay out, is what we think about it. C. H. C.

A Debate

---July 1, 1922

About a year ago we were to have met C. R. Nichol in debate near Lebanon, Mo. We were called by telegram on Saturday before we were to start on Sunday to go to Kentucky. It was on account of a matter of business over which we had no control, that is, which we could not change, so we had to wire them to postpone the debate. Quite a while ago we wrote and set the time for Monday, August 21, for the debate to begin. The Campbellites have written us they want to get another man. We wrote our brethren there that they might get any man they please, just so they take the propositions signed and be ready for the date set, August 21. We had a letter from N. L. Clark wanting to change propositions and to set another date. We wrote him that we agreed for them to get another man provided the propositions and date were accepted. We expect to be on hand on that date to meet any man that they may have there to meet the issue. Trains will be met on Monday, August 21, at Phillipsburg. Write Elder D. F. Coones, R. 2, Lebanon, Mo., if you expect to go, and if you can write him. Be sure to get to Phillipsburg Monday morning. That is nearer to the place of debate than Lebanon. All are invited. C. H. C.

Endorsement

---July 1, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-It is in much weakness and fear and trembling that I try to write to you concerning the peace move among the Baptists. First, I want to say that I endorse your firm stand concerning this move. There is but one way to have lasting peace, and that is to have it on Bible principles. Now, little child of God, how did you first have peace with God? Was it not a God-given blessing? So is peace to the church. You remember our Saviour said, "My peace I give unto you." So you see that peace was a gift of our Saviour to His disciples. You remember, too, that He said, "My peace I leave with you." Now since He was so good to us that He gave His peace to us, and then left it with us, how careful we ought to be in trying to keep it. Now, the man or men that broke this peace are the ones to make amends. They should acknowledge their wrongs to the church and ask forgiveness, instead of saying just quit saying anything about it. Suppose I steal a horse, and the owner sees me steal him, and I go home and say nothing about it. What do you guess would be next? Now I could come as near satisfying the owner of the horse by saying nothing as the man can that brings trouble in the church by saying nothing. "Well," says one, "if begging for peace is not the way to it, what must we do?" Just remove the cause of trouble and you have got peace. I believe I love peace as dearly as any man on earth, but I want it on Bible principles; and I believe every sound Old Baptist wants peace just like I do. Now, Brother Hanks, I understand you want peace just like I do, and I do not believe you or any other sound Baptist would say it is gospel order for Old Baptists to ordain a preacher twice; neither do I believe that a man who will tell a willful lie or swear a lie is fit to live in the Old Baptist Church. Now I believe the Primitive Baptists are keeping house for the Lord. Oh, Lord, help them to keep His house in order; keep us all at each other's feet, esteeming others better than ourselves. May we never forget that we should walk as children of light. Dear brethren, don't you think that many of God's dear children are watching you and me, and at the same time wanting a home in the Old Baptist Church? Now if we are backbiting each other and devouring each other, do you think these people would want to come in the Lord's house to live in war? Don't you believe that we, as a people, should keep a clean house? Brethren, have you forgot what our Saviour said about a house that is divided against itself? You know it cannot stand. We all know that the last little stir we have had among us was a shame before the Almighty God. I am not wondering about the coldness in the churches -all of this for the lack of discipline. Did you know that a preacher needs discipline drawn on him sometimes? If this had been done, our Master's cause would not have been bleeding. So, God's dear little children, let us return to our first love, or else He will spue us out of His mouth. Now, a word to the brethren in the West. Is there one among you that is not willing to take just what the Bible says? I don't believe there is. We, here in the East, are going to tell it just like the Bible tells it; and the man or men that don't like it are unsound in the faith. Our people here in the East love what Jesus said to Nicodemus, "A man must be born again, or he cannot see the kingdom of God." Now a word to the Baptists that are divided over this point. Don't you believe it is a shame before God that Baptists would divide over the only thing that prepares men to serve and worship God? Now if any man has said more than Jesus said, he has said too much; and if any man has said less, he lacked some of saying enough. A poor ignorant boy like me that did not get to go to school enough to learn how to read is perfectly satisfied with what the Bible says without fixing one word. I would rather take the testimony of our Lord than all of the men in the world. Where the Bible says "a new creature in Christ Jesus" I have no better sense than to believe it; but do not believe that it makes gods, but children of God. Now, brethren, for God's sake let us all be content with what the Bible says and don't be disturbing the peace of Zion. Now, one more word to the brethren in the West. We Baptists in this country love you all. Brother Ritchie, I have not forgotten the good preaching you did at Rock Spring; and Brother Newman, I have read your writing in The Primitive Baptist, and learned to love you. Now, you brethren come together and be brethren; and as Brother Claud has said, let each church settle their grievance, taking the Bible for your guide, and let us be one people, and let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world, such as secret orders, and fornicators, adultery, and false witness. Let us always be ready to sacrifice for each other. When I am down at my brethren's feet on my knees I feel like I am nearer at the right place than any other time. Now, when you have prayed for yourself and everybody else, remember me, the least one of all, if one at all. R. L. Perry. Palmersville, Tenn.

While we were in Tennessee there were some preachers over there who had become so far advanced in wisdom as to find out that what the Saviour said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," would not do without some kind of modification. Because we would not say more or less they said we believed the whole man doctrine, whatever that may be. We were satisfied then with it just as the Saviour said it, and we are satisfied with it that way now. Some were not. Brother Perry knows who some of them were. If they are now satisfied with it as the Saviour said it, we are glad of it. Brother Perry, we suppose you are aware that a church in your association has restored a man who was excluded for false swearing, as well as upon other charges? We think the church is in your association. You know about it. Other brethren there know. We think it about time that this thing was seen after. The Baptists around here would not much like to fellowship such as that. How about it in West Tennessee? What about the churches in the surrounding associations? Do they fellowship such as that? We want peace, but we want a clean house, and we cannot have peace without a clean house. Such ungodly things in the church as we know have been winked at have always caused trouble, and they always will. Instead of trying to get everything together, including such ungodliness, let us clean up the house, and then we will have peace. If the cleaning up removes us with the other trash, let us go. The church needs peace and rest more than she needs any man on earth. C. H. C.

Should Be Separate

Sometimes I am impressed to speak out in defense of the cause and truth. I can hardly rest, day or night; but many think you are uncharitable if you do, and set you aside and have no use for you. I hope my one desire is to serve my God and to do His will, regardless of what I may be called to endure for His sake. While charity is the best of all graces, I am impressed that true charity, like Paul had, means not only love, but candor, sincerity, earnestness, firmness. Honesty becomes the professed followers of Christ- men and women who are honest to their Lord; who will not go hand in hand with Babylon, and yet try to pose as being meek and humble and charitable followers of God. Charity-true charity, as Paul possessed-will not sacrifice the blessed truth and principles of Christianity to gain the friendship of the world. "Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." This is plain language, and forever condemns God's people in affiliating with the world and her societies as others; but it means that God's children should not walk hand in hand with the world and her churches, so-called helps, societies, clubs; and I am thinking we ought also not follow the world's vain pride and her vain amusements which abound on every side. When I meditate on Jesus' life, and Paul's life, and the life of all true Christians who have lived near the cross (to live near the cross is to daily deny self), I feel like falling in the dust. Oh, to be more Christ-like; to have that charity which will not let us be conformed to the world, but ever seeking to be more like Jesus, and to obey, love and honor Him in our bodies and our spirits which are His. Oh, the selfishness in this old unfriendly world. Many have become rebellious and stiff-necked, desiring to please self and men rather than the Lord; and we find recorded in the Bible that when His children became stubborn, self-willed, and would not receive and obey the word of truth and correction and rebuke and forewarning delivered unto them by God's dear prophets and servants, that God sent His rebuke upon them, and that most severely oft-times, as when His children forsook Him to worship the inventions of men, as the golden calf. Today God's rebuke has already begun, and Zion will never have rest or peace until God cleanses her of the wickedness crept in her borders, the worldliness and carnality. Submitted in love. If one at all, the least of all, Mrs. Lora E. Smith. Greenville, New Mex.

How true the above is, that we will never have rest and peace again in the church until she has been cleansed of some of the wickedness that has been practiced and harbored within her borders. Brethren may cry peace, peace; but that will not bring peace. Brethren may propose to recognize any and all factions, and all their work; but that will not bring peace. It seems to us that the only thing that will bring peace and rest in the church is for her to be cleansed from some of the filthiness that has been brought in. While there are perjured persons, adulterers, traitors, trucebreakers, and such like persons retained in the church, there can be no peace. Put such things out-remove the cause of the troubles-and then there will be peace, and not before. C. H. C.

Questions Of Order

In October, 1920, we received a letter containing the following questions on order, with the request that we give our answers. We were so far behind then that we could not answer many letters that we received, nor could we answer many requests. We simply had to let those things go by without attention, not because we did not wish to comply with the requests of the brethren, or answer their letters, but just because we were compelled to do other things in order that the work of getting the paper out and other work be done. We are now trying to catch up with our work, and trying to answer many things which had not been answered. We will give the questions and then give our answer as best we can and in as few words as possible.

1. Has a church the Scriptural right to hold a sister in their church fellowship who, while a member, marries a man separated from his former wife by divorce without cause of fornication? Answer: We think not- that is, if his former wife was not an adulterer, or a fornicator. The man and wife might be separated before it is found out that she is guilty, and that fact become known later; in which case he is free.
2. Does a brother or sister commit adultery for putting away a wife or husband for the cause of fornication and marrying again? Answer: No.
3. Did Christ ever teach a lesson and afterwards condemn the same lesson? Answer: No.
4. Is a church constituted in disorder for using a preach brother in her constitution whose church held members who were unscripturally married, without the knowledge of members constituted? Answer: No. The fact that a member of the - presbytery who constitutes a church is in disorder does not invalidate the work of the orderly members of the presbytery.

5. Would it cause churches to become in disorder by affiliating with members whose churches held non-feet-washers, secret orders, and unscriptural marriages, without the knowledge of the affiliating church? Answer: We think not.
 6. Can a church be justified by the word of God, holding to a disorder knowingly, because other churches are holding to same disorder? Answer: We think not. One church doing a wrong does not justify another church in doing the same wrong. That only adds wrong to wrong, or is simply more wrong doing.
 7. How could this church in question (No. 6) be justified by the word of God and live in order? In other words, has she anything to do, and what is it, that she have the approval of God's word? Answer: She should keep herself in order; and as a loving sister, she should labor with her sister church to get her to rid herself of her disorder.
 8. In \(Matthew 19:9\) did Christ have reference to what was done under the law, or what was right under grace? Answer: He had reference to what is right in all time- under the law dispensation as well as under the gospel dispensation. These are the questions, and the best we know how to answer them. This we think has been the view held by the great body of Primitive Baptists all along the line. C. H. C.

Regeneration After Death

---July 15, 1922

In the Illinois Baptist of March 4, 1922, Elder W. P. Throgmorton, the editor, says that "Infants are not regenerated before they die, but immediately after they die, and this in order to fit them for the happy world which Jesus has made sure for them by His death. This part of making it sure for them is just as necessary as is the part of the heavenly messengers who convey them to the goodly place whither they must go." Elder Throgmorton says at the beginning of the article that infants are saved by the atoning death of Christ. The elder did not seem to know so much about this matter in his debate with Elder Daily. And Elder Penick said in his debate with us in 1907 that he did not know how infants are saved. It seems to depend very much upon where some folks are as to what they know, or what they say. But the idea that infants are not regenerated before they die but immediately after, is a stunner! That is another invention of man. God's Book nowhere teaches that one is regenerated after death. But the Saviour says,- (John 8:21) "I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins: whither I go, ye cannot come." From this expression it is clear that those who die in their sins cannot "come" to where Jesus is. According to Elder Throgmorton's own statement, infants die in their sins, because they are not regenerated before they die. And he says they must have regeneration to fit them to live with the Lord. But as the Saviour teaches that those who die in their sins cannot come to Him; and, according to Elder Throgmorton, they die in their sins-then according to Elder Throgmorton, they cannot come to where Jesus is-unless Jesus was mistaken in what He said. But Jesus was not mistaken; and Elder Throgmorton does not tell the truth when he says they are not regenerated before they die. This position taken by Elder Throgmorton savors much of the Roman Catholic purgatory. C. H. C.

Tour In Tennessee And Mississippi

---August 15, 1922

We left home on Tuesday night after the first Sunday in July to fill appointments in Tennessee and Mississippi, as published in The Primitive Baptist some time ago, and to attend the debate between Elder J. H. Phillips, representing the Primitive Baptists, and Elder West, representing the Missionary Baptists, which was held near Johnson's Cross Roads Church, a few miles from Jack's Creek village, in Henderson County, Tenn. That is, the debate was held in Henderson County. Our first appointment was at Providence (Michie, Tenn.), in McNairy County, Tenn. We went from home to Corinth, Miss., reaching there on Wednesday night. Our companion and babies went with us as far as Corinth, they leaving with us to visit her father (B. B. Lawler) and mother and family, near Brownsboro, Ala. As we missed connection in Memphis, they stopped with us in Corinth, where we spent the night with Brother M. C. George. Next morning wife and babies went on to Brownsboro and we went out to meet the first appointment. Had services at Michie two days, Thursday and Friday. Elders J. W. and N. Hardwick, were at these services, which were pleasant. On Saturday and Sunday we were at Gravel Hill, where there was another pleasant meeting. Elder J. W. Hardwick is the pastor, and was with us there. Sunday afternoon we went to Henderson, Tenn., and found that they had announced an appointment for us there in the Christian (Campbellite) meeting house. A large crowd was in attendance. We spent the night with Brother Bun Griffin. On Monday we went to Jack's Creek, where we were met by Elder J. H. Phillips, and went with him to his home. We made our home with him until the close of his debate. The discussion closed on Friday afternoon. It was a great victory for the truth. Elder Phillips was equal to the occasion, and showed up the fallacy of Elder West's position on the different points involved in the discussion. Everything went off pleasantly during the discussion, but Elder West was so hard pressed on the last day that he made the assertion that some who belonged to the Missionaries had married into Primitive Baptist families and were persuaded to join the "Hardshells." As soon as the service was dismissed a number of those present who had come to our people from the Missionaries went directly to him and told him to his face that he had falsified, or that what he said in regard to that matter was untrue. The Old Baptists were rejoicing and felt good over the discussion. On Saturday morning Elder Phillips went with us to Hurricane Church, where we had a pleasant meeting Saturday and Sunday. On Monday we were conveyed to Turman's Creek by Brother E. V. Hardeman, where we had a pleasant meeting on Monday and Tuesday. Elder J. A. Burcham was with us there. He is the pastor of the church. On Wednesday and Thursday we were with the church at Barren Springs, where we had another pleasant season. Elder D. M. Neisler was with us there. He is the pastor of the church. We spent Wednesday night in his pleasant home. Thursday afternoon we went with Brother Wyatt to the home of Brother J. M. Brantley, near Johnson's Cross Roads, where we spent the night very pleasantly. Friday, Saturday and Sunday we attended the union meeting at Cross Roads. It was a pleasant meeting indeed. A sister Lewis joined the church during the meeting and requested that we baptize her, which was attended to. On Sunday afternoon we went to Henderson, where we boarded the train for Corinth, Miss. Elder Phillips was with us, and went with us the remainder of the tour. The train was late, so we were late getting to Corinth, but went to the home of Brother George. Our wife and babies were there, having come in the evening from Brownsboro. We all went out to Antioch next morning, where we had meeting for two days-Monday and Tuesday. On Wednesday morning our wife and babies boarded the train on the Southern for Memphis to come on home, while we, with Brother Phillips, boarded the train on the M. & O. for Rienzi to reach the next appointment, which was at Sardis Church, near Rienzi. Then we filled appointments at Sardis, Booneville, Hopewell, New Hope, McKey's Creek, New Providence, Friendship and Little Flock Churches. There were large crowds present at nearly every service. We met Elders J. E. Shackelford, E. W. Shackelford, J. A. Miller, J. W. Hardwick, G. N. Gober and R. W. Owens at some of the churches. We do not remember now whether we met Elders J. D. and J. R. Thomas or not. We did not make a note of the brethren met, and have to write from memory. At Booneville a Sister Burnett, who lives in Rienzi, united with the church and was baptized by Elder Phillips. She certainly had to forsake her kindred in the flesh to follow her Saviour, as her father and relatives were of another persuasion and some of them very much prejudiced. Brother Burnett was overjoyed. The day will be long remembered by him, we are sure. It was a pleasant meeting at this place, as well as at the other places. We met many dear brethren and sisters whom we had never met before, as this was our first visit in this association. We hope the good Lord may open the way for us to visit them again some day. We failed to mention the fact above that a large crowd was in attendance every day at the debate. Several brethren in the ministry were present, and several brethren from a distance. The brethren were kind and good to us all the way on the trip. They were much better to us than we feel to deserve. May the good Lord bless and keep them, is our humble prayer. We trust they may find it in their hearts to pray for us, that we may be sustained and kept by the grace of God, and that we may be found contending for the principles of eternal truth—the principles that were loved and cherished by our fathers. We arrived home Saturday morning before the second Sunday in August and found all as well as usual, for which we trust we are thankful. Saturday and Sunday was our regular meeting time at our little church in Fordyce. We had a very pleasant meeting both days, though our attendance is not large as in some places. We are in peace among ourselves in our little church, as well as in our association, for which we desire to thank the Lord. Peace is much to be desired. A few in peace is better than a multitude in confusion. Our people here are content with the plain and ancient order of God's house, and we desire no new things. We are content with the old paths and desire to continue to walk therein. C. H. C.

Query

Dear Brother Cayce:

Your remarks about insurance were very interesting to me. Brother A goes to a wheel of fortune, lays down a nickle, gives the wheel a turn, and draws thirty-five nickles. (I once knew of a man, not a brother, to make such a deal.) Brother B goes to an old line company, pays fifty dollars on a thousand dollar policy, dies, and his people draw nine hundred and fifty dollars clear. What, if any, is the difference in the two propositions? Please answer in paper. Yours in hope, Wm. L. Phillips. R. 4, Corsicana, Texas.

ANSWER

The difference is simply that there is absolutely no law of nature connected with the wheel of chance. But there is a law of nature that about so many will die every year at a given age. Statistics having been kept over a long term of years, and of a large number of people, shows that about so many will die out of a certain number of a certain age every year. True that sometimes an epidemic, like the flu, a few years ago, will be an exception for that year, but the average remains the same. Hence, the old line companies, having these records and tables, make their rates so as to meet all necessary expenses and to have enough to meet the claim at the time of the death of the last man. Hence, when the man pays the premium in an old line company, he gets just what he pays for. The premium he pays is enough, with what the others pay that year, to meet all death claims, pay all expenses, and set aside a sufficient amount to meet other claims as they come due. We are not answering this question to defend insurance, but simply to answer the question asked. We haven't time or space to go into details in the matter. We will only add that true old line insurance is based on a fixed law of nature, as is revealed in carefully kept statistics over a long term of years. We care nothing about insurance, and do not care to have any personal quarrel over it-and will not. This ends it, so far as our columns are concerned. C. H. C.

The Debate Near Lebanon, Mo

---September 15, 1922

We left home on Saturday afternoon, August 19, for Little Rock to meet our regular appointment there on the third Sunday. Had meeting on Sunday at the regular place of meeting, the home of Sister Byrd Warren, 814 East Fifteenth Street. The congregation was small, but we had a very pleasant meeting. There are a number of members in Little Rock who hold membership at some place far away. This is not right, we are sure. Time has been when it would have been considered disorder for a person to live so near to an Old Baptist Church and let their membership remain at a church so far away, where they could seldom, if ever, attend. On Sunday evening we left Little Rock for Hoxie, where we changed cars for Springfield. We arrived in Springfield Monday morning and changed cars again for Phillipsburg. Arrived in Phillipsburg at about ten o'clock. Elder C. C. Agee got on the train before we reached Phillipsburg. Elder J. H. White and wife were also on the train. They all went with us on to the debate. Several brethren in the ministry were in attendance, and there was a good crowd present every day. Elder Clark lives in Fort Worth, Texas, who represented the Campbellites. We found him to be a pleasant man, in a general way; but, like most all his brethren, will make incorrect statements concerning the Old Baptist doctrine. But from what we were told in regard to the way C. R. Nichol acted when he was there last year to meet us, when we were unavoidably prevented from going, we are sure that Mr. Clark is a much nicer man than Nichol. The Campbellites got Mr. Clark instead of Nichol on account of the unbecoming manner in which Nichol conducted himself and on account of some small difference between them in regard to teaching in the Sunday school. Any way, we are satisfied with the debate. We trust that it may do good in the community. We have not space to give a synopsis of the discussion. We had a very pleasant time and the brethren and friends were kind and good to us. We hope to see them again some day. C. H. C.

Sugar Creek Association

---September 15, 1922

From the debate with Mr. Clark, near Lebanon, Mo., we went to the Sugar Creek Association, which was held at Providence Church, near Garfield, Ark., beginning on Friday before the fourth Sunday in August. Arrangements had been made to feed the crowd right on the ground all the time during the meeting, so those who were there lost no time in going to and from the place of meeting. Six discourses were delivered each day-two in the morning, two in the afternoon, and two at night. Between times of the preaching service the time was spent in singing and in conversation. Those who attended to the preparing of the meals seemed to get along with little trouble. Twelve ordained ministers were present. Their names, associations, and post-offices are as follows: Elder R. L. Piles (Salem), Hon, Ark.; Elder J. K. Corley (New Hope, in North Ark.), Paris, Ark.; Elder C. C. Agee (Ozark), R. 5, Springfield, Mo.; Elder M. T. Cockrell (Sugar Creek), Jenkins, Mo.; Elder Gabe Brown (Sugar Creek), Granby, Mo.; Elder C. L. Smith (Center Creek), Cato, Mo.; Elder J. A. Alberty (Center Creek), Sarcoxie, Mo.; Elder D. F. Coones (Ozark), R. 2, Lebanon, Mo.; Elder Wm. Hen-son (Sugar Creek), Jenkins, Mo.; Elder J. G. Taylor (Sugar Creek), Garfield, Ark.; Elder W. A. Barham (New Hope, in North Ark.), Watalula, Ark.; Elder C. H. Cayce (New Hope, in South Ark.), Fordyce, Ark. The preaching was all a oneness. We heard no hobby riding, and all seemed to be satisfied with the goodness of God's house, and with the plain and simple gospel truth, without any speculation on questions that no man can understand. Hungry hearts were fed, and the Lord's presence was manifested. It was an enjoyable meeting. May the good Lord have all the praise. C. H. C.

Mountain Springs Association

---September 15, 1922

On Thursday morning, August 31, Elder John R. Harris, of Thornton, Ark., came to Fordyce in his car, Brother Loyd Bozarth and wife accompanying him. They took us in with them and we all set out for the Mountain Springs Association, held with Salem Church, near Bee Branch, Ark., beginning on Friday before the first Sunday in September. We arrived in Little Rock at a little after eleven o'clock and had dinner with Sister Byrd Warren. About one o'clock we left Little Rock for Wooster, Sister Warren and Brother T. D. Gardner going with us. We arrived safely in Wooster a little after five o'clock and went to the home of Mr. and Sister Patton, who kindly entertained us, and where we spent the night very pleasantly. Sister Patton had announced an appointment for us in a hall for that night. We tried to speak to the people, and Brother Harris also delivered a short discourse. Next morning we went on our journey to the association, and arrived there on time. The introductory discourse was delivered by Elder J. H. O'Neal, who spoke ably and to the comfort and instruction of the Lord's people. Their home ministers present at the meeting were Elders G. A. Jones, Hazen, Ark.; A. Holland, Damascus, Ark.; Marion Russell, Heber Springs, Ark.; J. M. Chastain, Shirley, Ark.; Jacob Sandage, Bee Branch, Ark.; L. G. Montgomery, Bee Branch, Ark.; W. H. Moore, Vilonia, Ark.; J. H. O'Neal, Rupert, Ark. The visiting ministers were Elders C. M. Monk, Salem Association, Abbott, Ark.; John R. Harris, Thornton, and C. H. Cayce, Fordyce, of the New Hope in Southern Arkansas. The preaching was all a unit-not a discordant note was heard in any of the preaching that was done. And those people are good singers, too. They use the Good Old Songs and "sing with the spirit, and with the understanding also." They study the music, and practice what they know. Such singing as they do makes the preacher feel like talking. He feels like they are interested, for in their singing they manifest an interest in the service of God. On Sunday Brother H. C. Brannon, son of Elder A. M. Brannon, deceased, came forward and related a reason of his hope in the Saviour and was received as a candidate for baptism, which was to be attended to at the next regular meeting of the church. Many of the saints rejoiced aloud, and shouts of praise and thanksgiving to the Lord for His manifold blessings went up from thankful hearts. It was a sweet meeting indeed, for surely the Lord's presence was felt and manifested. To Him be glory forever and ever. C. H. C.

Old-Fashioned Church Service To Be Presented

---October 1, 1922

An old-fashioned church service, typical of the mode of worship 40 years ago, will be reproduced at the First Baptist Church of East Point Sunday evening, September 24. The electric lights will be discarded and in their places candles and oil lamps will give the only illumination. The choir will disband for the night and no piano will be used. The minister will have the only song book and will read each line, after which the audience will sing the hymns in the old-fashioned manner. Not even families who attend will be permitted to sit together as the men will sit on one side of the building, while the women will be on the other. A number of elderly women have been asked to wear bonnets, and the men will probably don denim overalls to add to the realism. Dr. J. R. Roop, of Carrollton, will be in charge of the service and will preach an old time gospel sermon, similar to those still preached in some of the most remote rural districts. REMARKS

The above is copied from the Atlanta Constitution of September 17, 1922. Those poor ignorant people seem to have peculiar ideas as to what it takes to constitute an old-fashioned church service. They seem to think that there cannot be an old-fashioned church service engaged in under an electric light, as though the light is a part of the service. They seem to think that the reason why people did not have electric lights where they worshipped forty years ago was because their worship was different from what it might be now. The fact is, there were no electric lights in the smaller towns or rural districts, or even in the cities, until a few years ago. And they seem to think that the women must wear bonnets and the men wear overalls in order to worship in the old-fashioned way, as though the clothing worn was a part of the worship. They do not seem to know that the clothing people generally wore forty years ago was the kind that was in style then. Forty years ago people often walked many miles to attend the service and carried their shoes in their hands, and when they got near the meeting house they would stop and put their shoes on. We wonder if these people who propose to have one day of the old-fashioned worship will do that? Truly the ignorance of some people concerning the worship of God would be amusing if it were not so serious and pitiable. And those people claim to be so much enlightened, too! The fact is, though these people are ignorant of it, that the Lord still has a people on earth who continue to worship Him in the same old-fashioned way that our fathers worshipped. The lights used and the clothing worn are no part of the worship, and have nothing to do with it. They wear clothing to be respectable, like other folks. If they have clothing made in the latest style, that is what they wear to the service. If denim overalls is the best suit the man has, that is what he wears to the service. If the good sister has a new season's hat, that is what she wears. If the old sun bonnet is the best she has, that is what she wears. It is the sweet and delightful service of the Master that engages their mind, and not the clothing, or the outward appearance, just so they are respectable. But the worldly religionists must have the worldly pomp and show. They may engage in an occasional mock of the old-fashioned service-or pretend to-but the service itself is not what they care for. What they really care for is the fashion and show. They cannot go long without the piano and the choir. Those things are a part of their worship, and they will not dispense with them permanently. Such service as is rendered with their instruments and fantastic music is not acceptable service to the Lord. He is not to be worshipped with men's hands, but in spirit and in truth. The truth is not what these modern worshippers want. They do not love the truth, and they do not have it preached. They make their own preachers, so they will preach that which tickles the fancy of the world, and the world hears them. They pay large salaries, and a high price, for worldly preaching by worldly preachers for worldly churches. But the old church goes on with her old-fashioned service and worship. They have their trials and conflicts; but the Lord preserves her and keeps her through all the trying scenes through which she comes. He has never left Himself without witness. His witnesses are not so numerous as the witnesses of the worldly religion; but there are enough for the truth to be maintained, and always have been and always will be. To Him be glory forever and ever. C. H. C.

Wildcat Whisky

---October 1, 1922

A brother asks us this question: "What do you think of a brother preacher that upholds wildcat whisky and runs in that crowd, to the hurt of good brethren who oppose it?" We certainly think that such a thing is very unbecoming any man, much less a gospel minister. We need men in the ministry whose lives are morally above reproach. A minister should be "of good report of them that are without." His life should be such that all who know him must say that he is an upright man, and that his morals are good. His life should be such that if anything contrary to that is said, it may be a false charge. His life should be an example of truth, piety, godliness, and sobriety. Immorality in any form should not be practiced by one professing to be a gospel minister. He should keep good company. It does not look well for his associates to be running wildcat stills and bootlegging whisky. That is, it does not look well for him. It is wrong. C. H. C.

Position Endorsed

---October 1, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-I have read several articles in The Primitive Baptist concerning a peace' proposition. I read one in the last issue with your comment on same. I sure do endorse you. I would like to offer a few thoughts. I, like you, think if Brother Webb and Brother Newman were to get together and make peace with one another that would not settle the trouble with the Baptists. There is a cause that started the trouble, and if I understand correctly it is the "half man" or the "whole man" doctrine that started it. If Brother Webb still believes the "half man" doctrine and Brother Newman believes the "whole man" doctrine and advocates it, they might make all the peace they could and it would not settle the difference. The wrong party must always see and realize their wrong before they can make lasting peace. I know this by experience. Now if Brother Webb's party commenced advocating the "half man" doctrine before anything was said on the other side, then that side is responsible for the trouble. On the other hand, if Brother Newman's side advocated the "whole man" doctrine, before Brother Webb's side advocated the "half man" doctrine, then Brother Newman's side is responsible for the trouble, because, the Bible is silent on the "half man" or the "whole man" so far as the expression is concerned. Our Saviour never said anywhere in the Book that it is the whole man that is born again, or a part of the man-He just said "ye must be born again," and left off the expression "whole" or "half." Just as long as the Baptists left off these expressions they were not divided on them. Then whichever side led out first on these expressions are responsible for the trouble. Whoever uses an expression that causes trouble is responsible for that trouble. Now I don't think either side has the right to advocate either side when they see that it causes trouble. When I left Mississippi five years ago I had not heard anyone advocate the doctrine that the "whole man" or that a "part" or the "half man" was born again. Elders Morris and Smith, of Oxford, Elders Neal, Williams, Easley, Verell and others, all always preached that "ye must be born again," with the "whole man" or "half man" left off. Elders J. A. and S. A. Paine, Goodwin and Edwards, of Texas, all preached in the old Hopewell Association, of Mississippi, and all of them just preached "ye must be born again," with the expression of "whole" or "half man" left off. Yes, Brother Cayce, I remember hearing you and your dear father preach in the old Hopewell Association, and you both preached Jesus and Him crucified, and that an alien sinner must be born again, with the expression "whole" or "half man" left off. Now, whoever started this "whole" or "half man" -that is, using the expression whole or half-doctrine is responsible for the trouble; and until both sides quit using the expression "whole" or "half" the division will continue. My honest opinion is that if both sides will agree to stop using those expressions and use the expression just like Jesus and the apostles and like our preachers used to, "ye must be born again," "you hath He quickened," I feel like there will be a gathering together of the dear children of God. Dear brother, I have felt like, for a long time, that I wanted to write on this subject, but feeling my weakness and unworthiness so much I have put it off. If this is printed I do hope that none of the dear brethren and sisters on either side will get offended at me, for if I know my poor heart I love them all, and I do pray that we may all see alike and speak one and the same thing, and that all may be done to the glory of our heavenly Father who knows all things-who is wrong and who is right; who is stubborn and who is not. May it be God's will to give us all a penitent heart and forgiving spirit. Remember me in your prayers. Your brother, I trust, in the Lord, G. W. Anthony. Kemp, Texas.

REMARKS

What this brother says all seems to be very good. But suppose a brother has never used the expressions mentioned, and yet brethren have said he advocated the "whole man" doctrine-what about that? We never did use the expression any other way only the way it is recorded in Holy Writ, and said all the while that no man had the right to add to or to take from that expression. We stand on the same ground yet. The truth of the matter is, though, that the difference and the trouble was not on regeneration. We know that was what was said the trouble was on, but that was not it. But we do not care to revive the matter, or to raise the issue again on the matter that it was said the trouble was over. While there was a division, we were sure then, and we are sure yet, that a large number did not know then, and do not know yet, what they divided over. There were many good Baptists on both sides, and there are yet many good brethren on both sides. The division should have never been. Instead of there being a division the discipline of the church should have been administered, and every disorderly walking person should have been excluded and the body of Baptists remained together. We would be glad now to see all orderly walking Baptists who are agreed on the fundamental principles of the doctrine of the Bible come together and live in peace. But we are opposed to any coming together that brings in false swearers, fornicators, adulterers, liars, and those who are guilty of such like ungodly conduct. C. H. C.

John 13:8

---October 15, 1922

In another place in this paper will be found a letter from Dr. J. E. Anderson in which he asks for our views on the latter clause of (John 13:8) "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." We understand that the Saviour meant by that expression that if He did not wash Peter's feet that Peter would have no part with Him in that service. In the same connection the Saviour said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." This shows that there is a happiness promised the child of God in doing the things the Lord requires. If the apostle refused for the Saviour to wash his feet, or if the Saviour did not wash his feet, then he would miss the happiness, joy and satisfaction. He would have no part with the Saviour in the matter. The querist also asks us what interpretation people put on this who do not believe feet washing is essential in the worship of God. We confess that we do not know. We have expressed our views several times in the past in regard to feet washing. C. H. C.

Explanation Wanted

---November 1, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-I have some Scriptures on my mind that I have heard people explain, but not to my satisfaction. I want you to explain them. They are these: ((2) (Matthew 12:22-32); ((22) (Mark 3:22-30); (Luke 12:10); (Acts 7:51-52); (I John 5:16-17). What is the sin against the Holy Ghost? Is it done by acts or by words? Are the sins mentioned in (Acts 7:51-52), and (I John 5:16-17), the same as in Matthew, Mark and Luke? If not, what is the difference? If they are not the same, what is that sin unto death? Is it a child of God that sins against the Holy Ghost, or the alien sinner? If it is a child of God, then he never can get back, according to (Hebrews 6:4-6). Did those who crucified the Son of God commit the unpardonable sin? If you will explain and harmonize the above Scriptures, you will do me and others a great favor. I have heard it discussed in many ways. Some of it I think I understand, and some I do not. I have about come to the conclusion that I know but very little. Yours in hope, Noah Ellis. Henderson, Texas.

The citations in Matthew, Mark and Luke refer to the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. What gave rise to the expression was that the Jews said that Christ cast out devils by the prince of devils. The sin, or a sin, against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness. There is no remission of sin against the Holy Ghost. The person who sins against the Holy Ghost is in danger of eternal damnation; see ((29) (Mark 3:29). The child of God is not in danger of eternal damnation. One for whom the Saviour died is not in danger of eternal damnation. Jesus was surety for His people, and all their sins were charged to His account. Hence, every sin they commit is directly against Him, being laid on Him. No sin committed by a man for whom Jesus did not die is against Him, but every sin such a person commits is against the Father or the Holy Ghost, because not laid on Christ. They are in danger every day of receiving the just sentence for their sins-eternal damnation. This lesson teaches the doctrine of special atonement as plainly to us as any passage in the whole Book, and that is taught as plainly as that salvation is by grace. (Acts 7:51-52) says, "Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets have your fathers not persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers." This is the language of Stephen spoken to the people who stoned him to death. They were doing as their fathers did. They resisted the Holy Ghost in the sense that they resisted His teaching as presented by the prophets, and stoned the prophets the Lord sent. They did not resist the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, but the teaching as presented by the prophets and apostles. Neither did such persons believe the teaching of the Saviour when He preached His own gospel. The power of the Holy Ghost in the gospel is one thing, and the power of the Holy Ghost in regeneration is another thing. Life is not given through the medium of teaching, or through any other medium. It is necessarily a direct work. Wicked men who have not the love of God in their hearts have never accepted gospel teaching. They may pretend for a time to do so, but deep down in their hearts they do not believe it. The sinner must be born again in order to receive the gospel, or in order to understand it. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." If he cannot see the kingdom, neither can he see the things that are in and pertain to the kingdom. The gospel pertains to the kingdom. Hence, the man must be born again in order to see the beauty there is in the gospel of the grace of God. The sin unto death, as spoken of in (I John 5:16-17), is a sin a member of the church may commit which is so grievous that the church cannot afford to pass by and retain the member, or even to restore such a one to membership. We might mention several things that a man might do which we are sure would rightfully bar him from membership in the church of God. Suppose a man who has rightfully forfeited his citizenship by perjuring himself-swearing falsely-could he be righteously retained in the church, or restored to membership? We hardly think so. There are other things, too, that a man might be guilty of that would be a reproach for the church to retain him as a member. C. H. C.

Repentance

---November 1, 1922

Elder C. H. Cayce:

I assure you that we enjoy the dear old Primitive Baptist's visits. I do hope sometime to meet you and hear you preach. I found Brother Knighten had visited you and talked with you, and I asked many questions about you. I have read your debate with Elder Penick and I wish I had the chance to read it again. Will you please sometime express briefly your views on what became of Ananias and Sapphira his wife? Were they lost? Not long since I was talking with a good Missionary Baptist and he made the remark that the Primitive Baptists had been preaching repentance only about forty years. Now, I believe and understand that they have preached it ever since they have preached anything. If not asking too much, please give an article on that matter sometime when convenient. Yours in hope of eternal life, Irvin Canady. Eros, La.

REMARKS

We have thought that Ananias and Sapphira were children of God, and had membership in the church. We do not know that there is any positive proof that they were, or that they were not, children of God. They lied to the Holy Ghost, and they died, as a result of their sin. The Primitive Baptists have preached repentance all along the line. They do not preach it, and never have, as the world does, but as the Bible teaches. There is a repentance which is worked by godly sorrow. God grants repentance unto Israel and the forgiveness of sins. Then God's children should repent or turn from any wrong course they may have pursued. Then there is a moral repentance-any person who has been living an immoral life should repent-turn from it-and live a moral life. As we understand it, Old Baptists have always preached it this way. We cannot write at length on the question now. C. H. C.

How To Get Peace

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I have just read the last number of The Primitive Baptist, and read a letter from Brother G. W. Anthony, in which he calls attention to some peace propositions in regard to a coming together of the Baptists. From what I can gather it seems that Elders Newman and Webb are the bones of contention. I wrote a short letter some months ago, in which I made a proposition to Elders Webb and Newman, asking them to become reconciled to each other if possible, and did not at all mean for either of them to endorse anything that was not in perfect accord with the divine word. I just thought that it might be one step toward bringing about a condition of peace among God's poor and afflicted people that some pastors have caused to err. God has pronounced a woe on such a man, or men, called pastors. I feel sure that good preachers have become carnal in the divisions and have widened the breach instead of healing it. I notice Brother Anthony uses the words half or whole man doctrine often. Of course if any brother preacher uses any such expression, it is out of order, if he is trying to set up some kind of doctrine of his opinion. The Saviour just said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." We know that our Master addressed the man in his entirety. To cut the man up into several parts, and find no use for a part of him—we will just say our bodies can't and don't serve God all alone. And that Jesus was addressing a renewed spirit within us, the man, the Adam man, would not be in it at all—and just the renewed spirit that is in the man, then the body is lost and the great doctrine of the blessed resurrection is a farce. But, dear brethren, my hope is built on the resurrection of these mortal bodies. If such expressions as half man or whole man is, or has been, the cause of so much trouble and dividing, I agree with Brother Cayce in the fact that there were, and are yet, good Baptists on both sides of this question. Now Elder Newman has done all that any man could ask to adjust all this matter in its infancy, but many years have passed away, and many of God's little ones have died wondering, no doubt, what it all meant; and I am sure there are many of God's dear people who do not yet know the seat of all this wrangle about words to no profit. We should strive to bring about conditions of peace. In my letter to Elders Newman and Webb I did not have in mind at all for a wholesale coming together. I cannot see at the present time any way for a coming together of any of the factions, only by individually coming to orderly churches, tried and true, in keeping with the faith as has been kept by our fathers. So I feel that when brethren want peace in earnest they will seek for it. May the God of peace guide us in all things that make for peace and whereby we may be strengthened in the faith. If we had that tenderness in our hearts for each other that Jesus had for His dear people, we could look over many faults we might find. When we get willing to pay the price for peace among ourselves we can have it. In conclusion, Elder Newman does not preach, and has not preached, that our flesh is made pure in regeneration, but that the flesh is subjected; but in the resurrection our bodies are made pure, immortal, and ready for eternal glory. May God, in His mercy, bring His dear people together in peace and love. I am, I hope, a poor sinner saved by grace. J. G. Grant. Hico, Texas.

It is true, very true, that but few know the seat of the trouble that brought the division in Texas—or that started there. We are aware that some claim that it was because Elder Newman advocated what some called the whole man doctrine. But that was not the seat, or origin, of the trouble. That which gave rise to it was the question of adultery in the church. A certain preacher had a daughter who married a man that was separated from more than one woman without a Scriptural cause, and she and her man were received into the church. Some said they were living in adultery, Scripturally. Then the preacher set in to kill and to destroy all who would not say that they were not in adultery. This is and was the start of the whole thing. Something must be "hatched up" to destroy Elder Newman on this account-hence the "hatched up" charge that he was advocating the whole man doctrine. Now, if those parties who "hatched up" such charges want peace, let them "pay the price." There are some of them whose credit is not good. For instance: At the Forked Deer Association, in West Tennessee, in 1917, the ministers present all signed an agreement and settlement. Two weeks later one of those preachers was present at the Pr'edestarian Association, in West Tennessee, at Clark's Creek Church, and stated publicly that the agreement was signed, and that he was glad of it and had been happy over it ever since. In May following he had an article in the Trumpet renouncing the agreement, and in which he said he was sorry of it from the first night after it was done, and slept but little that (first) night on account of it. This same man is pastoring a church that restored a man who was excluded for false swearing and malicious slandering of another, and also another charge, and approves the action and course of the church. What about such as this-and then saying he wants peace? This man had an article in the Gospel Messenger in which he would make it appear that he was willing to do anything in the world for peace. He wrote us a private letter, which we answered and asked him a few questions, but he replied not. Peace in the church? Yes, there will be peace, and all who love order and upright living, can come together and can have peace, if they will have a "spring cleaning" and sweep such ungodly trash out of the Lord's house as fornicators, adulterers, liars, slanderers, perjured persons, moonshiners, bootleggers, trucebreakers, false accusers, traitors, the devil's ministers who have been transformed as ministers of righteousness. Such as these cannot be kept in the church of God without trouble. We want all good and orderly walking brethren to come together in love and peace-but we do not want to come together with such as these. Do you? Say, DO YOU? We mean any of you. We would like to hear from the man who does-if there is one. Perhaps one who loves sin as well as he ever did would like to be with such. Enough at present. We know that by speaking out on these things we bring down upon our heads the curses and condemnation of many-but God requires faithfulness. Some have quit taking the paper, and some have refused to take it, because we have spoken out against some things that have been put forth as a "peace move." But we expect, by the help of God, to warn our people against everything we think is wrong, even if every subscriber we have stops his paper and we never get another subscriber while we live. It is not a matter of subscribers- - but a matter of what is right. Take a certain church in Texas, for instance, that took a preacher in that had been excluded for adultery-and the case had been in court and the church that excluded him would not restore him, but this church took him in. Then they gave him a letter and he went to another state and joined on that letter, we suppose. How is that for order? Do you think such as that will produce peace and order in the house of God? May the good Lord deliver us from the hand of the enemy and keep the city, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Remarks To Olive Dodd

---January 15, 1923

Dear sister, we feel to appreciate your kind words and expressions of Christian love and fellowship, and your desire to encourage us along life's rugged way. Our pathway has been rough. Many times we have felt that the trials of life were more than we could bear. We trust it is by the grace of God we have come thus far, and our trust and confidence are yet in Him. We feel unworthy the love and esteem of the Lord's dear children. We would deny the faith and forsake the true principles of the gospel if not kept by the grace of God. Were it not for the manifestations of the love and esteem of some of the Lord's dear children, such as your letter, we feel that we would have to give up. May the Lord bless you, dear sister. Please remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Tour In Alabama

---January 15, 1923

We bade our loved ones farewell and left our humble home on Wednesday night, Nov. 1, to fill appointments which had been made for us in north Alabama and Tennessee. We were blessed of the Lord to reach every place where appointments had been made for us. In the Mount Zion Association we visited the following churches: New Clear Creek, Zion Hill, Matthew Moriah, Mt. Joy, Salem, Brown's Creek, Shiloh, Mt. Vernon, Mt. Olive, Dripping Springs, Gum Pond, Harmony, Little Vine, Rocky Mount, Little Branch, Bethlehem and New Hope—all in the order named. We made no note or memorandum of the homes we visited, or who conveyed us from place to place. We do not suppose this is of any interest to the readers anyway, and we think many brethren take too much valuable space in relating such things. There were good congregations at most all these churches, and they seem to enjoy going to meeting and engaging in the service of the Lord. We made no note or memorandum of the ministers we met, but believe we can remember the names of most, if not all, of them. We remember the following: Elders A. Whitworth, M. Sparks, W. A. Childers, F. B. Moon, W. J. Dendy, J. N. Bobo, B. G. Parker, G. E. Graves, J. E. Yancey, and G. W. Heath. These are all in the Mt. Zion Association. Besides these we met Elder Henry Moon, who is a member of Ephesus Church in the Sand Mountain Association. The next appointment was at Ephesus Church. On the way there we visited Elder R. V. Hood, who was confined to his bed with rheumatism. We were glad to meet all these dear brethren, and truly hope Elder Hood may be restored to health again. If we met any other brethren in the ministry we trust they may pardon us for not mentioning their names, as we are writing from memory. We also met several "licensed ministers." It was expected that Elder J. J. Turnipseed would make this trip with us. We received word to that effect just before leaving home, and the news had been circulated at all the places; but he did not meet us until Monday, Nov. 20, at Little Vine. He was with us there and at Rocky Mount and one day at Little Branch, and at Arab on Monday night, where we had consented for an appointment to be made for us. Brother Turnipseed was prevented from making the trip, as he expected, on account of illness of his wife. We were sorry that he did not come sooner, and sorry that he could not stay longer, but glad to be with him the three days. May the good Lord bless his labors, is our humble prayer. If we are not deceived, these are good brethren in the Mount Zion Association, and they have been blessed of the Lord. They have been persecuted, but have been faithful and true in the service and devoted to the cause. Our next appointment was in the Sand Mountain Association. We visited Ephesus, Pleasant Hill, Pilgrim Rest and Macedonia, the four churches of the association. We were at Ephesus two days. The weather was very cold and disagreeable, so that the congregations were not as large as they would have been, but were very good considering the inclemency of the weather and that the church is small and the membership scattered. At Pleasant Hill the congregations were small both days on account of the fact that many families in the community were down with the flu. Appointments were made for three days at Pilgrim Rest, but nearly every family in the community had flu or other illness-some of them had pneumonia. The two last days were the regular meeting time, but on account of so much sickness among the members it was thought advisable to call in the meeting for Saturday and Sunday and go on to Macedonia and have meeting there four days instead of the two days that had been announced, which was done. The congregation was small at Pilgrim Rest on account of so much sickness, and small at Macedonia on Saturday on account of not having time to get the appointment circulated, but good congregations were present on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. In this association we met Elders H. D. Leonard, W. L. Garrett, J. T. Roberts, W. J. Ball,-----Durham and J. K. Phillips. On Tuesday night, Dec. 5, and Wednesday, Dec. 6, we filled appointments in Langston. On Wednesday evening we went to Scottsboro and boarded the train for Brownsboro and spent the time with Brother B. B. Lawler and family until Friday morning. Our wife is a daughter of Brother Lawler. On Friday we filled an appointment at Hurricane Church, where there was a small congregation. Elders J. W. Bragg and H. P. Houk were with us at this place. Brother R. L. Tillman, of Decherd, Tenn., was there and went to all our appointments in this association- the Flint River. On Saturday and Sunday we were at Flint Church, the regular meeting time. This is the oldest Baptist Church in the state of Alabama. It was organized Oct. 2, 1808, and the one hundredth anniversary was celebrated Oct. 2, 3, 4, 1908. Elders H. P. and A. J. Houk were with us at Flint. On Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 11,12, we were at Briar Fork. Elders B. G. and G. A. Stephens were with us both days. Elder S. F. Best was present on Monday, but was sick on Tuesday and not able to be there. On Wednesday and Thursday we were at Pleasant Grove. Our wife and children came Monday night, arriving in Huntsville at 2 o'clock, to visit her mother and father and family. She and her mother went with us to Pleasant Grove on Wednesday. We had very pleasant meetings at all these places, though the congregations were not as large as they would have been had not the weather been so bad. On the third Sunday and night we were with Bethel Church in Nashville, Tenn. We tried to serve this church from its organization until we moved to Arkansas in October, 1919. We enjoyed being with them once more. It seemed like coming home to us. Elder Geo. W. Inyart, of Olney, Ill., was with us here, he being on a tour filling appointments in that section. We enjoyed a pleasant meeting with this church. They are a good band of faithful brethren. On Monday morning we went to Decherd, Tenn., where an appointment had been made for us at 1:30 p. m. Here we met Elders Dunaway and Byrom. We enjoyed a very pleasant meeting there. On Thursday and Friday, Dec. 21, 22, we were with Union Church at Woodville, in Mud Creek Association. Only a short time was had to publish the appointments, and there was some sickness in the neighborhood, so the congregations were small, but the meetings were pleasant both days. On Saturday and Sunday we were with Bethel Church, in Mud Creek Association, the regular meeting time. Elder W. T. Flanagan was with us there. Very good congregations were present both days, and we enjoyed a very pleasant meeting. On Tuesday, Dec. 26, we went to Decatur, to fill an appointment that night. The meeting was at the Missionary Baptist Church in East Albany. A good congregation was present and the meeting was a pleasant one. Those people were kind and good to us. The pastor, Elder Stuckey, was present. We returned to Brownsboro on Wednesday morning. Thus the appointments have been filled. Much of the time since the third Sunday until the time of this writing, on Friday, December 29, we have been at the home of Brother B. B. Lawler. Our wife desired to spend this Christmas time with her mother and family, so we have been here and have been putting in some of the time writing, answering letters and preparing manuscript for The Primitive Baptist. We are expecting to leave here tonight to go to Little Rock to be with the little church there on Sunday, and to go from there home. This has been a very pleasant tour to us, and the brethren have been kind and good to us-much better than we feel to deserve. We often feel that our efforts are poor and worth nothing to the cause, but we are kindly received, and the brethren endorse the principles we try to defend, and this makes us feel that our efforts, though poor, are not altogether in vain. We feel thankful, we trust, to the good Lord for His mercy and loving kindness to us, and to the good brethren for their care of us while among them. May His richest blessings be showered upon them, is our humble prayer. We trust the Lord may spare us to meet many of them again on earth, but if we meet no more in this world, our hope is that we may meet in that world of bliss and glory, where Sabbaths never end and congregations never break up. We desire an interest in the prayers of the Lord's dear children, that He may grant us grace and Christian courage and fortitude to fight the good fight of faith until we come to the end of our pilgrimage and stay on earth. Debate At Parrish, Alabama

We have agreed, the Lord willing, to meet J. D. Tant (Campbellite) in debate at or near Parrish, Ala., to begin on Tuesday, March 13, and continue four days. The question of church identity will be discussed. We hope as many of the brethren and friends will attend as can. C. H. C.

Remarks On A Council

---February 1, 1923

We feel duty bound to dissent from one paragraph in the foregoing, which says, "We hold that discipline belongs solely to the church, and all investigations and labor must be bestowed by official church authority, and no minister has the right to usurp authority over the church by refusing to affiliate with his brethren in a sister church until the church holding said minister or members are officially labored with and withdrawn from." We do not dissent from the statement that discipline belongs solely to the church; but the idea that a minister usurps authority over the church by refusing to affiliate with a man until the church holding him has been officially labored with is what we think is wrong at least, we do not think this is necessarily correct. Here is a case in point: we know a man who is under a cloud we have been informed of bad reports about him. He moved his place of abode and his membership. His recommendation was signed by one under bad report. The church where his membership was moved to was informed, but no official labor bestowed by sister churches that we know anything about. But we will not affiliate with that man. Neither will the churches of our association do so. If a minister knows that a man is not what he should be, or if any other brother knows it, for that matter, he should not affiliate with him. No man should knowingly affiliate with an adulterer or perjurer, whether his church has been labored with or not, especially if the church has had information furnished. C. H. C.

Pastor Should Quit

---February 1, 1923

The following questions were sent to us with a request that we answer them through The Primitive Baptist:

1. Should a preacher retain the pastoral care of a church when he knows that a number of the members object to him being the pastor? Answer: In most every case where the pastor knows that a number of the members object to him continuing as pastor, he should resign. There may be a few instances when it would be wrong for him to resign, but such instances are rare.
2. Should a preacher persist in going to a church to preach when said church had asked for and received the resignation of said preacher as pastor, and is it becoming of such preacher to open the door of the church at such places? Answer: We do not think the preacher should go to a church where his services are not desired. If he has the cause at heart we do not think he would do so.
3. In case such preacher persists in such course, what course should be pursued? Answer: The church might ask him to desist. The church might make complaint to the church of his membership. C. H. C.

Replies To "Where Are We At?"

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother I notice in July 1st issue of The Primitive Baptist that you ask the question, "Where are we at," in regard to Elder S. C. Bozarth's case. For the information of you and your readers I will explain the matter, so far as Antioch Church is concerned in it. 1st. Elder Bozarth moved to Arkansas sometime in the year 1918. In September, 1919, the church called Antioch granted him a letter of dismissal in good standing. There was no more thought about it until April, 1920, when I received a letter from him asking that we send him a copy of the church letter, or statement showing that he was in good standing when he left us. You will please remember that he did not ask us to reinstate him, but just to give him a statement showing his standing when he left us. He complained that he had got among "Absoluters" and wanted to get out-that he had been fooled in joining where he did. 2nd. We had never heard of Pine Grove Church being in line with the unlimited predestinarians. We knew that Elder J. N. Keith, of Grayson County, Ky., had lived there for sometime, and had helped to organize the church. We have always, and do now, regard Elder Keith as being a sound Baptist. Elder Bozarth having lived there for a year before, and near a year after he called for his letter and joined Pine Grove Church, we thought it a little strange that he would find out this late that they were "Absoluters." From these considerations we thought it best to write Pine Grove Church to know more about the matter. On failing to receive an immediate answer, we thought there was nothing serious, and so I put the matter before Antioch Church on Saturday before the second Sunday in May, and after some discussion pro and con, the church did authorize me to send him (Elder Bozarth) a statement showing that he was in good standing when he left us. This is just what Elder Bozarth asked for, and is just what the church granted him-not a church letter, but only a statement showing that he left us in good standing. The church record shows this. I give here the fifth item of that day's business: "fifth New business; by motion and second the church agreed to give Elder S. C. Bozarth a statement of writing showing his standing when dismissed from us." 3rd. On Monday following the above stated action of Antioch Church I mailed Elder Bozarth the statement the church authorized me to send him. On the same day we received a letter from Pine Grove Church stating that Elder Bozarth had been excluded from them on a charge of willful and slanderous conduct, and that Elder Bozarth did on first coming to Pine Grove Church want to join them by relation, stating that Antioch Church in Kentucky was in disorder. 4th. On receiving word from Elder Bozarth that Pine Grove Church was "Absolute" in her doctrine, and receiving word from Pine Grove Church that Elder Bogarth had come there wanting to join by relation, denouncing our church as disorderly, and then later excluded from the church on a charge of willful and slanderous conduct, we were puzzled what to do. If Pine Grove Church was identified with "Absoluters" they were not with us, and if the reports on Elder Bozarth were true we would not uphold him in them; we decided that the best course was to have nothing at all to do with the matter. I had mailed the statement to Elder Bozarth when we received word of his conduct and exclusion, and then Elder Bozarth wrote me that he had had trouble with an elder,-----and also stated that he had joined another church on the statement I had sent him. Now in order to show that we would have nothing at all to do in the matter, and to let all concerned know that we did not reinstate Elder Bozarth (he did not even ask to be reinstated) we decided to publish the statement which appeared in Messenger of Zwn July 21st, 1920. We did not rescind the act of granting Elder Bozarth a church letter, for we did not do that. We did not rescind the act of granting him a statement showing his standing when dismissed from us, but simply stated that was what we did. We stated that Elder Bozarth was not then a member of Antioch Church, which he was not. Now if Elder Bozarth presented a letter in church letter form to Thornton Church he presented something he did not obtain from us, for we did not give it. Now a word about the statement. It was adopted by Antioch Church on Saturday before the second Sunday in July, instead of May, as the date in published statement indicates. It was an oversight in Elder Shain in letting it go uncorrected. The church record shows that it was acted upon on that date. And remember that that statement was not a rescinding of any act, but a statement of what it did. Now if Antioch Church did wrong, we fail to see where the wrong was. We feel like we are in the clear. If not, why not? Now a word to you, Brother Cayce. If you are willing to receive and retain Elder Bozarth under these circumstances, we will say that Antioch Church has no complaint to make. As he was not a member of our church we feel that we had no say as to who received him. We did not intend to wrong Elder Bozarth in the statement, and feel that we did not; nor do we feel that we did anyone else any wrong. We hope that this will show you our attitude in this matter. Now we ask that you publish this in August 1st issue of The Primitive Baptist so that your readers will know the truth of this matter, so far as we are concerned in it. We are sorry that the dates in the published statement were wrong, and therefore misleading, but it was an error of Brother Shain, and not ours. Yours in hope, D. F. Siria, Church Clerk. Madisonville, Ky., July 24, 1922.

SECOND REPLY

"Blessed are the peace makers, for they shall be called the children of God." - (Matthew 5:9). Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother- The July first issue of your paper has been handed to me by one of your subscribers with a request that I answer your article published under the question, "Where Are We At?" And inasmuch as you so urgently requested someone to answer, I am complying with the request. First. I wish to call attention to the advice put forth in the General Address to the churches by the ministers and brethren at the Fulton council meeting in 1900, which you and I both concurred on, and which I have faithfully observed to the letter from then until now, in which we said, "We do most solemnly and prayerfully beseech all our churches and people that they raise no bars of fellowship against any Primitive Baptist with whom they are agreed on fundamental principles-such as the eternal salvation of sinners wholly by grace and entirely unconditional on the sinner's part, and who are sound and orderly in the ordinances of the church, administering baptism by immersion to penitent believers only by ministers of the gospel clothed with authority by the gospel church, and administering the Lord's supper to such baptized believers only, and who manifest a willingness to labor for the peace, union and fellowship of the whole body." Fulton Council Proceedings, page 8. We thought then this was good advice, and I think so yet. Don't you think so too? And it is so much like the advice given by the apostles and elders. Hear them: "But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they." (Acts 15:11). Also ((28) (Acts 15:28-29)," For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no other burden than those necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; from which if ye keep yourselves, ye do well. Fare ye well." Nothing is said about keeping themselves from predestination of all things. This must not be necessary. But if some should raise bars of fellowship against their brethren, notwithstanding our advice and the Scriptures to the contrary, then what should we do? We advise that "If the raisers thereof cannot be induced to remove them at once, the only course for those who want to remain in this holy church union is to discard their action and have no connection with them until they withdraw such bars of fellowship." Fulton Council Proceedings, page 9. Don't you think this was spiritually wholesome and godly advice? I am sure it was, and is. And if all who joined in giving it had strenuously observed it, our troubles and divisions would be greatly diminished. But in your article you say, "Elder Hardy's church is identified here with the party known as Absoluters, there having been a division about twelve years ago in the New Hope Association on that question, and Elder Hardy is with that side of the New Hope." Also you say, "There was a division in the Highland Association in Kentucky a number of years ago on that question." Brother Cayce, I am persuaded that you do not really know just what caused the division among the Baptists here or in the Highland Association in Kentucky either, else you would not have made that statement. I came to this country eight years ago and found a division among the Baptists here which occurred about four years before, and not knowing which party was in order, I got Elder John Keith, of Kentucky, to assist me in the constitution of our church here, and discarded both parties until I could investigate. Was that commendable? Was it right? Later I thoroughly investigated their trouble as follows: First. I went to Elder Little and talked with him, and then called both parties together at our church (Pine Grove) and interrogated both parties together. They discussed every mooted question among the Baptists, and, to my surprise, not a statement made by either party was combatted or denied by the other, but both agreed upon every point discussed. And not an accusation was made by either party against any minister of the other party of ever having preached anything that tended to disturb their fellowship. And at the close of the investigation both parties agreed for me to write up a statement of their agreement and that each of them would sign it and then go together to the several churches of each party and ask them to accept it and reunite. But the following morning Elder Little declined without assigning any reason whatever for so doing, notwithstanding he preached with the other party during the meeting, both before and after the investigation. The investigation revealed that one minister, some twenty years before their trouble, preached predestination in a way that would charge God with being the author of sin, and was excluded from the church for it. He finally returned, confessed his error and was restored, and associated and preached with Elder Little without a complaint against him until his death, which occurred some years before the division. Elder Little stated in the investigation that he never heard any other minister of the New Hope Association preach anything on that subject that he did not endorse, but that some brethren used expressions in private conversation that he thought were not in keeping with the Scriptures. Does this look like a division in the New Hope Association? The investigation further revealed that Elder Little had been moderator of the New Hope Association for some years, but just prior to the division he had been deposed and another chosen, after which he and his brethren raised up and declared non-fellowship for the association, charging predestination as the cause. The brethren begged and plead with them to remain in the association, but to no avail. Therefore, there was nothing left for them to do, according to the advice given at the Pulton council meeting, if they desired to remain in the holy church union, but to discard their actions and have no connection with them, which they observed and which exists now. But when you came to this country you disregarded that advice and accepted their actions and connected yourself with them. Therefore, my dear brother, you are not in the clear, but have erred. However, my love for you is unimpaired, and I have no desire to injure you nor cause you trouble. But my desire and prayer to God is that we may turn from our error and walk sweetly together in love, and labor for the peace and union of our beloved Zion, according to the advice given at Fulton; and our hearts and arms are extended to such and are ever open to receive them. It may be contended that these brethren declared against heresy. Well, in our general address at Fulton we gave an interpretation of heresy as follows: "We take heresy to mean a departure from the teachings of the Scriptures as explained in our acknowledged confession of faith." -Fulton Council Proceedings, page 9. But what is our acknowledged "confession of faith?" In our general address we said, "The London Confession of Faith, adopted over two hundred years ago by thirty-seven of the ablest ministers of England and Wales, representing over one hundred churches, has served one of the most needful services among our people of any document of faith since the days of the apostles, and has stood unquestioned as an expression of the Primitive Baptists' interpretation of the Bible from then till now." -Fulton Council Proceedings, page 15. This shows that we considered nothing to be heresy that was in harmony with the London Confession of Faith. Did they declare against a departure from the London Confession of Faith? They said positively that they "declared non-fellowship for the doctrine that God predestinated all things that come to pass." What does our "acknowledged confession of faith" say? "God hath decreed in Himself from all eternity, by the most wise and holy counsel of His own will, freely and unchangeably, all things whatsoever come to pass." -London Confession of Faith, article 3, section 1. This looks very much like they declared non-fellowship for our acknowledged confession of faith, and thereby went into heresy themselves, does it not? Aren't we justified in standing aloof from them as long as they remain where they are? And if we should do otherwise, would we not repudiate the advice given at Pulton? But what caused the division in the Highland Association in Kentucky? In 1898 the association convened at Margaret Hill Church. Elders Boaz, Cleveland, Darnell, Davis, Hardy, Perkins, Turner and Williams were present and the association made no difference between them, but by ballott preached all but Boaz. The next year (1899) the association convened at Flat Creek Church, and Elders Cleveland, Davis, Hardy, Jenkins, J. V and A. M. Kirkland, Perkins, Reeder, Stuckey, Turner, Todd and Wallace were there; and the association, by ballot, preached Cleveland, Davis, Jenkins, Perkins, Reeder and Turner and ignored all the others. Elders J. N. Wallace, J. B. Hardy, J. V Kirkland and others begged and plead for the association to remain together, just as the brethren did here. The association adjourned in peace and never met together again. Now can you tell what divided them? It was not "Absolutism," for the "Absoluters" were in the majority, as you can see by them preaching the "Absolute" preachers and ignoring the others. But what was the cause of the division? Before the association convened in 1900, Elder Chandler was excluded from Salem Church upon the testimony of seven members for lying. Elders Morgan and Clark came to the church and tried to lord it over her by trying to force his restoration, which resulted in the exclusion of nine others. Then Morgan and Clark gathered the excluded parties together, and all that they could lead from the other churches of that association, and refused to meet at the place appointed for the association to convene, but assembled at another place and declared non-fellowship for all who would not go with them into their disorder. And the "Absoluters" of Kentucky, Tennessee and Illinois, who had raised bars against their brethren, joined with them. And again we had no alternative but to discard their actions and have no connection with them, as advised in the general address of the brethren at Fulton. Were we justified in our course in Kentucky in observing the advice of the brethren at Fulton? If so, we also are justified in our course here in Arkansas in observing their advice. But again you say, "Thus it is seen that Elder Shain and his people in Kentucky will not, or do not, recognize the 'Absoluters' there but recognize them here in Arkansas. We wonder if that suits his corresponding editors?" No, Brother Cayce, this is not a matter of recognizing "Absoluters" either in Kentucky or here in Arkansas; but it is a matter of observing the advice of that large assembly of Baptists which convened at Fulton for the purpose of checkmating the raising of unlawful bars of fellowship among the Primitive Baptists and of recognizing the orderly Baptists according to their advice after such bars had been raised. No doubt this exactly suits Elder Shain's corresponding editors and the Primitive Baptists generally, for many of them sat in this council and joined in giving this advice. Surely observing their advice suits them; if it does not, I would be at a loss to know what would. None of our people teach or believe that God is in any way responsible for sin. But we believe and teach that all sin is dictated by the devil and performed by man entirely without any influence or approval of God whatsoever. In short, we believe and adhere to the doctrine of predestination as set forth in the London Confession of Faith. And if any of our ministers should advocate it stronger than that he would be dealt with as an heretic. Now as to Elder Bozarth, he came to Arkansas as you say, from Kentucky. Soon after coming here he got into trouble with----- (not on doctrine) and then flew to Pine Grove Church for an asylum, pleading that his reason for coming up here to us for membership was because he had known me and some others of the members of Pine Grove Church for eighteen or twenty years. He stated when he came that the trouble between him and----- had been settled. He proposed to join by relation, stating before the church that Antioch Church in Kentucky, where his membership was, had gone into disorder and was tolerating secret orders. Pine Grove Church required him to obtain a letter from Antioch Church, nevertheless, which he did, and it is in the hands of Pine Grove Church now. Soon after Elder Bozarth joined Pine Grove Church we received intelligence from----- church that the trouble had not been settled. Pine Grove Church appointed a committee to accompany Elder Bozarth and sent him to adjust the matter. But instead he only made it worse. Brother and Sister Poole, of the Highland Association in Kentucky, of which Antioch Church is a member, visited Pine Grove Church and informed us that Antioch Church was neither in disorder nor tolerated secret orders, upon which Pine Grove Church excluded Elder Bozarth for lying; and the correspondence you have published in your paper followed. And when Antioch Church learned the truth of the matter the publication in Elder Shain's paper was the result. You say you have received Bozarth and hold him in your union. Now, my brother, surely you can see "where you are at." If it is disorder in Kentucky to receive and hold in fellowship one excluded from another church for lying, it is also disorder to do so here in Arkansas. And we will not tolerate any such procedure either here or there. Nor will Elder Shain and his people. Why should not they recognize us? We are one people. Now, my brother, justice and truth demand that you give this space in your paper. And if anything that I have written be disputed, all I ask is space and I shall delight to bring forth the proof. May God give us a spirit of love and forbearance, and may we labor for peace among the afflicted people of God. "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God." Yours for truth and order, J. B. Hardy. Rison, Ark.

OUR REPLY TO ABOVE

In our issue of July 1, 1922, we published an article under the heading, "Where are we at?" concerning the matter of Elder S. C. Bozarth being received by the church at Cane Creek, in Thornton, Ark., and then getting a letter of dismissal from that church and now holding membership in our church here in Fordyce; that he came here from the Highland Association in Kentucky-Antioch Church. He united with Pine Grove Church, with Elder J. B. Hardy. Antioch Church said in the article published in Elder Shain's paper that she would respect the act of Pine Grove in excluding Elder Bozarth. That brought us to ask the question, "Where are we at?" Brother D. F. Siria, of Madisonville, Ky., as clerk of Antioch Church sent us a reply to our article, dated July 24, 1922. Soon after we received that we had a letter from Elder J. B. Hardy also in reply to our article. We expected to publish both of them right away, but Elder Hardy came to our office and asked for his article as he wished to revise it. We gave it to him, and he revised the same and sent the revised article to us after some weeks-that is, some weeks after we received the letter from Brother Siria. Then we were so pressed attending to matters that could not be postponed, and having been away from home a great deal, the whole thing has gone until now without appearing in the paper. Now we feel that the letters both require some notice from us. They appear elsewhere in this paper. We have but little to say with reference to what is contained in the letter from Brother Siria. Brother Bozarth presented to Cane Creek Church the certificate that he had been dismissed from Antioch by letter in good standing. Cane Creek did not expect him to present the original letter. They understood what had been done with that. Brother Siria admits that Brother Bozarth informed them that he had got in among the Absoluters. The proper information, then, was given to Antioch Church by Brother Bozarth. As to whether this be true, remember that it is stated by Elder Hardy that Elder Keith, from Kentucky, helped to organize Pine Grove Church. One of the elders in Elder Hardy's own association made a charge against them that the church was not organized in order because they had a "Conditionalist" in the presbytery that organized them. Elder Keith was that "Conditionalist," as he is not identified with those in Kentucky who advocate unlimited predestination. Now, the sum of the matter is that in the article in Elder Shain's paper Antioch Church said that she expected to recognize the act of Elder Hardy's church (Pine Grove) in excluding Elder Bozarth, thus recognizing a church that is in an association here in Arkansas that are recognized as unlimited predestinarians-that is, they are recognized here as "Absoluters," and those who differ from them and reject that doctrine are called "Conditionalists" by them, just as Antioch Church in Kentucky is called that by those who are recognized as "Absoluters" there. If they do that, then they do not recognize here in Arkansas those who reject the doctrine that God decreed sin, and do recognize those who hold that God did decree sin, or that He predestinated all things that come to pass. Candidly, we think Antioch Church is under obligation to rescind her act of saying she would recognize the act of Pine Grove, or else recognize the "Absoluters" in Kentucky and Tennessee, as well as in Arkansas, and elsewhere. We now notice Elder Hardy's letter. He refers to what was said on pages 8 and 9 of the meeting of ministers in Fulton, Ky., in 1900, but does not begin his quotation with the beginning of the paragraph. They said: "Bars of fellowship set up by our local churches have been the most destructive influences against the growth and progress of the church. Traditions of men and human customs being regarded as authority have often given rise to bars of fellowship and resulted in the destruction of the peace of the churches. Such customs and traditions as have no Bible sanction should never interfere with fellowship. It is painful to note on the pages of history how frequently our people have been divided and their happiness destroyed by foolish and sinful declarations of non-fellowship." Then follows what Elder Hardy quoted from page 8. This shows very clearly that what they protested and advised against was the passing of declarations of non-fellowship concerning matters of local custom and tradition. In our travels among the churches we have seen certain things done one way in one locality and done another way in another locality. It was the same thing done but in a different way in the two places. These two ways of doing the same thing are local customs, about which there should be no declaration of non-fellowship. Elder Hardy quotes a part of what they say. on page 9 concerning heresy. They enumerate some things which are not heresy. They say: "The Bible does not state the day nor the hour upon which members shall be received in the church, nor the Lord's supper administered. It mentions neither hymn-books, associations, formal letter correspondence, nor general handshaking. So upon all such matters liberty should be allowed, provided that everything is done in decency and in order, and the books used are sound in sentiment." This shows just what matters they advised liberty upon, and advised against the raising of bars to fellowship concerning. Elder Hardy quotes from page 10," No doctrine that violates neither the Scripture nor acknowledged confession should be construed as heresy." He also quotes a part of Chapter III, Sec. 1, of the confession to show that the doctrine of the "Absolute predestination of all things" is not "a violation of the acknowledged confession." Here is what he quotes, and he stops just where all do who try to prove by that confession that the absolute predestination of all things is Old Baptist doctrine: "God hath decreed in Himself from all eternity, by the most wise and holy counsel of His own will, freely and unchangeably, all things whatsoever come to pass;" -there he stopped-not at a period, or the end of a sentence, but at a semicolon. If Elder Hardy does not believe in the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things, good, bad, and indifferent, why would he thus quote a part of that sentence to prove that doctrine to be according to the confession? But let us go on with the sentence," yet so as thereby is God neither the author of sin, nor hath fellowship with" any therein, nor is violence offered to the will of the creature, nor yet is the liberty or contingency of second causes taken away, but rather established, in which appears His wisdom in disposing all things, and power and faithfulness in accomplishing His decree." The reader will please take particular notice to the word contingency, as used in this section. Contingency is a "quality or state of being contingent." Contingent means "liable, but not certain, to occur; possible. * * * Dependent (upon a preceding event or situation); subject to something else; conditioned or conditional; as, peace contingent upon complying with the proffered terms." So says Webster's International Dictionary, standard authority on the definition of words in the English language. Thus it is clear that the writers of that confession of faith held that God had predestinated some things upon certain conditions. For instance, the Lord says, "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land." The Lord predestinated that they should eat the good of the land conditioned upon their being willing and obedient. "But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured by the sword." His predestination that they should be devoured by the sword was conditioned upon them refusing and rebelling. We believe that chapter and section of the London confession of faith; but those who deny that there are any conditions in these matters do not believe it. There is an "Appendix" in the back part of that book put out by authority of that Fulton meeting, and on pages 88 and 89 we find this language: "We do not believe that God has unconditionally, unlimitedly, and equally predestinated righteousness and unrighteousness. It is our belief that God has positively and effectually predestinated the eternal salvation of His people which were chosen in Christ before time." On page 101 we find this language: "We believe the Scriptures teach that there is a time salvation received by the heirs of God distinct from eternal salvation, which does depend upon their obedience. The people of God receive their rewards for obedience in this life only. We believe that the ability of the Christian is the unconditional gift of God." Elder Hardy's name is signed to this article which is published as an appendix to what was said by those assembled at Fulton in 1900. Does Elder Hardy believe what is here stated? If so, why did he argue a few years ago that there is nothing gained by obedience and nothing lost by disobedience? On pages 102 and 103 we find this language: "We think these uses of good works Scriptural. We hold that God's government of His people is moral. We hold, too, that conditionality is an essential element of moral government. We distinguish between God's government of mind and His government of matter." Notice that they say that conditionality is an essential element of moral government, and that God's government of His people is moral. Do the people Elder Hardy is identified with hold to the things here quoted, and that are signed by J. B. Hardy? NO. Do they believe that there are blessings which the child of God enjoys here in time upon condition of their obedience? No. As to whether the doctrine that God did from all eternity absolutely and unconditionally predestinate everything that comes to pass, we are willing to let just about two passages from God's word settle the matter. But in the first place we will say, without fear of successful contradiction, that the preaching of the truth, the preaching of the gospel in its purity, has never caused trouble or division in the Old Baptist Church. Advocating the doctrine of the predestination of all things does cause trouble among them. This is enough to prove that it is not the truth. But we call attention to (Jeremiah 7:8-10) "Behold, ye trust in lying words that cannot profit. Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not; and come and stand before me in this house, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations?" Then in (Jeremiah 7:15-16), "And I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim. Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession to me: for I will not hear thee." Those people were guilty of committing abominations and then claiming that they were delivered to do those things. The idea of their claim is that God determined and fixed that they should do them and that they could not do otherwise. Their claim was wrong, and God said that He would cast them out of His sight. Next we refer to (Jeremiah 19:5) "They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal, which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind." In (Jeremiah 7:31) He says, "neither came it into my heart." Now we will give any man until the next day after the Judgment to tell how God did from all eternity absolutely and unconditionally predestinate and fix a thing that never came into His heart or mind. In The Primitive Baptist of August 29, 1916, on page 8 is a letter signed by Elder J. B. Hardy, written to Mrs. Tom Taylor. Just over that letter we said: "If he wants recognition among orderly Baptists he should get himself straight, and no orderly Baptist should want to recognize him until he does that. We feel it a duty we owe our brethren to let these things be known. We have nothing personal against Elder Hardy, and our only intention and desire is that people be consistent." Here is a little extract from Elder Hardy's letter. It was dated September 8, 1903: "Sister Rogers also informs me that J. S. Newman came to Blum, following me, and told you that I was agreed with him in doctrine, and offered this as a pretext to induce you to unite with his party. My sister, do not suffer yourself to be deceived.. I am not agreed with J. S. Newman, neither in doctrine nor practice. * * * My father and I are perfectly agreed with my brother who was with me at your place, and J. S. Newman is not agreed with either of us; and he should not seek to thus deceive you. I was at the Fulton meeting, but did not endorse all they did there; and they published my name in connection with their work, without my consent." This is enough to show where Elder Hardy stood at that time. Most all know where his brother stands in doctrine, and he says that they stand together. He also says that he objected to some things done at the Fulton meeting. Elder Newman was not at that meeting, but we were. If Elder Hardy raised any public objection to a thing that was done there we have no recollection of it. He may have done so, but if he did we do not remember it. Anyway, as he said he did not endorse it all, he is trying to prove that we are now wrong in our course by a witness that he will not himself receive. Therefore, his whole contention falls. We have sustained all that we have done. As to the personal difference between Elder Bozarth and one of Elder Hardy's brethren, will say that as our people and Elder Hardy's people have no dealings or correspondence with each other, and are not considered to be the same people, that matter was not to be considered by any of our churches. It hardly appears consistent, though, that Elder Bozarth went to Pine Grove for an "asylum," on account of having a personal difference with one of Elder Hardy's brethren. He could have allowed his membership to remain in Antioch Church in Kentucky as an easier way to avoid trouble on that line. Elder Bozarth moved here from Kentucky in 1918. He was granted a letter from Antioch Church in September, 1919. Elder Bozarth knew Elder Hardy, as Elder Hardy has been visiting the country in Kentucky for years where he came from. Elder Bozarth told them at Pine Grove when he joined there that Antioch and Tirza churches had been in the Cypress Creek Association, and had notified that association that they would meet with them no more until they rid themselves of secret orders, but that when he was last at that association, in the fall before he moved to this country in the spring, they still held Antioch on their roll, and asked them how they would want to receive him. Elder Hardy told him they would receive him by relation, which they did, but told him to write back and get a letter, anyway. This he did and turned the letter to them. Before we organized our church here in Fordyce and before Elder Bozarth joined Cane Creek, he met Elder Hardy here in town and Elder Hardy said, "I understand you have gone into an organization of a thing here with Elder Cayce," and that "The Baptists here will not recognize Elder Cayce." Elder Bozarth told him it was not true, but that we were talking of organizing a church, and that if it was done he would be one of them. Elder Hardy replied, "Yes, and we will exclude you, too." Elder Bozarth replied that he did not care. Elder Bozarth had been told that there had been a division in this country some years before, but that the other side (our people) were Conditionalists and advocated conditions in salvation, etc. When we moved here and met Elder Bozarth he found out for certain that these Baptists called "Conditionalists" by those people did not hold that there were conditions to be performed by the sinner in order to eternal life, but conditions to be performed by the children of God in order to their happiness here on earth, in a great measure. Elder Hardy's church (Pine Grove) did not receive Elder Bozarth on the letter from Antioch Church, but received him on confession of faith. Cane Creek Church received him on the letter, upon certificate from Antioch that such letter had been granted to him dismissing him from her when joined to another church of the same faith and order. Cane Creek was informed that Antioch Church was in the Highland Association, and that the Highland does not hold to the predestination of all things. Cane Creek knew the identity of Pine Grove. We never put our membership in any church in this country until we organized our church here in Fordyce on Thursday before the third Sunday in October, 1920. Elder Hardy says that we put ourselves out of the holy church communion because we aligned ourselves with the party that we did in this country. We attended a church that was in line with him on the third Sunday in November, 1919. They had some visiting brethren present, and we were requested to preach, and tried to do so, the best we could. We have heard that the visitors requested it. We were at the same church again in December, 1919, and they said we should not preach there. This was before we had put our membership with any party here. Then who did the rejecting? Where is your holy church communion? As to what caused the division in this country we have to say that Cane Creek, Mt. Paran and Harmony Churches have all said by their act in conference that the advocating of that doctrine was what caused the division. Elder Hardy makes an attack on Elder Little in his article, and Elder Little is now dead and not here to speak for himself. We knew Elder Little personally, and we know that the division was not on account of some other brother being elected moderator. We talked with him in regard to this trouble or division a number of times while he was living, and he told us more than once that advocating the predestination of all things was the cause of the trouble. Now we are sure that there is a misunderstanding in regard to Elder Bozarth so far as him telling Pine Grove that Antioch was in disorder is concerned. We do not think Elder Bozarth meant to leave such an impression. It is not necessary to make any defense of Elder Bozarth in this article, for he is clear of any guilt, and that matter has nothing to do with the subject we have under discussion, anyway. As already stated, it is simply a matter of whether Antioch Church, in the Highland Association, in Kentucky, Elder J. D. Shain's people, will recognize the Absoluters in this country and reject them at home or not. That is the question. We think that if they do not intend to do that, they should say by their act that they recognize what our people have done in receiving Elder Bozarth from them and do not recognize Pine Grove's act in receiving him on confession of faith and then excluding him. C. H. C.

WHAT ELDER LITTLE SAID

We think justice demands that we here insert a letter written by Elder Little which was published in The Primitive Baptist of May 1, 1923: Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-I notice in the last issue of The Primitive Baptist an article from Elder J. B. Hardy in which he makes an attack on Elder T. B. Little as to what divided Brother Little's association, and as Brother Little is dead and not here to speak for himself, I am sending you a letter that I received from him about three years ago. He stated in his letter what divided his association. Please publish Brother Little's letter in your next issue of The Primitive Baptist if you can. Your little brother, I hope, A. J. Breece. Centerville, Tenn.

THE LETTER

A. J. Breece:

Dear Brother, as I humbly hope-On my return home yesterday I found your good letter of the 24th. The tone of your letter made me hope that we are spiritually related, but often fear that I am mistaken. I love the doctrine that gives God all the honor and all the glory in the salvation of sinners; but I hate the doctrine of fate. I cannot believe that God predestinated all sin and wickedness. I did not learn it that way in my experience, and if that is the truth we would have nothing to repent of. Yes, brother, the doctrine that "God absolutely predestinated all things that come to pass," including sin and wickedness, caused the division in our association. The "absolute wing" of New Hope Association have been in war among themselves ever since we have been divided, and I often try to thank God that we are out of it, and in peace. Elder Hardy made an effort to get us together three or four years ago, but it failed. The "Absoluters" were willing to unite with us without any acknowledgments, but we could not afford to act so hypocritically. Elder Hardy was so bitterly opposed to what he called "bars" that he never would go behind "bars," unless it was iron "bars." He (Hardy) said in his talk that he believed in "unlimited predestination." Since that time he joined in with those that our association withdrew from ten years ago. We teach and believe the doctrine of election, predestination, and all points of doctrine and practice, just as it is revealed in our Bible, without adding anything. It is good enough for us poor ignorant Baptists. The council you refer to, I only heard something said about it. Of course none of the Old Baptists that I am identified with were in that council. As before stated, it was a war among themselves. It doesn't matter who says that our association did not divide on the question of predestination, it is not the truth. I was a member of the church several years before the contention over predestination arose among us. I was in the unholy war among us until love and fellowship was gone. We could not believe that a just and righteous God predestinated all of our sins and unrighteous acts. All the guns were turned against me, because I was the oldest man among us contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. Some would say, "He will go to the Missionaries; he is tender-footed on predestination; he is a Conditionalist." I have been misrepresented by "Absoluters" -falsely accused-but sometimes I can rejoice in it all. Would be glad to know that I am worthy to suffer such things for Christ's sake. Dear brother, you can tell those brethren, that are confused by Hardy or anyone else, that the unscriptural doctrine that God absolutely predestinated all things that come to pass, including sin, was the cause of the division in our association, and if any says it was not, he makes a false statement, or he doesn't know anything about it. As to what they hold to, they do like they used to most of the time-they preach the old doctrine pretty well, but in their private talk they preach predestination of all things. We can't fellowship a man that will hold back his real view. The Scripture locates them. Dear brother, this letter is scattering. Hope you can understand enough to have some idea whether we belong to the same family. Love to you and yours, and saints everywhere. Remember wife and me in prayer. I am, I hope, a brother in spirit. Write again if you feel like it. T. B. Little. Rison, Ark., ---March 30, 1920.

Call For Meeting

---April 1, 1923

In as much as we, the undersigned, are more thoroughly convinced that in the late controversy over the subject of regeneration there was not sufficient difference to justify confusion and division, and having a great desire for peace and union, we therefore urge all our brethren concerned for the welfare of our bleeding cause to come together at the Greenfield Church, Greenfield, Tenn., on Friday before the fifth Sunday in April (continuing the two days following) for the purpose of general confession; the object of said meeting being not to make any demands nor to bring in any charges regarding the past, but to make confessions to each other, blotting out the past, and coming together in peace, love and fellowship. All who desire peace and union, we urge that you come. We suggest that each church enable your pastor to attend, by bearing his expenses. Signed: Elders J. C. Ross, A. B. Ross, E. M. Beshear, W. E. Brush, J. N. Wallace, James Duncan, W. P. Russell, W. A. Bishop, J. M. Fuqua, B. P. Simmons, Commodore Brann, J. W. Lomax, S. E. Reid, Henry Ross, J. B. Halbrook, W. L. Murray, J. W. Adams, W. J. Goodrich, J. H. Phillips, J. D. Shain, T. M. Hampton, T. M. Phillips, Allen McCoy, W. R. Rush-ton, H. M. Sanders, Z. Stallings, J. S. Williams, Brother Billie Phillips. We feel to believe and hope that the meeting as above called will be a great meeting, and that lasting good will be accomplished by it. We indeed believe it important that all who desire peace may lay aside all things else and come. We are sure that nothing could be of more importance than our earnest labors for peace. We beg that you come and join in one united effort to this end. We believe that God will bless us in this labor of love. J. C. and A. B. Ross.

LETTER OF APPROVAL

Elder A. B. Ross:

My Dear Brother-I wish to say to you that I, with all my heart, most sincerely endorse the effort now being put forth by you and other brethren for peace. I feel sure that God is our peace, and that He will and has worked in the hearts of many of His ministers and made them willing to say to their God and to each other, "We have done wrong." Brethren, do let us meet in the name of Jesus, and leave self and selfish motives behind.

We have all done wrong, and as a result the children of God are divided and many of our friends, and even our children, are being driven from us. Oh, how our hearts should yearn for peace to be restored in the borders of our beloved Zion. We should be willing and anxious to do all we can that the breach be healed. For this let us meet, labor and pray. J. S. Newman.

Elder C. H. Cayce:

The above is a copy of a letter written by Elder Newman to Elder A. B. Ross. Will you please publish the call for all of our brethren to meet at Greenfield, Tenn., as shown in the call, and please publish the above copy (letter) in connection with it. And, if you can, sign this call with us and come to the meeting. Yours for the peace of Zion, J. C. Ross.

REMARKS

We truly hope that the brethren who join in the above and who may attend the meeting may have the right object in view, and that the good Lord may direct the same to the good of His dear children. Our pleading in the whole time was for peace. We want no war and no trouble, and we do not want it now. If those who have waged the war are tired of it and now want peace they have our hearty approval, although we do not feel like signing the above call. May the Lord bless us all. C. H. C.

A Call For Prayer And For Peace

---April 1, 1923 (From Gospel Messenger by request.)

"If ye bite and devour one another take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." -(Galatians 5:15). We, the undersigned, having the warmest Christian love for each other, and who feel to be called of God to the same holy work of preaching the precious gospel, but who, by reason of bars of non-fellowship and misunderstandings, cannot preach together nor affiliate together as brethren in Christ, and having groaned under this burden, and knowing also that there are hundreds of other precious ministers and brethren who are also distressed over the disturbed condition of our beloved Zion; and after much study and fervent prayer to the Almighty Father for relief, have mutually decided to bring the matter before our brethren everywhere and to advise with them over present conditions, with the earnest hope that, under the guiding hand of God, we may have peace and fellowship to abound once more with all who truly love His name. We believe with all our hearts that the Primitive Baptists are the only people now upon earth, so far as we are aware, who hold uncompromisingly to the apostolic doctrine of "salvation by grace." And in so far as we are aware, all the many contending factions of Primitive Baptists throughout the land stand united in the doctrine of grace, but are unhappily divided on other matters. It is our firm belief that while there may be some heresies among some few of these factions which we should not fellowship, that by far the greater part are united on the essentials of the Bible, but have allowed minor differences to sever their fellowship. We believe that the present disturbed conditions are very largely the result of misunderstandings which might be corrected if our brethren everywhere could meet together in the Spirit of Christ and discuss their differences face to face. Otherwise, and so long as they are away from each other and not allowed to assemble themselves together, there can be no hope for the betterment of conditions. It is for these reasons that we offer suggestions for the prayerful consideration of brethren everywhere. That a general council, or meeting, be held during the summer or fall of the present year, in the city of Atlanta, or Nashville, or in whatever place is thought to be most convenient to all concerned, in which all various sects and divisions of Primitive Baptists in the United States and Canada shall be invited, and shall be allowed to discuss with equal rights and privileges the questions of differences now existing, with the earnest hope and prayer that God may so sanctify such meeting that all who truly love His precious truth may fall into each other's arms of tender, gospel fellowship. We are now calling upon our ministers especially, and to all who love the peace of Zion throughout the United States and Canada, to indicate to us their desire in this matter. It will be understood that nothing that may be done in such meeting, should it be held, will be considered official or binding, but only for the purpose of discovering to each other, in an educational way, the true conditions as they now seem to exist, whether real or imaginary. The foregoing are only suggestions. We do not profess to know just what is best. Certainly we do not mean to dictate the course to pursue. We know, however, that we as a denomination need to do something. We need not wait for the Lord to do it for us, for we are certain that we have gone away from Him-He did not send us away; and as the prodigal son, if we have "come to ourselves" -if we have suffered enough, let us return to the Father's house and receive the blessings which are there in store for us. It is further requested that should it be thought best that such meeting be held, that the place and time of holding it be named, so that we may be able to compile and announce the wishes of our dear people. We respectfully ask if it would not be desirable, if after the meeting is called, that a committee be appointed representing all the different factions represented in the meeting, so far as they may be able, who may be charged with the duty of naming the various points for discussion, and outlining a program by which the meeting shall be conducted. We request a reproduction of these suggestions in all our denominational papers throughout the United States. Oh, dear brethren, everywhere, humble yourselves before the Lord. Get down on your knees and earnestly inquire His will, and then write us the answer He gives you. Let all answers be addressed to Elder Zack C. Hull. Atlanta National Bank Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., or Elder A. V Simms. P. O. Box 601, Atlanta, Ga.

OUR COMMENTS

On another page of this paper is an article copied from the Gospel Messenger, by request, under the heading, "A Call For Prayer and For Peace." This may be the proper thing to do-hold such a meeting as is suggested or called for in the article, but for the life of us we do not yet see it. We do not remember having read in the Scriptures where the church of God, or her ministers, are directed to have a meeting of that sort. Perhaps the instruction to meet often together and to pray with and for each other covers the case; but if so, it appears to us that our people are rather late in finding it out. Perhaps they have been too slow, anyway. We do not say that such a meeting is unauthorized by the Scriptures, but we do not know what text does authorize it. If our people wish to take part in it, we shall raise no disturbance about it; but we are not prepared now to give it our sanction. It is true that there is something for the Lord's people to do. There is something for the church to do. They should keep themselves unspotted from the world. God's people in ancient times were forbidden to join house to house and field to field with the nations around them," so that there be no place left in all the earth for my people, saith the Lord." When the church of God engages in the things that the world engages in, so that they can scarcely be told from the world by their practices, they cease to be the church of God-there is no place left for the Lord's people. The church of God existed for centuries without any society or institution but the church. The Fuller and Carey move called for the different things that have been invented by their followers. Organs were introduced into churches. Sunday schools were organized. Aid societies were organized. Mission societies were organized. Mite societies were organized. And so on and on. Elder A. V Simms, whose name is signed to the appeal we are writing about, is one of the leading men in the progressive move that divided the Baptists in Georgia and other sections. The Progressives have Sunday schools, or Bible classes-the same thing. The Burnam people introduced that thing years ago and divided the Baptists. The meeting house in Luray, Va., was given to our people on account of the fact that they held to the original principles and practices when Burnam and his party brought the division there by the introduction of those things which were a departure from the original principles and practices of the Baptists. Many of the Progressives have organs in their churches. They have simply departed from the original principles of the Primitive Baptists. This progressive move was started in Elder J. V Kirkland's day, and while the Kirklands, Todd, Hackle-man, Pinkstaff, and others of them were among us. That meeting at Fulton, Ky., in 1900, which we attended, was first called for by Kirkland and those who were aligned with him. They had another (a few of them did) about a year later in St. Louis. Many of our people remember that meeting and what it resulted in. Although we attended the meeting at Fulton, and never raised any objections to it, yet we confess that we never did fully approve of it. We really felt in our heart that something was wrong. The address printed in the proceedings of that meeting we think was mainly gotten up by some of the Kirklands. At that time our people were not, many of them, suspicious of anything wrong; but the moves made afterwards show to us that they were paving the way for the work they had in view. That address lays particular stress on what would now be called a broad fellowship. Our people then did not suspect that such a thing was really intended. But Elder Kirkland was then evidently laying his plans for a uniting of our people with a faction of the Missionaries. Such a meeting savors to us of preacher rule. It savors of preachers being of higher authority. As long as we have preachers ruling, instead of churches ruling, we will have trouble. There is always some preacher who wants his way, and if he is not controlled by his church he will cause trouble. If a church exercises her God-given right, and a preacher begins to make war on the church for that act, his church should stop him at once.

She should call him down immediately, and if he will not cease his war, then deal with him. Where a man loses a thing is the place to find it. There has already been entirely too much of this interference with the churches in their work. We want peace in the church upon the principles of truth and righteousness. We would be glad to see all of God's people united and in peace, practicing just what the Bible commands, and leaving all other things alone. If some people have departed from those principles, is there not a right way to come back to them? So far as we are concerned, we feel that we have not departed from those principles. We have not gone anywhere, and so we feel that there is no coming back for us to do. We do not say it boastfully, but we, trust in all due humility and reverence, but we do say that if any man thinks we have departed from the principles of truth, we stand ready to defend those principles. Put us to the test. The man does not live before whose face we fear to contend for the principles upon which we have stood during all these years. If some people have gone from those principles there is a way for them to get back. The only right and the only Scriptural way is for them to confess their wrongs and turn from them. A confession is worth very little unless one turns from the wrongs. Suppose we suggest now that we call for another meeting also. There are many of those who are identified with the Missionary Baptists who are sound on the doctrine of salvation by grace. We could name some of them who are, if it were necessary, but we presume no one would deny it. Now, suppose we call for a meeting with such persons among them to see if we cannot come to some understanding with them. Why not try to unite with them also? Where shall we draw the line? Where shall we stop? If there are some brethren among the Progressives who want to get right, we would be glad to see them lay down their inventions and get right-come back to the place they went away from. And if there should be some of God's people among the Missionaries, or among others, for that matter, who want to get right, let them come to the old church, which is standing today where she has always stood, and get right. May the good Lord direct us all in the right way, and then give us the Christian courage to walk there, and preserve and keep us all by His own grace and power, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Request Granted

---April 15, 1923

Dear Brother Cayce: Yours to hand, and can't even attempt to tell you the comfort it is to me and will be for years to come, for I placed it in my "Jewel box" among other like precious "gems," and these, with my Bible and song book, are the dearest possessions I have. Often it seems trials and temptations are pressing me down, never to rise again, and then for hours I admire my "Jewels" -for they are direct to poor me and from those whom I esteem highly for the truth's sake, and I am renewed, built up, and can feast and often even praise God, who doeth all things well and can comfort the lonely, the weak and sinful, as well as the strong and the mighty. While I'd never tire of your good letters, Brother Cayce, I am not expecting you should take your valuable time keeping up a correspondence with poor me, but know you have comforted me in time of need, perhaps more than you can ever know. May God's richest blessings rest upon you and yours. Please remember any time you have a thought for this lonely beggar here that a line is much to me-just a crumb to the hungry is more than a laden table to the full. Neither did I ever intend to be so situated as I am; that was the least of my intentions, and by the help and grace of God, it is the least of my intentions to stay so situated. If it is not asking too much, Brother Cayce, please pray that I don't have to. We are working hard and economizing to pay off mortgages incurred by doctor bills and sickness, and then we hope to manage to get back down South among you precious "feet-washing Baptists" to live and die; for if the mercies of God ever permit me to again enjoy church privileges, you dear people will have to put me out if I am ever again deprived of that, for five hundred doctors telling me I'd die would never scare me out into the cold, cold world again, for I want to die among you, be buried by you, and the last words spoken over this lump of clay to be by you dear humble, poor, God-fearing and God-glorifying followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. Please don't you or anyone draw the idea from my unworthy scribbling that we have not dear humble Baptists here, for there are some of the loveliest Baptists in the world here God bless them -just, come and visit among them and see. A lack of unity in faith and church practice is what deprives many a lonely wretch of a home and makes them an outcast among their own people, which surely is one of the most miserable existences one ever was placed in. My mission in this Northwest is not to try to straighten out churches-that is none of my affair-I have no "finger" in it; that is their own business. Now this is the way I look at that, but it is some of my business, at least, as to whether I come in among them or not; and if I can't be allowed to stay peaceably on the outside, I believe it is not only my business but my duty to show where I stand and try to defend what I firmly believe is the truth. "Offenses will arise, but woe unto him by whom they come." That is one "woe," by the help and grace of God, I am determined not to be guilty of, and this determination caused me to suffer a "knockdown" instead of taking the many "hints" already given; but when I marvel at the strong hand that pushed me up, and that bright light and what it manifested to me, stunning my senses, casting a dark cloud of despair over me and killing the joy of soul that was mine-I can say with you, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him," for I know now He was with me then. Dear Brother Cayce, if you found anything worthy to print in my personal letter all right, and if not a bother, that this might be an explanation to others, please print this, and if I can keep silent for awhile I'll try to do so. Now when I get the dear Primitive Baptist paper usually the first thing I do is to turn through and look for all the C. H. C's. and read all pieces thus signed first, and feeling many others do likewise, and as I find them only too few, am going to enclose your two first letters, and if you do not object I feel sure they would be found far more interesting and instructive than anything of my weak pen. The only request, return them to go back into my "Jewel box." Stamps enclosed for same, and later, if desired, I'll lend this last letter for publication also. Not through reading it yet-there is so much witnessing of the Spirit to me that I marvel and ponder and wonder-comparatively strangers in the flesh, and we have no Sunday schools. Now is there but one way we could have learned these same sweet truths? When the Spirit directed me to write (I believe I know now it was the Spirit) it was in an hour of the deepest need, it seems, I ever suffered, and had you not answered spiritually from your own bountiful storehouse of God-given knowledge, it is a mystery to me yet how I'd lived through it; but a few evenings back suddenly that gloom left me. I arose from my chair and could have shouted aloud for pure joy of soul. I have sung the sweet songs of Zion here all alone and am calm-reconciled to whatsoever God permits to befall me here in this time world, knowing all things are in His hands and He works out His will and pleasure in heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth, and no one can stay His hand or say what doest Thou? Oh, if we can only trust Him and farewell in the Lord. Any humble poor who may read this, please pray for this sinned wretch here, whom the tempest blows and seems will capsize her frail bark to never rise again; but God can of these very stones raise up seed to Abraham. Only a little over one year ago I was given the greatest feast of my life at the association here. God was with us then; and happy I was to even sacrifice as we did in a financial way just to get here among God's dear people, as I then thought to have a church home among them, and now these hopes lie in ashes at my feet, and for months the gloom of despair has been over me; but now it is gone. Oh, bless His holy name. You said there was room for me among you there, dear Brother Cayce, and I am looking forward to the day I can come. Bless your dear sainted mother and the sweet letter she wrote me-a gem, a ruby without price. I often read it and always feel better and can press on. In bonds of like precious faith, humbly, Mrs. S. D. Poore. Morton, Wash.

Mrs. S. D. Poore:

Dear Sister-Yours of Sept. 25th was received several days ago. The name of the brother has been added to our list and the paper will be sent to him. I trust that the same may be a blessing and a comfort 'to him. I thank you for having us send the paper to him. Neither do I have any fight to make on the Baptists out there. In fact I know but little about them. I once thought I would be glad to visit the brethren in the far west, but do not feel such impression of mind that way as I once did. In fact, I do not have the impression to be on the go as much as I once did. I do not know why. Sometimes I feel that it may be that my race is nearly run and the warfare almost over with me. If that be so, the Lord's will be done. I feel much discouraged a great deal of the time, and a sadness pervades my heart at all times. There is not an hour when awake that I do not feel this distressing sadness. I cannot understand it. I desire to be submissive to the Lord's will and to my lot here. I am wonderfully blessed with a good companion and three sweet little children. But still that deep sadness is in my heart, in spite of the sweet association of my lovely family. The sadness is there, whether I am at home or away-no matter where I am, nor what my business may be. But I am willing to risk the principles for which I have fought and contended for a third of a century. I know that doctrine is true, whether I am embraced in it or not. I am willing to risk it that way. May the good Lord bless and sustain you. We would be glad for you to move here. There is room. Please remember me in your prayers. Yours in humble hope, C. H. Cayce.

SECOND LETTER

Mrs. S. D. Poore:

Dear Sister-Your kind letter of the 16th has been received. Was glad to hear from you again. On reading the part of your letter about me being sick I was made to think of what a doctor once said in my presence. He said that several years ago he felt bad all the time, blue and despondent, and that he thought he had religion; but found out that it was only his liver out of order. Perhaps that is what is the matter with me. If it is, I confess that I do not know what I am to do about it. I cannot leave this section, as you suggest, even if I wished to do so. My business is here, and all I have is invested here. I cannot move the business- am not able to do so, financially, no matter how much I might wish to do so. But let that be as it may-the time will come some day for me to lie down in death. It may be soon, or it may be years yet. I do not know. But I do not think that the condition of affairs in the church or nation will have anything to do with that. My father fell in the pulpit preaching the gospel at a time that it seemed we could not possibly do without him. Why should I be spared any more than he was, when he was so badly needed? I do know that" I have endured much for the principles that I hold to, and that I have tried to defend with the ability that the good Lord has seen fit to give me. I am very well aware of that. And no one person knows how much I have endured unless it be my own family-and perhaps they do not know all. The trials have been severe. The battles have been fierce. I have endured hardness. Many hard things have been said. I have been falsely accused. Men professing to be gospel ministers have sought to injure me in different ways-and they were Old Baptist ministers, too. It all makes me heart sick. It makes me feel cast down and discouraged. It makes me sad-sad all the time. There is a feeling of gloom and sadness that stays with me-no matter how well I may feel physically. I do not feel any physical ailment that is worth mentioning. If I am poisoned with malaria I do not know it, though I may be. Whatever may be the trouble, I am willing to risk the principles I have stood for and advocated during these years. I may not be embraced in them-but they are true just the same. If I am not saved by the grace of God, then I am not saved at all. By his preserving care I have come this far. I am willing to still trust Him. His grace has been sufficient in the sore trials through which I have come, and I am willing to rely on Him for the future. I may never see you again (I think I once knew you), but this is my hope, and my only hope. Yes, I would be glad for you to write me about the trial which you mention. Mother is getting along as well as could be expected. Our little girl, about five years old, is named Florida. Not Flor-i-da, but Flo-ri-da. The little boy is Claudis H., Jr.; the baby is Benjamin Fleming, for his grandfathers. We call him Fleming, for my father. They are sweet children, we think. We try to raise them right. We teach them to speak respectfully and not like many children these days. We realize the great responsibility. Please remember us in your prayers. Would be glad to hear from you any time. May the good Lord bless and keep you. Yours in humble hope, C. H. Cayce.

Matthew 18:8-9, 15-17

---April 15, 1923

We have been asked to give our views on (Matthew 18:8-9,15-16,17). (Matthew 18:8-9) reads: "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire." It seems to us that this language clearly teaches that it is better for the church to cast an offender off, no matter how important that member may appear to us to be, rather than retain that member to the destruction of the body. And the language has direct reference to such matters as are an offense to the body. It has no reference whatever to matters of personal trespass, one member or person against another. Such crimes as drunkenness, lying, stealing, "bootlegging," false swearing, fornication, adultery, and things of that sort, come under the teaching of the Saviour here, and there is no such thing found as instruction to labor with them in order to save or retain them in the church. The only gospel labor to bestow in such cases, the only dealing we can find in the Scriptures for such cases, is to simply cut them off. The church is no reformatory. Such offenders should be promptly excluded from the fellowship of the church. (Matthew 18:15-16,17) reads: "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." This language has reference to personal trespasses, one member or person against another; such matters as personal differences between brethren, not public matters, such as are those things mentioned above. It seems to us that the Saviour's instructions here are so plain and so explicit as to need no comment. We do not know how to make it plainer. But if a brother is hurt with another and he fails and refuses to follow the instruction given here, and feels that he cannot bear it, and talks to others about it, instead of going to the transgressor, he thereby becomes a transgressor himself. It seems to us that many of our churches have become careless and very slack in administering the discipline according to our Saviour's teaching in this chapter. It is better to have a few with strict discipline and be diligent and careful in church matters, than to have a multitude who manifest but little or no care for the service of the Lord and the house of God. C. H. C.

The Debate At Parrish

---April 15, 1923

The debate with Tant at Parrish, Ala., came off as announced. We affirmed for two days-the 13th and 14th of March-that "The church of which I (C. H. Cayce) am a member, known as Primitive Baptists, is Scriptural in origin, doctrine and practice." Then on the 15th and 16th Tant affirmed that "The church of which I (J. D. Tant) am a member, known by my brethren as the Church of Christ, is Scriptural in origin, doctrine and practice." We showed in our affirmative that Jesus established His church, and that there was a succession of them in every age who were a separate and distinct people, advocating and holding to the principles peculiar to the Baptists and differing from Rome. On Tant's proposition we showed that Alexander Campbell was the founder of that order, and that they are Campbellites. We showed this from an abundance of testimony; then we showed from the Scriptures that their doctrine and practice are wrong-contrary to God's word. We introduced fifty-three proof texts against his doctrine and he pretended to notice just four of them-thus forty-nine proof texts and arguments made from them remained unnoticed by him. Our people left there rejoicing.

We are now at the home of Brother H. P. Hamilton. Have enjoyed some good meetings since the debate. We trust the Lord may be with us and enable us to speak such things as may be comforting and encouraging to His humble poor while we are on this tour. We ask an interest in your prayers. C. H. C.

Debate At Watertown, Tenn

---April 15, 1923

We have agreed, the Lord willing, to meet H. B. Taylor, Missionary Baptist, of Murray, Ky., in a four days discussion at Watertown, Tenn., beginning on Tuesday, May 8. One proposition is, "The Scriptures teach that all the elect of God in all nations will be saved independently of or without the gospel as a means." We affirm and Taylor denies. The other proposition is, "Missions as taught and practiced by the Missionary Baptists are authorized by the word of God." Taylor affirms and we deny. Watertown is east of Nashville, Tenn., on the Tennessee Central R. R. We hope many of our brethren may be there. All will be cared for who may go. C. H. C.

Questions On Predestination

---May 1, 1923

We are just in receipt of a few questions on the subject of the absolute predestination of all things, and we will try to answer them to the best of our ability.

Question 1. Did Paul find the word predestination in the Old Testament? Answer: We suppose not, but he found words that express the idea of God's determination to save His people from their sins. Remember, too, that Paul was an inspired man.

Question 2. Do we find the word absolute in the New Testament? Answer: No; it is not found in the whole Bible, and we have no inspired men now. What about adding to? See (Revelation 22:18).

Question 3. Have you or anyone preached for ten minutes without using some words that are not found in the Bible? Answer: If we ever did preach for ten minutes, or any other length of time, and preached something the Bible does not authorize, we then preached something that is not the truth. If any other man ever preached something the Bible does not authorize, he did not preach the truth.

Question 4. Is all the prophecy of the Old and New Testament absolutely true?

Answer: It is all true, and to say it is absolutely true does not make it any more the truth.

Question 5. Is not prophecy of the Old Testament another way of saying predestination? Answer: No; prophecy is not predestination. Prophecy is foretelling an event or events. Predestination is to determine a thing beforehand. A coming event may be foretold without any determination that it shall come to pass on the part of the one foretelling or revealing it.

Question 6. Why turn our back on a man for believing as I do? Answer: If you believe that God did from all eternity absolutely and unconditionally predestinate everything that comes to pass, and your doctrine is the truth, we turn our back on you because God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated from all eternity that we should do it. If your doctrine is not the truth, we turn our back on you because you preach heresy. C. H. C.

Is He An Absoluter?

---May 1, 1923

In our issue of March 15 we showed that Elder J. B. Hardy was advocating the absolute predestination of all things. Last July we stated that he was in line with the Absoluters in this country. Our readers will remember Elder Hardy's article in our issue of March 15, in which he tried to make it appear that the predestination of all things was not the cause of the division in this country, and that he is not in line with that doctrine. We publish below two letters-one from Brother W. A. Womack and one from Elder V R. Harris. Both of these brethren tell in their letter where they stand, and they also tell where Elder Hardy stands. We do not publish these letters for any other purpose only to show where Elder Hardy stands by the testimony of brethren who say, themselves, that they hold to unlimited predestination. Read the letters and judge for yourself. C. H. C.

FROM W. A. WOMACK

A. J. Breece, Centerville, Tenn.

Dear Brother-It has been in my mind for a good while to write you a few lines. I saw a letter that you wrote to Brother Blythe stating that J. B. Hardy was causing trouble among you all. Well, there is only one thing I can say, he sure has caused a lot of trouble over here. Before he came in here we were all in peace one with another. He is a man that wants to rule or ruin. He said here when this trouble started that before he would cause trouble he would get out of the way, but he did not get out of the way. It seems that he worked more (the harder) to carry his point. I suppose that there was a council out there to prove that he was not an "Absoluter." Well, all I know, and that is, he had a council here to prove his standing among the Baptists, and tried to prove that he was not a "Conditionalist" but believed in absolute predestination of all things; and these men that went over there with him are some of the men that went off with him and helped to cause part of the trouble. That man Glover lives about two or three miles from us. Right here is where the trouble first started. We sure have had a hard time. It sure has caused a lot of pain and tears to be shed, and we had to give up our church. I guess we could have got it by going to law for it, but we had rather let them have it than to go to law, because I don't believe that is Scripture. Well, I may be doing wrong in writing to you about it, but I felt like I would just like to write you a few lines. I like to see a body to be just what they are any and everywhere. He would say and do things, and then when you would get after him and then he would deny it, and that don't look good to me among Old Baptists. If a man is a "Conditionalist," let him be a "Conditionalist;" and if he is an "Absoluter," let him be one, and not just try to be on both sides at once. I hope I believe in predestination of all things. Well I will close. I would like to hear from you. From a poor sinner saved by the grace of God, if saved at all. W. A. Womack. Star City, Ark., April 17, 1921.

FROM ELDER V R. HARRIS
Mr. N. J. Hinson, Kimmins, Tenn.

Dear Brother-Your short letter of inquiry to hand regarding Elder J. B. Hardy and his religious positions. Well, I am quite well acquainted with Brother Hardy-been with and preached with him several times. We understand Elder J. B. Hardy to be what is called an unlimited Predestinarian Baptist-one who believes God was before all things and that by Him all things consist, and that Elder Hardy is no "Conditionalist" whatever. Elder Hardy preaches with what is called the unlimited Predestinarian Baptists, of the old London Confession of Faith type. If Elder J. B. Hardy was what is called a "Conditionalist Baptist" he would not have any fellowship with us, for we stand strictly aloof from all "Con-ditionalists," styling all of them "Arminians." If things are conditional in any way, they might all be. So we think all things were predestinated so as that none come by chance. Well, we will not write further, as you may be a "Conditionalist," and that is strictly your business, if you are, and are honest and see that way, but I don't. With kindest regards to you and all who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, I am, your poor unworthy brother, if one,
V R. HARRIS. Fordyce, Ark., Nov. 26, 1920.

Debate With Ben M. Bogard

---May 1, 1923

We have agreed to meet Ben M. Bogard in a discussion at Leedy, Miss., to begin on Tuesday after the third Sunday in July, 1923. Rev. Bogard is the champion of the anti-board faction of the Missionaries, we understand. The identity of the church is what is to be discussed. Leedy is on the I C. Railroad, about fifteen miles from Corinth, Miss., toward Birmingham, Ala. Preparations will be made to care for all who attend the discussion, and we trust many of our brethren and friends may be there. C. H. C.

Apology and Explanation

---May 15, 1923

In our last issue was a letter from Elder A. B. Ross to Elder J. T. Davis with the reply from Elder Davis. This article was in the office several days before the Greenfield meeting and we hardly expected the printer to get to it in time for the last issue of the paper. But when we got home on Monday morning after the meeting the papers were already printed and being mailed with that article in them. We were too late to keep it out. This explains why it was published. We are sorry that it was published, since we attended that meeting and witnessed what transpired there. But we cannot undo it. All we know to do is to express the fact that we are sorry and to beg all who are concerned to forgive and not think hard of us. Brethren, will' you do this? We wrote Elder Ross at once privately, and we hope he will not think hard of us, and that others will not. So far as we are concerned we hope that the trouble is ended, or that the war is over. May the Lord help us to live in peace. C. H. C.

Peace Meeting At Greenfield

---May 15, 1923

We left Winfield, Ala., on Thursday morning, April 26, for Jackson, Tenn., to spend the night with Elder D. Hopper. We had not then fully decided to go to the meeting at Greenfield. On the way to Jackson we met some brethren who were on their way to Greenfield, and at Jackson we met some others. Elder Hopper was at the train to meet another brother. He was not expecting us. We spent the night with him, and our mind was there made up to go on to Greenfield to attend the meeting. We arrived in Greenfield at about 9 o'clock. Several brethren met the train, and they manifested to us very clearly that they were glad to see us there. Right then we began to feel glad that we went. The full minute of the proceedings may be found in this paper. Every brother in the ministry who was present manifested a penitent heart for having ever been engaged in the recent unholy war that started in Texas, spoken of as the whole man doctrine and the hollow log doctrine, and all confessed freely and publicly that they had said and done things that were wrong, and begged forgiveness of every brother who was hurt with them. All personal wrongs and hurts were forgiven, and the brethren all expressed a desire to live together in peace and fellowship, and that they would do all they could to get all irregularities corrected and to get the brethren and churches together where there had been a division. They all expressed a desire to labor to that end. How much better this is than to labor to destroy, and to labor for a following. It looked to us like the dawning of a better day. Our heart was made glad to see such manifestations and expressions of love as were clearly demonstrated during the entire meeting. Surely the Lord manifested His sweet presence. We know that we said in The Primitive Baptist that we did not see fit to sign the call for the meeting. We felt a dread of the result of it. Perhaps it is best that we did not sign the call; but we are glad that we were there. That is the best way we know how to express the feeling we have in regard to it. We believe that much good will result from this meeting. We would be so glad to see all our good brethren united in love and fellowship and standing together in defense of the truth against our common enemies and for the order of God's house. May the Lord help us all to contend for the things that make for peace and for the things that edify and build up the Lord's little children, and never contend for such things as divide them and destroy their peace and fellowship, and that tend to confuse their minds. We need each other, and we all need to walk in the right way. May the Lord help us all to walk in that way that will honor our profession and glorify His name. We desire an interest in the prayers of all our brethren and sisters, that the Lord may sustain and keep us. Brethren, if you see an error in us, please come to us in kindness and show us the wrong. If we err we want to be right. Show us the right way when we go wrong. That will not make us feel that you are our enemy, but that you are our friend. If we are wrong on some minor point, and cannot see the wrong, do not treat us as an enemy on that account. If we are not deceived we love the Old Baptist Church and cause. We feel that we would rather give our life for the cause than for the cause to suffer. May the Lord bless you all, dear brethren; and may we never be alienated again in our feelings as we were. Please do remember us in your prayers. We need your help and expressions of love and fellowship. C. H. C.

Greenfield Meeting

---May 15, 1923

In response to the following call sent out and signed by a number of brethren, the following named brethren in the ministry, besides a number of other brethren and sisters, met at the Primitive Baptist meeting house in Greenfield, Tenn., on Friday morning, April 27, 1923: Inasmuch as we, the undersigned, are more thoroughly convinced that in the late controversy over the subject of regeneration there was not sufficient difference to justify confusion and division, and having a great desire for peace and union, we urge all our brethren concerned for the peace and welfare of our bleeding cause to come together at Greenfield Church, at Greenfield, Tenn., on Friday before the fifth Sunday in April, 1923, for the purpose of general confession. The object of said meeting being not to make any demands nor bring in charges regarding the past, but to make confessions to each other, blotting out the past, and come together in peace, love and fellowship. All who desire peace, we urge that you come. We suggest that each church enable their preacher to come by bearing his expenses. The following named ministers were present: Elders J. D. Shain, W. A. Bishop, James Duncan, J. H. Phillips, Z. Stallings, S. E. Reid, C. H. Cayce, N. V. Parker, J. W. Adams, W. P. Russell, J. W. Lomax, John Grist, W. E. Brush, R. L. Perry, Marshall Perry, J. C. Ross, A. B. Ross, Henry Ross, W. J. Goodrich, J. S. Williams, Commodore Brann, J. B. Halbrook, J. R. Scott, J. A. Pope; Licentiates J. C. Phipps, A. C. Ross, G. W. Hardison. Elder S. E. Reid, of the Predestinarian Association, was appointed to preach, which he did after offering prayer. Elder S. E. Reid was chosen as moderator to preside over the meeting. A statement was made as to the purpose of the meeting, which was not to regulate the churches, but especially for the purpose of the brethren in the ministry coming together, and all who feel to do so to confess their faults one to another, as the Lord has commanded in ((6) (James 5:16)) "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that you may be healed." Then nearly every brother (minister) present arose, one by one, and frankly and freely stated that he had done and said things that were wrong, and asked forgiveness of every brother whom he had wronged in any way. A song was sung and the hand of fellowship extended to each other, amidst shouts of praise and tears of joy, in token of forgiveness of all personal wrongs and a desire to labor together to get all irregularities corrected and to get our good brethren together where they have become separated in this unholy war. The moderator, upon unanimous vote of the body, appointed Elders C. H. Cayce, Jas. Duncan, Z. Stallings and J. D. Shain as a committee to draft a statement for presentation on tomorrow. Adjourned to meet tomorrow morning at 10:30.

SATURDAY MORNING Met pursuant to adjournment.

Called the roll. Elder John Grist was absent, having been called home on account of sickness. Elder Henry Ross was absent on account of sickness in his family. Elder J. A. Pope was absent on account of a request to visit his mother. By oversight, no secretary or clerk was appointed on yesterday. By motion and second, which was carried, Elder C. H. Cayce was appointed clerk of this meeting. Called for the report of the committee appointed on yesterday to draft a statement for presentation today, when they presented and read the following:

STATEMENT

Whereas, There has been recently an unholy war engaged in through this section, as well as other sections, on the question of regeneration, and we having engaged in the war, more or less; and, being fully persuaded in our own minds that there should never have been any war among us on that question; and feeling sure that our brethren with whom we have thus been warring are really and truly Primitive Baptists, we feel a desire in our hearts, and do confess our wrong in engaging in the war and agitating the question; and we are sorry of every wrong we have done, and every wrong and harsh word said and spoken of our brethren, and humbly beg forgiveness of each other, and gladly and freely forgive every personal wrong done us. We desire to live together in peace and fellowship and to stand together in opposition to our common enemies-the enemies to the truth. And we desire, and will use our every energy and strength to get all irregularities resulting from this war corrected and to get all our good brethren together again. We request all our periodicals who desire peace among our people to publish this statement, together with the proceedings of this meeting. Respectfully submitted, C. H. Cayce, Jas. Duncan, Z. Stallings, J. D. Shain, Committee. Upon the second reading the clerk suggested that the following words be added to the statement as originally presented, "together with the proceedings of this meeting." By motion and second and unanimous vote the amendment was adopted. Upon the completion of the third reading the vote was called for upon roll call. The clerk called the roll, and the vote resulted as follows: Ayes-J. D. Shain, W. A. Bishop, James Duncan, J. H. Phillips, Z. Stallings, S. E. Reid, C. H. Cayce, N. V. Parker, J. W. Adams, W. P. Russell, J. W. Lomax, W. E. Brush, R. L. Perry, Marshall Perry, J. C. Ross, A. B. Ross, W. J. Goodrich, J. S. Williams, Commodore Brann, J. B. Halbrook, J. R. Scott; Licentiates J. C. Phipps, A. C. Ross, G. W. Hardison. Nays-None. The statement was, therefore, unanimously adopted. Then, by motion and second, the statement was unanimously approved and indorsed by rising vote of every Primitive Baptist present. The hour for preaching service having arrived, prayer was offered by Elder J. W. Adams, and Elders J. R. Scott, J. D. Shain and W. A. Bishop, in the order of their names, addressed the people, as appointed. Elders C. H. Cayce and W. P. Russell were appointed to preach on tomorrow. Minutes read and approved by unanimous vote. Elder S. E. Reid, Moderator. Elder C. H. Cayce, Clerk.

Tour In Alabama

---May 15, 1923

We returned home Monday morning, April 30, from an extended trip in Alabama. After the debate at Parrish with Mr. Tant we filled appointments as arranged by Elder S. G. Hamilton in the Lost Creek Association, and by Elder H. H. Goodman in the Hillabee Association, and by Elder J. J. Turnipseed in the We-tumpka and Choctawhatchie Associations. On the way back we stopped at Carbon Hill on Monday after the fourth Sunday, as we were rained out at that place in filling the appointments arranged by Elder Hamilton, and we were at Union Church, near Winfield, on Tuesday and Wednesday following. We missed one of the appointments in the Hillabee on account of rain. We believe we filled all the appointments as arranged except as here mentioned. We had a very pleasant and enjoyable trip most all the way. At a few places the congregations were small on account of bad weather, but at most of the places the Congregations were good. We met a number of brethren in the ministry, but as we made no notes of the names of brethren whom we met we will not attempt to mention the names. We would not want to mention some without making mention of all of them, and we do not believe we can do this from memory. We enjoyed some pleasant meetings, and the brethren were good and kind to us. They were much better to us than we feel to deserve. We met some brethren -whom we had never met before and had a great desire to meet. Some we had met before and had a great desire to meet again. All the brethren whom we heard express themselves heartily endorsed our feeble efforts in proclaiming the unsearchable riches of our Lord and Master. We humbly trust that our visit among them may do none of them any harm. It was our desire to try to speak such things as might have a tendency to bind God's children together in love and fellowship-to speak the truth in love. We shall not soon forget the kindness manifested to us at the places we visited-in the good homes where we were so kindly cared for, as well as at the churches. May the good Lord shower down His rich blessings upon them all, is our humble prayer. We ask that we be kindly remembered in the prayers of those among whom we went, that the Lord may enable us to proclaim the glories of our King to the comfort of His humble poor. We would be glad to give a more extended account of the trip but our space is limited, and there are some other matters that we must give some space to. C. H. C.

Gospel Messenger Sold

---May 15, 1923

Elder Z. C. Hull has sold the Gospel Messenger to Elder R.H. Pittman, of Luray, Va. Elder Pittman was already the editor and publisher of the Zion's Advocate. The paper will now be published under the name of the Advocate and Messenger, with a Southern Department. The former Messenger staff of editors are now on the Southern Department, except Elder Hassell, who has been transferred to the regular staff. The paper will be issued in pamphlet form. We wish Elder Pittman success. C. H. C.

Back On The Staff

---June 1, 1923

On this page will be found an article from Elder J. C. Ross, of Greenfield, Tenn., and one from Elder W. E. Brush, McKenzie, Tenn., consenting for their names to again be placed on our editorial staff. Before the unholy war among our people on regeneration, as it was termed, these brethren, so far as we knew, stood shoulder to shoulder with us. We are glad that all differences have been settled, and we trust that we may ever stand as we once did. We are also glad to have these dear brethren with us again on our editorial staff, and we hope they may write often and that their writings may be blessed to the comfort and benefit of the Lord's dear children and to the unifying of them in love. "Speaking the truth in love," does not divide or confuse the Lord's people. Let us remember this, and let the things alone that confuse them. May the Lord direct us all and keep us in the right way, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Trip In Tennessee

---June 15, 1923

We left home on Tuesday night, May 6, for Watertown, Tenn., to meet Elder H. B. Taylor, of Murray, Ky., in a four days discussion, May 8 to 11. At the meeting in Greenfield, Tenn., the fifth Sunday in April a number of brethren insisted that we employ a stenographer and have the speeches taken and publish the discussion in book form. So we had one employed, Miss Grace Dawson, of Nashville, Tenn., who took our discussion with Mr. Srygley, and she was there and took the speeches as delivered, and the discussion will be published as soon as possible. She told us on the first Sunday night that it will be about six weeks before she can get the speeches transcribed. We have gone into the publication of this work solely for the benefit of our people. We are not really financially able to undertake the work; but a number of the brethren suggested that our people would gladly give enough orders in advance to meet the expense of the stenographer. At present the orders have not amounted to half enough to pay her for the work. We hope our brethren will write us at once and order what books they will take for themselves and dispose of for us. We need the money to enable us to meet the expense of the stenographer. We cannot make an estimate of the cost so low but what we will have to sell them at $1.50 each. We hope our good brethren will help us out in this. The debate passed off very pleasantly, and as to whether a victory was gained for the truth, the book will speak for itself. After the debate we filled appointments at Testament, Walnut Grove, Friendship, Hickman and Brush Creek, in the Round Lick Association. We failed to get to Testament the first day on account of rain, but had two days there, Sunday and Monday, May 13, 14. Then on Tuesday we failed to get to Walnut Grove on account of rain; but as Thursday was given for a rest day in the arrangements, we were there two days anyway. Elder W. L. Murray, of Nashville, Tenn., is the pastor at Testament. A good interest is manifested there. They have had no pastor at Walnut Grove for some time, but we think arrangements are made now for Elder Murray to go to both churches on the same trip. They are both some distance from the railroad, and we believe this is a good arrangement for them, and we trust the Lord may bless Brother Murray's labors among them. We were at Friendship three days, and enjoyed a good meeting there, as well as at the other places. Elder H. L. Golston is the pastor of this church. Then we were at Hickman and Brush Creek, one day at each place. Elder E. S. Frye is the pastor of both these churches. We were at the home of Elders Golston and Frye. They are both good brethren, and we love them both. We intended to get the names of all the brethren in the ministry who were at the debate, but we failed to get them. We will try to give their names from memory: Elder E. S. Frye, Brush Creek, Tenn., who served us as moderator; Elders J. R. Scott, Murray, Ky.; W. E. Brush, McKenzie, Tenn.; D. Wauford, McMinnville, Tenn.; W. C. McMillon, Newport, Tenn.; J. H. Phillips, Huron, Tenn.; and W. P. Russell, of Arrington, Tenn. There may have been others, but we cannot call them to mind now. If we have overlooked any, it is not intentional. There were also some licentiates present. From Brush Creek we went to Leiper's Fork, Big Harpeth, Enon, Eagleville, and South College Street, Nashville, in the Cumberland Association. Elder M. C. Johnson, of Thompson Sta., Tenn., is the pastor at Leiper's Fork and Eagleville. He was with us at all the churches in this association and at College Street, Nashville. Elder W. P. Russell is the pastor at Big Harpeth and Elder A. L. Graves is pastor at Enon. Elder Russell was with us at Big Harpeth and Enon, and Elder Graves was at Enon. The brethren there were expecting Elder Russell to be there, so they had it understood that they would have service in the morning and afternoon. We had the pleasure of hearing Elder Russell preach in the afternoon. From Enon we went to Eagleville, Elder Johnson with us, where we had meeting Saturday and fourth Sunday in May. This was the regular communion meeting, which service was engaged in on Sunday. A very good congregation was present both days, though there was rain on Sunday. A good interest was manifested, and the meeting was enjoyed. We agreed to visit them again soon, if the Lord will. On Sunday night we went to Nashville. As first announced the appointment was made for Bethel church; but Elder Murray, the pastor at College Street, was informed that if that church desired it the appointment would be changed and given them instead of Bethel. He said that it was desired, so we went to College Street that night. It was a stormy and rainy night, but a good congregation assembled. Elders Murray and Johnson were present, and it was a very pleasant meeting. We were glad to be with them there again, and to meet some of them whom we had not seen for so long a time. Several of the Bethel members were present. From Nashville we went to Decherd, where there was an appointment for Monday. Our father-in-law, B. B. Lawler, of Brownsboro, Ala., met us there and remained with us at two more places. We were glad to see him, and enjoyed being with him for three days. The congregation at Decherd was small, but the few there seem to be a devoted little band. On Tuesday we were at Crow Creek, near Anderson, Tenn. The congregation- was small there, but we had a very pleasant meeting; were cared for in the home of Sister Hackworth, the widow of Brother Ike Hackworth. Her son is living with her, or she is living with him- we do not know which way that is, but they live at the old home place, and we suppose we may just say that they live together. The young man is not a member of the church, but he takes an interest, and we think he should come on in. On Wednesday we were at Walnut Grove, near Stevenson, Ala. There was a very good congregation at this place. Elder M. A. Hackworth lives in Stephenson, and was with us at the church. We spent Tuesday night in his home. We enjoyed a very pleasant meeting there. Brother J. M. Barker, of South Pittsburg, met us at Walnut Grove and conveyed us to his home and on to Sweeten's Cove on Thursday, where we enjoyed a very pleasant meeting. It had been a long time since we were with them at that place, and we were glad to see them once more. On Friday and Saturday nights we were with the church in North Chattanooga. Elder R. O. Raulston lives in Chattanooga, and was with us there. We enjoyed being in his home and being in his company once more. Elder Z. C. Hull, of Atlanta, Ga., came to Chattanooga to see us and spent a part of the day on Friday with us. Brother Hull, we think, is a good man, and he has no intention of going with the Progressives. He says that Elder Simms has renounced some of the things which the Progressives have gone into. We think now as we did when we wrote our comments some time ago, that when any of them get tired of all those new measures, and will be satisfied with the goodness of the Lord's house, we would be glad to see them come back; but the old church does not need to go anywhere or to make any concessions. She should stand firmly on the plain principles upon which she has stood through the ages past. We were glad to see Brother Hull, and would be glad to be associated with him more. We enjoyed good meetings with the church in Chattanooga. Decherd, Crow Creek, Sweeten's Cove and North Chattanooga are in the Sequachee Valley Association. On Saturday night after the meeting we went to the station and got a berth in a sleeper for Nashville- something we seldom do on account of the high cost- and we went to bed so as to get a night's sleep and rest, as we expected to be up all the next night on the way home, and so we would feel like being awake for the meeting on Sunday and Sunday night at Bethel Church in Nashville. Next morning when we awoke the train was in Wartrace, fifty-five miles from Nashville. There was a freight train wreck between us and Nashville, and we had to wait for the wreck to be cleared so we could go on. We tried to get a call through from there over the telephone to Nashville, so as to get some of the brethren to meet us in Murfreesboro, and we would get a taxi to go that far from Wartrace, and by this means get to Nashville in time for meeting. But we failed to get the call through. It appeared to us that it was the fault of some operator, as calls were put through for others that were made later. So we did not get to Nashville until about one o'clock, and got to the place of meeting just after services were dismissed and before they were all gone. A large crowd was there, and we were sorry that we failed to get there in time for meeting that day; but we were with them that night and enjoyed a good meeting, and a good crowd was present. Elder Murray had a stenographer present who took the discourse down and he will publish the sermon in his paper, The Gospel Trumpet. Elder Murray began the publication of the little magazine in February, 1923. It is published monthly, and each issue contains one or two sermons delivered by some brother of our faith. It is a good little magazine, and we know of no other that is just like it. The subscription price is $1.50 a year. If any of our readers wish to subscribe for it, send your subscription to us or to Murray & Campbell, 129 Third Ave. S., Nashville, Tenn. If you wish to see a sample copy, we suppose they would be glad to send you one. During the month of June they are offering to take subscriptions at $1 a year. Sunday night at eleven o'clock we started from Nashville for home, and arrived home on Monday afternoon at 5:40 and found all well, for which we trust we are thankful. The brethren were good to us, and we enjoyed being with them. Many of them we have often been with in years gone by. We love them, and we love their company and sweet fellowship. Though our home is not now in that country, yet we feel like they are our home folks, and it is like going home to visit them. May the good Lord bless them for all their kindness shown us, is our humble prayer. We ask and trust that we may have an interest in their prayers, as well as an interest in the prayers of all our readers. C. H. C.

Remarks To W. R. Blasingame

---June 15, 1923

We have no inclination to go into a meeting with the Progressives in a church capacity, or any other capacity, with such an object in view as was expressed in that call which was made. They have departed from the Primitive Baptist practice, and they know the way back without having any kind of meeting with them. If any of them are tired of their departures and new measures and desire to come back to the old church, we would not throw a straw in their way. C. H. C.

Remarks To A Letter

---June 15, 1923

We trust that we fully appreciate the above kind words and expressions of endorsement. A great many of the dear brethren whom we have met on our trip in Alabama have expressed themselves face to face with us as heartily endorsing all we said in regard to the matter. It seems to us that for some time there has been a spirit of compromise manifested. If we do not wish to be found "departing from the living God" in our doctrine or practice, it will be well for us to be careful how we compromise with those who have departed. May the Lord preserve and keep some to maintain the principles of truth and righteousness, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

John 9:31

---July 1, 1923

Brother Cayce: I wish to ask you a question. (John 9:31) says: "Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but" if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth His will, him He heareth." Who said this? I understand it was the blind man who said it. My Arminian friends say it was the Jews. Please answer through the paper.

W. T. Pettus. Lexington, Ala.

REMARKS

Your question is plainly answered in the Book. (John 9:30) says, "The man answered and said unto them, Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence He is, and yet He hath opened mine eyes." The man continues his statement, and what he said is recorded in (John 9:30-33) inclusive; then in (John 9:34) "they" - the Jews- "answered and said unto him." Any man who knows the meaning of the simplest words can know by reading these verses that it was the man born blind who used the language in (John 9:31). C. H. C.

On Our Staff Again

---July 1, 1923

We are glad to say to our readers that we have again obtained the consent of Elder Lee Hanks to place his name on our editorial staff as one of our corresponding editors. In this paper will be found an article from him under the heading, "A Lovely Greeting." Brother Hanks is a good writer, as our readers know, and we are sure they will be glad that Elder Hanks is again with us and will write for our columns. Elder Hanks calls attention to some things in his article which have caused trouble among the Old Baptists, and which are now causing trouble among them, and which always will do so. There are some who say much about peace and wanting peace, and yet have such things among them, or some of the things, which Elder Hanks names. If they want peace, as they say they do, they should prove it by getting rid of such things. We cannot have peace as long as fornicators, perjurers, liars, and other such like characters are tolerated among us. Ungodly practice tolerated in the church will destroy the church as effectually and as quickly as false doctrine.

The grace of God in the heart teaches us "that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly." If one does not live that way he has no business in the church. We need all God's people in the church who believe the doctrine of God and who walk uprightly; but we do not need those who lead ungodly lives. They are a shame and a reproach upon the cause, and there cannot be true and lasting peace with such retained in the church. We humbly trust that the labors of our dear brother, Elder Lee Hanks, with us in the publication of The Primitive Baptist may be blessed of the Lord to the advancement and good of His cause and people. C. H. C. Elder Hanks' article and the above were written last December, but there was a hitch in the arrangement. Now there has been an understanding and Elder Hanks has written us to put his name on the staff, and we do so with this issue and insert the articles that were written in December. We trust the Lord may bless our efforts and labors for the benefit of His humble poor. C. H. C.

Acts 19:1-3 AND 1 Corinthians 14:34-35

---July 1, 1923

Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother in Christ-I want to ask your views on some Scriptures that a Missionary sister asked me about. * * * * The Scriptures I want your views on are ((9:1) (Acts 19:1-3) and (I Corinthians 14:34-35). What is meant by the Holy Ghost, spoken of so much in the Bible? I say it is the Spirit. Amos I wrong? What does it mean in so many places speaking of the Holy Ghost falling on the people? Pray for a poor old sinner saved by grace, if saved at all. Mrs. T. S. Murrie. Avant, Okla.

REMARKS

In a great many places where the New Testament speaks of the Holy Ghost falling on the people it means in a miraculous way-a miraculous outpouring of the Holy Spirit. It sometimes has reference to the work of the Spirit as a Comforter. Sometimes it has reference to the work of the Spirit as a Teacher to guide into all truth. It seems that there was some kind of special gift of the Spirit which was given by the laying on of the hands of the apostles. This seems to be what was under consideration in ((9:1) (Acts 19:1-3)). We do not know how to offer any comment on (I Corinthians 14:34-35) to make it any plainer. The apostle there simply forbids women making speeches in the church. For a woman to preach or to make a speech in the church is to simply do what is here plainly and positively forbidden. Language could not make it any plainer than the apostle made it. May the Lord bless you, dear sister, and give you grace and strength for your day and trial. C. H. C.

Debate At Leedy, Miss.

---July 1, 1923

If not providentially prevented we will be on hand to meet Ben M. Bogard, D. D., in debate at, or near, Leedy, Miss., on Tuesday after the third Sunday in July. Leedy is on the I C. R. R., about thirteen miles from Corinth, Miss., toward Birmingham, Ala. Write Elder Geo. N. Gober, Leedy, Miss., at once, if you intend going on the train. But do not stay away if you fail to write him. We think arrangements will be made to care for all who attend. Dr. Bogard is a Missionary Baptist, with the anti-board faction, or the "Land-markers." The question of church identity is to be discussed. C. H. C.

Remarks To J. T. Jackson

---July 15, 1923

We are of the opinion that some called the expressions harsh because they were arguments which could not be answered. If you make an argument that cannot be refuted some men will then say your words are harsh and ungodly. We do not need the ungodly doctrine that God predestinated the sin and wickedness that is done in the world, and we have no apology to make for saying so. Now let some man or set of men make complaint to our church about this if they want to-but come with the proof of the complaint when you bring it. We will be there, the Lord willing, to defend the eternal truth of God. C. H. C.

Lesson Learned By Experience

---September 1, 1923

"Experience is a great teacher," so we have always heard, and we are sure it is true. When one learns a lesson in his experience, he knows it is true. In the experience of grace the Lord's children are taught a lesson that they never entirely forget. They may be blinded by the gods of this world, and taught false doctrines by false teachers, but they do not entirely forget what they have learned in their experiences, though they may be so blinded by false teachers as to deny what they have been taught in their experiences. When one has been brought to experience the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and made to feel himself to be a sinner, he realizes that his eternal condemnation is just. He is made to feel just as the poet expressed: If my soul were sent to hell, Thy righteous law approves it well. In this sad feeling, he is made to realize that there is a place of eternal punishment, called hell; and that if justice should be meted out to him that would be his doom. When that burden of sin and condemnation is removed, he feels that he is "snatched as it were a brand from the eternal burning" -he feels to praise the name of the Lord that he is saved from eternal punishment. If there is no such thing as an eternal hell, or an eternal punishment, then the experience of grace is a farce-it is a lie. What poor child of God can afford to say the experience of grace is a lie? The man posing as an Old Baptist preacher who preaches such a doctrine as that simply denies the experience of grace, and has no business in the Old Baptist Church. He should be excluded so quick that he could hardly know how it was done. To deny an experience of grace, and what is learned by experience, is to deny the work of the Lord -or to charge God with teaching His little children a lie, in His leading and teaching them in their experience. The Old Baptists, in our humble judgment, do not need any such teachers among them. The Lord does not teach His children a lesson in their experience that is contrary to what He teaches in His Book. Jesus says," These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." The same word translated everlasting with reference to the punishment of the wicked is the word translated eternal with reference to the life of the righteous. One is just as long as the other. If the punishment of the wicked ceases, the life of the righteous will cease at the same time. When one ends the other ends. If one never ends, then the other never ends. If there is no such thing as an eternal hell, or endless punishment, then Jesus did not save anyone from an endless hell by His suffering and death. Then Jesus did not accomplish anything for poor sinners by His death on the cross. Hence, Universalism denies the atonement of Christ. It is anti-Christ. As for us, we are not ready yet to deny the atonement made by our Lord, nor are we ready to deny the experience of grace. To deny these is to deny the only hope for a poor sinner. C. H. C.

God's Work Not Man's Work - Remarks To C. D. Willis

---September 15, 1923

On another page in this paper is an article from Brother C. D. Willis, of Witt, Va., over which we placed the heading," God's Work Not Man's Work." We feel that some remarks should be made by us concerning some things contained in the article. He seems to think that some brethren do not give God the praise and the honor for the good things done. Brother Willis says, "I understand the Scriptures to teach just one doctrine, and that is by grace and grace alone-not by works of righteousness that anyone has done." So far as regeneration is concerned, or so far as the receiving of eternal life is concerned, or so far as being made a child of God is concerned, or being saved with an everlasting salvation, this is true. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost." -(Titus 3:5). This is all of grace, from first to last, and the works of men are all excluded. While this is true, there is another saving spoken of in the Bible which is accomplished by doing what is commanded. "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." -(I Timothy 4:16). Here is a saving that is accomplished by doing something, and doing something is working. The saving is accomplished by doing, what is here commanded. But this saving is not an eternal saving, or becoming a child of God, for Timothy was already a child of God. But by doing what is here commanded he would save himself and those that hear him from false ways, false doctrines, and many wrong things they may fall into by not taking heed. The word "hear" in this text means to heed. In the saving mentioned in (Titus 3:5) there are no conditions and no works of the creature; but in the saving mentioned in (I Timothy 4:16) there are works commanded and required. "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." -(Romans 8:13). There is no disputing the fact that there are conditions in this text. No man on earth who knows anything at all about the meaning of words would dare deny this. But there is no condition required or commanded of one in order that he become a child of God. The church of God at Rome was not composed of alien sinners. They were children of God, and it was necessary for them to not live after the flesh, but to mortify the deeds of the body through the Spirit, in order to live in the fellowship and enjoyment of the church state. It was not the Spirit that was to mortify the deeds of the body, but they themselves were to do that through the Spirit. To say that the Spirit does it is a perversion of the text. And to say that there is no condition in the text is a flagrant denial of plain language. Or to say the text requires a work to be performed by alien sinners, is a misrepresentation of the facts. Brother Willis says, "The Scriptures teach that there is no power but of God." That expression is found in (Romans 13:1), There we find this language: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." - (Romans 13:1-4). This shows very clearly that the powers mentioned are magistrates, or rulers, which are for the punishment of evildoers. God has ordained government for the punishment of evildoers, and for the protection of His people, and His moral creatures in right doing. The apostle here teaches that we should be law abiding. Laws and rulers to execute them are ordained of God for the punishment of evildoers and for the protection of those who do right. To resist these powers, and to not be law abiding, is to resist what God has ordained for the protection of those who do right. To say that wicked power comes from, or emanates from, God is a perversion of this text. "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work, to speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men." -(Titus 3:1-2). Here the apostle plainly commands to be subject to powers and obey magistrates. God's children should be a law-abiding people. Especially should Old Baptists be obedient to the laws of the land, so far as conscience in matters of worship are not interfered with. If there were no probability or possibility for them to do otherwise than obey, then there was no necessity for the apostle to say what he did, and the language would be meaningless. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." - (Ephesians 6:12). Here the apostle tells us he wrestled against powers, or fought against them. Were they the same kind of powers he admonished obedience to? Certainly not. These powers which he fought against were wicked powers-spiritual wickedness in high places-or heavenly places-the church. Things that are ungodly and that are wrong are sometimes brought into the church, and it is right to fight against them. The man who will not do so is not a good soldier. We do not know of any Old Baptists who are advocating a doctrine that gives man any more power than belongs to him. No man in an unregenerate state can render gospel service unto the Lord that would be acceptable unto Him. God gives His children the power and the ability to obey Him, but they do not always obey. "But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness." -(I Corinthians 10:5). This is a plain and positive statement that God was not well pleased with those people, and they were overthrown in the wilderness for their disobedience. The apostle tells us in (I Corinthians 10:11)," Now all these things happened unto them for examples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." The punishments mentioned came upon them for their wrong doings, and those things are written as warnings to us. If they had no power to do any better than they did, then upon what principle of justice were they punished for their disobedience? And if God's children now cannot render obedience to Him, and have to disobey, what could be the necessity of warning them, or what good could the warning do? Those people who fell in the wilderness did not please God. The apostle plainly says so. Was it because God did not give them the ability? Would a loving and merciful parent require more of his child than a child could do, and then punish the child because he did not do it? To say that God has done such a thing is to charge Him with injustice. Those people disobeyed and they were justly punished for their wrong doings; and, therefore, their sins are not to be charged to the reason that God did not "work in them." God's children are not in the flesh. They can please God. If they cannot please God, they are in no better condition than the unregenerate are. "So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." -(Romans 8:8-9). God's children have the Spirit of God dwelling in them, and they are not in the flesh.' To be in the flesh is to be in an unregenerate state. Those who are in an unregenerate state are in the flesh, and cannot please God. Those who have been regenerated are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, and they can please God. This is clearly taught by the apostle, and to deny it is to deny inspiration. It is wicked for a child of God to argue that God's people are in the flesh and cannot please God. It is a denial of what the apostle has here plainly taught. To argue that they cannot please God is to deny the power that God has given them, and is to fail to give Him the honor that belongs to Him. God is the teacher of His people in an experimental sense, but His ministers are teachers. There are some things He is pleased to call and qualify His ministers to teach. To preach is to teach. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." -(Matthew 28:19-20). There is some teaching which these men were commanded to do. To deny this is as bad as to deny that the Lord teaches His people in their regeneration and experience. One of the qualifications of a man in order that he be ordained to the ministry is that he be apt to teach. Why such a qualification if God has no teaching to be done by man? "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." -((8:1) (Isaiah 58:1). If God's people never need any one to tell them of their wrongs, why did the Lord tell Isaiah to show them their sins? We do not now remember the article Brother Willis refers to which was written by a sister, nor do we now remember what sister it was, but we do know that Brother Willis does not quote the language correctly. The apostle does not say the Lord works in them the will and the do. What the apostle says is this: "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure." -((3) (Philippians 2:13). The apostle says God works in them TO WILL and TO DO-but does not say He works in them the will and the do. We should be careful not to garble what the Bible says. If our theory is such as to require a garbling of the Scriptures to sustain it, our theory is wrong. The Philippians were commanded to work out. They were not commanded to work in. The Lord has never commanded any people to do what He does Himself, or what He has said He would do. Neither has He ever said He would do what He has commanded others to do. The day of God's power in the sense the prophet meant was when God manifests His power in regeneration, and in that manifestation of God's power He makes His people willing to submit to His will. He makes them willing to be saved by grace, and makes them beg for mercy. The preaching and teaching of these things has never caused any trouble in a true Old Baptist Church; but denying them, and teaching contrary to them, does cause trouble. May the Lord enable us all to rightly consider the teaching of His blessed Book and to mould our lives accordingly. C. H. C.

Bible Conference

---October 1, 1923

We have just received a notice of a meeting to be held at Palmersville, Tenn., October 16 to 18, 1923, and a program of said meeting. The program is headed, "Program Primitive Baptist Bible Conference at Primitive Baptist Church, Palmersville, Tenn., Oct. 16, 17, 18, 1923." The notice received with the program follows: Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-Below is the program of Primitive Baptist Bible Conference to be held here with the Primitive Baptist Church on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 16, 17, 18, 1923. We as the committee appointed by the above church are glad of the opportunity of inviting all peace-loving Baptists everywhere to come together at this time and discuss some of the vital things that confront us as the church of the living God. As can be discerned by the above program this is no legislative body, but a meeting where the program will be carried out in toto. Of course questions and discussions will be entertained after each question is discussed. All ministers will note that this meeting takes place just before the convening of the Greenfield Association at Sandy Branch Church, this county, and arrangements will be made for conveyance from the conference to the association. Trains will be met at Dresden, Tenn., and conveyance furnished to the church. Any one desiring to come will communicate with Brother D. A. McWherter, Dresden, Tenn., or any member of the committee. This the 22nd day of Sept., 1923. Signed, J. S. Tyson, Palmersville. Cayce Pentecost. D. A. McWherter. J. M. Rawls.

Dear Brother Cayce: Enclosed is program for our P. B. Bible Conference. Please publish same in the P. B., in the Oct. 1st issue, together with the notice of same. Come if you can. Respt., Committee.

We haven't the space to publish the entire program, but the names on the program who have special subjects assigned to them are W. A. Pinkstaff, M. G. Mitchell, J. E. Stewart, C. G. Byrom, A. N. Towry, and J. J. Kirkland. The whole outfit is of the Georgia Progressive element. Some of these men whose names are on the program we know. J. E. Stewart was regularly excluded by a gospel church in regular conference. Ask B. B. Lawler, Brownsboro, Ala., Elder J. N. Bobo, R. 5, Boaz, Ala., or Elder M. Sparks, R. 1, Union Grove, Ala. We think some of these, or all of these, brethren can tell you whether this be true or not. C. G. Byrom was excluded from the church at Decherd, Tenn. Ask Elder R. O. Raulston, 306 Dodds Ave., Chattanooga, Tenn. We think he can give you the facts in this matter. A. N. Towry was excluded from the church at Pleasant Grove in the Flint River Association in North Alabama. Pleasant Grove Church is on the Tennessee side of the line. Ask B. B. Lawler, Brownsboro, Ala., clerk of the association, or Elder B. G. Stephens, Hazel

Green, Ala., the moderator, or Goodloe Monks, Fayette-ville, Tenn., clerk of the church. The idea of these folks claiming to be Primitive Baptists and following after and engaging in such things as they are engaging in that are so foreign to Primitive Baptist practice is absurd. The idea of a "Primitive Baptist Bible Conference at the Primitive Baptist Church" is a new thing under the sun, and is purely an invention of the so-called Progressives. Where do you find in the Bible any command, precept, or example for a so-called Bible Conference, where they are to discuss such a question as "Church welfare and gospel extension work?" Did the church of God at Rome, or at Corinth, or at Galatia, or at Ephesus, or at Philippi, or at Colosse, or at Thessalonica have any such conference? Did Paul instruct them to do so in his letters to them? Did he instruct Timothy to have the brethren meet in any such conference? Did he so instruct Titus? Did he so instruct Philemon? Did he give any such instruction to the Hebrews? Did James give any such instruction to the twelve tribes scattered abroad? Did Peter give such instruction to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia? Did John give any such instruction in his First, Second or Third General Epistle? Did Jude give any instruction of the kind in his epistle? Was any such instruction given in Revelation to any of the seven churches of Asia? Where, then, is the Bible part of it? There is no Bible authority for any such procedure, and it is foreign to the Primitive Baptist practice and usage. Those who are engaging in such things who were once united with the Primitive Baptists have departed, and are no more Primitive Baptists. Our reason for making mention of this in our columns is that they mention the Greenfield Association in their notice, and we do not know to whom the notices are sent; and therefore did not know but some brethren might think this was being done by orderly Baptists who are in correspondence with different associations in that section of country. We felt that the cause demanded that we tell these facts, so the brethren may not be led to think the Greenfield Association is engaging in this new thing. We thank them for their invitation to "come." But we cannot "come," and would not if we could. C. H. C.

Do Not Care To Publish

---October 1, 1923

We received two copies of a circular requesting us to publish them, in which a call is made for a meeting of some of the churches in that section. It seems that some of those making the call were once in the Bear Creek Association. We are also in receipt of a letter from Brother J. W. Jones, Peachland, N. C, the clerk of the association, which he requests us to publish, in which it is stated that those parties are out of order and not in line with the association, and warns brethren not to have anything to do with the meeting. We do not deem it necessary to publish either the circular or the letter from Brother Jones. We deem this notice to be sufficient. If they have had trouble it is a matter that belongs to them, and they may settle their own troubles. This thing of getting other folks to take part in our troubles is a matter that tends to spread the trouble. If churches or parties have departed from the fellowship of the brethren and churches in their own community, let them be reconciled to their brethren at home. Keep your troubles at home. These things should not be sent to our papers. C. H. C.

Both Sides

---November 1, 1923

About the fifteenth of September we received the following notice for publication in The Primitive Baptist: Schoolfield, Va., September 10, 1923.

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-Please publish in The Primitive Baptist that our regular church conference held at the Primitive Baptist Church at Danville, Va., on Saturday night, Sept. 9, 1923, that because of abusive language used in church conference against the church, the moderator and the Staunton River Association, it became necessary to enter a charge of contempt against him, and he was excluded from the church. This notice is intended to notify the brethren at large that Elder Wilson is no longer associated with the Primitive Baptists. Done by order of the church at Danville, Va. J. F. Spangler, Moderator. W. L. Parker, Church Clerk.

When we received the above we wrote to Elder Wilson and asked him about the matter, asking him to tell us how the matter was. We also wrote to another brother we thought to be in position to know about the matter. We did not wish to do an injustice to Elder Wilson. Neither did we wish to publish him as being excluded if it had not been done by a legal conference in proper proceeding. We wished to know what the cause of the trouble was. We are aware of the fact that the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things was being agitated in that country, for it has been advocated by a few there for several years. Before Elder Wilson had time to receive our letter we received the following from him:

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother I am sending you this little notice for publication...Our association (the Staunton River) met with the church here in Danville this year. I was sick and could not be at the association. I will state, in short, the kind of spirit that was manifested in the association. Most of the delegates that were sent to represent their churches in the association were influenced by "Absoluters" of this association and other associations to change an article of faith and raise bars of fellowship against Elders M. E. Petty and R. H. Pittman and me and others on the doctrine we preach. All the orderly Baptists of this country, together with the churches of my care, with myself, would not endorse the work of the association. That disorder led into our churches and in Danville, where I held my membership. The majority, together with the pastor, lined up in the disorder with the "Absoluters;" and they being in the majority dropped the rest of us out because we did not endorse the disorder of the association. If any one wishes to know my standing in this country as a man, as a preacher, as a citizen, I am in order and fellowship with orderly Baptists. For further information I will refer you to W. A. Chaney, Sutherlin, Va., a deacon of the church where I hold my membership; Tom Ward, Ruffin, N. C.; John Cheshire, Martinsville, Va.; Elder W. F. Pruitt, Ruffin, N. C.; J. W. Jones, Peachland, N. C. and H. M. Baucom, Peachland, N. C. If this is not enough, write to Elder R. H. Pittman, Luray, Va., and others. The "Absoluters" are making war on us and we are trying to defend ourselves. The Staunton River Association has divided and about half of them have lined up with the "Absoluters." Affectionately, J. R. Wilson. In a few days we received the following letter from Elder Wilson in reply to our letter asking about the matter:

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Christ Your letter is with me. I was expecting you to get a notice from the "Absoluters" concerning their great work here in this country. I suppose they did not tell you anything else they did. At your request I will try to tell you a few things they did and leave you to judge the matter. Our association (the Staunton River) met here with the church in Danville the second Sunday in August.

I was sick and could not attend. Elders Petty and Pittman were with us, and quite a large bunch of the "Absoluters." The moderator of the association and the moderator of the church and the clerk of the association (that is, one of the clerks), with a few other "Absoluters," put their heads together, went into a private room and examined Elders Petty and Pittman on their doctrine, raised the bars of fellowship against their doctrine and refused to preach them in the association. That is not all, but they changed an article of the faith over the protest of a few churches, one of them being the Mill Church, under my care, and being 153 years old and having 128 members. They found out I was not going to endorse that work because it was all out of order. Then the moderator of this church in Danville, together with others, set out to canvass among the members of this church of my membership to secretly get votes to put me and all that stood with me out of Danville Church. I did not know that until it was all over. The church met in Danville after the association and the moderator of Danville Church got his "Absolute" friends together. You can see what they had in view. They never invited any one to seats; never organized the church for business; but took up a case of a good orderly brother and excluded him without a charge. Then they proceeded with business and started to close the meeting without a report from the association. I asked permission to speak, and the moderator granted it. I called for the report from the association, and they all flew into a mad feeling. The delegates arose and made incorrect statements; said the association was good and all the preaching good. At this time the feeling was getting up in the crowd, especially among the "Absoluters." I was calm in my feeling; never got mad, never used any abusive language. All that report to you is absolutely false, and can be proven by two hundred witnesses. Then I asked those delegates if they voted to change the article of faith of the association; they said they did. I asked them by what authority they did it. The reply from one of them was that he got his authority from an Elder Robert Dodd, who was not even a member of this church, but a strong "Absoluter." The other delegate replied that the doctrine in the article of faith was against the doctrine he believed. He believed in the absolute predestination of all things, and of course the article was in his way. Then the clerk of Danville Church arose and asked me if I could endorse the work or action of the association. I told him I could not. It made him mad. He said, "By that you declare non-fellowship for the action of the association." I told him I did not, from the fact that the declarations of non-fellowship were already made by them at the association, when they changed the articles of faith without authority from the churches or from the Bible, and set in judgment on the doctrine of Elders M. E. Petty and R. H. Pittman and myself, with others who hold with us, and raised bars of fellowship against them and refused to preach them. I said, "I am on the defensive and they are on the offensive side and brought the disorder and confusion and divided our people in this country." Without any charge whatever against us, they being in the majority, moved and seconded to exclude us, and did. Witnesses from my churches were there and saw the action and would not endorse it, but all stood by me because I acted faithful and orderly. All of my churches, together with many other churches and associations, are with me and standing for the doctrine I preach. Now, my dear brother, I have not gone into all details in this matter; but upon my word I have told you the truth as far as I have gone. I am standing on and by the same glorious principles I started with twenty years ago. I have nowhere else to stand. I have nowhere else to go. We are no better than the faithful ones who suffered persecution in the past, for it is said, "He that will live godly in this present world will suffer persecution." Please pray for me, a poor sinner saved by grace, if saved at all. Extend love to all. Yours in love, J. R. Wilson.

P. S.-The Mill Church, being in order, and a church of my care, a few miles from Danville, received me, my wife, and a few others into their fellowship by relation. We are identified with orderly, sound Baptists in this country. J. R. W. In another part of this paper will be found an article by Elder R. H. Pittman, copied from the Advocate and Messenger for September, 1923, in which he tells something about the meeting of the Staunton River Association and how they refused to preach him and Elder Petty on account of their doctrine. In another part of this same paper will be found some resolutions with several names to the same and some resolutions adopted by the Bear Creek Association. All these things go to show that the trouble was caused by the advocating of the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things and making it a hobby. Hobby riding has always caused trouble among Old Baptists and always will do so. We were in North Carolina several years ago, and we felt satisfied they would some day have trouble over this very thing. There were a few then who advocated it, and they were allowed to continue to pursue that course. They should have been stopped right then-or sooner; then much of the trouble that will now result from such a hobby would have been avoided. When any man begins to ride a hobby, on any point, he should be stopped right there. If he will not desist, then exclude him and let him stay out until he can leave off his hobby. This will save much trouble and confusion in the church. Our readers know where we stand-that we do not believe the doctrine that God predestinated our sins and wickedness. May the Lord pity our poor suffering people. C. H. C.

Association Rule

---November 1, 1923

Our readers will remember an article which appeared in our columns some time ago from Elder J. T. Jackson, of Martinsville, Va., on the question of the absolute predestination of all things and there being only one salvation set forth in the Scriptures. Well, some of the Absoluters over there in the East did not seem to digest that article very well, and they proceeded to get after Elder Jackson, under the plea that his language was not becoming, too rough and unbrotherly. Elder Jackson asked forgiveness for any expression that was wrong or for any unbrotherly language. Then it developed that it was not the rough expressions used, if any were used, that brought out the objections, but the doctrine advocated, and the principles contended for in the article. That was what we thought when we heard that objections were raised. We understand that Elder Jackson's church is in the Pig River Association. At the session of that association in the fall they passed this act: The association at its spring session having denounced the subject matter in a certain article or instrument by Elder J. T. Jackson, and the church of his membership, to-wit, the church at Leatherwood, having failed to fully respect the judgment of the association, further denounces Elder J. T. Jackson as a heretic and in disorder as respects the contents of the said communication and its promulgation, advise Leatherwood Church to deal with him as such. If that is not lording it over God's heritage we confess that we never saw it, and would not know it if we were to see it. The very idea of an association sitting in judgment over a church as to such matters! Where is the poor little church to come in and have any say about her own affairs, please tell us! Why should not a church submit to a government of presbyters, or bishops, or a pope, as to an association? Such as this is simply assuming authority that is unknown to God's word. It is unscriptural and unbaptistic. It is assuming authority that belongs to no body of people on earth. The church is the highest ecclesiastical authority on earth. There is no higher court to which an appeal may be taken. There is no higher court in which a case may be tried.

Elder Jackson's church passed the following act: Martinsville, Va., Aug. 25, 1923. We, the church of Christ at Leatherwood, having received a letter from the Pig River Association denouncing Elder J. T. Jackson as an heretic because of the doctrine as set forth in his article as appeared in the Gospel Messenger (it was also in The Primitive Baptist. Ed.) of Feb. 1st, 1923, and as we accepted Elder Jackson's acknowledgment in regard to said article, and failing to see any heresy in said article, and knowing that the association has no authority over any church; but loving peace and wanting an understanding, we have set Saturday before the fourth Sunday in October, 1923, as the day if any church has a grievance against Elder Jackson to bring their grievance to Leatherwood Church on above date and we will be glad to answer any question as touching our act of conference of May 26, 1923, and Elder Jackson will answer as touching the doctrine as set forth in aforementioned article. Done by the church in conference this the 25th day of August, 1923. Eld. J. P. Via, Mod., W. H. Minter, Clerk. This statement from Leatherwood was sent us some time ago, and should have appeared sooner, but was overlooked. The church is the place for the matter to be tried, and that is the place to present the grievance. But they will have a hard time proving the doctrine to be heresy which was set forth in the article of which they are complaining. We would be glad to hear them try to disprove what was set forth therein. The doctrine contained in that article will stand when this world is on fire. C. H. C.

Names Removed From Staff

---December 1, 1923

Some few weeks ago we received a letter from Elder Samuel McMillon requesting us to remove his name from our editorial staff or to remove the name of Elder J. R. Wilson. We were hoping that none of the brethren would make a request of that kind until there had been ample time for developments and we had ample time to consider the matter from all standpoints. We felt then that there was nothing else for us to do but to remove Brother McMillon's name from the staff, which we did without comment. It was our desire then to investigate the matter further. In all the investigating we have been able to do we confess that we feel now that we know very little about the whole affair, or we mean that taking the affair as a whole we do not know very much about it. Danville Church sent us a notice that Elder Wilson was excluded for using abusive language. Brother Wilson claims that he did not use abusive language, and several have written us that he did not, and some have written us that he did. Now, how can we afford to say that the brethren on either side of this controversy are not truthful? It puts us in a dilemma. We do not know what to do or what to say. We do not wish to do the Danville Church an injustice; neither do we wish to do Brother Wilson an injustice. We do not wish to take any part in the controversy. We have had enough of wars and divisions. We have, we hope, prayerfully and carefully considered the matter as to what we should do under the existing circumstances. The brethren write us conflicting reports, and we have no reason that we can discover to doubt them being sincere in what they say to us. They may be sincere and yet be mistaken. We do not feel like calling their honesty in question. We love the good brethren whom we know on both sides of the matter. A number of letters from brethren on both sides have been sent to us giving their version of the matter with the request that it be published. Now here is one thing we think we know, and that is that we do not wish a controversy on the matter to be carried on through the columns of The Primitive Baptist. It cannot do any good. It cannot help matters any to be publishing those things in our papers. We also feel sure of the fact that if there is a division in that country now the time will come when many good brethren on both sides will feel that it should never have been. It will be regretted in years to come. It makes our heart bleed to contemplate what it means and what the result will be. In the later years, when the brethren have all had time to cool off, and calmly look back and see the waste and devastation caused by war and division, their hearts will then ache over the sad affair, when it will be too late to mend it. Brethren, it is better to be patient and to bear much, rather than for good brethren to be divided and fellowship be destroyed. Families and communities will be divided. Hatred and variance will take the place of love and sweet communion. For God's sake, brethren, and for your own sake, and for the sake of your children, soften your hearts and be charitable toward each other, and let your eyes shed tears of penitence and grief; go down on your knees in humble prayer to God to keep you and to help you stay in that humble and patient attitude that should characterize His children. Our eyes are filled with tears as we write these lines. Our heart is heavy and sad, and we are grieved over the condition of affairs in that country where we have met with the dear brethren and have joined with them in the delightful service of the Master. Now, brethren, please do not ask us to publish anything about the troubles and divisions in that country, or in any other country. We do not wish to take any part in the division. So we feel like now that the very best thing for us to do, as we have dropped the name of Elder McMillon for no other cause than that stated above, that we should also drop the name of Brother Wilson for the present. This is not done because we are taking sides, but because we are now determined not to take sides if there is anyway to avoid it; and the only way we can see to avoid it is to remove Brother Wilson's name from the staff for the present, at least until further developments. We are not doing this to hurt or to injure Brother Wilson. We love him as a dear servant of the Master and we endorse every sentiment we have ever heard him preach. Neither do we now remember to have ever seen a sentiment from his pen that we did not endorse. Some have written us that Elder Wilson was excluded on account of his doctrine, but the church said it was for abusive language, and some have written us that was the reason. If it was for his doctrine then we are with Elder Wilson in sentiment, unless he has advocated something there that we have not read in his writings or which we have never heard him preach. If it was not for, or on account of, his doctrine, then some good brethren think that the doctrine was at the bottom of the matter. If the doctrine had nothing to do with it, then it seems to us that the matter should be settled and there should be no division. We are in receipt of a letter from Elder W. M. Monsees, in which he says: "According to my best understanding, Elder J. R. Wilson has been excluded from the fellowship of the church at Danville; and this being true, I do not recognize him as a member of the church. Hence if you wish to yet recognize him and keep his name on the editorial staff of The Primitive Baptist, please drop my name. I hope that God will bless Zion, and may all of His believing ones be blessed and feel His love in their hearts. Yours in hope, W. M. Monsees." Brother Monsees may not want this published, but we feel that we should be candid and tell our readers just why we take any step we do concerning the matter in that country. Having received this letter, and having already decided to drop the name of Brother Wilson for the present, at least, and not wanting any controversy over the matter in the paper, we have decided it would not be wrong to grant the request of Brother Monsees, and remove his name from the staff for the present also. During the past few weeks we have received so many letters concerning the affair that we could not possibly answer all of them and attend to other matters that had to be looked after. Those who wrote the letters may know from this why we have not answered them. We just did not have the time. All our readers know where we stand on doctrine. It is not necessary for us to state our position here on any point of the doctrine. We have always been plain and outspoken. We stand now just where we have stood all along the line, and we see no reason why we should change. May the good Lord have mercy upon His poor bleeding Zion. "When ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed, one of another." We humbly ask our readers to pray the Lord in our behalf, that we may be enabled to conduct The Primitive Baptist in such a way as to comfort and unify His humble poor and not to divide them and destroy their peace and fellowship. C. H. C.

The Mount Olive Association

---December 1, 1923

It seems that there has been trouble and possibly division in the Mount Olive Association in Georgia. We published a notice of that association sometime ago, and then we had a request sent to us to publish that those, people were in disorder. Now we do not know a thing in the world about the matter. It seems that both sides claim that the other side is in disorder. As we say, we do not know a thing in the world about the matter, and for that reason we do not wish to publish anything more about it. It will do no good to publish any more about it. These things should be kept at home and settled and attended to there, anyhow, and not publish them in the papers. What a pity that brethren will bite and devour each other, and thus be consumed one of another. C. H. C.

Elder Hull Restored

---December 15, 1923

We are just in receipt of word from Elder J. J. Turnipseed that Elder W. J. Hull and wife have been restored to the fellowship of the church at Piney Grove, and that the church has authorized an official statement to be sent to us for publication. We are not waiting to receive this official statement to tell our readers about it. We are glad to get the news, and we are sure many of our readers will be glad to hear it. Elder Turnipseed said a number of visiting brethren were present at the meeting, and that they had a good meeting. May the Lord be praised for His goodness. May the Lord bless dear Brother Hull in his declining years, and bless him with sweet peace, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

The Cayce-Bogard Debate

---December 15, 1923

In Ben M. Bogard's paper, the Baptist and Commoner, of Aug. 8, 1923, the "eminent Dr. Bogard" gives what he calls an account of the Cayce -Bogard debate held at Leedy, Miss., last July. In reality the Dr. says about as much concerning other debates he has had in that section of country as he does about this debate. It is very evident that he is trying to smooth things over and call the attention of his people to the wonderful successes he had in the previous debates he had, so as to quiet them and his own disappointed feelings in the matter of such a defeat this time. It just amounts to about this: True, I did not do much this time; but look at the wonderful victories I gained in the debates before this! "Blowhard" says: Cayce is a disappointment. He can't debate but is very egotistic and high tempered and stays mad most of the time he is trying to debate. He called Bogard about all the mean names he could think of during the debate and in doing so hurt no one but himself. Bogard did not say even one hard thing about Cayce nor his people. * * *

* But it is a fact that the biggest bundle of ignorance we ever saw was wrapped up in the majority of those Hardshells. Does this statement about a big bundle of ignorance look like Bogard did not say one hard thing about Cayce and his people? He said in the debate that all would agree with him who were not so ignorant, and things along that line. He began it, and we fed him out of his own spoon; and that is what we would do next time, we think. We knew his tactics. He "ran over" Elder N. V Parker in the debate with him, and he said he would "clean us up" on the third day, or something of like import, so we were informed. He tried the "run over game" on us, but it failed to work. He did not work his "bluff" this time. Hence, he is hurting. But Bogard says "Cayce is a disappointment." Guess so! Blowhard said right at the beginning of the debate, in his second speech, that he had "measured his man," and that he was not going to let Cayce make a single point, and would not let him take a single point from him. But Cayce is a "disappointment!" Evidently so! for "Blowhard" failed to answer, or to even notice, a great number of arguments Cayce introduced. But Cayce answered every argument Bogard tried to make. In Bogard's Commoner of August 29 he gives the rules that usually govern in debates, and proceeds to give an explanation of the sixth rule. That rule says: "The consequences of any doctrine are not to be charged on him who maintains it, unless he expressly avows them." In that paper Bogard says, "That rule forbids charging the consequences of a doctrine to an opponent unless he expressly avows them. * * * * For instance, in a debate with a Hardshell Baptist he will make the argument that since God foreknows all things-knowing the end from the beginning it follows that He foreknew exactly who would be saved and who would be lost. He will argue that therefore the salvation and the damnation of each individual is fixed unconditional. You have a perfect right to show what the consequences of this argument are. If God's foreknowledge makes salvation and reprobation unconditional, then the foreknowledge of God on everything else makes everything that shall come to pass unconditional. If God's foreknowledge of a thing fixes unconditionally that thing, then since God foreknew every act of man, foreknew all murders and rapes, and foreknew all the work of the devil, it would make God responsible for every wicked thing, and even the devil would be a good boy since he did just exactly what he was foreordained to do." In our debate we made this argument concerning the foreknowledge of God: That God does all his pleasure, because He knew from the beginning everything that would transpire that would have a tendency to militate against or prevent Him doing His pleasure, and yet He declared that "I will do all my pleasure." We made the argument from this text: "Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." -(9) (Isaiah 46:9-10). In Bogard's reply he said that we argued that everything that comes to pass including such sins and wickedness as he mentions in the above extract from his writings, had to be that way and that God fixed it, and so on. We spoke out and kindly corrected him and told him that we did not say it. He answered, "You did say it." Again we kindly corrected him, and again he affirmed that we did say it. Then the third time we kindly corrected him and told him that was not what we said. The third time he disputed our word and said that we did say it. Then we said, "You are a liar; I never said it." Then Bogard went on with his speech, affirming that we had said that. In our speech, we took the matter up and stated again the argument which we made and called attention to what Bogard stated that we said, and which statement we had kindly corrected, and Bogard would not accept the correction. Then we said, "Bogard, the best thing we can say is that you are a willful, malicious, pusillanimous liar; you are not even a forty-third cousin to a gentleman." That is just what we said, when he had tried to misrepresent us as to what we had said and argued. In Bogard's same paper of August 8 he charges us with believing and holding that a man has to do everything he does. In a little article concerning the lady from Little Rock who put the crown of ribbon on us, he says, "We suppose she can't help doing the way she does since it was foreordained before the foundation of the world." Now, Bogard knows very well that we never argued any such. He knows that it is false. Bogard also says: "The Missionary Baptists were so well pleased that the brethren from Belmont, Miss., and from Winfield, Ala., challenged Cayce to repeat the debate with us at these places and Cayce and his Hard-shells have not yet accepted the challenge. There is not much prospect that they will. But the Missionary Baptists are keen for it since they heard the recent debate. But here is wishing the Hardshells would secure a gentleman to do their debating hereafter. It is very unpleasant to meet a man who is not a gentleman." Right there on the ground publicly we called for the name of the man who said they wanted the debate repeated at Belmont. No one spoke out that we heard saying they wanted it at Winfield, Ala. One man spoke out and said they wanted it at Belmont. Right there and then we told him to present his proposition to our people at Belmont, and if they wanted us to represent them in a debate there with Bogard we would do so for any number of days they wanted it. The last we heard from that country, which was just a few days ago, they had not presented their proposition to our people at Belmont. If they are so anxious for a debate there, why do they not do that? There is not much prospect that they will. As to the "Hardshells," as Bogard calls us, getting a gentleman to represent them in debate, we do not suppose Bogard has very much on us in that line, seeing we were not fined three dollars and cost for drunkenness in the police court at Hopkinsville, Ky., in January, 1918. In Bogard's paper of Nov. 21, 1923, is a little article signed by one Sidney Gallagher, in which he says: "Well, the debate at Little Flock was a wonderful thing for that part of the country. It opened the eyes of lots of people, I think. Some of the Hardshells got to where they could see, for one member just quit them entirely, and many that said they would have joined, now say they are done with them." We wrote to Elder G. N. Gober, Leedy, Miss., where the debate was held, and asked him who these parties were that this Hon. Mr. Gallagher wrote about. Elder Gober replied under date of Nov. 29: There has not been a member quit the Primitive Baptist Church and joined the Missionaries since the debate in this part of the country. Mrs.-----, who was a member at Little Flock Church joined the Campbellites since the debate, but the debate had nothing to do with her quitting the "Hardshells" (so-called). She married into a Campbellite family, and her excuse was that she wanted to live in the church with her husband. This is no boost to the Bogard Baptists. The Primitive Baptists are perfectly satisfied over the results not one member jostled; and the "highland-ers" are satisfied. There is one man (Jesse Bullard) who was a cross between the Campbellites and Missionaries- sometimes on one side and then on the other, but seemed to hold prejudice against the Old Baptists-who claims this debate convinced him to the Missionaries. I am sure he is the one Mr. Gallagher is quoting as lots of people. I believe we are strengthened here by the-de-bate. I am writing Mr. Gallagher to specify those parties whom he had referred to. I will let you have the information I receive from him; but I am satisfied the parties above mentioned are the ones he has referred to. No, the Missionaries have not presented their proposition to the church at or near Belmont, and I don't think they will. Under date of Dec. 4 Elder Gober wrote us again and said: I have a letter from Mr.

Sidney Gallagher who wrote the article in the Baptist and Commoner who referred to one member quitting the "Hardshells" entirely, and lots of others who believed in them said they would not have anything to do with them now. He referred to the parties I wrote you, Mrs.-----and Jessie Bullard. Mrs.-----went to the Campbellites, not as a result of the debate, and Jessie Bullard was not an Old Baptist believer before the debate. * * * * As ever, your brother, Geo. N. Gober. So there you are. Will you tell us what some of these Fullerites will not tell? There is one thing it seems that some of them will not tell, when they are in a "tight," and that is the truth. C. H. C.

Close of Volume Thirty-Eight

---December 15, 1923

For several years we have not written an article at the close of the volume. For some reason we have not had much of a desire or impression to do so. We have passed through some fiery trials and have been much cast down. We have scarcely had the courage or the feeling to try to do anything. From a religious standpoint, as well as in some other matters, everything has been looking so dark and gloomy to us, and all our labors seemed to have been in vain. It has been by the very hardest effort that we have not fully given up in despair. A few friends have stood by us and have spoken and written words of encouragement, and have stood by us in other ways. Had it not been for these dear friends we feel that we should have given up and surrendered entirely. May the good Lord bless them. We cannot find words to express our appreciation and the gratitude we feel for what they have done. We have traveled many miles, and have never refused to answer a call from our brethren to defend the cause, when it was possible for us to go. We have struggled hard during the war time prices to keep The Primitive Baptist going. We have seen the time we could buy all the white news print paper we wanted at two cents a pound. Although the price is not near so high as it was for some time, yet we now have to pay six cents a pound for the paper this issue is printed on. It costs that delivered to us-perhaps a little more. Labor is high, and all things we use in the office are much higher than before the war. This all being true, brethren, we must have support in order that the paper pay expenses. We must have subscribers if the paper pays the cost of getting it out. It is the cheapest Old Baptist paper published, for it has more reading matter in a year than any other two. We do not say this to the disparagement of any other Old Baptist paper, for they all give as much reading matter as they can afford for the price. Brethren, can't every one of you "put your shoulders to the wheel" and see how many subscribers you can send us during the month of January, 1924? Ask the brethren and friends who are not taking the paper to subscribe for it. Show them that the price is not high, considering the amount of reading matter they get in a year. Nearly all the advertising has been taken out, because some said they did not like for advertising to be in the paper. We should have more subscribers to make up that loss to us. How many will help? We are now behind in sending our paper out. We are expecting to soon catch up and have the paper going out on time. We have a good loyal force of employees, and we believe they will do all they can to get the paper to the subscribers on time. The year 1923 will soon be gone. We are another year nearer to our eternal home. How will it be when we reach the end of the way? Will the prospect be dark and gloomy, or will it be bright? Will we have a clear conscience then of duty done to the best of our ability? We close this year's labors asking the prayers of all our readers. Pray the Lord to lift our head above the dark waves which have surrounded us, and to help us press on in His service the few remaining days we have yet allotted to us on earth. We need your prayers. C. H. C.

Introduction To Volume Thirty-Nine

---January 1, 1924

With this issue we begin the publication of the thirty-ninth volume of The Primitive Baptist. The first issue of the paper was printed thirty-eight years ago at Fulton, Ky., which was January 1, 1886. In August of that year our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, who was then the owner and publisher of the paper, and who was the founder of it, moved to Martin, Tenn., where this paper was published until the first of November, 1919, when we moved to Fordyce, Ark. All these years the paper has continued under the one management. We have had many trials and difficulties, and sometimes the way has been rough. There have been persecutions and sorrows along the way. As we said in our last issue, we have often felt like we would have to give up; but somehow we have continued on until the present. Many of the brethren and friends have stood by us through all the trials and conflicts of the past. We feel that had it not been for them we would have sunk in despair. We trust we appreciate their kindness to us, and humbly pray the Lord's richest blessings may rest upon them. That we have made mistakes in the past, we are free to admit. If we continue to live, no doubt we will make more mistakes. We realize it is "human to err." We know that we have not reached a state of perfection, and do not expect to reach such a state here in this world. But we are hoping for perfection hereafter. When all the battles and trials of life are over, we are hoping for perfection beyond this vale of tears. That hope has been sweet to us through all these years of trials and conflicts, and is as sweet to us today as it has ever been. We humbly beg all our readers and subscribers to pardon the mistakes we have made, and now help us not to make them again. We need your help and your prayers. We desire to make The Primitive Baptist better, and a medium of good cheer and a help to the Lord's dear children. We desire to conduct the paper in such a way as that it may be a benefit to the cause. We need your help to accomplish this desired end. Any time you see a mistake we make you need not refrain from telling us about it, and trying to show us what would be the right thing for us to do. To watch over one for good is to try to show him what is the right way when he is pursuing a wrong course. Will you, dear reader, put forth a little effort during the year to help us extend the circulation of our paper? Ask the brethren and friends who are not taking the paper to subscribe for it. It would not be much trouble to do that. If every subscriber we have now would renew and send us even one new subscriber during the year the list would be doubled. We would be glad to send the paper out weekly again, but we cannot do so unless the subscription list is considerably increased. Our present subscribers can help us to increase the list by asking others to take the paper. Will you help? Let us all try to do better during the year 1924. Many of us have been asleep concerning our religious duties and affairs. "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." May the Lord help us all to awake to our every duty, and help us to live as we should-to His honor and glory, and to the benefit of one another. C. H. C.

A Servant Is Worthy Of His Hire

---January 1, 1924

We have just received at this writing the Messenger of Zion for Dec. 1, 1923, and in reading the pages we found the following from our brother, Elder A. B. Ross, which appeared under the above heading: As I came from one of my churches a few days ago, having had an excellent meeting-good congregation, with words of appreciation spoken by a number of the brethren at a certain place a Methodist preacher and a Missionary Baptist preacher, who had been to their appointments, and who also live at Martin and are personal friends of mine, boarded the train. In our conversation, having sat down together, the Missionary preacher said, "Yes, we had a fine meeting and my church gave $17 above my expenses." The Methodist preacher replied, "Well, I beat you; my church gave $20 above my expenses." They did not question me. So I was saved of the embarrassment of telling them that my church, though stronger than either of theirs, gave me only $4.65 above my expenses. But maybe that is what they are out for. Anyway, their churches showed their appreciation for them, not in word only, and when they got home they had something for their families. This way is according to God's plan, and it does appear to me that if a church cares no more for her pastor, and has no more interest in the welfare of his family, -they should make a change and get a man who is worthy of being seen after according to God's ordained way. Perhaps this neglect is in a great measure responsible for so many churches being without pastors and whole associations being destitute of a preacher. A church or association trampling God's ministerial office under foot cannot prosper. God will turn His ministry from them.-A. B. R.

When we read the above we thought of more than one thing. We thought of some of the trips we have made at our own expense. We thought of the many hardships. We thought of the many necessities and comforts of life many of God's ministers and their families have gone without. We thought of some of the luxuries enjoyed by some of those whom some of the ministers have labored for in the Master's vineyard. While we were in reverie, and wondering why the Lord's ministers are thus having to spend a life of toil and privations and hardships, we also thought of the following which we recently clipped out of a paper we saw in the office of our family physician here in Fordyce. It was under the heading, "A Cheerful Giver." It reads this way: "Bobby's father had given him a ten-cent piece and a quarter of a dollar, telling him he might put one or the other on the contribution plate. 'Which did you give, Bobby?' his father asked when the boy came home from church. 'Well, father, I thought at first I ought to put in the quarter,' said Bobby. 'But then I remembered 'The Lord loves a cheerful giver,' and I knew I could give the ten-cent piece a great deal more cheerfully, so I put that in.'" Brother Ross, perhaps the members of your congregation are better Scriptorians than the members of the other two congregations mentioned, and they remembered the text that the boy remembered, and then governed themselves accordingly. Remarks To Elder J. H. Fisher

So far as we are able to see and understand we see no reason why any Primitive Baptist could not endorse the sentiment of this article from Elder Fisher. It is the use of expressions not found in the Bible, and contending for them, that has caused trouble among the Old Baptists. They have never divided over what the Bible says- it is always over what the Bible does not say. Let us quit saying things that the Bible does not say on the mooted questions, and we will have less trouble over them. May the Lord help us to lay down our prejudices and come together and live in peace, and stand shoulder to shoulder against the common enemies of truth.

"When ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed, one of another." C. H. C.

Pray For Zion

---February 1, 1924

We want to join in with those that want to pray for the welfare of Zion. We tried to encourage a day of fasting and prayer a few years ago, but got little encouragement. Some seemed to almost make a criticism of it. But still I think it a good thing. God forbid that I should discourage His children in prayer. I know we are to do other things besides pray, and we might be down praying for things when we know what ought to be done, and I feel in that we should act, yet we should go in prayer.-J. C. M. in Baptist Trumpet, Jan. 24, 1924.

REMARKS

The above is by Elder J. C. Morgan, the editor of the Trumpet, and we honestly think the suggestion a good thing. We have all, more or less, given ourselves to feasting and noise making instead of giving ourselves to fasting and prayer. If we had all been engaged more in prayer instead of quarreling and fault-finding, we would have been in much better condition today. At least, that is the humble opinion of the poor writer. Why not devote a whole day to fasting and prayer and confessing our faults one to another? How many of us can say that we have no faults to confess? If one of us were to say that, would not that be a fault we would do well to confess? "Confess your faults one to another, and pray with and for one another, that ye may be healed." May we not have the assurance from the Lord's promise that if we should meet according as He has directed, that much of our trouble and disturbed condition might be healed? If we pray for the welfare of Zion, should we not work that way, too? Of course, we could have no assurance that our prayer would be answered if our doing is contrary to the way we pray. Let us pray for the welfare of Zion, and let us labor that way as well. We should strive for the things that make for peace, and for the things wherewith one may edify another. We should do that while praying. If we would, do we not have the assurance that our prayer would be answered? "If you ask anything in my name I will do it," said the Master. He has never failed to do what He has promised.

We have read some along the line of the history of the church. We have found in such reading that the church in former years often set aside a day for fasting and prayer. How often do we hear of a thing like that in these days? We can hear of feasting all right; but when do you hear of a day of fasting? What is the matter with us? Are we not forgetful of the rich blessings the Lord has bestowed upon us, and forgetful of where those blessings come from? It seems that for several years there has been a spirit of unrest, dissatisfaction, war and bloodshed; and now there seems to be a mad rush for the almighty dollar; every fellow for himself-all in a mad rush. We scarcely have time to stop to give a brother a friendly greeting. We have all tried to "keep up with the procession," for fear we would be left entirely behind-have we not? We confess that we have been guilty. But we are tired of it. Our heart aches and longs for freedom from such worldly care, and for the more frequent company and association of the Lord's humble poor. We want them to pray with and for us. We need their company and association. We need their prayers. We need their sweet fellowship and love. We need their kind forbearance. If we have ever wounded one of them, our poor heart bleeds on account of it, and we humbly beg them to forgive every wrong they have ever seen in us. Brother Morgan, we would gladly join you in a day of fasting and prayer; and if you could condescend to let us be with you in a meeting for that purpose, we would be glad to be there, and confess all our faults and to ask you, if you could condescend to stoop so low, to pray for us, a poor sinner in hope of a better home beyond this world of trouble-all by the free and sovereign and discriminating grace of God. May the Lord's richest blessings be upon us all. C. H. C.

Elder O'Neal's Proposition

---February 1, 1924

In another place in this paper is a letter from our dear brother, Elder J. H. O'Neal, of Rupert, Ark. Brother O'Neal sends four names as subscribers for The Primitive Baptist, three of whom are new ones, and he sends $5 from each for one year-four names to get the paper one year at $5 each. Now, this is quite different from the offer we are making in the paper, and that offer was in the very issue that Brother O'Neal refers to which contained our article on the close of the volume. Really the offer we are making is one on which we lose money in the year. We are in need of immediate funds; and some of the new names that are added to the list on this offer will continue to take the paper, so that after a long time we may make back what we lose in getting them started to taking the paper; but it will take a long time. But by making this offer we get a number to renew right away and send in another name, and thus raise the funds that are needed right now, or immediately. This is why we make the offer, and to get the list increased with the hope of many, or some, of them continuing to take the paper. We appreciate, more than we know how to tell, the interest Brother O'Neal has taken in the matter. Such action as this-upon his proposition-is a sure enough real help. That gives us something over the bare small profit we make on a year's subscription. The profit we make on a subscription at $2 a year is very little. If a thousand names were sent us on Brother O'Neal's proposition it would help indeed. It would enable us to stop paying a whole lot of interest. Brother O'Neal speaks of the burdens we have to bear. We have many of them that he and others do not know. What would you think of an Old Baptist preacher refusing to pay for a year's subscription that he owed, unless you would publish a letter from him in reply to a letter that had been published in the paper? Here is what a preacher wrote us-we leave out the names, but we have the letter on file: "I have a proposition to offer you, and that is this: I see in July first a reply to-----by-----in which he made a charge against-----1. If you will publish a reply from me to-----1 will send all that I am behind and to renew." Now, what do you think of that? An Old Baptist preacher proposing to pay what he already owes if we will publish a reply from him to another article! This will give just a little idea of some things we meet up with. Yet, as we said in the article referred to by Brother O'Neal, there are a few who have stood by us and have given us kind words and encouraged us along the way, and have helped us otherwise. We hope that we appreciate it, though we feel unworthy of such kindness. We feel, that if we are a servant of the Lord truly, that we are "but a poor unprofitable servant." We often feel that our little service has been in vain and has been no help to the Lord's dear children. Still, we do not feel that we could afford to give up and forsake the field, and thus be a deserter. We humbly pray the Lord to bless those who have so kindly helped us along the way in so many ways. We cannot thank them enough. We beg an interest in the prayers of the Lord's dear children. We feel to need your prayers. C. H. C.

Another False Report

---February 1,1924

We are just in receipt of a letter from a brother in Alabama in which he says that "I hear that you and Elder Lee Hanks are Progressive and Absolute Baptists." Now, what do you know about that? It seems to us that for a man to say that, if he has been reading this paper, is no less than a willful and malicious falsehood. We do not know who told the brother this, but we would like to know his name. If he is a member of an orderly Primitive Baptist Church he should be dealt with. We do not think a man could very easily get those who are really "Absoluters" to agree that we are one. Neither would the Progressives agree that we are with them in their practices. Our recent publication about a meeting some of the Progressives had at Palmersville does not look much like we are with them. May the Lord pity such folks. C. H. C.

Special Heresy Issue

---February 1, 1924

The Dr. Ben M. Blowhard has been advertising for sometime that he is going to issue a "Special Heresy Issue" of his paper, the Baptist and Commoner. We see no reason why he should make a specialty of any certain issue along that line, for every issue is a bundle of heresy. C. H. C.

Remarks To James M. Mayer

---February 1, 1924

Yes, all the communications, experiences, obituaries and appointments are published in The Primitive Baptist free of charge. That is not all-the books that are published by our people and put out for the good of the cause that are advertised in our columns are advertised free of charge. We have never charged our brethren for advertising their books that are published for the good of our cause-the cause we all profess to love. And this is still not all. There are now, and have been all along, advertisements run in the paper free of charge for some of our people who are poor and are yet trying to sell something that would be a benefit to suffering-humanity in order to make a support for themselves. We have given away several hundred dollars worth of space this way in the paper. This has all cost us money. But a few years ago we cancelled a contract which we had with a company who sent us advertising, and decided to cut out all advertising that we were getting pay for, and we took no new orders, but filled out the time for the orders we already had. We did this because some said the reason why they did not want to take the paper was because it had advertisements in it. So when we had all those pay advertisements out we expected that they would take the paper; but they did not do so. Our conclusion could be nothing else only that they did not want to take the paper and only used that for an excuse. Whether the reason for not wanting the paper was that they did not believe the doctrine the paper stands for, or loved the money more, we are not proposing to say or to judge. That matter is between them and their God. What we do know is that leaving the advertisements out did not make the list increase. We also know that there have been a few who have loved the principles dearly for which the paper has stood, and have stood by us all along the way. May the good Lord bless every one of them, is our humble prayer. We do not feel worthy of the love and esteem and sweet fellowship of the Lord's dear people; but our desire is to make The Primitive Baptist such a publication as that it may be a great benefit to the Lord's dear people and a blessing to His cause. We ask your prayers and help to that end. C. H. C.

Extracts Published

---February 15, 1924

At the request of Brother Hollingsworth we give space for the above extracts from letters he has received from brethren over the country. We trust that we appreciate the interest brethren are taking in us and in The Primitive Baptist. May the richest blessings of our heavenly Father rest upon every one of them, is our humble prayer. The Old Baptists are the best people in the world-with all their faults. Although they do have troubles among them, they love the principles that have been cherished by our fathers all along the ages, and they love one another. We love them, and our life and our all belongs to them. We love to serve them. It is a service of love. We know they are a good people because they have borne with our imperfections, shortcomings and misgivings all these years. We have been trying to proclaim the principles of the glorious doctrine they stand for now for thirty-four years, and we hope by the grace of God to continue while He spares us to live. We often feel discouraged and cast down and forsaken, but we are not yet ready to surrender the field. Will you, dear brethren, pray the Lord to sustain us and enable us to fight the good fight of faith, and that we may die in the service? We would be glad to publish The Primitive Baptist weekly, as we used to do. That is our desire. But we must have a larger list of subscribers to enable us to do that now. The cost of material and labor are all much higher now than they used to be, and it costs a whole lot more to get the paper out than it used to. If all our brethren will put their shoulder to the wheel and do all they possibly can this year to get new subscribers for the paper, and all will be prompt in renewing, perhaps we can soon be getting the paper out every week. Will you help? C. H. C.

Matthew 24

---February 15, 1924

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-It seems to me that our people are asleep. Their minds are wrapped up in worldly things too much. I am sorry that this is true-that our people are asleep on their spiritual duties. It seems that there are some who would rather spend their money in many other ways than to help a good cause. I am thirty-four years old and have been a reader of The Primitive Baptist fifteen or twenty years, or more-I don't know just how long. My mother was taking the paper before I was married, and we have been taking it since.

I do not know whether I am a Baptist or not. If so, I have been one ever since I can remember, for I have always felt myself to be a sinner in the sight of a just and holy God. I love the doctrine of salvation by grace. If I am not saved on this plan I am forever condemned. Brother Cayce, if not asking too much please give me your views on (Matthew 24) where the disciples asked our blessed Saviour concerning the end of the world and the coming of our blessed Saviour again. I see this different to what some do. I would like to get your views. From your unworthy brother, H. B. Golden. R. 2, East Tallassee, Ala.

We have given our views before in regard to this chapter. We will here only call attention to the fact that in (Matthew 24:34) the Saviour said, "This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." As this is true, the end of the world He was talking about was the end of the Jewish world or Jewish age. The desolations and tribulations were to occur at the destruction of Jerusalem, and it has been literally fulfilled. It was fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, and that before that generation had passed away. In the destruction of Jerusalem, during the siege of the city by the Roman army, mothers ate the flesh of their own children. Dead bodies were found in the holy place in the temple. There never was such desolation before, and never has been since, and never will be. This all came upon the Jews as a result of their disobedience. We bring troubles and distresses upon ourselves now as a result of our disobedience—God's people do. Our distresses in the church today are the result of our own wrong doings. May the Lord help us to improve our ways. C. H. C.

Debate Near McEwen, Tenn.

---March 15,1924

Some time ago we agreed to meet O. C. Lambert, a Campbellite, in debate at or near McEwen, Tenn. The date was set for Monday, April 7, for the discussion to begin. It will continue four days. We have just received word that it will be held at Shiloh, six miles south of McEwen, on the Bold Spring road, and that all parties coming by R. R. will get off at McEwen, on the N. C. & St. L. R. R., and that conveyance will be furnished to take care of all who go by rail. We do not deem it necessary to take space to give the propositions. We trust the brethren who can will attend, and make their arrangements when they go to stay until the close, unless called away on account of sickness. C. H. C.

Remarks To Elder R. O. Raulston

---March 15,1924

We trust that we appreciate what the dear brethren are doing in our behalf. We have been very much discouraged and cast down, and have felt very much like giving up. For some time during 1919, 1920 and 1921 it looked like every issue of the paper we printed was like pouring money into a sinkhole. The cost was enormous. We have considered very seriously doing what Elder Raulston says Elder Newman did. We have thought much of filling the agreements we have already made to engage in debates, but to make no more engagements for debating. We have engaged in a great many, but never have done so only at the request of an Old Baptist Church. It costs time and money to prepare for them, besides the time and expense to go and engage in the discussions. Often have we gone without our time being made good. Perhaps our expense to get there and back home was met all right; but the time to prepare and the expense of getting things a man would need to use amount to as much, or more, than the time and expense of getting to the place and back home. If a man prepares to meet the enemy he has to spend some money for things he will need. And he will have to devote some time to study the Bible as well as other books. He must study the other fellow's side as well as 'his own. So, we will only add again that we have been seriously considering the matter of engaging in no more debates after filling the promises we have already made. Now, we do so much appreciate what these dear brethren are doing. May the Lord's blessings rest upon them. Just one more word we want to add right here, and that is that we do not owe a penny in the world (except a few dollars for current expenses) for personal comforts or benefits. Nearly every dollar we owe is for the benefit of the cause—the publication of The Primitive Baptist and Old Baptist literature. We say this in connection with what our dear Brother Hollingsworth said regarding that matter. C. H. C.

We Feel So Thankful

---April 1, 1924

In this issue of the paper we are publishing extracts from a number of letters written us concerning the proposition being worked out by our dear brother, W. W. Hollingsworth, of Bessemer, Ala., and the proposition made by our dear brother, Elder J. H. O'Neal, Rupert, Ark., which was published a few issues back. These letters are from brethren and sisters who have sent contributions to us to relieve the indebtedness, a great part of which was incurred as war loss-when prices were so inflated and labor conditions were so bad. Our heart is simply filled with gratitude and thankfulness to these dear children of God who are thus coming to our relief. Somehow we felt all the while that if the good Lord was in the matter we would come out some way, sometime. We felt to trust the matter to Him, though sometimes things have looked so dark and gloomy, and we felt that we surely would have to give up in despair. Yet we tried not to complain, and never asked any of the brethren to contribute anything to our relief. We felt like if the Lord was with us, and it was His will for us to have relief in that way, He would put it into the heart of some brother to take the matter in hand without our request or suggestion. So we said nothing. Imagine our surprise when our dear brother, W. W. Hollingsworth, asked us about our condition and told us he wanted to put on a plan to relieve us, and asked if we would allow him to do so. We feel to thank the Lord and take courage. We also feel so thankful to these good brethren and sisters who have sent contributions to us. We have written personal letters to a number of them trying to express our thanks. But we cannot find the words to tell how thankful we feel. Our heart is simply full of gratitude. Every day the tears of gratitude come into our eyes, and sometimes they flow freely. Such expressions of love and fellowship and such manifestations and such kindness make us feel that surely the Lord is so wonderfully good to us. He surely has put it into your hearts to do what you have done and are doing. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon every one of you. We say, we wrote personal letters to several acknowledging receipt of the letters and trying to express our thankfulness. We are so far behind with our work, and it takes time to write letters, so we felt like the brethren and sisters would accept this as our feeble effort to express our thanks and gratitude without us taking the time to write each one personally. Will you, dear brethren and sisters, not conclude that we do not appreciate your kindness and what you have done? And will you accept the gratitude of our poor heart? And will you please remember us in your prayers? C. H. C.

Enoch Translated

---April 1, 1924

Brother E. E. Huddleston, Rienzi, Miss., asks us to give our views of (Genesis 5:24) and (Hebrews 11:5). The first reference says, "And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him." The latter reference says, "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God." Enoch was a servant and a true prophet of God, who walked humbly before the Lord and obeyed His commands. His obedience did not make him a child of God nor a prophet. God made him that. Then he was an obedient, and not a disobedient, child of God. "He walked with God." Then the Lord translated him. He was taken up to heaven without going through the ordeal of death-simply changed and carried home to glory. That is the same thing as will occur with all the Lord's children who are alive and remain on the earth when He comes again to gather His jewels home. "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." This is our understanding of the references, expressed in as few words as we know how. We haven't the time to write at length, but felt to say just a few words on the matter. We are very much behind with our work and are trying to catch up. C. H. C.

Carey The Father

---April 15, 1924

We have before us a little leaflet with the title, "Some Baptist Whys and Wherefores," by John Jeter Hurt, D. D., published by the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, Nashville, Tenn. On page 11, under the heading (page 10)," What My Membership Means," we find these words: "It means Plodding. William Carey, my Baptist forefather and the father of modern missions, said, 'I can plod; to this I owe everything.'" Who was the father of modern missions, as engaged in and practiced by the Missionary Baptists? The Rev. John Hurt says that William Carey was the father of modern missions. If Carey was the father, then Jesus Christ was not; the eternal God was not; the Holy Spirit was not. God was not the author of the modern mission business. It was an invention of man. Carey was its father. Then the mission business is not of God, but it is of man. God's children do not need the inventions of men in the affairs of religion. "Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, (touch not; taste not; handle not; which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men? Which things indeed have a shew of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh." - \(\(20\) \(Colossians 2:20-23\). C. H. Remarks To Elder J. W. Hoppes

---May 1, 1924

We can never find words to express our thankfulness and gratitude for such expressions and manifestations of Christian love and fellowship as is contained in the above letter. We feel so unworthy of such gifts and expressions of love and fellowship. We just cannot find words to tell how thankful we are and how much we appreciate the same. Dear brother, we remember being at your church and in your home. We have not forgotten the kindness shown to us, and how kindly we were cared for. We shall never forget you, and so much wish that we could see you again and join with you once more in the sweet service of our heavenly King. We do trust that you are enjoying the Lord's rich blessings, and may His blessings be yours to enjoy all along the journey, is our humble prayer. We feel to need your prayers, too. We feel to be so poor and needy. Please do pray for us. Our wife and the little babe are getting along well, for which we trust we feel so thankful to the good Lord. C. H. C.

Remarks To Elder T. W. Lindsey

---May 1, 1924

We are ready to meet with the dear brethren for the purpose of trying to bring peace in our beloved Zion at any time or place that may be agreed upon or suggested, and should be glad to do so. We confess our wrongs, and we are willing to confess them face to face with the brethren. We have said things that should not have been said. We ask no one to make any confession to us. If any brother has wronged us, we feel that we are willing to bear it as a part of the hardness one is required to bear as a good soldier. If any brother feels that he owes us any acknowledgment we are willing to hear it, but do not ask it. We believe that such a meeting should be held. The brethren in Texas might name the place and time. We hope they will set a time for which we are not already engaged. May the Lord help us all to confess our faults. C. H. C.

Progressives Lose Suit

---May 1, 1924

It seems from reports we have had that some of the members of the church at Delaware, Ohio, have been on the "progressive line" for a while, and that the same caused a division in the church there. The "progressive" party brought suit for the property, but the suit was dismissed and they were taxed with the cost. We have a letter from there which says: The Progressive faction of the Marlboro Primitive Baptist Church failed, in their suit in court here, to prove themselves the church. The court held that the sister churches of the several associations are the proper judge as to who the church is, and what they decided was the church would be the proper owners of the property, and so dismissed the suit, leaving both parties the use of the house pending the decision of the sister churches as to which is the church; and whichever that is are the rightful owners of the property. The court assessed the costs on the complainants. The sister churches had already decided that we (the defendants) are the church in order, and all were present to give their evidence, but of course it was not needed, owing to the reason of their first star witness gave them away by admitting that it is within the power or jurisdiction of the sister churches to decide all questions of doctrine, etc. Our attorney then asked the court to dismiss the case on the grounds that the court could not decide who is the church, and that it all laid in the jurisdiction of the sister churches, and if they found us the church in order we would also own the property. The court at once dismissed the suit, dissolving their injunction, charging all the costs to them. My prayer has been all along that the Lord bless the truth and bless the court with righteousness in judgment. Bless His holy name! How thankful we hope we are to Him-not that we feel exalted, but how merciful the Lord is to us poor weak creatures, sinners, unworthy as we know we are. May the Lord bless you and family, and all the family of the Lord in all the earth, is my prayer, for Christ's sake. It has always seemed strange to us that men would depart from the old principles that our people have always held to and claim to be the original church, and then so often try to obtain the church property. It is bad enough to depart from the original principles, and still worse to do that and then try to get the property. May the Lord's blessings rest upon His humble poor, and lead us all in the right way. C. H. C.

Trouble Among Them

---May 1, 1924

It seems that the Progressive Baptists are having some trouble among them on the question of instrumentalities in regeneration. Some of the preachers are advocating the idea that God sometimes uses the gospel, or the preached word, as an instrument in the work of regeneration. It is the same old Arminian theory that has been advocated in years past by Fuller, Burnam, and others. Some among the Progressives are advocating this doctrine and some are opposing it. It seems to us that they are only going on a little farther in the way they started when they left the old landmarks and started out with their new measures. When they started out after the new measures which they have they only started away from the old way and from the true service, and the farther they go the farther they get from the truth. C. H. C.

Is It Lawful?

---May 1, 1924

Is it lawful for any member of the Old Baptist Church to moderate a conference where they have no preacher? We have a deacon, but he stays at home to keep from moderating. Then I want to know if some other member could act and hold a lawful conference to attend to church business? Will some dear brother respond through the paper, for some of us at our church want to hold our conference. We want to know, and would love to hear from you, Brother Cayce. I have never seen any act except preachers and deacons, and I was reared by Old Baptists, and I do hope and trust that I am one. I have a name with them, but don't know that I am one-do hope I am. I would love for several of our good brethren to write on this. Answer through the paper as early as you can. D. E. Williams. Delta, Ala.

REMARKS

The church has the right to select whom she pleases to serve as moderator during the sitting of the church in conference, just so they select an Old Baptist who is in order. The church has the right to select any of her own members to serve that she sees proper to select to serve as moderator during conference meeting. We never have heard this called in question. Suppose the church had no minister or deacon-would that deprive her of the right to hold conference? Most certainly not. If the deacon is staying at home to keep from serving the church in any capacity the church may see fit to ask of him, to the best of his ability, he is doing very wrong, in our humble judgment, and is laying himself liable to the censure of the church. But that does not deprive the church of her right to choose another brother and to go ahead with her conference. This is our humble opinion, and we do not believe any brother will dispute it. C. H. The Debate Near McEwen

---May 1, 1924

The debate with Mr. O. C. Lambert was held according to appointment near McEwen, Tenn., beginning on Monday, April 7, and closing on Thursday, April 10. The weather was good most all the time and a large crowd was in attendance, considering the fact that it was at a busy time. Ten of our brethren in the ministry were in attendance, though a few of them were there only a part of the time. They were, Elders J. M. Fuqua, J. W. Lomax, W. R. Rushton, N. J. Hinson, Rob Hinson, W. C. Davis, J. H. Phillips, J. B. Halbrook, W. H. Meredith and J. R. Scott. Elder Phillips served as moderator for us. Brethren W. A. Shutt, S. E. Hurt and Van Hurt, who had been liberated to exercise in public, were also present. Mr. Lambert seems to be a nice gentleman, though he is young and inexperienced as a debater. Mr. F. B. Srygley, with whom we had a discussion in 1912, which was published in book form, served as moderator for Mr. Lambert. They had a stenographer present to take the speeches as delivered, and announced that the debate would be published. The stenographer, however, told us during recess the first day, in the presence of Brother Shutt, that she did not get all we said; but she may have a fairly good report of the speeches-we are not prepared to say about that. The discussion passed off very pleasantly, and we trust that it may put some folks to reading and studying for themselves. We stayed at the home of Mr. Cayce Fuqua and wife, near by, during the time. Mr. Fuqua is a son of Brother P. J. Fuqua, and is an Old Baptist in belief. His wife is a member of the Methodists. They were kind and good to us; we shall not soon forget them. Good order was maintained throughout and the brethren and friends showed us much kindness. May the Lord's blessings rest upon them all, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

One Suffers On Account Of Others

---May 15, 1924

We wish to kindly call attention to one thing you say, dear sister, concerning the Lord punishing one of His children for the sins of another. Turn and read ((Num 16:1) (Numbers 16) and you will see that some were punished with Dathan and Abiram for the sins of those two men. Their children were destroyed with them. And again, Israel suffered on account of the golden wedge, when only one man knew the wedge was in the camp. God's ministers may sometimes suffer for things they need on account of the neglect of the Lord's people to minister unto them as they should. True, they may sometimes fail to minister as the Lord requires because the minister has failed to teach this duty as he should; but the failure is not always, perhaps, because the minister has failed to teach. There might be such a thing as one being covetous and failing to do his duty on that account. It is also true that the minister might be covetous, and on that account not do his duty, and he might, on that account, think more should be done by the brethren than the Lord really requires. When the minister is not engaged in preaching he should have some labor to perform to help earn a support for himself and family; then when he is spending his time preaching where his services are in demand, the brethren should see that his temporal needs are supplied. This is the Lord's plan, as we understand it; and in following the Lord's plan no one is overburdened, and His blessings are enjoyed.

Going To California

---May 15, 1924

We expect, the Lord willing, to leave our home on Saturday afternoon, May 31, starting on a trip to California. We will stop at Little Rock and have meeting there Sunday, June 1. We leave Little Rock at 6:40 Sunday afternoon for Oklahoma City, and will go to Edmond, Okla., and will have meeting as may be arranged by Brother W. T. Morrisett on Monday and Tuesday, June 2 and 3. On Wednesday morning we will leave Oklahoma City to fill appointments as may be arranged by Elders J. I Colwell and Ira Hollis until June 12. On the latter date we will leave that section for Tucson, Arizona, and expect to arrive there at 5 p. m., Friday, June 13, and be there until Sunday afternoon, June 15. On Sunday afternoon, June 15, we leave Tucson for Los Angeles, and will stay in California until July 6 or 7, and will fill appointments as may be arranged by Brother J. I Caneer and Sister Geo. E. Darsey. We humbly trust the Lord may be in the matter. We hesitate and dread to start on these journeys, fearing the Lord may not be in the matter. We ask that you pray the Lord to be with us and enable us to present and to speak of such things as will have a tendency to bind His little children together in love and fellowship, and that He will care for our loved ones at home and protect them from all harm in this evil world. Present For Baby

---May 15, 1924

To the Editor of The Primitive Baptist and His Companion:

I see in my last paper, April 1st, of a new arrival of a baby girl, and I want to offer my congratulations to the happy parents, and hope her stay may be long and bring pleasure every day and be a blessing to them in their old age. One baby can bring more real joy and happiness in a true home than all the wealth of the universe. I want to make my bow to the little queen, seated on her throne, surrounded by her subjects, her maids of honor in waiting to come and go at her beck and call while she reigns supreme; and may she always hold maidenhood and womanhood as the most sacred of all her earthly possessions. I am sending her a tiny gift. It will help to get her something that baby needs. From One Who Loves Babies. April 14, 1924. The above letter did not have the writer's name in it nor on it. We do appreciate the same. May the Lord bless the writer, is our humble prayer. The little girl (Ilene by name) is doing fine. She is a pretty and sweet little one, and is a good baby. We have two girls and two boys. We are trying to train them up in the right way. We realize that this is a problem and a task in these days. We feel that we need the Lord's help that we may be able to train them as they should be. Please remember us in your prayers. C. H. C. and Wife.

Fullerite Lost His Pants

---June 1, 1924

A little clipping was sent us some time ago from the Flag, published at Fulton, Ky., which says: There is rumor of debates on every side; one Claud Cayce, of somewhere, was in this part of the country sometime ago, and said he would take my pants off if he could get hold of me, and I always keep my belt unbuckled and suspenders loose, and am still getting my mail as follows: C. B. Massey, Pleasant Shade, Tenn., and all he would have to do to get a chance at the Captain is to address him in like manner as above. In the first place, we never used any such expression. We would be ashamed to expose such a thing as Massey before an audience of decent people in any such way. In the next place, he wears his "belt unbuckled and his suspenders so loose" that he seems to have lost his pants already in the writing of such a statement as the above. If we wanted to take his pants off we would be without a job. His nakedness is already exposed. Selah. C. H. C.

J. B. Hardy Causing Trouble

--- July 1, 1924

I get where I feel like sometimes I will give up, as you know we have had so much trouble in our (the Buffalo River) association over the Hardy business, and now Hardy is among us most all the time, and our precious brethren have (I think) gone to the extreme on both sides, and I am trying to get the brethren to work for love and fellowship. I don't want to write any more about troubles, but wish I could be with you and talk to you, but I can't do this now. Your brother in hope, W. C. Pope. Pope, Tenn.

It is strange to us that the brethren in that country will let J. B. Hardy divide them and destroy their peace and fellowship, as has been done. He had absolutely no connection with our sort of Baptists in this country, and they are the sort the Baptists of the Buffalo River were in our young days, when we visited them more frequently. In following Hardy they have gone from where they were in those days. C. H. C.

Trip In California

---July 15, 1924

We left home Sunday evening, June 8, accompanied by Elder John R. Harris, of Thornton, Ark., for our trip in California. We arrived in Oklahoma City Monday morning and were met at the train by Brother W. T. Morrisett, of Edmond, and conveyed to his home. Had meeting in Edmond that night and Tuesday. Elders J. C. Clark, of Crescent, A. D. West, of Wayne, Okla., and Elder Allen, of Oklahoma City, were all with us there. We also had meeting at the home of Elder Allen on Tuesday night, and these brethren were with us there. It was sure an enjoyable and pleasant meeting. Monday night Elder J. I. Colwell, of Mt. View, came in and was with us Tuesday and Tuesday night. We were glad to meet all these good brethren, and they are anxious for peace among our people. Wednesday morning we left Oklahoma City, and arrived at San Simon, Ariz., on Thursday about 1 o'clock and had meeting in and near there that night and Friday night. There are very few Old Baptists there, but we had a very pleasant stay with them. Saturday we left San Simon and arrived at Los Angeles Sunday morning about 7:50. Sister L. A. Cloud, who lives at Casa Grande, Ariz., and who used to live at Kingsland, Ark., and is a member of Mt. Paran Church in our association, met us at San Simon and went with us to California and was at every service in that state. We are in such a rush to get this article in the paper, and the printer is waiting on us, so we cannot give a detailed account of the trip. Suffice to say that we had service in Los Angeles vicinity Sunday and Sunday night. We left there Monday morning for San Jose, and had service there that night and Tuesday and at night. We organized a little band there with the help of Elder Harris, and we had the pleasure of baptizing three. From San Jose we went to Fresno and had meeting one night at the home of an afflicted sister named Miller who had not heard a sermon for a number of years. She has not walked a step for a number of years. From Fresno we went to Lindsay and had meeting near there for two or three days and nights. We organized a little band there and had the pleasure of baptizing five into their fellowship. One night we had meeting in Exeter, a few miles from Lindsay. Then we returned to Los Angeles vicinity and had meeting until and including Sunday night-the fifth Sunday in June. We organized a little band there, with the help of Elder Harris. Brother B. S. Minor, a deacon, also officiated with us in the organization of these churches. A message was sent to us at South Gate, in care of Geo. E. Darsey, for us to come home as mother was sick. We got the message about 2 o'clock that night. We were spending the night with Brother J. I. Caner in Montebello. We got up and went to the station and found that there was no train for us to get home earlier than to leave Los Angeles at 5 p. m. Monday. At that time we left that place and arrived home Thursday evening, July 3, at 6:45, and found mother better than when the message was sent. We are doing this writing on July 11, and feel so thankful that we are able to say mother is still improving, and we hope that she will soon be up again. We had a pleasant trip among the Lord's children in California. They were kind and good to us-much better than we feel to deserve. We desire, if the Lord will, to visit them again some day. We cannot mention the different ones we met, but we want to assure you that you all have a warm place in our heart. May the richest blessings of heaven rest upon every one of you, is our humble prayer.

Please do not forget to remember us in your petitions at the throne of grace. C. H. C.

Time Changed

---July 15, 1924

The time for the debate between us and I. B. Bradley, at Woodville, Ala., has been changed so as to begin on Monday, August 4, instead of Tuesday, August 5. This has been done in order not to conflict with the meeting of the Sequachee Valley Association, which is to be held with the church in North Chattanooga, Tenn., begin-ning on Friday, August 8. We trust a goodly number of brethren will attend the debate, for we are sure it will be a clean discussion. We have met Mr. Bradley in two debates and he conducted himself in a clean manner in both of them. We have just received a letter from Brother Bradley telling us of the death of his companion, which occurred on the 12th of June. He has our sincere and deepest sympathy. C. H. C.

He Got Pinched

---August 15, 1924

In our debate with A. U. Nunnery at Laster school-house, as announced, A. Nunnery, the little editor of the Missionary Worker, at Chickasha, Okla., was moderator for A. U. At the opening of the service the "Rev." A. made a little talk cautioning all to keep quiet and to say nothing, and stated that if one should try to put in that it was a sign he was pinched. Before the day was gone the "Rev." A. rose and began to show his madness by ugly words and manifesting a blustery spirit. He was the first man to show that he was pinched. He reported in his paper that the "Hardshells" tried to carry the thing by storm, but he is the fellow who tried that game, as all know who were present. Elder A. U. said in our presence that he was ashamed of the matter-which could refer to nothing else than the way his brother had acted. The wife of the "Rev." A. was there, and after dismissal, when things were in a rather disturbed condition, the "Rev." A. manifesting his madness, she went into the stand where he was and put her arm around him and asked him to hush and be quiet and not act as he was doing. She turned to us and said, "Brother Cayce, you have not been mad, have you?" We answered that we had not been mad and that we had seen nothing to be mad about. She said, "you have too much religion to get mad, haven't you?" We told her that we did not know about that, but that we had seen nothing for us to be mad about. The "Rev." A. is giving, in his paper, some statements that the witnesses present know are not just as the facts were. A. U. Nunnery, the man we debated with, conducted himself in a very nice and gentlemanly way, and manifested that he is really a much better man than his brother. Those who were present know how the matters were, and do not need the testimony of others. What we say will not reach the readers of the Worker. May the Lord pity them. C. H. C.

Pamphlet by Elder A. V. Simms

---September 1, 1924

Elder A. V. Simms, Box 601, Atlanta, Ga., has published a pamphlet on the question of secret orders in the church, the title of which is, "Let There be Light." The price of the pamphlet is 25 cents. What is said on the subject of secret orders we think is good and timely, and all our people should take warning. It is a pamphlet well worth reading. But in the pamphlet Elder Simms has something to say about the trouble and division between his people, the Progressives, and the "Old Liners," and we think that he is somewhat inconsistent. He wrote us a letter concerning the pamphlet, and asked if we would offer them for sale. We wrote to him under date of August 18. After writing and mailing the letter we decided that our readers should have the benefit of seeing what we wrote to the brother, and for that reason decided to publish the letter which follows. C. H. C.

THE LETTER

Elder A. V Simms:

Dear Brother-Yours of July 17 came while I was away from home. The pamphlet has been received and read. What you say concerning the Masonic fraternity I can most heartily endorse; but there is a little in the work which it seems to me is rather inconsistent. Page 43: "For this reason they set up bars of non-fellowship against us because some of our churches wanted instrumental music. * * * This was all wrong. God's law was not violated in either case. Where in the Bible will we find it? And if these things were wrong would not God have said so in His word?" etc. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." -(II Timothy 3:16-17). If Paul was right in this text then everything which the church should have or practice is expressly commanded. If everything we should engage in as a church and in the church is expressly commanded, then it is a violation to engage in or practice a thing that is not expressly commanded. The instrumental music in the church is an invention of Rome, and is not commanded. Therefore, it is a flagrant violation, and is no more to be fellowshiped in the church of God than Masonry. My brother, you cannot escape this difficulty. It is true that instrumental music was used under the law; but it was used in the temple worship where the blood was sprinkled and where the beasts were slain and the blood shed and offerings made. Those offerings typified the offering that Christ should make. When Jesus shed His blood and the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, the temple worship and service was all fulfilled and was no more. Everything connected with it went out. To use now what they used then is to go back to temple worship, and one could as well offer up bullocks, etc., as to use the instrumental music. God gave the instrument which we are required to use in praising Him, and that instrument consists of the vocal organs. To use something else, as instrumental music, is as bad as to do something else for baptism other than what He has commanded. Page 44 you say: "No church has the sovereign right to violate the law of God. And if she does, she cannot expect her sister churches to also violate God's law in order to be in fellowship with her." This being true, then the Progressives had no right to introduce instrumental music in the churches. And if they did, they had no right to expect the sister churches to retain them in fellowship. Page 45: "Let the reader remember what I have said above-that the secret order question has been revived since the division with the Old Liners; and let them remember that those who have revived it and have quietly encouraged it are the ones who are wholly responsible for present conditions." If those who have brought in the secret order question are responsible for present conditions among your people, and are responsible for the division it causes, is it not also a fact that those who brought instrumental music into the churches are responsible for the trouble it caused and are responsible for that division? If not, why not? It was a new thing among Primitive Baptists. " It seems to me that if those who introduce one new thing are responsible for the division that that causes, then those who introduced another new thing are responsible for the division caused by that. If not, why not? Page 46: "If, therefore, the fellowship of secret orders is more precious to them than the fellowship and peace of the church of God, this is a matter entirely their own, but they cannot expect the rank and file of the Primitive Baptist Churches to follow them into such heresy." It seems to me reasonable that the same thing is just as true regarding instrumental music in the churches. Those who introduced the musical instruments and fellowshipped those who used them preferred them to the fellowship and peace of the whole body. If not, why would they not lay them down? Then why should they expect the rank and file of the Primitive Baptists to follow them? Page 47: "But if it extends to the entire brotherhood (and assuredly it does) does it not follow that when a church commits an act unauthorized by the word of God, knowing at the same time that her sister churches cannot fellowship it, is she not violating this text?" If a church in committing an act unauthorized by the word of God, knowing that her sister churches cannot fellowship it, is violating this text, {(Hebrews 13:1)} then the churches which introduced instrumental music violated that text. I have not written this to hurt or to wound your feelings; but to try to show you where you stand. I would be glad for you to see the truth and to renounce that which has caused so much trouble in our beloved Zion. I never met you; but I remember hearing my sainted father speak highly of you. He met you long years ago -before that trouble was ever among the churches. I learned long ago to love you, though I never met you. I would be glad for you to see the error and come back to the old church-the original Primitive ground. May the good Lord bless you in what good you may undertake to do, and enable you to see the right, is my humble prayer. Yours in humble hope, C. H. Cayce.

Trip In Tennessee And Alabama

---September 1, 1924

We left home Sunday night, July 20, for our trip in Tennessee and Alabama, to meet the appointments and engagements as announced, or which had been published. We were met at Huron, Tenn., by Chester Seaton, a son of Brother John Seaton, and conveyed, with others, to the home of Brother Seaton, who lived near where the debate was held with A. U. Nunnery on July 22, 23, 24, 25. The debate was well attended, a large crowd being present every day. The names of the Old Baptist ministers who attended are: Elders J. H. Phillips, J. W. Hardwick, J. B. Halbrook, John Grist, S. E. Reid, A. B. Ross, N. J. Hinson, W. H. Merideth, M. D. Brann, W. C. Davis, W. L. Murray, L. D. Hamilton, C. F. Parker, T. M. Phillips, J. L. Fuller and D. Neisler-sixteen in all. Licensed ministers in attendance were: S. E. Hurt, W. A. Shutt and J. B. Chenault. Primitive Baptists were present from seven different states-Ohio, Kentucky, Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi and Missouri, besides the Tennesseans present. The brethren all expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the result of the debate, which went along very pleasantly except a time or two that Elder Nunnery's moderator acted in an ugly manner, and it seemed that he wanted to "raise a rough house." On Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday we were with the church at Johnson's Cross Roads, near where the discussion was held, and had a very pleasant meeting there. On Saturday a daughter of Brother Seaton came to the church and asked for a home with them. She was baptized on Monday by Elder J. H. Phillips, the pastor of the church. On Tuesday Brother and Sister Maness were received on confession of faith, the church of their former membership having ceased to have any meetings. On Sunday brethren and sisters were present from thirteen sister churches. Tuesday afternoon we went to Lexington and boarded a train for McEwen, Tenn., and tried to preach in that town that night in the Presbyterian meeting house. A large crowd was present, and we enjoyed a very pleasant meeting. Wednesday we went to Harmony, about twelve miles from McEwen, and had a pleasant meeting there. The congregation was good and a good interest was manifested. This is the old home church of Elder J. J. Fuqua, who went to his reward a number of years ago, and we had not been to this church since we were called there on the occasion of his funeral. We were glad to be with them once more. On Thursday we filled the appointment at Bethel. Quite a crowd was present, although it rained in the early part of the morning. Elder J. M. Fuqua is the efficient pastor, and was present. We spent the night with him in his pleasant home. He was not well at all, and could not go with us to any other appointment. We trust he is much improved before this. Friday we went to Dickson and filled the appointment there. We had a very pleasant meeting at this place, and met several whom we had not seen for quite awhile. Elder W. R. Rushton now lives in Dickson, close to the church. Elder J. A. Pope, who lives at Dickson, was away filling appointments. We were sorry not to meet him again. We spent the night with Brother Rushton and enjoyed his kind hospitality in his pleasant home. Saturday we filled the appointment at Burns. Elder Rushton went with us, and several others from Dickson also went. This was the regular meeting day at Dickson, but they dismissed the meeting on that day to be at Burns. We enjoyed a pleasant meeting there, and felt glad to be with those good people once more. Saturday night we went to Nashville and were met at the train by Brother and Sister Shutt, and spent the night with them in their home. Sunday we filled the appointment made for us with the Bethel Church in Nashville. A large crowd was present, and a good interest was manifested. They have a new meeting house just about completed. It is a real nice and substantial and plain building, and will comfortably seat 500 people, we suppose. This is truly a lovely band of Old Baptists. They know how to make a brother feel at home among them. After service Sunday we started in a car with Brother Shutt and Brother Reid for the home of Brother B. B. Lawler, near Brownsboro, Ala., and arrived there that night at 8:45-just six hours and fifteen minutes on the road. Brother Lawler is the father of our wife. He is deacon of old Flint River Church, the oldest Baptist Church in Alabama. His father before him was also a deacon in that old church for years. Our little girl (Florida) was there on a visit. We were glad to see her, and also glad to see all the family. Monday we went on to Woodville, Ala., in the car, where we met Mr. I B. Bradley in a four days discussion. Mr. Thompson was moderator for Mr. Bradley, and Elder Turnipseed was our moderator. The moderators really had little to do but to keep time. It was a pleasant discussion all the way through, from first to last. Mr. Bradley is a nice, clean man, and does not misrepresent an opponent. The discussion was held in the auditorium of their new school building, and the room was full every day, and all could not get in the house. The weather was hot, and the people proved that they were interested by getting there early and staying in that hot room and maintaining such remarkably good order during the whole of each session every day. The Old Baptist ministers present were: Elders J. J. Turnipseed, J. W. Lomax, R. O. Raulston, W. D. Rousseau, John Page, A. J. Houk, H. P. Houk, M. Sparks, W. J. Harwood, G. A. Stephens, N. V. Parker, J. N. Dunaway, H. L. Golston, W. T. Flanagan, J. W. Bragg, M. A. Hackworth, H. M. Smith, F. B. Moon and Fred Stewart-nineteen in all. The licensed ministers present were: J. M. Warren, J. M. Walker and W. A. Shutt. The Old Baptists expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the discussion, and well pleased with the way it was conducted. It was a pleasant time. On the last day a message was received for us from home that mother was not doing any good, and that it might be well for us to come home. We went home with Brother Lawler, and Ben and Claud (his sons) conveyed us to Huntsville that night and we left there at 2 o'clock for home. We arrived home Friday evening and found mother a little improved. Since then she has improved slowly. Our family were all well, for all of which we trust we feel thankful to the good Lord. The brethren, sisters and friends were all good to us on this trip. During the debate with Elder Nunnery we stayed at the good home of Brother John Seaton, and during the debate in Woodville we stayed in the good home of Brother Ernest Thomas. We were well cared for and kindly treated in both of the homes- much better than we feel to deserve. May the good Lord bless all the good brethren and sisters who so kindly cared for us, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Reply From Elder Simms

Elder C. H. Cayce:

My Dear Brother-Your letter containing two lines of endorsement of my little book and two pages of single-spaced criticism pointing out my inconsistency, has been received. I thank you, both for the endorsement and the criticism; for the good Lord knows if I am not right I WANT to be, and any criticism is always welcomed by me, and I try to always weigh it for what it is worth. But, strangely enough, the very Scripture you use (and the only text you quoted in your entire letter) is the one I have always considered a regular knock-out for the unscriptural bars of non-fellowship you have set up; for if to set up bars in this matter was the right thing to do, then there must be some authority in God's word for doing so, or else it follows that the Scriptures do not "thoroughly furnish us to every good work." Has not God's Holy Word condemned every wrong thing? If instrumental music in the churches had been as objectionable to the Lord as it is to some Old Baptists would He not have said so? Would He not have furnished you with the weapon to destroy your brethren with? But you did not quote all my letter bearing on the point. I said "and continued meetings." Wonder why you did not reply to that, and justify your brethren for setting up bars against such meetings? You know very well that they did it. Would you undertake to say that the Scriptures justify you brethren in setting up bars against us on this account? Wonder why you left that off? Was it because you have always held such meetings yourself? Also when these bars were first introduced they included both life and fire insurance. Do the Scriptures "thoroughly furnish" such a law? If you will get a copy of the first resolutions passed by the Phenix City Church, of Alabama, you will see that all these things were included. But when those brethren found out that nearly everybody was carrying some kind of insurance they have never enforced that part of it, so far as it related to insurance. Now, Brother Cayce, listen: If you brethren had put this whole matter as one of expediency, and not one of law, we would never have had any division over the matter. One or two churches in Georgia had had organs in use for twenty-five years before these bars were set up, and your sainted father visited and preached in them without one word of condemnation. It went on so until there was war between Elders Bullard and Bussey at Columbus. It was all of the flesh, and to obtain the mastery. That was all. You express a desire that I might see my inconsistency, "and come back to the old church." I can't come back. I haven't gone anywhere. I can never consent that you had a Scriptural right to set up bars against the things mentioned, for to do so would be to admit that the church may set bars at any time not justified by the Bible, and lay a precedent that work havoc later upon other things. But listen again: If you will acknowledge that you had no right in the Bible, and that it was a mistake made at that time, and take down your unscriptural bars, then as a matter of good faith, I solemnly promise that I will do all in my power to have our churches everywhere to take out their organs for the sake of peace, and if you and your brethren demand it, we will not have another meeting lasting longer than three days if it can be possibly avoided. Is this not fair? I have never advocated the organ in my churches. I have consistently contended all the while that the fellowship of the brotherhood everywhere was worth infinitely more than an organ. I have always felt, and still feel, that as it was neither commanded nor forbidden in the New Testament Scriptures it was unimportant, so far as gospel law was concerned. But when you brethren make it a law, when I know that God has not done so, you go too far, and for which you will have to give account. Try me. Take down your bars. Acknowledge to the world that you acted without divine authority when you set up bars against music in the churches, continued meetings and insurance, and throw the whole over as a matter of expediency, and so soon as you do this I will bend every energy within me to get my people to conform to the law of expediency and have peace with the brethren everywhere, insofar as it is possible. I can make no promise as to how they will take such a proposition. I feel sure that my church here in Atlanta will only be glad to do so, and I am quite sure that many others will do the same thing, but I would not promise to tear up a church over these things, for this would be doing the same things that you have done -making a law when there is none. Elder Hull told me this morning that you are to be in Atlanta soon. I hope it will be so that I can meet you face to face and discuss the matter with you, and if possible to entertain you in my home.

Will you inform me just when you are to be here? The latter part of the present month I am to be away at some associations. Yours in Jesus, A. V Simms., Atlanta, Ga.

REPLY TO ELDER SIMMS

On another page in this paper will be found a letter from Elder Simms in reply to our letter to him, which was published in our issue of September 1. We feel that we are perfectly willing to let our readers have the benefit of what Elder Simms has had to say in reply to our letter. So we are giving space for that and for our reply to the letter. We believe Elder Simms will have no objection to these letters being in our paper. Of course his people will not see them-at least, not many of them will. We do not care for a lengthy discussion of the matter through the paper. We do feel, however, that it is right for our people to know how the matter stands, in view of the fact that a proposal was once made for a meeting with these brethren to discuss matters of difference, etc. C. H. C.

OUR REPLY

Elder A. V Simms:

Dear Brother-Yours of the 1st to hand. Yes, it is strange that you should use (II Timothy 3:16-17) to prove that our people had no right to put up bars against the use of a thing in the church, and as a church, that is not authorized in the word of God! That tells us that the word of God furnishes us with EVERYTHING we should use or practice in the church. If not, then we are not thoroughly furnished by the word of God. If we are thoroughly furnished by it with everything we should practice, then that text itself requires us to put up, or keep up, the bars against everything not expressly commanded in the word of God. No other text was needed, and never will be needed, as authority to exclude from the church of God such inventions of Rome as instrumental music in the church. As to continued meetings, the circumstances of the case, and what may be engaged in the meetings, have much to do with it. None of our brethren have ever objected to a meeting being continued longer than three days, that I know of, when it was manifestly the Lord's doing that the meeting was continued. Yes, I have preached in meetings that lasted longer than three days; but at the same time I do not believe that the tactics that were sometimes engaged in by the Kirk-lands, when this matter was being agitated among our people, were right or Scriptural. Such things as were sometimes practiced then will get people in the church under excitement and fleshly sympathy, and result in injury to the cause. But when a meeting is continued from day to day, because it is necessary to appoint a meeting to administer baptism to another one of the Lord's little children, it is a different matter. But we have not destroyed our brethren. You destroyed yourselves by introducing in the church things that were foreign to the word of God, and that were new things among Primitive Baptists. If you had not had the things declared against, then the declarations against the same would have never touched you. If, as you insinuate, I have always engaged in holding "protracted meetings," can you explain how it is that I am not out of line with the church in Phenix City? Can you explain why it is that their declaration did not reach me as well as you, if I had been doing the same things you had been doing? The first mission society that was ever organized among the Baptists was a matter of expediency. All their boards and societies have been matters of expediency. The Bible does not say, that I remember of, that you shall not have a missionary board, or a Southern Convention, or a Sunday school, or a Woman's Missionary Union, or a Ladies' Aid Society, or State Convention, or a Mite Society-these and hundreds of other things are engaged in and practiced by the world (including the Missionary Baptists), and they are not mentioned in the Bible that I remember of. If a thing may be practiced just because it is not mentioned in the Bible, then we may as well practice all these things as to have your organ. There is only one place to draw the line against the things not mentioned in the Bible-and that is against the very first thing. You say one or two churches had organs in use for twenty-five years before these bars were set up. Yes, and the Baptists had the Fuller and Carey mission business among them, too, from 1792 until 1832 to 1845. Did that make it right? No, and you know it did not. The mistake the Baptists made in that day was in bearing with their departures so long. And the mistake the Baptists in South Georgia and Alabama made was in bearing with the organ departure so long. I freely confess for them that they made this mistake. The very first church that introduced the organ should have been withdrawn from, instanter, unless they put it out at once. Does this confession help you any? If the organ business was all of the flesh and to obtain the mastery, then it is against God's Book. I agree with you, that it was a fleshly desire that prompted its use. I also agree with you that it was to obtain the mastery-" we will use it, no matter if it is objected to, and offensive to, the great body of Primitive Baptists!" Evidently that is the spirit it was of. We heard some such expressions as that, a similar expression, when we were in that country (south Ga.) in the winter of 1905-06. Yes, you have gone from the practice of the Old Baptists in the use of organs in the church. They were introduced in your own day-it was not before you came into the world-was it? If you do not come back, or labor for a union with our people, until we confess that we should take down bars against what the Bible does not authorize, we are of the opinion that you will never be with us. If we would take down the bars against the practices engaged in by the New School Baptists that are not mentioned in the Bible, we suppose they would willingly unite with us, too. We suppose the Burnamites would do the same thing. When the church of God gives up her right to put up and keep up bars against things that are not authorized by the Bible, she gives up the only thing that will keep her a separate people from all others. This she will never do-at least, she cannot afford to do it, unless she is ready to surrender everything and cease to be the church of God. If your letter expresses your real sentiment, and I do not mean by this to insinuate that you are not sincere, then I may as well say, candidly, that we will, doubtless, remain apart. If you give up the organ business the bar against that practice would not be against you. If you hold to it, then it is against you. If you want the bar down that is against you, you are the man to get the bar out of the way by laying aside the things that the bar is against. Otherwise, let it alone. You have admitted (in your pamphlet) that our people are having more additions to their churches than yours are. As they are, I think the safe thing for them to do is to continue on in the same old way and leave the result with the good Lord. He has not forsaken them yet, according to your own argument. It seems that He is forsaking your people. Why? Because you have forsaken His way. Is Ephraim still joined to his idols? Yours in humble hope, C. H. Cayce.

Our Mother Gone

---October 15, 1924

In our last issue we stated that mother was gradually growing worse, and that unless there should be a change soon she would not last long, and that just as that paper was going to press she seemed to be just a little better. The seeming turn for the better did not last long. By the time the paper reached the readers she was again sinking. On Monday, October 13, at 12:30 in the day, our dear and precious mother peacefully and quietly fell asleep in Jesus. We carried her to Martin, Tenn., where she was laid to rest by the side of our dear father, on Wednesday, October 15, where she will peacefully sleep until the Lord comes to gather His jewels home. We returned home Thursday morning at 3:24, October 16, in time to put a little notice of mother's passing away in this issue of the paper. Part of the paper has already been printed, and is a little late. A more extended account will be in the next issue. Our hearts are sad. We feel so cast down. It is so hard to give up our dear mother. We miss her, and feel so sad that we can never see her again in our home or in her home. We shall miss her words of caution and advice. We feel so much to need the Lord's care and sustaining grace, and humbly ask the Lord's dear children to pray the Lord in our behalf, that He would sustain us in this sad hour of distress. All our hope is in Him. He was mother's stay and she rejoiced in Him in her last days, and told us she was just going to that blessed home where there is no more suffering or pain, to be with Jesus forever. We are sure she is at rest. We desire to be reconciled to the Lord's will and dealing with us. Brethren, please pray for us. C. H. C.

Call For A Peace Meeting

Dear Brother Cayce:

Enclosed you will find a call for a peace meeting. Please publish in the paper, and be sure and come to it. I believe the time is ripe for such a meeting. May the Lord enable us to do the right thing. Yours in hope, O. Strickland. Munday, Texas.

THE CALL

To the Lord's poor divided and sub-divided children scattered over Texas and elsewhere in all the different factions, who are tired of strife and division and long to see a coming together of all the peace loving, right living, people of God, to confess their faults one to another and to pray one for another, and to try to forgive and be forgiven and pull together, in place of pulling apart-Greetings: We, the members of Little Flock Church, at Munday, Texas, and also members of the church at Knox City, Texas, desiring a condition whereby we can live together in peace with each other; and not only us, but that God's people elsewhere could see the folly of strife and division and confess their faults one to another and forgive each other and pull together like Pharaoh's horses, hereby invite all the Baptists having like feelings and faults to confess to meet with us at Munday, Texas, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in November, 1924, to sing and pray and hear the different brethren preach, and to confess faults one to another and forgive one another, and see if we can't get closer to each other. J. W. M. Pharr. O. Strickland. This was endorsed by the church at Knox City and the church at Munday. O. Strickland.

REMARKS

If not providentially prevented we expect to be at that meeting, and we now earnestly request every Old Baptist, and more especially every Old Baptist in the ministry, and especially those in Texas, to be at the meeting. We feel just now that we have a few words we would be glad to say to every one of you face to face. Brethren, will you please try to be there? It makes no difference to us which side you are on, or which side you have been on, we want to see you, and we humbly beg you to try to go. May the good Lord lead us all in the right way, and help us by His grace to live and walk as becometh His children, and bless this effort to the good of His dear cause and poor and afflicted people. And, dear brethren, please do pray for us. We feel to be so poor and needy and dependent. C. H. C.

Our Mother Gone

In our last issue we had a short notice of the death of our precious mother, which event occurred on Monday, October 13, at 12:30. This is a hard trial and a sad stroke for us. We just simply cannot write as we would like concerning our dear mother and this sad trial. Mother was confined to her bed four months. When we started on our trip to California in the summer-in June -mother was confined to her bed part of the time. We were called home from that trip a week before the time was up for our return. After we returned home mother seemed to improve, and we went on another trip in Tennessee and Alabama. We expected to go from our debate with Mr. Bradley at Woodville, Ala., to Chattanooga to attend the Sequachee Valley Association. On the last day of the debate, which was August 7, we received a message to come home to mother. Again, after our return she seemed to improve some. A promise had long been made to visit some of the brethren in Alabama and Georgia, the trip to begin on the first Sunday in September at Birmingham. We went to mother and asked her if she thought we should go and try to fill the appointments. She told us she thought we should go, and said, "Go on, son, and be careful what you say, and preach the truth. Lollie and Rachel will look after me all right." The physicians told us they thought it was all right for us to go, and promised that if they should see any turn for the worse they would let us know it at once. So we started on the trip and filled the appointments as far as to Atlanta, Ga., where we were on Tuesday, September 16. Late in the afternoon we received a message to come home. We were not surprised but had been expecting it all day on account of a dream we had during the night. We started for home on the first train and arrived home on Thursday morning, Sept. 18, at 3:24. When we reached mother's bedside and she was told that "Claud is here," she began talking to us, and told us that she was just going home-to that blessed home where there is no more suffering or pain; to that blessed home where Jesus is, and would be with blessed Jesus forever. She talked so beautifully and sweetly of that blessed home and how she was ready to go. The family and the physician told us of how beautifully she talked the day before. The physician told us that he never heard the like before, and that it was a pity every person in the county could not hear what she said. She talked and praised the Saviour for at least an hour. Mother gradually grew weaker. Occasionally she would seem to rally a little and gain a little strength, but each time it was only temporary, until finally the end came. She quietly and peacefully and calmly fell asleep in the arms of the blessed Redeemer at 12:30 on Monday, October 13. We never saw one pass away more quietly and calmly than she did-without a struggle. It was so hard to see our dear mother breathe her last; but we know that she is at rest. She was born December 3, 1851; the daughter of Elisha and Almeda Beasley. She was of a family of eight girls. Only one of them is now living-Mrs. Allie Spicer, of Clinton, Ky. Mother was married to Elder S. F. Cayce January 11, 1870. Ten children were born to them, six of whom died in infancy. One daughter (Mrs. Turner) died in 1911. Three of the children are yet living-O. F. Cayce, Mrs. Rachel Miller and the writer. Father engaged in the practice of medicine for a number of years, but on the first of the year 1886 he gave up a lucrative practice and began the publication of The Primitive Baptist and devoted his whole time to this paper and to the ministry. Mother was a preacher's wife. She shared all the toils and burdens and conflicts of an Old Baptist minister and the privations of the wife without a murmur or a complaint. Then she shared the burdens with her boy, and encouraged us all that a mother could to go on in the service of the Master. She has stood by us and encouraged us in ways we do not feel like reciting here in years gone by. She continued to encourage us all that a dear mother could to her last days. We bless God's name for the memory now of a dear and precious mother. We did love to say, "Mother, I love you," and then we loved to try to show it by our act. We do not regret a single thing we have ever done for mother's comfort and peace. We only regret that we did not do more. Mother united with the Primitive Baptist Church at Rock Spring, near Crutchfield, Ky., about the year 1872 or 1873-we do not have the exact year-and was baptized by Elder W. A. Bowden. She was a faithful and true and devoted Primitive Baptist. She loved the glorious doctrine of salvation by the free and sovereign and reigning grace of God. Many times we have heard her shout aloud the praises of her glorious Redeemer while sitting under the sound of the glad tidings of salvation by the grace of God. Mother wrote her Christian experience, which was published in The Primitive Baptist of July 15, 1886. It was written to dear old Brother S. Murphree, of Only, Tenn., at his request, and published in the paper. Near the close of the article she said that she might write later and tell why she was an Old Baptist. She never did write that article. We wish she had written it. We publish the experience elsewhere in this paper, and trust it may be a comfort to our readers. Not many of our present readers were taking the paper then. We carried mother's mortal remains to Martin, Tenn., leaving here on Tuesday, October 14, and arriving at Martin on Wednesday morning at 6:55. A short service was held here at the residence of our sister, where mother made her home, by Elder John R. Harris, of Thornton, Ark. Elder Harris and Brother Loyd Bozarth, of near Fordyce, accompanied us to Martin. There another service was held in the Primitive Baptist Church by Elders Harris, J. H. Phillips, J. C. Ross, R. L. Perry, A. B. Ross, Brother J. O. Vincent, and perhaps others. Then she was gently laid to rest in the East Side Cemetery by the side of our dear father, where she will quietly rest until Jesus comes again to gather His jewels home. We miss our dear mother, and realize that we shall continue to miss her. We shall miss her loving counsel and advice, and her tender words of encouragement. We shall miss her fervent prayers. Many times in our younger days we have known mother to come to our bedside in the dark hours of night, and we could feel the tender touch of mother's loving hands, when she had come to see if all was well with her boy, when she thought we were asleep; and then she would often go down on her knees by our bedside and send up a fervent prayer to the throne of grace in behalf of her boy. We remember it now with tender emotion. The true mother is the child's best friend. No one knows how to sympathize with us, only those who have had the same experience. - We feel so poor and helpless and dependent. Yet we trust that we feel reconciled to the Lord's providential dealings with us. We feel to trust our all with Him. He is our only hope. Our hope in Him has been sweet throughout all the years of trouble and distress which we have passed and endured, and is sweeter as the years swiftly pass. We have the abiding and blessed hope that we shall meet mother and father again, before many more years, where we shall join them in anthems of eternal praise to heaven's King -our blessed and adorable Redeemer. We feel that we need the prayers of the Lord's dear people. We need the Lord's preserving care and sustaining grace. Please pray for us. C. H. C.

Away From Home

---December 1, 1924

At this writing, Nov. 8, we are on the train on our way from Shreveport, La., to Houston, Texas, to fill appointments arranged by Elder J. A. Moore and others. Since Friday, Oct. 31, we have been filling appointments arranged by Elder J. H. Veach, of Logansport. On yesterday, Nov. 7, at Bethel, near Shreveport, Elder C. H. Herriage came to the church confessing wrong steps taken by him and asking for a home with them, which was granted. Elder Herriage was in Mt. Paran Church when it was dissolved some time ago, and his confession more especially concerned steps he had taken since that time. We trust the Lord may guide and direct him in the right way. We received a message this morning from our dear wife dated Nov. 6 stating that her brother, Tom Lawler, had been killed by an auto, and that she was leaving home that night. Tom has been living in New York for a few years, and we judge from the message that he was to be taken to the family home, near Brownsboro, Ala. He is a son of B. B. Lawler, a deacon of Flint River Church. This is a sad and heavy stroke for the family, as it is the first child the parents have lost and the first experience the brothers and sisters have had of that kind, though one of the boys (Ben) has experienced the loss of a companion. Our heart bleeds for our dear companion, and we wish we could be with her to try to comfort her in her deep sorrow. May the Lord sustain all the family by His grace, is our humble prayer. Tom gave evidence in his letters to the family of having a sweet hope in the Lord, and this should be a comfort and consolation to us in this sad hour. Please pray for us and our loved ones. C. H. C.

A Good Meeting

---December 1, 1924

Our regular meeting time for the little church in North Little Rock is the third Sunday in each month. As our association met on the third Sunday in October we did not go to Little Rock at that time, but went on the fourth Sunday. There were two additions to the church by baptism on that day-Sister Rewis and a brother whose name we cannot just now recall. If we remember correctly there was also an addition by relation-or confession of faith. Sister Meek also united with them by letter from the church at Burns, Tenn. It was a sweet meeting and the hearts of the little band were filled with joy and thankfulness. They are few in number, but it is a little band that is full of life. They have recently lost a brother (M. R. Hopper, a deacon) by death, which was a sad stroke to them. They have their new house completed and a few seats made and are trying to pay it out. If any of our readers feel like helping them, send your contribution to Mrs. R. D. Rewis, 406 W. Fifth St., Argenta, Ark., or to Mrs. Byrd Warren, 814 E. Fifteenth St., Little Rock, Ark. It will be appreciated and rightly applied. C. H. C.

Peace Is Desired

---December 15, 1924

"Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul." "Show me thy way, O Lord; teach me thy paths." -(Psalms 25:1,4.)These expressions of David are a source of comfort to me when I feel that I can adopt them as my own. I have been so much lifted up and encouraged since my last until I am lifting up my soul unto the Lord in praise and thankfulness. His name is so sweet to me. He has so greatly blessed me in my little effort to speak in His name. Oh, how I do crave to be taught the way of the Lord. In tracing the way of the Lord I find mercy, love and forgiveness. Then if I follow in His paths, I show mercy, as He had mercy. Oh, let me show mercy on my erring brethren. Inasmuch as He has loved us so greatly and manifested it by laying down His life for us, and has shed abroad His love in our hearts, should we not want to love our brethren and be willing to show our love for them? When we are taught that the paths of the Lord are paths of peace, ought we not to strive for peace? Yes, my dear brethren, my soul goes out to the Lord in prayer for peace. Some of you may say that I want, or would be willing, to sacrifice principle for peace. But that is a mistake, for I realize peace could not come that way. I know that peace must come according to the right principles, as the Saviour has taught us in His word, and that is by confessing our faults one to another and in forgiving one another and laboring, as the Lord has directed, to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace. I am fearful that some of us are inclined to want to take our brother by the throat and say, "Pay me that thou owest," instead of forgiving them. God, teach me the way of forgiveness, that I may have mercy, as our heavenly Father. And, Oh, give me grace to humbly confess my faults to my dear brethren. But, O Lord, teach us thy way to do all things decently and in order, that we may keep a clean house, one fit for thee to recognize as thy holy temple. O Lord, keep us all from self-conceit, that we may be truly submissive one to another in the fear of thee, our Lord. "Show me thy way, and teach me thy paths." B. M. G.

REMARKS

The above article by Elder B. M. Green, Sulphur, Okla., is copied from the Baptist Trumpet of Dec. 11, 1924. We heartily commend it to our readers for a careful and prayerful reading. We feel that it is timely and full of matter worthy of our consideration. What a blessing it would be to our cause if we would all heed what is expressed therein. The torn and divided and bleeding condition of Zion today has not been brought about by our devotion and service to the cause of the Master, but by wrong doing. We have been biting and devouring one another. We have been fighting one another. We have not been engaged in fighting "the good fight;" but we have been engaged in fighting a bad fight. When we look over our beloved Zion today and see the sad condition of affairs, our poor heart is broken. It is sad; it is deplorable. Brethren, can we not all confess our wrongs in such a course as we have followed, and come together in peace with each other, and all pull together, "as the horses of Pharaoh's chariot," in fighting against the enemies of Israel, and with an eye single to the glory of God and the advancement of His kingdom? "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." -(Galatians 4:15). Dear brethren, is it any wonder that we have been consumed? Is it not rather a wonder that we have not been worse consumed than we have? Were it not for the longsuffering, forbearance and mercy of our God, we would have all been consumed; there would not have been a place of true worship left. Is it any wonder that many of our churches have become extinct, and the houses torn down or left for the habitation of the owls and bats? Many places where once the saints met together and engaged together in the sweet service of the Master are now desolate. Why is this so? Is it because the Lord is not faithful? No; that is not the reason. The reason is because we have been wicked and rebellious. May we not all awake to our duty and return to our first love? Surely we should repent and do our first work. We have been engaged too much in some of the works of the flesh. There has been too much hatred, variance, emulations, wrath and strife. Such things as these have destroyed our peace and have brought trouble and sorrow among us. Unless we lay such things aside and follow after better things, what will the end be? Can any tell? In our younger days we would never hear such a question asked of or about a brother as we often hear now-such as, "Who is he in line with?" "To what faction does he belong?" Is it any wonder that many of the Lord's little ones have become confused? Is it any wonder that many of our children have been driven from us? For our part, we are sorry of every thing we have done to bring about or to promote such a state of affairs among our people. Our poor heart bleeds now over the scattered and desolated condition of our beloved Zion, and we write these lines in tears and sadness. "Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." -(Jeremiah 9:1). We long to see the day that orderly walking and peace loving Old Baptists may come together in humble confession of all wrongs, and forgive each other for every wrong word spoken and deed committed against each other, and humbly beg the Lord's mercy upon us, and be once more a happy and united people, walking together in love and fellowship. We feel sure that the good Lord would pour out His rich blessings upon us. Brethren, let us still labor for peace and for the unity of the Lord's dear children. Be not weary in well doing. "In due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Let us be careful what we sow; the reaping time will come. We may think it is too long until the reaping time comes and become impatient. Let us be patient and continue the sowing and cultivating and the reaping time will come in due season. May the Lord help us and direct us and sustain us all by His grace. Brethren, please pray for us. We need your prayers. We need your love and sweet fellowship. We feel to be so poor and needy and dependent. C. H. C.

Close of Volume Thirty-Nine

---December 15, 1924

This issue closes volume thirty-nine of The Primitive Baptist. The past few years have been strenuous times in many respects. Many have been the sorrows, trials and conflicts; but the Lord's mercy has been extended all along. His mercy never fails. His mercy is from generation to generation. He has continued to shield, protect and care for His little ones in the midst of all the storms of life, and forsakes them not in death. His mercy has preserved and kept us to the present hour. We have tried to conduct the paper in such a way as to be a benefit to the cause. We are well aware that we have made mistakes; and if we still live, no doubt we will make more. All people make mistakes, if they make anything. But we desire to profit by the mistakes we make, and try not to make the same mistakes again. We ask all our readers to kindly look over and pass by the mistakes we have made. Be as charitable toward us as you can. If you can, please help us to correct our mistakes, as far as it is possible to correct them. We cannot find words to express our appreciation and thankfulness to the dear brethren, sisters and friends who have so kindly come to our relief in a financial way during the year in response to the effort put forth by dear Brother Hollingsworth and the proposition made through the paper by Elder O'Neal. What those brethren did was done without any request from us, or even a hint from us that we desired such a thing to be done. In fact, when Brother Hollingsworth first talked to us about the matter and asked us about our financial condition we objected to any appeal being made for contributions to pay the indebtedness, and finally consented only from the standpoint of being submissive to the wishes of the brethren. Nearly all the indebtedness was incurred as a result of war time prices and to keep the paper going during such time. We appreciate what has been done. May the good Lord bless everyone that has so kindly helped. We would be glad to publish the paper weekly again, but we cannot do so yet. The present size of the subscription list will not justify us in putting the paper out every week. If we were to publish only eight pages every week, just half the present size, the cost would be more. It would take more expense for mailing the papers out, and some other expenses would be more. But we desire to put it out every week as soon as we possibly can. How many of our readers will put their shoulders to the wheel and help us increase the list so we can get the paper out every week? If every subscriber already on the list would just send us one new name that would double the list, and it would not take that many to enable us to make the change. If one-half the subscribers on the list would send two new ones, that would double the list. Perhaps there are not many who could not get one or two new subscribers if they would try just a little. Many could get more than that. How many of you will try, by asking the brethren, sisters and friends to subscribe who are not already taking the paper? Will you see how many you can get during the next thirty days? We believe you will try. Yes, this is personal to you—you that are now reading these lines. We will appreciate the effort you may put forth. Wishing every reader a "Merry Christmas and a happy New Year," we now bid you farewell for the year 1924, and pray God's richest blessings to rest upon everyone of you, and ask that you remember us in your prayers. Introduction to Volume Forty

With this issue we begin the fortieth volume of The Primitive Baptist. Thirty-nine years ago the first copy of the paper was sent out by our sainted father, Elder S. F. Cayce, from Fulton, Ky. In the same year (the latter part of August) he moved to Martin, Tenn., where the paper was published until we moved here in October, 1919. During all these years the effort has been to publish a paper in defense of the principles that have always been dear to the Primitive or Old School Baptists. The desire has been to send out a good clean paper, and to give all the reading matter possible for the money. As to how well we have succeeded in publishing a true Old Baptist paper is for the readers to judge. It is true we have made mistakes, and have sometimes let things get in the paper that should have been kept out. It is our desire to keep the paper as clear of controversy as possible. If our papers are rightly conducted they are a great blessing to our people; but when used to air out troubles they spread confusion and distress. But the same thing is true with the ministry. The minister who preaches peace by Jesus Christ, who preaches the gospel in its purity, advocating nothing but what the Bible plainly teaches, never causes trouble or confusion among the Lord's humble poor; but his preaching will comfort, instruct, edify and build them up, and have a tendency to bind them together in love and fellowship. The same thing is true concerning what is published through the press. The preaching of the gospel is the publishing of the truth orally, and writing the truth and sending it forth in print is publishing the same truth through the press. Publishing the truth through the press will have the same effect, in a great measure, as publishing the truth from the pulpit. Many of the Lord's dear children tell us that they are comforted and edified by reading The Primitive Baptist. Many of them are deprived of the privilege of hearing preaching. If they were deprived of the privilege of reading Old Baptist papers they would be deprived of the great comfort they have received thereby. Think, if you can, how lonely their condition would be without the papers. It is our desire to make The Primitive Baptist better, if possible, than it has been before. We desire to be watchful and try to avoid mistakes that have been made in the past. We feel that we need the Lord's grace and help. We need the prayers of the Lord's dear children. We need your help and co-operation to make the paper better. In order to help us make the paper better, and more calculated to comfort and edify the Lord's little children, write us about the good things of the kingdom. Tell us about your good meetings. Tell us the things that are pleasant to you. Tell of your hopes, your doubts and fears-not to encourage others in doubting; but when one has those gloomy doubts and fears, it is a comfort to him for another to tell of having the same experience along life's way. If you have church troubles, strife, confusion and divisions, keep that at home. Do not try to publish your brother's wrongs and faults. If you have some trouble in your family-domestic trouble-you do not try to tell it to the world. You do not want that published broadcast. Neither should we try to publish our church troubles broadcast. We are brethren, and if we are in the right spirit we do not desire to publish our brother's wrongs. We should have a spirit of forbearance. Remember that we might do wrong too. If we desire others to bear with us in our imperfections, we should be trying to do that way toward them. Remember the golden rule. That is a rule which works both ways. Let us try more to observe it. The revised "golden rule" is not good. The revised way is, "Try to do the other fellow before he does you." We all know that is wrong, yet some of us have sometimes worked according to it, and then we were doing wrong. We confess that we have been guilty sometimes, but we are sorry of it, and humbly beg everyone whom we have wronged in any way, by word or deed, to forgive us. Let us all confess our faults and pray for each other, instead of abusing each other. We now greet you in the beginning of another volume of The Primitive Baptist. True, the paper is late, but we do hope to soon have the paper going out on time. It is our earnest desire, too, that we may some day have matters and affairs so arranged that we may be able to devote our whole time and attention to the publication of this paper and to our little efforts in a ministerial way. We would also be glad if we could send the paper out every week, but the number of subscribers will not justify us in doing so at the present cost of material and production. If we could add a few thousand names to the list we could make it weekly. If every subscriber would send one new one that would double the list. If one-half the subscribers would send two new ones, that would double the list. If one thousand of them would send five each, that would add five thousand new names to the list, and we could then make the paper a weekly. How many will try and see what they can do? Will you try? Especially would we ask that the brethren in the ministry make public announcement at your meetings that you would be glad to take subscriptions for the paper. That would not be very much trouble to you, and it would encourage your members to read the paper; and our observation is that those who read the paper are usually more zealous and prompt in their church duties, and they also read the Bible more. We will appreciate all the help our brethren, sisters and friends may lend. May the good Lord shower down His richest blessings upon you, and may this year be one of prosperity, joy and true happiness for you. Please do remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Articles Crowded Out

ARTICLES CROWDED OUT ---January 1, 1925

We have a number of good articles written for The Primitive Baptist which we cannot publish for want of space. We have just simply got so far behind in publishing letters sent for the paper that we have to go through and select what we think are the best and most appropriate and publish them and let the others wait until some other time, and publish them later if we have the space to do so. If your article does not come out in the paper do not conclude that it was because we found fault with the sentiment, for we have many that contain sentiment that is good; but we do not have space for all of them. We just have so much space to fill every issue, and when that space is filled, that is all we can do. We do not want you to quit writing because we make this statement. Just keep on writing, and that will give us a better and larger assortment to select from. We may make mistakes in our selections, but we have no one to do the work for us, and we have to take the responsibility and do the best we can in the matter. We are aware that sometimes brethren become offended because we do not publish their letters, or because we do not publish them as soon as they think we should, but we are trying to do the best we can in the matter. If any brother thinks he can do better, we would be glad to let him try it for a little while. We do not mean by this that we are offended at any brother who feels to offer a suggestion. We are always glad for any brother to offer a suggestion. But when it is offered, we have to decide as to whether we think best to follow the suggestion. The readers of the paper would hold us responsible, and not the brother who might make the suggestion-and therefore we have to decide the matter. We ask all the dear brethren and sisters to bear with us, and look over all our shortcomings and mistakes, which we confess are many. Write for the paper and tell of the goodness and mercy of God, but keep your church troubles to yourself. We simply will not put them in the paper, but will throw them in the waste-basket as soon as we see what it is. If you send a long article (or a short one) for the paper airing your church troubles, you need not write to us later and tell us to return it to you, for if we have seen what it is it will be destroyed before your letter can get to us. This we know is plain and blunt, but we simply want it understood that The Primitive Baptist is not published to scatter strife and confusion. We mean no offense, but we have been very much worried on account of such things having been sent to us. Help us to extend the circulation of the paper, so we can make it a weekly. Will you help? How many new subscribers will you send? And will you remember us in your prayers? C. H. C.

John 6:44-45

---January 1, 1925

We have a question from one Mr. J. I Jones, of Huntsville, Ala., sent us by Brother W. M. Towry, of that place, regarding the teaching of (John 6:44-45). We do not know the object of the brother in asking the question-whether it be for controversy, or if he really is seeking information. However, we will try to offer a few thoughts on the language. The two verses read as follows: "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." Mr. Jones wishes to know if it is the outsider that is drawn to the Father, or is it the backslider. It simply means that no man in an unregenerate state can come to the Father. It is not his own work to do the coming. The primary meaning of the word here translated "draw" is to drag. That is in the passive voice. The one, then, who comes to the Saviour is not active, but is passive, in the work. Hence, he is brought to the Saviour; and this is the only way that they can come. It is not the work of men to bring them, but it is the work of the Father. Men have nothing in the wide world to do with that work. The backslider is one who has life, and he can repent - turn from his wrongs, come to a throne of grace, return unto the Lord in service, and is commanded so to do. God's regenerated children can render service unto Him, and they are commanded to do that. No man is commanded to do something in order to be born again, or to be born from above, or to become a child of God-no more than one is commanded to do something in order to be born of his natural parents. In verse 45 the reference is to the language of ((4:13) (Isaiah 54:13)) "And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord." The "they" in (John 6:45) are the same as "thy children" in ((4:13) (Isaiah 54:13)). They belong to Jesus -they are His by choice, by gift and by redemption; and they shall be all taught of God. To be taught of God and to be taught about God are two different things. If one is taught of God, God is the teacher. This is a teaching that is not done by men, but which is done by the Lord alone and by Him only. It is OF the Lord, not ABOUT the Lord. "Every man therefore that hath heard" -heard whom? Heard the Father. It is the Father they hear in this work. It is a work the Father does. "God is a Spirit." It is the office work of the Holy Spirit. They hear the Father and learn of the Father, and all of them come. Many who hear the gospel do not come. Therefore, the teaching in this text is not gospel teaching, or the teaching that is accomplished in the gospel. It is the teaching which the Lord does in the heart by the Holy Spirit. If you have ever realized in your heart that you are a poor sinner, and have been made to hate sin, it is because you have been taught of the Lord. If you have ever been given the sweet assurance in your heart that Jesus is your Saviour, and have had the sweet peace which follows such assurance, it is because you have been taught of the Lord; for that is the teaching which brings peace to the poor soul; and you are a child of God. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon our readers. C. H. C.

On The Warpath

We have received and have seen a few copies of the Glad Tidings, a paper started by Elder W. H. Richards, and now published by N. O. Carter. They seem to be very much on the warpath, and have published several thrusts at us, and in one issue say they do not know whether we desire a getting together with them or not. We feel that it is necessary for us to say just a few words for their information. First: There are some good brethren among them who are orderly walking, and we would be glad to know that they were in peace with all orderly walking Primitive Baptists; but they have some among them that we have no desire or inclination to walk with.

We say this frankly and in all kindness for the information of those who have said something about such a matter, and yet have opposed such a coming together. We have no fellowship for fornication, adultery, and such ungodly practice among the ministry. So you brethren need not be wasting so much space and time and labor in writing against a union of your brethren with us, unless you are willing to forsake some against whom there seems to be so much evidence of immorality. Second: We do not care to enter into any war with any of you. You may say just what you please. Our life has been a public one, and an open book. We do not care to enter into any fight at all with any of you, and especially as unbecoming as some seem to act. You are not hurting us, and you will only hurt yourselves by your unbecoming conduct and unbecoming course. May the good Lord pity you. We do not propose to notice further any of your statements concerning our doctrine or our efforts to labor for peace among the Lord's poor and orderly walking children, who have been so divided and troubled by ungodly wars among them. C. H. C.

Good Evidence

---January 15, 1925

After so long a time Elder J. C. Morgan says, "I did not know the standing of Elder Bragg." He also says he might have made a mistake in publishing appointments for him, and if so he is ready to make acknowledgments for same. And again, he points out some ten years ago, the writer visited the Baptists in the north. He pleads the above excuses to justify what he has done, and I suppose it will give his followers perfect satisfaction. He says, in the same article, when Elder Bragg wrote him two or three years ago he referred him to older brethren. Elder Morgan reminds me of a certain kind of frogs-they change to the color of whatever object they are on. When it suits best he is willing to risk his "older" brethren, and when it suits best then he knows more than all his old brethren and all the churches too. Elder Morgan would shoot a cannon ball at a gnat, but let an elephant appear and he would not use a popgun. He would turn the world upside down to convict a brother preacher who was reported as a fornicator and him denying it, and then take the evidence of a confessed fornicator. But Jesus said, "some would strain at a gnat and swallow a camel." -S. N. R., in Glad Tidings. We do not copy the above to have a thing in the world to say concerning the dispute between Elder Morgan and Elder Redford or any of the Richards crowd. We do not expect to enter into controversy with them. We only wish to call attention to the fornication business mentioned. In the name of the good Lord, how much better evidence could one have of the guilt of such a preacher? Evidently, from the statement of Elder Redford, some woman confessed that she was guilty with the preacher! If she was guilty so was the preacher! We suppose she was excluded on her confession. If she was not guilty she was excluded on a false charge. If she was excluded on a truthful charge, then the preacher was guilty too. Any body of people who love the sanctity of the home, and who love morality (to say nothing of the house of God), should withdraw fellowship from such a preacher under such circumstances-and permit us to say that if they deal honestly and faithfully they will do it. May the good Lord deliver us from such filthy preachers. C. H. C.

Elder Wilson's Confession

---February 1, 1925

In another place in this paper will be found a short statement from Elder J. R. Wilson under the heading, "A Correction and Confession." We are glad to see this from Brother Wilson, and we trust that the matter between him and Danville Church and Brother Spangler may be healed. Elder Wilson says the charge he made against Elder Spangler that he is an Absoluter is a false charge. We do not understand Brother Wilson to mean that he intentionally made a false charge against Brother Spangler. We might be led to believe that a brother believes a certain thing, and charge him with it, and be sincere in making the charge, and yet be wrong about it. Therefore we should be very careful how we charge a brother with believing a doctrine that is not true. If we charge a brother wrongfully, though we be ever so sincere, we do the brother an injustice. When we have done a brother an injustice, and done him an injury or a wrong, it is right and commendable to acknowledge the wrong and ask forgiveness. Then it is Christ-like to forgive. We all make mistakes, and we all do wrong; and as we desire forgiveness for our wrongs, we should forgive those who wrong us. We do hope that those good brethren will all come together once more in peace and fellowship, forgiving all wrongs that have been committed. Just here we are going to take the liberty to say that we think Brother Wilson did wrong and made a mistake in declaring against Danville Church as he did. Then we think he made a mistake in going to the Mill Church and joining there on confession of faith or by relation; and we think that Mill Church made a mistake and did wrong in thus receiving Brother Wilson and the others. Especially is this so when no "gospel labor" had been bestowed on Danville Church by the Mill Church, or by any other sister church that we are aware of. To do that is very wrong, as all our able writers have contended and pointed out all along the line. We do hope those good brethren may get together now and get all these matters adjusted, and that sweet peace may be restored among them. May the good Lord bless and lead them all in the right way, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

A Question of Order

---February 15, 1925

Since there have been some moves for settlement of troubles existing between some of the different factions among the Primitive Baptists, and efforts being made to get them together, we have seen some suggestions and questions raised concerning some points of order. So far as we know just now every point called in question is discussed and brought out in a little pamphlet called "Church Order." Some years ago the Mount Zion Association, of Alabama, was called in question as to her order, and as to whether church identity had been lost by the churches of that association. The churches of that association called upon Elders G. W. Stewart, C. H. Cayce, J. E. Adams, R. O. Raulston, M. E. Petty, Lee Hanks and J. A. Taylor to sit as a committee to investigate the charges which had been made against them. In summing up the matter and in setting forth their idea concerning some points of order the members of this committee wrote out the contents of that pamphlet for those churches, and the same was published. We would suggest that you order a copy of this pamphlet from our office and study its contents. That will answer the very questions that seem to be a puzzle to the mind of some brethren now. The price of the pamphlet is fifteen cents a copy. But we desire to quote here some of the contents of that work. Quoting from pages 16 and 17 we give this language: The following questions were submitted to us, and we present our answers with the questions: Should churches receive expelled members from other Primitive Baptist Churches without official investigation and labor? No. What constitutes official investigation and labor? Investigation and labor by authority of the church, and not an association. If a church receives and endorses an excluded person from an orderly church, what attitude does it place the church in that receives the excluded person? In gross disorder unless the act is speedily rectified; and if said church or churches persist in such a course they should be officially labored with and withdrawn from. Such disorder cannot be endorsed by orderly Baptists. Should we receive and baptize members from a sister church, though the church has error in it, until official labor and a withdrawal of fellowship from the erring church? No. We quote the following from page 18: Churches, as churches, may err, be inconsistent and get into gross disorder, and, as churches, they may repent and turn away from such disorder. To illustrate: The Corinthian Church became involved in gross disorder concerning the communion, or Lord's supper, were guilty of gross immorality by sustaining and fellow-shiping fornication among them; were divided among themselves; had heresies among them, for some denied the resurrection; some held to the idea of ministerial regeneration; going to law one with another, and tolerating and following, to some extent, false apostles and ministers of Satan. {see (I Corinthians 5:1-5); (6:1-11); (11:20-27); (II Corinthians 11:13-16)} Yet Paul recognized them as churches of Jesus Christ, and labored with them as such; and the very fact that he told them what to do shows, or proves, that he understood and taught that a church in disorder can do orderly things, or acts; and also carries with it the doctrine, or fact, that the wrong acts of churches do not make void their right acts. On page 19 may be found the following: Now, according to this new teaching and logic, which seems to have come newly up in this section of country, those Israelites away back there in those distressing, troublous times should have put away, not only those strange wives and children, but should also have put away all children that were born to any and all Jews or Israelites during the time or prevalence of the disorder that prevailed among them; because of the fact that they were all identified together and were all contaminated with the leaven of disobedience and disorder. But such was not required by the law of the Lord; neither does the law of the Lord require that the illegal acts of churches shall make void their right, or legal, acts. On pages 22 and 23 may be found an article copied from the Gospel Messenger for January, 1890, written by Elder J. R. Respass, who was then the editor of the Messenger. Concerning Elder Respass the committee said on page 22 that "he was considered one of the meekest, wisest and purest and ablest ministers Georgia ever had." Elder Respass said: If the church sins she should not visit her own sins upon the heads of the innocent members baptized by her authority, because that would be a violation of the law of God as laid down in (xxiv. 16 of Deuteronomy), wherein," that the fathers shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children for the fathers, but every man shall be put to death for his own sin." If a church sins, to be purged of it, she must confess it with penitence, not by force, ask forgiveness and do it no more, and that is the end of the gospel law. As said before, such things as she can, righteously, she should and will undo, and she will know by the spirit what they are, and there will be peace. We think the church erred in expelling those members baptized by her authority and re-baptizing them. They were as lawfully baptized the first time as they were the second time. If the church authorized an improper person to do it, that was her sin, and could not attain the innocent members baptized by her authorized agent. From page 24 we quote the following from the pen of Elder Respass again, in the Gospel Messenger for June, 1891: If we recognize a body as a church at all, even if its disorder is as gross as the disorders of the seven churches of Asia-and their disorder was very great-if it is a church it can repent as a church, and if it can repent as a church, it can do any other church act. The seven churches were admonished to repent, which shows that the Spirit recognized them as churches. If, then, a church repents as a church, we may receive them as a church cleansed of their sins. But they are required to repent only of their sins; they are not required to repent of their right acts, their baptisms, communions, preaching and charities. The church at Corinth was disorderly as holding a member who had his own father's wife, and she was required to repent of it, and she did and withdrew from him; but she was not required to repent for her baptisms-to undo them and do them over. If a church is not a church, she can neither repent as a church nor do any other church act; but if she is a church, her right acts as a church are valid and not to be repented of. The Superior Court may make a wrong decision, but its wrong decision does not invalidate its right decisions, because it holds commission to act from the supreme law of the state, and that law sustains its right decisions and reverses its wrong ones. So it is with the church of Christ as holding authority to act in the name of the Lord; its wrong acts are set aside by the Lord, who, at the same time, sustains its right ones. On pages 28 and 29 is a letter written by Elder T. S. Dalton under date of August 4, 1913. Elder Dalton at that time lived at McLean, Va. He once lived in Texas. He now lives in Baltimore, Md. He said: * * * If we were to go back to the apostolic days and undertake to straighten all the crooks and mistakes the church has made, we would have more than a lifetime job. Even the seven churches of Asia made their mistakes, and God commanded them to "hold fast and repent." The church at Corinth got wrong and out of line, but they did not reorganize them, but accepted them when they repented, or turned from their errors. The church at Galatia imbibed the wrong doctrine, but they were not unchurched for it; but they repented, or turned from their errors. * * * My brother, we have too many Baptist regulators among us who think they know it all; and many of them (I fear) know nothing as they ought to know it. May God pity our people in their scattered and torn up condition, and humble us all under a feeling sense of His great love, and our nothingness, and bring us to each other's feet and keep us in the way everlasting. And may He ever pity those who are continually striving to keep up a row among us. I am old now, and desire so much to see our people united in the bonds of love and union before I go hence. Much more could be quoted along this same line from this pamphlet, but this is sufficient to show very clearly, we think, what that committee, as well as other brethren, thought concerning the very question which has been raised by some brethren in regard to the baptisms which have been administered since the troubles began among the brethren. Dear Brother Dalton said he was old when he wrote that letter in 1913-eleven years last August-and so much desired to see our people united in the bonds of love and union before he goes hence. Dear brethren, how much do you suppose it would rejoice the heart of that old servant now in his old age if he could hear the glad news that our dear people in Texas and other places were once more all united? Remembering that this dear brother labored much among our people years ago in Texas, Tennessee and other sections of this country, we know he would rejoice to hear that peace has been restored and that our dear brethren had come together, forgiving all wrongs, and are once more united in love and fellowship. We were present several years ago at the meeting of the one hundredth anniversary of the White Water Association in Indiana. That association had been divided for a number of years, and for years two associations had been held in the same territory, each claiming to be the White Water Association. The session we speak of that we attended, on the one hundredth anniversary, the two bodies came together and met again as one association-the first time for years. If any of them were ever required to baptize again all who had been received and baptized during the time they were separated we never heard of it. Some might say that upon this principle we could accept the Missionaries the same way. Not so, for they have lost the marks of church identity. They have departed from Baptist principles in doctrine and practice. There are very few things, if any, which the world has but what they have. They have lost all marks of identity of the true church. They are not a church, and therefore do not have the ordinances. They are not real Baptist Churches; they only claim the name. May the good Lord pity us in our distressed condition and enable us all to confess our wrongs to each other, and to be a united band in His service, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

---March 1, 1925

E. A. Wyatt, R. 3, Jackson, Tenn., requests us to give our views on (I Corinthians 16:1-2), and asks us to write a good explanation of it. It reads as follows: "Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given orders to the churches of Galatia, even so do you. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." We do not see how that this language needs much explanation. It seems to us that it is as plain as it could very well be made. This laying by in store was for the poor saints at Jerusalem, and was to be sent there for the express purpose of relieving the poor saints at that place, as the next verse plainly shows. It just simply means that the churches, or the members composing the church, are required to lay by in store on the first day of the week, according as God has prospered them, for the benefit of the poor saints. What we know about the matter is that a great many churches are very remiss in this matter. If we give, do we give as God has prospered us? And do we lay by in store on the first day of the week? That laying by in store to be for the relief of the poor saints? Perhaps we lay by in store for ourselves, by way of laying up worldly possessions. Are we alive to our duty in this matter as we should be? C. H. C.

Remarks to Mrs. C. N. Brown

---March 15, 1925

We would admonish you to discharge your duty-do what you feel the Lord requires of you. If you want more evidence, do what He has impressed you to do. How much more do you want than what He has done? Suppose you do feel little. Are not the Lord's people called little children? Did not Paul say, "Unto me who am less than the least, is this grace given?" Can you feel any less than that? Of course you are not worthy, in and of yourself, but the Lord says, "Their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." If you want peace, there is just one way to get it-and that is to do what you feel to be your duty. Offer yourself to the church and follow your Saviour in baptism, and then endeavor to walk in His precepts and examples. The fitness the Lord requires is to feel your need of Him. C. H. C.

God's People in the Flood

---March 15, 1925

We have a letter from Elder G. S. Schuler and Joel Vines, at Farrell, Miss., in which they tell of a good meeting and an ordination, and state that they had a question up and ask us if God had any people to get lost in the flood. In answer to their query we would say that the destruction of those who were out of the ark, being destroyed by water, was not an eternal destruction, but a temporal one. Their temporal or natural life was destroyed. Noah was a child of God, and an obedient one. He obeyed the Lord, and was saved from the old world to the new, with his family. "When once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing; wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us," etc.-Peter. That was a figure, and baptism is a figure like that. Baptism does not save with an everlasting or eternal salvation; and as it is a figure like the other, then the other did not save with an eternal salvation. It saved from the old world to the new; and baptism now saves the obedient child of God from out in the world into the church of Christ. No one dare say that all who were drowned in the flood went to hell. To say that would be to preach infant damnation by the wholesale. In our discussions with men who have argued that baptism in water was necessary in order to a home in heaven we have often asked if all who were drowned in the flood went to hell. Not one of them would ever say yes. It was a temporal or timely matter, and had no reference to eternal life at all. C. H. C.

Remarks to Mrs. W. M. Hopson, Jr.

Dear sister, we truly believe that you have an experience of grace and that you are one of the Lord's dear little children. We feel to rejoice with you that you have been enabled by the mercy and grace of God to realize, understand and know the truth, in part at least. Your expression of feeling so little is just the way Paul expressed himself, "Unto me who am less than the least of all saints is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ." Paul felt that he was less than the least of all saints. He was a child of God. So that is the feeling of a child of God. This is a good evidence that you are the Lord's child. You do not want to be a hypocrite. A hypocrite is one who pretends that he is something that he knows he is not. If you have been enabled to see that the Primitive Baptist doctrine is the truth, you could never be acting, the hypocrite to unite with them. If you believe the Old Baptist doctrine to be the truth, and feel like the Old Baptist Church would be a home for you, we would advise you to offer yourself to them. Follow your blessed Lord, walk in His commandments, and you will find the peace and rest that you are so much longing for. May His blessings rest upon you. C. H. C.

A New Thing Under The Sun

---April 15, 1925

To All Whom it May Concern:

We, the Church of Christ, of Five Mile, Hale County, Alabama, known as Primitive Baptist, in conference assembled, do hereby declare and affirm our belief concerning some points of church order, or discipline, as follows:

I We believe that each local church is sovereign and independent of all other churches or persons in receiving, disciplining and excluding her members.

II We believe that the church is the only disciplinary body known or authorized in the Scriptures.

III We believe that when a church withdraws fellowship from a sister church for reasons satisfactory to herself, the church that is withdrawn from has no legal right nor authority to appoint a committee to visit the church which withdrew from her with any sort of complaint or grievance.

IV We believe that no minister or preacher, whatever, upon any plea whatsoever, has a right to ignore or disregard the act of the withdrawing church.

V We believe that the church withdrawn from has no legal right to call upon sister churches to go with her or aid her in her complaint against the withdrawing church and that churches granting her request would involve themselves in the same disorder as the dropped and disorderly church.

VI We believe that if a church becomes offended with a sister church on account of some act, doctrine or practice, she has a legal right to labor with her offending sister church for satisfaction; and should she fail to obtain satisfaction she may ask a near-by sister church to aid her in such labor; but in such labor it would be illegal and unscriptural for her to call upon and procure the labor of more than one or two such churches. (Matthew 18:16).

VII We believe that in such labor it would be inconsistent and out of order to call upon distant churches, and churches, too, which have no direct knowledge of or personal concern in the matter- churches which are strange and unacquainted with the church to be labored with, especially when there are sister churches nearer by and which understand the nature of the reported grievance or trouble.

VIII We believe that when distant and strange churches are thus called upon to the neglect of near by churches which are acquainted with the trouble in dispute and with all concerned, it is a true sign and token of lack of knowledge or of willful intent to do wrong, or to deceive or oppress.

IX We believe that much of the trouble, confusion and disorder among Primitive Baptists in various parts of our country today is to be ascribed to certain ministers, or spirits, {(I John 4:4)} who, in going hither and thither, from section to section, or state to state, are ready to pry into local church troubles and intrude their advice, verbally or in writing, as to how such troubles should be settled or disposed of, and in this manner, in the name of love and peace, actually widen the breach and intensify the confusion and disorder. (Be sure to read ((7) (Proverbs 26:17); ((Th 4:11) (I Thessalonians 4:11); ((Pet 4:15) (I Peter 4:15))) Hence we believe the time has come when churches and true ministers and servants of God should regard with distrust and grave suspicion all traveling spirits who come among them proposing to aid them and advise them in their church troubles.

X In conclusion, we desire to confess our weakness and un-worthiness before the Lord and His believing and afflicted people, with the request that they bear with us, and should they find us in error in the principles of church order or discipline herein expressed, we hope they will kindly show unto us the way of the Lord more perfectly, for we know we are liable to err. Five Mile is now in her one hundred and fifth year of age and, if not deceived in ourselves, we desire to be in harmony with the Scriptures of truth. Hence we are open to investigation, and our church records are open to the scrutiny of our brethren everywhere. G. W. Stewart, Moderator. W. M. Martin, Church Clerk. Akron, Ala., December 13, 1924.

We verily believe that the foregoing is the worst thing we have seen for years along that line. It is worse than the proposed form for a federal government put out by Elder Kirkland some years ago. In all kindness and sincerity we wish to examine the foregoing statement of belief just a little. It is not necessary to examine all the points contained therein-just a few will be enough for any fair-minded Baptist, we are sure.

1. If each local church is a sovereign and independent of all other churches or persons in receiving, disciplining and excluding her members, then, pray, what right under high heaven did Five Mile have to receive on confession of faith two members that had been excluded by Hopewell Church-and that, too, without bestowing a moment's labor upon Hopewell? We freely grant that any church which is standing faithful on the doctrine and order of God's house, keeping the ordinances as delivered to the church, has the God-given right to refuse membership to any person in her body that she sees fit, and no other person or church on earth has any right to disregard the act of the church in that matter. This being so, just as long as Hopewell Church maintains the doctrine and ordinances of the church as given in the New Testament, no church on earth has any right to receive the members on confession that she excluded. On the other hand, if Hopewell, Five Mile, or any other church, should be holding a member whose conduct is a disgrace and detrimental to the cause, a sister church has the right to make complaint to her in regard to her disorderly member and to ask her to deal with such a member as the circumstances demand. Sister churches have that right, for the simple reason that such a member being held is detrimental to the cause in general, and for that reason other churches are concerned. No church esteeming the order of God's house as she should can afford to refuse to hear such a complaint and to listen to the proof and to deal with the case as the circumstances may demand. If she will not do that, then sister churches have the right to withdraw fellowship from her, and they should do so, after such labor is had. To receive a member on confession of faith that has been excluded from another Old Baptist Church that maintains the doctrine and ordinances of God's house, and the identity of that church still remains, is GROSS DISORDER. It always has caused trouble, and always will. 3, 4 and 5. If these three items be correct, we have the very principles of popery. According to that, a church may withdraw from another, the reason may be absolutely groundless, yet satisfactory to herself, and if others think she has erred and dare to so express themselves, they immediately become involved in the same disorder and loss of identity as the church that has been withdrawn from—thus the church that does the first withdrawing becomes high pope, supreme ruler, independent disposer, the only potentate, the one executive and the only vicegerent of Christ on earth! If that is Old Baptist doctrine, may the good Lord pity us, for we never heard it on that fashion before. We confess that we have read some of the confessions of churches, both ancient and modern, and have read some little church history, but we never saw anything like this before. Pray by whose authority does a church become so highly exalted just because she sees proper, perhaps to gratify her own personal ambition, or the ambition of some preacher, to declare non-fellowship for some sister church? She sees proper to do so! She has reasons that are satisfactory to herself! And, forsooth, that ends it! According to these items, if one church withdraws from a sister church, the church withdrawn from does not even so much as have the right to ask the reason why! If that does not give supreme authority and power to one church, under certain conditions, we do not understand the reason why; and it destroys the very idea of there being any such thing as a sister church. The term sister church signifies equality.

6. We never heard before that (Matthew 18:16) limited the number to one or two. We had always understood it to mean, and have always heard Old Baptists claim that it meant, that as many as one or two should be taken, so that there might be witnesses, for that is what the text says, "that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word maybe established." The idea is that it is necessary to have witnesses, but we never knew before that it was necessary to limit the number of witnesses. If that be true, and a man can prove his contention or charge by more than two witnesses besides his own testimony, he would lose his case, but it would be sustained if proven by himself and no more than two others. This is too absurd to even favor the truth.

7 and 8. We pass these by as of minor importance, though the matter may be a technical one. That is, the contention therein may not always be correct.

9. This is simply a direct thrust at what we now call a traveling preacher. In olden times they were called evangelists. But it seems to us that Elder Stewart might have taken some of his own medicine a few years ago when he went over into Mississippi and was in a meeting that declared a part of a church to be the church who preached a man who was in line with the people not recognized by the Ramah council, which council he had sat in as a member of the same-and that man preached over the protest of some of the members of the church. If it is such a crime, and such a preacher is of the world, who will go away from home and advise the brethren in regard to their troubles, then it seems to us Elder Stewart was involved when he was at the meeting in Mississippi. If this item be correct, it dawns on us that the Apostle Paul was a transgressor and a violator when he told the Corinthians how to do and what to do concerning some disorders they had among them. Paul was a traveling preacher, and according to this item, he had no right to advise that church as to what would be right for her to do, and the church and other preachers should have regarded him with grave suspicion. We would not make mention of these things in our columns but the above statement has been sent out in print broadcast, and we feel that the cause demands that the inconsistency and fallacy of them should be brought to the attention of our people. As long as such things are practiced and persisted in, just that long will there be troubles and divisions among us. It is no good omen for us to have such an opinion of self as to think that we have a right to do a thing and no other party has a right to call it in question. May the good Lord help us all to rightly consider His teaching as to how we should treat each other and observe the order of His house, and enable us always to so consider ourselves that we may be willing to listen to the counsel and advice of our brethren and sister churches. “ Murder Will Out”

---April 15, 1925

“Murder will out” is an old saying which is generally accepted as true. A saying in Holy Writ very much like it is, “Be sure your sin will find you out.” When trouble develops, the true cause may not be known just at the time, but in time it will become known what the real trouble is-or what was the real cause. So it now seems to develop just what the cause of the trouble is in Virginia and North Carolina. It seems that Danville Church claimed that the doctrine had nothing to do with the exclusion of Elder J. R. Wilson. Elder Wilson is and has been all along in perfect accord with Elder J. T. Jackson, Elder Pruitt, and other brethren. The majority of the church at Martinsville and at Leatherwood were agreed with Elder Jackson in doctrine. Most of our readers will remember an article written by him and which we published, which was headed “Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth.” Some of the elders in the Pig River Association and elsewhere in that country would not accept the doctrine set forth in that article, and denounced Elder Jackson as a heretic. The Pig River Association preferred charges against him on the doctrine, or denounced him. Elder Jackson's church invited any and all who had charges against him to present them to her. This none of them would do, or did do. The church of his membership endorsed the doctrine he set forth and exonerated him. The majority at both Martinsville and Leatherwood stood with him. We do not now remember where Elder Jackson has membership, but believe it is at one of these two churches. A minority at both these places rebelled against the action of the church, and after due labor they were excluded. The Pig River Association recognized the excluded factions of these churches. They brought suit for the church property. A report of the court decision says that the decision is expected to "finally end the controversy which arose many months ago when a large number of the congregations in the Leatherwood and Martinsville Church sided with Elder Jackson in his contention that under the doctrines of the church two plans of salvation were allowed." This shows very clearly that those who oppose Elder Wilson, Elder Jackson, and those who believe and teach as they do, are opposing them on account of their doctrine. One of these leading preachers in North Carolina, we have been informed, said publicly that Cayce is an Arminian. These things show that the doctrine is at the root of the trouble. When we published the article referred to above from Elder Jackson we said then that the doctrine set forth therein will stand when the world is on fire, and we still say the same. Not one of those preachers in North Carolina and Virginia, or any other place, can ever overthrow that doctrine. If they think they can, will they try it? They will not try it in public where their contention can be examined in public before the people. When we were in North Carolina a few years ago we tried to preach at an association, we think at Coats, from this text: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee" -(I Timothy 4:16). In that discourse we remember that we showed that Timothy was already a child of God, and that one is made a child of God without any works performed by him; and that it was, therefore, too late for Timothy to save himself in that sense by taking heed unto himself and unto the doctrine. Neither would he by thus doing be the means of any other person becoming a child of God. But he would save himself in some sense by doing what the apostle here instructed him to do, and others would be saved in the very same sense in which he himself would be saved. Elder Gold, we remember very well, was present and endorsed the discourse. No one objected to it that we ever heard of. At another association in that state we argued that the material universe is governed by physical law, and that there is no such thing as disobedience to that law, nor is there any such thing as active obedience to it. The sun, moon, stars, and the earth, all passively remain in their respective places by reason of physical law. We also argued that God saw fit to control His moral or rational creature, man, by moral law, and that there is activity in obeying the moral law or disobeying it, and that there is such a thing as disobedience to moral law. We also argued that God saw fit to govern His people, His children, by parental law, and that there is disobedience to parental law; and that in obedience and disobedience to that law there is activity. These positions we took when we were in North Carolina then were the principles held to by Old Baptists then, and they hold to them yet. These things are not new. The man who denies them is the man who has some new thing. We are sorry that the brethren in North Carolina and Virginia are having a war over this position; but it seems that the ones who do not accept this doctrine are the ones who are pushing the fight. Elder Wilson went before Danville Church more than once and confessed his wrong in using any harsh words, and the church which had received him on confession of faith without official investigation also confessed her wrong and begged forgiveness, and Lawyer Spring confessed her wrong for continuing to use him as pastor; but Danville saw fit, after saying in one conference that she would forgive, in the next conference to dismiss the matter and said she would have no more to do with it and would not forgive. If what they claimed as the reason for excluding was the true reason, and there was nothing else at the bottom of the matter, it is very evident to our mind that they would have forgiven the brother and the churches. But this they have refused to do. Now they should just come right out and make their fight in the open on the doctrine for which they propose to stand. We have written the foregoing for the plain and simple reason that we feel like justice demands that our readers know just the true status of affairs in that country, as it appears to us. We are sorry that these matters exist as they do, and we were very hopeful that it would all be settled. But it seems that Danville Church and some of the preachers in that country are determined not to have any settlement. May the Lord pity us. C. H. C.

What They Desire

---May 1, 1925

We have received a clipping from the Park City News, Bowling Green, Ky., a news item sent in from Glasgow, Ky., Dec. 27, stating that Elder L. R. Chaney had died at his home in Allen County, Ky., and that he was the last surviving minister of the Primitive Baptist Church. The item says, "There are now six churches of this belief in the state, but so far as known, there is no minister of that faith living in the state." We have heard something about a zone of ignorance, and evidently the correspondent of the News at Glasgow is a member of the know nothing clan, evidently in the zone of darkest ignorance, and the news editor of the News is about as ignorant as his correspondent. We do not know how many Primitive Baptist Churches and associations there are in Kentucky, nor do we know how many Primitive Baptist ministers are living in the state; but there are more Primitive Baptist Churches in what is known as the Kentucky Purchase than this paper says there are in the entire state. Only a very small percent of the Primitive Baptist ministers in Kentucky, possibly, are subscribers for our paper, but we are sending The Primitive Baptist to twelve of our ministers in the state of Kentucky. If the correspondent and editor of the Park City News get no nearer to heaven than they have of telling the truth in that item, the devil will have the delightful pleasure of watching them sizzle in hell to all eternity. C. H. C.

Peace Meeting Called

---May 1, 1925

In another place in this paper will be found a call for a peace meeting to be held at Jamestown, La., beginning on Friday night before the fifth Sunday in May. We trust our brethren will all try to attend that meeting. We very much desire to be there, and if the Lord will, and we can arrange so as to go, we will try to be present. We pray the good Lord may lead and direct in the meeting, and that much good may be accomplished in His great name, and that our poor divided people may be united again in love and sweet fellowship. May the Lord help us all. C. H. C.

Private Letters

---May 15, 1925

We frequently get letters from brethren saying they would be glad to get a letter from us. Now, we do not at all doubt what they say about it, but we just do not have time to write as many private letters as we would like to. The duties devolving upon us are so many and so pressing that we just cannot write any more private letters than it seems to us to be absolutely necessary. We do not wish any brother or sister to feel, though, that we do not appreciate their letters, for we do. They encourage us much along the way. We often feel cast down and discouraged and some letter comes to us that revives us again, and makes us feel like pressing on in the service of the Master. All our readers hear from us in nearly every issue of the paper, as we try to write something for nearly every issue, and would write something for every issue if we could. Write to us when you feel like doing so, and remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Matthew 8:11-12

---May 15, 1925

Brother A. H. Middleton, Reagan, Tenn., requests us to give our views on (Matthew 8:11-12), which reads: "And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." We do not have space to comment at length, and must be brief. Those to come from the east and west were the Gentiles who were to come into the gospel service, and the children of the kingdom who were to be cast out were the Jews. They were called the children of the kingdom, as the oracles of God were committed unto them. Because of unbelief they were cut off from the privileges of gospel worship and service and were cast out into outer darkness, and they are in darkness to this good day. But it looks to us as though the fullness of the Gentiles is just about come in. We find as much darkness, or almost as much, among the Gentiles now as was among the Jews in the days of the apostles. It seems to us that we are living in perilous times, and it behooves us to awake from our slumbers. May the good Lord help us so to do. C. H. C.

Some Questions

---May 15, 1925

We have received a letter from Curtice Conwill, Fulton, Miss., in which he says: "I am enclosing a few questions which I do not understand very well. Will you please explain them for me? I am not after an argument, but the truth, and the whole truth." We will give the questions as he has them and answer them as briefly as possible.

- 1. (John 13:8) "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." The Saviour simply meant that if He did not wash Peter's feet he had no part with Him in that service and the enjoyment of it.
- 2. ((0:16) (Matthew 20:16) "So the last shall be first, and the first last; for many be called, but few chosen." (Matthew 22:14) "For many are called, but few are chosen." Many are called to eternal life; many are called out of darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God; but there are few chosen as witnesses for and to the truth. God has a few of His chosen and called children whom He has chosen as witnesses for His truth.
3. Does (John 3:5) mean water baptism? No. Baptism is no place in the Bible represented as a birth. It is a burial and resurrection.
4. A person once said to me, "If I could get my heart right while the big meeting is going on, I'd join." We suppose you will have to get the party to explain this who said it.
5. Who can keep the commandments? The living child of God can keep the gospel commandments, and all people can keep the moral commandments to live honestly and uprightly.
6. Do the non-elect die in infancy? No.
7. Is every person, when an infant, a child of God? No. C. H. C.

Filling Appointments

---May 15, 1925

We left home on Thursday, March 26, and arrived in Huntsville, Ala., at 2 o'clock Friday morning, and were met at the train by our father-in-law, Brother B. B. Lawler, and son, Claud. We filled the appointment that day at Flint Church, and had a very pleasant meeting. Elder H. P. Houk was with us there. Saturday we filled the appointment at Union Church, near Woodville, Ala. A large crowd was present, and we enjoyed a sweet meeting at this place. Elders Andrew Houk, Tom Flanagan and John Page were with us there. Saturday evening we left Woodville for Chattanooga, and were met at the train by Brother Mack (D. M.) Raulston. We enjoyed a sweet meeting at this place Sunday and Sunday night. An appointment was published for us and also for Elder J. W. Bragg for Sunday, and we preached together. Brother Bragg was present at night also. Monday morning we left Chattanooga for Knoxville, arriving there at 10 o'clock. Elder J. E. Hurst and some other brethren met us at the train and we went at once to the church. A good crowd soon gathered, and we had a sweet meeting at this place. Besides Elder Hurst, Elders W. C. McMillon and W. A. Gregory were with us here. Other ministers may have been present, but if so we do not now recall their names. That evening we went to Bristol where we spent the remainder of the night. Tuesday morning at 6:30 we left Bristol for Marion, Va., where we changed cars for Trout Dale. At Chilhowie Elder C. N. Tilson and Brother W. A. Bailey boarded the train and went with us to Trout Dale. At this place we had meeting Tuesday night at the home of Elder B. H. Blevins, near Trout Dale, and in Trout Dale Wednesday, Wednesday night, Thursday, Thursday night and Friday. It was a pleasant meeting indeed. Elders B. H. Blevins, C. N. Tilson, J. A. Cave, H. B. Miller and S. J. Heath were with us during the meeting. On Wednesday a sister was received into the fellowship of the church as a candidate for, baptism. This seems to be a good live church. On Friday afternoon we were conveyed from there to the home of Elder Ed Davis, about twenty-five miles, into the neighborhood of Pond Mountain Church, Elder Tilson coming with us. We spent the night with Elder Davis, and today had meeting at the Pond Mountain Church, and enjoyed a very sweet service. Elders J. A. Church and R. A. May, besides Elders Davis and Tilson, were with us. We are now at the home of Elder Ed Davis, on Saturday evening, April 4. We feel to hope the good Lord has graciously blessed us to speak in His great name since we left our loved ones at home, and our trust and hope is in Him, that He will continue to bless us with liberty of speech, and that He will care for and keep our loved ones while we are away from them. Please pray for us and our dear ones at home and that the Lord may be with them in their lonely hours. C. H. C.

Church Discipline

---May 15, 1925

We have had quite a number of requests to write an article on the subject of church discipline. This is a great subject and cannot be treated in full in any short article, or in a long one, for that matter. Some write and tell us of members who never attend church nor even write to the church-some perhaps near the church and yet do not attend; some have united with other orders, and yet their names remain on our church books as members; some say they have not had the rules-read for a long time, and such like things. It seems to us that where such conditions exist it is high time for them to awake from their slumbers. Any member of the church has the right to ask for the rules to be read in any conference. But they do not have the right for all to wait for some one else to ask for something to be done that should be attended to. Where each one is just waiting for somebody else to make the suggestion for that to be done that needs to be done, they are all, evidently, "asleep on the job." Wake up, and get busy. If a member never goes to his church, where he is in reach of the church, and never lets the church hear from him when he is not in reach, he is not worth anything to the church, and he is a dead load for the church to carry. Dead folks should be buried and put out of sight. If you have some dead folks in your church you should get busy and bury them, for if they are not buried they will likely begin to smell so bad after awhile that live folks cannot stay around. You know that live folks cannot stay very long where dead folks remain unburied. Most church rules of decorum say. that if a member fails to attend about three meetings it is the duty of the church to inquire the reason. The object of this is not to find something to bring as a charge against the absent member, but to find if there is something in the way that might be removed by a little effort on the part of the church. The member might be sick or in need. It is the duty of the church to find out. There might be some good reason for staying away which could, and should, be removed. If there is no good reason, and the member cannot be reclaimed, then a charge should be preferred and the person dealt with. Where some member has joined some other order the church should appoint a committee to labor with such a member. Who knows but what the member might be reclaimed? We have known such to be the case. Such a thing might be done by a member in a moment of darkness and discouragement, and if the brethren would try to reclaim him he might feel assured that the church loves him, when he might have been feeling that he was forsaken and that the members of the church did not care for him. If, upon investigation, it is found that the member thus acting does not really believe the Old Baptist doctrine and cannot be reclaimed, then he should be dealt with. Sometimes we may become careless and neglectful of each other. We should visit each other more and associate together more. They used to do that more in our younger days than we do now. If we would do that we would be a great help to each other, and that would be a great help to the church. It seems, though, in this fast age, that we hardly have time to speak to each other when we meet, and seldom have time to visit each other in our homes. We are neglecting the most important matters and are going in a mad rush after the world and the things of the world. Another thing that is grossly wrong is for a member to live right in the community of an orderly Old Baptist Church and have his membership at another church at a distance from him where he cannot attend regularly. In our young days this was considered gross disorder; and yet we know brethren who will, and do, ask such members to let their membership stay in that case. This is very wrong, and you who have done so should be ashamed of it; and you should at once ask the member thus advised and requested to do to forgive you for the wrong advice and advise him to go ahead and do the right thing. If all members were to hold their membership thus at a distant church, there would be no Old Baptist Churches kept up to attend. If it is wrong for all to do that, then it is wrong for any to do so. May the good Lord help us all to awake to our duty, and give us grace whereby we may serve Him acceptably and with godly fear. C. H. C.

Remarks Concerning J. T. M'Rae

---June 1, 1925

Brother Petty, do you not know that these forked-tongued blatherskites would not tell the truth on the Old Baptists, even if they were paid to do so? They preach for hire and divine for money. One of their brethren betrayed the Lord for thirty pieces of silver, and they would do you and me as bad for a penny. If this little saphead wants a discussion with you, Brother Petty, through our columns, we are willing for him to have it if he will get space in one of their papers for the same discussion. We will not take up our valuable space for such vituperations from the devil's emissaries as is hurled by such fellows, unless they will give space in one of their papers for our side of the question. Another Name On Our Staff

Since the peace meeting at Munday, Texas, is leading to reconciliation between our people and Elder J. H. Fisher and many of his brethren, so it seems, we felt inclined to place Elder Fisher's name on our editorial staff, and so wrote him requesting the same, and he has granted the request. Elder Fisher is an able minister and a good writer, and we hold him in high esteem. We are so glad to see our poor, distressed and divided people getting together. These unholy wars are distressing, and we should not strive about words to no profit. Those who love the cause of the Master should be striving to see how near we can be together, instead of striving to see how far apart we can get. May the good Lord help us to strive for peace and the things that make for peace. We desire to continue striving in that way, and disregard the hard things which may be said of us on account of pursuing that course. C. H. C.

Our Trip in Virginia and North Carolina

---June 15, 1926

We fully intended to write an account of the remainder of our trip in Virginia and North Carolina for the last issue of the paper or for this one, but we have not had the time to write it. We have a whole lot more matter on hand now for the paper than we will ever have room to publish-much of it is real good, too. We wish we had room for all the good letters we get for the paper, but we do not. On this account, for these reasons just stated, we will have to content ourselves with saying that we met all the appointments that were made and enjoyed some pleasant meetings. True, some of the churches visited were in a cold state, but most of them seemed to be alive. There were some additions to some of the churches we visited, and at those places the churches seemed to be revived and rejoiced to see the Lord's little children coming home. We attended the spring session of the Bear Creek Association. A number of ministers were in attendance. The meeting was an enjoyable one and the preaching was harmonious all the way through. They are a good band of brethren and have no use for Arminianism on the one hand or Antinomianism on the other hand. We were kindly treated all the way along the trip and enjoyed our tour among those good Baptists, and do not feel that we will ever forget the many deeds of kindness shown us. May the good Lord bless them and lead them in the right way, and give them the Christian courage to press on in the sweet service of the Master. We trust that they may all remember us in their prayers, and take this as a personal letter to each one. We would be glad to write more and tell the places visited and the ministers we met, but time and space will not allow, this time. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you. C. H. C.

Letter from D. V. Spangler

---July 1, 1925

When we returned home from our recent trip in Virginia and North Carolina we found a letter here waiting for us written by one D. V Spangler. He takes us to task for what we said concerning Elder Wilson and the Danville Church, etc. He says: "Are you sure you have been rightly informed about these matters? Are you all trying to force a division among the Baptists of this country on the doctrine?" We stated that the cause of the trouble was doctrine. Were we wrongly informed about that? If that was not the truth, then why was the court decision so rendered? Why does the report of that say that it started over doctrine? And why did Danville put out a leaflet, a part of which was signed by W. R. Dodd as moderator and W. L. Parker as clerk, and by Elder C. T. Evans as moderator and R. L. Dodson as clerk of the Staunton River Association, the very first paragraph of which says, "For several years there seemed to have existed a difference among the elders and members on some points of doctrine," etc.? Why did you say this if there was no doctrinal difference? Then on the second page this same leaflet says, "Now, we wish to say if they will turn over our property or loan it to us, so we can relieve our clerk by furnishing the Baptists with minutes, as is our custom, Wilson and his crowd may go on with their doctrine of many salvations and conditional stuff to their heart's delight and satisfaction," etc. You fellows have repeatedly denied that there was a doctrinal difference, and here you emphatically declare that there is, and virtually say you have no fellowship for the doctrine Elder Wilson advocates, and a great majority of the Baptists have always advocated the same doctrine. Then since you say here that there is a difference, and have at other times said the doctrine was not the difference, pray tell us when you told the truth? Did you tell it both times? How could your folks have told the truth in both statements, seeing that the statements are diametrically opposed to each other -just the opposite to each other? In this leaflet your crowd deny there being more than one salvation spoken of or taught in the Bible. If there is only one, we will give you and your whole gang until the next day after the judgment to reconcile just these two statements from Holy Writ: "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." -(II Timothy 1:9). Here the apostle most emphatically declares that we are saved, and that not according to our works, either good or bad. The works done by us have nothing whatever to do with this saving. The inspired apostle most emphatically so declares in this text. But the same writer says: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." -(I Timothy 4:16). Here the same inspired man says to Timothy that "IN DOING THIS thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." This was a saving that was to be accomplished by DOING, and doing is working. The whole conglomerated mess of you one Salvationists cannot harmonize these two expressions from the same inspired writer from now until the next day after the judgment. Suppose some of you try your hand at it? Will you? Not much, we guess. Your stuff is new among Baptists, and you have departed from the faith. Your crowd have proven that they are wrong all the way through by refusing to forgive an erring brother and erring churches when they humbly begged forgiveness. If you loved the Saviour and His blessed truth as you should, you would forgive. May the good Lord pity the poor deluded brethren who are being led astray by designing men. C. H. C.

Another Editor Added

---July 1, 1925

At the conclusion of the peace meeting at Jamestown, La., we asked Elder T. L. Webb if he was willing for us to put his name on our editorial staff. He said he would consider the matter, and his "Salutatory," to be found elsewhere in this paper, is the result. Elder T. L. Webb is a good writer and a good preacher, and we believe he is a good man, and we are glad that we can now stand together in laboring for peace among our poor and afflicted people. At the meeting in Jamestown Elder Webb made full and complete confession for all the part he took in the late trouble and division among our people. He manifested such an humble spirit that we felt to be drawn closer to him than we had ever been before. May the good Lord abundantly bless him, is our humble prayer. We are glad to have his name on our editorial staff, and trust he may feel a desire to write for our columns, for we are sure all our readers will enjoy his writings. And we humbly pray the good Lord to enable us and all our editors to continue to labor for the peace of Zion and for the unifying of our poor divided people. C. H. C.

Bear Creek Association

---July 1, 1925

We had the pleasure of attending the Bear Creek Association in North Carolina the first Sunday in May and Saturday before and Monday following. A large crowd was in attendance, and the meeting was a pleasant one from first to last. The preaching was all a unit, not a jar or discord was heard. The ministers present from other associations and from other states were: Elders J. A. Cave, John S. Lewis, W. F. Pruitt, H. M. Williams, R. H. Pittman, Joel T. Lewis, M. L. Riner, J. R. Wilson, Lee Hanks, C. B. Kilby, W. C. McMillon, Wm. Cribbs, J. M. Royal, S. G. Caudill and C. H. Cayce. Their home ministers present were: Elders J. M. Bagwell, W. C. Edwards, B. L. Treece, J. Eudy and Robert Helms. Elder Edwards is the efficient moderator and is an able and humble gift. He preached the introductory sermon and at the close of the meeting made some very pointed and appropriate remarks. May the good Lord bless this noble band of Baptists. C. H. C.

Law of God on Baptism

---July 15, 1925

We have before us a little pamphlet with the above title, published by one John A. May, member of the North Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South (of God), which is about as great a perversion of truth as we have seen recently in so small a space. The pamphlet contains thirty-two pages. We do not have the space to take up different things the author has stated, but will pay some respect to just one or two. On page 10 may be found the following question and answer: "In the Old Testament, what is the law of God on the Bible mode of Bible baptism? Answer: The law of God is recorded in ((25) (Ezekiel 36:25-28): 'And I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.' " If this is the law of God on the Bible mode of Bible baptism, then it is also the law of God as to how one is to be cleansed from his sins, for there is a cleansing performed in this work. In it the one operated upon receives a new heart and a new spirit. This little Methodist (South of God) evidently believes, then, that no one can be saved without being baptized according to his plan-it not only denies salvation to those who are without baptism, but it denies salvation to all who are not baptized by sprinkling. The truth of the matter is that this text has no reference whatever to baptism. The next thing we wish to notice is his contention that Philip baptized the eunuch by sprinkling. He quotes (Acts 8:26-40), in which may be found the statement: "And they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." He argues that the eunuch was a colored man. The gentleman certainly knows that a colored man is a Gentile; and he certainly knows that no Gentiles went to Jerusalem to worship. The Jews were the only people who went to Jerusalem to worship. The eunuch, therefore, was a Jew who held a position of trust under Candace, queen of Ethiopia; he had charge of all her treasure. The Jews were always a money making people, and that queen knew it; so she had this Jew in her employ and gave him charge over all her treasure. He had been to Jerusalem to worship-a thing which no Gentile ever did. Cornelius was the first Gentile to ever hear a gospel sermon, and that by the mouth of Peter, who said, in ((7) (Acts 15:7) "Ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." If the Rev. Mr. May is correct then Peter was wrong, and they did not know what he said they knew, for Peter did not go to the house of Cornelius and preach there until after Philip had baptized the eunuch. Peter took some of his brethren with him when he went to Cornelius in answer to the call for him to go, for he yet, as other Jews, considered it unlawful for the Jews to keep company with the Gentiles. The gentleman's contention is, therefore, wrong. But let us notice his text: "They both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him." It does no violence to language nor to God's word if we take a word out of a sentence and put the true meaning of that word in place of it. What does the word sprinkle mean? The Standard Dictionary, published by Funk & Wagnalls, says: "Sprinkle, to scatter in drops or small particles." Now let us read the text, "And they went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he scattered him about in drops or small particles." Dear reader, do you sincerely believe any such thing as that was done? Do you believe Philip scattered the eunuch about in small drops or in small particles? What sane, or reasonable, person would believe any such foolishness or tommyrot as that? Such men as the Rev. (?) Mr. May and his dupes may believe it-but excuse us, please. The inspired Apostle Paul tells us most emphatically in (Romans 6:4) that "we are buried with him by baptism into death." If we are buried by baptism, as the inspired apostle says, then baptism is a burial; and as sprinkling is not a burial, then it is not baptism. Let us read the text again: "And they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he buried him." That is the truth of the matter, and no man can deny it without denying the plain language of the word of God; but we suppose a Methodist Reverend South of God may not mind doing a thing like that. There are quite a number of other things in this little pamphlet that are foreign to truth, but this is enough. C. H. C.

Lost in the Flood - Remarks

---July 15, 1925

Certainly, some of the Lord's people were drowned in the flood. The destruction by the flood was only a temporal destruction. Infants, as well as old people, were destroyed by the flood, but all who die in infancy are saved in heaven. It was a temporal or timely destruction of those who were drowned in the flood, and many of God's people are punished for their rebellion, for their wickedness. They are punished now for their disobedience, and die to the enjoyment of gospel life and peace as a result of their wrong doing. C. H. C.

Appointments Called In

---August 1, 1925

We are sorry that it seems most impossible for us to fill the appointments that were arranged by Elder P. H. Byrd and others for us in South Georgia, but unforeseen circumstances have made it necessary for us to postpone the trip. We wrote Elder Byrd some days ago that we would try to fall in with the list of appointments at Vidalia on Aug. 5th and fill the appointments from there on, but since then matters have developed and things have taken such a turn that makes it so we cannot well go on the trip now. We are truly sorry, and trust the brethren will pardon us. We never like to fail to meet appointments that are made for us, but this is one of the few times that we will have to fail. If the brethren desire, and the Lord wills, we can make the trip in November, and can possibly spend a little more time than we could have done at this time. If it is desired that we make the trip in November, the brethren will please let us know as soon as possible, so we will not have other promises out. Please remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Would Not Hear Them

---August 1, 1925

In the trouble a few years ago, and in the unholy war and division among our people, there was a division in New Ramah Church, then in the Louisiana Association. The brethren on our side of the question have been holding their meetings since that time at a schoolhouse a few miles from the old meetinghouse until a few months ago, when arrangements were made with the Methodists at Mt. Pisgah for them to have the use of the house for helping to repair it and keeping it up. Our brethren worshiping at this place are tired of war and deplore the sad state of affairs. So on the first Sunday in July they adopted the following letter and appointed messengers to present it to the brethren worshiping at the old meetinghouse:

THE LETTER

We, the Primitive Baptists at New Raman, worshiping at Mt. Pisgah, to our brethren and sisters called New Ramah, worshiping at the old New Ramah meetinghouse: Dear Brethren-Feeling grieved in our poor hearts over the divided and distressed condition of our beloved Zion, and for the purpose of endeavoring to obtain peace and reconciliation between us, we feel constrained to come to you as unto brethren in the Lord in an effort to restore peace and try to obtain and bring about reconciliation, that we may once more be a happy and united people, as we were before the unholy war among us. We beseech you to hear us patiently, and that you prayerfully consider what we say. Dear brethren, we feel sure that in the unholy war among our people which brought confusion, division, distress and sorrow of heart among us, that wrong was done on both sides-things were said and done on both sides which should not have been said and done; and feeling that it is right to do as the Lord has commanded, "Confess your faults one to another, and pray with and for each other, that ye may be healed," we come to you in love for the cause of the Master to ask if you will agree for us to meet together to mutually forgive each other of all wrongs committed, and bury the past, and come together in peace and love as one band of brethren in the Lord, and let us henceforth endeavor to forget the things that are behind and strive for the things that make for peace, and the things whereby we may edify one another. We are ready to make peace with all our brethren and sisters who want peace. We send this by the hands of our beloved brethren, E. F. Evers and E. B. Meeks. Will you, brethren, please hear us for the sake of the cause of the Master, and let us have your kind reply? Done and signed by order of the band of brethren called New Ramah, worshipping at Mt. Pisgah, on Sunday, July 5, 1925. Elder G. P. Woodall, Moderator. E. B. Meeks, Clerk pro tern. The above letter was delivered on Saturday before the second Sunday in July, at their regular meeting time. It will be seen that Brother E. B. Meeks, of Haynesville, La., was one of the messengers appointed to bear the letter. Under date of July 13 he wrote us as follows: Elder C. H. Cayce: Very Dear Brother-According to promise I delivered the resolution adopted by our brethren to the brethren in Louisiana, but they ignored it and would not have it read. I understand that there was quite a bit of sentiment against them for not having read it. I don't know just what would be best, but I feel like it should be made known to the brethren just how they stand. I was there Saturday and Sunday. Elder N. L. Martin was their preacher. He delivered able discourses both days. I could not help but have a prayer for a man that could preach so ably and be so blind to duty. May God speed the day when Israel can live in peace. Dear brother, may the Lord's richest blessings be with you and family; and if not asking too much for one so unworthy as I, when at a throne of God's rich grace please remember me. Your unworthy brother in bonds of peace and love, if one at all, E. B. Meeks. Haynesville, La.

We regret that those brethren would not hear the pleading for peace and for the privilege of confessing wrongs and faults to one another, as the inspired Book commands. It seems to us that when brethren will not hear their brethren pleading for an opportunity to confess wrongs and for brethren to live together in peace, that something must be radically wrong. "If you forgive not men their trespasses, how shall your heavenly Father forgive you your trespasses?" We publish the above so that our brethren everywhere may know what our brethren have done, and the effort they have made to obtain reconciliation. The peace meeting at Jamestown has accomplished great good, we are sure; but there are just a few yet who seemingly do not want peace or reconciliation with their brethren. We trust the good Lord may yet show them the error of their way and put it into their hearts to labor for peace with their brethren. C. H. C.

Woe Because of Immoral Preachers by Price Billingsby

---August 15, 1925

The following article by the name above and under the above heading is copied from the Gospel Advocate, published in Nashville, Tenn., by the McQuiddy Printing Company. It is a Christian (or Campbellite) paper. The article is so timely and so full of truth that we feel like giving it to our readers. Although our space is so limited, and we have so much more matter on hand than we have room for, yet we think the matter about which this article is written is so important that we are glad to give it space. Read it and ponder it well. No wonder there is so much trouble, unrest, distress and disturbance. No wonder so many are looking upon Christianity as a failure. No wonder so many look upon the church as being a bundle of hypocrisy. It is the imperative requirement of Holy Writ that the minister must be of good report of them that are without. It is not required that those without believe the doctrine the minister preaches, but it is required that he be esteemed as an honorable and an upright man. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Woe when we have preachers, some widely known, who are liars, cheats, and unchaste, whose sins are white-washed and hushed up, allowed station and honor almost without a break, or their gross offenses not becoming known at all save through whispers, or, if for various rascalities they are withdrawn from at one place, they, through the collusion of silence, go elsewhere, unrepentant and abetted, to prey upon an innocent brotherhood! I say woe! Our leaders and those who publish our papers, who are under special obligation freely enough betimes speak out against this and that offender. But is the divine rule for public rebuke in these matters often invoked? See I #Cor 5:5; Galatians 2:11; I Timothy 1:20; 5:20; II Timothy 2:17; Leviticus 5:1; 19:17; Proverbs 29:24; Romans 1:32]. Do you say nothing can be done, however badly needed? But why not? Is it not being increasingly taken for granted that the divine order can be treated with impunity? Cheaters, liars, and apostates need to be shown; it is owed both to the world at large and to the church to be understood that nobody, least of all a gospel preacher, shall defy and flaunt the moral code and the proprieties, and lightly get off with it. When Israel's leaders fell into immoralities, God terribly rebuked and cursed them; and when some of our preachers grossly err and wantonly bring the Lord's cause into disgrace, and the outrages be hidden or winked at, the Lord will again terribly destroy. The guilty should be rebuked and humiliated by being published and their offenses named; the offense and the offender should be chastised in the open. Only so will the claims of justice be somewhat satisfied, the loose and unruly warned, and an outraged public sentiment vindicated. The Lord's irrevocable decree is that sin must be paid for in full. Even divine pardon cannot save from many of its evil consequences. They that stand high have many blasts to shake them, and when they fall they are dashed to pieces. The church puts a man to the fore. But when he falls, he forfeits the right to honor and place bestowed upon him, nor can he rightly complain at severe measures of correction. He has made his bed, and lie on it he must; he must pay the penalty, even as a guard and warning to others. He has brought the church into deep odium, and many now suffer innocently on his account. Let him stoop down and kiss the rod that smites him, else Jehovah will utterly destroy him. He is a bird with a broken pinion, never to soar so high again, forever a wounded creature, often to be reminded of his shame, and only through long years of unwavering purity can he hope by so much as one jot to outlive and put down the ill fame of his fall. But let him rejoice that in coming to God with all his soul he will be lifted up to pardon and some usefulness. It is ever a mournful thing, working general havoc, when those who sit in high places fall into disgrace. Disaster overtakes the masses when their leaders lapse in conduct. Yea, life for the many is surer made when public offenders are brought to account, exposed and denounced, let this be ever so painful and disturbing. Nothing could be more destructive of the public weal than that sins be let alone. Uprighted wrong dare not be hushed up and forgotten. God cancels sin when the full price of repentance is paid, else it eats the soul to eternal damnation. Then, in these days of falling away, let the rising tide of departure be stemmed or stayed by plain truth being spoken.

Work Legal

---August 15, 1925

We have been asked to state through our columns our views as to the legality of the work of the committee from the different churches in their labor with Danville (Va.) Church. We are free to state that the work of that committee is legal. They were acting under church authority. When Danville Church rejected all labor by the sister churches, there was no other course to pursue but the course pursued by that committee. There is no question but what the doctrine was at the bottom of the matter, and the Lone Pilgrim is now making a plain and bold fight on that doctrine- they are openly advocating it now (unlimited predestination) in the last issue, and are on the warpath in dead earnest. It has come to a "show down" now- recognize Elder Wilson and those who stand on the true doctrine with him, or recognize such stuff as those fellows are advocating, as well as some other matters that might be mentioned. C. H. C.

Don't Want the Paper

---September 1, 1925

A few days ago we received the following letter:

Mr. Cayce: I have written you twice to stop my Primitive, or Mrs. R. M. Abbott did, and she sent in my subscription-. I did that in March, when it was out. I see you keep sending one just once in a while, when Wilson has some of his letters in it. I never get one unless there is some remark from him or some of his followers; and I do not want to read anything he has to print. I have already learned more of him and his than I care to hear. I think if you had been here at the start and all along and knew all as we do, you would not be so fresh yourself. So please do not send me any more of the Primitive copies, for I do not want them. Very respectfully, Mrs. W. W. Terrell. 1209 Claiborne St., Danville, Va. You can put this letter in your paper if you wish to do so.

REMARKS The above name was marked off our list as directed. The printer is a long time behind in correcting the mailing list that is in type, and from which the papers are mailed out, and on this account every issue of the paper has been sent to the above address. When papers are thus sent on because of the printers being behind with the work there is no charge made for the papers, for the name no longer appears on the book as a subscriber. We suppose if the doctrine the above party has lined up with is the truth, then God unchangeably decreed and fixed from all eternity that Elder Wilson should contend against that doctrine; and He also unchangeably fixed it that some others should advocate it.. If the doctrine is the truth, then those who advocate it could not help doing so, and Elder Wilson could not help fighting it; for God unchangeably fixed and forged it that they should do and say just what they did do and say. Therefore, when the good sister arrays herself against Elder Wilson, she arrays herself against what God has predestinated, fixed and unchangeably decreed from all eternity. But if that doctrine be the truth we must conclude that God did also unchangeably and unalterably predestinate, fix and decree that she should thus array herself against what He had unchangeably and unalterably fixed and decreed from eternity. If their doctrine is the truth, then God did, from all eternity, absolutely, unconditionally, unalterably and unchangeably predestinate, fix and decree that we should not be there at the start and all along, and that we should not know as they do, and that we should, therefore, "be so fresh" as we are. Now, if your doctrine is the truth, we have only been carrying out God's absolute and unalterable and unchangeable predestination, and we could not do otherwise. So, why are you raising such a howl with us about it? If the matter does not suit you, why do you not raise a row with the Lord about it, for thus fixing, predestinating and unalterably decreeing the thing the way He did? It seems to us that if the thing does not suit you that the eternal God is the one for you folks to raise a row with; for if your doctrine is the truth, He is the one that is responsible for the matter being as it is. May the good Lord pity the poor deluded mortals who will advocate such a doctrine. C. H. C.

Acts 10:36-39

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Christ, I Hope-I see your reply in The Primitive Baptist to one John May on baptism in July 15, and I see that you say Cornelius was the first Gentile to hear the gospel and believe, which I believe. A question: Had the Gentiles ever heard the gospel before that time? ((0:36) (Acts 10:36). What word is this that God sent to the children of Israel? ((0:37) (Acts 10:37), "That word, I say, ye know." Does "ye" here refer to Cornelius or to the six brethren that went with Peter down there? If this does not mean the six brethren who went with him, you make it strong. I know it won't take you long to look this up for me. ((0:39) (Acts 10:39): Does Peter mean the apostles or the six that were with him? I have thought he had reference to the six, and if I am wrong make it strong. You know I have to be cited and knocked around a whole lot before I give up. If I am wrong knock both feet from under me. If you just knock out one foot at a time it will take longer to get me down. I don't love to differ from anyone, and more especially my brethren. I know you don't have time to fool with me, but I want to know whether that word in ((0:37) (Acts 10:37) means the life giving word or the preached word. I have been having some good meetings. Had some additions to the churches while I was in the West Tennessee Association. Amos just out of a four days meeting at Brush Creek. At Mt. Zion, in my association, had no additions, but good interest. If Brother John R. Harris, at Thornton, Ark., ever learns what to say to get them to come in, I want him to tell us through The Primitive Baptist and then I will go back to Mt. Zion and say it and get those old "highlanders" to come in and take up their abode with us. I said all I knew to say. They seemed to enjoy the preaching, but we did not get them to come in. If we could tell the secret of fellowship I believe we could get them to come; but the Old Baptists have a secret they can't tell, and the Masons have a secret they are not allowed to tell. "A good understanding have all they that do His commandments." May the Lord help us to live in a way that the little children may be encouraged to turn in with us. I did not think of writing as I have. Please answer my question through The Primitive Baptist when you have time. May the Lord bless you and yours. Pray for me. I am, I hope, your little brother in Christ, J. W. Lomax. 719 S. Third St., Paducah, Ky.

REMARKS

If the Gentiles had ever before heard the gospel we have no record of it. The brethren in Judea heard of the visit of Peter and the brethren to the house of Cornelius, and at the same time they also heard that the Gentiles had received the word of God. See (Acts 11:1). Did they hear the truth? Yes. Then this was when the Gentiles received the word of God. See ((7) (Acts 15:7) "Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel and believe." It was by the mouth of Peter that the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel. This was God's choice. As this was God's choice, this was the first gospel sermon the Gentiles had ever heard. The word that the Gentiles heard was the same word that the Jews had previously heard, and the word which the Jews already knew. Peter was addressing the brethren who accompanied him when he said, "That word, I say, ye know." The first thing the apostle said in his discourse at the house of Cornelius was addressed to the brethren who went with him. He had previously thought the Lord's people were confined to the Jews; but he had been convinced of the fact that the Lord had a people among the Gentiles, so he said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him." He found a man among the Gentiles who was a devout man; one that feared God, and prayed to God always. In the vision before he went to the house of Cornelius the voice had said, "What God hath cleansed." God had already done the work of cleansing, which is done by the Spirit. When Peter and his brethren got there he found that it was so, that God had a people among the Gentiles, and he so informed the brethren with him; and told them that they knew the word which had been spoken by the apostles. God regenerates the sinner without the preacher, and he had been preaching that doctrine, and so had the other apostles, and those brethren knew it; and now here is evidence of the truthfulness of that doctrine right before your eyes. Now, Brother Lomax, if you can get any consolation from what we have written, we are glad of it. We are glad to hear of your good meetings. May the Lord's blessing continue with you. Our brethren want you to visit them in Arkansas again. Remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

The Infant Question

---September 1, 1926

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-On page 8 of The Primitive Baptist of May 15, 1925, under the heading, "Some Questions," I want to say a few words and ask two or three questions, and hope you will give me the desired information. Fifth question: "Who can keep the commandments?" Your answer is, "The living children of God can keep the gospel commandments; and all people can keep the moral commandments to live honestly and uprightly." Do you believe God's children who do not know the commandments can keep them? Do you believe either God's people or those who are not God's people can keep the commandments, of either gospel or moral class, without the will power to do so? No question as to whether or not all have physical power to do either of the commandments, but the mind is the supreme court of all living beings, and without the consent of the mind the body is powerless to act rationally, and if not rationally it would be worthless. Referring to questions 6 and 7 you say the nonelect do not die in infancy. How do you know, or what Scriptures do you rely upon to sustain what you say? I have not been able to find any Scripture that sustains your answer, according to my knowledge and belief. Seventh answer is all right, I think. Please answer in your paper, so all can learn. In sincerity, J. I. Caneer. Montebello, Calif.

REMARKS

In our answers to the questions above referred to of course it was understood that the child of God who knows the commandments is the one who can keep them. All people know that it is right to live moral lives, and they can do so. If they cannot, then they are not responsible and are not blameworthy. No blame rests upon a man for doing what he cannot help doing; and if a man cannot live morally, then he cannot help living immorally. If he cannot help living immorally, and yet is punished for it, then the punishment is not just. The servant that knows not the Master's will, nor does it, is beaten with few stripes. No doubt it is frequently the case that some are willfully ignorant. They do not investigate as they should. They may neglect to study, and on account of that neglect, they may fail to know the Master's will. God's people have a will for holiness and righteousness, though they may sometimes act in such a way as to cause others to doubt them. While they have that will for holiness and righteousness, which springs from the divine life which God has given them, yet they still have the old nature that is poisoned with sin, and have that old nature to contend with. Now, with reference to the infant, we will refer to (0:15) (Mark 10:15) "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." Now, (Luke 18:17) "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein." In Mark's description he uses the term little child, which word in the original is used sometimes with reference to children in youth; but Luke uses the word translated infants in (Luke 18:15), which is not used in referring to older children, but the original word is used with reference to small children, and sometimes used with reference to the child in the mother's womb, even before the natural birth. We call attention to this to show that it does not refer to old people young in Christ. It refers to babes in the mother's arms. The Master does not say, "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as this little child," referring to some special or particular child, but "as a little child." (Luke 18:17) He uses the indefinite article-a "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God AS a little child," etc. If an adult receives the kingdom of God as a little child, then a little child does not miss it. If a little child misses the kingdom, and you receive it as a little child, then you miss it, too. Therefore, if a little child misses the kingdom, it will be a universal damnation for all the adult race of Adam. If one of the adult family of Adam is saved, or receives the kingdom, then a little child does not miss it. From our understanding of the matter, no other Scripture is necessary to prove our position. May the Lord bless these few words to the good of the reader. C. H. C.

Mountain Springs Association

---September 15, 1925

We have just attended the Mountain Springs Association, which met with Fullers Chapel Church in North Little Rock. A good crowd was present each day- Friday, Saturday and first Sunday in September. The ministers present were Elders J. H. Fisher, Newcastle, Texas; C. J. Holcomb, Ft. Worth, Texas; P. E. Whitwell, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; A. D. Cencibaugh, Donaldson, Ark.; T. P. McCain, Gumlog, Ark.; J. D. Elkins, Blevins, Ark.; J. J. Brown, Clarksville, Ark.; C. M. Monk, Abbott, Ark.; F. H. Inman, Roselle, Mo.; J. Sandage, Donaldson, Ark.; H. J. Woodruff, Sardis, Tenn.; E. W. Hargett, Donaldson, Ark.; and C. H. Cayce, besides their home ministers. Elder J. H. O'Neal was moderator and Brother J. N. O'Neal was clerk. There was not a discordant note sounded in the preaching. No hobby riding. All preached peace by Jesus Christ, and peace and love abounded. All seemed glad to be there and to meet each other, and rejoiced in the good things of the kingdom. The Lord's presence was felt and manifested, and it was a good meeting. The next session of the association is appointed to be held with Bethlehem Church, at Bee Branch, Ark. C. H. C.

Elder W. S. Broom

---September 15, 1925

We should have made this announcement before now, but having so many things to look after and attend to we just overlooked it. At our regular meeting in Fordyce in July (we think it was July) Elder W. S. Broom was present and offered himself for membership in our church, and was gladly received. He joined by relation, or on confession of faith, as it is sometimes termed. His membership has been at Tioga, Texas. He had just been down in Louisiana in the section where they had the Jamestown peace meeting, and having seen the good effect of that meeting, and being tired of war and confusion, he desired a home with those who are laboring for peace, and so asked for a home with us, which was gladly granted him. He left immediately after the meeting for Mississippi, and he is still visiting among the brethren. May the Lord bless his labors for the benefit of His dear children. C. H. C.

Another Move For Peace

---October 15, 1925

For quite awhile there has been a difference between the Salem and the First Oklahoma Associations, growing out of some matters at Little Flock Church. During our recent trip in that section of country, in Arkansas, we were at Little Flock Church on September 15th. Elders A. D. West, B. M. Green and J. M. Newman were present. These brethren presented the following resolution as a basis upon which the differences existing might be done away and the trouble all settled between the two bodies. The resolutions were unanimously adopted by Little Flock Church, and those brethren said they believed their churches would adopt the same. If they do, then the differences between these churches and associations will all be settled. We were so glad to see this done and to see such steps taken. Fellowship Church, at Hon, also adopted the same resolutions on the 16th or 17th, the day we were there, as that church was also involved in the trouble. We were so glad to see them so ready and willing to settle any trouble or differences that might exist. The only way to really settle trouble is to confess our wrongs and ask forgiveness, and to forgive those whom we think have wronged us. When we are in the spirit to confess our own wrongs it requires but little effort to settle troubles. May the good Lord help us all to confess our wrongs, and may peace and prosperity be restored to our bleeding and beloved Zion. C. H. C.

THE RESOLUTIONS

Forasmuch as conditions in our beloved Zion are such as the hearts of many of the saints of God are torn and bleeding over our distressed condition on account of differences between some of the churches in the Salem Association and the First Primitive Baptist Association of Oklahoma, and inasmuch as we realize that we are all poor, finite, fallible beings, depending alone on the merits of a crucified Lord, and believing it to be to the glory of God, and desiring peace, union, love and sweet fellowship to be restored, be it, therefore, Resolved, That we, Little Flock Church, confess our wrongs, errors, mistakes and sins, of whatsoever nature they may be, to any and all of our dear sister churches in particular, and to all our dear brethren and sisters in general, and ask their forgiveness, assuring them by these presents and this, our official act, we freely forgive all. Be it further, Resolved, That we reaffirm our faith in the principles upon which we, as a church, were constituted. Be it further Resolved, That we will endeavor to keep the unity of the faith in the bonds of peace. Be it further Resolved, That where members have been excluded at any place and received by another church, that this mutual confession shall be accepted and all wrongs forgiven, which shall mean a restoration of excluded brethren and sisters to our fellowship and a transfer of their membership to the places where they are now. Done and signed by order of Little Flock Church while in conference on September 16, 1926. Elder C. M. Monk, Moderator. J. D. Caudle, Clerk.

Heresy and Heretics

---October 15, 1925

On another page in this paper will be found an article from Brother John R. Havens, of Santa Anna, Texas, under the above heading. Brother Havens takes us and our contributors to task on account of the use of the word heresy, and this has caused us to look diligently for the meaning of that word in the original language, as well as in English. We have never met Brother Havens, though we would be glad to do so. We have learned to love him from his writings. It is not our intention to wound his feelings, nor do we wish to wound the feelings of any. We feel sure that many of God's dear children are wrong, both in doctrine and in practice-some are wrong in one, and some are wrong in the other, and some are wrong in both. We may be wrong ourselves. But if we are, we desire to know the truth. There is no real or lasting comfort or joy in believing a false doctrine; and real and true happiness comes from practicing the truth. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." We desire to know the truth and then to live in harmony with it. We are free to confess and to say that many of us- and most of us -have been too bitter and have engaged too much in war with our brethren. Many times when we have differed we have magnified the difference, instead of trying to minimize the difference and endeavoring to stay together. We feel sure that this is wrong; and it is no wonder that our people are divided into so many factions. We should labor and strive for the things that make for peace, and the things wherewith we may edify one another, instead of laboring to divide and to destroy one another. If a brother makes a hobby of any point, and thus stirs up strife and confusion, and will not desist, or quit it, if the church would simply withdraw from him and let him remain out until he is willing to cease such hobby riding, it would save much trouble in our ranks. It would have saved some of the divisions that have taken place in our day. This principle is the same, no matter what the hobby might be. But we desire to say just a few things concerning the matter of heresy. In (Galatians 5:19-20,21), we have this language: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." After investigation we sincerely believe that Brother Havens is mistaken in his view that heresy is not false doctrine. Let us reason a little on the matter before we look at the definition of the word. Idolatry is here mentioned as one of the works of the flesh; but yet what is it? It is "the worship of idols; the paying of divine homage to false gods or images; also adoration of created or imaginary beings or natural objects or forces; inordinate love or admiration to; fervent devotion." We may safely say, then, that idolatry is a false worship, a wrong worship. One may be ever so sincere and honest in the matter, and yet be an idolater. Now, if idolatry is this kind of worship, and yet it is one of the works of the flesh, why may not heresy be a false doctrine and still be one of the works of the flesh? False doctrine does not come from the Lord, any more than false worship comes from Him. If they do not come from the Lord, do they not come from the flesh? The word heresy in the text is defined by Webster thus: "Religious opinion opposed to the authorized doctrinal standards of any particular church, especially when held by a person holding to the same general faith, and tending to promote schism or separation; lack of orthodox or sound belief; rejection of, or erroneous belief in regard to, some fundamental religious doctrine or truth: heterodoxy. An opinion held in opposition to the established or commonly received doctrine, and tending to promote division or dissension. A characteristic opinion held by a person or a party; a particular body or style of doctrine; a sect." Webster defines a heretic thus: "One who holds to a heresy; especially one who, having made a profession of Christian belief, deliberately and pertinaciously upholds a doctrine varying from that of the church, or rejects one prescribed by his church." If one holds a view contrary to the Catholic doctrine, in the eye of the Catholic, or from the Catholic standpoint, such a one is a heretic. So if one holds a doctrine contrary to Campbellism, such a one is a heretic from the Campbellite standpoint. In like manner, if one holds a doctrine that is not Primitive Baptist doctrine, or that is contrary to it, then such a one is a heretic, from the Primitive Baptist standpoint. Such a person may be orderly walking, and may be a lover of the truth in every point except that one point. If he holds to that one false doctrine or principle, then from that standpoint he is a heretic. This does not necessarily say, at all, that such a person is a bad man at heart. A man may be a good man in heart and yet be a worshiper of an idol. So a man may be a good man in heart and practice, and yet believe a doctrine which is one of the works of the flesh, or that came from the flesh and not from the Lord. Many of God's dear children, we are sure, are deceived and led to believe some false doctrine. Liddell and Scott, the highest authority on the Greek language, define the word translated heresies in (Galatians 5:20) thus: "A philosophic principle or set of principles, or those who profess such principles, a sect, a school; a religious party or sect, such as the Essenes, the Sadducees and Pharisees, by them used of the Christians, and by orthodox Christians of those who dissented; especially also of their doctrine, heresy." Thayer defines the word thus: "That which is chosen, a chosen course of thought and action; hence, one's chosen opinion, tenet; according to the context, an opinion varying from the true exposition of the Christian faith (heresy). A body of men separating themselves from others and following their own tenets (a sect or party), as the Sadducees; the Pharisees; the Christians; dissensions arising from diversity of opinions and aims; (Galatians 5:20); (I Corinthians 11:19)" We believe that these definitions given of the word are sufficient. We trust that Brother Havens will take what we say here in kindness. We regard him as a child of God, and trust we have due respect for his feelings and for his position in the matter. May the good Lord bless and keep and sustain him in all his trials and conflicts, is our humble prayer. We should all try to be careful in our expressions and try not to unnecessarily wound the feelings of any of the Lord's dear children. We would be glad to see all our people once more united, who are standing together upon the fundamental principles of the gospel, and all striving for the things that make for peace, and leaving those things alone that cause strife and confusion. May the good Lord help us all. C. H. C.

Isaiah 5:8

---December 1, 1925

Brother A. Dodson, of Plains, Ga., asks us to give our views through the paper on ((8) (Isaiah 5:8), and asks if it applies to anything being built now. The text reads, "Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth." In the marginal reference the word ye appears for the word they, so that the sense is this, "that ye may be placed alone in the midst of the earth." There is sufficient in this text for a long article, but we do not have time to write at length upon the subject. The language was to national Israel, and they were typical of spiritual Israel. In some sense that text belongs to the church today, and is to be applied to the church. There is some building going on today. Some may be building of wood, hay, stubble; and some may be building of gold, silver, precious stones. {(I Corinthians 3:12-13)} There may be some working in the Lord's vineyard, though they may be doing very little. As they labor, they may join in with others, join house to house and field to field.

When the church of God joins house to house, or field to field, with the nations around, then there is no place left for them in all the earth. The Lord's church or kingdom is not to be like any other, nor is it like any other. To join house to house or field to field with other folks is to be like others. When they are like others, they are not like the Lord's kingdom or church. There cannot be two things that are alike, and those things be different. The Lord's kingdom was to be different from all other kingdoms. If they do just as other folks, and practice the same things that other folks do, they would not be different from others; then there would be no place left for them in all the earth. Israel were a peculiar people, unlike any other nation. So the Lord's church is peculiar, and to be unlike any other church or kingdom. Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world." Others are of this world. If the church uses and practices the same things that the world uses and practices, then they would be just like the others- of the world. When one of the Lord's churches goes into the practice of the things of the world, the inventions of men, she finally loses her identity or becomes extinct. To join in with the world in their worship and service is to join house to house and field to field. The secret orders of the day have their prayers and ritual services. They have their forms of worship. To join in with them is to join house to house and field to field, and to do so is to bring distress and final destruction. The Lord pronounced the woe. We may think it necessary to do as others do, and to allow what they allow, and to join in with them in order that we prosper. If we think that way, we think wrong. God's way is better than our way. His ways are higher than our ways, and His thoughts higher than our thoughts. We think wrong many times; but God's thoughts are always right. He did not promise a blessing upon Israel when they join house to house, or field to field, with the nations around, but He pronounced a woe upon them that thus do. The same thing applies to His church today, for Israel were a typical people, representing spiritual Israel today. Suppose the Old Baptists were to engage in and practice the many things that other orders engage in and practice today. Where would the Old Baptists be? Would there be any Old Baptists? Certainly not. They are different, and must remain different in order to retain and maintain their identity. These are just a few of our thoughts in connection with the text. If any other brother feels like writing some more we will appreciate it; but we do not have time to write more now. May the Lord bless the same to the good of our readers. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 41

---January 1, 1926

This issue begins the forty-first volume of The Primitive Baptist. The time seems to be short since the first issue of the paper was sent out from Fulton, Ky., January 1, 1886, just forty years ago, by our sainted father, Elder S. F. Cayce. He continued to edit the paper until he fell asleep, while actively engaged in the service, on the fourth Sunday in August, 1905, while preaching the closing discourse at the Collins River Association in Tennessee, near McMinnville. Thus he was editor of the paper almost twenty years. Since that time we have been trying, as best we could, to fill the place as editor of the paper, now a little more than twenty years. As to how well that has been done, is for others to say. We are very well aware of the fact that we have made mistakes, and if we continue to live, no doubt we will make more. There is just one kind of man who makes no mistakes, and that is a dead one. "The man who never made a mistake, never made anything." This is true, as far as human beings are concerned. We cannot promise our readers now, in the beginning of this volume, that we will make no mistakes. Yet we do not desire to make them, and when we do make them, and find that we have done so, it is our desire to correct them, as far as possible. We believe the same doctrine now that was set forth in the first issue of the paper, and which has been maintained in the columns of the paper since that time. We have found no reason for any change along that line. Those principles have been loved and cherished by the humble followers of the Master in all ages, and they are just as true now as they have ever been. There have been many changes along the line during the past forty years, as well as along the line before, but principles have not changed. Principles are eternal and never change. Whatever is a principle of truth today has ever been a principle of truth. Truth continues to live, and cannot be destroyed. It may be "crushed to earth, but it will rise again." We desire that the same principles of eternal truth may still be maintained in the columns of The Primitive Baptist that have characterized the Primitive Baptists as being a separate and distinct people from the world in the years and ages past. If the good Lord spares our life so that we may live through the coming year our humble desire is to labor for the peace of Zion, and to try to unify the Lord's dear children. The purpose of the gospel of the grace of God-or one purpose of it-is that the Lord's people may "come into the unity of the faith." The plain and simple truth of the gospel does not divide and confuse the Lord's little children. But when we fail to "avoid foolish and unlearned questions, which do gender strife," then strife and confusion comes as a result. Let us all try to avoid such, and let us all endeavor to strive together for the peace of the gospel and for the peace of our beloved Zion, The circulation of The Primitive Baptist has increased some during the past year, but it is not yet what it was before the war and before the "slump" came a few years ago. We trust that our corresponding editors and all our brethren in the ministry and all our readers will put forth a special effort this year to increase the circulation of the paper. We very much desire to make the paper a weekly again, but the circulation is not yet enough to enable us to do that. Will you, each one, try this year and see how many new subscribers you can send in? Insist on the brethren, sisters or friends subscribing for the paper. Ask them to do so, and then ask them again, if they do not subscribe at once. Send us their names so we can send them a copy of the paper occasionally, so they can see what kind of articles the paper contains in these trying times, and then ask them again to let you send in their subscription. You can help much in this way, and not be much expense to you. Will you try it? We are now, at this writing, in Hohenwald, Tenn. Have been in this section, in the bounds of the Buffalo River Association, for several days. By oversight, on account of being from home, we failed to write an article for last issue on the close of volume forty. Besides, we had so much to do, and manuscript to prepare for the paper, and letters to answer, we did not take the time to think about what was needed along that line. We hope soon to have our affairs so arranged that we can keep up with these matters better and also do more writing for the paper. Some of our corresponding editors have taken an active part during the past year in writing for the paper and also in sending subscribers. We appreciate that, and trust they will continue to do that, and we also trust the others may be stirred up to a little more activity along these lines. Brethren, let us all awake. The times look brighter to us, the prospects look better to us, for our people, now than they have for years. Many of the Lord's children are tired of war and confusion, and peace is being restored in so many places where they have had trouble and confusion. Truly it seems that the winter is almost over and that the time of spring is about here and the voice of the turtle will once more be heard in the land, and the time of rejoicing is coming—really, it is already begun. We have seen so many of the Lord's dear children rejoice during the past year over the restoration of peace. May the Lord be praised, and may He help us to live more devoted to Him and closer to each other. Brethren and sisters, will you please pray the Lord to help us live to His honor and conduct The Primitive Baptist in a way that will benefit His humble poor and be a blessing to His cause? C. H. C.

More Editorial Help

---January 1, 1926

After considering the matter for sometime we requested Elder W. A. Bishop, of Jackson, Tenn., to allow us to place his name on our editorial staff as one of our corresponding editors, and he has granted our request. In another column of this paper will be found an article from him granting this request.. Brother Bishop is moderator of the old Mississippi River Association. In our young days we were frequently in attendance at the sessions of that association and frequently visited the churches in the bounds of the same. That is the old home association of that great man of God, Elder W. W. Sammons, who filled up the measure of his days some years ago and was "gathered to his fathers." The memory of that old servant of God is sweet to us yet. Many happy seasons have we spent with the dear people in years gone by where Elder Bishop is now identified—that is, in that association. We are glad to have Brother Bishop take a place on our editorial staff. We trust he may be impressed of the Lord to write frequently for our columns, and we pray the Lord to bless his efforts to the good of His people and to the good of the cause. We love Brother Bishop, and we trust that our labors together in the Lord's vineyard may be blessed of the Lord, and that we may still be drawn more closely together in love and sweet fellowship. Brother Bishop, please pray for us, and may the Lord direct you and keep you, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Peace Restored

---January 1, 1926

We were requested some weeks ago to be at Enon Church, in the bounds of the Buffalo River Association, in Middle Tennessee, to meet with that church and sit in a committee with Elders J. M. Fuqua, of Dickson, Tenn., W. A. Bishop, of Jackson, Tenn., and Lee Hanks, of Atlanta, Ga., in an investigation of a trouble that had existed in the bounds of that association, the meeting to be held on the first Sunday in December and Friday and Saturday before. The trouble there seemed to have arisen on account of Elder J. B. Hardy being recognized by two of the churches, when his standing and order among the Baptists was called in question. The trouble had been existing and growing worse for quite awhile, and had resulted in a division in the association. We left home on Tuesday night, December 1, and arrived in Jackson, Tenn., at about 3:17 Wednesday afternoon. Elder Bishop met us at the train and conveyed us to his home. We filled an appointment at his church that night, where there was a good crowd assembled. We enjoyed a pleasant meeting with those dear brethren and sisters. This seems to be a lively band of Old Baptists. We spent the night with Brother Bishop in his home. Thursday morning we took the train for Perryville, Tenn., Elder Bishop accompanying us, he having been requested to serve on the committee mentioned above. We had to lie over at Lexington nearly, or about, three hours. A few minutes after we arrived there Brother J. M. Brantley came to the depot looking for us, and took us all to his home, where we enjoyed a few hours wait and had a good dinner. Brother Billie Pope, brother of Elder W. C. Pope, had joined us at Luray. We arrived at Perryville, Tenn., on time and were met by a son of Elder W. C. Pope and conveyed to Brother Pope's home at Pope, Tenn. Brother Pope had published an appointment for service that night at the schoolhouse near his home. Brother Bishop preached first and delivered a good discourse, which we and others enjoyed, then we tried to talk for a short while. A good crowd was present and gave good attention. Friday morning the weather was bad and the rain was coming down, but Brother Pope took us all in his car and we started for Union. We arrived there about on time, and quite a crowd had already gathered. Most of the churches in the association were represented there. After preaching service the church was called into conference by Elder W. C. Pope, the pastor of the church, and the church was asked if they were satisfied with the committee who had come at the request of the brethren in that section to help them to settle the trouble that existed among the brethren of their association and among the churches. They voted unanimously that they were satisfied with the committee. Then all the Baptists present were asked if they were satisfied with the committee, and they voted unanimously that they were satisfied, Elder Hardy being among the number. After some other preliminary and miscellaneous matters being attended to, the service was dismissed and the committee went to the home of a Brother Lane near by, and the announcement made as to where the committee would be, and that witnesses would be called or sent for as they might be needed, and that those who knew they would be wanted, or expected to be wanted, should come to Brother Lane's home as soon as they could, so that the committee might proceed with their work and get through as soon as possible. All the evidence was placed before the committee that night that both sides said they desired to introduce, and both sides said they did not wish to introduce any further evidence. Saturday morning the congregation was again assembled at the meetinghouse, and the committee said they were ready to make their report at the hour appointed for service. The brethren all decided to hear the report of the committee before proceeding with further service, which report was read, and which follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE We, your committee, having been requested by you to come and investigate the trouble existing among your churches, having heard the evidence that both sides said they desired to introduce, beg leave to make the following report: We find that mistakes, errors, and wrongs have been done on both sides. We do not deem it advisable or necessary to itemize those wrongs or errors in this writing, but, if necessary, will point them out orally. Now, we wish to submit the following recommendations: First: That the brethren and churches on both sides mutually confess your faults and your wrongs to each other and ask forgiveness for all wrongs done, and come together, forgiving each other, and live together in peace and fellowship, endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace. We further recommend that the brethren ' and sisters of Coon Creek Church confess wrongs to each other and forgive each other of all wrongs done, and come back together as one band of brethren and sisters in the Lord, and thus be a re-united band; forgiving each other of all wrongs and errors committed. We further recommend that all official work that has been done on both sides since the trouble began to be received and recognized and accepted. This may be done upon the principle of Christian charity, and should be done upon that ground, if for no other reason. We further recommend that this mutual forgiveness of all wrongs, and mutual confession of wrongs, should include and mean a restoration to fellowship of all those who have been excluded or withdrawn from on account of this trouble; and also a transfer of membership of those who may have joined another church on confession of faith, so that their membership may remain where they are now. As this trouble seems to have arisen on account of the standing and order of Elder J. B. Hardy being called in question, and as Brother Hardy says that he is willing to do what this committee says in order that his standing and recognition among our people may be unquestioned, we therefore recommend that Brother Hardy go before one of our churches whose standing among our people is unquestioned and lay his case before that church. If that church receives him into her fellowship we are sure that the sister churches would all then recognize Brother Hardy. We further recommend that all our people leave off the use of expressions that confuse the minds of our dear brethren which are not found in the Bible, and adopt the use of Bible expressions as much as possible on controverted points. Let us all try to labor to unify our dear people, and strive for the things that make for peace and for the things whereby we may edify one another. Signed: Elder Lee Hanks. Elder J. M. Fuqua. Elder C. H. Cayce. Elder W. A. Bishop. The foregoing report of the committee was read carefully three times, and then it was adopted by unanimous vote of the Baptists present. Then the brethren began to sing and to extend the hand of fellowship to each other. Thus all confessed their wrongs and mutually forgave each other for all wrongs done. Shouts of praise and thanksgiving to God went up from the mouths and hearts of many of those present as they extended the hand to each other, and many embraced each other in their arms. Many lovers of the cause of the Master, not members of the church, were present and freely shed tears of joy upon seeing the happy settlement of the trouble which had caused so many heartaches and so much distress among the churches. We cannot fully describe the happy scene. How any lover of peace among the Lord's people and in His churches can object to such meetings and such settlement of troubles is more than we can understand. On Saturday afternoon Elder Bishop left the meeting to return home to have service there on Sunday or Sunday night, perhaps both. Elder Hardy went with him. Since that time we received the following letter from Elder Bishop, dated December 7:

Elder C. H. Cayce:

It is with pleasure that I write to you that we had a fine meeting yesterday at our church in Jackson. Brother J. B. Hardy preached us a fine discourse. He also united with our church by relation. I hope the Lord is still blessing you with good meetings. Your brother in hope, W. A. Bishop. May the good Lord bless all these dear people and help us to live in peace and to live in such a way as to have the love and confidence of each other, is our humble prayer. The meeting at Enon Church on Sunday was a sweet meeting. The presence, of the Lord was felt in the midst. Elders H. M. Sanders and W. C. Davis were present at the meeting from the West Tennessee Association. We filled the appointments made for us at Liberty and New Hope Churches. Elder Fuqua was with us at Liberty during the three days there and one day at New Hope. Elder Sanders was with us two days at Liberty. Elder W. C. Campbell conveyed us and was with us at both places, where very pleasant meetings were enjoyed. Elder Fuqua did some of the preaching, which was enjoyed very much. From New Hope we came to Hohenwald, where we had service Friday night. A large crowd was present and we had good attention. Saturday morning we were conveyed by Dr. (Elder) J. H. Pickard to County Line Church, Giles County, Tenn. This is the old home church of Elder J. M. Johnson, who will be remembered by many of our readers. Seventeen years ago last August we tried to preach the funeral of Elder Johnson and his mother and brother at that place. Several of the sisters are yet living and have membership there. We were glad to meet the dear brethren, sisters and friends at this old church once more. A large crowd was present, especially on Sunday, and the good Lord blessed us with His sweet presence on both days, and the meeting was an enjoyable and a happy one. Elder Cromwell, who lives near the church, Elder Pickard, who lives in Hohenwald, and Elder Miller, from Albany, Ala., were all present. Today (Monday, Dec. 14) we were to have been at Salem Church, about eighteen miles from Hohenwald. They have been recently building a road between here and that place, and it rained nearly all last night, and those who are acquainted with the roads said they felt sure it was useless to try to get there today. So we had to miss that appointment, and remained here and have been writing all day, writing some for the paper and writing some letters. Tomorrow, the Lord willing, we expect to go to Goshen Church, and then try to fill the remainder of the appointments that have been published for this trip. We trust the dear brethren and sisters will remember us in humble prayer, and also remember our dear ones at home. C. H. C.

Another Unprofitable and Deplorable Strife of Words

---January 15, 1926

Under the above heading is an article from the pen of Elder S. Hassell written a number of years ago and published again in the pamphlet, "Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth," by Elder R. H. Pittman. For the satisfaction of the brethren in the Buffalo River Association in particular, and our brethren elsewhere in general, at the meeting in the Buffalo River Association on Friday and Saturday, December 4 and 5, in adjusting the trouble there, Elder J. B. Hardy submitted the following statement and the article, which we are glad to publish for the benefit of all our brethren. Notice Brother Hardy's endorsement, and notice carefully the sentiment and doctrine set forth in the article. C. H. C.

ELDER HARDY'S STATEMENT

For the satisfaction of the little people of God, and to prevent further confusion and misunderstanding among them as to my position and teaching on predestination and what is termed conditional time salvation, I wish to state that the following article by Elder Sylvester Hassell fully sets forth my views, and I heartily endorse it. J. B. Hardy.

THE ARTICLE

(I Timothy 6:3-5); (II Timothy 2:14). I have earnestly labored for years (I hope not without success, which I gladly confess is due entirely to the Lord,) to show that the contention, among Primitive Baptists, in regard to the extension of predestination is, when properly understood, a mere unprofitable and unwholesome strife of words. Every true Baptist believes that God foreknows and controls all things; and no true Baptist believes that God influences or compels His creatures to sin. Thus God's foreknowledge or predestination of sin is not of a causative or compulsive, but of a permissive, directive, restrictive and overruling character. So far as I am aware, the war, among the most of our brethren, on the extent of predestination seems to have about ended-the vexed question being finally settled on this immutable basis of Scriptural and eternal truth. Another equally unnecessary and unprofitable verbal contention among a few Primitive Baptists is one similar to, if not connected with, the controversy on predestination. It is the question concerning what is called "the conditionality of time salvation," and, connected with this, the question as to the ability of the child of God to obey the commandments of his heavenly Father. All Primitive Baptists are agreed upon the unconditionality of our eternal salvation, and the inability of those who are dead in sin to render spiritual obedience to the law of God. Instead of repentance and faith being conditions prerequisite to salvation, we understand that they are the work of the Holy Spirit in the renewed heart, and are thus essential parts of salvation; and, until this spiritual renewal, the fallen child of Adam will love sin and hate holiness and continue in rebellion against God. But there is an apparent disagreement in two or three of our associations, among worthy and lovely brethren, who would be heartily fellowshiped and gladly welcomed by other Primitive Baptists everywhere, as to whether our time salvation, that is, our deliverance from spiritual darkness, coldness, distress, and chastisement during the present life is conditioned or dependent upon our obedience to God, and as to whether the child of God is able to obey God or not. Now, even the authors of dictionaries have no right to manufacture or change the meanings of words; their business is simply to ascertain and state the meanings which words actually and already have in the language of which they treat. It would be deceptive to use words in a different sense from that which they generally have, unless we explain the sense which we mean. The most of controversies are strifes of words; and when words are properly defined, and their correct meaning is accepted by both parties, the controversy ends. A "condition" is defined by the best of English dictionaries to be "an event, object, fact, or being that is necessary to the occurrence or existence of some other, though not its cause; a prerequisite; that which must exist as the occasion or concomitance of something else; that which is requisite in order that something else should take effect; an essential qualification." And these dictionaries say that the word "if" is "the typical conditional particle, and is nearly always used to introduce the subordinate clause of a conditional sentence," and means "on the supposition that; provided, or on condition that; in case that, granting, allowing, or supposing that." There are 1,422 "ifs" in the Bible-830 in the Old Testament, and 592 in the New Testament; and these conditional sentences make up about one-fiftieth part of the Bible. Thus forty-nine fiftieths of the Scriptures are unconditional, and one fiftieth is conditional. All reverent minds must admit that this conditional part of the Scriptures, though comparatively small, has a real and true meaning. It cannot be denied by any informed and honest man that such Scriptures as the following are conditional: "If His children forsake my law, I will visit their transgression with the rod, nevertheless my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from Him." {(9:30) (Psalms 89:30-33)} "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." {(9) (Isaiah 1:19-20)} "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." {(John 13:17)} "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye, through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." {(Romans 8:13)} "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" {(Hebrews 2:3)} "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin." {(I John 1:7)} See, also such Scriptures as (Leviticus 26); (Deuteronomy 4:29-31); ((2) (7:12-26); (11:13-32); (28); ((8:1) (Ezekiel 18); (33). Not only is it certain that these Scriptures are conditional, but it is equally certain that the condition, introduced by "if," necessarily precedes the conclusion, which would not take place unless the condition took place first. If the conclusion in these sentences means eternal punishment, then Arminianism is true; but either the text itself, or the context and other Scriptures, prove that the punishment or chastisement threatened in case of disobedience, is temporal and corrective, and not eternal and destructive, for God gives His children eternal life, and they shall never perish, and though their voluntary sins separate them from His face, nothing present or future can ever separate them from His love. {(John 10:28-30); (Hebrews 12); ((9:2) (Isaiah 59:2); (Romans 8:28-39)} The conditionality of time salvation is just as certain as the truth of the eternal word of God. Baptists have always heretofore understood it so; nearly all Baptists understand it so now; and this truth is in perfect accordance with Christian experience. And if the living child of God, having the indwelling of the Spirit of life and grace, which makes him alive, is not able to obey heartily and sincerely, though imperfectly, the commandments of his heavenly Father, his real state does not differ from that of those who are dead in sin. Of course he can do nothing spiritual or acceptable to God except by that Spirit of grace; but that Spirit dwells in him; {(John 14:16-17); (Romans 8:9-17); (II Corinthians 6:16); (Ephesians 2:22)} and he "can do all things through Christ, who strengthens him;" {((3) (Philippians 4:13))} and he well knows and loves to confess that he has nothing good which he did not receive from God, and that without Christ he can do nothing, and that, by the grace of God, he is what he is-a poor, hell-deserving sinner, saved by grace-a brand plucked from the eternal burning. {(I Corinthians 4:7); (James 1:17); (John 15:5); (I Corinthians 15:10); (I Timothy 1:15); ((2) (Zechariah 3:2))} And he knows just as well, both from the Scriptures and his own experience, that, in willful disobedience to God, he does not enjoy that spiritual comfort which he has in obedience. All the children of God are as assured of these truths as they are of their own existence; and bitter contention over them is wholly unnecessary, unprofitable, unwholesome, and subverting. The entire Scriptural truth about any matter unites, comforts, and edifies the children of God; while a contention for a part of the truth for the whole truth divides, distresses, and overthrows them. Truth is spherical; we must look at it on all sides to understand it at all aright. Extremes are dangerous; let us avoid them as we would the verge of a fatal precipice. "Let our moderation be known unto all men-the Lord is at hand." {((5) (Philippians 4:5))} God is the only independent and absolute Being in the universe; not for one instant does any other being cease to be, both naturally and spiritually, dependent upon Him. All our sins come from ourselves alone, and with confusion of face we must take all the shame for them, and not charge them in any way upon our holy Creator-upon His foreknowledge, or predestination, or the partial withdrawal of His Spirit of grace, for well do we know that such a blasphemous imputation would be the grossest of sins; while all our salvation from sin and its consequences comes from God, who deserves and will receive every particle of the glory of it. While fear and hope are in the conditional Scriptures, recognized and addressed as strong motives to human action, pure, selfdenying love is set forth, in the Scriptures, as the highest and strongest motive that can actuate any being; the motive which assimilates us most to the character of the Three-One God, who is Love, and who saves His people because of His eternal and infinite love of them. Without this divine motive in our hearts, our services cannot be acceptable to God, and we can never enter that "heaven above, where all is love," or, if we could enter the home of eternal love, we could not enjoy its holy delights. Man is not an unthinking, involuntary, irresponsible machine. He can and should be moral-it will be better for him in this world; but it is far better for him to be spiritual, and to be thus prepared for heaven. I believe that all right-minded Primitive Baptists will accept these Scriptural truths. Such acceptance would put an end to the useless and ruinous strife of words on this subject. S. H.

Appointments Called In

---January 15, 1926

In the last issue of the The Primitive Baptist some appointments were published for us, as arranged by Elder M. E. Petty. We have received a letter or two from others that they did not think it best for us to make the trip at the present time. For this reason we call in the appointments and will not now make the trip. We trust this will cause no serious disappointment, and that no one will think hard of us for taking this step. We are informed that the peace meeting is appointed to be held with the church at New Hope, in Grady County, Ga., on Friday, Saturday and fifth Sunday in January. We are also informed that some do not approve of the meeting. Of course we do not know what is expected to be done at the meeting, more than to try to get the brethren together who are divided in that country. It appears to us that an effort to reconcile brethren who are separated is commendable and according to the Scriptures. Certainly the Lord does require His children to live together in peace, and to walk in love. We have a letter or two telling us that they did not think best for us to visit that section or those churches at this time. We also have letters insisting that we attend the peace meeting. For this reason we have called in the appointments. We expect, the Lord willing, to attend the peace meeting, but will fill no appointments before the meeting, and will not fill any after the meeting, unless it is desired by the brethren. C. H. C.

Remarks to Elder Lee Hanks

---February 1, 1926

We do not object, at all, to the sentiment expressed in the above from Brother Hanks, but we think that he is mistaken as to the time of the conversation which took place as to who should betray the Saviour. Matthew and Mark both show very clearly that this conversation took place while they were eating the passover supper. And while that conversation was taking place Jesus gave a sop, or what we now call gravy, to Judas, and John tells us that Judas went immediately out. Immediately means at once. He did not stay there longer. As this took place while they were eating the passover, then Judas went out while they were eating the passover. After that Jesus took the bread and wine, which is the substance of the passover supper, and instituted the sacramental supper, and then He washed the disciples' feet. We do not suppose that this matter is of vital importance, but felt that it would be right for us to state, in connection with the article from Brother Hanks, how we understand the matter as to the order of these occurrences-that is, the order in which they occurred. C. H. C.

Judas and the Sacramental Supper

---February 15, 1926

A sister asks us if Judas was in the sacramental supper, and she says, "I do not think the Lord set up His church here on earth with a devil in it. I may be wrong; if I am, I sure do want someone to enlighten me on this." To this sister we would say, that Judas was in the church, and was sent out by the Saviour with the other eleven to preach. Thus have we an example and the lesson that some bad folks get in the church, and even occupy the pulpit. But Judas was not in the sacramental supper. The Saviour instituted the sacramental supper at the time He ate the last passover supper with His disciples. Now get your Bible and turn to (Matthew 26:17-25) read verses 17 to 25 inclusive. Then turn to ((2) (Mark 14:12-21) and read verses 12 to 21 inclusive. These records show very clearly that while they were eating the passover supper the conversation was engaged in as to who should betray the Saviour. Now turn to (John 13:18-32). In these verses John tells of the same conversation recorded by Matthew and Mark as to who should betray the Saviour, and remember that this conversation was engaged in while they were eating the passover supper. John has it recorded that Jesus told who it was that should betray Him by saying, "He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when He had dipped the sop, He gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon." - (John 13:26). There is no sop in the sacramental supper, but there was sop in the passover supper. Then in verse 30 John says, "He then having received the sop went immediately out: and it was night." This makes the matter very clear that Judas left or went out while they were eating the passover supper. Then Jesus took the bread and wine, the substance of the Jewish pass-over supper, and instituted the sacramental supper. Read now (Matthew 26:26-29); ((22) (Mark 14:22-25). Now go again to (John 13:1-17) and you will find the account of what the Saviour did, which account was omitted by the other writers. After giving the account of what the Saviour did, John goes back and relates the conversation which took place, corroborating what the other writers had said concerning that conversation, which took place while they were eating the passover. Ordered Name Dropped

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-Please discontinue my subscription for The Primitive Baptist. I do not think you are keeping your word to me, that you would not print anything from either side, the Wilson faction and the Danville Church. You have kept your word as to the Danville brethren, but you have printed all the music you could get from Mr. Wilson. I did not think you would go off after an excluded faction, but you have. It's all over here in N. C. Every association has cut correspondence with the Bear Creek except one (Silver Creek, I believe), and the brethren and sisters who are tired and sick of their trouble over Wilson are declaring non-fellowship for J. R. Wilson and his followers and coming out from among them. I do hope that the Lord will help His bleeding Zion to overcome their trial here, and at last take them home where there will be no leading sharks to molest them, or make them afraid. Respty., C. B. Owen. Salisbury, N. C.

REMARKS

Now, don't you know we will have to quit and go out of business since Brother Owen has ordered us to discontinue his subscription? And is not the above a "stunner?" How does he know what "music" we have received that we did not publish, since we have not told him about it? There used to be some folks who were "wise in their own conceits." Perhaps there are some more of them in the present age. Suppose we have gone off, as Brother Owen says we have. According to the doctrine of the leaders of the crowd he is in line with, the eternal God, from all eternity, absolutely and unconditionally predestinated, unalterably fixed and decreed that we should do just what we have done, and we could not, by any sort of means, do otherwise. The things we have done were in the chain of events which the eternal God molded in eternity, even before time, and they could not possibly be otherwise than the way they were. The Lord molded and welded and fixed the chain of events, and they had to be just that way. So, why are you raising a complaint with us about it? We only carried out God's will and His absolute predestination. So did Elder Wilson, according to the doctrine of the leaders you are following and are in line with. You fellows are trying to tear up God's predestination. But we suppose, if your heathenish doctrine is the truth, God absolutely predestinated that you should try to tear up His absolute predestination. May the good Lord pity the poor dupes who will be deceived by such blasphemous, God-dishonoring, devil-inspiring doctrine. C. H. C.

The Word Shall

Dear Brother Cayce: I am writing to let you know to discontinue my paper, as I believe it is best to do without the paper than to read something I do not believe. I learned to love you years ago through your paper before this unholy war began between the dear children of God. And to think you would depart so far from the truth as to even publish such a piece as J. R. Wilson's in the Jan. 1st issue of your paper; rating the holy word of your Lord and Master as a little phrase was enough to offend any Old Baptist. Don't you believe every will and shall between the lids of that holy Book will be fulfilled in His own good time? For He has said, "Surely, as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand." If He is a God that changes not, how can we ever change one degree of His word? While we do not, of a certainty, believe He causes us to sin, or is the author of confusion and strife, yet if He saw the end from the beginning, He saw our evil deeds as well as our good ones, and they are just as sure to come. Yet I believe He will give us all a desiring heart to do good, and will enable us to plant our foot on every temptation we should shun. We are told that by Him all things are created. If He created all things then surely He didn't leave out one. And how can we read ((7) (Isaiah 45:7) "I form the light and create darkness; I make peace and create evil; I the Lord do all these things," and believe otherwise? Or are you like Elder Fisher in his book of why he left the New School Baptists, trying to reform the Old Baptists? I pray the Lord He may show you, as He did him, that you will get drowned. I do hate about the trouble, for I believe it is more over words, than anything else; and I truly hope this winter season between our dear people may cease. Your sister in hope, Mrs. W. G. Carson. Low Gap, N. C.

Now, please read the above letter again carefully, and let us examine it for a few moments. Of course we stop the paper. Of course the good sister does not read things she does not believe. But she says we have departed from the truth. We do not see how that can be. We never knew of a person departing from a place they have never been. If that Mohammedan doctrine of the absolute and unconditional predestination of all things that come to pass is the truth, then we never departed from that, for we never did believe it; and one has never departed from a belief he never had. Did he, Sister Carson? Sister Carson, Elder Wilson never said that the word of our Lord and Master was a little phrase. He said the word "shall" is a little phrase, meaning a small word. Is it not strange that some people will get so full of prejudice that they cannot even correctly read or quote what a brother says? Sister Carson asks if we do not believe that every will and shall between the lids of the holy Book will be fulfilled. Sister Carson, suppose we ask you to read your own question, and allow us to ask you if you believe every shall in the Bible will be fulfilled? Do you? Let us read: "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it." -(Genesis 2:16-17). The words "thou shalt not," mean the same as "you shall not." In our present day English now, Sister Carson, the Lord said, "You shall not." Do you believe that the man did not, or do you believe that he did? If you say you believe he did not, then you admit you do not believe the Bible, for it testifies that he did. If you say you believe that he did, then you admit that at least one shall is not fulfilled. Which horn of the dilemma will you take? Now let us notice the text quoted: "Surely as I have thought, so shall it stand." Is that all of the sentence? No; but it continues, "That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot." Does that prove that God purposed all things that come to pass? Not by a whole lot. It only proves that God purposed to punish the Assyrians for their wickedness, and that He will surely bring that punishment upon them. Sister Carson, let us read ((Num 14:23) (Numbers 14:23,34): "Surely they shall not see the land which I swore unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it:" "After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, even forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years and ye shall know my breach of promise." Can you harmonize this with your doctrine that God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated everything that comes to pass, and that everything has to be just as it is? Let us kindly ask some questions: Did not the Lord swear unto their fathers that He would give them the land of Canaan? Did He not promise them the land? Did the Lord intend, when He made the promise and swore to it, that these people should have the land of Canaan? Did He swear a lie? If He did not, then He meant what He promised, did He not? Did He not determine that they should not do what He swore they would do? Did He not say they shall not see the land? Did He not promise it to them-the promise being made to their fathers? Did He not say, "Ye shall know my breach of promise?" The marginal reference to. "breach of promise" says, "altering of my purpose." Was there a change in His purpose in any way? If not, how could there be an altering of His purpose? Was there a breach of His promise? If not, how could they "know my breach of promise?" Did not the Lord say they "shall" know it? Here is something that no person in all this wide world can harmonize with the doctrine that God did from all eternity absolutely and unconditionally predestinate, fix and decree, all things that come to pass in the world. Will one of them try it? We would like to see him make the effort. Sister Carson says," I believe He will give us all a desiring heart to do good, and will enable us to plant our foot on every temptation we should shun." Then according to this, we should yield to every temptation we do yield to. David had Uriah put in the front of the battle so he would be killed so he could have Uriah's wife. David had committed adultery with Uriah's wife. According to the doctrine Sister Carson says she believes, David did right in committing adultery with Uriah's wife, and did right in having Uriah killed, because the Lord did not, according to Sister Carson, enable David to put his foot on those temptations, and she says the Lord enables them to put their foot on every temptation they should shun. Therefore, David should not have shunned those temptations; and, as he should not have shunned them, he should have yielded to them; and, as he should have yielded to them, it was right for him to do those things; and, if it was right for David to do those things, it is also right for us to do those things now. If not, why not? If that doctrine is true, it is right to do wrong. How could there be any such thing as wrong, if that doctrine be true? Sister Carson refers to ((7) (Isaiah 45:7) "I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace and create evil: I the Lord do all these things." If the evil in this text is sin and wickedness, then no man under heaven can escape the conclusion that God is the author and the instigator of it. Is He not the author of all things that He created? Why say you do not believe that God is the author of sin and wickedness, and then quote this text to prove that God creates it? If one believes that God creates the sin and wickedness, then he believes that God is the author of it. He could not believe otherwise. Then when he says he does not believe God is the author of it, he does not tell the truth. The evil mentioned in that text is not sin and wickedness, but it is punishment for sin and wickedness. It has reference to the same thing as Amos, iii. 6, "Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? shall there be evil in a city, and the Lord hath not done it?" Verse 2 of the same chapter shows very clearly that the evil is punishment for their wickedness. It says, "You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities." According to the doctrine Sister Carson advocates, as well as those other Absoluters who are fighting Elder Wilson, the Lord in eternity forged and welded the chain of events just as they come to pass; He absolutely and unconditionally predestinated, unalterably fixed and decreed every event just as it comes to pass, so that it could not possibly be any other way. If that doctrine be true, we had to do everything we have done, and Elder Wilson had to do everything he has done. God fixed it that you should have the war in your ranks in that country. It is according to God's will and pleasure, according to your doctrine. God fixed it that way. So your doctrine says. If He fixed it that way, and it is according to His will and pleasure, why do you mourn on account of it? Do you object to God's will and pleasure being done? If it is not according to His will and pleasure, and yet He fixed it that way, why did He do so? Could He not have just as easily fixed it so it would be according to His will and pleasure as to fix it the way it was and is? No, we are not trying to reform the Old Baptists. The heathenish, blasphemous, devil-invented doctrine that God did from all eternity absolutely and unconditionally predestinate, unalterably fix and decree, everything that comes to pass; molded and fixed every link in the chain of events, so that everything must come to pass just as it does, which some folks among the Old Baptists advocate, is not Old Baptist doctrine, and never has been, and never will be. The man who advocates such a blasphemous heresy gives evidence that he needs something—either regeneration or reformation. We rather stay away from such blasphemous heretics, rather than try to reform them. The Old Baptists do not believe such rot and need no such reformation. May the good Lord deliver His humble poor from being deceived by such a devil-invented doctrine. C. H. C.

What Elder Newman Said

---April 1, 1926

In the Glad Tidings of March 12 we read the following from the pen of Elder H. G. Ball, of Tioga, Texas, who is on the editorial staff of that paper, with the Richards faction: I see in the Banner Herald, a Georgia paper, some are advocating gospel instrumentality in the work of regeneration (and calling themselves Primitive Baptists). I see, too, there is a book written on the subject. I think its author is a Georgia minister, and some are endorsing his writing with highest praise, and among them is the well known Elder J. S. Newman, who has wrought his part of the havoc of the Baptists of Texas on the subject of regeneration in Texas, and now he has found another string to pull, and I presume he is yet a good puller, especially if someone else is in the lead. He says gospel instrumentality is orthodox Primitive Baptist doctrine. I guess the Missionary Baptists would claim that, too. Elder Newman also claims they were the orthodox Baptist church in doctrine and practice. With my stay with the Primitive Baptists I have never heard one admit that he believed the gospel had any part in the quickening of dead alien sinners, and I don't believe such a doctrine is Primitive Baptist doctrine, if Elder Newman does say it is the orthodox doctrine of Primitive Baptists. If Elder Newman said that gospel instrumentality is orthodox Primitive Baptist doctrine, where and when did he say it? Can Elder Ball produce the writing? We urgently demand it, and insist that he produce it. If he will produce the statement from Elder Newman's pen, wherein he advocates the doctrine of gospel preaching being instrumental in regeneration—or any other instrument being used in regeneration, outside of the direct and immediate work of the Holy Spirit, we pledge ourselves that we will present a charge against him for heresy before his church, and we believe the church would deal with him upon the charge. Can Elder Ball produce it? NO. But what did Elder Newman say? On page ten of The Primitive Baptist of February 15, 1926, Elder Newman says: Gospel instrumentality in the eternal salvation of dead, alien, sinners IS WRONG. * * * This view of the gospel ministry (that it is instrumental in regeneration) is nothing but dehorned Catholicism, for the reason that it places the ministry between God and the eternal salvation of the dead, alien, sinner. It is not necessary to quote farther from Elder Newman on this line, though he went on and argued farther along the same line. This is sufficient to show that Elder Ball simply misrepresented the fact. The representation was either intentional or unintentional. Elder Ball has the privilege of saying which way it was. If unintentional, he will correct it and make apology. If it was intentional, what did he do? You may name it. The facts are that there are about two, perhaps more, but two leading men among the Progressives in Georgia who are advocating the idea that the gospel is used as a means in the work of regeneration. Those two leading men are Elders W. B. Screws and T. E. Sikes. They are Georgia preachers. The advocating of that doctrine among the Progressives has caused a disturbance among them, and some of their able men are contending against it. Elder W. H. Crouse, of Statesboro, Ga., wrote a book condemning that doctrine, and Elder Newman is one of the men among our people who has endorsed that book. We call your attention to the fact that Ball says that Elder Newman endorsed this book in the highest of terms. The book condemns the doctrine of instrumentality in regeneration, and Elder Newman endorsed it; which fact is stated by Elder Ball. Then why does Elder Ball say Elder Newman advocates the doctrine of instrumentality in regeneration? It is a pity that our brethren will resort to such things just to injure a brother against whom they have prejudice. We have read Elder Crouse's book and it is an able defense of the doctrine of the direct and immediate work of the Holy Spirit in the work of regeneration, independent of and without any means, agency, or instrumentality whatever. We would be glad for all our people, as well as every seeker after truth, to read that book. The arguments are plain, clear and forcible. C. H. C.

Predestination

---April 15, 1926

The following article appeared in the Zion's Landmark of March 1st, and is so timely and full of truth that we feel like copying it for the benefit of our readers who do not take the Landmark. If all our brethren would take heed to what Brother Rowe says on this line there would be no more trouble among our people on this question. The cause of so much trouble on this question among our people has been the use of words and phrases in connection with it that are not to be found in the Bible. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

This form of the word is not found in the Bible. In (9) (Romans 8:29) Paul tells us that those whom the Lord foreknew He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son; and in the 30th verse he says that whom He did predestinate, them He also called. In the epistle of the same apostle to the Ephesians, ((Ephesians 1:5)) , he says, "Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will." (Ephesians 1:11), he says, "In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." These are the only places in the sacred Scriptures where these terms are used; and it is quite clear that in each case the apostle uses them in direct reference to the salvation of the chosen, or the predestinated way

He leads His people, and no one is at liberty to use them in any other way than the God of our salvation is a sovereign ruler of the universe. No one of my capacity believes stronger than I that He most assuredly overrules all evil intentions of men and devils and gets the victory to Himself, and that for His people. But until I can explain how God can predestinate a thing and yet not be the author of it, I will not say that the wicked acts of men were predestinated by Him. It is the nature of men to sin. But salvation from sin could be accomplished only by God's predestinating it. Whatever is said of the purposes of God, or of His overruling power, save in the places referred to, the apostles have seen fit to use other words than predestination; and if, as we believe, they wrote as the Holy Ghost dictated, the words they used were chosen by the Holy Ghost, and we cannot improve upon them. When we use words not found in the Bible in an effort to make our position stronger, we weaken it instead. The strongest position is the Bible position, and its use of words the very best form. I do wish our brethren would stop using their own words and use those which the Holy Ghost gave to the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ. These are intended for the instruction and edification of His humble poor, and do this better than any form of words that men can devise. We all believe that our God is a sovereign; that the salvation of sinners is by the grace of God through Jesus Christ, and that we are dependent upon Him for the grace that we daily need; and for all that we receive and enjoy, we desire to give Him the praise. We merit nothing but His judgments. But His mercy endureth forever. Our wrongs are in no sense chargeable to God. By man came sin, and sin is the transgression of the law, and hence contrary to the will of God. Joshua T. Rowe.

Peace Desired

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother-After reading of the many good peace meetings published in The Primitive Baptist I thought I would write and tell you that it has done me so much good to hear of our poor divided people coming together in peace. I fully endorse the report of the committee at the meeting in Tennessee just published. Dear brother, will you try to help us work up just such a meeting here in South Mississippi? I feel like you could have good influence with a lot of the brethren here. I do not believe in fellow-shiping any and everything; but where we are all of the same faith, and contend for the same order, but only practice discipline in a different manner, I feel we ought to come together and forgive each other; and I know the Baptists here in the Good Hope, South Mississippi and Amite Associations are one in faith and generally the same in practice, as I have been associated with all of them. They are, as you know, in the main, one people; and, as I feel about it, they ought to be together. Now if you think favorably of a peace move here, will you please help us that want peace to bring it about? As you know a good deal about the condition here I would be glad if you would suggest a plan by which we might all get together, or visit this section and help work it up. I know I am ready and willing to ask forgiveness and to forgive all concerned and shaTce hands with them in peace and love, and my home church is highly in favor of it. I feel sure mistakes have been made by most all of us, and we should forgive. May God help us to come together. Pray for us, and let me hear from you if you can. Yours in humble hope and desire for peace, C. L. Clark. Harriston, Miss.

REMARKS

When we received the above letter we wrote Elder Clark asking permission to publish the same in The Primitive Baptist. We have received his consent. We told him we would be glad for the brethren to come together in that section in peace and fellowship, as we felt sure they were all one people, and that we were willing to do anything reasonable that we could to that end. Since receiving the above letter we have received a card from Elder Lee Hanks written at Laurel, Miss., and dated Feb. 24th. Elder Hanks was on a trip in that section. He says: I am glad to tell you that I consider the trouble settled now between the Good Hope and South Mississippi Associations. New Zion accepted the proposition and all settled Feb. 22, 1926. Providence unanimously accepted terms of peace and came together Feb. 23, 1926. So Providence and New Zion are together, which virtually settled the trouble between the two associations. Elders Alderman, C. N. Ware, J. A. Ford, Blackledge, and all present, cheerfully and unanimously settled their differences. They are all rejoiced greatly now. I am to be at Palestine tomorrow. I am sure they will accept it, which eliminates everything here. Brother Alderman is greatly rejoiced. I don't think there will be any hitch now anywhere. The Good Hope brethren said if Providence would accept it that would satisfy all. They are heartily in it. In love, Lee Hanks. From this it seems that the matter is practically settled in the Southeast part of the state, and we believe that will eliminate any difficulty in the way of a settlement by any others involved. We trust they may now all come together again and live in peace and sweet fellowship. They should have never been divided, we are sure. May the good Lord bless the lawful efforts that are made for the restoration of peace. C. H. C.

Roger Williams

---April 15, 1926

We have received a letter from a brother in which he says, "H. B. Taylor, of Murray Ky., says the Hardshells originated with Roger Williams in 1835. I wish you would answer this falsehood, and also get him to tell about the Welsh Tract Church, of Delaware." If the brother writing the letter made no mistake in the date, and H. B. Taylor made such a statement, he certainly did display ignorance. Roger Williams was born in 1599 and died in 1683. Then how he could have originated a church in 1835, when he died in 1683, is beyond us, and beyond the ability of H. B. Taylor to explain, even as great as he thinks he is. Roger Williams established the colony of Rhode Island in 1636 and established his church there in 1639. That church was founded upon the principle of religious freedom, or liberty of conscience, but never was identified with the Baptists, though founded upon Baptist principles. The first Baptist Church founded in America was by John Clark at Newport, Rhode Island, in 1638. If Roger Williams was the founder of the Baptist Church, or the "Hardshells," as Taylor calls our people, then they are older than the Fullerites. The people Taylor is identified with were never heard of before the days of Fuller and Carey. Welsh Tract Church, in Delaware, was organized in Wales in the spring of 1701, and in June of the same year they came to America as an organized church. They first settled near Philadelphia and then moved to their present location, where they still continue upon the same principles upon which they were constituted in Wales 225 years ago. Concerning this church and the doings of the Missionary Baptists when in debate with a Campbellite or a Methodist J. H. Grimes said, in the Baptist Flag of April 11, 1907: When a Campbellite or a Methodist assails Baptist succession, or tries to cram the Roger Williams ruse down their throats, they fly to old Welsh Tract Church, and through her, link themselves on to the Welsh Baptists, through which we have clear sailing to the days of the apostles. In my imagination I see a Baptist debater in a tussle with a belligerent Campbellite; the Campbellite attacks the succession of Baptist Churches, when the Baptist, as with a flashlight, throws old Welsh Tract Church out before the audience, and with a triumphant air defies the onslaughts of his bombastic opponent. He takes the pains to inform his opponent that this old Welsh Tract Church, which was constituted in Europe more than 200 years ago, is still in existence, coming down to us from Wales without change. All these things are facts. But there is still another fact which he does not tell. This Welsh Tract Church is a Hardshell Church. This old church was organized long before the Full-erite sprout, with which H. B. Taylor is identified, was born. C. H. C.

The Meeting at New Hope

---April 15, 1926

The reason of our delay in publishing the account of the meeting at New Hope Church, Grady County, Ga., the fifth Sunday in January, and Saturday before, as found elsewhere in this paper is because we failed to get a copy of the suggestions as put out by the brethren at the home of Brother Blackshear in November. After we returned home we sold the office building we were occupying and had to erect another building and move. While we were engaged in that we had to let all other matters rest, or wait. There were six churches in Elder Petty's association not represented in the meeting-Union, Olive Grove, Trinity, Pisgah and Piedmont. While the information was given that Mt. Olive had agreed to represent, some thought this was a mistake. If they did appoint messengers, then seven of the churches in that association had appointed messengers to the meeting. This being the fact in the case, it seems to us that the object was not accomplished. If we understood the matter, the object was to try to get the two bodies together. There were two bodies, each holding their meetings as the Flint River Association. They were once together. They are one people, we are sure, in doctrine, and we do not believe there is any vital difference between them. We feel sure they should be united; and we yet believe it can be done. We trust that they may yet all get together and be a re-united band. Brethren, on both sides, do you wish to be re-united on gospel principles? If you do, write to us and tell us your desire and feelings in the matter. We would like to know how the brethren feel in regard to the matter. C. H. C.

Questions and Answers

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Hope-I have been reading the glad news of the peace meetings in your part of the country. May God bless all that labor for peace on. gospel grounds. We, Providence Primitive Baptist Church, have talked a lot about peace, but just how far to go is a mystery. Some say one thing, and some another, and the question has been asked," What shall we do?" We, Providence Church, would love for you to publish this and give answers to the questions as follows:

Question 1. Can we fellowship an article of faith that reads something like this:" We believe the foreknowledge and predestination of God are the same to the extent of time; therefore God foreordained and predestinated all things that come to pass," and stay on Bible grounds?

Question 2. Can we fellowship secret orders and adultery and stay on Bible grounds? A poor sinner saved by grace, if saved, W. B. Howard. Freewater, Ore.
OUR ANSWER

In answer to question 1 will say no. We do not think the Bible teaches that God foreordained or predestinated all things that come to pass. If His foreknowledge and predestination are the same as to length of time, that would not prove that He predestinated all things that come to pass. He does, or did, foreknow all things; but that is no evidence that He predestinated all things. His predestination may be as old as His foreknowledge, and that would be no proof that He predestinated all things. His foreknowledge is one thing and His predestination is another. Wisdom and knowledge are attributes of Jehovah, and His predestination is the act of His mind.

In answer to question 2 we say no. We are aware that our people in some sections do hold members that affiliate with secret orders, but we think no Old Baptist should affiliate with such orders. We might bear with that under protest, and not fellowship it really-that is, not have fellowship for that, and yet bear with it. There is no excuse to even bear with adultery. If there is, we do not know what that excuse is. C. H. C.

Dancing and Such Like Things

Dear Brother Cayce:

I want to ask a question for you to answer in The Primitive Baptist. What has been the attitude of the Primitive-Baptists in regard to the modern evils of the day, and how should we deal with members that either go to dances or allow them in their homes? I claim we have always stood against such things. And haven't we always affirmed that the Bible is true? Your brother in hope, J. A. Jackson. Farmington, Ark.

OUR ANSWER

The Primitive Baptists are now and always have been opposed to the modern evils of the day. Modern evils are such evils as are lately invented and practiced or engaged in. The little book we have printed and for sale, price 30 cents, containing articles written by John Brine more than 200 years ago, shows that the Baptists were opposed to the evils of that day. True Primitive Baptists are still opposed to the evils of the day, whether ancient or modern. The Primitive Baptists should promptly exclude members for attending dances or taking part with them, either by allowing them in their home or encouraging them by their presence. It has always been against the practice of Primitive Baptists for their members to attend dances or to give them in their homes. We have served as moderator in church conference when exclusions occurred for dancing. Most assuredly the Primitive Baptists have always contended that the Bible is true. Most all their articles of faith contain an article reading about like this: "We believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are of divine authority, and the only rule of faith and practice." C. H. C.

Makes Acknowledgment

---May 1, 1926

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Through the courtesy of someone I have the last few days received one of your papers (we sent the paper to you.-C. H. C.) in which you have given me quite a thrashing, all of which I, no doubt, deserved, however unintentional the wrong was committed; and will assure you that your article was too late to show me my errors; but was not too late to speed me up in writing Elders Newman and Crouse to acknowledge my wrong and ask forgiveness. Now let me assure you that your very sharp rebukes never made me mad, but I never obtained the information from

The Primitive Baptist, and without further evidence than Elder Newman's article in Banner Herald I wrote my little squib in Glad Tidings; and where I blame myself is for writing the article without knowing what Elder Crouse's views were. Had I known that then as I did very soon after, I should not have made the accusation at all. And again let me assure you I would not intentionally misrepresent Elder Newman or any other man, though we are divided. I regard myself more of a man than that, to say nothing of a Christian spirit. While he and I are divided, as you and I, yet I am just as sorry for the injustice done him as if it had been an injustice done Elder W. H. Richards, with whom you rightly say I am standing; and many others in the east would be where I and many others are if they would but impartially investigate for themselves, is my humble opinion. I have written Elder Newman a personal letter asking forgiveness for all wrong done him, and this also, if you see fit, so that your readers may see that while I stand with the Richards faction I intend to do the right thing, and that's what we stand for in Texas, and hope we may never come to the time we are not willing to confess our wrongs and ask for forgiveness from those wronged. In humble hope, H. G. Ball. P. S.-Since you wrote me up in The Primitive Baptist, will you not kindly publish my acknowledgments as I am enclosing to you from Glad Tidings of April 16, 1926? If you publish the article will you be so kind as to mail me a copy of the paper? H. G. B.

The Acknowledgment

THE ACKNOWLEDGMENT Floresville, Texas, Jan. 20, 1926.

Elder Wm. H. Crouse:

My Dear Brother-Received your book on Regeneration. I have carefully read it and am sure your positions on the various texts relied on to prove gospel instrumentality in the work of regeneration are the views of our people now as well as in all past ages. I wish it could go into every Old Baptist home in the United States. (Elder) J. S. Newman. After the above article appeared in Banner Herald, Feb. 15th, I wrote an article in Glad Tidings of March 12th, accusing Elder Newman of endorsing gospel instrumentality in the quickening of dead, alien, sinners; but since writing the article to Glad Tidings I have procured a copy of Elder Crouse's book on Regeneration, and after reading it and learning its true teachings, I have gone back and re-read Elder Newman's endorsement and find I have misconstrued his article. He (Elder Newman) is not endorsing gospel instrumentality, as my first conclusion was, but is endorsing Elder Crouse's position on the text's that are used (by those who teach gospel instrumentality in the regeneration of dead, alien, sinners). Elder Crouse DOES NOT teach that in his book; therefore I find it my duty to acknowledge the wrong done Elders J. S. Newman and Wm. H. Crouse in the article I wrote in Glad Tidings of March 12, and ask them to forgive me for the wrong done them, for I did it not for envy or to wrong anyone, but because I was sure I saw a departure from the faith in it. Now I see it was a failure on my part. Elder Crouse's book is worthy of the consideration of truth-seekers everywhere. In bonds, H. G. B.

REMARKS

We willingly and cheerfully give space for the above confession of wrong from Brother Ball. This should be a lesson to him and to all of us that a brother may be accused of a thing of which he is not guilty, and the person be sincere in making the accusation. In the trouble and division in Texas, no doubt, many wrong accusations have been made, or were made, and perhaps some of them may still be made. We should certainly call a halt along that line. We should quit such a course -and stop making accusations. Brother Ball says that many others would stand where he does and others do-with Elder Richards-if they would impartially investigate for themselves. Perhaps so. Did not some investigate who do not stand with him? Brother Ball, will you help us investigate? Will you begin helping us by furnishing us a copy of the evidence submitted before the council that met in regard to this matter? We do not propose to open our columns for a discussion of this matter, and would not refer to it here had not Elder Ball made the statement he did in regard to the matter. We do not call Elder Ball's sincerity in question in regard to the matter; but sincerity does not make a thing right. Paul verily thought he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, but that did not make it right for him to do those things which he did. He thought he was doing God's service when he persecuted the saints; but he was not. Perhaps some of you good brethren in Texas thought you were doing God's service when you raised such a war among each other in that country and had a division; but you were not. Why not cease biting and devouring one another and being consumed one of another? May the Lord help us all to try to mend our ways. C. H. C.

Oneness for Twenty-Four Years

---June 1, 1926

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Precious Brother-Have read and re-read your editorial, "Introduction to Volume Forty-one," in The Primitive Baptist. May peace and prosperity accompany it through the year, is my only desire. I have read every copy of this paper for nearly twenty-five years. Was taking it when your sainted father was editor. Every copy that you have sent out I have carefully noticed. Have utterly failed to see a single change in the principles, as you contend for them, during all these years. This much could not be said about all the editors. "These things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works." This is one command you have carefully kept. I take some other Primitive Baptist papers, but not any of them like the one you send out. When the wolf is in the camp you give the alarm. When false doctrines are breaking in, you build fortifications against them. When invaders are giving trouble, you give the watchword. When opportunity opens up for peace among alienated brethren upon a sound basis, you will work at it as long as there is hope of peace being restored. You can defend the doctrine for which the paper contends. I know whereof I speak. I have seen it tried out face to face with the enemy. One thing I am extremely glad of, when you deal with a subject of practice, that you know how to do it as the Bible directs. God bless you for speaking out on so many things that need mending, and that right soon. You have proved yourself amply able to edit the paper your father started and worked so hard to circulate in spreading the truth of the Master. But that does not prove that the brethren have stood by and cared for you as they should. Their slackness has made your work too burdensome. You have turned over the hill now. Soon your work on earth must wind to a close. You then can go on to enjoy your eternal reward. Dear Claud, God will take care of you over there. But I shudder when I look for the man to step in and carry the good work on. When all around were wrapt in silent slumber last night I could not sleep for thinking of you and your noble work as preacher and editor. In tears I finally went to sleep, begging God to bless, direct and keep you. Your brother, H. L. Golston. North Alexandria, Tenn.

REMARKS

The above was received last January. We could not keep back the silent tears as we read it. We feel so unworthy of such expressions of love and sweet fellowship from one of the Lord's faithful servants. We are very well aware of the fact that we have made mistakes and have done wrong things; but our desire has been to be faithful to the Master and to His blessed cause. Yes, we have crossed the top of the hill, and are now going down the western side, and we realize that it will not be long until we shall reach the end of the journey. The way has been rough and rugged. There have been many thorns along the way. Sometimes the clouds have been dark and lowering; but in the midst of all the storms, dark places and rough roads, the day-star of hope has seemed to beckon us onward. "The Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." -Acts xx. 23, 24. Many of the Lord's dear children whom we have met we know we shall never meet again in this life. So we might read on, "And now, behold, I know that you all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." -(0:25) (Acts 20:25-27). This has been our sincere desire. We are sorry for all the wrongs and mistakes we have made. When we reach the end, which may be soon, we desire to die in peace and in fellowship with the Lord's dear children. Please pray for us. C. H. C.

A Statement

---June 1, 1926

In the account of the meeting at New Hope Church in Georgia we stated in the record of the meeting that information was given that Mt. Olive had agreed to represent and had appointed messengers, and in our remarks we stated that some thought this was a mistake. The brother who made the statement in the meeting that he had a letter to the effect that they had agreed to represent has sent us a letter from the clerk of the church, Brother A. I Brunson, Sneads, Fla., in which Brother Brunson says that the church did agree to represent and appointed messengers to the meeting, but that later they decided to wait and see, or to just stand still for awhile. This letter makes it clear that the brother who made the statement in the meeting had a correct statement and was not mistaken. In what we said about the matter we did not mean to leave the impression that the brother had misrepresented the matter. We trust this statement will be satisfactory to all parties concerned. C. H. C.

Imposed Upon

---June 15, 1926

Several months ago we published an appeal for help from one A. McClinton, Trenton, Ga. A widowed sister sent him help, we think, and had two or three letters from him. She sent a check to the sheriff of the county at Trenton, Ga., and asked him to give the same to McClinton if he is in need and is worthy. The sheriff returned the check to her and wrote her that McClinton gets his living by that means-writing to people of different denominations and getting contributions from them. He says McClinton bought a Ford car from him and paid for it. He says McClinton has a daughter and son-in-law living in the house with him, and has a son large enough to support him and his wife. We are sorry that we have been imposed upon by this man. Occasionally we receive requests to make appeals for help through the paper. Such as this has brought us to the decision that it is better not to make such appeals through the paper. At least, we must be assured that the person is worthy, and must have some evidence to satisfy us, before we publish such appeals in the future. Please do not ask it of us. Anyway, we doubt the propriety of making such appeals through our papers, except in unusual cases. C. H. C.

Some Good Meetings

---June 15, 1926

We were with the church at Donaldson, Ark., on Saturday night before the third Sunday in May, and enjoyed a very pleasant meeting with those good people. Elder Fairchild was there, and had preached for them Friday or Friday night, when Brother Ceph Tucker had offered himself for membership and was received by the church into their fellowship. His baptism was to be attended to on Sunday, which was done. Sunday morning we drove to Little Rock, Elder Fair-child with us. Elder C. M. Monk had just begun preaching when we arrived at the church. We were a little late, as we had been delayed some on the road. Elder J. R. Harris and family were also there from Thornton. Elder A. Woodall, who is a member there, was also present. This was a good and pleasant meeting. Three were received on confession of faith- Brother A. S. Herndon and wife and a Sister Woodall. Brother Herndon and wife had held membership in Texas in a church that had been in so much confusion, and they were tired of it and wanted a home with those who are laboring for peace. The church where Sister Woodall had been a member had gone down and ceased to have meetings. This was the regular communion time at this church, which service was attended to. On the fourth Sunday and Saturday before we were with the little church at Hampton. Brother Ira Cenci-baugh, whose home is at McFarland, Calif., and Brother I B. Fuller and Elder A. D. Cencibaugh, of Donaldson, Ark., came to our home Friday afternoon and spent the night with us in our humble home. Saturday morning Elder John R. Harris came by on his way to his regular appointment at Harmony Church, Bradley County, and persuaded Elder Cencibaugh to go there with him. Brother Ira Cencibaugh and Brother Fuller went with us to Hampton. Elders J. N. and G. A. Jones, who now live near Hampton, were there. Services were held at the church Saturday afternoon, night and Sunday. Brother Cencibaugh made two short talks that were enjoyed by the brethren. Brother G. W. McWhirter and wife united with the church on Sunday by letter from the Forks of Buttahatchie Church in Alabama. It was a pleasant meeting and much enjoyed by all the brethren and sisters present. C. H. C.

Immortality of the Soul

---July 1, 1926

Some of our readers may remember a few years ago some questions sent to us by Brother J. I. Caneer, of Montebello, Calif., and our answers to the same. Brother Caneer wrote the following letter in answer, which was received in 1922. We had filed it away in our desk, and it had been almost forgotten. Recently we received a letter from him calling our attention to it and asking that it be published. You will find our comments on the editorial page-page 8. C. H. C.

THE LETTER

Dear Brother Cayce: I have read your reply to the few words I wrote last winter. If I wrote what I should not have written first, I am sorry. I wanted to get the foundation of what you believe first. I will refer to the questions, that I think are out of harmony, in this writing. First, I want to say that I never heard of there being two kinds of immortality before I read your reply. I must say that I do not believe there are two kinds of immortality. I humbly admit that my believing there is only one kind of immortality does not make it that way. (I Timothy 1:17) -no, it is (I Timothy 6:15-16), "Which in His times He shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see." There is a comma after immortality; a semi-colon after approach unto; a colon after nor can see. So they are all separate statements and none of them qualify the word immortality. All those phrases qualify the word God, or the King of kings and Lord of lords. It certainly does not qualify the word immortality, immortal life, eternal life and everlasting life; all three mean exactly the same thing. The word everlasting, when applied to inanimate things, does not mean the same as immortality or eternal. Certainly God dwells in the light. He is light. Yes, I believe everything Paul said, but I may not understand just what he means. Brother Cayce, I did not ask you, what did Paul say, nor what any Primitive Baptist says, nor what they did say in the past. That is not what I want to know. I want to know what you say. I can read the Scriptures, or history, as I see fit; that is not what I want. Brother Cayce, do you believe that children are born into this world with both mortality and immortality? I do not see how it can be. Does not that idea contradict the very fundamental teaching of the Scriptures and the very laws of nature? Do not the Scriptures, as well as nature, teach that no tree, plant, fowl, animal or human being can bring forth two different kinds of seed? For myself, I feel sure it does so teach. We all know that a fig tree cannot bear good peaches; neither can a peach tree bear crab apples; neither can a human being bear two kinds of lives. If he can, trot out the chapter and the verse so that I may read it for myself. Why did you not give me some Scriptures and other reasons for the belief that human beings do transmit both mortality and immortality? That is the way to convert me. What other men say does not prove anything on this line to me. If you cannot prove a question to me by the Scriptures and logic then you cannot prove it to me. Brother Cayce, do you believe the members of the Primitive Baptist Church are perfect in their belief and practice? Do you believe there are any now, or that there ever was any church, perfect in its belief? I fully believe that the fundamental principles of salvation as are taught by most all Primitive Baptists are in harmony with the Scriptures and with the very experience of God's children, who have minds sufficient to understand God's workings with them. I do not believe the teaching that natural human beings are raised immortal from the grave and are sent to the place, as is usually believed by the great majority of unthinking men and women, where they will consciously and eternally be, is doctrine. If it is doctrine, I cannot see where the man of God gets any reproof, any instruction in righteousness, any correction or any comfort out of it. The doctrine of salvation is a comfort to God's people. They get reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness, and are thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Were not the apostolic churches, most of them, if not all, in error? I think they were. If they were, did that cause them to cease to be the church of Christ? No, it did not. Take it for granted that its organization was perfect, it did not stay that way, but became imperfect and was chastised. Is that not so? If there is a perfect church anywhere today, let me know where it is; I want to see it. God Himself said when He breathed the breath of life into Adam that man became a living soul. Not that He gave him a soul, but that man has a soul. Every living thing is a soul, or has a soul. So every living human, animal, fowl, or insect, is a soul, or has a soul, as the case may be. They are all natural creatures. If the word soul means immortality, then why are not all souls immortal? I think these are pertinent questions. The word soul is almost invariably used to mean the person speaking, the person spoken to, or the person spoken about; as "my soul draweth near the grave;" to "deliver their soul from death." There are many places where the soul is similarly spoken of. If the natural soul is immortal, it will not need to be delivered from death; neither would it draw near the grave. Human beings have always been called souls. That is what God called them. He said Adam became a living soul. The words, "living soul," mean the same thing as the words, "living man." I think man is composed of soul, body and spirit, and these three are one. The soul is the leading part (mind); the spirit is the life, and the flesh or body is the thing that is alive. Nothing else is alive except the body. The mind leads the body. If he had no mind he would go at random, not knowing where he goeth. The spirit is the life of man; so when a man dies he has no spirit. So, you see, it is very necessary for all three parts to be together in order to have a living man, or a living soul, that would be of any use. If you kill the body, there is no life or spirit, neither is there any mind or soul. The mind emanates from the brain, the life from the heart. If you stop the heart, you stop it all. Some think life lives on when the body is dead. I would believe the life was living before there was a body, if I knew it lives after the body is dead. I mean the natural life. There is no life without something is alive. If a body is dead life is extinct. If a life lives on, without something being alive, why were not these lives living before the body was in existence? If a man has been born again, born of a higher life; if he has been born of God, then he has something in there that does not die. It is God's Spirit in there. I still say, Brother Cayce, that God's Spirit is God. Please tell me what you think it is? God is nothing but Spirit. "God is a Spirit; they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and truth." God's Spirit must be in the man or the man cannot worship Him. They that are led by the Spirit of God are the sons of God. They are then the sons of man and also the sons of God, are they not? If they are sons of God, why not call them little gods as well as to call a human baby a little man? What would be the difference? They are akin to man, and also to God. He has two fathers now. He has two masters now. He can serve one awhile and then he can serve the other awhile, but he cannot serve both at the same time. Why? Just because the two are the exact opposite to each other. If there is a personal devil any more than man himself is, he is no more contrary or opposite to God than man himself is. If so, I cannot conceive of it. Man is all that does wrong things. He cannot blame anything else for what he does. He cannot say the devil is to blame. Do you think he can? Do you feel some other thing other than yourself is to blame for the wrongs you do? If so, you have a different feeling from the one I have. See in your question book under the heading "Two-Seeders and Soul Sleepers." In question 17 you ask, "Are not these three Persons (the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost) one in purpose, one in power, one in glory, and one in essence?" This indicates to me that you believe they are. I believe they are. Well, now, these things being so, there certainly can be no difference. Can you see any difference, Brother Cayce? If so, what is it? To my mind there is no difference. The official difference is all there is, except that Jesus came in the flesh, and that was only God manifest in the flesh. Ques. 26: "Is He not able to divide between the soul and the spirit?" Does Brother Cayce believe He is? Ques. 27: "Did not Paul pray God your whole soul, and spirit, and body, be preserved blameless," and so on? 28: "Then soul and spirit are not the same, are they?" 29: "Does not the apostle teach that man is composed of soul, body, and spirit, and that it takes the three to constitute a man?" Brother Cayce, if it takes all three to make a man, what would you have left if you take away either one of the parts? Would there be a man left? A man may lose his mind and still live. He cannot lose his life and live. You cannot kill a man's mind nor his life, so the only thing that man can kill is the body. You cannot kill a hog's mind or life, but you can kill its body, and then eat it. Then that part of the hog would be transformed to the life of man, would it not? If any one of the parts are more the man than any other part, which one is it? The body is the frame-work, or wall. The mind, or soul, and the life, or spirit, are the finishings of the man. If a man is not finished there is not much man there, is there? If you build the frame or walls of a house and do no more, you would not have much of a house, would you? No. It would not be finished, would it? No. The finishings of a house are similar to the finishing of a man-one must be completed to be a man; the other must be completed to be a house. All the parts of man are natural, fleshly; they are terrestrial. Brother Cayce, in your questions 26, 27, 28, 29 you claim that soul and spirit are not the same, do you not? Then why do you change it in questions 35 and 36? In both those questions you say soul or spirit, making them the same thing or same condition. I do not believe the soul or the spirit is either one a thing. Do you believe they are things? A thing is something material, is it not? If you say soul and spirit are the same, why not say all three parts are the same? Let it be like Him (God) of whom man is the image. If the three composing the Godhead are the same in purpose, power, glory and essence, why not the three parts composing man be the same in purpose, power, glory and essence? Can you give me any good reason why they are not? Brother Cayce, how many kinds of souls do you think there are? Do you think some souls cannot cease to exist and some souls cannot keep from ceasing to exist? All living creatures are souls, or have souls, as the case may be. They must all be immortal or else all are mortal, else some are immortal and some mortal. Which way do you think it is? You claim there are two kinds of immortality; so if you are correct in that idea, there will have to be at least two kinds of souls, or else no living creature, including man, has an immortal soul, while in a state of nature only. If a man is born again he then has two lives, one that will cease and one that will not cease. I think so; you may not. If man has immortality from his natural birth, and later on is born of God, and by this God-birth receives another life, as you, Brother Cayce, admit, then does he not have two immortal lives? He is bound to have, because he receives, in the new birth or regeneration, a life that he did not have before. We know that life is eternal. If this is true, Brother Cayce, what are you going to do with those two lives when the body is in the dust? I would like to know. I cannot figure it out., When the body dies the spirit returns to God who gave it. But where does the other life, that does not cease, go? This same spirit that God gives man in regeneration is the same spirit by which the body that is in dust will be raised in the resurrection morn. The Adamic man is the one for whom Christ died. It is the Adamic man that sinned; it is the Adamic man that has been born once. The man that has been born once is the only man that can be born again. Brother Cayce, when you claim the soul of a natural man, unre-generated, lives on after the body is in dust, do you not virtually claim that that same soul was living before there was any body for it to live in? If you do not, tell me why not. Question 101: "When the Lord spoke to Saul as he was on his way to Damascus, did He not impart life to him?" Question 102: "Saul had natural life before that time, did he not?" Q. 103: "Then the Lord gave him a higher order of life, did He not?" Q. 104: "If Saul had natural life before that, and the Lord gave him a higher order of life when He spoke to him at the time referred to, then Saul had two kinds of life, did he not?" Q. 106: "Does not everything partake of the nature of that from which it springs?" Q. 108: "When Saul was born of the natural parentage, did he not partake of the nature of that parentage?" Q. 109: "When the Lord spoke to him as he was on his way to Damascus, and thus gave him a higher order of life, was he not then born of God, or born of the heavenly parentage?" Q. 110: "Then was he not a partaker of the divine nature?" Q. 111: "Is it not a fact that Saul had two natures?" Brother Cayce, you are right on those questions, 101 to 111 inclusive, but I do not know what you are going to do with both the lives Saul had after he had been given the higher order of life. Will both lives go to God, or will the higher order of life, only, go to the God who gave it? I would like to know where they both go, if indeed the natural life still lives on when the body is in dust. Now, Brother Cayce, I want you to tell me what you can on the questions I am asking you. Do not go off telling what someone else believes. According to your argument, both of those lives will live on. I do not believe the Scriptures teach anything of the kind. So I am asking for the Scripture that so teaches and would like to have your logical reasoning as well, so that I may have all the information possible. I am not writing this just for fun or for argument; but I want to know, if possible, the real truths of God's word. The best way out, according to my judgment, would be to admit that man in a state of nature, only, returns to dust and that there are no lives without something is alive; that all there is about a man who is untouched by the finger of God returns to dust as God said it would," for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." God did not say that a part of man should return to dust and another part live on. No, He did not say it. I have written this along at intervals, and so I may have repeated when it was not necessary; I hope you will look over my mistakes, as I have not time to write it over. Brother Cayce, if you cannot tell what kind of a God I worship, from my writing, I will try to tell you some time in a special letter on that line. I have made a copy of this and will send the copy to you, as the original is rather dim; think it will be better. It is plain enough except where I have made blunders. Brother Cayce, space is not a thing. It is only an opening between two material things. There would be no space if there were no material objects. The distance from one material object to another material object is space. I wonder if all Primitive Baptists love the doctrine that human beings, probably in almost innumerable throngs, will go to a burning and yawning hell, or place that is commonly called hell, there to consciously and feelingly burn just as though you were burning here in this life, and that to last while the years of eternity roll. If they do love that doctrine I cannot understand it. Brother Cayce, do you love to know that such is in store for billions of human beings, helpless as they are? Brother Cayce, do you think God can make an eternal thing, without it is His own offspring? That would not be making them. It would be His begotten children. I know the Bible says God cannot lie. God never has said He could make an eternal thing, either, has He? If so, where are the words? Yes, it is contrary to God's attributes for Him to make an eternal thing. When man's life has become extinct there is no more man, or he is not a man any more. How do you like it? Brother Cayce, is life not a part of man? Would you call the dead body of a human being a man? If God's life transmitted to man is not God, Brother Cayce, then tell me what it is. Now do not pass my questions up. I want to know. Brother Cayce, is not the natural life and the natural spirit the same? I think it is; what do you think? My words "are Spirit and life." Now what is the difference in the three-His words, Spirit, life? Tell me if you think there is any difference. I will now close. J. I Caneer. Montebello, Calif.

REPLY TO BROTHER CANEER

On another page in this paper is a letter from Brother J. I Caneer, the same being written in reply to an article which we wrote and was published in our issue of June 15, 1922, in answer to a letter he wrote us that was in the same issue of this paper. In that first letter Brother Caneer said," I think that some questions indicate an opposition to some of the other questions." In that letter he failed to show any question in opposition to each other. One question does not contradict another. This was written in regard to our pamphlet called Hot Shot. We will now pay some respect to this last letter; but we will first say that we shall not continue a controversy on this question. If a brother will not accept a plain and positive statement of Holy Writ there is no necessity of continuing a discussion on the matter. In this letter Brother Caneer flatly denies that the soul has an existence after the body, and that the soul lives after the death of the body. In our former article we quoted the language of the Saviour in ((0:28) (Matthew 10:28) "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." Brother Caneer says, "If you kill the body, there is no life or spirit, neither is there any mind or soul." If that is true, then when a man kills another man's body, he also destroys the soul, or has also killed the soul. This is a flat contradiction of the plain statement of the Son of God, who cannot lie. Again, if the soul and body are the same, then the all wise Son of God' used a meaningless word in the text when he said "both." There could be no such thing as "both" if they are the same. It is true that the word soul is often used in the sense of man, or a living man, but it is not used in that sense in ((0:28) (Matthew 10:28), as well as in many other places which could be cited. But if a man will not believe it in this one place he would not believe it if it were produced in a thousand more places. Brother Caneer says that he does not believe it is doctrine that human beings will be resurrected and sent to a place where they will consciously and eternally be. In other words, he does not believe there is any such place as an eternal hell or place of eternal punishment. He says if this is doctrine he cannot see where the man of God can get any comfort out of it. If Brother Caneer, according to this, is a man of God, he gets no comfort out of the thought or out of the fact that he is saved from an eternal hell. According to his position, there is no such place; then Jesus Christ did not save anyone from an eternal hell, for there was, and is, no such place for them to be saved from. According to that, Jesus Christ did not save anyone from anything under heaven- His death was a useless thing. Their sins could not send them to an eternal hell-for, according to Brother Ganeer, there was, and is, no such place. Such a doctrine denies the necessity and the efficacy of the death of the Son of God. In our former article we also quoted (Matthew 25:46)" And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." It is the same word translated everlasting with reference to the punishment of "these" that is translated eternal with reference to the life of the righteous. If the punishment of "these" is not eternal, then the life of the righteous is not eternal. One is of equal duration as the other. It is the very same word. It is the same word used in (I Timothy 1:17) "Now, unto the King eternal," etc. If the punishment of "these" ever ceases, then the King eternal will cease. The word simply means never ceasing. To deny this is to deny the plain statement of the Son of God-that is, to deny the never-ending punishment of "these" is to deny the plain statement of the Son of God. It is the truth whether a man can reason it out or not. Brother Caneer says he wants to know what I say, not what Paul says. Well, we have given Bible for what we say. Is not that better than for us to say and not give Bible for it? Brother Caneer says, "If they are sons of God, why not call them little gods as well as to call a human baby a little man?" We must infer that Brother Caneer means, either that one who is born of God is a little god, or else the human infant is not a little man! The human race is simply Adam multiplied, but the children of God are not God multiplied. If they are God multiplied, then we have an innumerable number of gods, as we have an innumerable number of human beings-Adam persons. Yes, it is still a fact that the Word of God (Jesus) is able to divide between soul and spirit. Yes, we claim that the soul and the spirit are not the same, and we do not change that in questions 35 and 36 by saying soul or spirit. Man cannot separate or divide between them, but Jesus can. They are not the same, though we may not be able to tell just what the difference is. Brother Caneer says the spirit is the life. God says, (Deuteronomy 12:23) "Only be sure that thou eat not the blood: for the blood is the life; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh." God says, by the prophet, that the blood is the life. Brother Caneer wants to know what about the life when the body dies. When the spirit leaves the body the body dies. The physical life ends. The blood ceases to flow through the veins. That is the end of the natural or physical life, or the end of living existence here in this world. God says concerning man that his spirit goes upward; goes to God who gave it; and that the spirit of the beast goes downward. The spirit of one does not cease to exist, though the physical life ends, and the spirit of the other does cease to exist. If the soul of man is the same as the body then the following language of the prophet is absolutely without meaning: "Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?" -(Micah 6:7). In this the prophet plainly makes a distinction between the soul and the body. Brother Caneer says, "I do not believe the soul or spirit is either one a thing. Do you believe they are things? A thing is something material, is it not?" Yes, we believe they are things. The word soul is a noun. The word spirit is a noun. A noun is an object or thing, whether visible or invisible, whether material or immaterial. "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." -(II Corinthians 4:18). Paul here calls things not seen things. Objects not seen are things: Things is "whatever exists, or is conceived to exist, as a separate entity, or as a distinct and individual quality, a fact, or idea; any separate or distinguishable object of thought." -Webster. The soul is a separate or distinguishable object of thought; so it is a thing. The soul is one thing; the spirit is another thing; the body is another thing; these three things together constitute a living man. When the Lord made the first man, Adam, and placed him in the garden of Eden, He gave him a law; and that law had a penalty attached to it," For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Genesis 2:17)-or, "dying thou shalt die." This signifies continuing to die, or continually dying, always dying. The impartation of divine life changes from a state of always dying to a state of always living. No, we do not claim that the soul lived before there was any body to live in. Why? Just because we do not. The fact that it continues to exist after the death of the body is no proof or evidence that it lived before the body. "And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the spirit is life because of righteousness." -(Romans 8:10). In our modern or present day English, giving a strictly literal translation of the Greek language in this text, we would necessarily have it read, "And if Christ be in you, though the body dies on account of sin, yet the spirit lives on account of righteousness." In this text the apostle most emphatically contradicts the position of every soul sleeper under heaven, and forever brands that position as eternally false. While the Saviour was here on earth in person He went up on a mount with Peter, James and John, and was transfigured before them, and talked with Moses and Elias. Moses had been dead for several hundred years, and God buried him. Jesus did not talk with his body. If the soul or spirit of Moses did not continue to exist after the death of his body, and talk with the Son of God on the mount, then Jesus Christ was an impostor. If He was an impostor, then the Bible is false, and there is no God. Brother Caneer says, "Space is not a thing. It is only an opening between two material things. There would be no space if there were no material objects. The distance from one material object to another material object is space." The word space is a noun, and a noun is a thing. Webster tells us that space is "boundlessness, and indefinite divisibility; the subject of determinations of position and direction." He says, "The question whether space is real apart from space-filling objects, that is, whether it is a receptacle for things or an attribute of them, dates from early times. --- Aristotle (" Physics," Book IV) held the view commonly accepted in modern times of space as the logical condition of the existence of bodies; space being 'that without which bodies could not exist, but itself, (space) continuing to exist when bodies cease to exist;' space possesses magnitude or extension, though itself is not a body- 'for in case it were a body then two bodies would exist in the same place.' He argued that inclosed places may be contained and moved in large including places-a ball in a box, the box in a house, the house in a town, the town on the earth, etc.; but all places are in one continuous space, an ultimate environment, peras (the Greek word), which contains all movable things and is not movable itself." This is very clear, that space is boundless, and contains all objects; that is, all objects are in space; and space exists whether there are any objects or not. Space was before any objects were made; and when God made the worlds He hung them out in space. It seems to us that if it is reasonable and right to say that the spiritual life which God imparts in regeneration is God, we can just as reasonably say that the natural life is God, for both came from God, or do come from Him. He is the Giver of the natural life as well as the Giver of spiritual life. It is true that in regeneration God takes up His abode in the heart of the sinner by His Spirit, and thereby imparts something else besides Himself, which is spiritual life. In the work of regeneration the Spirit of God operates on the spirit of man. It is an internal work. The heart is the seat of affection. At the death of the body, or at the end of this mode of existence, the soul or spirit (remember that we cannot divide between them, but the Lord can) leaves the body (then the body is dead, and that is the end of this physical life) and goes to God with that spiritual life which was given in regeneration. When the spirit of man that is unregenerated leaves his body, then his body is dead; that is the end of this physical life; but the spirit continues dying; it never ceases to die; it just keeps on dying-" dying thou shalt die." Brother Caneer, we have had our say. We have been plain, or tried to be. We have not meant to be harsh, and if our language sounds harsh, remember that we have not meant it to be with any harsh feeling. It seems to us that the questions in Hot Shot rather upset some theory held to by Brother Caneer, rather than that the questions themselves were inconsistent or contradictory. We still say that "whatever is Baptistic is Scriptural." We do not say, nor have we said, that the church makes. no mistakes. If some new or false idea is injected into the church and is advocated for a time, that thing is not Baptistic, but is a departure from that which is Baptistic. That which is Baptistic is that which has been advocated by the Baptists all along the line-not some new departure. And that which has been advocated by the Baptists, as a denomination, all along the line is Scriptural. If not, then the Baptist Church is not the church of Christ. Perhaps the Baptists have been an "unthinking people" all along the line until recently, when a few "thinking" ones have come up to deny what the Saviour said, that "these shall go away into everlasting punishment" -into endless punishment; for the original word means endless, never ceasing. An Endorsement

Dear Brother Cayce: The beautiful snow is falling, which has deprived me of the privilege of going to church today. I saw our dear brother, Elder Lancaster, a few days ago, who was laid in his grave yesterday. I mourn his loss. We preached together forty-five years. I see in the Lone Pilgrim the courts have tried the case between J. R. Wilson and others. The Scriptures forbid brother going to law with brother. What right has an unbelieving jury to try a church trouble? I can't endorse this unscriptural rule. But what interested me was what Elder Hutchens said concerning you, dear brother, and Brethren Pittman and Hanks. I know nothing of their troubles. I don't know what you brethren did or said; but Elder Hutchens says "all Primitive Baptists who know the facts in the case and hold the doctrine, practice, faith, rules and order of the church dear have already marked and will avoid Hanks, Pitt-man and Cayce and all others who have followed Wilson." I am not following man, but I had the pleasure of hearing you preach twice at the association at Coats. I heard Brother Hanks twice at Durham; and I heartily endorse the glorious doctrine you preached, which was, and is, the doctrine preached by Gold, Hassell, the Woodses, and all of God's called ministers. I have been contending for this doctrine for forty-six years; and if God lets me live on, as long as I do live and He gives me strength I expect to hold up this blessed doctrine-salvation by grace. During forty-eight years I have lived with the Old Baptists we have not been disturbed with the stuff of absolutism, and I pray God we never will, and ask the household of faith not to allow it to come in our churches. We are all in peace here in Wayne and adjoining counties, as to the doctrine; and have not, and will not, give over that a just, true and holy God predestinated a man to murder or purposed us to sin. God forbid. If we all could see and feel the spirit that man of God, dear Brother Copeland, manifested, and many others, we would be walking in the sunshine of God's everlasting love. Brethren, let your light shine. My dear brother, I am so fearful, and so little, so ignorant, I dread to write. I am not writing this for publication, but just to let you know how I am and our brethren stand; but if you see fit, and think it will help and strengthen any of God's little ones, you do as you will. I am your dear brother, I hope, in Christ. God bless you. May God enable you to live and wield the sword of God, who doeth all things well. Love to you. J. W. Gardner. R. 1, Goldsboro, N. C.

We appreciate the above very much. May the good Lord bless you, dear brother. The church trial reported in the Lone Pilgrim, referred to above, was reversed by the higher court in both cases, and the property was given to those with whom Elder Wilson is identified. The opposers of Elder Wilson were the ones who took the matter into court. They were the violators of the plain Scriptural injunction and instruction, The reason why they propose to avoid us is for no other reason than that we call the doctrine they teach in question, and deny that it is the teaching of God's blessed book. We do not believe that the monstrous crimes, nor any of the crimes, committed are links in the chain of events, all of which were forged and welded by the eternal sovereign God, who is the great fountain and source of truth and righteousness. He is "a God of truth and without iniquity." -(Deuteronomy 32:4). As He is without iniquity, it does not proceed from Him, either directly or indirectly. Without His predestination there would have been no salvation. That being true, salvation follows as a result of God's predestination. His predestination is one of the causes without which there would be no salvation. Upon the same principle, if God predestinated the sin and wickedness that is committed in the world, it would not have been without that predestination; and that being true, iniquity is from Him. But iniquity is not from God. But what God predestinated is from Him. Therefore, He did not predestinate iniquity. Salvation is from the Lord; it is of the Lord. He predestinated to save. He predestinated some to be conformed to the image of His Son; and that salvation is of the Lord; it is from Him. We have often been brought to the place where we are willing to try to pray to the Lord; but we never did feel like trying to pray this way: "Lord, be merciful to me, for I have done what thou didst unalterably predestinate and decree that I should. Lord, be merciful to me, for I have always done thy will and pleasure-just what was thy will for me to do; and, therefore, O Lord, I beg of thee to have mercy upon me." No, we have never felt to pray that way-but that prayer would be according to the doctrine taught in the Lone Pilgrim. C. H. C.

Words of Encouragement

---July 15, 1926

In The Primitive Baptist of November 18, 1892, we find the following letter from Elder Spencer F. Moore, then of Boston, Mo., but now at Maud, Texas. We feel like, perhaps, the letter and what Brother Moore endorsed would be of some benefit to our people now. Hence we give space for the same. C. H. C.
The letter:

Elder S. F. Cayce: My loving brother in Christ, if it is right for such a great sinner, ignorant and weak minded as I am to call you brother-I have just read the last Primitive Baptist, and when I read your remarks under Brother P. J. Howard's article, my poor soul was filled with love and sweet fellowship for you. Oh, Brother Cayce, I believe that the Lord is with you, and my great desire is that our darling Saviour will bless you for the good that I feel you are doing for the cause of Christ. It seems to me, my brother, that you never make a mistake; all your writings seem so smooth; every word seems to be exactly in its place; and I noticed in your sermons when you were here that every word meant something; and above all I rejoice to claim you as a true brother. Somehow you seem like a dear father to me; I suppose it is because I am weak and you are so strong. Oh, my dear brother, you don't realize how sad I was when I felt that I could see your face no more. But still I yet hope to see you on earth again. How glad I am that our blessed Jesus went to prepare a place for His loved ones up in heaven. There's where I hope to be, with all of God's dear little ones. I don't feel fit to be with them here, but when I am made like lovely Jesus, O then, dear brother, I won't feel cast down any more, but will sing praises to our blessed heavenly Father, with all the redeemed forever and ever more. It seems to me if I could do all you are doing for the Lord, I would know that He (God) was with me, and that He was my strength. Don't you ever get tired, dear brother? Oh, you have so much to bear! There is so much responsibility laid upon you. I think the dear brethren and sisters ought to help you, by not writing things that would bother you, and I suppose I am the worst of all; but I want you to forgive me, ' dear brother. I just feel like I want to tell you how I hope that I love you and all of God's dear people. And, dear brother, I hope your loved ones at home will not get lonely while you are gone to cheer and encourage the Lord's little flocks scattered here and there. Oh, how the souls of God's little ones rejoice when they hear that one is coming that they can put full confidence in to feed them on the sincere milk of the word, or the plain unmystified gospel of God our Saviour, Christ and Him crucified, and salvation by the grace of God. They like something that explains their experience and binds up their broken hearts. Oh, be faithful, dear Brother Cayce. Surely there is balm in Gilead; blessed Jesus said He would send the Comforter. Press on, dear brother; be instant both in and out of season. But Oh, I catch myself turning my letter into advice to you when I need your advice. I had better quit, hadn't I? Cheer up, Brother Cayce. Goodbye. S. F. Moore. Boston, Mo., Oct. 11, 1892.

THE REMARKS ENDORSED

We don't think it advisable to publish anything here on the subject, "What is it that is born again?" Some of the brethren understand that it is the whole man, others understand that it is only the soul or spirit of man, but they all agree that it is the (Adam) man, the child of Adam, or sinner, that needs to be, and is, born again in regeneration, and that this birth makes us (manifestly) heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ. None of them, however, believe that this birth of the Spirit purifies the flesh nor enables us to live without committing any sin; but they all agree that those who are thus born of God will, in the resurrection, be raised in the image of Jesus, that this corruptible will then have put on incorruption, this mortal will have put on immortality, and that we will then be free from sin, pain, sorrow and death. Hence we all agree that Christ came to seek and to save that which was lost, and that sinners are, therefore, saved, and will enjoy the benefits of salvation in that heaven of eternal rest that awaits the redeemed of the Lord. As we all agree in these glorious truths let us not devote any more space in discussing our fine-spun theories, but let us write and talk about the goodness and tender mercy, the power and sustaining grace of God, and such other things as make for our peace, and such things as tend to bind and unite us more firmly together in bonds of Christian love. This being our greatest desire, we shall decline publishing anything further on the mooted question above (what is it that is born again?), but we will be glad to hear from our dear brethren on subjects that pertain to the welfare of Zion and that we think will be comforting and beneficial to the dear saints of God.-C. in Primitive Baptist of Oct. 7, 1892.

REMARKS

If the brethren in 1892 did not all see just alike on this question and could, and did, live together in love and sweet fellowship, why can they not do so now? Did our father pursue the right course then? Was it right for the brethren to leave off their fine-spun theories and live in peace? We think it was right. If it was right for them to do that then, why would it not be right now? Verily, we think it would be right for all to confess their wrongs in engaging in the unholy war, forgive each other and live together in sweet peace and fellowship. May the Lord humble us all under a feeling sense of His goodness and make us willing to confess our wrongs and willing to forgive, as He taught us. C. H. C.

Church Act

---July 15, 1926

Whereas, a call for a general meeting in Dallas, Texas, Tuesday, August 24, 1926, of representative men from all the different factions of Primitive Baptists has been sent out, which meeting is called for the purpose of formulating a plan by which all Primitive Baptists who are agreed in doctrine may unite in their church worship; now, therefore, be it Resolved, by the Primitive Baptist Church of Dallas, Texas, while in conference on June 27, 1926, that we heartily endorse this move, and hereby offer our co-operation in the furtherance of the same. And that we wish to join with those whose signature appeared on the original call. W. W. Fowler, Moderator. J. T. Watson, Clerk.

REMARKS

The above is copied from the Glad Tidings of July 2nd. This church is what is called the Richards or Glad Tidings faction. We do not know whether the church identified with what is called the Newman faction has taken any action in the matter or not. The above action makes it appear to us that those brethren really want peace; but of course the final result is yet unknown to us or to the people. We trust many of our brethren will be there, and that they will go as messengers from their churches. C. H. C.

God's Determinate Counsel

---July 15, 1926

The following was written as a private letter to a brother whose name we withhold. He wrote us a good and kind letter, which we appreciated very much. After we wrote the letter we decided to put it in the paper and let our readers see what we think about the matter. We omit a few lines of apology and explanation in the first of the letter. C. H. C.

The letter:

Dear Brother: * * * * I appreciate your kind admonition, and will try to be careful as to how I conduct myself. I, like you, wish the brethren would quit agitating the question of the predestination of all things. If God did predestinate my sins and wickedness it is no comfort to me to know it. If He did predestinate that I should be conformed to the image of His Son, it would be a great comfort and consolation to me to have the certain assurance of it. Paul says we are predestinated to be conformed to the image of His Son. I hope-only hope-I am included in that number. Like you, that is the great question that concerns me. I just notice especially the text you called attention to-" Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God." Counsel, as here used, means "deliberate purpose; design; intent; scheme; plan." Determinate means "having defined limits; not uncertain or arbitrary; fixed, as by a rule or some specific and more or less constant cause; conclusive; decisive; positive." He was delivered by the determinate counsel of God the Father. That was God's deliberate purpose; design; His counsel; and it was determinate; it was fixed as by a rule or by some specific and more or less constant cause. That was the cause of Him being delivered. He voluntarily delivered Himself into the hands of the wicked Jews, and it was caused by that determinate counsel. What they did by wicked hands was not what was the determinate counsel of God; but Him being delivered was by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, then they by wicked hands took Him and crucified Him. What the Lord did was determined by Him-not what the wicked Jews did. The wicked Jews desired to take His life, and had tried to do so from the time of His birth. Though they had tried to take His life, and though He was delivered into their hands, yet they did not take His life. The Lord had determined that they should not take it, and they did not. Jesus said, "I lay down my life; no man taketh it from me. I lay it down of mine own self. This commandment have I received of my Father." When He was on the cross we read that He cried, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and bowed His head and gave up the ghost." When the Roman soldiers came to Him, He was dead already, so they brake not His legs. The thieves were not dead, so they brake their legs. I would be glad to see you. I trust your son * * * is doing well. I would be glad to see him. I appreciate your Christian love and sweet fellowship more than I am able to tell. The first effort I ever made to speak in the name of the Master was a little more than thirty-six years ago-Saturday, Jan. 4, 1890-thirty-six years last January. I have had many trials and sore conflicts along the way. Have had some severe trials and persecutions. Many times I have felt like I was almost ready to despair, and to give up the battle. "By the grace of God I am what I am." By His grace I continue to this day. I am now going down the western side of the hill, and am sure that it is not far to the end of the journey now. I am now a little older than my precious father was when the good Lord called him up higher. I now find myself, sometimes, looking forward to the other side of the river for joys and pleasures. I trust I feel so thankful that the good Lord has given me a dear and loving companion for my domestic happiness in my last days, and a precious family; and they all love me dearly-I know they do. From that standpoint the latter part of my life is a blessed state-but from a church standpoint there is so much strife and confusion I sometimes long for a discharge from the warfare, and long for sweet rest. My precious brother, as I said above, I would be so glad to see you; but I have very little idea that we will ever meet again in this low ground of sorrow. If not, I hope we shall meet in a better country. May the good Lord shower down His richest blessings upon you, is my humble prayer. Please pray for poor me. I feel to be so poor and needy. I need your prayers. Yours in love and fellowship, C. H. Cayce.

Luke 16:19-23

---July 15, 1926

"We have received a letter from Brother Melvin Hall, Banner, Ky., asking our views on the above Scripture. He asks: Was the rich man eternally saved? Was the death spoken of a corporeal death? Is there any Scripture that teaches that the children of God will suffer in hell after death? Were all the Jews saved, or will they be eternally saved? We wrote a short article on this same subject which was published in The Primitive Baptist of Feb. 7, 1911, and another that was published in the issue of May 25, 1915. Those two articles have all the above questions answered except the third, but the fourth is answered indirectly. In the article in the issue of Feb. 7, 1911, we quoted a part of a text, "the children of the promise are counted for the seed." The entire text reads: "They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but the children of the promise are counted for the seed." -Rom. ix. 8. Verse 6 says, "For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel." These verses plainly show that some of the Jews were not God's spiritual children. The Jews were His people as a nation; but His redeemed and saved children are OUT OF every nation, and not all of any nation. We here copy what we said in the issues of the paper mentioned above, omitting a part of the introductory. As these two articles referred to have already appeared in previous volumes, it is not necessary to take up space to insert them here.-Editor.

THE THIRD QUESTION In answer to the third question we most emphatically say that there is no such Scripture. The Scriptures know of no place where people go after death but to heaven and to hell, and it is most plainly taught that God's children go to heaven after death. The only hell they suffer is here in time, and at the second coming of the Lord they will be raised to a state of life and glory, and the others will be raised to a state of damnation {(John 5:28-29)} or everlasting punishment. {(Matthew 25:46)} C. H. C.

Can They Disobey?

---August 1, 1926

We are in receipt of a letter from a brother in which he asks us a number of questions and requests that we answer them as soon as possible through the paper. To save space we will just give his questions and our answers as follows: "Can the natural man keep the moral law? That is, can he tell the natural truth, pay his just and honest debts, attend to his own business, refrain from profanity, from intoxication, fornication, adultery; and, in short, live a clean moral life?" Most assuredly men in nature, the unregenerate, can live a clean moral life. Men do not have to get drunk. If a man gets drunk, goes home and breaks his wife's dishes and furniture, and raises a general disturbance-if every man in the world were to tell us he could not help it, that he could do no better than that, we would not believe it. We know he could do better; and, if he does not do better without, he should be made to do better. A man does not have to steal, lie and cheat. He does not have to take the name of the Lord in vain. He can and should live a moral life. If all would do that we would have a much better world to live in. "Are those of the Lord's people who have been renewed by the Spirit a live, active people; or are they just as dead and inactive spiritually as before? If the latter, where is the distinction between them and the unregenerate?" Most certainly there would be no distinction if God's people are as inactive after regeneration as before. There could be no distinction unless there is a difference. Those who have been born from above are living characters; they have been raised up out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ. "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." -((Pet 2:5) (I Peter 2:5). They are not dead stones, or lifeless; but they are "lively stones," living characters; and they are, therefore, capacitated to act in a realm that the unregenerated are not capacitated to act in. They are capacitated to render spiritual service to God, to offer up spiritual sacrifices. This text teaches that they are, as lively stones, built up a spiritual house to offer up spiritual sacrifices; and if they cannot offer up these sacrifices, then the work of God is not sufficient for that for which He designed it. "What is meant by the expression 'Everything is fixed?' Isn't it a fact that when a Baptist preacher uses this expression that he is to be understood to mean to include all the wicked acts of men and devils; and they, the wicked acts of men, as well as all other events, were fixed by God, and could not be otherwise?" As to what is meant by the expression, "Everything is fixed," we do not know what a man might mean by it when he uses it. If he does not mean what the words imply, then he should not use it. If he does not desire to stir up strife, he most certainly would not use it, if he does not mean what the words imply. The words would most certainly imply, to our limited understanding, that the same power that fixed one event fixed all other events. There is nothing in the expression to signify otherwise. If we were to say that God fixed one event, or one thing, and then add, "Everything is fixed," meaning every event by the use of the word everything, the expression would certainly imply that we meant that God fixed every event just as He fixed the one event. The Bible certainly teaches that God fixed the eternal salvation of His people from their sins; He fixed that they should be conformed to the image of His Son; and all the powers of darkness and the demons of the under world, and all men combined, cannot hinder or prevent one of them being conformed to the image of Jesus. Why? Because God fixed it, and it cannot, and will not, be prevented or hindered. The reason why it cannot be hindered or prevented is because God fixed it. Did He also fix every act they do and every sin they commit? Did He fix all the rape, lying, stealing, murders, robberies, assassinations, and all the dastardly crimes that are committed? All the preachers that live on God's earth could not make us believe such as that." If the above be true, how could there be any violation of God's law by His creatures, seeing that they are doing just what He wanted and intended?" If it is true, then there could be no such thing as a violation of God's will, and His law would not be an expression of His will. But His will is expressed in His law. If His will is not expressed in His law, then the eternal God is guilty of double dealing. As He is not guilty of double dealing, then His will is expressed in His law. His people transgress His law." Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law." -(I John 3:4). From these facts we have the following: God's will is expressed in His law. Sin is the transgression of the law. God's people sin. Therefore God's people often fail to do God's will. It was not His will for them to transgress. If they were doing His will in transgressing, then He would be well pleased with them transgressing, or else He is not well pleased with His own will. If He is well pleased with His own will, then they do not please Him when they transgress His law, and it is not His will for them to transgress." And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ. But with many of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness." -(I Corinthians 10:4-5). They did not do God's will, and He was not well pleased with them, and they were overthrown in the wilderness." Would not the theory that God has, from all eternity, predestinated, decreed and foreordained that we should do just what we do forever destroy all admonition to duty? In fact, could it be truthfully said that there would be any duties for us to perform, unless our wicked and sinful acts are duties, as well as any others; and would we not be serving God in our sinful acts just as much so as in our good ones? This is the way it appears to me, if this be true." If that theory be true, there would be no need of admonition; there would be no place for it. The only reason that could be assigned for admonition to duty, in case that theory be true, would be that God foreordained and decreed that one should give the admonition which he does give. If that doctrine be true, then it forever destroys all accountability of man. No sort of reasoning can make it appear otherwise. If it is unalterably fixed from eternity that a man should do just as he does do, then he is neither responsible nor accountable for so doing. It was unalterably fixed from eternity that certain persons should be conformed to the image of Jesus, and they are not responsible or accountable for being thus conformed to His image. The one who does the fixing is the one responsible for the thing being done that was so fixed. To predestinate, decree, or foreordain is to fix beforehand." If the natural man can live a clean, moral life, could less be expected of those who profess to have been born of the Spirit of God?" It seems that Paul expected more of the children of God at Rome than he did of un-regenerate people." And I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another." - (Romans 15:14). Paul was fully persuaded that they were able to admonish one another, and expected them to do that, evidently." If God's people cannot do anything by way of keeping the commandments, why are they told to do so many things in the Scriptures?" This is a question we cannot answer. If they cannot do anything there would be no necessity of telling them to do anything, that we can see. If that question can be answered by any sort of logical reasoning we would be glad to see the answer." If they cannot do anything, why does John say, (I John 5:21) "Little children, keep yourselves from idols?" Why did Peter say, 'Save yourselves from this untoward generation?' ((0) (Acts 2:40) Why did the apostle say, 'If one be overtaken in a fault, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness?' (Galatians 6:1) Sure enough, if they cannot do anything, why did John say what he did? Why did Peter say what he did? Why did Paul say what he did? Why? WHY?" Why did Paul tell the jailer to do something, if he could not do anything?" Yes, why did he? There is no why!" When Paul says, 'I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision,' etc., is it not implied that he could have been, or that some of the Lord's people were, disobedient?" That language most assuredly shows very clearly that there is such a thing as being disobedient. If there is no such thing as being disobedient, then there was no necessity for him to say that he was not disobedient. But God's people do not all of them obey." But they have not all obeyed the gospel." - (Romans 10:16)." But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the Lord their God, nor receiveth correction: truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth." -(Jeremiah 7:28)." Is it not a fact that God's people do disobey the commands? Then why do some of our preachers say, 'When God commands us we always obey,' or that we are just bound to do it?" To the first part we say it is a fact that God's people do disobey, as we have shown in answer to the previous question. The latter part of the question-or, rather, the latter question, we cannot answer. We might give an apparent reason, and impugn the motives of some. We might judge that some say this as an excuse for their wrong doing. Then we might possibly be judging them wrong. We cannot see why one would say such a thing. We are sure there is no Bible ground for saying such." Is it God's will for His people to sin in doing all the wickedness that they are guilty of? If so, why does He punish them for doing His will?" God does not punish His children for doing His will. He punishes them for disobeying Him, and their disobedience does not please Him. This we have already shown above." With many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness."-(I Corinthians 10:4-5). "Would a natural father be so brutal as to whip his child for doing what he was willing for it to do!" A loving father would certainly not punish his child for doing his will. If God's children are doing God's will when they disobey, or when they fail to obey, and He chastises or punishes them, for the same, then He is meaner to His children, and is less just to them, than a loving natural father would be to his children. "Why do some preachers use such expressions as 'Everything that ever I did was God's will?'" We do not know why they use such expressions, unless it be because they have "forgotten that they were purged from their old sins." They have certainly forgotten their experience, for the time being, at least. They certainly never did try to pray, "Lord be merciful to me, for everything that ever I did was thy will." When under conviction for sin, they certainly felt and confessed that they had done contrary to God's will. We wonder if they do not, even now, in prayer say, "Lord, we have done many things that we should not have done, and have left undone many things that we should have done; we have often run counter to thy will." We wonder if they do not confess that in prayer? If they do, and confess the truth in so doing, then when they say, "Everything that ever I did was God's will," they do not tell the truth-they are simply mistaken about it; and they should not say it again. "What is the church's duty when her pastor uses such expressions? Is it the deacon's duty to see that the pastor preaches sound doctrine?" It is the duty of every member of the church to see that the pastor preaches sound doctrine-and especially is it the duty of the deacon, as an officer of the church. If a preacher uses such expressions he should be kindly admonished. If he will not desist, but persists in such a course, to the destruction of the peace of the church, then he should be dealt with as an offender. He should, at least, be silenced. If he stubbornly rebels, he may be dealt with for rebellion. If all the churches had thus faithfully dealt with the ministers much of the strife, confusion and divisions that have come among us could and would have been avoided. The preachers belong to the churches, and the churches do not belong to the preachers. If all our people would get that well into their mind and act accordingly, they would stop much of the confusion among us. We have tried to answer your questions, dear brother, the best we know how, and have tried to do so in a spirit of love for the truth and in love to all our brethren. C. H. C.

1 Timothy 4:10

---August 1, 1926

Brother J. L. Harbour, of Dekalb, Miss., asks us to write our views on this text. The text reads: "For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of those that believe." We will endeavor to make just a few remarks in connection with the text. We suppose the latter part of the text is that upon which the brother wishes our views. It is a text-the latter part of it-which is frequently quoted by some people in endeavoring to prove that the Lord desires the final salvation and glorification of the entire human family. Hence they emphasize the expression, "who is the Saviour of all men." If the text belongs where they put it, and the right application is as they make it, to the final or eternal salvation and final glorification of human beings in heaven; and if the term all men includes and embraces the entire human family; and if some of the human family are finally lost and are not finally glorified, then the text contradicts itself. A saviour is one who saves. If one is a saviour of a man, then that man is saved. If one man of the race of Adam is not saved, or is finally lost, then the Lord is not that man's Saviour in that sense. If, therefore, some of the race of Adam are finally lost, not finally saved, not saved with an eternal salvation, then the Lord is not the Saviour of all men in that sense. In whatever sense the saving may be used, the Lord is not the Saviour of a man not saved in that sense. If the word Saviour as used in this text has reference to a preserving in a natural sense, then in that sense the Lord is the Saviour, or preserver, of all the race. He is also the preserver of the beast creation. "O Lord, thou preservest man and beast." -((6) (Psalms 36:6). If this fact makes salvation in heaven possible for a human being, or for a man, it would do the same thing for the beast. The Lord does preserve and uphold all His works in creation, and bestows His natural blessings in the natural realm; and the natural man enjoys them. But there are spiritual blessings which no one can enjoy unless one has the spiritual life. So there is a special blessing, or saving, or preserving, for His people that is not had or enjoyed by any others. The term all men may be used in a generic or restricted sense, as that term is often used in Scripture. Used in that sense it would and should be applied to all the Lord's children, all who are born from above. He is their Saviour, their Preserver. He saves them, and will finally deliver them from this present evil world, and they shall finally be conformed to the image of Jesus, though many of them do not here in this world believe in Jesus as the Messiah, as the King in Zion; they do not believe His teaching or doctrine. Some of His people do thus believe; and the Lord is a special Saviour of those who do thus believe. (I Timothy 4:10) There is a special saving enjoyed by the Lord's people here in this world who thus believe in Him that others do not and cannot enjoy. "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." ((9:24) (Mark 9:24) C. H. C.

Deuteronomy 11:26; 30:15

---August 15, 1926

Brother H. T. Tucker, Star, N. C, asked us to give our views through the paper of (Deuteronomy 11:26); ((0:15) (30:15). (Deuteronomy 11:26-27,28)reads as follows: "Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse; a blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you this day: and a curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the Lord your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known." It seems to us that this language is as plain as language could make it that the Lord here promised the children of Israel a blessing if they would render that obedience unto Him which He required of them. The blessing which He promised depended upon their doing what He commanded. Here were blessings that they were to enjoy upon the ground of rendering obedience, and upon that ground only. He did not promise these blessings whether they rendered obedience or not, or unconditionally. On the other hand, He promised a curse if they did not render that obedience unto Him, but if they should turn aside and serve other gods. Here is punishment promised upon their disobedience. ((0:15) (Deuteronomy 30:15-20) reads: "See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil; in that I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in His ways, and to keep His commandments and His statutes and His judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it. But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them; I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish, and that ye shall not prolong your days upon the land, whither thou passest over Jordan to go to possess it. I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live: that thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey His voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto Him: for He is thy life, and the length of thy days: that thou mayest dwell in the land which the Lord sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob to give them." It seems to us that this language, too, is as plain as it can be made. He did not set life and death before the Gentiles, or the world of the ungodly; but He set them before Israel, His people, and required obedience of them, and promised the blessing if they rendered the obedience required. On the other hand, rebellion and disobedience would bring death and destruction upon them. The life nor the death were neither of them eternal, but the life was to be enjoyed in the land of Canaan, which the Lord promised to give to Abraham and to his seed after him. The land, therefore, belonged to the Israelites. It was theirs by gift and by birth. They were not required to render obedience to the Lord in order that the land be theirs; but they were required to render obedience unto Him in order that they continue in the land and enjoy the blessings in the land. National Israel were a typical people; they were a type of spiritual Israel. As national Israel were required to render obedience unto the Lord in order that they enter the land of Canaan and enjoy the blessings of that land, even so the Lord's Israel today-spiritual Israel-must obey the Lord, or render service unto Him, in order that they enter the church-the antitype of the land of Canaan, the gospel Canaan-and enjoy the blessings in the church. The blessings here promised were to be enjoyed only when they rendered the service unto the Lord which He required, and could not be had or enjoyed any other way. The Lord made the enjoyment of these blessings to depend upon the obedience rendered by them unto Him. As the Lord put it that way, no man could or can change it and make it some other way. Here the Lord commanded them to choose life. It would be folly to command one to choose life who had no life. Choice is something that pertains to and belongs to life. One must have life in order to choose. Hence those people were not alien sinners, or destitute of life. They were to prolong their life in Canaan by doing what the Lord commanded. They would escape punishment, sorrow, distress, captivity, and destruction by the sword by doing what the Lord required. This belongs today to the Lord's people. If all would only awake to duty and each one of us be found at our post doing what the Lord requires of us, how much better it would be. May the Lord help us so to do. C. H. C.

Union of Separate and Regular Baptists

---August 15, 1926

We have seen that the claim has been made that in the union of the Separate and Regular Baptists in North Carolina they had regard for what some are termed to call gospel order. The Regular Baptists in Virginia and North Carolina had baptized some into their churches who were in a state of unbelief, or were unregenerate, and the Separates, for a time, urged this as an objection to a union. Finally the Regulars corrected this error and ceased the practice of administering baptism to any only those who gave evidence of regeneration. This was in the Kehukee Association in North Carolina and may be seen by reference to Hassell's History, pp. 697, 698, 699. But here the question comes up: Where did the Separate Baptists come from? Where did they originate? Here is the answer: In 1740, or thereabout, George Whitfield, an Episcopalian, came to New England from England and engaged in holding revival meetings. Some of the Baptists were favorable to those revivals, and some were not. The pastor of the church in Boston, Mass., opposed the revival, but some of the members of that church favored it, and they withdrew from the church in 1742. The next year they were constituted into a church and were called Separate Baptists, the old party remaining as before and began to be denominated Regular Baptists. From this split off faction sprang the Separate Baptists. According to the contention of some of our brethren they have no gospel baptism themselves. If the Regulars were a disorderly party on account of having some unregenerated persons among them who had been immersed, and the Separates started from this excluded faction, then none of the Baptists had gospel baptism, according to the way some brethren seem to view matters. If the Regulars did have gospel baptism, when they united with the Separates they lost all their gospel order, according to the argument some brethren make. So it makes no difference which horn of the dilemma they take, the Baptists have no gospel baptism now. Brethren, let us try to be consistent. For our authority as to the origin of the Separate Baptists see Spencer's History of the Kentucky Baptists, Vol. 1, pp. 104, 105. In Kentucky the Regulars and Separates united in 1801. The two bodies appointed a committee to meet and formulate a plan and terms of agreement. They met at Howard's Creek (Old Providence meetinghouse), in Clark County, on the second Saturday in October, 1801. "The terms of union were unanimously approved by the convention, and were recommended to the churches for their adoption. It appears to have met with no opposition from any quarter." -Spencer, Vol. 1, p. 545. None of them were required to do their official work over. C. H. C.

Who Owns The Child?

---August 15, 1926

We have seen a number of articles from different brethren concerning the child claimed by two women when Solomon was king over Israel. It seems that each brother who has written on this holds out the idea that his faction of the Baptists has the child. We would like to call attention of the brethren to this point and to this fact: If that child represents the Primitive Baptist Church, as the brethren generally seem to present it, as the child was not divided, or any of its members severed, then the Primitive Baptist Church remains one and the same, notwithstanding the different factions-these different factions still compose the child. Another thing we would like to kindly call attention to is this: When Solomon called for a sword to divide the child, the woman who was not the true mother was willing for the child to be divided, but the true mother was not willing. Now, if that child represented the Primitive Baptist Church today, will you please tell us who that church belongs to-those who are willing for a division or those who are pleading and working for a union? A hint to the wise is sufficient. C. H. C.

The Dallas Meeting

---September 15, 1926

The meeting called for to be held in Dallas on August 24 and 25 met according to the call published. A large crowd assembled in the city hall on the morning of the 24th, and the meeting was held there that day. As the people could hardly hear what was said by the speakers on the stand, the place of meeting was changed to the Y. W. C. A. building. When the meeting had been organized by electing two moderators, one to represent what was called the Richards faction and one to represent what was called the Newman faction, and the election of two clerks, then a committee of 19 were appointed to draft a statement of principles of doctrine and practice, or discipline, to be presented to the meeting for consideration. The committee assembled in another room and worked hard, yet patiently and with brotherly love and forbearance, and finished the work and presented the following in open meeting. Every item in the following was unanimously agreed to and adopted by the committee, and when read in open meeting was unanimously adopted by the Baptists assembled on both sides. There was not a dissenting vote. After the report was read, and adopted by the meeting, there was a general confession of wrongs by brethren on both sides; hearts were softened, brethren who had been at variance forgave each other and embraced each other; then there were songs sung and the hand of love and fellowship extended to each other amid shouts of praise to the Lord. We believe that much and lasting good will result from this meeting. Surely the good Lord manifested His blessed and sweet presence, and it was good to be there. May His name be praised. C. H. C. Another Trouble Settled

---September 15, 1926

About twenty-five years ago there was a division in the Flint River Association, in South Georgia. The meeting which was held at New Hope, Grady County, Georgia, last January was for the purpose of trying to get those churches together again. When the division occurred one party went on as the Flint River Association, and some of the churches met at Trinity in 1905 and adjusted their differences and carried on their association under the name of the Original Flint River Association. Some of the churches in both factions were represented in the New Hope meeting last January and came together; but there was a division in Tired Creek Church, in the Original Flint River, resulting from the call and the holding of the New Hope meeting. We were at the New Hope meeting, and felt then that these brethren should all be together, and that they were one people. So we left on Tuesday night, July 27, and arrived in Thomasville, Ga., on Thursday to fill appointments in that section, our object being to present an article to the different churches, which we called the "Gospel Terms of Peace," that the churches might come together upon the terms therein expressed. We visited the following named churches: Prosperity, Union (Mitchell), Live Oak, New Hope, Providence, Zion Hill, Hartsfield, Poplar Springs, Mizpah, Hopewell, Shady Grove, Union (Miller), Pisgah, Piedmont, Trinity and Tired Creek. There were some other churches which we did not have the time to visit, but a copy of the article was sent to them, and they have all endorsed and adopted the same. The trouble was also settled at Tired Creek, an account of which is given in another article in this paper. We feel to hope that the Lord blessed our feeble efforts for peace among these good brethren. The following is a copy of the article we presented to the churches and a copy of their endorsements. C. H. C. Note.-We do not deem it necessary to take up space here to insert the article.-Editor.

On The War Path

---September 15, 1926

We see in one of our exchanges that some of the editors and writers seem to take great delight in their efforts to expose us and to say some very harsh things concerning us and the doctrine we try, in our weakness, to set forth in the columns of this paper. If such a course is any satisfaction to them, and they get any satisfaction out of it, they are welcome to all the joy they get from such. "Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." -(Matthew 5:11-12). "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous: not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing. For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil." -((Pet 3:8) (I Peter 3:8-12). C. H. C.

Tired Creek Church Settlement

---September 15, 1926

On our recent trip in Georgia our last appointment was at Tired Creek, which church had divided. This is in the Flint River Association. The appointment at Tired Creek was Monday, August 16. After service we presented the following to them for consideration, which was endorsed and adopted by thirty-nine of the members' of that church, including both factions. There were forty-two present. We trust the three who did not then accept the settlement will do so. When they thus voted to come together, we asked for a rising vote of all the Baptists present who approved of the same, and the vote of approval was almost unanimous. Then they all joined in singing and extending to each other the hand of fellowship. It was an enjoyable meeting; and the Lord's presence was surely manifested and felt. May His name be praised. We trust those good brethren have truly buried their differences and that sweet peace may reign among them. C. H. C.

THE SETTLEMENT

Whereas, There has been discord, strife and confusion, resulting in a division of the members of Tired Creek Church, both sides or both parties claiming to be the church, and feeling and realizing that this is a sad state of affairs, having brought sorrow and distress to ourselves, as well as to our brethren and to sister churches; and Whereas, We desire that peace and union be restored among ourselves, as well as among and between all our sister churches; Therefore, we, the members on both sides hereby confess that we have been prompted by a wrong spirit in our contentions with each other, and desire to, and do, hereby mutually confess all our mistakes, errors and wrongs, and mutually forgive each other of all mistakes, errors and wrongs committed, and agree to bury the past in oblivion and to come together in peace, desiring to live together as brethren in the Lord, and to strive for the things that make for peace and the things wherewith one may edify another, praying the Lord to help us to live in such a way as to honor and glorify His holy name. We are aware and all agree that efforts have been heretofore made to unite all the churches once composing the Flint River Association, and we greatly desire and humbly hope that they will all be brought together in peace, love, union and sweet fellowship.

Big Sandy Association

---September 15, 1926

We have just attended the session of the Big Sandy Association, which met with the church at West Plains, near Milan, Tenn. A large crowd was present each day, especially on Sunday, and the meeting closed on Sunday, September 5. The following brethren in the ministry were present during the meeting: Elders J. L. Fuller, who was chosen moderator, T. M. Hampton, who was chosen clerk, L. D. Hamilton, J. C. Ross, J. B. Halbrook, J. R. Scott, J. H. Phillips, John Grist, J. W. Adams, T. L. Webb, M. J. Perry, A. W. DeBerry, D. Hopper, W. C. Davis, J. N. Wallace, W. A. Bishop, D. Neisler, T. M. Phillips, J. S. Clayton, C. F. Parker, and the writer, making twenty-one in all. It was a great meeting; the preaching was all a unit, and peace, love and fellowship abounded. Not a discordant note was sounded. All seemed to labor for the peace and union of the Lord's children. The Lord's presence was surely manifested, and the meeting was an enjoyable one. On Monday following, which was yesterday, we were at New Hope, near Milan. Elder Webb is making this trip with us, and will be with us, the Lord willing, until after the third Sunday, if no longer. Elders L. D. Hamilton and J. W. Adams were with us yesterday. We tried to preach and then Brother Webb followed and preached a comforting discourse, and the meeting was enjoyed by those present, and a good crowd was there for a Monday meeting. We are glad to have Brother Webb with us on this trip. Please remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

A Trouble Maker

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Christ-I am reading with great interest the peace move that is being advocated in your paper, but at the same time with much sorrow, knowing that we cannot have peace at the present as I would like to have peace. On the second Sunday in June, 1922, the church at Bethel was organized by Elders M. D. Brann, D. E. Burris and C. L. Clark, the church being examined and found orthodox in doctrine and practice. The church remained in peace until the fall of 1923, when there arose a little difference between some of the members. At the same time a man by the name of Valentine began to visit the church and preach; teaching that the Scriptures teach only one salvation, and demanding that all the church work be done over, when the writer with two others objected to his doctrine and to the church work being done over. We remained in this condition until the fourth Sunday in June of this year, when they organized another church and called Valentine for their pastor. While this was taking place it pleased the Lord for us to have with us Elders J. E. Alderman and M. D. Brann. We also had two deacons from Elder Alderman's church, Good Hope, all volunteering to come, not knowing what was expected to be done on that day. When they saw what was taking place all acted very quiet and said nothing for or against their organization. Elders Alderman and Brann are men that I consider sound in doctrine and practice. Elder Alderman has done us the favor of volunteering to be our pastor for the present, he being the moderator of the association that the members belonged to when they went into the first organization and the one who baptized some of the members. He said he felt it to be his duty to try to save them from their error. I have written this in love, seeking to know the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord. At this time I have no fellowship for this teaching, because, in my judgment, it links together the chain of events in eternity, and they must come as they do. It puts the disobedient and the obedient child on equal terms, and makes a child of God as passive in obedience as in regeneration, and I do not understand this to be the teaching of the Scriptures.

If this is printed, I will be glad to hear from any who have a mind to write to me, as I am just a young man and need instruction. Brother Cayce, if it be your mind and the Lord's will I would be glad for you to visit us. It is not so very far from Fordyce to where we live. We are about twenty miles south of Eudora, Ark., and we meet on Saturday before the third Sunday in each month. I am sure that you and Elder Alderman are one in doctrine and practice, and I have hope that you might have some influence to save some who are being carried off in this false teaching. If I am wrong I pray to be corrected. J. M. Bukch. Oak Grove, La. REMARKS When men pursue such a course as this man Valentine has, and teach such a doctrine, it is clearly evident that they are trouble makers, and the church and the Lord's little children are better off without their visits. Such efforts to tear a church to pieces cannot be prompted by the Spirit of the Lord. It is a pity that some men will do that way. God is not the author of confusion, but of peace; and when a man brings confusion he is acting from a wrong principle. If there is only one salvation set forth in the Bible, then no man in this wide world can harmonize it. We would be glad to visit you some time, if the good Lord opens the way and we have the opportunity. C. H. C.

Flint River Association

---October 1, 1926

For a number of years there has existed a division in the Flint River Association in South East Georgia. An effort was made to get them all together in a meeting at New Hope, Grady County, Ga., last January, but some of the churches did not represent in the meeting, and the desired object was not accomplished. Recently we made a trip in that country for the purpose of trying to get them all together. We visited most all the churches of both factions, and they all endorsed and adopted the article which we presented to them, as has been stated in our columns already, or in another place. Both sides, or the two associations, are to hold meetings this year, as they had already been appointed, the one called the Original Flint River to meet with the church at Sharon, Donaldsonville, Ga., on the first Sunday in October, the regular time; the other is to meet with the church at New Hope, Grady County, Ga., the first Sunday in November, their regular time. All brethren are invited to attend both meetings, and we hope that matters may then be finally adjusted so as to have but the one meeting of the association in the future-that is, for them to all meet in one body in the future. We are glad that they are all together now, and trust the Lord's blessings may rest upon them. C. H. C.

History Suggested

---October 15, 1926

Brother Odell, I would like to make a suggestion, either to Elder C. H. Cayce or Elder J. S. Newman, that they have one of those old church histories re-published, so all of our younger brethren could have a chance to purchase one and read it. I would be glad if every one of my children had a good church history to read after I am gone. It is true, the Bible is the greatest of all books, but if the order of our people is according to the Scriptures, and I believe with all my heart that it is, then I think it very necessary that we keep up with our history also. If this appeals to any one else, let us have an expression from you. It would take a great many of us to buy enough of them to justify either of them to have a history of that size re-published. If we all knew more about what our forefathers did, we would have a better idea what we could do.- A. J. Webb, in Glad Tidings of Oct. 8, 1926.

REMARKS

For our part we hardly know what old history would be best to re-publish just at this time, or which one would give the most information on some points that seem to most concern our people just at this time. Burkett and Reid History of the Kehukee Association shows that two factions came together in the early day of that association, the two known as Regulars and Separates. Other histories show the same thing in other sections. Griffin's History of the Mississippi Baptists is a good work, and ought to be re-published, but it does not show what Burkett and Reid show in regard to the Kehukee. The first Baptists in Mississippi were the Regulars. Owen's Church History is also a very good work, and we would be glad to see it re-published. But we do not think it gives the information contained in the History of the Kehukee. That information is contained in Hassell's History, but that is now out of print, and is a very large book. It would cost a lot to re-publish that work, or to publish another edition of it. The Hanks History is a very good work and contains a lot of valuable information, but it is very brief and much condensed. For a number of years we tried to gather a good library, especially church histories, and we think we met with good success along that line. We have thought that a good history of our people was much needed-one that is brief, and yet not too brief, but not too much detail, and for a long time we had that in view in gathering our library. But a few years ago we just about gave up the idea of ever trying to publish such a work. We fear that it would be done at a loss, and we are not able to bear a loss-at least not much of a loss. If we had some assurance that our people would purchase such a history we might undertake such a task, though it would require much time, labor and expense. It seems that our people generally are slow to buy books, even though the books be valuable. The book called "Fifty Years Among the Baptists," written by David Benedict, is a very valuable work to our people. It shows very clearly when the new things were introduced that caused the division between our people and the Missionaries, and clearly shows their departures. That book was re-published several years ago by Elder J. S. Newman. He still has a number of them for sale, and we have several hundred that we bought from him. The book sells for one dollar and is well worth twice that amount. It ought to be in every Old Baptist home, and it would be good for every Missionary to read it, as well as for every searcher after truth. We would be glad for our people to wake up and read more good literature and inform themselves along historical lines, as well as along doctrinal and practical lines. C. H. C.

A Confession

---October 15, 1926

I just feel like I have said and written things about Brethren Newman, Collings and Cayce that I should not have done. If I should try to enumerate them I am sure I would fail to think of each one. So I want to ask them to forgive me of all I have said or done that may have hurt their feelings. I often act and speak on the impulse of the moment, which is the wrong time to act.-J. A. Webb, in Glad Tidings, Oct. 8, 1926.

REMARKS

Dear brother, we do not hold a single thing against you, and have not done so. If you have ever said anything or written anything that hurt our feelings we have already forgotten it. Let nothing on that line ever bother you in the least, so far as we are concerned. May the good Lord bless and keep and sustain you by His grace, is our humble prayer. If we have ever hurt your feelings in any way, please forgive us, and remember us in your prayers. We feel to be so poor and needy and to need the prayers of the Lord's dear children. We do humbly pray that peace and fellowship may be restored among the dear Old Baptists before we are called hence. C. H. C.

Not A New Doctrine

---October 15, 1926

We see an article in the Lone (some) Pilgrim from the pen of one Elder C. M. Weaver in which he endeavors to show the doctrine that God absolutely and unconditionally predestinated all things that come to pass, good, bad and indifferent, and the one salvation theory were the principles held to by the Primitive Baptists in Southern Illinois when he joined them. He says he joined them in 1888, and that Elder R. Fuikerson delivered the charge when he was ordained. Elder Weaver says Elder Fuikerson told him that he (Weaver) was preaching the same doctrine that he (Fuikerson) had been preaching for fifty years. If we are not mistaken our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, was one of the presbytery in the ordination of Elder Weaver, and we know he never advocated the one salvation theory. Proof of this is clearly shown in the files of The Primitive Baptist. Elder S. F. Cayce and Elder Richard Fuikerson were agreed in doctrine. If they ever disagreed we never heard of it, and we remember Elder Fuikerson being at father's home. It follows, then, that if Elder Weaver was then preaching the same doctrine Elder Fuikerson had been preaching for fifty years, Elder Weaver was not then preaching the one salvation theory. We have before us at this moment a copy of "A Brief History of the Regular Baptists, Principally of Southern Illinois, by Achilles Coffey. To which an Appendix is Added by Thomas J. Carr." This book was published in 1877-just eleven years before Elder Weaver united with the Primitive Baptists. In this book is a "Biography of Elder A. Coffey," written by Elder R. Fulker-son, and dated January 1, 1877. Elder Fulker-son says: "Having examined his manuscript, I, with all my heart, recommend his little volume to the Regular Baptists, and to all enquirers after truth. There is no man that stands higher among the Regular Baptists than does Elder Coffey, not only among them, but he is a man of good report with them that are without. Having labored to the best of my ability in the same gospel field for the last thirty years, I know whereof I speak." This is a plain and unvarnished endorsement of the doctrine and principles set forth in this history, and a plain statement that Elder Fulker-son advocated the same doctrine set forth in the book. In the "Appendix" written by Thomas J. Carr, we find the contention that there is a salvation that is not eternal. We give the following extended extract from this appendix, beginning on page 170: Paul says, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." -(II Timothy 3:16-17). This is plain, positive testimony. Then if all Scripture is for the purpose of thoroughly furnishing the man of God unto all good works, where is any of it given for any other purpose? Nowhere. Then why should one search the Bible to find a Scripture to overthrow Paul's testimony? He would not have written this to Timothy had it not been the truth. Paul, in writing to the Romans, says: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." -(Romans 1:16). Some contend that this Scripture is applicable to the unbeliever. One or two things is true of this. Either the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, or else it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that does not believe it. Well, which is it? Paul says, "to every one that believeth." Jesus says, "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." -(John 6:47). Again Jesus says, "He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life." -(John 5:24). Hence "every one that believeth" is passed from death unto life, and, as a matter of course, is a "man of God," and the Scripture is for the purpose of thoroughly furnishing him unto all good works. Here, then, is a perfect harmony seen between the two quotations from Paul. But how can the gospel be the power of God unto salvation to one who is saved already? Timothy was one of the "saved already" when Paul was writing to him, yet he says, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." -(I Timothy 4:16). This cannot have reference to eternal salvation from two considerations; first, Timothy was at that time a young preacher of the gospel; second, if he was to save himself and them that heard him, there would have been no necessity for Jesus Christ, since Timothy, in this case would not only be his own saviour, but the saviour of them that heard him, be they many or few. Paul tells how Timothy and himself were saved; that is how their eternal salvation was accomplished: "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." -(II Timothy 1:9). From the above quotation we see his eternal salvation did not depend upon, nor was it "according to our works." But the salvation that Paul was writing to Timothy concerning did depend upon "in doing this." Paul, in giving his charge to the elders at Ephesus, says: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves and to all the flock," etc.; "for I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them." -(0:28) (Acts 20:28-30). And again, "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." -(Ephesians 4:14). "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies," etc., "and many shall follow their pernicious ways." -(II Peter 2:1-2). By Timothy taking "heed" to himself and to the doctrine he saved himself and them that heard him (the flock) from "grievous wolves;" saved from being drawn away by men speaking "perverse things;" saved from being "carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;" saved from those "damnable heresies" privily brought in by false teachers; saved from following "their pernicious ways;" in short, they were saved from every false way. This is sufficient to show the doctrine then taught by Thomas Carr, Elders Coffey and Fulkerson. If Elder Fulkerson had been preaching the same doctrine all the time up to the time of the ordination of Elder Weaver, and if Elder Weaver was then preaching the same doctrine that Elder Fulkerson preached, then Elder Weaver is not preaching the same doctrine now that he was preaching then. He must be one of the number who has brought in some of the "damnable heresies" referred to by the apostle and quoted by Thomas Carr. If God's people would take heed, they might save themselves from such teaching as is promulgated by some. C. H. C.

Thinking of Mother

---November 1, 1926

Today is October 13, 1926. Two years ago today we saw our precious mother fall asleep in Jesus. She had suffered much-no mortal knows how much. She was ready and willing and anxious to go home and be with the blessed Saviour whom she loved and delighted to serve. We have been thinking today much about that dear mother, who cared for us in our infant and childhood days. We have been thinking of her great love and tender care for us, notwithstanding our many wrongs, mistakes, failures and shortcomings. Mother's love was so great that she was always ready to forgive and to make excuses for our mistakes and wrongs. She cared for us when we could not care for ourselves. She loved her children with all the fondness of a mother's love. When we grew up, her love was still as strong and as fond as when we were in infancy and childhood. Mother rejoiced when she knew we had received a blessed hope in Jesus. She rejoiced when we finally went to the church and asked for a home there-at Greenfield, Tenn., on the second Sunday in August, 1889. When we met with sorrows and reverses, it was mother who wept and grieved with us. When we began to try to speak in the name of the Master, mother tried to encourage us, and would assure us that the Lord would bless us and care for us and would not forsake us, and that we should be true to Him and His cause. It was mother who would often tell us how our feeble efforts to speak in the name of the Lord, and our efforts to proclaim the sweet story of salvation by grace, had comforted her and encouraged her along life's rugged pathway. Mother! Mother! How sweet is that word! We so often went to mother for counsel and advice. It was mother who would often say, when we started away from home on a preaching tour, "Son, be careful what you say, and be careful how you say it. Do not be too quick to speak. And do not say hard things." What good advice! What a pity we do not all heed such good counsel and advice. May the good Lord help us to remember it and heed it. We have been thinking today of our thirty-seventh birthday, June 1st, 1908. On that day we had been toiling hard until the afternoon. We were tired and worn out and so much cast down and discouraged. Mother came into the office and sat down near us and laid a package on our desk, and said, "Here is a present for you." We thanked her for it, and felt so glad that mother remembered us. She said, "Open it and see what it is." We turned and unwrapped the bundle, and there we saw a beautiful old-fashioned pound cake, made by mother's own dear and loving hands. On the cake was a little note, nicely folded and a pin stuck through it into the cake. We took the note and unfolded it and read these words, "Thirty-seven years ago today I was the proud mother of a sweet baby boy. Today I am the proud mother of an able Primitive Baptist minister. Mother." This was written with her own dear hand. We could not keep back the tears. They flowed freely, and we could not keep from embracing her in our arms. That sweet and tender and loving note lies before us on our desk now. We carry it with us where we go. We have been carrying it now these eighteen years and more. We expect to keep it as long as we live in this old world. We feel today to thank God for such a mother. Many times she has come to our bedside in the dark hours of the night, and we could feel the tender touch of mother's loving hands, when she had come to see if all was well with her boy, when all others were asleep; and then she would often go down on her knees and send up a prayer to a throne of God's rich grace for her boy when she thought we were asleep. It was mother who never became weary or too tired to minister to us in our afflictions. It was mother who would sit up with us through the dark watches of the night and give us the medicine on time. It was mother's dear hands that would soothe our aching head. It was mother who toiled on for her child as long as she was able to toil. But now she is resting from all her labors, and we are sure that in spirit she is now in the presence of the blessed Saviour. We miss her so much. God bless her memory. We hope to see her again some day, and somehow we feel that it will not be long- and it will not be long, even if we live to a ripe old age. Lord, help us to honor the name of our blessed mother! When we were in Martin, Tenn., recently-Monday morning, September 20—we visited father's and mother's grave. There we silently wept and prayed the good Lord to care for us and to help us to live in such a way as to honor their memory, and never bring reproach upon the cause they so dearly loved. Lord, help us to serve Thee better and to love Thee more while we stay upon earth. Help us to rear our children in a way that father and mother would approve, that they may be an honor to their parents and grandparents. Help us to rear them to respect Thy church and people; and, if it be Thy will, give them a good hope in Jesus, and spare us to see some of them follow the Lord in the ordinances of His house. Lord, help us. C. H. C.

---November 1, 1926

In our issue of September 15 we gave an account of the meeting of the Big Sandy Association, which was held at West Plains Church, near Milan, Tenn., on Friday, Saturday and first Sunday in September, and of our visit to New Hope Church on Monday following. We were at New Hope again on Tuesday and enjoyed a very pleasant meeting. On Wednesday and Thursday we were at Old Gibson Church. Only a small congregation present. On Friday, Saturday and second Sunday we were at the Forked Deer Association, which was held with Mill Creek Church, near Bells, Tenn. A good crowd was present every day. The following named ministers were in attendance: Elders J. W. Adams, W. C. Davis, John Grist, A. W. DeBerry, R. L. Perry, T. M. Hampton, L. D. Hamilton, T. L. Webb, J. A. Robinson, C. H. Cayce, Cayce Pentecost, A. B. Sides, C. F. Parker. The preaching was all harmonious, and not a discord was heard. There were several additions to the church, and the meeting was much enjoyed. Sunday afternoon we went with Brother Perry to Union City, where there was an appointment made for that night. Had meeting there that night, Monday and Monday night, and it was a pleasant meeting with good congregations at each service. Brother Webb went down to Rutherford Monday evening to fill an appointment there that night. Tuesday morning we went down there and went out to Flowers Chapel, where we had meeting Tuesday and Wednesday. Thursday we filled the appointment at Rutherford Fork Church. Friday, Saturday and third Sunday we attended the Greenfield Association, which was held with Greenfield Church, in Greenfield, Tenn. They had service every day and night, besides service at two or three other places at night. Twenty-four ministers were in attendance, whose names were: Elders J. C. Ross, A. B. Ross, Henry Ross, R. L. Perry, Z. Stallings, John Grist, Cayce Pentecost, Commodore Brann, L. D. Hamilton, S. E. Reid, T. L. Webb, T. M. Phillips, B. P. Simmons, W. L. Murray, J. B. Hardy, J. W. Hardwick, C. F. Parker, J. E. Shackelford, J. B. Halbrook, J. S. Clayton, M. D. Brann, J. S. Williams, M. J. Perry and C. H. Cayce. Large crowds were in attendance and the meeting was an enjoyable one. All was peace and harmony. From Greenfield Brother Webb turned back toward home. He had been with us all along during the trip to this time. We were sorry to separate from him and that he could not go with us the remainder of the trip. We enjoyed traveling with him very much. He is a pleasant traveling companion. We pray the Lord to bless him in his labors at every place he may go. From this association we filled appointments as follows: Martin, our old home, Sunday night; Blooming Grove, Monday and Tuesday. This is a church with about 140 members, and a church we served years ago. A very good crowd was present each day. Wednesday we were at Matheny Grove. A very good congregation was present, and we had a very pleasant meeting there. We had never been to that church before, as they were organized since we left Tennessee. On Thursday we were at Little Zion. We think this church has a membership of between sixty and seventy, and there was one male member present at the service, and a few of the sisters. Elder J. B. Halbrook was with us, and we returned to his home with him, and he conveyed us on to the next place. Friday, Saturday and fourth Sunday we were at the Obion Association, which was held with the church at Union, near McKenzie, Tenn. A good crowd was at this meeting on Sunday, though not a very large crowd on Friday and Saturday. The following brethren in the ministry were in attendance: Elders J. B. Hardy, J. N. Wallace, J. W. Hardwick, C. F. Parker, J. W. Lomax, J. B. Halbrook, J. S. Clayton, W. G. Davis, W. R. Rushton, J. R. Scott, H. N. Oliver, Z. Stallings and C. H. Cayce. The preaching was all harmonious, and no hobby riding was indulged in. It was a sweet meeting. We filled the appointment Sunday night at McKenzie which had been made for us there, but having received a telephone message that day to go to Bradford Monday to attend a funeral service, the appointment for Monday was called in. Early Monday morning we took the train for Milan, where we changed cars for Bradford, Tenn. Having about two hours to wait at Milan we went to the home of Elder J. W. Adams and spent the time with him and Sister Adams. We arrived at Bradford on time and learned that we were wanted to conduct the funeral of Brother John Brasfield, whose home was in that place. We did the best we could to speak words of comfort to the bereaved companion and relatives, and were assisted in the service by Rev. Baker, Rev. Davis and Rev. Ralph. Rev. Davis is pastor of the Missionary Baptist Church there; Rev. Baker is the pastor of the Methodist Church, and Rev. Ralph was the former pastor of the Methodist Church there, and was a good friend to the family. A large crowd attended the service, which attested the high esteem in which Brother Brasfield was held in the community. On Tuesday and Wednesday we were at Harmony Church, near Bradford. Only a small crowd present. Wednesday night we were with the church in Jackson. Elders A. B. Ross and S. E. Reid came in unexpectedly and were with us there. A good crowd turned out and the meeting was a very pleasant one. Thursday we were with the church at Brown's Creek, near Brownsville, and had a very pleasant meeting with them. Friday, Saturday and first Sunday in October we attended the Mississippi River Association, which was held with the church at Mt. Tabor, near Whiteville, Tenn. The following brethren in the ministry were present: Elders D. Hopper, James Duncan, A. B. Ross, W. A. Bishop, J. T. Davis, S. E. Reid, J. W. Adams, J. S. Gaugh, T. E. Bishop and C. H. Cayce. The preaching was all of one piece; all preaching peace by Jesus Christ. There were two additions to the church on Saturday and two on Sunday. It was a time of great rejoicing. May the Lord be praised for His wonderful mercy to the children of men. On Monday we were with the church at Mt. Pisgah, near Somerville, Tenn. It was a very pleasant meeting, though a small crowd present. This is the home church of Elder J. T. Davis, who was with us there. After service Monday we boarded the train at Somerville for home, and arrived home Tuesday morning at 4:27. Our wife and little girl and boy (Florida and Claudis, Jr.) met us at the train. We found all well at home, for which we felt to be so thankful to the good Lord, and felt glad to once more see our dear loved ones at home. The section we visited is the section where we lived for so long, and we were glad to meet so many dear brethren and sisters with whom we once associated so much. We trust they may be enabled by the Lord's grace to continue in the good old way, and that they may be found walking in the path of obedience and be truly devoted to the cause of the Master. May the Lord bless them for their kindness to us. If we meet no more in this world of sorrow and sadness, we hope we shall meet in that better home on high. Remember us, please, in your petitions at the throne of grace. C. H. C.

Is It Of The Devil?

---November 15, 1926

In the Lone (some) Pilgrim for September, 1926, under the heading, "Close of Volume Four," and over the signature of H. F. H., we find the following language: Conditional time salvation is not Primitive Baptist doctrine, never has been, and never will be. It is not taught in the experience of God's children, neither is it taught in the Bible, by the Lord or by any of His prophets. Satan preached it to our mother Eve in the garden of Eden, when he said, if you will do something right here in time you will better your condition, and be as wise as God. This was the origin of conditional time salvation. The above is not exact quotation but carries the meaning. Satan also preached this doctrine in Job's day, and every time it has been preached from that -day to this, it has come from the same source. Bildad preached it to poor old Job, but it was no comfort to him, and it has never been any comfort to God's people, and never will be, because it is not the truth. Any one who can fellowship this doctrine of the devil, or those who preach it, has no business in the Old Baptist Church. We copy the above without any correction in punctuation or language. Notice that this editor says this doctrine is not taught in the Bible by the Lord or by any of His prophets. What a wonder! "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." --(9) (Isaiah 1:19-20). Here is something promised to the Israelites on condition that they be willing and obedient, which is that they shall eat the good of the land. On the other hand, if they refuse and rebel the sentence is that they shall be devoured with the sword. Here was a blessing on condition of obedience and punishment on condition of disobedience. Isaiah was a prophet of God, and he said it. He also said that "the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." But the learned and wonderful editor of the Lone (some) Pilgrim says the Lord never taught such a doctrine, and neither did any of His prophets. If the Lord did not teach it, then Isaiah lied; and if he lied about this matter, then he was not a prophet of God. Did Isaiah tell a falsehood? No. Was he a true prophet? Yes. Then, who told the truth-Isaiah or this great modern editor? Then this editor says that Satan preached that doctrine in the garden of Eden, and then claims he gave the meaning of what Satan said. Instead of giving the meaning of the conversation and the substance of what was said, he actually garbled the whole thing. Satan never said you will "be as wise as God." He said, "Ye shall not surely die, for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." - (Genesis 3:4-5). God "had said, "For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." -(Genesis 2:17). Here God in His law threatened death, punishment, on condition of disobedience, or transgression of His law. The devil said, "ye shall not surely die." The editor of the Lone-(some) Pilgrim says there is not any such thing as punishment or joys on conditions of disobedience or obedience-the same doctrine the devil taught. Right there God promised punishment as a result of transgression of His law. The editor denies that doctrine and teaching. We kindly ask, Who is it that is teaching the doctrine of the devil-that editor, or the people he brazenly assails? Again, he says the doctrine he assails is not taught in the experience of God's children. We suppose he means by this expression that he has never experienced any such thing. Perhaps he has not experienced it; but we venture to say that when the Lord's children came home to the church-those who have done so-and followed the Saviour in baptism, that they received an ease of mind and peace of conscience they never enjoyed before. They enjoyed a saving that they never enjoyed before. They left a burden that they have never had since.

Thus the Lord's children learn by experience the truth of that doctrine. "Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." -((Pet 3:20) (I Peter 3:20-21). Here the inspired apostle declares that eight souls were saved in the ark by water. The editor of the Lone (some) Pilgrim denies that there is any more than one saving, and teaches that that saving is eternal. If he is right in his teaching then Noah and his family were saved with an eternal saving by water. And the inspired apostle says baptism is a figure like that, hence, it is like that. Then if Noah and his family were saved with an eternal salvation by water, then baptism now saves with an eternal salvation. Let the great editor escape this conclusion if he can! Remember that the inspired apostle emphatically declares that baptism does now save us! Does it? It either does, or it does not. The editor says there is no such thing as a saving on condition of doing something; but the inspired apostle says we are saved by baptism. And we are saved by it as Noah and his family were saved by water. Noah was a child of God before the flood came. Hence he was not saved in eternity, or with an eternal salvation, by water. As the saving by baptism is like that, then we are not saved with an eternal salvation by baptism. But we are saved by baptism, for the apostle said so. Will the kind (?) editor please condescend to tell us what kind of saving it is? "For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." -(Romans 8:13). This language was addressed by the inspired apostle to the church of God at Rome. No living man on earth, who knows the meaning of simple English words, can deny that there are conditions in this text. The conditions are not to the unregenerate, as the Arminian world teaches; but they are to the children of God, those who have been born of God. This is the doctrine that Primitive Baptists have taught all along in contending against the Arminian world, and we are inclined to believe the editor knows it. Perhaps he does not. He may take either horn of the dilemma he chooses. Note that the editor says that those who can fellowship this doctrine or those who preach it have no business in the Old Baptist Church. They were in the Old Baptist Church before he was born. But the editor here declares non-fellowship for those who do not see as he does, and would read them out of the denomination. What a pity he is not the ruler! But we would judge that if his doctrine is the truth, and there are some in the Primitive Baptist Church who do not believe his doctrine, it is because God unconditionally predestinated and decreed from all eternity that they should be there; and when he is kicking about them being there, and raising objection to it, he is only kicking against God's predestination and objecting to it. We wonder if his objection will have such weight as to bring about a change in that predestination? We suppose not, since he says that everything that transpires is a link in the chain of events which God welded in eternity. If the spirit the editor manifests is of the Lord, and if his doctrine is the doctrine of God, the Lord did not tell us about it in His Book. Poor fellow. He is apparently striking at everything in sight and out of sight. It reminds us of some blind reptiles in dog days. May the Lord continue to deliver His poor and afflicted people from such unreasonable men. C. H. C.

Do Not Pay Him

---November 16,1926

In the Lone Pilgrim for September, 1926, the editor complains that some of his brethren do not pay him what they owe him on subscription. He says, "The majority of these people who owe us have membership in the Primitive Baptist Church, and claim to be honest. Why they will not pay we are unable to tell." Why, brother, if your doctrine is the truth, the problem seems to us to be one very easy of solution. It is simply this: The reason why they do not pay you is because God did, from all eternity, absolutely and unconditionally predestinate that they should not pay you. That is bound to be the solution of the matter, because you teach that God did, from all eternity, absolutely and unconditionally predestinate everything that comes to pass, and they all have to be just that way. But, say, does it not seem as though, if his charge against his brethren be true, he has a lot of dishonest brethren? And he says he took 700 names off his list, and some of them over two years in arrears, and he sent them notices and less than 10 per cent of them paid. They must be a bad lot, according to what the editor says about them. But, according to his doctrine, they have to be that way. C. H. C.

A Society

---November 15, 1926

We have received a request from a sister to give our views in regard to some kind of a society being formed wherein the sisters meet once a week at some home and read the Bible and sing, and each one contribute what she is able, so they may have funds on hand when needed. The sister asks if this is Scriptural. If there is anything like this in the Bible, we do not remember it. The deacons of the church are the ones who should have in charge the financial affairs of the church. That is what they were first appointed for. The contributions should be put in the hands of the deacons, and not in the hands of some society. What is done, should be done in the name of the church, and not in the name of a number of sisters meeting at each other's homes. There is no Scriptural example for it, and we are furnished in the Scriptures with everything we should practice religiously. It is just as much wrong to practice something not commanded as it is to leave undone what the Scriptures expressly command. There is no command in the Scriptures for any sort of society beside the church. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume Forty-Two

---January 1, 1927

This issue begins volume forty-two of The Primitive Baptist. We should have written an article for the last issue on the close of volume forty-one, but we were away from home on a tour in South Georgia when the manuscript was prepared for that issue of the paper, and we overlooked it. We beg our readers to pardon the oversight. We have been trying to make The Primitive Baptist an Old Baptist paper. As to how well we have succeeded in doing this we leave the readers to judge. We are well aware of the fact that we cannot please all. If the brethren or churches are in trouble in some section, and they call on us to go among them to help them adjust their differences and settle their troubles, and we do not go (let the reason be what it may), then we are severely criticised and found fault with because we do not go. If we answer the call and go to them and do the very best we can to get them together, then some find fault with us because we go among them and try to help them. Sometimes the criticism is very severe and rough. Sometimes we publish an article containing some sentiment that some person does not like. Perhaps he writes an article criticising the sentiment or expression of the other brother. To publish the article would put us under obligation to give the other brother space for a reply, and that would open our columns to a controversy. These controversies over points upon which we should have forbearance, and upon which differences of opinion should be allowed, are the things that frequently cause troubles that are uncalled for. Under such circumstances we must refuse publication. When we do that we usually incur the displeasure of the writer, and sometimes we get a "good dressing up." These are only a few of the things we have to meet with and encounter along the way. We are sure that if the Lord spares our life and we continue the publication of The Primitive Baptist there will be trials and conflicts during the year 1927, as well as all along through the years we may yet live. Still, we find no place to turn back or to be a deserter. We do not wish to be a "slacker." It is our desire to do our whole duty, as best we can, and to serve the Lord with reverence and with godly fear, and to serve His people with the ability He may see fit to give us.

These are trying times in many respects. We are living in a fast age, and all seem to be in a mad rush- no time for serious and weighty matters which should be of more concern to us than all the things of this world. The slump in the price of cotton makes us all think we must begin to curtail on our expenditures and cut down expenses at once. When we think of that, many of us begin to cut out expenditures at once toward church or religious things. Perhaps about the first thing we think of is to do without our church paper- not absolutely the first,' but about the first thing we think of may be this. So we write to the editor to stop our paper. Perhaps we continue taking the newspaper, which contains much reading matter our homes would be better off without. Perhaps we spend many times more than the price of the paper for gasoline for joy riding-and perhaps our children would be much better off if the joy riding were cut out. These are just a few things some of us might do well to think about. Many of the Lord's dear children are in isolated places and are deprived of the blessing and privilege of hearing the gospel preached. Many of them write us that all the preaching they get is what they get through The Primitive Baptist. If the paper is supported it thus carries a blessing and a joy to so many of the Lord's dear children who are deprived of the privilege many of us enjoy. If you are blessed with the privilege of attending the public service of the Lord and of meeting with His children, and you continue as a subscriber to the paper, you thus help to carry the blessing to those who are deprived of the privilege. Have you ever thought about how you are thus helping to carry such a blessing to so many of the Lord's dear children when you pay a year's subscription to The Primitive Baptist? The paper could not exist upon the subscriptions of those, only, who are in such an isolated condition. Others besides those in that condition must take the paper if it continues to exist. Are you not willing to help the small amount of the subscription price of the paper in such a work for the benefit of the Lord's little children who are thus deprived of the blessing you enjoy? Our readers know of the clubbing proposition which has been published in every issue of the paper for several months-to take clubs of new subscribers at a reduced rate for the purpose of trying to increase the list of subscribers to where we could get the paper out weekly instead of twice a month. Some have thought this was not fair to the old subscribers. If a sufficient number of new subscribers could have been added to the list to justify us in sending the paper out weekly, the old subscribers would get the benefit of the increase without extra cost to them. Yet some have thought we should accept renewals at the same rate we offered for new subscribers. The truth of the matter is that if we were to reduce the price of the paper to that which we offered for these clubs of new names we would soon have to go out of business, for that price to all subscribers would not pay the actual cost of sending the paper out. Since the issue of April 1st, 1926, was sent out there has been a net gain of just 240 names to the list. This lacks a large number of being enough to justify us in making the change to a weekly. We are now discontinuing these club offers. We appreciate what the brethren have done in getting new subscribers. Several of the brethren have done good work in that way, but not enough have taken an interest in it to increase the list to where we could make the change to a weekly. If all would put forth an extra effort for the next few months to send in new subscribers perhaps we could make the change soon. Will you try and do your best along that line during this month? Ask the brethren and friends to try the paper one year at the regular rate. It is our desire to continue to try to make The Primitive Baptist an Old Baptist paper. It is our great desire to improve, and to try to make the paper a benefit to the cause of the Master. We desire to "strive for the things that make for peace, and the things wherewith one may edify another." We desire to conduct the paper in such a way as to promote the peace and happiness of the Lord's dear children. We are well aware that trials and conflicts and afflictions await us along the way, "but none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." -Acts xx. 24. We would be glad if our corresponding editors would take a little more interest in the paper than some of them have. Some of them never even so much as write us a line. We hope they will try to help us out a little more this year by writing and soliciting subscribers. Brethren, will you do this? We desire an interest in the prayers of all who love the cause we are trying to promote and who love our Lord Jesus. C. H. C.

Lordship Among the Ministry

---January 1, 1927

The following article was read in the meeting at Jackson, Tenn., which began on Friday before the fifth Sunday in October, 1926:

Brethren, you have assigned to me a hard subject, "The baneful effect of the spirit of lordship among the ministry," and I have had very little time to study the subject. We need to be warned against such a spirit, and we need to watch ourselves, that we do not allow ourselves to be governed by it. I understand a spirit of lordship to be a spirit of mastery; a spirit to rule, to control, to have things our way, or not at all. The very word minister conveys a meaning that is the opposite of lordship or master. It really means to serve, a servant. Jesus said, "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your servant; even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many!" - ((0:25) (Matthew 20:25-28). To exercise lordship is to exercise dominion, to rule and to control, to exercise authority. Jesus says "it shall not be so among you." Hence it is very clear and manifest that such a spirit is not to prevail-and should not be indulged in by the ministry of the church of Christ. This text also shows very clearly that the minister is to be a servant, and not a lord or master; that he is not to exercise authority or dominion. Jesus our Saviour came to minister, to serve. The spirit of service is of the Lord, and the spirit of lordship is from beneath; it is a bad spirit. It brings trouble, sorrow and distress to the hearts of the Lord's dear children. It divides families, homes, neighborhoods and churches. But here the question may be asked, "Are not ministers to be overseers of the flock, and has not the Lord appointed them as such?" Yes, that is true. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which He hath purchased with His own blood." - (0:28) (Acts 20:28). This is the language of the eminent Apostle Paul to the elders of the church at Ephesus when he had sent for them to show what should be done, and how it should be done. An overseer is not a master or lord; that is, from a Scriptural standpoint. And an overseer, according to Paul's instruction here, is one that is to feed, not to rule or control, or to exercise dominion. The inspired Apostle Peter also gives us some instruction along the same line: "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock." - (Pet 5:1) (I Peter 5:1-3). From this we see that for a minister to take the oversight of the flock, to be an overseer of the flock, is not for him to be a lord or a ruler over them, but to be an ensample to them. It is his work and his business to set right examples before them, so as to show by precept and example how the Lord would have His children live and walk and to conduct themselves here in this world. "Neither as being lords over God's heritage." The marginal reference says, "overruling." That is, not ruling over. The minister, or the elder, is positively forbidden to rule over God's heritage, or His people, or His church. He is to serve them and not to rule over them. As he is to serve them, they are to have authority over him, rather than for him to have authority over them. For him to assume authority to be a ruler and to assume lordship, is akin to the sin of presumption. "But the soul that doeth aught presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the Lord; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people." - ((Num 15:30) (Numbers 15:30). For one of God's ministers to be governed by, or to manifest, the spirit of lordship is for him to presume to be what the Lord has not made him, which is presumption, or to act presumptuously; and he who acts presumptuously reproaches the Lord, and God says that "soul shall be cut off from among his people." In (4) (Ezekiel 34:4) the Lord tells the shepherds of Israel that "with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them." The "them" were the children of Israel. By reading this chapter we will find that the children of Israel suffered as a result of the cruelty and the ruling of the shepherds. National Israel were a type of spiritual Israel. Surely no Primitive Baptist will deny this. As they were a type of spiritual Israel, and such a spirit among the shepherds in that day brought trouble, sorrow and distress, it will bring the same in this day among spiritual Israel. Perhaps it may not be amiss to call attention to the fact also that the Lord pronounced a curse upon the shepherds, and said, "Behold, I am against the shepherds, and I will require my flock at their hand."

This entire chapter might be good reading for us, that we may be warned and get a lesson there from that might do us some good. Let me quote at some length from this chapter, beginning with the first verse: And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God unto the shepherds; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them. And they were scattered, because there is no shepherd: and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them. Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord; As I live, saith the Lord God, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock; therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord; Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them." -(Ezekiel 34:1-10). When the minister of the Lord is being controlled by a spirit of lordship, of master or ruler, the diseased are not strengthened, the sick are not healed, that which is broken is not bound up, that which is driven away is not brought again, and those who are lost are not found; the Lord's little children are scattered, and they wander in the desert hungry and crying for food, and are devoured by their adversaries. What a deplorable state and condition! Language fails me to describe the sorrows, distresses, sore afflictions and heartaches resulting from such a spirit! And such a great woe pronounced against the shepherds or ministers possessing such a spirit! Brethren, have we ever been possessed of it? Have any of us been "weighed in the balance and found wanting" along this line? If so, let us humble ourselves in dust and ashes; let us humble ourselves under the mighty hand of our God; let us humbly beg Him to forgive our folly and our wrongs, and that His fierce anger may be turned away from us, and that He may restore unto us the joys of His salvation and pour out a blessing upon us; that He may bring our children and neighbors and their children into His blessed fold, and that He would help us to feed them upon the pure and sincere milk of the word. If we have been acting under this bad and evil spirit, let us begin now, if we have not already done so, to endeavor, the best we possibly can, to make amends for our wrongs. We need to devote our time to the service the Lord requires of us. The minister is not to be a lord or master, but a servant. "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." -(II Corinthians 4:5). Let me digress long enough to say the apostle did not mean by the expression, "We preach not ourselves," that it is not us doing the preaching-that the Lord is preaching through us-but he meant that we do not preach our own power or authority, but that it is Christ Jesus the Lord, and His power, that we preach, and not ourselves; but 'ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." The true minister is a servant of the Lord and a servant of the church-your servants. This fact that we are your servants is for Jesus' sake. The Lord calls His ministers and lays the obligation upon them. They are under obligation to the Lord and to the church. A servant is under obligation to the master, and the apostle says, "ourselves your servants" - not your lords or rulers. The master is the boss. When a servant gets the idea that he is the boss, and that the business cannot be conducted without him, he is then in such a condition that the business would get along better without him than with him. A true servant is willing to endure afflictions. "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory." -(II Timothy 2:10). Paul also instructs Timothy to be a partaker of the afflictions of the gospel. {(II Timothy 1:8)} We may rest assured that if we are the Lord's true ministers, and if we fill the place of servants to Him and His people, there are afflictions for us to endure. The fields are white unto harvest. The harvest is great, and the laborers are few. Are we praying the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into the harvest? How often do you hear a prayer to the Lord to send laborers in these days? We need them. We need faithful men. We need men that are true. We need men who love the cause of the Master. We need men who desire the welfare of the Lord's little children. May the Lord give us such men. C. H. Cayce.

Church Evidence

---January 15, 1927

A brother writes us as follows: "Will you please answer, through the columns of your paper, this question: What should a church do when a slanderous report is circulated on one of her members and the church believes the report, but has no church evidence to prove it?" Of course we understand the brother desires to know what course we think a church should pursue under such circumstances. We give our opinion, though we are well aware of the fact that we may be wrong. In the first place we would say that it is detrimental to the member as well as detrimental to the church for a slanderous report to be in circulation on the member. This being true, it seems evident to us that if the member is innocent he would want an investigation to be made by the church, so that the church could exonerate him from any guilt. So, from this standpoint, for the good and benefit and welfare of her member, who may have a slanderous report circulated against him, the church should thoroughly investigate the report. If it is found to be without foundation, then the church can and should exonerate the member. This would be for the good of the member and for the good of the church. On the other hand, if the member is guilty, the church should know it. The way for the church to know it is by investigating the matter thoroughly. If a member is guilty of some grave charge, and the matter is in general circulation, it is detrimental to the church to not investigate the matter and deal with the member according to the seriousness of the crime. As to the matter of church evidence, we only have to say that there may be matters which could never be proven by the testimony of a member of the church. A member of the church is not supposed to engage in many ungodly things the world engages in, or to visit many places men of the world visit. If a member of the church engages in some such practice, or visits some such places, he may do so and no other member ever be a witness to the fact. Under such circumstances, if it is necessary to have the testimony of another church member, nothing could be done. Another member being a witness would prove that he himself had been engaged in something or been to some place, perhaps, where he had no business. Testimony of a credible witness, one who has a reputation for truth and veracity, should be accepted by the church when she has no evidence within her own borders. Of course all the circumstances in such a case should be weighed carefully and calmly. The church should be well assured that prejudice does not weigh in the matter of the testimony, and other matters concerning the affair. How important it is that the members of the church should live above reproach and above suspicion. They should live in such a way as to never bring reproach upon the cause of our blessed Master. May He help us to live in such a way as to honor and glorify His name. C. H. C.

Elder Petty's Name Dropped

---February 1, 1927

We are very sorry, indeed, that it has become necessary to drop Elder M. E. Petty's name from our staff of corresponding editors. This will, perhaps, be a surprise to many of our readers, while many others are, no doubt, wondering already why we have not done so. We feel it is due to our readers and to Elder Petty that we here give some of our reasons for doing this. Our readers will remember that a peace meeting was called to be held at New Hope Church, in the Flint River Association, in Georgia, the fifth Sunday in last January, and that the meeting was held according to appointment. There were two Flint River Associations, or rather the Flint River Association had been divided for a number of years. It will be remembered that several of the churches in what is known as the Original Flint River Association did not represent in that meeting. The Original Flint River Association was the home association of Elder Petty. He was moderator of it. That meeting caused a disruption and division in Tired Creek Church. At Elder Petty's request we visited that section in the summer, or early fall, and went to as many of the churches on each side as we had the time to visit, for the purpose of making an effort to get the churches all together. We presented a proposition to each church which we termed "Gospel Terms of Peace," and every church endorsed it except Elder Petty's home church. When we got to Tired Creek we presented a proposition upon which that church could and did come together. Elder Petty stoutly refused to recognize the coming together of Tired Creek Church. When the Original Flint River Association met at Donaldsonville, according to previous arrangement and understanding, Elder Petty's church did not represent, though they had been in that association all the while; but it was understood that any of the churches which had endorsed the settlement might represent in either body they pleased. When the Little Flint River (we use this term only in order to designate or distinguish them from the others) met on Friday before the first Sunday in November at New Hope, Elder Petty's church had a letter and messengers there to represent in that body. But some of the churches of the Original Flint River had a grievance against that church, and had sent messengers with complaint and were ignored. So the Little Flint River refused to receive and seat the messengers from that church, and gave as their reason that some of the churches of the Original Flint River had a grievance against them, and advised them that if they would adjust their differences they might then be received. To have received them, the way matters stood, would have been to set aside all the adjustment of the trouble that had existed so long and destroyed all the work of settlement that had been done. Elder Petty has written us some very ugly letters since that association, and we have not made any reply. He also wrote some very ugly letters to Elder Turnip-seed. In a letter to Elder Turnipseed dated Nov. 29, 1926, Elder Petty says, "It is strange that Brother * * * who told me and wrote me letters (I have the letters yet) * * * and later he worked around through you and Elders Cayce, Bartlett and others and got in with some of the disorderly churches that he found out that I wasn't willing to take into the peace meeting without a correction of their disorder, and made a trade with Elders * * * that you all would swallow the whole thing with all the disorder of four churches if they would combine with you to destroy me and church." Remember that Elder Petty claimed that the object of the peace meeting was to unite the two associations, or the two parties of the Flint River, and to get them all together. Here he says there were four churches he was not willing should be taken into the peace meeting. Those four churches were not in what we will designate as the Davis side, for he was there from his church to represent with them, as stated above. Where, then, were those four churches? Evidently they were four churches that were in the Original Flint River Association. Now what is the necessary conclusion? It cannot be otherwise than that he was engineering a plan to divide his own association. This statement from the brother in that letter plainly discloses this fact. We are sorry this is true, but we are not responsible for it. We begged and plead with Brother Petty when we were there visiting those churches, but our pleadings did no good. There can be no course, then, for us to pursue only to remove his name from our staff of corresponding editors. We truly hope he may see the error of his way and confess his wrongs and become reconciled to the brethren. C. H. C.

Back on the Staff

---February 1, 1927

For several years the name of Elder H. B. Wilkinson, of Claxton, Ga., was on our staff of corresponding editors. In some way, and we do not know how, his name was dropped off the staff. While we were on our tour in South Georgia in November we were with Elder Wilkinson and talked with him in regard to this matter, and he consented for us to put his name back on the staff. We are glad to do this, for we esteem him very highly, and do not know how his name came to be left off. On the trip mentioned we visited Brother Wilkinson's home church, and other churches of his care, and enjoyed our stay with those good brethren. We were with a number of other brethren in the ministry for several days, and enjoyed their company, among them being Elder Bowen. We would have been glad to have written a short account of the trip, but other matters interfered so that we could not do so. We enjoyed the trip, and appreciate the kindness shown us, though we feel unworthy of it. May the Lord bless them, every one of them, we met and showed us such kindness. We hope we may meet them again some day-if not in this world of troubles and sorrows, then in a better world beyond. We ask each one of you to remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Should Report Them

---February 1, 1927

We are in receipt of a letter containing the following statement and question: "I live in a neighborhood where they are making and selling whisky all the time. I have young boys, and they give my boys the whisky to drink. Will it be wrong for anyone to tell the officers and let them catch them-or just let it be, and have our boys and girls ruined?" To us it seems that there can be but one answer-and that is, report them, if you know who to report. We would try, too, to teach our children the great wrong in having anything to do with such traffic, how it will bring shame and ruin upon them. But we certainly would report people who would give the stuff to our children; and we would certainly try to help the officers to catch them. And we would be much grieved to live in such a community, especially if we could find no other sort there for our children to associate with. It seems to us that our country is getting in a mighty bad way morally and otherwise. May the good Lord help us. C. H. C.

Claim They Are Not Excluded

---February 15, 1927

In our issue of January 1 is an article stating that C. Z. Hanks and others were excluded from South Fork Church in Texas. We have received an article in reply to that, in which they claim they are not excluded and that the church is divided, etc. Now, there we are. One side tells us they are excluded, and the other side tells us they are not excluded, and that it is a divided church over a question of order, and so on. Now, then, the thing that worries us is this: What do brethren want to bother us with such things for? If a church is divided why will they send an article to us for publication stating it is an act of the church, and thus involve us with other brethren when such things are published-and such things as we have no way of knowing the true status of affairs? Why send us something for the paper that lugs into our columns your local troubles? It is unjust and unfair to us and unjust to the cause. If you love the cause more than you do your own personal ambition, keep these things at home, and do not send such things to us for publication as will call for a reply and endless trouble and confusion and disputes. C. H. C.

The Thing in the Way

---February 15, 1927

If Elders Newman and Fisher will agree to give up their works the last obstacle will have been removed, and lasting peace will be had, as far as the present issue is concerned. We could receive each one of their members upon their personal acknowledgments, and the union would then be peaceably effected. Otherwise there can never be had lasting peace between us.-E. C. M., in Glad Tidings, Jan. 28, 1927. From this it is to be clearly seen that Elder Mahurin's contention is that all the baptisms and ordinations that have been done by Elder Newman and the people he is in line with since they became separated from Elder Mahurin and those in line with him must be done over in order to a union with him and his people. Not only so, but each member in line with Elder Newman must make personal acknowledgments to them-to Elder Mahurin's churches. If that would not give somebody an endless job and an impossible task, we would like to know the reason why. It would extend from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf-that all must be baptized by the few who are in line with Elder Mahurin who have been baptized by any others except them since they separated from those in line with Elder Newman. We wonder if Elder Mahurin would like to have the job of looking up all those who have been baptized during these few years by others than those who are in line with him. We know that Elder Newman has been in Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana, North Carolina and other states since the division in Texas. No doubt he has baptized some in some of these states. We have been in California and baptized some there and helped to organize some churches out there. Does Elder Mahurin want to go out there and get the consent of those people to re-organize those churches and to baptize those people again? If so, how would they know the work would be good after Elder Mahurin gets through with it? Elder Morgan would not accept it after Elder Mahurin does the work. We have also visited churches in Georgia-all the way to the Atlantic coast. We have been in meetings with some from Florida. We have also visited and preached for churches in Alabama, and we are in line with churches from the north to the south lines of the state. We have also been with brethren in Tennessee, and are in line with the churches in that state from the Mississippi River on the west to North Carolina on the east. The same in Kentucky. We are in direct correspondence with the Mountain Springs Association in Arkansas. The Mountain Springs is in correspondence with the Salem. These are in correspondence with others. Are they all in disorder? And will all of them have to find all the people they have baptized since Elder Mahurin and his people were separated from us and baptize them again? No, it would not do for us to do the work again, for that would not make it good. We would have to get Elder Mahurin to do the work for us. Then Elder Morgan would not accept it. When would we ever get the work done? And how could we know, or how could the parties know, when they have valid baptism? Who shall we appoint as supreme judges over this matter who shall sit in judgment and tell us when the work has been well done, and from whose decision there can be no appeal? According to the contention of Elder Mahurin and those who hold his view, there is not a Baptist in the South or Southwest who has orderly baptism-no not in the whole United States. There is not a church in the South or Southwest but what descended from the old Kehukee Association in North Carolina. Trace the line and see where these churches all came from, and you will find this statement true. That association was formed of Regular and Separate Baptists. The Separate Baptists started as a split off from the Baptist Church in Boston, the Separates being favorable to the revival by Whitfield, an Episcopalian from England. About a year after they split off from the Baptist Church there they were formed into a church, and called themselves Separate Baptists to distinguish them from the others who stood as they were before the Whitfield revival. That is where the Separates started. When the proposition was made for a union of the Regulars and Separates in North Carolina to form the Kehukee Association, the Separates objected to the union on the ground that the Regulars had baptized some in unbelief, or some who were not regenerated. If the fact that the Separates were split off in the start from the regular church in Boston made baptism administered by them invalid, then they had no valid baptism and could not administer it. If the fact that the Regulars had baptized or immersed some who were unregenerate put them in such a state of disorder that the baptism administered by them would not be good, then they could not administer valid baptism to those who had been immersed before regeneration. So those people were without valid baptism- and who could give it to them? According to the contention of some brethren now, valid baptism was ended right then and there, and none of us have it now! But some might say that the Regulars cleaned up and put away that work. Yes; but if they did put it away, and immerse again those who had been immersed before regeneration, then the wrong work done did not make all the other work invalid. They did not re-immersing the others they had baptized during that time. Therefore, what they did in immersing people who were not regenerated did not make baptism invalid that was administered by them. But the Regulars and Separates united and formed the Kehukee Association. Now, Elder Mahurin contends that Elder Newman and those in line with him are an excluded party, a split off faction, and that he (Elder Mahurin) and those in line with him are the true church and in true order, and have the only right to administer valid baptism; and he also contends that if they unite with Elder Newman's party, then all would be in gross disorder and none of them would have the right to, or could, administer gospel baptism. If his contention be true, then when the Regulars united with the Separates and formed the Kehukee Association, they all lost their identity and all lost their right and authority to administer gospel baptism. As that is where all our churches in the South and Southwest sprang from, then none of us have any valid baptism. Now, pray tell us, how much will Elder Mahurin, or any other man, be benefitted by quarreling over something which he does not have, and which no man in the whole country has? In Virginia and perhaps in other sections there was a division years ago, and one faction is known as Clark Baptists and another as Beebe Baptists. The Beebe Baptists are classed as Absoluters. Elder Mahurin contends that their baptism is not valid. Those Baptists designated as Beebe Baptists have frequently visited and preached in the Kehukee and other associations in North Carolina, as well as in other states. So have the brethren who are classed as Clark Baptists visited the brethren in North Carolina and other states and preached among them. The Beebe Baptists are as far north as Maine. According to Elder Mahurin's contention they do not have valid baptism-so he cannot get valid baptism there. Then come on west through all the Northern states and you will find where those churches came from. According to the contention of Elder Mahurin the "gates of hell" have prevailed, and the church of God is extinct- at least in the United States- and we wonder where he will find the church of God today. Brother Mahurin, where is the church? Tell us the country where you will find it, please. When you do this, please tell us upon what ground you say such is the church. Tell us, also, please, where they got their baptism; and please show by the proof that it is valid baptism, and not contaminated with what you are claiming is gross disorder. "Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things." -Rom. ii. 1. "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven: give, and it shall be given unto you: good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." -\(Luke 6:37-38\).

The Dallas Meeting

We left home Monday afternoon, Feb. 21, at 6 o'clock, for Dallas, Texas, arriving there Tuesday morning at 5:42. Elder John R. Harris got on the train at Thornton, Ark., and went with us. We were met at the station by Dr. W. W. Fowler, the editor of the Glad Tidings, who conveyed us to his home, where we remained until time to go to the place of meeting. A large number of brethren and sisters were in attendance at the meeting, which continued two days, Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 22, 23, and closed Wednesday night- that is, the preaching part of it closed then, the business part having closed that afternoon. Several discourses were delivered during the meeting. We did not get to hear all the preaching, as we were appointed with other brethren to serve on a committee appointed to draw up recommendations for the divided factions to endeavor to come together on. Twelve were appointed to serve on this committee. The following was drawn up by the committee and unanimously adopted by them for recommendation to the divided brethren and churches:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE We, your committee, realizing and recognizing the fact that in the unholy war which brought about the present condition of affairs and division among us, both in and between churches and associations, that there were irregularities, hasty actions taken, and wrong things done and said on both sides; and in view of the fact that it has been the practice of our people all along in the past in cases of divisions, for them to mutually confess their wrongs and to come together in peace- we therefore recommend that in this present division, either in churches or associations, those of them who desire peace and union to be restored, mutually confess all errors, wrongs and mistakes, and mutually forgive each other, and agree to bury the past in oblivion, and come together in peace and fellowship, recognizing each other's official work and endeavor to strive for the things that make for peace. Further, we recommend that if some churches are divided and they cannot agree to come together on the foregoing recommendation without special and particular investigation of their local condition, then we recommend that the two factions agree between themselves to call for a committee of brethren from outside the state, and who are not direct parties to the division in the state, to come and hear the evidence on both sides and recommend to them how they may adjust their differences and get together.

We further recommend that where parties have been excluded for immoral practice and received on confession of faith, that such parties should be required to go back to the church where they were withdrawn from and make satisfaction there for restoration. But a reconciliation of our people and their coming together is necessary first in order to an adjustment of irregularities of this kind. How-beit, nothing contained herein shall be construed as recommending the recognition of the official work of a church which has officially departed from a fundamental point of doctrine or practice and has been Scripturally dropped by orderly churches therefor.

Respectfully submitted,

Elders J. W. Herriage, H. G. Richards, S. B. KUYKENDALL, R. E. Wilson, J. A. Moore, J. S. Newman, Marion West, L. J. McCarty, Leon H. Clevenger, Jno. R. Harris, T. L. Webb, C. H. Cayce, Committee.

After the foregoing recommendations were unanimously voted for by the committee the same was read in open meeting and approved by all who voted. There were a few who did not vote, but not a messenger from a church voted against the approval, and no one seated in the meeting voted in opposition. Then a good old song was sung and the right hand extended amid shouts of praise to the Lord, brethren embracing each other, and tears of joy were shed. It was a wonderful meeting, and we believe much good will result. We feel that the brethren will now begin coming together and affiliating with each other. If they will visit this country we will gladly make appointments for them, and we are sure our churches will gladly receive them—we mean those who were at that meeting and endorse those recommendations and who will conform to the same. May the good Lord continue to work in the hearts of His dear people to labor for peace and for the union of our poor and divided people. We do not deem it necessary to publish the minutes of the entire meeting. The whole thing, including all that was said in the meeting, is to be published in pamphlet form, as a stenographer was employed to take all that was said. If any reader feels like helping to pay some of the expense of that stenographer, send your contribution to Dr. W. W. Fowler, 503 Medical Arts Building, Dallas, Tex., or to Elder J. L. Collings, Glen Rose, Texas, or to us, and we will send it to them. Or, if you will take some of the pamphlets when they are printed, write to either of the names given and say how many you will take. It is not known yet what the price will be, but a price will be put on them to just cover the cost if all are sold. We trust our readers will get some of them and circulate them among the brethren generally. C. H. C.

Wild Gourds

---March 15, 1927

Dear Brother Cayce:

I want to get your views on two verses of Scripture- (Jeremiah 26:3); (36:3). They both reveal to my understanding the purpose of God is not predestination. I will quote it: "If so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may repent me of the evil which I purpose to do unto them, because of the evil of their doings." - (Jeremiah 26:3). "It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them, that they may return every man from his evil way, that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin." - (Jeremiah 36:3). It was the purpose of God to destroy Nineveh in forty days (Jonah). I know it says, in ((24) (Isaiah 14:24) "The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand." Summing these Scriptures I have called, the purpose of God is not predestination.

That word is not in the Bible. Predestinated is in there two times-(Ephesians 1:5,11). The word predestinate is in there two times-((9) (Romans 8:29-30). The word predestination is an English word. The predestination of God is the righteousness of God, by grace in Jesus Christ for His people. "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began."-(II Timothy 1:9). Predestination of God has no reference to sin and wickedness whatever. Absolute predestination of all things is not Bible doctrine; but it is wild gourds from a wild vine of wickedness -not from the fruitful vine of righteousness, which is Jesus Christ. If this is not published in your paper it will not hurt my feelings, but write me your views on these Scriptures. From your unworthy brother in Christ, Elder J. B. Johnson. Sword's Creek, Va.

As we understand the meaning of the words there is little difference between purpose and predestination. To purpose to do a thing is to determine to do that thing before it is done. To predestinate a thing is to pre-determine that thing, or to determine the thing beforehand. So we see but little difference. In the Scriptures cited God purposed to punish those people for their wickedness. In (Jeremiah 26:12,15), we have this language," The Lord sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard. Therefore now amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the Lord your God; and the Lord will repent Him of the evil that He hath pronounced against you." He continues in (Jeremiah 26:14-15), "As for me, behold, I am in your hand: do with me as seemeth good and meet unto you. But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: for of a truth the Lord hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears." Some of the priests and some of the Israelites did not believe what the prophet had spoken, and they threatened his life because he thus prophesied unto them. His prophecy was that the Lord had purposed to punish them for their wickedness and for their transgressions, but that if they would repent and turn from their transgressions and sins the Lord would not visit that punishment upon them. This was the teaching of the Prophet Jeremiah unto Israel, and national Israel was a type of spiritual Israel. Just as some of the priests and people of Israel then would put the prophet to death for thus prophesying, so some preachers and people today would put the Lord's true ministers to death for preaching the same doctrine. Those blessings and punishments for national Israel were natural or temporal. To spiritual Israel those blessings and punishments are spiritual and are experienced by them here in this life, or in the gospel Canaan, which is the church. This does not make God changeable, for it is His law. His law promises blessings in obedience and punishment for disobedience. God has so purposed, and He brings it to pass. He has purposed to chastise His children for their transgressions and disobedience. In ((9:26) (Psalms 89:26-36) David tells something of the Lord's promise concerning Christ and His children. He says, "He shall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, my God and the rock of my salvation. Also I will make Him my firstborn, higher than the kings of earth. My mercy will I keep for Him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with Him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and His throne as the days of heaven. If His children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments; then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless my loving kindness will I not utterly take from Him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David (which is Christ). His seed shall endure forever, and His throne as the sun before me." Here is the declaration of the purpose of God to chastise His children if, they transgress His law; yet He has sworn to His Son that they-His children-shall endure, or live, forever. As He has sworn that they shall live forever, then the chastisement or punishment is not eternal, but is to be visited upon them here in this life, or in this world, and not in the next world. In this connection read the entire ((8:1) (Ezekiel 18). This doctrine that the Lord's people may enjoy blessings in obedience that they do not enjoy in disobedience, and are punished and chastised here in this life for their wrong doing, is a doctrine that God Himself has set forth, no matter how much it may be despised by some of the emissaries of Satan. A Correction

Elder C. H. Cayce:

Dear Brother in Hope-I read in your last paper, The Primitive Baptist, a piece written by Elder N. J. Hinson, telling of his tour in Virginia and North Carolina. He says they are passing through a great war with the Absoluters. He also says it is useless for anyone to claim that the trouble in that country is the result of the so-called disorder of Elder Wilson. Elder Hinson only visited five churches out of twenty-six here in the Bear Creek Association. Surely it is unreasonable for him to know the sentiment of the people in our association-I suppose twenty-one churches here that he never visited. I have been living in this association most sixteen years. I have never heard one of our members, much less our preachers, advocate such doctrine. Our people have been accused of it, but it is untrue. Our association passed an act several years ago not to allow the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things preached in our stand, and they have never departed from that act. If any man or preacher comes to our association advocating the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things, or any other new doctrine, I have no idea they would be seated. Our preachers are all sound in doctrine. We have never had any trouble in this association from our people preaching or believing any new doctrine, neither do they use any of those extreme expressions. No use for anyone to misrepresent us. Most of the brethren in our association want peace, like we once had, and are striving to that end. May the Lord continue to bless us in our efforts for peace, and may our good brethren here ever be found contending for the true principles as taught in the Bible, and that we may be careful always to tell the truth and never misrepresent any of God's little children. Brother Cayce, pray for us, that we may have sweet union among us again, and soon get rid of so much disorder and misrepresenting one another. That is no way for God's little children to live. Mrs. W. C. Edwards. Please publish this in The Primitive Baptist so that the people may see that some of us here have been misrepresented.

REMARKS

If our readers will get the paper for January 1st and read the article again from Elder Hinson they will see very clearly that what he said about the trouble in Virginia and North Carolina was not said with direct reference to any division or trouble in the Bear Creek Association, but that he was speaking about the trouble there in a general way and what gave rise to it. The trouble around Danville did originate over doctrine, and the Danville people said so themselves, as has already been published. In fact, they so published in a statement they sent out. What about Elder T. M. Stanley, who was once in the Bear Creek Association? Did he not advocate the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things? Is not this same Elder Stanley now in line with the party of Danville Church who claim they excluded Elder Wilson? Are they not all in line with the Lone Pilgrim and the doctrine advocated in that paper? If some of the Bear Creek Association do not believe that doctrine, will they line up with it? Will you stand with such a doctrine, when you do not believe it? We are sure there are good Baptists in the Bear Creek Association who do not believe that doctrine, and we hope they will not line up with it. C. H. C.

Paying the Preacher

---May 1, 1927

It seems to us that Sister Hester fails to understand one point mentioned in her letter above-in regard to paying the preacher, "then who shall pay the members who go a distance?" Whether the members are near to the church or far from it, they call the preacher to serve them. They desire the preacher "to go a warfare" for them. They want him to fight for the truth for them; to fight for the principles of doctrine they hold to. The apostle asks the question, "Who goeth a warfare at his own charges?" When our boys went across the waters to fight the German army, they had to forsake all they had and go. But they did not go at their own charges. The government furnished them food and clothing, and some provisions have been made for those dependent upon them. The apostle uses this to show us how we should care for our soldiers who fight for us under the banner of Prince Immanuel. It was God's way under the law that the Israelites should care for, take care of, the prophets whom the Lord sent to them and for them. They did not always do it. At one time Elijah had to flee for his life; but God sent him food by the ravens. If the prophet had been cared for as God commanded, the food would have been supplied by Israel instead of the ravens. We need men in the ministry who are willing to make sacrifices and who are willing to endure hardness; and then we need members in the church who are willing to care for them as the Lord directs. May the Lord help us all to discharge our every duty. C. H. C.

John's Baptism and the Communion

---June 15, 1927

We received from Friend Tom Dyer, Dresden, Tenn., a request for our views on a question put this way by him: "When John was baptizing before Christ came, what was that baptizing for? The reason I ask is that John baptized before Christ came, and we baptize after we have received the gift of God." He also asks for Bible reason for close communion. John baptized to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. John did not prepare the people, but made them ready. He baptized none only those who gave evidence of a true repentance. Some demanded baptism of him who did not give such evidence and he refused to baptize them. He made the people ready by baptizing them. They were ready for the gospel kingdom, or the church. The Lord established His church after He had also been baptized by John. He established the church of persons John had baptized. John baptized people who had been born of God, and so do we. The church is composed of baptized believers, and that is the kind of material the Lord used in establishing His church. As to the communion. That is an ordinance in the church-not out of it. To have a right at the Lord's table in His kingdom, one must first come into that kingdom. He must first become a member of the church and first be baptized, in order to have a right to the Lord's table. For the baptism to be true baptism it must be administered by the authority of a true gospel church, for the ordinances were delivered to the church by the apostles for her keeping. Those who had been baptized were the ones who broke bread, in the days of the apostles. See ((2) (Acts 2:42)). If the Primitive Baptist Church is the church of Christ (and it is) then other orders do not have the authority to administer baptism. As those people have not been baptized, then they have no right to the Lord's table, which is in His kingdom-the Old Baptist Church-and we have no right to take it outside and give it to them. We make these few brief remarks trusting they may be some benefit to the brother making the request. C. H. C.

Missionaries Do Harm in China

---June 15, 1927

Those who are engaging so much in the foreign missionary enterprise, claiming that if they only had money enough they would soon be able to take the world for Christ, have put out a lot of glowing reports of the great work they have accomplished in China. They have also occasionally made great reports of wonderful accomplishments in other countries. If we were to judge from some of the things they have written we would think that China was ready to come bodily over from their heathen doctrines and to embrace Christianity, or right on the verge of doing so. Somebody gets a good fat "rake-off" in this mission business, and deludes the people, and thereby gets gain. Occasionally some person tells the truth about these missionary operations. Such persons are those who have no ax to grind and no financial loss to sustain by telling the truth-and so they "let the cat out of the bag." In Martin, Tenn., the town where we formerly lived, is published a newspaper called the Weakley County Press. We get the paper. In the issue of that paper of May 6, 1927, is a letter from Lieutenant John Ford Luten, a former Martin boy, and whom we knew in his boyhood days. He is with the Medical Corps of the U. S. Marines, and is on active duty in the war zone in China. On March 23 he wrote a letter to his grandfather and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hutcherson, of Martin. This letter is published in the Press. Lieutenant Luten says that the missionaries actually do harm in China instead of good. For the benefit of our readers we copy the letter from the Press in full. Read it, and get some of the missionary fanatics to read it too, if you can. It may do some of the poor deluded people some good. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE AND LETTER

The following letter was written by Lieutenant John Ford Luten, a former Martin boy, to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hutcherson, of Martin. Lieutenant Luten is connected with the Medical Corps of the Marines and is on active duty in the Chinese war zone. The letter will give an insight to real conditions as they now exist in China: Ichang, China, March 23, 1927.

Dear Grandpa and Grandma:

I am sorry to hear that you have not been receiving any communication from me but I have been writing more or less consistently. You must stop and realize that I am over one thousand miles inland on the Yangtze River, that a state of war exists, and that most of our mail is brought by gunboats, which are few and far between. People in America cannot fully appreciate the terrible state of affairs at the present time, and cannot understand the insults and abuses the white race are forced to endure from these Chinese swine. They are the most dirty, filthy, contemptible, lying form of animal ever put in the form of man. I cannot understand why an intelligent and educated race would spend their money and exhaust their efforts in trying to convert Chinese to our way of thinking, when the money could far better be spent at home for moral uplift and welfare of our own nation. The missionaries out here have not reported the truth to the American public, which is laboring under the greatest of all delusions. They have not accomplished one bit of good; in fact, have made matters worse. An oriental mind works exactly opposite from the occidental mind. They take what they can gain by western ideas and use it for their own gain, then they turn like a rattlesnake and strike the helping hand. A Chinaman is the most unappreciative person in the world. He thinks that kindness merely shows weakness, and he takes advantage of it. I will refer you to two books which will give you an insight into conditions in China and Chinese character, one by Rodney Gilbert, "What's Wrong With China," the other by Jay Denby, "Letters of a Shanghai Griffin." It's high time that the American public should be accurately and truthfully informed about existing conditions in China, and retaliate for the insults to American citizens and our flag. We should be feared and respected, rather than looked upon as a weak and cringing race, as the Chinese see us. Enough for the China question, but get these two books and tell your friends the truth as I have told you. My wife could hardly write, as she has been forced to evacuate Ichang and is at present in Shanghai, which is over one thousand miles away. We are forced to live aboard ship and cannot get down river until the water rises, as our ship draws too much water. We are expecting the balloon to go up any minute and will eventually have to fight our way down. Only a few weeks ago I was on my way to the hospital ashore to treat some of these down-trodden Chinese (down-trodden-hell!) and I was attacked by a mob of Chinese coolies just for the simple reason that I was a foreigner. I stood my ground and fought, but little chance did I have. It ended by an armed guard from the ship attacking and driving back the mob with bayonets after my uniform had been almost completely torn off and I was bruised and cut. After the commanding officer threatened to shell the city an official apology was sent over by the Chinese authorities with regret. Anyone can write apologies every day. This is only one of the numerous incidents that have occurred and always followed by an apology, the officials themselves instigating and ordering the coolies to make open attacks on foreigners. If the people in the United States could only know the truth of the whole situation. Lieut. Jno. Ford Lutten, M. C. U. S. S. El Cano.

Jesus and His Friends

---August 1, 1927

We received a copy of a Sunday school leaflet, "Beginners' Bible Stories," published by the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, the title of the story in this leaflet being "Jesus and His Friends." In order that the reader may see for himself just what these money-hunters and proselyters will resort to we copy the story in full: Jesus and some of His friends were going to eat supper together. Two of His friends, Peter and John, had gone ahead of the others to see that everything was ready. The supper was to be in a large room upstairs. Everything was just as it ought to be—a large table with seats all around it. There was nice, cool water for bathing their feet, for the streets were so dusty. They always liked to take off their sandals and bathe their tired feet before eating. Peter and John heard the others coming up the stairs, step-step-step. When they entered the room, Jesus looked around. No one offered to bathe their feet, and there was no servant there to do it. Jesus' feet were so tired, and He wanted the dust washed off of them. He was sorry His friends had not thought of showing their love by doing it. They had the nicest seat of all for Jesus. Jesus sat down, but His friends all wanted the seats next to Him. They quarreled about it. One said: "I'm older than you, and I think I ought to sit next to Jesus." Another one said: "Well, I've known Jesus longer than you have, so I think

I ought to sit by Him." Jesus was so sorry they were quarreling about sitting next to Him at the table. He wanted to teach them the best way to show their love. He got up, took off His coat, and put a towel around His waist. Then He poured some cool water in a basin and commenced bathing the feet of His friends. They looked at each other-they were so sorry they had not thought to wash each other's feet. How they wished they had bathed Jesus' tired feet, instead of trying to sit by Him! Peter felt ashamed, and said: "Jesus, you must not do this for me." But Jesus looked at him and said, "It is because I love you, that I want to show you how to help." So Jesus went around the table, and bathed their feet, and wiped them with the towel He had put around Him. When He had finished, He put away the basin of water and the towel, and put on His coat and sat down at the table. Then He looked at His friends and said, "The way to show your love is by helping people." Jesus' friends never forgot how He showed them how to help, and after that they tried to show their love to people by helping them. We confess that we do not remember to have ever read more falsehood and a more glaring, bold, bald-faced misrepresentation of facts than is contained in the foregoing. And that, too, under the pretext of teaching the children how to be Christians, how to follow the Lord, and how to attain to the glory world. This Sunday school leaflet of falsehoods sets forth the idea that Jesus washed the feet of His friends before the eating of the supper, and John plainly says that "supper being ended." The leaflet says that seats were all around the table. How do they know that? How do they know Peter and John heard the others coming up the stairs? How do they know the disciples quarreled about who should sit next to Jesus? Not a word that we remember about that in the Book. It is only a falsehood of the whole cloth of their own making. And what they say some of the disciples said, "I am older than you," and "I have known Him longer than you have." This is simply manufactured by these bigots and drawn from their own vain imagination. And "they were so sorry they had not thought to wash each other's feet." How did the writer find that out? Peter did not know what the Lord was doing- did not know why He washed their feet; did not know the meaning of it. If it had been because their feet were dusty and they usually washed their feet before eating supper, Peter would have known-or else he was an idiot. Was he an idiot? No. Hence it was not as this set of humbugs teach in this little Sunday school leaflet. "Peter felt ashamed, and said: 'Jesus, you must not do this for me.'" No such thing was said, and these publishers and the writers knew better. None of the things these folks say were said can be found in the Book. It is simply a plain case of garbling, misrepresenting, and telling of falsehoods in order to get the lesson they propose to teach, and to evade and deny what is plainly put down in God's word. And such as this carried on in the name of Christianity and under the hypocritical pretext of helping to save souls. May the good Lord deliver us from such a blasphemous set of pretenders. C. H. C.

Whale Swallowed Jonah

---August 15, 1927

The idea which men have advanced that a whale could not swallow a man is a mistake. Perhaps many of them could not. But when we were in California we saw the skeleton of a whale at Long Beach, which we are sure could have swallowed a man. That whale came ashore at the foot of Almatos Ave., May 20, 1897, and was captured there. It was a species of the Giant Blue, and was sixty-four feet long and weighed sixty tons-120,000 pounds. Its collar bone was nearly four feet across, and the swallow was between six and eight inches in diameter, without stretching. There is still another species of whale that has a still larger swallow than this, and yet this one had a swallow large enough to take a man in. Yet, it is true the Bible says, "The Lord prepared a great fish." Jonah learned a lesson in that whale which many of the Lord's people have to learn-especially those the Lord puts in the ministry. Many of them take a course in "whale college," and learn the lesson Jonah learned. Then sometimes they go back to that college and take a "post graduate" course. It seems they have to learn the lesson over and over, sometimes. C. H. C.

Published by Request

---August 15, 1927

Dear Brother Cayce: I think that your mind to refrain from strife and contention so far as in you lieth is good, for it is not contending earnestly for the faith delivered once to the saints. So you are right in suppressing all matters which in your judgment lack the word "earnestly." I appreciate the good brotherly spirit in which you have written, although some of it has not as yet been shown me in what I hope is a Christian experience, as you present it. However, if we can enjoy the same spirit, I hope we may not fall out over the diversity of operations. I do not believe that the children of God while here in the flesh on earth will, any two of them or more, ever see wholly or entirely eye to eye, for to such charity or forbearance would mean nothing. I had such a severe trial being rid of the law and my own works, which I once trusted in as good enough to secure salvation for me, that I may have gone to an extreme in crying "grace, grace unto it." I feel like your letter is worth a place in The Primitive Baptist and return it for your disposal. I am, I hope, yours in the things that make for peace and the things wherewith one may edify another. Yours in hope of eternal life, Everett R. Kinney.

THE LETTER

E. R. Kinney:

Dear Brother-Pressure of important letters, preparing manuscript for the paper, filling appointments, and such things have kept me from answering your appreciated letter of March 16 until now. I would be glad to see you and talk with you face to face, or that I had time to write a long letter, but will content myself as best I can with what little I may have the time to write hurriedly just now. I presume the debates you mention reading-at least one of them-is a debate which I was engaged in. Permit me to say, though, that I have quit debating, and may never have another. But I never engaged in one except by request of an Old Baptist Church, such requests having been made by the church in conference. It is not the expectation to reach or to benefit the man we debate with, but some hearer who may be an honest seeker after truth. He hears the truth preached that way, in comparison with the error, and thus the truth shines the brighter. I have seen persons come to the church and ask for a home who said they were convinced by hearing debates. It is true, though, that men sometimes do not conduct such debates in the right spirit. But there is one thing in which I think you do not rightly understand our people who hold to what is termed by some as conditional or time salvation. I gather from your letter you think they have an idea that they direct their own steps. I think you do not understand them on this. They do not think it is in them to direct their own steps. "It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." The parent directs the steps of the child, but the child does not always follow the direction. The Lord directs the steps of His children, but His children sometimes rebel and do not walk as the Lord directs. Apply this to your own experience, and I am sure that you will confess that you have sometimes felt remorse of conscience that you did not do what you felt the Lord had directed you to do. In fact, you have said just that much in telling me you had said things unkindly, or about that-retaliating in kind, following the fleshly inclinations. It is the man that does the walking. If he walks as God directs, he walks right, does right. If he walks after the flesh, the fleshly lusts, he walks wrong. When those churches "fit and fit until they fit themselves out," it was on account of their wrong doing that they went out-the result of their own wrongs. Of course if they had not "fit and fit" they would not have "fit themselves out," and would have continued to exist and to enjoy the smiles of the Lord. Their destruction was the result of their own wrongs; as you rightly say, too, this is always the case, whether "absoluters" or "limited predestinarians." Strife among brethren results in death and desolation in the church.' What a pity that brethren will engage in such. For myself I would that they would cease. I prefer that these unholy discussions be kept out of my paper. It is hard to do that. If I allow something to slip in that favors what some do not like, it is likely to bring a reply, and some will think hard of me if I do not allow the reply in the paper, and if I do allow it, then some on the other side think I have not treated them right-and so there it goes. After calling this fact to mind, and carefully thinking over the matter, and I trust, trying to pray over it, I have thought it might not be best for the cause to publish the letters I wrote to ask your permission to publish, which Brother Parker sent to me. I feel sure that the unholy war they are having now in Virginia and North Carolina is wrong, and I believe the time will come when the brethren will be sorry for it-perhaps after many who are leaders in it are gone. The coming generation will see the evil of it and the devastation wrought by it. They may have some of the kind of meetings we have been having in some portions of the south and west called peace meetings, in which the brethren are trying to get together who were divided years ago. In some of those wars I was a helper, and I am sorry of it now. I want to try to get out of such work if possible and do nothing to help in a strife. Have I come to the right conclusion that it is best to publish no more than what seems absolutely necessary in regard to the war they are having over in Virginia and North Carolina? Be candid with me. (Yes, indeed I think so.-Kinney.)

Now in regard to visiting this country. We have a little church in North Little Rock. They hold the unworthy writer as pastor. When I am not away on a tour I try to be with them on the third Sunday in the month and Saturday afternoon before. They are few in number, but they love the truth as we understand the Bible to teach, and they rejoice in and love the glorious doctrine of salvation by grace, and that we should honor the Lord by a godly walk and pious conversation-that we should honor Him who has called us out of darkness into light. We also have a little band here in Fordyce. The regular meeting time is the second Sunday and Saturday before in each month. My humble little home is on an adjoining lot to the church. We would gladly welcome you to our home and at our church here in Fordyce or at Little Rock. Assuring you of the fact that you have my Christian love and fellowship, and asking an interest in your prayers, I remain, Yours in humble hope, C. H. Cayce.

Wine Used in Sacrament

---August 15, 1927

Brother Thomas J. Braswell, Winter Garden, Fla., asks us if the Lord used wine in the institution of the sacramental supper, or did He use grape juice. When the element that is used to represent the blood of the Saviour is mentioned in the New Testament it is called the fruit of the vine. It should be remembered that the Lord instituted the sacramental supper at the time of the eating of the last passover supper with His disciples. Grape juice was not used in the passover supper. Wine was used in that supper. Wine is the fermented juice of the grape. Grape juice has to be adulterated to keep it from fermenting. It is a flagrant violation to use adulterated things in any service of God. Unfermented juice cannot, in any way, typify the agony of the Lord. Fermented juice would fittingly typify His agony. In the passover unleavened bread and wine were used. These things were the substance of the passover. Without them the passover supper was worthless. Other articles might be omitted from that supper without question, but if the bread or the wine were omitted, the supper was valueless. The Lord took the substance of the supper-the unleavened bread and the wine-and instituted the sacramental supper. * As these things were the articles He used, it would be the height of presumption to substitute something else. We simply would not administer the communion when grape juice is used instead of wine, nor would we engage in that service when such substitute is used. C. H. C.

---August 15, 1927

Brother H. D. S. Helton, Valeria, Ky., requests our views of (Romans 9:13), which reads, "As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." In order to see what led up to this statement by the apostle in quoting from the language of prophecy it is necessary to read a few verses, beginning with verse 7, "Neither because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but the children of the promise are counted for the seed. For this is the word of promise. At this time will I come and Sarah shall have a son. And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even, by our father Isaac; (for the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth:) it was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." We find in (Genesis 25:23) that before Jacob and Esau were born the Lord said to Rebecca concerning them, "The elder shall serve the younger." This only shows God's choice of them before they were born, and the choice could not, therefore, have been made because of any good done by Jacob or evil done by Esau. God's choice manifests His love. Hence, God loved Jacob and hated Esau before they were born, and made choice of one (Jacob) and bestowed the blessing upon him, and passed Esau by. Paul explains this in verse 11, "For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth." For this reason it was said unto Rebecca, "The elder shall serve the younger." Why should the elder serve the younger? Because God had made choice of Jacob. Why did God make choice of Jacob? Because He loved him. God's choice of a poor sinner is a manifestation of His everlasting love. His love is everlasting. It is unchangeable. It is always the same. Nothing can separate one from it. There is much in this, but we do not have time now to write more. May the Lord bless this to the good of the readers. C. H. C.

Trip in Alabama

---September 15, 1927

May 26th we (Elder Cayce, the children and I) started to Alabama in our car. We arrived at Vina, Ala., Friday night at eight thirty. We went to the home of Sister Josie Duckett. She did not know we were coming, but made us feel welcome. We enjoyed being in her home. Saturday we went to Brownsboro, Ala., to my parents, B. B. Lawler's. Monday night Elder J. J? Turnipseed came to go with us. Monday night Elder H. P. Houk and daughter came over. Before they left, papa called us around the family altar, and after singing and prayer, Brother Turnipseed talked a few minutes. 'Twas good to be at dear old home. Papa, mama, many of my sisters, brothers and their families were around the family altar one more time. I thank God for such noble, dear Old Baptist parents. Tuesday, we left the children with mama, and Elder Turnipseed, Claudis, the baby (William Hartsel), and I went to Decatur, Ala. Had services there Tuesday and Wednesday nights. One dear sister joined by experience Wednesday night. Thursday morning we went to Birmingham to the home of Elder Turnipseed. Many Baptists came in and we had an enjoyable evening. Friday morning Elder and Sister Turnipseed went with us to Ozark, Ala., to the home of Brother Byrd, a good Old Baptist home. We spent two weeks among the Baptists in that section. I failed to keep a record of the homes we visited, and do not remember the names of all. I am still feasting on the good time I had while with those dear people. They were all strangers to me when I left home, but when I met them I felt that we belonged to the same family. Elder Turnipseed and Claudis did some wonderful preaching. I felt that it was indeed good to be there. We left Ozark June 12th for Montgomery. Spent Sunday night with Brother Turnipseed's son in town. Monday we went to Birmingham to the home of Brother Turnipseed. Tuesday morning Brother Turnipseed was called to the bedside of Brother Harden. We were with Sister Turnipseed until Thursday evening. Thursday night we stayed with Elder Parker. Friday morning Elder Parker went with us into the Mount Zion Association. We visited in this association until June 22nd. Elder Yancey's daughter joined while we were there. Claudis baptized her the first Sunday in July. From here we went to Woodville, Ala., and were at old Union Church June 23rd and 24th. Then we went back to Brownsboro to mama's and to our children. Words fail to express my feelings. If I could only tell what I felt and how I felt on this trip, I would. I shall never forget the heavenly feasts and the noble Baptists that we met. Sister Turnipseed is a fine traveling companion and a wonderful Baptist. I enjoyed being with her so much. Many asked that I write them when I got home. You see from this that I can't, but I trust that you will cast the mantle of charity over my many imperfections, and that each one will take this as a personal note to you. I desire to be remembered in your prayers. I feel to need the prayers of the righteous. May the good Lord graciously bless each one, is my prayer. Yours in hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Our Trip in Texas

---October 15, 1927

We left home on Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock, August 3, to fill the appointments which had been arranged for us in Texas by Elders J. H. Fisher, L. J. McCarty and others. We arrived in Abilene Thursday afternoon at 4, and filled the first appointment there that night. Several brethren met us at the train, one of them being Elder Fisher. From there we went to the West Providence Association, which convened on Friday about sixteen miles from Abilene. It was a great meeting. The home ministers of the association are Elders J. F. Richardson, Robert Lee, Texas, who is the good and highly esteemed moderator; J. W. West, J. B. Owens, W. L. Barrett, R. B. Hester and J. J. Edwards. They were all present. Brother J. W. Hendrickson, McCauley, Texas, is the efficient clerk. The following visiting ministers were present: Elders J. H. Fisher, Newcastle; J. N. Hudson,

Houston; C. J. L. Bolinger, Cone; Joel Meece, Kirkland; L. N. Barrow, Houston; O. Strickland, Munday; J. H. Alldridge, Lubbock; J. G. Grant, Hico; J. L. Collings, Glen Rose; L. J. McCarty, Hart; J. C. Foster, Atwell; Licentiate W. L. Jackson, Burkett; all of Texas; and C. H. Cayce, of Fordyce, Ark. There were eighteen additions to the church during the meeting, and we think sixteen of them were by experience and baptism. We could not find language to express the sweetness and the joy of the meeting. It will be long remembered by many who were there. From the West Providence Association filled appointments at the following places: Anson, Sunday night; White Pond, Monday night; Roby, Tuesday; Snyder, Wednesday and Thursday; Crosbyton, Saturday and Sunday; Lakeview, Monday; Cottonwood, Tuesday; Grow, Tuesday night; Little Flock, near Munday, Wednesday; Mt. Zion, near Graham, Thursday. Good congregations were present at each place, and the meetings were all pleasant, and good interest seemed to be manifested at every meeting. From Mt. Zion Church we went to Dublin, in company with Elder Fisher and Elder McCarty and wife, to attend the Duffau Association, Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The following named ministers were present: Elders L. J. McCarty, J. R. Richardson, W. R. Blackmon, Martin Stone, J. H. Fisher, W. F. Baker, J. S. Newman, J. N. Hudson, C. J. Holcomb, J. L. Collings, J. M. Dowell, M. Hardwick, J. G. Grant, B. J. Driver, A. B. Chambers, W. J. Chambers, J. E. Senter, J. J. Edwards, J. E. Roberts, J. F. Perkins, W. Y. Norman, J. C. Foster and the writer. If we remember correctly, Elder J. J. Edwards is the able moderator and A. H. Roden is the efficient clerk. There were five additions to the church during this meeting. This was another enjoyable association, and a large crowd in attendance. It will be long remembered by many who were there. At this meeting we met some brethren and sisters whom we knew in old Mississippi when we were just a boy. It was a great pleasure to us to meet them once more. After the Duffau Association we filled appointments at Tuscola, Loraine and Coahoma. There were good, congregations and good interest at each place. Then we went to the West Texas Association at Tahoka, Friday, Saturday and fourth Sunday in August. The following ministers were present: Elders J. S. Newman, J. H. Fisher, O. Strickland, J. B. Owens, J. W. West, L. N. Barrow, J. C. Lewis, J. N. Hudson, Franklin Baker, L. J. McCarty, J. C. Foster, F. M. Griffin, J. I. Colwell, R. B. Hester, C. H. Cayce, C. J. L. Bolinger; Licentiates W. L. Jackson, G. C. Miller, S. J. Ellis, Harrell Boyce, Oscar Moyers, W. C. Cleveland, Otis Richardson, W. L. Bolinger and J. W. Huey. During this meeting there were twenty-six additions to the church, twenty-two of them by experience and baptism. To say that it was a good meeting does not fittingly describe it. It was all of that, and more. We cannot find words to describe the joy of it. We do not think we shall forget it while memory lasts. On Monday and Tuesday following we filled appointments at Tulia, where we had another sweet meeting. There were three additions to this church by experience and baptism. Elder L. J. McCarty is the able pastor of this church, as well as at Tahoka, and he is loved and held in high esteem by his brethren. He is also the moderator of the association, and Elder Bolinger is the clerk. Elder McCarty was with us from the Duffau Association, and conveyed us all the way around. It was delightful to us to be in company with him. The more we were with him the more we loved him, and we so much hated to part when the time came for us to leave Tulia. We left there Tuesday evening and went to Amarillo, where we had to lie over until 4:30 Wednesday morning. We left there at about that time and arrived in Little Rock Thursday morning at 2:35, where we were met by our wife and children, who drove up there Wednesday afternoon. We went to the home of Mr. and Sister Rewis and got a little rest. Elder Jacob Sandage met us there Thursday morning, and we all drove to Rushing and attended the Mountain Springs Association. We failed to get a list of the ministers present. It was a good meeting, and the good Lord surely was in the place. After the Mountain

Springs Association closed on Sunday we drove back to Little Rock and Elder Sandage preached there that night. Monday we returned home, with our family. We were sure glad to meet them on Thursday morning at Little Rock, having been gone from them so long, and we were all glad to get home once more on Monday evening. Then on Thursday evening before the second Sunday in September we drove over to Donaldson with our family and spent part of the night with Brother W. H. Fuller, and on Friday morning early we drove from there to the Salem Association, about eighteen miles west of Danville, Ark., in company with Brother and Sister Fuller and Sister Ragan, of Donaldson. We failed to get a list of the ministers in attendance at this meeting; but there we had the pleasure of once more meeting the following aged ministers who have been in the service from forty to fifty years: Elders W. A. Bar-ham, R. L. Piles and M. J. Ryan. These are able ministers of the New Testament and dearly loved by their brethren in their section, as well as by the brethren elsewhere who know them. Brother Joel Loyd, of Blue Mountain, is the efficient clerk of this association, and is highly esteemed by the brethren. This was another great meeting. After the meeting closed Sunday we drove home that night, arriving home at 11:25, tired and worn out. We were glad to get home and to be here a few days, though we do not get much rest, as work has "piled up" while we were away. But it is a change, and that gives us a little rest.

The brethren were all good and kind to us-far better than we feel to deserve, from the first of the trip in Texas on, all the way through until our home coming. We shall never forget their great kindness to us. May the good Lord shower down His richest blessings upon them. The Lord is surely blessing His people in Texas now, and where they have come together and quit their warring with each other, they are a happy people, and fellowship abounds and love flows freely from breast to breast, and the Lord's little children are coming home. May the good work go on. The few wh6 are opposing the coming together of the Lord's people cannot stop it. The Lord's time has come to favor Zion, and He is bringing His people together. To Him be praise forever more. We ask an interest in the prayers of the Lord's children. Pray Him to help us to strive for the things that make for peace, and the things wherewith we may edify one another. C. H. C.

Elder Petty Gone Progressive

ELDER PETTY GONE PROGRESSIVE ---October 15, 1927

We have received the information that Elder M. E. Petty, who has been worrying the brethren so much for the past year or more in Southeast Georgia, has gone to the Progressives. Our information is that his church had him under a charge and that on Friday or Friday night before the meeting time of his church on Saturday he joined the Progressives, which was Friday before the first Sunday in September. As a number of brethren have asked us as to what Elder Petty is doing we make this statement as a matter of information for them. We are sorry Elder Petty has pursued such a course as he has. "God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." We trust that he may yet some day see the error of his way and be brought to repentance. C. H. C.

My Beloved Wife who has untiringly labored with me and for me during these many years, and TO My Dear Children who are so attentive to their poor old father, and TO My Sainted Father and Mother who cared for me when I could not care for myself, and TO My Dear Brethren and Sisters who have been so kind and good to poor me all these years is this and any following volumes Lovingly Dedicated

We have received many words of endorsement of the previous volumes of our Editorial Writings. We have also had some words of criticism. Every reader has not endorsed everything that each volume contained. We could hardly expect that they should. But we are trying to faithfully reproduce what we said in our editorial writings in The Primitive Baptist during the years since we began the work of trying to edit the paper. Our dear companion insisted for several years that we undertake this work, before we could "muster up the courage" to undertake it. Her opinion was that it would be of benefit to the cause of the Master. This volume, with the previous volumes, together with the volumes which may follow, if we are permitted to continue the work until the same shall have been brought up to date, will show that our people-the Primitive Baptists-are still standing where they have always stood. They will also show, conclusively, that we have occupied the same ground during all our public life. Some things herein will be of value, from a historical standpoint, in the years to come. If we know our poor heart our desire in the publication of these volumes is the glory of God and the advancement of His blessed cause, and the benefit of His humble poor. The price we have been selling the books for is clear proof of the fact that the making of money is not the object in view. We desire that the Lord's dear children who are blinded by false teachers may be enabled, by the reading of some of these pages, to see where the true church is, and where the truth may be found. May the blessings of our Lord rest upon the reader, is the humble prayer of The Author Thornton, Arkansas, August 2, 1938

Introduction to Volume 43

---January 1, 1928

This issue begins the forty-third volume of The Primitive Baptist. Forty-two volumes have been completed. Forty-two years ago the first issue of the paper made its appearance at Fulton, Ky. Many trials and conflicts have been endured, and many difficulties have been encountered-yet the paper still lives. It was published by our dear father and edited by him until he "fell at his post" in August, 1905, since which time we have been trying, as best we could, to send the paper out under the same banner and contending for the same principles of eternal truth. We have seen no cause to make any change, so far as doctrinal principles are concerned. On that line we make no promise of any change for the present volume. If we ever make any change in that line we will have to be first convinced that we have the wrong Bible and the wrong experience. It is our desire to humbly and faithfully contend for the same principles of eternal truth that the paper has contended for through all these forty-two years. We are aware of the fact that we have made mistakes-and we are sorry of every mistake and every wrong and every uncouth expression we have made- but we are not sorry of standing for, or contending for, any of the principles we have contended for all these years. We hoped that we would be able to begin publishing the paper weekly again on the first of this year, but we cannot do so. If all our corresponding editors, our brethren in the ministry, and our subscribers will all "put their shoulder to the wheel," and all help all they can, they can increase our list of subscribers enough this year to enable us to send it out weekly-perhaps before the year is out. Brethren, will you help? If each subscriber would only send one new one, that would double the list. We are aware that some of the readers cannot do this, but others can send two, some can send more. Ask the brethren and friends to subscribe for the paper. It will not hurt you to do this, and it will harm no one. How many of you will try it? During the past year some have helped much in this way and we trust that we appreciate all that has been done. Some of our corresponding editors have seemed to be asleep, as far as The Primitive Baptist is concerned, for a long time. We would be glad if they would wake up and let us hear from them occasionally. "Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." We are glad that so many of the brethren and sisters have had a mind to write for the paper, and trust they will continue. True, we have not been able to publish all the articles that have been sent to us, on account of a lack of space. We have just so much space to fill, and we cannot publish any more articles than we have space for. We trust that no one will think hard of us for not publishing any article they may have written. We feel that we should try to select such matter as we think will be best for the cause in a general way. We may make mistakes in our judgment, but we cannot shift the responsibility off on another. All that we can promise on this line is that we shall continue to try to do the best we can under the circumstances. As we have often requested before, we now request again, that you will please keep your church troubles at home. Please do not send them to us for publication in the paper. Again we say, PLEASE DO NOT SEND THEM TO US. Such things are of no comfort or consolation to the Lord's dear children, and we desire to publish such things as will have a tendency to build up, and not tear down or destroy. You can be of much help to us along this line. Write us about your good meetings, and tell your hopes and fears, and of the Lord's sweet and sure promises to His children. Let us "provoke one another unto love and good works." Let us all try to serve the Lord better and more devotedly than we have in the past. Let us try to "be helpers, one of another." Let us try to lend each other a helping hand, and try to help each other along in the sweet and delightful service of the Master. "Let brotherly love continue." Let us all try to improve our ways. Will you try to help us to try to improve, and remember us in your prayers? C. H. C.

Another Name Added

---January 15, 1928

Elder J. H. Chance, R. 4, Cochran, Ga., has consented for us to add his name to our editorial staff. We are glad to have this dear brother associated with us. He promises to write for the paper, and to do what he can to increase the circulation. We trust that his labors may be blessed of the Lord to the good of His dear children and to the upbuilding of the cause. We trust that others of our corresponding editors will try to get up a little more zeal and put forth a little more effort during this year than they have for some time past. Some of our corresponding editors are awake along this line, and we appreciate their labors and their help. We trust that our labors together may be blessed of the Lord to the good of the cause. C. H. C.

Remarks to John R. Whitfield

---January 15, 1928

Permit us, dear brother, to make a few remarks concerning the matter of conditions as mentioned in your good article. The expression, "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured by the sword; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it," plainly implies conditions. The very meaning of the language is that in order for them to eat the good of the land, and enjoy the blessings in the land, they must be willing and obedient. Their being permitted to do the eating depended upon that. On the other hand, if they refused and rebelled, they should be devoured by the sword. Being devoured by the sword depended upon their refusing and rebelling. One followed as a result of the other. Their eating the good of the land followed as a result of being willing and obedient. Their being devoured by the sword followed as a result of their refusing and rebelling. This language was addressed to Israel; and blessings were promised them on condition of being willing and obedient. Their eating the good of the land was contingent upon them being willing and obedient. The same thing is true today with spiritual Israel. Jesus said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye, if ye do them." Here is a happiness promised as a result of doing these things. It is necessary to know them first, and then do them. One must be a child of God first, in order to know these things. Then when the child of God knows these things, and does them, a happiness follows as a result—a happiness contingent upon the doing of these things. You have realized the truthfulness of this matter by experience. These remarks are made in love to you and the cause. C. H. C.

At Oxford, Mississippi

---February 1, 1928

We had a request to be with the church in Oxford, Miss., for a three days meeting embracing the first Sunday in this month (January, 1928). We left home at 1:45 on Thursday night before the first Sunday and arrived at Oxford at 10:28 Friday morning. Brother R. L. Bell met us at the train. We went to his home for a few moments and then to the church. Had meeting there Friday, Friday night, Saturday, Saturday night, and Sunday. There had been much rain in that section and the roads were bad, so the congregations were small at each service; but the services were all sweet and pleasant. We felt that the Lord was good to us and enabled us to speak to the comfort of the saints. On Sunday morning Elder W. L. Smith, who is the beloved pastor of the church, the writer and Deacons Smith and Waldrip, at the request of the church, formed ourselves into a presbytery for the purpose of ordaining Brother J. R. Heard to the full work of the gospel ministry and Brother R. L. Bell to the office of deacon. After examination of the brethren the ordination was proceeded with by prayer and the laying on of hands. We left Oxford at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon and arrived home at 4:15 Monday morning and found all as well as when we left, for which we trust we felt thankful. While in Oxford we visited dear Sister Morris, the widow of Elder A. B. Morris, as she was not well and not able to be at the meeting. We also visited Sister Murray, who is also old and feeble, and was not able to be at the meeting. We also visited Sister Henrietta Goodwin, whom we have known from childhood. Sister Goodwin was able to be at meeting only on Sunday. We spent one night in the good home of Brother Heard and Sister McCharen. Sister McCharen is a daughter of Elder and Sister Morris. The good brethren and sisters were good to us—much better than we feel to deserve, and we enjoyed the stay with them, and feel that we want to go there again before this year is gone, if the Lord will. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon them. We have been visiting that church occasionally for many years. We were with them when the church first moved to Oxford, and preached the first sermon in the house there. Many changes have come since then, but the Lord is still with them. We trust that they may continue faithful and true to the Master, and we are sure He will continue to bless them, though they pass through trials along the way. We shall not forget their many acts of kindness to us, not only on this trip, but at other times when we were with them, and the words of encouragement and comfort they have spoken to us. May the good Lord bless them abundantly, is our humble prayer. We trust they will remember us in prayer to the Lord. C. H. C.

Meeting at Little Rock

---April 1, 1928

At our last meeting in Little Rock (third Sunday in February) a brother, Edwin E. Fulks, of Vilonia, Ark., offered himself for membership with the church, and was gladly received. He requested that we administer the ordinance of baptism, and that it be attended to at the next meeting. We are expecting, the Lord willing, to go to Little Rock tomorrow and be with them at the regular service this month (March). We beg the Lord to be with us and to help us to attend to the duties that may be ours in His service, and that the dear brother may obtain the sweet rest that the Lord's little children find in the path of obedience. Brother Fulks came from the Missionaries, and has served them for a number of years as Sunday school superintendent, but got his eyes open to the truth by reading Old Baptist papers, books, and his Bible. After writing the above we received a telephone message that Brother H. C. Bryant, of Warren, Ark., had passed away and we were wanted to attend the funeral with Elder Jno. R. Harris at 2 o'clock on Sunday. So we could not go to Little Rock this time. Another good man is gone. May the Lord bless his bereaved ones. C. H. C.

Elder Fisher's Name Dropped

---May 15, 1928

In another place in this paper will be found an article from Elder J. H. Fisher in which he makes some announcement regarding the Glad Tidings. Brother Fisher's name has been on the editorial staff of The Primitive Baptist for some time. When he bought the Glad Tidings he wrote us to remove his name from our staff, as he had bought that paper. We have hesitated to remove his name, and thought best to wait awhile. We regret to give him up from our staff; but of course we could not refuse to grant his request. We hope he will still write occasionally for The Primitive Baptist. And we trust the good Lord may bless his efforts in laboring for the peace and unity of our people in the publication of the Glad Tidings, as well as in his efforts in traveling and preaching the glorious gospel of the grace of God. We are glad to labor with him in any way we can for the good of Zion and for the glory of our heavenly Master. ' May the Lord grant to bless the dear brother in every way that seemeth good to Him. C. H. C.

Moving to Thornton

---July 1, 1928

For some time we have been at work erecting a new office building and a dwelling at Thornton, Ark., preparatory to moving to that place. The house our wife earned in the contest two years ago, which most of our readers know about, was cashed in by the company who awarded it to her. They paid her a good price in cash, at her request, instead of shipping the house to her. We had the opportunity of buying a large hotel building at Thornton with a few acres of ground at what we thought was a bargain price. So we made the purchase and had the building torn down, and used the lumber and material in erecting a dwelling and office building, and they are just about completed at this writing. We ' are expecting, therefore, to move to Thornton in a few days, and it is probable that this issue of the paper will be mailed from that place. For a little more than two years we have had this paper printed by the Advocate Publishing Company, to whom we sold our printing plant nearly three years ago. We have placed an order for a new press and type, which we expect to have installed within a few weeks, and then we will print the paper ourselves in our new office at Thornton. When we get moved we will be glad for all our readers and friends to call on us-visit us and see us and see our new office and machinery. It is our intention now to change the paper to a weekly on the first of next year. That is our intention and desire, and will do so if it is possible. From now on our address will be Thornton, Ark. As soon as we get moved and matters all straightened out we hope to be able to do more writing for the paper than we have been doing. C. H. C.

Obey God or Man?

---August 15, 1928

In another place in this paper is a reply to an article which appeared in our columns some time ago from Elder J. A. Monsees. We do not care to notice anything especially in the article more than one expression, which is this-: "Whom should we obey, God or man? I might do about like Elders Cayce and Newman did- obey men rather than God." In this expression Elder Ross accuses us and Elder Newman of obeying men and not obeying God. Perhaps Brother Ross can tell how he learned that we did not obey God because we did not visit the churches of the Progressives. If we had any special impression of mind to visit the Progressives we never found it out. We did have an inclination to go to South Georgia and to make some enquiry to try to find out if the indications were for an adjustment of differences between our people and the Progressives. We tried to follow that impression, and so made the trip. We did not find the conditions such as to make us believe it would be prudent or right to undertake an effort to get the two parties together. We are well aware of the fact that when people are at variance and are not "ripe" for a settlement it is far better to let them alone. To do otherwise is to make bad matters worse. That we were right in our conclusion is clearly proven and manifest in an article in the Banner-Herald of August 1, 1928. In that paper is an article headed, "A Basis for Lasting Peace," by the editor. In that article we find the following paragraphs: We think it highly commendable for any church, using an instrument in their song service, to forbear such use in deference to the feelings of brethren who oppose such practice; and we think it equally commendable for those brethren who oppose such practice to manifest charity toward those who see no evil in it and are not willing to discard their brethren by making such a bar to fellowship. The use of an instrument in song service in the church does not affect the doctrine or ordinances of the church and is a matter which must at last be left to each sovereign church to decide for herself. To our mind this is evidence that those brethren are not ready to discard or put away the organs from their churches. They preferred the organ to the fellowship of the great body of Primitive Baptists, and they still have them and are not willing to dispense with them. Our people have spoken on this question-they did so several years ago-and we stand with the great body of Baptists on this question, and have stood there all the while. To attempt to revive that question now, and to attempt to get our people to reverse themselves on the question, would be to simply raise another war in our own ranks-and we here speak plainly but kindly-we are not going to do it. God does not require it, and to do so we would be obeying men rather than God. That matter is something which belongs to the Baptists in that country (South Georgia and Alabama) more than others. For us or others to go there and meddle with that matter, unless they ask us to come and help them get matters settled and adjusted, would be simply to meddle where we feel we have no business. Perhaps meddling where we have no business has had something to do in causing trouble in days gone by. We feel like it may be about time to do so no more. We feel like we are obeying God in pursuing that course-perhaps not, though, if we obeyed men in doing that way. We are ready to help brethren labor for peace and union with any of the brethren in any faction who are orderly in their walk and live godly lives, provided they are ready to lay down the thing that causes trouble. The introduction of organs in our churches has always caused trouble among us, and it always will. To unite with those who have them after having separated from them years ago, would simply be to unite with more trouble. Let them show that they want to unite with our people in peace by putting those things out, and then we may be ready to labor for a union, and thus obey God in laboring for union and not for trouble and confusion. The same principle prevails in laboring for union with those who have advocated and gone with the doctrine of the absolute predestination of all things. Advocating that doctrine among us has always caused trouble, and always will. Let those who advocate it, and who are not willing to lay it aside, stay among themselves and not bother us. If any are willing to lay that down, and to labor for peace and union with our people, then we are willing to help labor to that end. But we are not willing to help to labor for union with them unless they are willing to lay that aside, for to unite with them and for them to preach and advocate that doctrine among us would only cause us trouble again. We have had enough trouble in our ranks, and we do not care to help bring something among us that we are well aware would cause more trouble. Perhaps one church of God does not have the right or the authority to declare non-fellowship for another church of God. One sister in a family may go wrong and bring shame and disgrace on the family and on the other sisters and the brothers in that family. The other brothers and sisters cannot disinherit or put the wayward sister out of relationship; but they can refuse to associate with and keep company with that wayward sister until she mends her ways-and they should do it. Churches bear a sisterly relationship with each other. When a sister church walks disorderly and brings shame on the family the other sisters can and should refuse to keep company and associate with her until she mends her ways. If all would do that instead of so many trying to uphold her in her wrongs, it would have a greater influence to bring them to the right path. A church has the right to withdraw fellowship from a member, and no other church has the right to interfere; but no church has the right to hold a member in fellowship who is a disgrace to the cause, and who brings shame on sister churches by a wrong and ungodly life. A church is not a sovereign to do as she pleases; but is a sovereign to execute the laws of the King, and no farther. She is not a sovereign to do that which brings grief and sorrow to her sister churches who are satisfied to have, to do, to believe, and to practice what is in the Book, and nothing else. May the Lord help us to follow the path marked out in His Word. C. H. C.

Remarks to (Miss) Inez Vaughn

---September 15, 1928

It will be observed that the above letter was not written for publication, but we trust the sister will not think hard of us for putting it in the paper. It was written some time ago. Our readers will remember that we stated in our issue of July 1 that we had a great many letters which we had not been able to answer on account of being so busy building and moving when at home. The above is one of the letters we had on hand. We note that the sister states she was away from home at school. This being true, we do not know whether she is now at home or still in Roanoke, and we do not know her home address. The only way we know, then, to reach her is through the paper. It seems to us that the good Lord has shown her a great lesson and a great truth in the dream she relates. Worldly religionists do not know the Saviour in their service and worship. They are yet like the builders in ancient times. The builders anciently rejected the stone which has become the head of the corner. They did not understand, or know, where the place and work of that stone was, and they do not know yet. It is true that the ministry is a gift from the Lord to the church, but preachers are just men. The apostle said, "I also am a man." They should set right examples before others; but they make mistakes and do wrong, as well as other folks. They are to be esteemed for their work's sake, and not because they are better than others. May the good Lord bless you, dear sister, and enable you to walk in His ways and to show forth His praise by an orderly walk and godly conversation. C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 15:22-23

---October 1, 1928

For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at His coming.- (I Corinthians 15:22-23). We have been requested to give our views on this text, especially the clause, "But every man in his own order." In this chapter the apostle is treating directly and especially upon the subject of the resurrection of the bodies of the saints. The idea of a general resurrection, both of the just and the unjust, is taught in other parts of the Bible; but in this chapter the apostle is not treating upon the resurrection of the unjust, but of the Lord's children. Keeping in mind that he is treating upon this subject, then we know what people he is talking about when he says, "For as in Adam all die." All whom? All the Lord's children, those of whom he is writing. They all die. They are dying every day. He does not say here "for as in Adam all died" -but "all die" -in the present tense. All Adam's race died in him when he transgressed the law in Eden; but here' the apostle says they (God's children) "all die." He could not, then, in this language refer to the fall in Eden, but refers to the natural or physical death. God's people die that way, the same as other folks do. But though they do die in Adam, as natural beings, yet "in Christ shall all be made alive." They shall be made alive in Christ. When the body dies, the spirit does not die, but goes to God who gave it. The soul does not die. "Though the body dies on account of sin, yet the spirit lives on account of righteousness.." The same thing shall be made alive that dies. It is the body that dies; hence it is the body that shall be made alive. This shall be done at the time of which the apostle is writing in this chapter, which is the resurrection from the dead. "But every man in his own order." What every man? Every man of whom he is writing. Of whom is he writing? God's children. Hence, the bodies of all God's children shall be raised and made alive in Christ. They are to be both raised and made alive in Christ. "Christ the firstfruits." Under the law it was required that the first ripe fruit of the harvest should be offered unto the Lord, and if the offering was accepted by the Lord, this made sure the entire crop. This first ripe fruit was the first fruit of the crop. Christ became the first fruit of them that slept. As the first fruit He was raised when He had offered Himself as a spotless offering unto the Lord. The Father accepted the offering which He made, and "this made sure the entire crop being harvested. The resurrection of the saints is just as sure, then, as it is sure that Christ was raised. When will they be raised? "At His coming." When He comes back to earth again to gather His jewels home, they will all be raised and made alive in Christ. All those who are His will then be raised and made spiritual. "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." Then will God's predestination concerning them be fully accomplished. "For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified." -((9) (Romans 8:29-30). Amidst all the sorrows, trials and conflicts that are incident to this life, we are trusting and hoping, confidently (sometimes) looking forward to that time, for that blessed home beyond. May the sweet assurance of this comfort your hearts in all your trials. C. H. C.

Elder Hassell Dead

---October 1, 1928

We were made sad on learning of the death of Elder Sylvester Hassell, which occurred on August 18, 1928. Elder Hassell was truly a great and wonderful man. He was a man of great talent and learning, and was truly great in true humility and devotion to the cause of the Master. The following from the pen of Elder R. H. Pittman, editor of the Advocate and Messenger, better expresses what we desire should be said in our columns concerning this dear brother than we have words to express: Brother Hassell is dead! These sad words were first heard by me as they were whispered in my ear during the morning service at the Ketocton Association Sunday, August 19, 1928, and as the news spread many hearts were saddened and tears of sorrow shed. And upon reaching home Sunday night I found a telegram from Charles Hassell awaiting me, and regret very much that I could not attend the funeral services of this dear man of God. He was very near and dear to me. For thirty-five years we have been very close friends, and during the last years of his life we were closely and intimately connected. His editorial service on the Advocate and Messenger was a blessing to thousands and an inspiration to his co-workers, with whom he was in perfect harmony. The writer was last with him in January in a meeting in which he labored for reconciliation of estranged brethren; and on July 16th -his last letter to me-he said "I would be glad to see you again." But no more shall we meet in this life. He has been called up higher; and heaven to me is a little dearer, because of his going. He was ready to be offered, and the time of his departure was at hand. He fought a good fight, finished his course, and kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give him at that day; and not to him only, but to all them also that love His appearing. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain." Elder Sylvester Hassell, of Williamston, N. C, minister, historian, teacher, was doubtless the best authority on church history in North Carolina, and possibly in this age. He stood among the foremost thinkers and writers of the United States. His ancestors came from England to North Carolina in the Eighteenth Century. His parents were Elder C. B. Hassell and his first wife, Mary Davis. He was born in Williamston, N. C., July 28, 1842, and died there Aug. 18, 1928, having reached the ripe age of 86 years and 20 days. He was educated at the Williamston Academy and the University of North Carolina, taking a high stand at both, and graduating with honors. He was proficient in several languages; was principal of a school for young men in Wilson, N. C., and professor of languages in a northern college for some years. He published, in 1886, the Church History, the most complete work of its kind ever published by our people, and a monument more lasting than granite to him and to his father, who began the work. In 1892 he became associate editor of the Gospel Messenger, and in 1896, its proprietor and managing editor, which position he retained nearly twenty years, when the paper was sold to Elder Z. C. Hull, of Atlanta, Ga., from whom it was purchased by the writer in 1923, and all this time Elder Hassell has been on the editorial staff. -----

 Truly he was a prince in Israel. As I am able to judge, it has not been my privilege to know one who bore more marks of real greatness. In manners, humble and retiring as a little child; in general information, he has been called "a walking encyclopedia;" in service, untiring and unselfish; in character, irreproachable and unstained; in deportment, gentle, kind, tender. More than any man I ever knew he suffered long and remained kind; envied not; was not puffed up; did not behave himself unseemly; sought not his own; was not easily provoked; thought no evil; rejoiced not in iniquity, but rejoiced in the truth. His motto as historian, editor, preacher and teacher was "Speaking the truth in love;" and this he did uncompromisingly with error in friend or foe. Neither the tie of blood nor the bond of fellowship was sufficiently strong to draw him from the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. And the Bible was, to him, God's literal, spiritual and eternal truth, and he defended its truths with tongue and pen possibly more valiantly and ably than any man in this age. Spurgeon is reported to have said that Hassell's History contained less error than any book he ever read. A professor of language in Wake Forrester College recently said that all of us shall have to go to Hassell's History of the Church for authoritative information on this subject. And thus it is true that "though dead he yet speak-eth," and will continue to speak (certainly among the people called Baptists) so long as there is love for principles and practices upon which the Apostolic Church was founded. God does not raise up many such men; "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called." But He does call some, and our precious Brother Hassell, who has gone home to glory, was one of them. We shall miss him; his churches will miss his loving service; the Kehukee Association, which he has for thirty-five years served as moderator, will miss his wise counsel; and thousands of readers will miss his timely, instructive and spiritual editorials. Worldly wisdom and human efforts can never fill his place; only God can prepare and send another such servant to labor in His vineyard. May we all pray that this He will do. The funeral services were conducted by Elder J. C. Moore, of Whitakers, N. C., a son of the late Elder Andrew J. Moore, who was a lifelong friend and associate of Elder Hassell. It was his wish that this son of his nearest friend in life perform the simple rites for the dead when his day of rest had come. Elder Moore was visibly moved by the solemnity of the burden laid upon him, but after reading the 103rd Psalm he feelingly and beautifully spoke of the deceased and of their love and fellowship. Other ministers who spoke briefly included Elder N. S. Harrison, of Washington County, Elder S. B. Denny, of Wilson, and Elder A. B. Denson, of Rocky Mount. Two hymns, both favorites of Elder Hassell, were used; "Rock of Ages" at the beginning of the services and "How Firm a Foundation" at the conclusion. Almost every Primitive Baptist minister in eastern North Carolina attended the services; also Congressmen Lindsay Warren, a lifelong admirer and personal friend of Elder Hassell; Josephus Daniels, whose youthful schooling was had at his hands and whose admiration and affection for him began from that day and has never ended; R. O. Everett, of Durham, John D. Gold, of Wilson; and scores of others from over the entire eastern end of the state were there. Three sons of Elder Hassell -Frank, Charles and Calvin- all of prominence, are left of his immediate family to mourn the loss of a loving father. The casket was borne through the throng of sorrowing friends to the waiting hearse. The long walk from the house to the street was lined on either side with flowers. The march to the grave was begun, and there, with simple rites, the casket was lowered into the grave. "For this corruption must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. * * * * Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." The above beautiful tribute is copied from the Advocate and Messenger. We mourn the loss of this great man in Israel. May the Lord help us all to be submissive to His holy will and sustain us by His grace. C. H. C.

Requests Name Dropped

---October 1, 1928

A few days ago (in September) we received the following note from Elder W. E. Brush: Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-Will you please drop my name from the editorial staff of The Primitive Baptist, and oblige, your brother, I hope, W. E. Brush. In compliance with Brother Brush's request we have dropped his name from the staff. We do not know why he made the request, but we comply with it with no ill will whatever. C. H. C.

Our Association

---October 15, 1928

Our association (the South Arkansas) met with our church (Cane Creek) here in Thornton, beginning on Friday before the third Sunday in September. We had ten visiting preachers with us: Elders J. W. West, Crosbyton, Texas; S. N. Redford, Harlingen, Texas; W. W. Fowler, Dallas, Texas; B. Isaacs, Rosebud, Ark.; W. A. Barham, Watalula, Ark.; G. W. Reed, Harvey, Ark.; R. L. Piles, Hon, Ark.; G. A. Jones, Prescott, Ark.; P. E. Whitwell, Little Rock, Ark.; C. M. Monk, Jonesboro, La. The home ministers present during the meeting were Elders John R. Harris, Thornton, Ark.; J. P. Baker, Wilmar, Ark.; A. D. Cencibaugh, Donaldson, Ark.; W. E. Hargett, El Dorado, Ark.; J. W. Guest, Lono, Ark.; G. P. Woodall, Athens, La.; and C. H. Cayce, Thornton, Ark. A good crowd was in attendance each day, and the Lord blessed the ministers with a fruitful mind at each service, and they preached the gospel in its sweetness to the comfort and benefit of the Lord's humble poor. Two willing souls were encouraged to take up their cross during the meeting and come home to their friends, telling what great things the Lord had done for them. They were baptized on Sunday morning by Elder John R. Harris. May the Lord bless them and help them to show forth the praise of the Lord while they live in the world, is our prayer. This was a wonderful meeting to us. Love and sweet fellowship reigned throughout the whole meeting. There was not a jar of any kind nor a discordant note sounded. The Lord's divine presence was sweetly manifested, and we were all loth to leave the place, and yet glad we had enjoyed the great privilege and blessing of meeting together in this great assembly. May the Lord be praised, and may He grant us more such great blessings. C. H. C.

Remarks to Elder D. M. Vail

---October 15, 1928

We do not feel that we have any special light on the text, {(Romans 7:24)} but think the apostle was writing concerning his experience along life's way. He still had the same old sinful nature to contend with that he always had, and this sinful nature and disposition which he had gave him much trouble and concern. He longed to be free from sin, and to live above and without it. Sin in his members, with which he had to contend, is called a body of death. He felt and realized that he could not deliver himself from it. Evidently his only hope was in the Lord. It appears to us that this is the experience and hope of the Lord's dear children in this present age as well as then; and if this describes your feeling and experience, it is an evidence that you are a child of grace. C. H. C.

Flint River Association

---November 1, 1928

We had the pleasure of attending the Flint River Association in North Alabama on Friday, Saturday and first Sunday in October, 1928. It was held with old Flint River Church, near Brownsboro, Ala., the oldest Baptist Church in the state. That church was constituted on the second day of October, 1808, which was the first Sunday. The centennial of the constitution of that church was celebrated there on the first Sunday in October, 1908, and Friday and Saturday before, and we had the pleasure of attending that meeting. That was twenty years ago. There have been many changes during those years, but the principles of truth remain the same. This was a glorious meeting. If we are not mistaken there were about sixteen ministers in attendance, and the preaching was all harmonious. Two dear sisters came forward on Sunday and asked for a home in this old church. They were gladly received, and the time of their baptism was set for the second Sunday, the regular meeting time of the church there. May the good Lord be praised for His goodness and mercy. Let us try to serve Him more and better what short time we have left for us to stay here in this old world. C. H. C.

Remarks to Elder J. W. West

---December 1, 1928

We appreciate the above good letter. We appreciated having you at our association, and also in our humble home. We appreciated having all the dear brethren and sisters in our home who came to see us, though we do not feel worthy to have them under our roof. We cannot treat them as well as we desire to, but they are welcome, and we want them to feel that way. May the Lord bless and keep you, dear brother, and lead you on in the good old way. We are glad you are still having good meetings out there, and that the Lord's rich blessings are still being showered down upon the good brethren and sisters. "If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land." This is just as true now as it was when it was written. The Lord has not changed. Yes, we want to visit Texas again. Perhaps we can take the good wife and children and make a trip out there next summer. We will try to do so, if it seems that the Lord so directs. Pray for us. In love, C. H. C.

Brother Hollingsworth's Letter

---December 15, 1928

Elsewhere in this issue is a letter from Brother W. W. Hollingsworth, of Bessemer, Ala., urging the readers to try to get some new subscribers for The Primitive Baptist. We trust you will all read his letter, and then put forth your best efforts to carry out his suggestions, and send us a lot of new subscribers by the first of the year. Brother Hollingsworth intended for his letter to be in our issue for December 1st, but it got to the office just a little too late for that issue. It has been our desire to change the paper back to a weekly from the first of the year 1929, but we just cannot do that. There has not been enough increase in the subscription list the past year to justify us in making the change to a weekly, and involving the necessary additional expense. It would cost more to get the paper out weekly-considerably more. It will be necessary to have a lot more subscribers to justify us in making the change. We cannot afford to try to get the paper out at a loss. It must be made to pay its cost or we cannot continue to send it out. Unless we have enough subscribers for it to pay its cost to send it out weekly we just cannot send it out that often. If every reader of the paper who is in a position to do so would put forth some effort, by asking others to subscribe for the paper, no doubt enough new subscribers could be sent in to enable us to make the change in a very short time. Some of those who are isolated and not living near other Primitive Baptists could write to some person they know and ask them to subscribe for the paper. This would do good and would help. If we know our poor heart our sincere desire in publishing The Primitive Baptist is to try to comfort, instruct, and benefit the Lord's dear children, and to build up and promote the cause of the Master-the cause we all love so well. If it were a matter of financial choice there are other things we could engage in that would be much more remunerative. Much more money could be made by us in engaging in other things. We have felt to make a sacrifice in this respect all these years since we have been connected with the paper, even before the death of our dear father. It has been our desire all along, and it is yet, to give all the reading matter possible for the money. For these reasons it is our sincere desire to have enough subscribers to enable us to send the paper out weekly. To this end we need the assistance and help of our readers. We are giving our whole time to the work of the Master in publishing His truth from the pulpit and the press to the very best of our ability. Is it asking too much to ask you to help us what you can in getting new subscribers for the paper? Will you help? C. H. C.

Close of Volume 43

---December 15, 1928

This issue closes the forty-third volume of The Primitive Baptist. For forty-three years this paper has been published under practically the same management, it having been established by our sainted father on January 1, 1886, and published by him until August, 1905, when he fell in the service of the Master. Since that time it has been our lot to continue the editing and publishing of the paper to the present time. Sometimes the road has been rough and steep, in more ways than one. We have met with difficulties along the way; but the Lord has brought us thus far, and in Him is our trust and confidence. Sometimes it seemed that our way was all hedged in, and we could see no way to press on farther; but in a way not expected the way would be opened up so that we were enabled to go forward again. The same doctrine and principles that the paper stood for from the beginning are the same that have been contended for all along to the present. We have seen no reason for any change along this line. Principles are eternal and never change. What was a principle of truth forty-three years ago is a principle of truth today. Truth needs no amendments or additions or subtractions. Yes, we have made mistakes. We are very well aware of that fact, and we are sorry of every mistake we have ever made. It is our sincere desire to not make the same mistake twice. It is our desire to try to profit by the mistakes we have made in trying to avoid them for the future. We have tried to conduct The Primitive Baptist in such a way as to comfort, instruct, edify and build up the Lord's dear children, and in defense of the Primitive or Old School Baptist cause. We have tried to publish an Old Baptist paper. How well we have succeeded is for the brotherhood to say. Our circulation signifies that many are pleased along this line. Still, the circulation is not what we would like for it to be. We had hoped that we would have a circulation large enough by this time to justify us in going back to a weekly on the first of the incoming year, but we are disappointed in this. We yet hope that the circulation may increase enough to enable us to change to a weekly before the year 1929 is gone. How many of you will help us to reach this by sending in new subscribers right away? If any of our brethren and sisters, or any of our readers, have been hurt with us, and felt that we have not done as we should in any particular, we beg your forgiveness. It is not our desire to wound the feelings of any of the Lord's dear children, not even the least one. Please throw the mantle of charity over our many imperfections, and pardon what you may see amiss in us. Help us all you can in the spread of the truth. Pray the Lord to direct us in the right way and to sustain us by His grace. Until the first of the New Year we now bid all our readers adieu, humbly praying the Lord's richest blessings may rest upon all. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 44

---January 1, 1929

With this issue we begin the forty-fourth volume of The Primitive Baptist. For forty-three years this paper has gone forth on its mission of endeavor to "contend earnestly for the faith that was once delivered to the saints." Now another year is ushering in, and we desire to begin the toils and conflicts with renewed energy and vigor, inspired by the good hope, which we trust has been given us by the Lord through grace, and quietly trusting in His glorious and precious promises and His power and faithfulness to perform the same. We feel to be encouraged when we think of some of the things that have transpired during the last year or two. Many of our people, where they have been separated and divided for years, have been adjusting their little differences, forgiving each other, as the Lord has admonished and directed, and have been coming together in peace and love. This gives us renewed hope of a better day for our dear people. On the other hand, when we see the great lethargy and indifference which seems to exist in some places; when we see the war and strife among the brethren going on in some sections, it makes us feel cast down and discouraged. In olden times when Israel engaged in warfare among themselves, the Lord's chastening hand fell heavily upon them; and we fear like troubles or distresses will befall us today. "When ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." We so much deplore such conditions existing among our dear people at any place. May the Lord have mercy upon us. "This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men." -Paul. It is our sincere desire to endeavor to encourage the Lord's little children to be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable. The good works are those things the Lord has commanded in His word. The things He has not commanded are not good works. It is profitable to engage in those good works. The inspired apostle so teaches in this text, and we are disposed to believe it. There is something gained in that which is profitable. If nothing is gained by engaging in or doing a thing, then that thing is unprofitable.

It is unprofitable for the Lord's dear children to be engaged in doing the things the Lord has not commanded, and especially in doing the things He has expressly forbidden. Something is to be gained by them in doing the things He has commanded, for those things are profitable unto men. We do not believe one can do these good works in and of himself. We are sure that no one can do these good works without the Lord's help. Though this is true, yet we need not try to make excuse for ourselves for not doing them by saying the Lord did not help us. Jesus said to His disciples, "Without me ye can do nothing." We should always remember from whence all our strength and help comes. It all comes from the Lord, and He has told us that He is a very present help in every time of trouble, or in every time of need. Then if we fail to do these things and engage in things we should not engage in, it is not because we were without the Lord or that He failed to be present as a help that we needed. The fault lies with us, and we are the blameworthy characters, and we are the ones who will be sure to suffer the penalty. If we have a good hope, a sweet hope, a precious hope, it is because the good Lord gave it to us by His glorious, unmerited, rich and discriminating grace. Having done so much for us, sure He is worthy of our service and all our praise. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." "Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." We should not let father, mother, brother, sister, wife, children, houses or lands, or any earthly tie or pleasure come between us and the service of our blessed and glorious Redeemer. The service of God should be first, and other things (earthly things) be secondary. Both cannot be first with us. "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." -Jesus. "He is the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." He does not light every man that cometh into this natural world. The natural sun lighteth every man that cometh into this natural world. "The Lord God is a sun and shield." He is the spiritual light, the spiritual sun. He lighteth every man that cometh into the spiritual realm. We come into that realm by being born into it, just as we came into the natural realm by being born into it. If we follow Jesus we must have our faces turned toward Him, and He is before us and goes before us then. If we are not following Him we have our faces turned from Him, and we are walking away from Him. As we walk away from Him, and are not following Him, we walk in our own shadow-in the dark; and we then cannot see just where we are going. Hence we stumble and fall. "He that doeth these things shall never fall." With our faces turned toward Him, and in following Him, we have our faces turned toward the light; we walk in the light; we can see where we are placing our feet; "there is none occasion of stumbling in him." The remainder of our days, whether many or few, we desire should be devoted to His praise and to His service and to the service of His humble poor. The Lord's people are a poor and afflicted people. We feel to be the poorest of them all-" less than the least of all saints." We have no righteousness to plead. All our hope and trust and confidence is in the Lord. We need the prayers, the help and encouragement of the Lord's dear children. We desire to be granted an humble place with them what few remaining days we have here in this world of trouble, sorrows, distresses, disappointments and sad bereavements. There is no other place we can go. There is no other home for us. The dear Old Baptists, notwithstanding all their faults, their mistakes, their shortcomings, their wars and quarrels among themselves, are our people. They are the dearest people on earth to us. We are not espousing the cause of any faction among them. We desire to press forward in the "strait" path the Lord has directed His children to walk in, and try to labor for unity and peace among this best people in the world. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon them, and may He help us to live more devoted to Him and to serve Him better. Will each of you pray for us and help us along the way? Is this asking too much of you? C. H. C.

Enjoys the Paper

---January 1, 1929

Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-Yes, I read The Primitive Baptist, and really enjoy reading it, for it is full of good articles that are food for a hungry child of God. According to my estimation each and every copy has at least one article that, alone, is worth the price of the paper for a whole year. As I seldom hear any gospel preaching I enjoy reading the good paper to the fullest extent. I can truthfully say I find no fault to the paper. Some articles are good; others better; and if, perchance, I did find something a little out of line with my reasoning I would not try to find fault-only would think they or I were a little out of line, and try as best I can to keep myself in line; and if they are out of line, it is only an error of the mind and not of the heart, hoping and believing that in due time they may be set right. I am not a good hand to solicit subscribers, but I will endeavor to send you one or two names in the near future. Realizing, as I do, that there are so many of God's dear little children who are hungering for the nourishment that The Primitive Baptist would afford them, but who are not financially able to pay the subscription price; and often hearing Arminian preachers, while taking up a collection, quote "it is more blessed to give than to receive," makes me wonder why those who want to build up the circulation of the beloved paper in order to make it a weekly (and I presume we all do) pay subscription two, three, and five years in advance, having no assurance that we will live that long to enjoy the reading; besides, if we all paid five years in advance it would be a great benefit to the editor now, but where would be the income for the next four years? Would it not be more enjoyable to those whom the Lord has prospered with this world's goods to pay subscription for one or more of these poor and afflicted children of God, who are so hungry for the very kind of food The Primitive Baptist will supply. Now, brother, please throw the mantle of charity over me. A sinner saved by grace, if saved, J. B. F. Lasater. Clarksville, Ark.

REMARKS

We appreciate the above kind letter, which was written in March, 1928, but we could not get to it very well any sooner. However, it is just as good now as when it was written. Many of the Lord's dear children, we are sure, would enjoy reading The Primitive Baptist who are not really able to pay for it. We do not want one dear child of God to be deprived of that joy and comfort on account of their poverty in the goods of this world. We are already sending the paper to many who are not able to pay for it, and are ready to send it to others who are in like condition. Many have sent contributions to help send the paper to such persons. When anyone sends one dollar for that purpose, we send the paper a whole year to some poor person for that amount. In other words, we give a dollar for that purpose every time we get a dollar contributed for that object. When you send us one dollar to help pay for the paper for the poor and unfortunate, someone gets the paper a whole year for that dollar. As to some paying for the paper for several years, we suggest that if one hundred do that this year, and one hundred do the same thing next year, and another hundred do the same thing the next year, and another hundred the next, and so on, all along, the income would not be cut down in any one year, but we would have a little less work to pay for in keeping the accounts with the subscribers. Both the above things help the editor to some extent, and the first suggestion helps to send comfort to the Lord's dear children who are poor and afflicted. When one subscribes for the paper for himself, he thereby helps to support the paper and to keep it going, and thus helps to provide a way to comfort those who are poor and destitute and who are deprived of the privilege of hearing preaching. Let us all put forth a little more effort and see if we can be more help along this line. C. H. C.

Remarks to Elder W. P. Merrell

We feel unworthy of such expressions of love and confidence and sweet fellowship from any of the Lord's dear children, especially one of His dear humble servants. We often feel that our labors are and have been all in vain, and were it not for such expressions of encouragement as the above which we sometimes receive, we feel that we would have gone down in despair. But such as this encourages us to press on again, trusting alone in Israel's God. But it seems that we cannot long remember these encouraging things, for there are so many things encountered to discourage us and to cause us to feel sad and cast down. Our dear companion has been a wonderful help to us to press on in the service. Pray for us. C. H. C.

Thirty-Nine Years Ago

On Saturday night, January 4, 1890, we made our first effort to speak in the name of the Master. It was at the home of a Brother Morris, in Wayne County, Tenn., between Waynesboro and Savannah. Our dear sainted father, Elder S. F. Cayce, Elder J. P. Pilkington and Elder M. L. Rhodes were present. There may have been other ministers present, but we do not remember them. It was just after a discussion at Waynesboro between our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, and J. A. Harding, who represented the Campbellites. We attended the debate. After the debate some of us went to the home of the Brother Morris, and there that night we were prevailed upon to make our first attempt to speak. We remember well with what great fear and trembling we arose to make the effort. We also remember well that in trying to introduce the service we tried to line and the congregation sang that good old song which has been one of our favorites all these years, Amazing grace! how sweet the sound! That saved a wretch like me. When we had tried, in our poor stammering way, to offer a few words in prayer, we read (Ephesians 2:8-9) "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast." We tried to talk for a few moments in connection with that language. Then we took our seat, feeling ashamed of the poor effort, and buried our face in father's lap and wept like a child. Yet we remember how father and others wept and tried to encourage and console us, and how they told us that what little we had said was gospel truth. On Friday, Dec. 28, 1928, we were passing along the road from Waynesboro to Savannah, our family with us. We stopped at the old place, and we and our wife got out of the car and viewed the place. We went in and took a look at the room where we stood, and could see in our memory the faces of some who were there on that occasion thirty-nine years ago, so memorable to us. Our poor heart was filled with gratitude and thankfulness to God for His mercies extended to us all these years, in bringing us safely through the many dangers, toils and snares which we have encountered. We called to mind the reading and the singing of that good old hymn mentioned, and the lines, Through many dangers, toils and snares, I have already come; 'Tis grace has brought me safe thus far, And grace will lead me home. We thought of how we loved the sweet doctrine of grace then, and of how it has been "our meat and drink" until now; and how it is still our sweet hope that grace will lead us home. Well, we just cannot tell you all about how we felt, and the thoughts and meditations which passed through our mind. On Saturday and first Sunday in this month was our regular meeting time here in Thornton. On Sunday we felt deeply impressed with what we have here been telling you about, and so we tried to tell something about these things, and lined the same good old hymn and the congregation sang it. Then we tried to talk awhile from the same text. When we had concluded Elder John R. Harris made a sweet talk. Though there were not very many present, on account of so much sickness, so many having flu, and the inclemency of the weather, yet we had a sweet and pleasant service. May the Lord be praised for His goodness, and may He help us all to press on in His delightful service, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Brother Fairchild in Mississippi

---February 15, 1929

We see that Elder J. W. Fairchild is now located at Stringer, Miss. We note, also, that his name now appears on the editorial staff of the Banner-Herald, of which Elder Wm. H. Crouse is editor and manager. The paper is published in Georgia. The paper has some good articles appearing in its columns from time to time. It is a Progressive paper. C. H. C.

Deacons and Preachers

Since so many have been having something to say about the deacons and preachers we feel just now that we desire to say a few words. Much has been said about the duty of deacons. We feel like saying several things about the duty of preachers, but cannot say just now what we would like to say on that line. Perhaps we can say something on that line later on, at some time in the future, if the Lord will. Let us kindly call attention, just here, that Paul has told us that even so "hath the Lord ordained that they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel." He also calls our attention to the fact that he had the power or authority to lead about a wife as well as the other apostles and other brethren. He had that same right. But he also tells us that he had not used the authority or power which he rightly had, that he might preach the gospel, the glad tidings, freely. He says "I am debtor * * * so, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also." It seems to us that the mind of the apostle was to make sacrifices and to endure whatever might befall him, that none of these things should interfere with his labor in preaching the glorious gospel of the Son of God. He would preach, whether the brethren contributed to his necessities or not. And he does not tell us the Lord ordained that a man should live of the gospel who is not engaged in preaching it. In other words, he does not teach in this that the Lord has ordained that a man should preach one day in a week or month and live seven days a week or the whole month of the gospel. If a man spends only one or two days in the week in preaching, it is not right or Scriptural that he and his family should live in idleness the rest of the time by the liberalities of the brethren. We feel sure that if a man will devote such time to the ministry as the Lord requires of him that a way will be provided for the support of himself and those dependent on him. The Lord will put it into the heart of somebody to see after their needs-not their wants. The Lord's way was for Israel to care for the prophets He sent unto them. They failed to care for Elijah, and he had to flee for his life; but the Lord sent food to him by the ravens. He is able to do that yet; and He is faithful. We need men in the ministry who are willing to endure hardness and privations and toils and afflictions, as good soldiers; who are ready to stand with their faces like flint toward the enemies of truth and righteousness, and who will not shun to teach any part of what the Bible teaches, but who will teach it all in the spirit of love and meekness, without fear of man. May the Lord grant to send such men forth to labor in His vineyard. The laborers are few and the harvest is great. Our humble opinion is that if a man who occupies the pulpit as a preacher who is faithful to declare the whole counsel of God, doing this in the right spirit, and is conservative, and is called upon to devote his whole time to this work, that he and his family will be cared for to the extent of their real needs. If he is not cared for, we feel like he could justly conclude that he is either in the wrong field of labor or that there has been something wrong with his work or teaching. We freely confess, with other brethren, that our people have not always cared for their pastor as we think the Bible teaches they should. Yet we also say that where this duty has been taught in the right way they are free and liberal and care for their ministers. We know they have been far better to us than we feel to deserve. They have been so good to us that we simply feel like we belong to them, and that they have a right to all our labor and efforts. We can never repay what they have done for us. Thank God for the privilege of living with a people who have been so good to us. We do not mean to say or to leave the impression that we have never made a trip at our own expense, for we have done that a number of times. Yet we feel like the Lord has put it into the heart of others to make it up, and those who failed to do what the Lord has taught in His word they should do are the losers. They have failed to enjoy the blessings the Lord bestows upon His obedient children. Hence the apostle let the brethren know that it was for their good and not for his own benefit that he taught them this duty. A man who teaches this truth just for his own advantage, that he may get a contribution from the brethren, is in the wrong, we think. The preacher should have something for his children to do, as well as something for himself to do when not engaged in preaching. It is not right that his children be brought up in idleness and taught to depend upon others for a support. It is no dishonor for one to labor with his hands. Our father spent much time in the ministry. For a number of years his whole life was devoted to publishing the truth by tongue and pen. When at home he worked hard. He schooled his children the best he could in the public schools, but he also taught them to labor with their hands. We remember one winter we walked two miles to school, and during that winter we cut wood from the stump, and got it to the house, to run two fireplaces. Circumstances made it necessary to have both fires night and morning. This was before he began publishing The Primitive Baptist. After he began publishing the paper we worked in the office and went to school very little any more. His other children worked, too. We remember that one Christmas we worked all Christmas eve night to get to lay off on Christmas day, and then had to work till noon that day. We are not relating these things for sympathy, but to emphasize the fact that it is right for the minister's family to work. Referring to the minister mentioned by Brother Blackshear in his article in another place in this paper who had thirty-two children. Surely all those children were not dependent at one time upon that preacher for a support. If so, we wonder how he ever supplied them. Sure the deacons would have had a time getting up clothing, food, and all other things such a family might use-especially if it had been as times are now, with such luxuries as many people think they must have. Wonder if the brethren bought cars for all that family to ride in! Laying aside levity, we will say that though we do not know that preacher, or who he was, yet we are of the opinion that if he was faithful to his calling, and reared his children as the Lord directs, his and their needs were supplied. No doubt, though, that they lacked many of the luxuries that many people enjoyed. Most of the Lord's ministers are poor in the goods of this world, and it has ever been so. No doubt one reason the Lord has it so is that the temptations of riches are great and have a tendency to draw them away from the service of God and His humble poor. They must be poor themselves in order to know how to sympathize with the poor. Paul knew what it was to be poor. The Saviour had not where to lay His head. Would it not be a good thing for some of us preachers to try to investigate the good Book a little more to try to learn what our duty is, and then try to do it? Let us try to learn there just what to teach, and how to teach it. Let us try to learn there if it is not our duty to be ready and willing to make sacrifices, as well as for the brotherhood to make them. Then let us be conservative, and not try to teach that the whole burden should be placed on others, and none on ourselves. For ourselves we feel like sharing the burdens with our precious brethren, and for them, and not requiring them to bear all the burdens and us go free. We want to be down, or up, with them. We are sure it is a mistake to ordain a man to the ministry who does not have the qualifications inspiration has given. And it is also a mistake to ordain a man to the office of deacon who does not possess the qualifications. Ordination will not make a man a preacher. Neither will ordination make a man a deacon. When a man is ordained for a deacon, when he is not a deacon, he is simply put into a place where he does not belong. He does not fit there, and he will not be a blessing to the church in that place. "Consider what I say, and the Lord give thee understanding in all things." -Paul. Let us consider all these things. May the good Lord help us to do as He would have us do, and to honor Him in all our doings. C. H. C.

From the Gospel Standard

---February 15, 1929

It seems that some of the same conditions exist among the Particular Baptists of England that exist among our people in the United States. We have read with interest the leading article in the Gospel Standard for January, 1929, by Mr. J. K. Popham, the editor of that magazine. We wish we had space to copy the whole article, but it is so long that we do not have space for it all. But we will copy one paragraph from it, and suggest a careful reading and study of it. C. H. C.
THE PARAGRAPH

The next thing to notice is our practice. If it is found faulty, it will undoubtedly be the fruit of the loss of a proper sense of the paramount importance of doctrine, and a consequent neglect of it in our ministry, with a more or less shallow experience in our hearts of God and His glorious gospel. But practice is a tender point. We may allow a defect in judgment and experience, but an accusation against our conduct is intolerable. But are we clean? Is church discipline understood, known, and attended to? Is it not a fact that a member of a church may leave it, or be withdrawn from as a disorderly person, and be received by another church of the same faith and order among us without any reference to the first church, and in utter disregard of (Matthew 18:17)? Yea, and he may go forth and preach, and be received and encouraged by some of our ministers. Ought this to be? Again, have not some of our churches departed from the ancient simplicity of public worship? We have now our trained choirs, and in some of our chapels we find organs. Probably we shall yet have the choirs curtained off from the congregations. It is not denied that harmonious singing to the accompaniment of a well played organ is most pleasing to a musical ear, but let it not be forgotten that that sound is confined within the walls of the building, while an unmusical voice, harsh and unpleasing may all the while be one sound which expresses melody and grace in the heart. {(Ephesians 5:19); ((6) (Colossians 3:16)} I have known causes where the people could not sing in their services, the hymns being read, and the Lord was present, as His mighty works among the people proved. But that was many years ago. Once more, are we not grievously worldly? Women and girls among us have their hair cut off, and their dresses made after the fashion of the day. And they are to be seen in our choirs, and worse, some of them are members of churches, and, while openly violating the Spirit's teaching, { (I Corinthians 9:13-16)} dare to go to the Lord's table, and are permitted. Paul could say, "But if any than seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God" (verse 16). Alas! we of the "Gospel Standard" denomination cannot so speak. All our ancient landmarks are in danger of being removed, our standards are low, even moral standards.

God Was There First

---March 1, 1929

In some notes sent us from the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, of some talks made by different speakers there during the "Founder's Week Conference," was the following concerning an address delivered by J. Alexander Clark. Mr. Clark tells that God was with the natives in Central Africa long before he was there. This is plain and irrefutable evidence of the truthfulness of the doctrine advocated by the Primitive Baptists-that God is not dependent upon Bibles, preachers, churches, Sunday schools, leagues, societies, or the efforts of men to regenerate sinners-that in the work of regenerating sinners God does not use the gospel. He regenerates sinners as He pleases, whether the preacher is there or not. The tale the modern preachers tell that the Africans and other so-called heathen are dying and going to hell daily by the multiplied thousands for the lack of money and preachers is a hoax-a plain and palpable falsehood. It is told to get the hard-earned dollars from the people. They are simply making merchandise of the people. C. H. C. Mr. J. Alexander Clarke, from nearly thirty years of service in the Katanga highlands of Central Africa, held profound attention while telling of the victories of divine grace among the people whose language he has reduced to writing, and into which he has translated the New Testament. "Let me tell you of some of the amazing discoveries we made concerning that African people," said Mr. Clarke. "We found them a peaceable folk, extending a hearty welcome to all white men who went into that land. I had the privilege of going north into the Lubaland, one of the districts of Kotanga, and there I found a people never before visited by the white man, and this is the discovery that I made: Long before I set foot in Lubaland, God had been there. God had been there silently, yet eloquently testifying of His own power and deity, for all Africans of that tribe believe in God. In my study of the language and research work connected with the translation of the Holy Scriptures I found many names for God-the Father of Creation, the Ancient of many days, the breasted One

(One who plays the part of mother to us). So God is known there. Then you say, 'Why go to them?' Not only did I find this great belief in God, but also a consciousness of sin. They fear 'Bulang,' the Forger of the eternal hills. And so we find them every new moon coming with reeking blood and pouring it out at the family altar and crying out to God. Here we have this people with the knowledge of God but no joy, no happiness, only foreboding, fear and distress. And that is why we go to them with the evangel of God's great love, for in the evangel we have the final and full revelation of God."

Unreasonable Demand

---March 1, 1929

We received a letter a few days ago from a sister in which she said, "I want a little advice from you. My husband and I are Missionary Baptists, and he objects to me taking your paper, but I hate to part with it. Do you think it right for me to take it anyway?" This is a question which is embarrassing to answer, but we will try to comply with it. Our religious preferences and privileges are personal and individual matters, and no person on earth has any right to object or interfere with the same. Such a spirit is not that of Protestantism, in its originality. It is not the spirit of liberty or freedom. It is a spirit of tyranny and domination. It is the same spirit manifested by Rome in the days of the inquisition and persecution. If the husband is taking a paper that he likes to read, the wife has the same right to object to his taking such paper as he has to object to her taking the religious paper of her choice. The avowed and declared Baptist principles have always been for freedom-freedom of thought, freedom of worship, and freedom of service according to the dictates of our own conscience. If a man claims to be a Baptist-either a Missionary or Primitive-he must stand for freedom if he stands for what he claims to be. We do not advise the sister to continue taking the paper of her choice against the wishes of her husband; neither do we advise her to quit. We simply state these plain facts as above, and leave her to exercise her own choice and pleasure in the matter without any suggestion from us as to what course she should pursue. It is a matter between her and her Saviour. C. H. C.

An Anonymous Letter

---March 15, 1929

We received a letter which did not have the writer's name signed to it asking about a statement made in the last issue of The Primitive Baptist by Elder Lee Hanks in his article. We will say for the information of the writer, if he does not already know it, that no attention is paid to an unsigned letter. If a person wants the editor to answer his letter he must give his name, though the name will not be published if the writer asks that his name be withheld from publication. If the writer wishes his question answered he must let the editor know who he is. C. H. C.

Change Made

---March 15, 1929

For several months we have been trying to prayerfully consider the matter of having so many corresponding editors on the editorial staff of The Primitive Baptist and of continuing the Signal Department. We have tried to consider the matter from every standpoint we could think of. Our conclusion was that it is frequently the case that so many corresponding editors are carried on the staff for the prestige it is supposed to give the paper. Perhaps that was one thing which influenced us in soliciting the brethren to allow their names to be put on our staff as corresponding editors. We do not say this is what influenced us, but it may have had its weight. We have been made to wonder, in our considering the matter, if The Primitive Baptist is kept up and supported mainly on account of the names of the corresponding editors which appeared on the staff. In considering the matter and trying to pray over it we were made to feel that if this is the reason why the paper is kept up, then it ought to fail and go out of existence. In other words, if the paper itself is not worthy of support from the brotherhood, then it is not worthy of support at all, and should fail. This brought us to the conclusion that it might be best to drop the names of all the brethren from the editorial staff, and let the paper be tried out on its own merits. According to this feeling in the matter we wrote a letter to each brother whose name was on the editorial staff and asked his opinion in regard to the matter of dropping all the names from the staff and discontinuing the Signal Department. We heard from all but three. Some of them may have written us, but if they did we failed to get the letter. We enclosed an addressed and stamped envelope for a reply. One brother wrote: "I have for some time seen this as you do, but thought it a matter that rests entirely with you." Another brother said: "You are no doubt right in dropping all the associate editors and the Signal Department as you suggest, and I do not see how any could feel hurt with you for doing such. Too many associate editors are worse than none, because no one feels that he should exercise any particular interest in the paper, or that it is necessary for him to write for publication." Another brother said, among other things, "I really feel that your impressions along this line are not at all bad." Another brother wrote: "Will give you my thoughts on the subject. First. The Primitive Baptist is yours, owned and managed by yourself, and I have no desire to complain at you for the manner in which you handle it. Second. It is our paper, published in the interest of the Old Baptists, and every Old Baptist ought to do all he can to uphold it and support it. I have thought it was profitable for the paper to have corresponding editors to act as agents, soliciting subscriptions and writing for the paper, but I am sure that most, if not all, who are on your staff have gone to 'sleep.' I scarcely ever see anything in the paper from the most of them. I am guilty." This brother wrote more that we want to quote farther on in this article. But what we have quoted above from these brethren mainly expresses what they all wrote us in reply to our letter. Now there is another matter we wish to mention here which we did not mention in our letter to the brethren. That is this: Sometimes some local trouble comes up in the section where one of the editors live, and this places us in an embarrassing position, for we may be called on to take some part in that local trouble. We do not say such exists now, but we have had some experience in trouble coming up where some corresponding editor was involved, either directly or indirectly. When such things come up it is hard to steer clear of the trouble, and harder still to keep some from thinking we are taking sides. To try to avoid this in the future we have felt it would be best to drop all the names from the staff. Having received the letters we did from the brethren in reply to our letter, we have decided that perhaps the best course to pursue now would be to drop the names of the corresponding editors from the staff and to discontinue the Signal Department. This step is approved by Brother Collings and all the brethren on his staff-so they all expressed themselves in reply to our letter. We are taking this step in all good feeling toward every brother whose name was on the staff, and humbly beg that none of them feel hurt toward us. We sincerely believe it is the best thing to do, considering all things pertaining thereto. Referring to the statement above from one dear brother," I have thought it was profitable for the paper to have corresponding editors to act as agents," etc. Perhaps it is sometimes profitable for the paper, but that brings in the financial side of the matter, and brings us right back to what we before said. That may be partly, at least, what influences in getting names on the editorial staff. We have come to the conclusion that if the financial part of it has had such influence it was the wrong influence. We mean to say that the interest and the good of the cause is the influence that we have been made to feel is what should prompt and govern in the matter. It is true that the paper cannot exist without financial support, but the financial part of the matter should not be the first incentive. Certainly no one can feel that we are taking the step we are here taking on account of financial interest. As we stated in our letter to the brethren, we desire that they write for the paper when they feel so impressed, and we also desire that they do all they can consistently to help extend the circulation of the paper. We desire them to do this only and solely on the merits of the paper and the benefit they may feel that the paper is to the cause of the Master. If they honestly believe and feel that the paper is not worth the price to the Lord's dear children, then we do not ask or expect them to do a single thing toward helping to extend the circulation. If the paper is not worthy of support on its merit, without prestige of the brethren's names, then let it go down. We do not wish to "ride on the reputation" of others. They have burdens enough of their own without having to lend us their names and reputation to "ride on" to succeed with the paper. Above, we said a brother wrote more which we wished to quote farther on. He said: "I think if you would drop such fellows as me, and perhaps some others, and give the others a 'jacking up,' and have them write often enough to keep a good supply of good interesting editorials on hand for you to put in the paper-and let me suggest that you write more, too; then I think, again, that it would be best to cut out the personal correspondence that is not of much interest except to those who are personally concerned; and further that you insist that all who contribute to the paper be short and pointed in their writing-then I think we would have a better paper. I know quite well that you can't do all this; you can only publish what is sent in." Much of what this dear brother has here said is good; very good. We admit our shortcoming in not writing more for the paper ourselves. We could render many reasons and excuses as to why we have not written more, but they would do no good now. The best we know along that line is to try to resolve to try to do better from now on. We will only say that some things which we have had to pass through and endure have had some effect in regard to our writing. But we will try again to do better along this line. Pray the Lord to help us. Another thing-that personal correspondence. It is sent to us with the request or expectation of it being published; yet we have not published near all such matter as has been sent. But when we do not, then perhaps some think we have not treated them right. But we have so much more matter sent us for the paper than we have room for that we could not publish all if we desired to do so, and if we thought it would be best for the cause. The paper will only hold so much in each issue and no more-and we cannot stand the expense of printing and sending out more issues. So what are we to do? The only course we know is to try to select from what we have such as we feel is best and insert that and let the rest wait. We are behind now from last November. But please remember that the more we have on hand the more we have to select from. So do not quit writing on this account. We do sincerely wish that all would try to be short and pointed in their writing. Do not try to cover too much ground in one article. Better write two or three short articles, each one complete, on the same subject, than to have one long article. Long articles are tedious and frequently become tiresome. Reader interest is lost in continued articles. Please be brief. We especially insist that the writers of obituaries be brief and leave out all poetry. Another thing: Please do not try to compose or write poetry, unless you know something about poetical feet, and something about rythm. Simply finding words that rhyme and putting them at the end of the lines is not writing poetry. We have been very much embarrassed with productions along this line by good meaning brethren and sisters. Pleadingly, we ask, please don't. We will, the Lord willing, have an important change to announce in the paper soon. But we have had to give up the idea of making the paper a weekly now. Perhaps, if it is the Lord's will, we can do that some day, but not now. There are not subscribers enough to justify it. But we have a change to announce very soon that we believe will please all our readers. Please pray the Lord to help us publish the paper with no other end in view than the comfort, benefit, consolation, encouragement, and instruction of His humble poor, the advancement of His blessed cause and truth, and the glory of His adorable name. C. H. C.

No Sin, No Salvation

The Absoluters have been charged by our people with believing and advocating the idea that sin was necessary in order to salvation, and occasionally one has denied it, when it seemed evident it was to their advantage to deny it. But it has come out in print, in clear cold type, on page 17 of the Lone Pilgrim for January, 1929, published at Selma, N. C., by Elder H. F. Hutchens, editor and proprietor. The article is headed "Predestination," by Elder J. R. Hatcher, and is a letter written by him dated Lyles, Tenn., May 12, 1927, and addressed to Elder James W. Linn, Hammond, W. Va. Of course Elder Hutchens endorses the sentiment in the article, as he published it without criticism. If he does not endorse it, and will say so in plain English, we will be glad to tell our readers so. Here is what Elder Hatcher says: "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." They ate and they did die, and God executed His judgment on them, and they did die. This death was in the purpose and foreknowledge of God, and God meant it for good; for if they had not eaten thereof how could we poor sinners have been saved? There you have it, in plain terms! Of course the contention is that without sin there could have been no salvation-not one of all the race of Adam could ever possibly enter the glory world had they not committed this sin! This does not make salvation in heaven depend upon good works performed by a member of Adam's family-no, not on that! But upon what does such salvation depend? According to this article it depends upon sin-disobedience to the just and holy law of the infinitely just Creator! If no one could have been saved without this, then salvation depends upon this. If salvation depends upon sin, then does not sin make salvation certain? If not, why not? If sin does not make salvation certain, then salvation does not depend upon sin, as Elder Hatcher says it does. If salvation depends upon sin, as Elder Hatcher says, then it necessarily follows that the more sin one commits the more certain his salvation would be. Do some of these fellows want to commit more sin in order to make their salvation more certain? The original Arminian theory is that the eternal salvation of the sinner depends upon the good deeds that he performs. But we suppose these Absoluters have a new and improved patent on the original Arminian theory. If eternal salvation depends upon the good deeds one performs, of course the more good deeds one does the more certain his salvation would be. Hence the idea taught by the Arminian world has been this: Perform a great many good and commendable deeds, and thereby be certain of entering the glory world at and after death. To say the least of it, the old Arminian theory might encourage to right moral living, if it could do no more, when presented in this light. But this new invention of conditional salvation makes sin and wickedness the condition instead of right living and good deeds. It bids a premium on sin and wickedness. According to this theory if a man desires to make his eternal salvation sure, then he should lie, steal, kill, commit adultery, rape, swear, rob, murder-and if any other sin can be conceived of, do that also! Why? Because Elder Hatcher says eternal salvation depends upon sin! O Lord God, how merciful thou art, to spare men to enjoy life and health who will thus blaspheme thy holy and righteous and matchless name! "And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) Let us do. evil, that good may come?" -(Romans 3:8). Here the eminent Apostle Paul informs us that some reported, or told, that he advocated the idea of doing evil that good may come, but that such a report on him was a slanderous one. If anyone should tell that Elder Hatcher advocates the doctrine of doing evil that good may come, and that such a doctrine is maintained in the Lone Pilgrim (Lone Pilgrinder, as Brother Copeland calls it), it would not be a slanderous report, but would be the truth told on them. As Paul denied advocating such a doctrine, and as it is advocated in that paper by Elder Hatcher, then they do not advocate the same doctrine Paul did. Did Paul advocate the true doctrine? or do these modern teachers advocate it? We are inclined to think these modern teachers are wrong and that Paul was right. But let us go back and examine some other things said in the article from Elder Hatcher. On page 4 we find this paragraph: Right HERE His compass stands, perfectly levelled by the power of the Eternal Jehovah, and right HERE is where the truth existed, and where the Fountain was, and our God was, is, and will always be the FIRST great CAUSE of ALL THINGS, and upon IT, ALL worlds, creatures and things must depend. The emphasis is his. Note that he says that God "was, is, and will always be the first great cause of all things." Is it not passingly strange that some will advocate such a theory as this, and then some of their brethren will deny that they believe that God is the author of sin, or that sin comes from God as the great fountain from whence all things emanate? Let us try this just a little: Who caused Adam to violate God's law in the Garden? The answer would be, Eve. Then, who caused Eve to cause Adam to transgress? The answer would be, Satan. Then, who caused Satan to cause Eve to cause Adam to transgress? The answer would necessarily be, God caused Satan to cause Eve to cause Adam to transgress. Then, where did that sin come from? Where did it originate? No man under heaven can escape the inevitable conclusion that it came from God. Does sin come from God? Did it ever come from Him? No! a thousand times NO! "A God of truth and without iniquity."-Deut. xxxii. 4. He was without iniquity when Moses penned this language; and as He changes not, He has always been without it. As He has always been without it, then it never came from Him, and He is not now and never has been the first great cause of sin. As He is not the first great cause of sin, then He is not the first great cause of all things." Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be." - James iii. 10. If God is the first great cause of all things, then He is the first great cause of some things that ought not so to be, or else James was mistaken. Was James mistaken? If so, how did you find it out? Was he an inspired man? and did he pen this language by inspiration? Did God inspire him to say "these things ought not so to be," when He was the first great cause of them being? Is God thus guilty of double dealing? Let us have another expression from Elder Hatcher in that article: "To my mind, God either predestinated ALL things, or else He predestinated NOTHING!" (Emphasis is his.) Paul tells us that God predestinated us unto the adoption of children, but tells us nothing about God predestinating the sins and devilment and murder, theft, robbery, rape, and such crimes as are committed by wicked men and devils; but the Lone Pilgrinder and the correspondents, or some of them, do not believe God predestinated what Paul says he did, unless He also predestinated all those abominable things which Paul does not say He predestinated. But let us have another expression from this great source of wisdom: HERE is the Supreme God at the helm of the entire universe holding in HIS grasp ALL events of time in the chain of His divine providence, so definitely FIXED, determined, and APPOINTED so that neither man nor devils can break a single link in this chain of events, which were so minutely and precisely determined beforehand by this high and lofty KING! (Emphasis is his.) Here it is! God has so definitely fixed, determined and appointed all events of time so that neither man nor devils can break a single link in this chain of events. If that be so, then the eternal God, in the ancients of eternity, so definitely fixed, determined, and appointed that we should write just what we are now writing that neither men nor devils can break this link in the chain of events. Yet these Absoluters try to tear up what we write! Thus they try to destroy what they say neither man nor devils can destroy! They try to tear up and destroy God's predestination-if it is true, as they claim, that God did absolutely and unconditionally predestinate every event that transpires! Now, watch 'em vent their wrath and spleen on us. If their doctrine is true we could not do otherwise than write what we do write. It is one of the events that God has so unalterably fixed in the chain of events that neither men nor devils could destroy the little link. If that be so, why not raise the "racket" with the Almighty God for fixing it that way, if you do not like it? Some time ago a brutal negro in Little Rock, Ark., enticed a young girl into a church building there and brutally murdered her and hid her body in the tower in the building. According to these Absoluters this was one link in the chain of events that was so minutely and precisely determined, so definitely fixed, determined, and appointed by the infinitely just and holy God that neither men nor devils could prevent or change it! The negro could not change it! He could not have done otherwise than the way he did-according to these Absoluters! God fixed it that he should do that way! On page 13 of that paper the elder says, "The most wicked acts of men, or even devils, were in the predestination of God." "They cannot be otherwise, for God has sworn to them, and HE cannot lie." There you are! God swore that this brutal negro should murder the girl; the negro could not help it; he could not do otherwise! Good Lord! if this doctrine is not worse than the accusation that Jesus cast out devils by the prince of devils then words are meaningless and convey no ideas at all. God's humble poor who have been made, by the light of His Holy Spirit, to hate and abhor sin, should forsake, turn from, and spurn from them such teaching and such teachers. They should have no fellowship for such "unfruitful works of darkness." We frankly confess that we have no desire to "tie up" with such a doctrine, for we have no fellowship for it. May God help us all to forsake every false way, and to humbly seek for the truth and then to walk in the good old way, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Change of Form

---April 15, 1929

In our issue of March 15 we said: "We will, the Lord willing, have an important change to announce in the paper soon. But we have had to give up the idea of making the paper a weekly now. Perhaps, if it is the Lord's will, we can do that some day, but not now. There are not subscribers enough to justify it. But we have a change to announce very soon that we believe will please all our readers." Well, the change has been made, and The Primitive Baptist comes to you this time in magazine form, containing sixteen pages. For some time, you know, we have been sending the paper out on the first and fifteenth of each month. This gave our subscribers twenty-four issues of the paper each year. But from now on The Primitive Baptist will be published every other week. After this issue the paper will be dated on every other Thursday. This issue is dated April 15, 1929, and makes the two issues for this month. The next issue will be dated Thursday, May 2, and then you will get the paper every other week from then on. This will give our subscribers two more issues of the paper in a whole year than we have been getting out heretofore. However, for the year 1929 there will be just twenty-five issues in all. Another change we announce in this issue is a slight change in the subscription price. The regular price heretofore has been $2 a year, and to ministers and widows $1.75 a year. From now on the price will be only $1.75 a year, 90 cents for six months, or 50 cents for three months. The price will be the same to all alike. Outside the United States the price will be $2.50 a year, on account of the extra postage it costs us, and extra cost of separating them from the other mail. Years ago the "Abstract of Principles," or Articles of Faith, were published in each issue of the paper, showing the principles the paper stands for. These have been left out for a long time. You will find them appearing again elsewhere in this issue, and it is our intention to keep them in the paper all the time, so that any person into whose hands the paper may fall may see at once what principles of doctrine and practice the paper stands for. In the present size and make up, or form of the paper, it will be much more convenient to file away and keep and to make a book of them at the end of the year. For several years we have not printed an index at the end of the year, or at the end of the volume. The pages have been numbered from 1 to 16 through the paper each issue. If you will notice the number of the pages in this issue, and the issues already printed this year, except January 15, you will see that they are numbered from the beginning of the year. At the end of the year we expect to print an index for the year. This will make it much easier and much more convenient for you to find any article later that has been published in the paper. We believe our subscribers will all like these changes. Of course we do not know they will, but we have made them, believing it would please all. We would be glad to have an expression from each and every one as to how you are pleased with the changes. Be free to express yourself. But another thing we want to call attention to, and that is this: We are now using a better grade of paper than we have been using heretofore. The paper this issue is printed on, and which we will use now is stronger and will last better than that we have been using. Another thing: From now on our editorials will begin on the first page, if we have any. We will try to write something for every issue of the paper, although sometimes we have felt very little like writing. Perhaps if we try to write more we may get to feeling more like writing. We do not know, but this may be a little like trying to preach. When one does not try often he gets so he does not feel much like trying. But when he tries more often he gets so he feels more like trying. We may not know anything about it, but this has been our experience. It is our desire to continue to try to conduct The Primitive Baptist in such a way as to benefit the Lord's humble poor, and to advocate and maintain the great principles of truth that have been handed down to us from our forefathers, and that were dear to their hearts, and which we love, and were given to the church by the Lord Himself. We desire to still be just simply a plain old-fashioned Old Baptist. It is the church our Lord established while He was here on earth, and it needs no annexes, no additions, and no subtractions. The practice He has laid down in His word, and the principles of doctrine therein expressly taught are enough. If they are not enough, then He did not know what would be needed in these times. What He gave was, and is, sufficient for all time. It is as much a violation of His law to practice or teach what His word does not command or teach as it is to leave off what He has expressly commanded or taught. Now we ask you to please remember us in your prayers. Pray the Lord to give us wisdom and courage and strength to publish His blessed truth, both from the pulpit and from the press. And pray for our loved ones, especially our dear companion who does all she can to help us and to encourage us to go on in the discharge of every duty the Lord requires of us. She spends many lonely and lonesome hours by day and by night when we are away, and has the whole care of our dear children. Her burdens are many and heavy, but she bears them all bravely and lovingly and cheerfully. Again we say, pray for us.

Evolution Disproved

---April 15, 1929

We have received from the author, Rev. William A. Williams, 1202 Atlantic Ave., Camden, N. J., a book called "Evolution Disproved." In this book the author makes fifty arguments, each of which clearly disproves the doctrine or theory of evolution. Mr. Williams shows from a number of mathematical calculations, problems in simple arithmetic, that evolution cannot be true. It is true there are a few statements in the book, but not on evolution, which we cannot accept, and on which we do not agree with the author. But that does not prevent us recommending the careful reading and studying of the same. Evolution is simply infidelity under another name, and it is being taught in our schools. It denies the work of God in creation; it denies the virgin birth of our Saviour; it denies any future state or existence of man after the death of the body. Get a copy of this book and read it and study it, and encourage your children to read and study it. It is good clear print, on good paper, and well and neatly bound in cloth. Price $1 a single copy. Send your order to us or to the author at the address given above. Just here we want to copy a few lines from the work. On page 122, under the heading, "Five Tremendous Facts," paragraph 1 says: Jesus, a peasant, is hailed today as King by people speaking 750 languages and dialects, in all climes, and of all classes. People of every color raise to Him the song of praise and crown Him "Lord of all." There is nothing like this in all history. No other has ever approached this degree of sovereignty. His kingdom pervades the world. It is a fact that challenges thought. No world conqueror has ever had such an empire. Beside this the royalty of men like Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, Napoleon, and more modern aspirants is shadowy and ghostlike. His is an abiding and spiritual dominion. Beginning again on page 124, under the heading, "The Meaning of the Facts," we read: What shall we say of this Man? He accepted Peter's tribute. He allowed Jews to take up stones to stone Him for claiming to be the Son of God. He was conscious of being divine. He forgave sins, which is God's prerogative. He promised rest to the weary soul, which the Old Testament set forth as God's own gift. He said that He came to give life eternal, although God is the giver of life. He said that none could know the Father except through Him. He spoke to God of the glory which they shared together before the world was. Just in proportion as men have acknowledged His claims in their hearts have they found peace with God and conquest over sin and fear of worldly evil. As we consider all these things we are led to repeat Peter's confession, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," for God the Father's face shines upon us through Him and heaven is opened to us as we look upon Him. In the heart of this the purest of men was the clear, constant consciousness that He was divine. He always spoke and acted consistently with this consciousness. Unique in character, He made claims that would have stamped any other man as an impostor. Humility and majesty dwell together in Him. He could say, "I am meek and lowly in heart," and also "I and my Father are one." He would call men His "brethren" and yet accept from them the words, "My Lord and my God." This wonderful character came of a race that had for ages looked for the coming of a Messiah, and whose prophetic literature was burdened with this hope. After His death His disciples who were heartbroken and cowed became inspired with a heroism that cheerfully faced martyrdom. All these facts are shining lights that point to the truth which Peter confessed. That truth is enshrined in the triumphant words of the Te Deum, "Thou art the King of glory, O Christ. Thou art the everlasting Son of the Father." And the Christ of history, the exalted Son of God, is a living Presence with us today. Not remote but ever near, He walks by our side in all life's experiences. Not only enthroned in heavenly glory "But warm, sweet, tender, even yet A present help is He, And faith has still its Olivet And love its Galilee." Such is our wonderful Saviour, a Friend with human heart of sympathy who has trod our pathway and is touched with the feeling of our infirmities; a Shepherd who gave His life for the sheep in an all-atoning sacrifice; an Advocate who represents us with all-prevailing power before the throne of the Judge Eternal; a Champion who can break the power of canceled sin and set the prisoner free; a Victor who can smite death's threatening wave before us; a Lord in whom we see the beauty and glory of the face of God. We are called upon to confess Him with lip and life. To us to live is Christ. Knowing Him we have eternal life. We have all the soul needs in Jesus. There is no substitute for Him. None can share His throne in our hearts. The Kingdom is His who is the Christ-the anointed King. Our joy is in Him, where all fullness dwells. We can say with Charles Wesley, "Thou, O Christ, art all I want," and our daily life should be one of close, constant communion with Christ. The foregoing copied from Evolution Disproved, is good reading to us. Is it not good to you? What wonderful and precious truths contained therein! We believe and feel that Rev. Williams has an experimental knowledge of the Lord, and has been brought into divine relationship with Him. C. H. C.

Organs in Churches

---May 2, 1929

In The Primitive Baptist of November 16, 1909, we made the following statement: If a church in our association (the Greenfield) should introduce an organ into her service, the sister churches would at once labor with her to get her to remove it. If she failed to do so, she would certainly be dropped from our union. This is what we would do. But your question has in it, "Should they do so?" We most emphatically, yet kindly, say yes. Law worship and law service has been closed out, and have no place in the gospel church. We could as consistently admit into our churches and fellowship the whole brood of Arminian law worship, service and practice, as we could admit the organ part of it. As for our part we want none of it. We do not know what the sentiment of the Greenfield Association is now, as we have been away from that part of the country since the latter part of October, 1919; ten years after the above was written we left that state, and it has now been more than nineteen years since it was written. We knew the sentiment of that association then. Our sentiment is the same now that it was then. We believe the sentiment of a large part, or nearly all, of that association is the same now. The above has been the sentiment of a large body of the Primitive Baptists all along the ages. The organ has never been an appendage in the service in the church of God. True, organs have occasionally been introduced among them in some localities, but as a people they have always rejected them. It may be that they have, all along, kicked about organ Baptists and swallowed a key fork. They have, all along, objected to the use of organs in their churches, whether they swallowed key forks or not. On September 26, 1698, the Episcopalians sent a letter to the Baptists in Philadelphia, Pa., asking their reasons why they could not unite in communion with them. The Baptists gave an answer in a letter dated March 11, 1699. The Baptists demanded that the Episcopalians give Scripture authority "that instruments of musick are to be used in God's worship, under the New Testament; that infant baptism is a duty; that pouring or sprinkling water is the right manner of baptizing; that your manner of administering the sacraments, and signing with the sign of the cross in baptism are of divine appointment; that godfathers and godmothers are of divine appointment. These are some of the things we desire you to prove and make plain to us by the holy Scriptures." See Benedict's History of the Baptists, page 492, Volume 2, edition of 1813. Another thing which those Baptists then demanded was, "That you will give us clear and infallible proof from God's holy word, * * * that our Lord Jesus Christ hath given power and authority to any man, men, convocation, or synod, to make, constitute, and set up any other laws, orders, officers, rites and ceremonies, in His church, besides those which He hath appointed in His holy word; or to alter or change those, which He hath therein appointed, according as may, from time to time, to them seem convenient; and that we are bound in conscience towards God, by the authority of His word, to yield obedience thereunto; or whether it will not rather be a sore reflection upon the sufficiency of the Holy Scriptures, and a high defamation of the kingly and prophetic offices of Jesus Christ, to suppose such a thing." It is clearly seen from the above quotation that the Baptists formerly rejected the use of organs in their churches-that they would not allow instrumental music in their assemblies. In 1859, after the division in the Baptist family on account of the introduction of the new things adopted by those who went with the modern Missionary element, David Benedict wrote his book called "Fifty Years Among the Baptists." Remember that Benedict went with the modern Missionaries in the division. In this book he says, concerning the introduction of the organ among the Baptists: This instrument, which from time immemorial has been associated with cathedral pomp and prelatical power, and has always been the peculiar favorite of great national churches, at length found its way into Baptist sanctuaries, and the first one ever employed by the denomination in this country, and probably in any other, might have been seen standing in the singing gallery of the old Baptist meeting house in Pawtucket, about forty years ago, where I then officiated as pastor; and in process of time, this dernier resort in church music was adopted by many of our societies which had formerly been distinguished for their primitive and conventicle plainness. The changes which have been experienced in the feelings of a large portion of our people has often surprised me. Staunch old Baptists in former times would as soon have tolerated the Pope of Rome in their pulpits as an organ in their galleries, and yet the instrument has gradually found its way among them, and their successors in church management, with nothing like the jars and difficulties which arose of old concerning the bass viol and smaller instruments of music. Benedict then goes on to tell how these instruments were gradually introduced into the churches. We quote the above to show that it was a new thing among the Baptists, and those who favored this new thing also favored the other new things that were invented by Fuller, Carey and others, which new things finally brought on the division among the Baptists, and from which sprang the people now called Missionary Baptists. Organs in churches were first used by the Catholics. Benedict tells us that the old staunch Baptists "would as soon have tolerated the Pope of Rome in their pulpits as an organ in their galleries," or churches. This was a principle of the old Baptists, of the staunch Baptists. If that was a principle of a staunch Baptist then, how about the man called a Baptist that now favors the toleration of such in his church? Is he a staunch Baptist, according to this witness? As for us, we just wish to say, in conclusion, that it is still our desire to be just simply a plain old-fashioned Old Baptist. May the Lord help us all to take the Bible as the man of our counsel, and do just what it says do, and leave everything else alone. C. H. C.

Secret Orders

---May 2, 1929

We have received the following request: "Write your views on Masonry and publish the same in The Primitive Baptist as soon as you can, giving your best text in condemnation of Masonry and secret orders." We do not have the time right now to write an article on this question, but feel like it would be just as well, or better, to give our readers an article on this subject from the pen of the late Elder John R. Daily which was published in The Primitive Baptist of August 23, 1910, under the heading, "The False Religious Principles of Secret Orders." Elder Daily was an able man and an able writer, and in this article he gives good and unanswerable arguments and reasons why Primitive Baptists should not affiliate with secret orders. We will just say here that there is one command in God's word which no man can obey and be a lodge member and a member of the Primitive Baptist Church at the same time. If A belongs to the lodge, his first duty as a lodge member is to his brother in the lodge. Suppose A and B are both members of the same lodge, and A and C are members of the Primitive Baptist Church. As a member of the lodge A's first duty is to his brother B; as a member of the church his first duty is to his brother C. Both of them cannot be first. For proof that his first duty is to his brother C as a church member we give you this text: "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." -(Galatians 6:10). If there were no other reason this is reason enough why no Primitive Baptist should be a lodge member. But we will here give the article by Elder Daily. Read it, and profit by it. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

I have been opposed to secret, oath bound fraternities ever since I became old enough to observe and know of their nature and operations. As I have studied their principles and operations I have become fully convinced that, in many respects, they are a curse rather than a blessing to society. A number of reasons can be given why no one should belong to them, but it is my purpose now to show why no Primitive Baptist ought to affiliate with them. While I am opposed to them from a social, moral and financial standpoint, it is from a religious standpoint that my greatest objections arise. It is objected, of course, that my not being a member of any secret order disqualifies me to judge of their nature. To this I will reply that I am glad indeed that I have never been enticed to those worldly institutions; as to my opportunities to become acquainted with their nature and operations, I beg leave to say that I have been able to learn all that needs to be known unless one wishes to become a member, which is amply sufficient for my present purpose and sufficient to keep me out of them all of my life. With the information I possess of secret orders I would not belong to one of them even if I did not profess the religion of Jesus. Without entering any lodge I have been able to learn much by observing their public exercises of a religious character, also from their published literature, and from expositions that have been made by seceders. Many of their secrets have "leaked out," enough to utterly disgust me with them, and, besides, it is claimed by them that the chief use of their secrets is for the purpose of recognition. If that be true, one does not have to become a member, does not have to know their "secrets" to be able to discover their fallacious nature. Secret orders are, in general, religious orders. Who can read the prayers offered in the Freemason and Odd Fellow lodges and say conscientiously that they are not religious organizations? There is no disputing it. Take, for instance, the prayer offered at the initiation of a candidate to the degree of Entered Apprentice in a Freemason Lodge, as given on pages 26 and 27 of the "Craftsman and Freemason's Guide:" "O thou supreme Author of our being and lover of our souls;-thou art everywhere present, and knowest the thoughts and intentions of our hearts; bless us we pray thee, in our endeavors to do good, and spread peace and concord and unity among our fellow men. May this, our friend, who is now to become our brother, devote his life to thy service and his talents to thy glory. May he be endowed with wisdom to direct him in all his ways, strength to support him in all his difficulties, and the beauty of morality to adorn his life. May he set thee constantly before his eyes, and seek thy approbation as his greatest treasure. May he become enlightened in the knowledge of divine things, and be induced to love thee from thy manifest love to him. And may he and we regulate our actions by the light of revealed truth, and to construct our spiritual edifice, that when done laboring as apprentices in this lower temple, we may be raised to the sublime enjoyments of the upper sanctuary-in that temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, whose maker and builder is God. Amen." This shows Freemasonry to be religious and to hold to the unscriptural theory that they can so construct their own "spiritual edifice" as to "be raised to the enjoyment of the upper sanctuary." Is it possible that any Primitive Baptist can have fraternal relations with such a religious sect as that? It seems unreasonable. Take, as another specimen, the prayer at the close of a lodge meeting of Odd Fellows, as found on pages 99 and 100 of the "Odd Fellow's Textbook:" "We bless thee, O Lord, that we have been permitted to enjoy this, another lodge meeting. Pardon what thou hast seen amiss in us; and now, as we are about to depart, let thy blessings be with us, and with our brethren throughout the globe. May brotherly love prevail, and every moral and social virtue adorn our lives, while members of the Lodge below, and at last be admitted to the joys of a better world: and thine be the glory, forever and ever. Amen." "The lodge below" is suggestive of the idea of a "lodge above." The idea is held forth in many prayers they offer that there is to be a transition from the "Lodge below" to the "Lodge above." How can any Primitive Baptist endure such blasphemy, comparing the lodge, the secret oath bound lodge, in which wicked people mingle with them and call them "Brother," comparing that lodge to heaven and immortal glory? Echo answers, "How!" It is a religious order, but what kind of religion does it promulgate? The following petition, suggested for the funeral service of Freemasons, is given on page 199 of the "Freemason's Guide:'And at last, Great Parent of the Universe, when our journey shall be near its end, when the silver cord shall be loosed, and the golden bowl broken; oh, in that moment of mortal extremity, may the 'lamp of thy love' dispel the gloom of the dark valley; and may we be enabled to 'work an entrance' into the Celestial Lodge above, and in thy glorious presence, amidst the ineffable mysteries, enjoy a union with the souls of our departed friends, perfect as the happiness of heaven, and durable as the eternity of God. Amen. So mote it be." Is the institution not a religious one? Are the members not taught that they can "work an entrance into the Celestial Lodge above?" Such Deistical, Arminian teaching! How can a Primitive Baptist ever endure it? In the "Ancient Constitutions" of Freemasonry, which are said to be "obligatory as fundamental regulations, in all parts of the world, "and are declared to be "absolutely requisite in all who aspire to partake" of the sublime honors of those who are duly initiated into the mysteries and instructed in the art of "ancient Masonry," there is found the following significant statement in Chap. I, Sec. First: "Whoever, from love of knowledge, interest or curiosity, desires to be a Mason, is to know that, as his foundation and great corner stone, he is firmly to believe in the eternal God, and to pay that worship to Him which is due to Him as the great Architect of the Universe." As it requires all who desire to become Masons, not only to believe in the eternal God, but to pay that worship to Him which is due, it is undeniable that Freemasonry is a religious order. Its religion is purely Deism. I am so glad that I have never aspired "to partake of the sublime honors of those who are duly initiated into the mysteries of ancient Masonry!" Indeed I am! In the Odd Fellows' nine "Chapters of Counsel," Chap. IV, Sec. 4, the following declaration is made: "Our infinite Creator, who is the Soul of all true friendship, and source of all Good; who is abundantly worthy of our love; and who may rightfully command our obedience-is the only proper object of our worship." Here is the doctrine of Deism again. The order would not dare to associate the name, the sweet name of Jesus, with the Father. That would be contrary to its doctrine. So Odd Fellowship is a worshiping or religious institution, but save us from its doctrine. I could multiply proofs of this kind, for I have an abundance at my hand, but I conclude a sufficiency of evidence has been adduced to show that secret orders are of a religious character. I am giving attention to the orders of Freemasonry and Odd Fellowship, because these are the chief ones after which all others have principally patterned. The public ceremonies at the laying of corner stones, the religious performances at the burial of the dead, etc., show that these fraternal orders are religious. Having shown that secret societies are religious, I now propose to present a few facts to prove that the religious principles upon which they are founded are absolutely false. I say a few facts, for my limited space forbids my giving anything like all that I could give along this line. We have already seen that the doctrine of such societies is Deism, a kind of belief in a God, but not of the God in Christ or Christ in God. Though there are many religious prayers and ceremonies, the sweet name of our adorable Jesus is not once allowed to be used. In orders where all possible religious beliefs are blended, it is absolutely necessary to accommodate all with religious principles which do not conflict with their beliefs, except it be the belief of the true child of God. His faith, if it is what it ought to be, comes in conflict with every principle of doctrine upon which such societies are founded. It could not be expected that the religious doctrine of secret orders would be correct, for they are all of the world, and the world is never right in religion. On page 34, "Masonic Jurisprudence," we find this declaration of principles: "Masonry does not attempt to interfere with the peculiar religious faith of its disciples, except so far as relates to the belief in the existence of God, and what necessarily results from that belief." In a footnote on the same page is the following: "On the subject of the religious, or rather the doctrinal, requirements of Masonry, the Old Charges utter the following explicit language: 'Though in ancient times, Masons were charged in every country to be of the religion of that country or nation, whatever it was; yet it is now thought expedient only to oblige them to that religion in which all men agree, leaving their particular opinions to themselves.' " According to this all Masons are obliged to some kind of religion, and that kind is the one in which all men agree. We will see what kind it is to which all the members are obliged by the order, the one in which all men agree, as they say. Odd Fellowship, Freemasonry, and all other secret orders, are founded upon the false religious dogma of Universalism-the dogma of the Universal Fatherhood of God and the Universal Brotherhood of man. In the Odd Fellows' Textbook, page 127, this false doctrine is predicated as the corner stone, the solid basis, on which the whole superstructure rests. "Man is a constituent of one universal Brotherhood, having come from the hand of a common Parent. * * * By it all nations, tongues, and creeds, may be brought to comprehend the motive for Fraternity. FRATERNITY. This is our corner stone. Upon its solid basis rests our superstructure. It teaches us to regard the great family of mankind as our brethren; children of one heavenly Father, the great Author of our existence." Think of it! The great corner stone of Odd Fellowship is the greatest falsehood, the greatest religious error that was ever propagated. If we are children of one heavenly Father, as Universalists and Odd Fellows teach, then we are all heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus (though Odd Fellows discard Jesus from all their religious service), and Universalism is unquestionably true. How can a Primitive Baptist belong to a religious, secret order, the corner stone of which is such a monstrous heresy? For the life of me I cannot see how. The doctrine of Freemasonry is the same. A statement is given in one of the twenty-five Landmarks of Freemasonry, which declares this in plain terms," But the doctrine of Masonic equality implies that, as children of one great Father, we meet in the Lodge upon the same level-that on that level we are all traveling to one predestined goal." They say they are all traveling to one predestined goal, being all children of one great Father, though many of them are profane prostitutes. Predestination is made to play an important part in this doctrine of Masonry. What God has predestinated must come to pass. Then all, wicked wretches as well as various followers of God, will reach the one predestined goal- heaven-as children of the one great Father, according to the doctrine of this secret, oath bound, heretical order. Again," Craftsman and Freemason's Guide," page 35: "By the exercise of brotherly love we are taught to regard the whole human species as one family, the high and the low, the rich and the poor, who, as created by one Almighty Parent, and inhabitants of the same planet, are to aid, support, and protect each other." So they believe that not only members of the order are children of God, but the whole human species. That God is our Father because He created us is the chief corner stone of Universalism, as false as any falsehood could be. This sets aside any necessity of the new birth in order to see and enter into the kingdom of heaven. In the doctrine of these secret orders no such necessity is recognized. Christ Himself is not a necessity in the religious principles of secret orders. It is a common thing to hear members of secret orders say, "There is good enough religion in the lodge for me." They say if one lives up to the requirements of the lodge he will get to heaven. There may be good enough religion in the lodges for the world, for their religious heresies suit the world, but how a child of God, one who wants to know and practice the truth, can stand such religious heresies, I am wholly unable to see. On the other hand, some who want to make an excuse for belonging to them, say," Oh, they are not religious institutions at all; they make no pretensions to religion." We have already seen how unfounded such a statement is. The very foundation of them is religious heresy, and their ceremonies are of a religious character of the most disgusting kind, seeing they are not only false, but that the most irreligious and profane engage in them as a vain show. Having shown that the religious doctrine of secret orders is Deism and Universalism combined, I now propose to show that it is Arminian. The doctrine of salvation as taught by the religious writings, prayers and ceremonies of secret orders is conditional, as it holds forth the idea that man can by his own efforts prepare himself for the "Lodge above," as they term heaven. Though this conflicts somewhat with the Universal platform upon which these heretical institutions are predicated, yet such is the doctrine, contradictory though it is. In the Odd Fellows' Textbook, page 154, is found this statement of religious doctrine: "Virtue alone is happiness. It gives joy which none but he who practices it can understand. Its influence is felt and acknowledged even by the bad. It will be the crown of age, the honor of manhood, the guardian of youth: it will be our guide in prosperity, and solace in affliction. It will give us here on earth the truest happiness (this is well enough so far, but notice), and prepare us for the future state to which we are hastening." Suppose I should preach in the pulpit that what we do in the way of practicing virtue prepares us for the happiness of heaven. All would unite in crying me down as an Arminian. Yet this abominable heresy is the doctrine of Odd Fellowship. This heretical teaching is given as inducement to practice virtue. There is no need of being born again, no need of a Saviour, to prepare us for the glory world; just practice virtue and you'll get there. Such is the doctrine of this oath bound order, such is its religious teaching. How about Freemasonry? Let us see. "The lamb has, in all ages, been deemed an emblem of innocency; he, therefore, who wears the lambskin of Masonry, is thereby continually reminded of that purity of life and conduct, which is essentially necessary to his admission into the Celestial Lodge above, where the Supreme Architect of the Universe presides." -Freemason's Guide, page 29. A member of the Primitive Baptist Church would surely feel strange in wearing the lambskin to be reminded thereby that his entering heaven, which he is taught to regard as "the Celestial Lodge above," is conditioned upon what he does himself, Christ and the new birth cutting no figure in the matter of his salvation at all. In this he is professing to believe two contradictory doctrines, the doctrine of the Bible and the doctrine of Freemasonry. How can he ever endure to wear the lambskin under such teaching as that, with conflicting faith revolving in his mind? Odd Fellows believe that we are brought at last to a peaceful and pleasant abode by continuous struggles of our own, notwithstanding their conflicting faith that we are all the children of God and bound to the "Celestial Lodge above." The religious doctrine of the world has never been known to be consistent even with itself, and is always wrong in general principles. Notice what is given in the last Nine Chapters of Counsel: "But we must struggle on, though beset with danger, toil, and strife, through the wilderness of this world to our destiny. Let us therefore be stout of heart, and determine, through faith and energy, to overcome the obstacles that lie in our path. Let not fear or discouragement cause us to turn back after we shall have once entered upon our journey. Let us take honesty for our guide; however rough or uncouth he may seem, or whatever abuse may be heaped upon him by those who love him not, if we cling to him and follow him, he will assuredly bring us at last to a peaceful and pleasant abode." Now, who does the Odd Fellow expect to bring him to that final peaceful and pleasant abode? "Honesty." How is "honesty" to do this? By our following him and clinging to him. It all depends upon us, then, according to the religious doctrine of Odd Fellowship, whether we reach the peaceful and pleasant abode in heaven. No depending upon Christ, for He has nothing whatever to do with the system. Again see what is asserted in the third Section of the same Chapter: "It may be, even, that in following it (the journey to heaven) poverty and want shall beset thee: but keep up thy spirit; look not at present ease, which is but for a moment, but rather at future rest, which shall be everlasting." In the fifth Section this strong language is given: "Brother! cheer thee! Thou hast done well; thou art far on thy toilsome way. * * * In that glorious Rest, thou shalt behold the innumerable hosts who have traveled this path before thee. Thou shalt join 'the Patriarchs of the infant world,' and mingle thy voice with theirs in the music of the angels. Thou shalt dwell in the presence of the Most High, whose smile is heaven. Throughout the eternal ages of Jehovah thou shalt be the associate of angels and just men made perfect, in a land where, far more than this, Faith and Truth are lovely and divine." This needs no comment. The "Faith and Truth" referred to I suppose to be the heretical doctrine of Uni-versalism, Deism, and Arminianism, as a mingled mess of falsehoods, which are found here in the religious teaching of this and other secret orders. In the Charge upon the installation of a Master of a Lodge of Masons is the following instructions: "In short, by a diligent observance of the Bylaws of your Lodge, the Constitutions of Masonry, and, above all, the Holy Scriptures, which are given us as a rule and guide to your faith and practice, you will be enabled to acquit yourself with honor and reputation; and lay up a crown of rejoicing, which shall continue when time shall be no more." That will do for that. How does it suit a Primitive Baptist who professes to believe that Christ will give the crown to all His elect people when He comes to gather them as His own jewels? I write this in love for the dear cause of Christ, the cause most dear to me. I know it is argued that the lodge is beneficial for the purpose of assuring ourselves that we will be cared for if we get sick, and that if we die a sum will be due our families. One man who had been excluded from the Baptist Church, and then joined a secret order, said to me that when he was once sick no one came to see him. Now he said he belonged to a lodge and could depend upon that to take care of him. He was well able to hire nurses if he needed them. Besides it was a reflection upon himself to say he was no more thought of by his neighbors and brethren and sisters. If I live in such a way that no one will care for me if I should get sick, I will surely have too much good sense to complain. Purchased love and help is not to be appreciated like that which comes from the hearts of those we love and who love us. I confess that the charity that once prevailed has largely died out. But what is the cause of it? It is due to secret societies more than to any other one thing. Now, it is the general feeling that the order will attend to the needs of the needy, and so that former sociability, hospitality and charity have died away. What a pity this is! One thing is sure, I can trust Him who has said, "Cursed is the man that trusteth in man, or maketh flesh his arm," and who said, "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is." If I die in the poorhouse, or lie upon a bed of affliction and suffering without human aid, I can still say, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust Him." When I am called from this world of sin I expect to leave my loved ones, if any survive me, in the hands of a better support than any human institution of this wicked world. I expect to leave them all in the hands of Him who is the Father of the fatherless and the Husband of the widow. Away with the folly of looking to heretical, secret, oath bound societies for aid!

Dear brethren, beloved of the Lord,

"Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." These things are said to us by our dear Lord, and we ought to obey Him rather than man. I am sure we ought. Oh, listen to His word and obey it! I love His dear people who have been caught in the whirlpool of these unscriptural societies, the religious doctrine of which is directly antagonistic to the truth as it is in Jesus, and contrary to the experience of every child of God. You do not need the aid of such at all. I have never needed it and never shall. All I need is Jesus, the sinner's Friend. You may have all this world, give me Jesus. Yours in hope of heaven, John R. Daily.

Matthew 16:18-19

We have been requested to give our views on (Matthew 16:18-19), and will try to write just a few lines. The text reads: "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." The word Peter is translated from a word that means a piece of rock, a particle of rock, or of the rock family. The word rock is translated from a word which means the bed rock, the foundation rock, or foundation stone. (Deuteronomy 32:4) "He is the Rock, His work is perfect." Here again we have the foundation stone, the bed rock. (I Corinthians 10:4) "And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." This word Rock, in this text is from the same word as that in (Matthew 16:18). The church is built upon Christ as the foundation upon which it rests. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone." -(Ephesians 2:19-20). The apostle here tells us plainly that Jesus Christ Himself is the chief corner stone-the stone, the rock, the foundation upon which the church rests. This is a sure foundation, which shall never be moved. "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." The keys are used to lock and unlock the doors of a building. Up to this time the door of the kingdom of heaven, the church, had not been opened to the Gentiles. All those whom the Saviour had sent out up to this time had been forbidden to go among the Gentiles. After His resurrection He told His apostles to "go ye into all the world." -(Mark 16:15). Their field of labor was now enlarged. Peter was the one who preached the first gospel sermon to the Gentiles. "And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe." -((7) (Acts 15:7). The time the apostle referred to was when he went to the house of Cornelius and preached the first gospel sermon to the Gentiles; and that was when the door of the church was opened to the Gentiles. God had made choice among the apostles that Peter should, by his preaching, open the door of the kingdom to the Gentiles, and they should be admitted into the blessings and privileges of gospel worship and service. These gospel privileges are yet granted to the Gentiles, though they may be taken from us on account of our disobedience and rebellion, as they were taken from the Jews for the same reason. If we do not wish to be deprived of these blessings and privileges we should awake from our lethargy, and "seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness." The Jews were cut off from these blessings because of unbelief; and the apostle warns us that "if God spared not the natural branches that sinned, take heed lest He also spare not thee." May the Lord help us to awake to a full discharge of our each and every duty. C. H. C.

Contradicted Himself

---May 16, 1929

A clipping from some newspaper has been sent to us containing an account of a discourse delivered in Dallas, Texas, by Dr. Lewis S. Chafer at the Schofield Memorial Church, of which he was then the pastor. We do not have space for the whole clipping, but we wish to copy two paragraphs from the report. He was preaching on the security of the believer. He said: God the Father has made an unconditional new covenant which cannot be broken. This is illustrated in every promise of salvation under grace. No human merit is recognized. {(John 5:24)} God the Son has, by His sacrifice, taken away all sin. It is sin alone that might separate from God, but Christ has died. {(Romans 8:34)} Men are now condemned for not accepting the provided Saviour. {(John 3:18)} Thus the only condemnation is removed from the one who accepts Christ. Notice that the Doctor says that God has made an unconditional new covenant, and yet the Doctor makes it depend upon the sinner accepting Christ. If it depends upon the sinner accepting Christ in order to it being fulfilled, then it is not an unconditional covenant. An unconditional covenant is one in which the principal party of the covenant agrees, or promises, to do a certain thing, or certain things, named in the covenant, and that promise or agreement is not hinged upon anything to be done, performed, or complied with by the party to whom the promise is made, or by the parties embraced in the promise. A covenant cannot be unconditional if there are any stipulations laid down therein for the other party to comply with in order to the fulfillment of the covenant. The Doctor says that sin alone may separate from God. Is it a sin for one to refuse to accept? If it is not a sin, then it cannot separate one from God, if sin alone may do that. If it is a sin for one to refuse to accept, then Christ has taken away that sin, as the Doctor says that "God the Son has, by His sacrifice, taken away all sin." According to the Doctor nothing but sin can condemn one of the race, and Christ has taken all sin away. If He did that for all the race, then what can condemn one of the race? If refusing to accept is not sin, it cannot condemn one, according to the Doctor. But the Doctor says Christ has taken away all sin and nothing but sin can condemn, and yet one is condemned for not accepting the provided Saviour! If these modern theologians do not "jumble" things up we do not know how one could go about doing so. Wonderful, wonderful, logic the Doctor has given us! C. H. C.

In Mississippi

---May 30, 1929

At the present writing (May 11, 1929) we are filling appointments in Mississippi, as arranged for us by Elder J. C. Huddleston, of Caledonia, Miss. When Brother Huddleston made the appointments and we received word from him telling us when and where they began we had but little time to make any arrangements to be from home. We had to leave without making much arrangement. We received the word from him on Monday, April 22, that the first appointment was at New Salem, near Walnut, Miss., on Friday, April 26. We left home on Thursday at noon and arrived at Middleton, Tenn., that night at 10 o'clock. Elder J. T. Davis met us at the train, and we spent the remainder of the night with him at his home. Friday morning he went with us to Walnut, Miss., where we were met at the train and conveyed out to the church. The congregation was not large there, as they told us the appointment was not very well circulated, but we enjoyed a very pleasant meeting. Saturday and Sunday we were at Little Hope Church. A very good congregation present both days, and a pleasant meeting. Elder Geo. W. Durbin lives near the church, and we enjoyed being with him. Elder Coy Wallis is pastor of this church and was with us. He continued with us until Friday following. On Monday and Tuesday we were with the Pleasant Hill Church. On account of bad roads near the church the services were held at the home of Brother Nance. A good congregation present both days, and the meeting was an enjoyable one both days. On Wednesday we were conveyed across the country, over some very rough roads, to Antioch Church. A very small crowd present. We were informed that not a male member was present, and just three sisters. A few "outsiders" were present. On Thursday and Friday we were at New Prospect, near New Albany, Elder Wallis still with us. He is pastor at Little Hope, Antioch and Pleasant Hill. Elder Jas. Duncan, of Memphis, Tenn., is the pastor at New Prospect. Elder W. L. Smith, of Oxford, was with us here on Friday. The congregation was not large either day, but the service was sweet and enjoyable. On Saturday morning we went to Tupelo on the train, where we were met by Friend Green and conveyed to his home and then to Union Church for service that afternoon. Had service there also on Sunday. A large crowd was present on both days. On Sunday a sister, whose name we think is Carden, came forward and asked for a home in the church. She was gladly received, her baptism to be attended to at the next regular meeting of the church. This church is in the Tombigbee Association. The others are in the Regular Baptist Association. On Monday and Tuesday we were at Pleasant Hill Church. Elder D. F. Hankins lives near the church, and is their pastor. A large crowd was present both days, and we enjoyed the service. The meetings were pleasant indeed. On Wednesday morning Elder Hankins conveyed us to New Hope Church, Hatley, where we had service Wednesday and Thursday. Elder J. C. Huddleston is the pastor of this church, and they think a lot of him. A large crowd was present both days, and they were sweet meetings. On Thursday, just as the service was about to be dismissed, a Brother Speed and wife came forward asking for a home with the church. He said he felt like he could not go away again without asking for a home with them. They were gladly received, and their baptism is to be attended to at the next regular meeting time. This is a lovely band of brethren and sisters, as well as other places we have visited on this tour. We spent one night at the home of Dr. Tubb, in Smithville, with his father who was sick and not able to be at the meeting. Brother Tubb is eighty-five years old and has been a faithful member of the church for many years. We trust that he may be restored to health again and once more blessed with the sweet privilege and pleasure of assembling with the brethren and sisters at the church. On Friday we were with the church at Bigbee, Elder Huddleston going with us. Elder Carter was also present with us, and he was also at Union the Sunday before, as was also Elder Conwill. This was another pleasant meeting, and we enjoyed our short stay with those brethren and sisters. A number of members of New Hope were there. The New Hope Association is to convene with them on Friday before the second Sunday in September. We would be glad to attend that meeting, but do not now think we can very well do so. Now, today, May 11, we were with Sulphur Spring Church. Elder Huddleston is pastor of this church, and his membership is here. The service was pleasant and delightful today, though not so large a crowd as some of the brethren seemed to expect, though we thought that did very well for Saturday. Brother W. M. Ford and wife, of Taylorsville, Miss., were present, with a daughter and son-in-law. We were pleasantly surprised to meet them here. We have been at Brother Ford's home several years ago. We are now at the home of a Brother Walters, who is blind, and where Elder Huddleston is making his home. We do not think it necessary to make mention of the names of all the brethren who conveyed us from place to place, and whose homes we visited. We have enjoyed the trip so far, and have been kindly received and well treated-much better than we feel to deserve. We appreciate every kindness that has been shown us, and pray that the Lord's richest blessings may rest upon them. The appointments close May 21, and then we expect to return to our humble little home, where we know our loved ones will be looking for us and longing for our coming. We are getting anxious for the time to come to start home. We desire an interest in the prayers of the Lord's dear children. Pray the good Lord to direct us in the right way, and to enable us to speak such things as will have a tendency to draw His children more closely together in love and sweet fellowship. If we know our poor heart, we trust we may never advocate a thing that would tend to cause confusion among them. C. H. C.

Christ's Birthday

---May 30, 1929

We have received the following question: "Please give me your views on when Christ was born. Most people think and claim that Christmas day is His birthday. I want to know what you think about it." As we have stated in our columns before, we so state again, that no man on earth knows the day the Saviour was born. But it is evident that He was not born in December, or any other winter month. On the night of His birth shepherds were keeping watch over their flocks by night. The flocks were in the open field, and the shepherds were keeping watch over them. That country is a colder country than the states in the Union where sheep raising is engaged in; and those who know anything about the matter of sheep raising know that in cold weather the sheep are not turned out in the pastures to graze, but are kept under shelter. This is enough to prove that He was not born in winter. The observing of December 25 as the birthday of the Saviour is nothing more nor less than an invention and institution of Roman Catholicism. C. H. C.

Another Change

Before our dear brother, Elder J. J. Turnipseed, was called away arrangements had been made between him and Elder J. H. Phillips, of Huron, Tenn., to soon begin the publication of a new paper to be called The Primitive Paths. A prospectus had been printed and mailed out, making announcement of the proposed new paper. Arrangements were made for us to do the printing of the paper for them and to mail it out from this office. Since the sad death of our dear brother, Brother Phillips does not feel like going ahead with the undertaking. He does not feel like shouldering the responsibility alone. So the publication of The Primitive Paths had to be abandoned. There was just about enough type set for the first issue, and the expectation was for it to be mailed on the sixth day of June. Those articles are all in this issue of the paper. This sad, sudden and unexpected turn of affairs reminds us very forcibly that "man proposes, but God disposes." Our times are in His hand. How often our plans are all upset and overthrown! But still all our hope and trust and confidence are in a God who is never disappointed and whose plans are never overthrown. Since this sad stroke has befallen us, we have been trying again to beg the Lord to direct us as to what course we should pursue with The Primitive Baptist. Our readers know that we have been wanting to make it a weekly for some time; but we have been afraid to risk taking the step. We were afraid to risk following the impression without more subscribers (or a larger list) first. It seems that we have been afraid to "walk by faith" on this proposition. Now, we have fully decided to step right out and follow this impression, or desire, to publish The Primitive Baptist weekly. We feel to hope that if the Lord is in the matter the paper will be sustained. We trust our readers will put forth a double effort to double the circulation. Remember that the paper will come to you twice as often as every other week, and Christmas week will be the only week we expect to miss. This change will be made the first of July. The first issue of the weekly will be dated July 4, 1929. Please bear in mind that the support of the paper comes from the subscriptions. The few advertisements we publish do not support the paper-they only help to bear a very small part of the expense. They do not even pay the salary of one of the clerks we have to keep employed in the office. We use more than we receive from that source in sending the paper to poor saints who are not able to pay for it. We feel sure that those who are able to pay for the paper are willing for us to receive this fund which is used in this way. The price of the paper will now have to be made $2 a year, to all alike. This is as low as it can possibly be made. But until July first you can renew at $1.75 a year. Your renewal must be mailed not later than June 30 to get the benefit of this price. Pay for as many years as you wish to at this price until that time. How do you like this size type? Write a card and tell us. If enough of our readers tell us they want us to do so, we will set a part of the paper in this type when we change to the weekly. Please let us hear from you. Feel free to tell us how you feel about these things. We can't all have all things as we prefer them; but we desire to try to please the greatest number of the subscribers in those matters wherein we should try to please. Remember us in your prayers. Pray the Lord to direct us in the right way and to help us to "enquire for the old paths, where is the good way," and give us courage to "walk therein." C. H. C.

Trip in Mississippi

In our issue of May 30 we gave an account of our trip in Mississippi up to the eleventh of May. The article was written on Saturday, May 11. We were at Sulphur Spring Church, the home church of Elder J. C. Huddleston, near Caledonia, Miss., on that day and also on Sunday, May 12. A large crowd was present on Sunday, and the meeting was enjoyed. On Sunday afternoon Elder Huddleston went with us to Columbus, where we tried to preach that night in the home of a Brother Daugherty. Several people were present and we had a very pleasant little service. Monday morning Brother Huddleston conveyed us to Enon Church, near Houston, the home church of Elder E. M. Verell, deceased. The crowd was not large. While we were trying to speak to them in the name of the Master a friend came to the church and informed us that we were wanted at the telephone at a home nearby. He told us there was a long distance call for us from Fordyce, Ark. When we got to the telephone we were informed by our wife that she had a message for us from Birmingham to come there at once, as Elder Turnipseed was not expected to live through the day. We left at once, being conveyed by Brother Huddleston to Aberdeen, where we met Friend Bourland from Amory, who took us in his car to that place. We went to the home of a Brother Pennington, who kindly had us try to sleep some, and who called us at the proper time. Sister Pennington had prepared us a lunch, and then Brother Pennington conveyed us to the train. We left there at 1:25 for Birmingham, where we arrived at 5:30 Tuesday morning, May 14, and found that our dear brother, Elder Turnipseed, had passed away at 4 o'clock the afternoon before. Account of the funeral has already been given. We felt sure that word had gone out that we had been called away from the appointments, and we did not know how to reach them again. So we decided it would be best to come on home and try to visit those churches some time in the future which we failed to reach. We left Birmingham on Wednesday at 12:30, and arrived in Fordyce Thursday morning at 3:44 and were met at the train by our wife and children. We were glad to get home again, and felt to thank the Lord that we found all well. We were sorry not to visit those churches we failed to reach, and hope that we may be able to visit them some day, if the Lord will. Elder Turnipseed had made a promise to be at Winfield, Ala., on the fourth Sunday in May to preach a commencement sermon for the high school there. Some Old Baptist friends had obtained this promise from him. When they learned of Brother Turnipseed's illness they wanted us to go and fill the promise. Sister Turnipseed earnestly requested us to do so. Accordingly, after we returned home and tried to consider the matter, we wired them we would be there, the Lord willing. So we went, arriving there on Saturday before the fourth Sunday, and tried to preach that night in the Landmark Missionary Baptist meeting house. On Sunday we did the best we could in trying to preach the commencement sermon for them in the auditorium of the high school building. A large crowd was present-more than could obtain seats or a place in the room. We enjoyed a very pleasant service. If we remember correctly, there were forty-three graduates. After the service we had lunch with Friend Wade, who conveyed us to Carbon Hill, where we could meet a fast train for Memphis. We arrived home Monday morning again, and found all well. Our agent here in Thornton for the Cotton Belt Railroad got permission for the fast train to stop for us Friday night and take us on and also to stop Monday night and let us off. This was kind and accommodating on their part. The Cotton Belt is a "Railroad of Courtesy." Those people in Winfield were good to us, and so they were at the places we visited on the trip in Mississippi. May the blessings of the Lord rest upon them all, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Billy Sunday

---June 27, 1929

The great humbug of the day, Billy Sunday, the so-called evangelist, has been preaching recently at Corpus Christi, Texas. One of his great sayings in his sermons is this: Nothing makes the devil more angry than to see great throngs coming to this tabernacle. Billy was just mistaken in the sign he saw in the countenance of his daddy. His daddy perhaps looked mad to him, but he was not mad. He was never more delighted with anything than with Billy's sham religion and so-called preaching. The devil is always delighted with humbug work done and carried on in the name of Christianity, and that is all Billy Sunday is doing. He would not know a real gospel sermon if he should see it printed in box car letters, or if he should hear it delivered by an inspired apostle of the Lord of glory. If one of them could be sent back to this world and he should preach an inspired gospel sermon in Billy Sunday's presence, Billy would not know what it was. Billy does know what he is out for-and he gets a good supply of it-and that is the "filthy lucre." He just makes merchandise of the people, and gets the money, and that is all he cares for. If you want to get some information concerning Billy Sunday, send 25 cents to The Rail Splitter, Milan, Ill., for a copy of a pamphlet they are publishing, the title of which is "Billy Sunday Unmasked," and they will send it to you as soon as they are ready to mail out, which we judge will not be long. Or you may send the 25 cents to us and we will order the book for you. C. H. C.

An Appreciated Letter

To Claudis, Florida, Fleming, Ilene and William Hartsel Cayce:

My Dear Little Friends-Your good daddy has just come and gone, and I was so glad to hear him preach and have him in my home that I told him I would send you children a nice lot of peanuts as a present. He showed me your pictures and told me that you liked peanuts. I have a lot of them and want you all to have a big time eating some of them. I have a little boy seven years old and a little girl five years old, and I am preacher, too, and sometimes leave them at home and go away. And I know they want to see daddy come back home, just like you do. And so I think of you, and want you to be good children and help mama while daddy is away. Daddy loves you all, but his dear Saviour and your Saviour won't let him stay at home with you all the time, so he has to leave you and go and preach to the Lord's people. So you children have to let daddy go and wait for his return. Jesus will be with you and your dear mama while daddy is gone, and He will bring him back safe to you. Dear Sister Cayce, Brother Claud showed us your picture with the children and it made us desire so much to see you all. Brother Claud has been doing some wonderful preaching for us. I hope that you may feel the presence of the dear Saviour while he is out preaching for the Lord's humble poor and realize in your good heart that you are a true handmaid of the Lord. You are worth so much to Brother Claud, and your sweet influence and the influence of your loving children has so enriched his life and filled his soul that his gift is magnified and his field of usefulness greatly enlarged. You are doing much good in the kingdom of your blessed Saviour, and I want you to know that some of us, at least, appreciate the sacrifices that you, the children, and Brother Cayce are making for us. Could each one of us wholly give ourselves into the hands of our God and be willing to do His bidding in all things, I am sure our precious cause would blossom as the rose. May the Lord bless you and the little children while your loved one is away preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ, is my prayer, for Jesus' sake. Pray for us when you have a mind to pray for the poorest of the poor and the weakest of the weak. In hope, G. W. Durbin. Falkner, Miss. REMARKS Language fails to express how much the above good letter is appreciated. So few of the good brethren and sisters think of writing to our loved ones who are so often left at home and who spend so many lonely and lonesome hours. May the good Lord bless you, dear brother, for your act of kindness and your good and kind words. It was all appreciated by the children as well as by us and our dear companion, who cheerfully toils on and encourages us to go in discharge of duty. Do not forget to remember us all in your prayers. C. H. C.

Now A Weekly

---July 4, 1929

In our issue of June 13, 1929, we made the announcement that The Primitive Baptist would be changed to a weekly beginning about the first of July. According to that announcement, we now begin as a weekly, with this issue, of July 4, 1929. We might say very well that the weekly publication began with the last issue, which was June 27-just a week ago. We also made the statement in the same issue (June 13) that we would put a part of the paper in this size type, if our subscribers preferred it. A number have written us that they prefer this type, and that they are well pleased with it. Of course there are a great many that we have not heard from. But as so many have written us that they like this type we will use it for our editorials. We do not have enough of it to use for the whole paper, and cannot afford the expense of buying enough for that now. All our type is new, and we cannot afford to throw it away. We believe our readers will all like these changes, and we greatly desire to please all in all things wherein it is right for us to try to please the brethren. In the matter of doctrine and the practice taught in God's word, we believe it is right to try to please the Lord, regardless of what any man or set of men might say or do. But we believe the Lord will always have some faithful followers who will be pleased with the truth. We trust our brethren will try to get more subscribers for the paper now, and help us all they can in extending the circulation. Remember that we are depending on the subscriptions to support the paper. As we have previously said, the small amount of advertising which we have in the paper will not even pay the salary of one of the clerks. in the office. We use more than we get for advertising to help pay for sending the paper to poor saints who enjoy reading it but are not able to pay for it. Who would object to us running the advertising and using the income in that way which we receive from the same? Would one of the objectors be willing to contribute the same amount toward sending the paper to the poor? If one would do that we would willingly leave all the advertising out. The price of the paper will now have to be made $2 a year, or $1 for six months. The price will be the same to all. If any are not able to pay the price they do not have to be deprived of the privilege of reading it on that account. If you are owing for the paper, and cannot pay the full price, or the full amount that you owe, send what you can, and write us your condition. Be frank with us; but do not refuse to tell us something. That is not treating the editor right-no matter if it is our paper or some other. If you owe a debt and are not in a position to pay it, don't treat your creditor with silent contempt. That is not the way you would want to be treated. Remember the "golden rule," and try to practice that. We already have a lot of articles set in the smaller type which we have been using, and will publish them as we get to them, and will set all our editorials in this larger type after that. We believe all our readers will like the size and form of the paper better as they become accustomed to it and get used to it. You will have a weekly paper' in a convenient size to keep and to make up in books. Keep your papers. At the end of the year an index will be published, and then you can make the whole year's papers up in a book and have an index at the end of it. It will be valuable to have in later years. Some time ago we offered to give a whole year's subscription for one copy of The Primitive Baptist of January 1, 1886. No one sent us a copy of that issue. Look over your old papers, and ask others who have been taking the paper, and see if you can find one. We will gladly give a year's subscription for the paper of that date. It is our desire to keep the paper free from controversy. It seems to us that there are some who are not satisfied, and who would like to have some quarrel with us, judging from some things we get; but we are not going to quarrel with them. If they want to "fuss" they may look for someone who is of the same mind with themselves, and then they may "fuss" to their heart's content. We desire to publish the truth, and to contend for the old paths and the ancient landmarks which our fathers have set; and to contend for nothing but the truth in the spirit of love and kindness to all. We feel sure that if the Lord is in the matter the paper will be supported and maintained. We feel willing to leave the matter in His hands and in the hands of the brethren, the lovers of truth. We need the prayers of the Lord's dear children, that the Lord would lead us in the right way, and give us courage to walk in the old paths, where is the good way. We have no use for the various institutions and inventions of men. The good Book tells us of the only kingdom our Lord established here in the world, and that is His church. He organized no aid societies, Sunday schools, leagues, unions, boards, conventions, or any other such society or institution. They are nothing better than the inventions of men. If there would ever be any need of any of those things the Lord would have instituted them, or would have told us about the need of them. With the Book we are thoroughly furnished unto all good works. Being thoroughly furnished therein and therewith, not a thing is needed which is not contained therein. It is a flagrant violation to practice what the Book does not teach, either by command, precept or example. We should let everything alone which we do not find in the Book. And we should do all that the Book commands, to the best of our ability. May the Lord help us all so to do. C. H. C.

Matthew 10:6 AND Matthew 28:19

Brother Albert Waid, Oneonta, Ala., asks our views on ((0:6) (Matthew 10:6); (28:19). In ((0:5) (Matthew 10:5-6,7)we find this language: "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Here we have it that Jesus sent the twelve out to preach, and He commanded them not to go among the Gentiles or the Samaritans. This was before His crucifixion. If gospel preaching was necessary in order that sinners receive eternal life, Jesus here forbade the necessary thing thereto being preached among the Samaritans or the Gentiles. Their work in preaching at that time was confined to the Jews-to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel." They (the twelve) were to preach among the Jews and were to proclaim the fact in their preaching that "the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The time was then present-the time had come-that law worship and service was to be done away, and gospel worship and service was being brought in. This was to be proclaimed then to the Jews. In (Matthew 28:16-20) we have this language: "Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw Him, they worshipped Him: but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." This was after the Saviour was crucified, buried and raised again. He appeared unto the eleven. Judas had already hanged himself, so there were then eleven of the apostles. Now, since the Saviour had died and was raised again, He gave the apostles a command different from the one recorded in (0:6) (Matthew 10:6). In the first command to preach their labors were to be confined to the Jews; now they were to go among the nations-among the Gentiles; they were to teach all nations. They were not to teach the unteachable, but to teach the teachable among the Gentiles, as well as among the Jews. Their field of labor was enlarged. Their labors were no longer to be confined to the Jews-"the lost sheep of the house of Israel." In order to teach, the teacher must have a teachable subject. One cannot teach natural things to one who is not a teachable subject. For one to be a teachable subject in the natural realm, he must have natural life and a natural mind. He must have natural comprehension. The same thing is true in the spiritual realm. For one to be able to teach spiritual things, he must have a teachable subject. For one to be a teachable subject in the spiritual realm, he must have spiritual life and a spiritual mind. He must have spiritual comprehension. As they were commanded to teach, of course they were to teach natural things, or else they were to teach spiritual things. We suppose no one would say they were to teach natural things, but were to teach spiritual things. They were to preach the gospel. The gospel is something which pertains to spiritual things, the spiritual realm. Certainly no one would say they were to teach the unteachable. Hence, they were to teach the teachable among the Gentiles as well as among the Jews. This is evidence of the fact that the Lord had a people among the Gentiles who were in need of being taught spiritual things, and the Gentiles were to have the blessings and privileges of the gospel. This command was given to the eleven. Jesus said, "Go ye." The antecedent of the pronoun "ye" is the eleven. The apostles were chosen witnesses who were with the Lord and witnessed His work and personally saw Him. They were chosen, called and sent out by the Saviour Himself, the second Person in the Trinity, and no others could fill the apostolic office, and no others ever did, or ever will, fill that office, only those whom He called and put into that office. The apostles were not put into that office by the office work of the Holy Spirit, but by the Son. But it is the office work of the Holy Spirit to call and put into the ministry those who are sent out by the Lord for that work, who are not in the apostolic office-who are not apostles. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to

Can We Not Withdraw?

---July 11, 1929

The following article written by Elder J. C. Ross was published in The Primitive Baptist of May 7, 1907. We think the article good, and thought it might be profitable for our readers now, so we decided to give space for it again, although we have many articles on hand that are good which have not yet been published. It is our desire to select and publish what we think will be for the best interest of the cause. Read the article and study it and profit by it. C. H. C.
THE ARTICLE

Has a church or an association of churches the right to withdraw fellowship from a faulty or a disorderly church? If not, then a disorderly church may be guilty of any kind of doctrine or practice, and remain in fellowship with the orderly body. If there is no precept, example nor principle given us in the Scriptures, then we have no right to withdraw under any circumstances. When I am convinced that we should fellowship Arminianism, modern mission-ism with all her brood of institutions, I will be ready to join the Missionaries. This is a serious question with me. No man nor set of men can induce me to so depart from the sacred and holy Scriptures of divine inspiration, and it is so strange and distressing that some precious brethren will suffer themselves to be deceived "by good words and fair speeches." I want to ask just a few plain and simple questions, in the spirit of meekness and sincerity; and I hope you will prayerfully answer in your own heart and before that One who knows the secrets of our hearts. First: Do you believe the Primitive Baptists should fellowship the doctrine that the eternal salvation of poor sinners is conditional on the part of the sinner? Second: That we should fellowship the modern board and convention system-membership in the convention depending upon the payment of a certain amount of money? Third: That one hundred thousand heathens are dying and going to hell daily for the want of money and means, as Carey expressed it when he wrote to the sisters of America to pull off their jewelry and hang them on the cross of Christ to keep souls out of hell-thus ignoring the cross of our adorable Redeemer? Fourth: Do you believe that the Primitive Baptists should receive baptism from a people that have such heresies as the above? Fifth: Do you believe that a person who is contending for such things is a friend to the dear old church? I mean contending that we should fellowship such as the above. The above are only a few of the many things that are being advocated in these days. Dear brother or sister, may God help you to prayerfully consider these things. Have you suffered yourselves to be led away from your first love? Do you love the church as you once did? If not, why not? Has she changed since you joined her? If not, and your love and zeal for her has subsided, is it not evident that you have changed and not the church? I wish now to call your attention to some historical and Scriptural evidence. It has been argued by some that the Black Rock convention led the way in this unholy course, as it is called by some. I wish first to call attention to minutes of the Philadelphia Association, p. 55, "Contenting ourselves in the general satisfaction our churches have expressed in their letters of the comfort, edification, establishment, and consolation, they acknowledge to have received from our last letter, we desire and entreat you to weigh and deeply consider that we are in the last days, the dregs and worst of times, of which we have been warned by the inspired writers, of scoffers, walking after their own lusts, {(II Peter 3:3)} of perilous days. {(II Timothy 3:1)} We are to mark those which cause divisions and offenses, contrary to the doctrine we have received, and avoid them, who, by good words and fair speeches, deceive the hearts of the simple, {(Romans 16:17-18)} that of your own selves should men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. {((0:1) (Acts 20)} Therefore, it concerns all who would be spiritually dressed and beautifully adorned, to meet and be approved of the heavenly bridegroom; to be very careful how and with whom they walk; avoiding, both in principle and practice, in heart and life, in the church and in the world, in the family and in the field, whatever may cause us to contract filth or foulness on our beautiful garments; as Christ's virgins, look often in the glass of the gospel, espying and brushing away every spot of dust, keeping clean and neat for His everlasting embraces. Precious souls, suffer the word of exhortation, and be well established in gospel truths, in these shaking times. Look well that you be built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Himself being your chief cornerstone. Take heed that you build not on wood, hay, and stubble of men's inventions." I have given you this lengthy quotation to show that these brethren held in 1747 the same view of this matter that we do. They make it very plain that they believe it Scriptural to not only withdraw from persons that are immoral, but also from those who depart from the doctrine of the inspired word; and that we should mark all such and avoid them. I next call attention to p. 58 of the same book, "Queries from the church at Horse-neck, in New England: First, Whether to deny the foreknowledge of the eternal God, concerning all future evil as well as good, be not a fundamental error? Answer: We look upon such an opinion to be directly repugnant to Scripture; therefore exceeding erroneous and pernicious. 1. Because it supposes God imperfect, and so no God. {((7:5) (Psalms 147:5); (Hebrews 4:13)} Secondly: If so, there would be no room for the Divine Being to make provision for the redemption of mankind before the fall of man, which is contrary to express Scripture testimony. {(Proverbs 8:28,35); (II Timothy 1:9)} Thirdly: It is an error, which, in its nature and consequences, doth oppose and tend to overthrow the whole Christian religion. {((23) (Acts 2:23); ((28) (4:28); (Titus 3:10)} 2. Whether a member of the church holding such an opinion, endeavors to propagate it, and obstinately persists in it, is not worthy of the highest censure, notwithstanding he pleads matter of conscience? Answer: We judge such worthy of the highest censure; because a church is to proceed against a person who is erroneous in judgment, as well as against one vicious in practice, notwithstanding they may plead conscience in the affair." {(Titus 3:10); ((Th 3:14) (II Thessalonians 3:14)} This quotation is so plain that it needs no comment. From this quotation we are taught that it matters not how conscientious a brother may be, this is no excuse for the church not to proceed against him. In this we have a principle handed down to us, not only by the Scriptures but by the Baptists in 1748. I next call attention to some things found in an essay in the same book which was published in the year 1749, and adopted by the association. This comes directly to the point heading this article, "Does an association of churches or a church have the right to withdraw from a defective church?" Let these brethren answer: "That an association is not a superior judicature, having such superior power over the churches concerned; but that each particular church hath a complete power and authority from Jesus Christ, to administer all gospel ordinances, provided they have a sufficiency of officers duly qualified, or that they be supplied by the officers of another sister church or churches, as baptism, and the Lord's supper, etc.; and to receive in and cast out, and also to try and ordain their own officers, and to exercise every part of gospel discipline and church government, independent of any other church or assembly whatever. And that several such independent churches, where providence gives them their situation convenient, may, and ought, for their mutual strength, counsel, and other valuable advantages, by their voluntary and free consent, to enter into an agreement and confederation, as is hinted in our printed narrative of discipline, pages 59, 60, 61. Such churches there must be agreeing in doctrine and practice, and independent in their authority and church power, before they can enter into a confederation, as aforesaid, and choose delegates or representatives, to associate together; and thus the several independent churches being the constituents, the association, council or assembly of their delegates, when assembled, is not to be deemed a superior judicature, as having a superintendency over the churches, but subservient to the churches, in what may concern all the churches in general, or any one church in particular; and, though no power can regularly arise above its fountain from where it rises, yet we are of the opinion, that an association of the delegates of associate churches have a very considerable power in their hands, respecting those churches in their confederation; for if the agreement of several distinct churches, in sound doctrine and regular practice, be the first motive, ground, and foundation or basis of their confederation, then it must naturally follow, that a defection in doctrine or practice in any church, in such confederation, or any party in any such church, is ground sufficient for an association to withdraw from such a church or party so deviating or making defection, and to exclude such from them in some formal manner, and to advertise all the churches in confederation thereof, in order that every church in confederation may withdraw from such in all acts of church communion, to the end they may be ashamed, and that all the churches may discountenance such, and bear testimony against the defection. Such withdrawing from a defective or disorderly church, or that ought to be towards a delinquent church, is such as ariseth from their voluntary confederation aforesaid, and not only from the general duty that is incumbent on all orthodox persons, and churches to do, where no such confederation is entered into, as (II Corinthians 6:16-17). Now, from that general duty to withdraw from defective persons or churches, there can no more be done, than to desist from such acts of fellowship as subsisted before the withdrawing, which is merely negative, and in no wise anything positive. Churches, as they are pillars of truth, may, and ought to endeavor to promote truth among others also; which endeavors, if they prove fruitless, as they are but mystico modo, they may be withdrawn; the withdrawing, therefore, must be accordingly; which is only to cease from future endeavors, leaving the objects as they were or are. But if there be a confederation an incorporation, by mutual and voluntary consent, as the association of churches must and ought to be, then something positive may and ought to be done; and, though an association ought not to assume a power to excommunicate or deliver a defective or disorderly church to Satan, as some do claim, yet it is a power sufficient to exclude the delegates of a defective or disorderly church from an association, and to refuse their presence at their consultations, and to advise all of the churches in confederation to do so too. A godly man may, and ought to withdraw, not only from a heathen, but from such as have the form of godliness, if they appear to want the power of it; {(II Timothy 3:5)} by the same parity of reason the saints, in what capacity soever they may be considered, may withdraw from defective or disorderly churches or persons; but excommunicate they cannot, there being no institution to authorize them so to do. But in the capacity of a congregational church, dealing with her own members, an association, then, of the delegates of associate churches, may exclude and withdraw from defective and unsound or disorderly churches or persons, in manner above said; and this will appear regular and justifiable by the light and law of nature, as is apparent in the conduct and practice of all regular civil and political corporations and confederations whatsoever; who all of them have certain rules to exclude delinquents from their societies, as well as for others to accede thereunto. We judge those things in (Acts 15) to be imitable by an association, namely: first, their disowning of the erroneous and Judaizing teachers, saying, to whom we gave no such commandment, ((24) (Acts 15:24)); secondly, the sending delegated persons of their own number, with Paul and Barnabas, to support their sentence in the place where the debate sprung up, ((25) (Acts 15:25)); and a third thing followed in consequence thereof, namely, a delivering of the decrees to the other churches, to be observed, as well as the church of Antioch, ((4) (Acts 16:4)). Consistent therewith, the practice of after ages is found to be; when, because they had no council, synod, or association to convene, of course they called a council, in order to make head against any error or disorders, when in any particular church, such things grew too big for a particular church peaceably to determine, as the case about circumcision was at Antioch. In such cases all the churches were looked upon as one church, and all the bishops as universal, because of the unity of the faith and conformity of practice which ought to be in the churches of Christ; though in all other cases, the several distinct churches acted independent of each other, as Cyprian relates the practice of his time, namely: that the bishops were so united in one body, that if any one of the body broached any heresy, or began to waste and tear the flock of Christ, all the rest came immediately to its rescue. Cyprian, cited by Bingham, book 2, page 101. And the same author observes, that they disowned the faulty, and advertised all the churches of the same." I shall not comment at length on this quotation from this essay, as space will not permit at this time, but call attention to the fact that they argue that a church, or association of churches, not only have the right to declare against a faulty or disorderly church, but that it is their duty to do so. They also show that it was the practice in Cyprian's day. I quote again from the same essay, page 63: "And Mr. Crosby relates, that an association in London did disown a certain disorderly church in London, and did caution all the churches they were related to, not to countenance them in any way, nor to suffer their members to frequent their meetings; and thus an association may disown and withdraw from a defective or disorderly church, and advise the churches related to them to withdraw from, and to discountenance such as aforesaid, without exceeding the bounds of their power. And further, that an association of the delegates of confederate churches may doctrinally declare any person or party in a church, who are defective in principles or disorderly in practice, to be censurable, when the affair comes under their cognizance, and without exceeding the bounds of their power and duty, to advise the church that such belong unto, how to deal with such, according to the rule of gospel discipline; and also to strengthen such a church, and assist her, if need be, by sending able men of their own number to help the church in executing the power vested in her by the ordinance of Jesus Christ, and to stand by her, and to defend her against the insults of such offending persons or parties." Dear reader, I have given most all this essay that you may judge for yourself as to where they stood on the subject of fellowship and declarations of non-fellowship; also where the Baptists stood in Cyprian's day on the same subject; also the course of an association in London. I am sure you can discern between their position and the modern idea of fellowshiping everything. This is the very position that has been denounced by some as mob law, unholy course, and many other such expressions. Dear reader, I ask you to turn and carefully read the Scripture citations that they give, and you will see that they held the same views of them that our people do today. It matters not what this association did after this, this shows where they stood before they went into Arminianism and the modern board system. Had they been faithful to these holy principles, Arminianism could never have entered into her sacred and holy precincts and brought ruin and devastation to many churches. I know that many precious brethren have had many hard sayings to bear because they have been faithful in speaking out against some things that have of late been introduced among the Old Baptists, but I am sure that the servant who remains steadfast and unmovable, who faithfully but kindly admonishes God's people against every false way, will receive the smiles of his God, which is worth more than all else in this world, yea, more than all the applause of men. The applause of men may feed carnality, but this is of little benefit to the soul. Good brethren are sometimes led off from the church and as a result bring sorrow and discontent to their own hearts. Oh, that God would save His people from every false way, that they may walk in the good old way and find sweet rest to their weary souls. It is so discouraging to see good, precious brethren lend their influence to the enemy, and thereby weaken their influence in the church and for the church. How much better to labor to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, that our hearts may be cemented, as it were, in bonds of sweet fellowship. How much more inviting it is to God's little children to come into the fold and find a sweet resting place. May the good Lord keep us humble and at each other's feet. Yours for the cause of Christ, J. C. Ross. Greenfield, Tenn.

Reply to H. L. Whitehouse

---July 18, 1929

In another place in this paper will be found a letter from H. L. Whitehouse, who is identified with what is known as the Landmark Missionary Baptists. He speaks of three things upon which he says we may disagree- mission work, prayer meetings, and Sunday schools. Perhaps he does not fully understand our position on these questions and practices, and may not know our reason for such position. We thought it might not be out of place to say a few words to the brother concerning these things. However, before that we wish to make a few remarks concerning his impressions and as to why he became satisfied. Concerning what he heard when he went to the pasture will say that the leading man and champion of the anti-board faction of the Missionary Baptists makes sport of such things as that. We know he does, for we have seen it more than once in his paper. Another thing we want to suggest is that we do not think it would have been right for him to have united with the Primitive Baptists because his father and mother belonged to them, nor because he was prejudiced against the Missionaries. Such motives for joining any church would be wrong motives. If what the brother heard served to remove that thought and that idea, it served a good and right purpose. Now as to mission work. Primitive Baptists do not object to gospel preaching. What we object to is the modern system which men have invented and introduced in the name of Christianity for the professed object of having the gospel preached, and that under the pretext that it is necessary for it to be preached in order that sinners reach heaven. This makes the eternal salvation of sinners in every age and country and clime dependent on the liberalities of the people in sending the gospel by those who have it to those who have it not. It makes the eternal salvation of the heathen depend on the liberalities of the people in those countries where they have the gospel. If the heathen fail to have the gospel preached to them, then they are sent to hell on account of our neglect. This is the foundation upon which the whole modern mission system rests, and it is unknown to the Bible and was unknown to the Baptist Church until the days of Andrew Fuller and William Carey. They organized the first missionary society among the Baptists in 1792. The Philadelphia Association was organized in 1707- long before the birth of the mission system. On pages 426 to 433 of the minutes of that association may be found a circular letter put forth by that body in the session held in 1806, when the association was ninety-nine years old. In this circular letter they give the principles which they say gave rise to modern missions, and on page 429 they say, "It is, however, a very remarkable circumstance, that in modern missions Papal Rome has led the way." John the Baptist did not lead the way; Jesus Christ did not lead the way; the apostles did not lead the way; no inspired man led the way-but Papal Rome led the way. Those who engage in the modern mission work, then, are not following Christ, or the inspired apostles, or the teaching of God's blessed Book; but they are following Papal Rome. This is the cool and calm and plain statement of that body who had just a short time before imbibed the false doctrine of the mission advocates and system. The division in the Baptist family on account of the introduction of the new doctrines and practices advocated by Puller and Carey began in 1832, after the Baptists had borne with the new doctrines and measures and protested against them for years. In November, 1910, a debate was held between I N. Penick and Ben M. Bogard in Crockett County, Tenn. Penick affirmed that "The Bible teaches that Baptist churches and individual Baptists have the liberty and right to use such agencies as the missionary state bodies of Tennessee and Kentucky and the Southern Baptist Convention, with committees or Boards in carrying forward mission work under our Lord's commission." Bogard denied the proposition. On page 54 of that debate Bogard said: He (Penick) said nobody raised the question until the Hardshells raised it about a hundred years ago. The reason they didn't was because there was nothing like that to object to until the Convention fellows came in, and then the Hardshell split came. I lay that split to the charge of Conventionism, and while the Hardshells went to the extreme and repudiated missionary work, the Con-ventionites were the ones to drive the wedge. On page 136 he says: My sixty-fourth objection is that the convention system produces discord and division among the churches. If it hadn't been for Conventionism and Boards, there never would have been a split. For seventeen hundred years the churches had been preaching to sinners. Hardshells went wrong because they quit preaching to sinners. When the controversy came up one went wrong in one direction and one in the other. One took unscriptural means, and one denied all means entirely. Landmark Baptists stand on middle ground, and we believe in using means as opposed to the Hard-shells, and using only Scriptural means as opposed to the Conventionites. You caused the Hardshell split and you are going to cause another split. Bogard, the leading Landmarker, lays the split between our people, whom he calls Hardshells, and the Missionaries to Conventionism-it was the Mission system. He says that the Conventionites were the ones to drive the wedge. That being true, the question naturally arises, Which party retained the ordinances in that division? If the ordinances were with the Baptists before that division, then one of the parties retained them when the division came. If the Conventionites retained the ordinances in that division, they have them yet, and the Landmarkers do not. If those who opposed the boards and conventions retained the ordinances in that division, then we have them yet, and neither the Con-ventionites nor the Landmarkers have them. Note in the last quotation above that Bogard says the Con-ventionites are going to cause another split. This was in 1910. They were all Missionaries then, and were not fully divided. The Landmarkers are younger than the Conventionites as a body of people. The original Missionary

Baptist body were Conventionites. They were that when they separated from the Primitives on account of the introduction of their new measures. Hence the Conventionites are the original Missionary Baptists-though they are not the original Baptists, for the Baptists had existed without their new means and measures from the time the Lord organized His church until the days of Fuller and Carey. Next, as to prayer meetings. The Primitive Baptists do not object to the brethren meeting together and praying with and for each other, either in their homes or at the meeting houses. They have never objected to this. We know Primitive Baptist churches that have met together and engaged in prayer service for many years. At our own church here in Thornton, on our regular meeting time, we meet on Sunday morning at about ten o'clock and devote about an hour to song and prayer service before the hour for preaching to begin. If you have understood the Primitive Baptists object to prayer, or meeting together to engage in prayer with and for each other, you have not understood right. Next, as to Sunday schools. Our people do object to them. We do not object to teaching our children morality and right living as citizens, but we object to Sunday schools. They are unknown in the Scriptures. There is no Bible authority for them, either by command, precept or example. We also object to the professed object of the Sunday school. They are for the avowed object of teaching the children in such a way as to make them children of God; or to teach them so they may accept the Lord and be saved, become children of God. This is contrary to the truth. In The Primitive Baptist of May 31, 1910, we had a short article concerning Sunday schools, which was as follows: As we stated in The Primitive Baptist of May 1, 1906, the Sunday school was instituted by Robert Raikes, in Gloucester, England, in the eighteenth century. It is, therefore, an institution of man, and is not in the Scriptures. It is too young to be found there. It was first instituted for the object of teaching poor children to read and write. It was to teach literature, not religion. It has been adopted by worldly religionists, and the expressed object changed by them. It does not belong to the Bible nor to the church of Christ. In The Primitive Baptist of April 13, 1915, we copied an article from the News and Truths, of March 31, 1915, a Missionary Baptist paper published by H. B. Taylor, Murray, Ky., and commented on the same. Below we give the article and our comments: Mayor Roberts and some of his machine, of Terre Haute, Ind., are having a good deal of trouble in Uncle Sam's court for using repeaters in elections and other election frauds. If fraudulent, dishonest and criminal for a man to vote in one precinct in a city and then be rushed in an automobile to another city precinct and voted, is it any less reprehensible or any more honest for a church or Sunday school to use repeaters, who have already been counted in one Sunday school in a city, and are almost bodily pulled into another in order to be counted and to make a show? Up in Pike County, Ky., men have been tried and convicted recently for selling their votes for $1 and the rise, in a recent Kentucky election. Is a church or Sunday school any the less reprehensible, that pays Sunday school pupils cigars or free shaves to get them to attend on a given Sunday, when they want to make a big show? Does the fact that it is done in the name of religion and on Sunday make such methods any more honest or honorable than when done on a week day in a state or national election? The above appeared in the News and Truths of March 31, 1915, which paper is edited by H. B. Taylor, at Murray, Ky. Here we have a plain admission that the Sunday schools practice such frauds as that men are prosecuted for by the courts of the land, when practiced in state affairs. And this, too, by an institution which claims for its object the bringing of souls to Christ! Oh, shame, where is thy blush! What honest, well-informed person can believe that such a thing as this can have for its real object the salvation of souls? Such practice as this only educates the young and rising generation to engage in deceptive practices, and to even engage in swindling schemes for worldly gain. No wonder the jails and penitentiaries are crowded. No wonder that murder, theft, robbery, lying, cheating, and all kinds of immorality are increasing so rapidly. The Lord only knows what the end will be. And in the face of all such things as these, some Old Baptists allow their children to go to Sunday school. If you love your children, for the Lord's sake keep them away from such schools. We copy the above from those old issues of the paper that our good Missionary brother may see our objections to such things. Yes, a missionary is one who is sent. We do not deny, but earnestly believe, that the Lord's ministers are sent. So are the devil's ministers sent. But they are not sent by the same power or authority. The Lord sends His ministers, and He assigns to them their field of labor. The eminent Apostle Paul says, "But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by His grace, to reveal His Son in me, that I might preach Him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days, but other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother." -(Galatians 1:15-19). Turn and read the remainder of the chapter, and the next. Neither the Conventionites nor Landmarkers follow this way. The Convention and Board preachers apply to the Board for a place to preach, and the Board accepts or rejects. If the Board accepts the applicant, then the Board assigns him to his field of labor. The Landmarker applies to the association or committee, and the committee accepts or rejects. If the committee accepts the applicant, then the committee assigns him to his field of labor. The difference between them is simply a question of who has the authority to accept or reject the applicant and as to who shall handle the funds. "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge." - (Romans 10:1-2). The people for whom Paul here says he prayed, that they might be saved, were a people who had a zeal of God. He does not say they had a zeal for God, but of God. They were, therefore, children of God. The Lord's children need to be saved from the darkness of ignorance. This may be accomplished by teaching, and is to be accomplished that way. They are saved from the darkness of death by the direct work of the Holy Spirit in the impartation of life. Then they need teaching, and the Lord calls and sends His preachers for that purpose. "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." - (Romans 10:13-17). We quote all these verses that we may have the 'connection, the verses just before and just after the expression, "How shall they preach, except they be sent?" Remember that the Lord does the sending of His preachers. "Delivering thee from the people and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee." -((7) (Acts 26:17). This shows that the saving which God's people need which is mentioned in the first part of the chapter, is accomplished through preaching. It is not the saving that brings alien sinners into divine relationship with God. One must be brought out of a state of death in sin to a state of life in Christ before he can hear, or understand, gospel preaching. "Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word." -(John 8:43). "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." -(Romans 10:17). The word here is the speech of God. God speaks to the sinner who is dead in sins, and by the power of that speech the sinner is made alive in Christ, made alive from the dead. This gives the ability to hear His word, the ability to hear gospel preaching. Gospel preaching does not give life, but the giving of life by the power of God's speech- "the voice of the Son of God" -gives one the ability to hear the gospel. Then by gospel preaching they may be delivered from the darkness of ignorance. They may be saved from false doctrines and false ways. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the good of our readers. C. Meetings in Little Rock

We met our regular appointment at Fuller's Chapel, in North Little Rock, on the third Sunday in June and Saturday afternoon before. In the conference on Saturday afternoon the church made choice of Brother G. L. Pilkington for the office of deacon, and called for a presbytery to attend to the ordination at the next meeting. On Sunday a Sister Arnold came to the church, asking for a home with them. She related the reason of her hope in the Saviour and was received amidst much rejoicing. The ordinance of baptism was attended to that afternoon by the unworthy writer, who tries to serve the little band there as pastor. They have meeting every Sunday, and we try to be with them on each third Sunday and Saturday afternoon before, when we are not away on a tour. They have refused to release us from the pastoral care of the church, allowing us to be absent from their meetings when we are on a tour. We were with them again at the regular meeting the third Sunday in this month (July) and Saturday afternoon before. It was agreed in conference that the ordination of Brother Pilkington to the office of deacon should be attended to on Sunday morning, and that the charge should be delivered in the discourse to be preached just after the ordination. Elder A. Woodall, who has membership there, was present, and so was Brother A. H. Garner, who is an ordained deacon. His membership is in that association, but we do not now recall the name of the church. Elder P. E. Whitwell was expected, the meeting before, to be present and to take part in the ordination; but he was earnestly solicited to go to Donaldson, and obtained the consent of Brother Pilkington to go to that place. On Sunday morning when the church assembled Elder Woodall and the writer and Brother Garner formed ourselves into a presbytery and proceeded to ordain Brother Pilkington to the office of deacon. Elder Wood-all offered the ordination prayer. Then Brother Woodall made a short but very appropriate talk, and then we tried to preach to the people, and in doing that we tried to deliver the charge to Brother Pilkington and to the church. We enjoyed speaking to them, and it seemed that those present also enjoyed it. At the close of the discourse an open door of the church was proclaimed, when Brother Caudle and wife (Elder C. M. Monk's daughter), who live in Little Rock, came forward with a letter of dismissal from Little Flock Church, near Abbott, Ark., in the Salem Association, and were gladly received by the church. Also Sister Emma Gardner and Sister Myrtle Baker came forward and gave a reason of their hope in the Saviour, telling of their love for the Lord and His people, and asking for a home with the church. They were received gladly and with much rejoicing. They were all so overjoyed that they broke down in singing. It was agreed that the ordinance of baptism be attended to as soon as we could go to the water. Accordingly the service was dismissed and all went to the water, and the unworthy writer administered the ordinance in burying the dear sisters in the liquid grave with their Lord and Master to arise to walk in newness of life. It was a glorious meeting, and one which we believe will long be remembered. This is a lovely little band, and we love them, and we believe they love us, though we feel to be so unworthy of their great love and sweet fellowship. May the good Lord bless and sustain and care for and preserve them from all harm, not only while we are away from them-as we expect to be now for some time on a tour and attending associations-but also after we return, if the Lord may see fit to allow us to return to them again. We trust they will remember us in prayer while we are so far away from them. Elder John R. Harris has written an article about our meeting here in Thornton, which may be found in this issue. We ask all the dear brethren to remember us in their prayers. We expect to be far away from home when this issue of the paper is mailed out to our readers. Will you pray the Lord to bless us to speak to the comfort and benefit of His children, and pray Him to bless and keep our dear ones in our absence who are left in sadness at home? C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 5:9-13

We have been requested to give our views on (I Corinthians 5:9-13). These verses read as follows: I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators: yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat. For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from yourselves that wicked person. It seems very clear and plain to us that the apostle here positively forbids certain persons being allowed to remain in the fellowship of the church. The expression, "yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world * * * for then ye must needs go out of the world," shows that he has no reference to worldly matters, or things that pertain to worldly affairs. He calls attention, in this expression, to the fact that they were not forbidden to have dealings with fornicators in worldly affairs. If they were, then they would have to go out of the world. But they were forbidden to have dealings with fornicators, or a covetous person, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, in church affairs or religious matters. This fornication mentioned here does not specially refer to joining some institution other than the church, either, although we think that is forbidden. It seems to us that if one is a member of the church he is thereby married to Christ, and if he unites with some other institution which has its religious rites and ceremonies and services, he is thereby committing spiritual adultery or fornication. But this is not what the apostle is here specially referring to, as may be seen from the language contained in (I Corinthians 5:1-5). Those verses read as follows: It is reported commonly that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as is not so much as named among the Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife. And ye are puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he that hath done this deed might be taken away from among you. For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. This shows very clearly the kind of fornication or adultery he has under consideration, and which is not to be fellowshiped by the church. Persons guilty of such are not to be retained in the fellowship of the church. In connection with this we here call attention to (Matthew 19:9), the language of the Saviour: And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery. This shows very clearly that there is just one cause for which a man may put away his wife and marry another; and that is for the cause of fornication. Gill says that this expression includes adultery, incest, or any unlawful copulation. If one is guilty of such conduct, then the companion may righteously put such a one away. It is not wrong for them to put such a one away. If it is not wrong to put such a one away, then it is wrong not to do so. It is, therefore, right to put away one guilty of such conduct. Such conduct breaks the marriage vow, and frees the innocent party, and the innocent party should leave the guilty and put them away, and is free to marry again, and is no adulterer in doing so. This is the only thing that gives one the right to marry again. That is, one who puts away his wife for any other cause and marries again commits adultery in doing so. Then the teaching of the apostle in the text about which our opinion is asked is that the adulterer should not be allowed to remain in the church. The church should put such person from among themselves. They should withdraw fellowship from him. This is a sin unto death, for the party committing it thereby becomes dead to their companion. Covetousness, idolatry, railing, extortioning, are sins that are here classed with adultery. In fact, covetousness is idolatry. "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry." -(Colossians 3:5). The covetous person thinks more of money and worldly riches than he does of the service of God. The things of the world, the goods of the world, are of more value to him than the service of God. He will make the seeking after the things of the world of first importance and first consideration, instead of the kingdom of God and His righteousness. He becomes an idolater. He idolizes the goods of this world. Railing is the using of insolent and reproachful language; to utter reproach, to scoff. Such conduct is so unbecoming and so unchristian like that the guilty person should not be retained in the fellowship of the church. A drunkard is one who habitually drinks strong liquors immoderately; one whose habit it is to get drunk. We do not know how many times one must get drunk for it to be called a habit. Any way, it is very plain that drunkenness is a sin for which the church should withdraw fellowship. The guilty person should not be retained in the church. Extortion is the "act or practice of taking or obtaining anything from a person by illegal use or fear, whether by force, threats, or any other undue exercise of power; undue exaction; specifically, an oppression by color of right." -Webster. It is synonymous with oppression, rapacity, exaction, overcharge. An extortioner has no right to membership in the church, and the church is here required to withdraw fellowship from any who may be guilty. It may be of some profit to our readers for us to give here what Gill has to say concerning this chapter in a general way from his commentaries. It may help to give some light on the teaching of the apostle in this chapter. May the Lord help us to live as He commands, and help us to "keep a clean house." C. H. C.

GILL'S COMMENTS

In this chapter the apostle blames the Corinthians for conniving at a sin committed by one of their members; declares what he was determined to do, and what should be done by them in this case; and in general advises to shun conversation with wicked men; in (I Corinthians 5:1); mention is made of the sin committed by one among themselves, and which was publicly known, and commonly talked of; and which in general was fornication, and particularly incest, a man lying with his father's wife; and which is aggravated by its being what was not named, or could not be named among any virtuous persons among the Gentiles without offense; and yet the members of this church, at least the majority of them, were unconcerned at it, and were so far from mourning over it, and taking any step to remove the person from them that had done it, that they were swelled with pride, and gloried on account of their gifts, and perhaps on account of this man, who had committed the iniquity, (I Corinthians 5:2). This affair being related to the apostle, though at a distance; and he well knowing all things concerning it, as though he was present, resolved what should be done in this case by himself, (I Corinthians 5:3); and that was to deliver the man to Satan, in the name, and with the power and authority of Christ, when the members of this church were gathered together, and his spirit with them; the end of which was for the destruction of the man's body, and the salvation of his soul, (I Corinthians 5:4-5); and then the apostle returns to blame them for their glorying in men, and in external gifts, and pleading these as a reason why the man should be continued, and not removed from them; not considering the danger they were exposed to, and which he illustrates by the simile of leaven, a little of which affects the whole lump; suggesting thereby the danger they were in by continuing such a wicked person among them, (I Corinthians 5:6); wherefore pursuing the same metaphor taken from the Jewish passover, he exhorts to remove from them the man that had sinned, as the Jews at the passover removed the leaven out of their houses; that so they might appear to be a church renewed, and purged, and clear of leaven, keeping the true and spiritual pass-over, which they were under obligations to do, since Christ, the Antitype of the passover, was sacrificed for them, (I Corinthians 5:7); wherefore it became them to keep the feast of the Lord's supper; and indeed, to have the whole course of their conversation so ordered, as to avoid sin and sinners, and to behave in truth and uprightness, (I Corinthians 5:8); when the apostle goes on to put them in mind of what he had formerly written unto them, as suitable to the present case, which was, that they should not keep company with wicked men, particularly with fornicators, such as this man, though in a more heinous manner, (I Corinthians 5:9); and explains what was his meaning; not that they were to have no manner of conversation with persons of such a character, and of such-like evil characters, in things of a civil nature, for then there would be no living in the world, (I Corinthians 5:10). But his sense was, that they should keep no company with persons guilty of the sins mentioned, who bore the name of Christian brethren, and were members of the same church-state with them, from whose communion they ought to be removed; and indeed, so much familiarity with them should not be indulged, as even to eat with them, (I Corinthians 5:11). The reason of this difference, which he made between wicked men, who were not members of the church, and those that were, is because he had nothing to do, nor they neither, with them that were without the church, as it was their business only to take cognizance of them that were within, (I Corinthians 5:12); but neither of them had anything to do, to judge and censure those that did not belong to the church, but should leave them to God, the righteous Judge; and then closes all, (I Corinthians 5:13), with what he had chiefly in view throughout the whole chapter, and that is, that they would remove from their communion the wicked person who had been guilty of the sin first mentioned.

Ephesians 5:5,23,33

We have been requested to give our views on (Ephesians 5:5,23,33). (Ephesians 5:5) reads, "For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." We believe that what we said in our last issue in connection with (I Corinthians 5:9-13) will apply to the language of this text just as well. The apostle here teaches that such persons as mentioned have no inheritance in the kingdom of Christ. That is, there is no place in the church for them, and there is nothing there for them. They should be withdrawn from. They have no right in the church. (Ephesians 5:23) says, "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and He is the saviour of the body." He is the Saviour of His church, His people. The redeemed are frequently designated as the church-that is, the term church sometimes is used in reference to the whole family of the redeemed. It is so used in this chapter, especially in (Ephesians 5:25). Christ is the head of the church in the same sense that the man is head of the wife, or the man is the head of the wife in the same sense as Christ is the head of the church. We are aware that this is not in harmony with modern teaching and practice. It seems to us that frequently the order is reversed in these latter days, and it seems that often the woman is the head of the man; and sometimes it seems that some have an idea, judging from their practice, that Christ is not the head of the church; for they disregard His laws and His teachings. He is the Head and Lawgiver of His kingdom. Verse 33 says, "Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband." This teaches how the man should love his wife. Jesus loved His people so well that He gave Himself for them, even when they were enemies. He gave Himself for the church, that He might redeem it; see (Ephesians 5:25). A man who loves his wife as he should would be willing to die for her in order that her life might be spared. He should love his wife as he loves himself, for they are one. Then the wife should reverence her husband. She should have regard for his wishes and for his happiness. She should be ready to help him in his undertakings-and she will be, if she is a true wife. So will the true and devoted church of Christ be ready and willing and glad to reverence the Lord, and to do that which is pleasing to Him. They will be glad to know and to do His will. They will be ready to every good work. They will be glad to assemble in His name, and to praise Him for His mercies. They will take delight in His service. C. H. C.

Dan River Association

We left our humble home in Thornton on Thursday, July 25, for a trip in North Carolina and Virginia. We arrived in Salisbury, N. C., on Saturday morning, July 27, at 5 o'clock, and were met at the train by Brother A. L. Owen and conveyed to his home near town, where a good breakfast was prepared. Then we were conveyed by him and his wife to High Point, N. C, where the Daniel River Association convened that morning and continued over Sunday and Monday. The brethren and sisters began to assemble early, and it was delightful to see them coming together and greeting each other with a pleasant smile and hearty handshake. It was so plain to be seen that love and fellowship abounded, and that sweet peace reigned in the midst. Their very countenances showed this. When they had assembled and engaged in song service for awhile, they said that we should preach the introductory sermon for them. Reluctantly we undertook the task, though we felt so much wearied from the long and tiresome journey, having been on the road for two nights, and since Thursday at noon, on account of the fact that we had missed connection in Atlanta, and thus delayed several hours in reaching Salisbury. We used (Hebrews 6:1-3) as a foundation for our remarks. The brethren all heartily endorsed our feeble effort in trying to speak to them concerning the principles of the doctrine of Christ and of how we should go on and continue to press forward in His sweet and delightful service. The following elders were present during the meeting: R. H. Pittman, editor of the Advocate and Messenger, R. O. Raulston, C. H. Ferrel, P. W. Williard, W. F. Pruitt, C. H. White, Oscar Mullis, F. F. Eggleton, Bird Pruitt, J. R. Wilson, Joel T. Lewis, W. H. Oakes, and the writer, and Licentiate James Jones. They had preaching during the day and at night, and it was all harmonious, from first to last. Not a discordant note was sounded; not a single jar; it was all a unit. The Lord graciously blessed the servants to speak with freedom and liberty, and the brethren and sisters rejoiced at the sound of the truth, for the truth was preached all the way through. The glorious gospel was preached in its fullness and simplicity. When the gospel is preached that way in love, it does not divide the Lord's little children, but brings them together in love and sweet fellowship; and that was the effect manifested during this meeting. It was a great meeting, and one long to be remembered. These people have had a hard fight with the Absoluters, who have tried to establish tyrannical and associational rule over the Lord's dear children in this country; but the Lord is blessing them now with His divine presence and approval since they are clear of that black heresy that God absolutely predestinated the sin and wickedness and the black crimes that are committed in the world, and His sweet presence is manifested and felt in their meetings, and their meetings are now heavenly places here in this world. May His blessings continue with them, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Good Meetings

On Tuesday, July 30, we were at Union Grove, in the Original Bear Creek Association, in North Carolina, and had meeting at 11 o'clock in the day and at night. A large crowd was present at both services, and both were sweet services. Rain came up late in the afternoon, but that did not hinder many from going to the meeting. Elders J. R. Wilson and F. F. Eggleton were with us there. On Wednesday, July 31, we were at Watson Church. Elders J. R. Wilson, F. F. Eggleton, P. J. Washburn and Oscar Mullis were with us there. It was a sweet meeting. Sister Alice Baucum came before the church and related a sweet experience of grace and asked for a home. She was gladly received by the church. Her baptism is to be attended to Saturday morning by Elder J. R. Wilson. In the afternoon we had service at the home of Sister Etta Helms, who is afflicted and not able to go to the meeting house. The same ministers were with us there. At this service Brother David Helms and Sister Lizzie Helms, son and daughter of the afflicted sister, asked for a home in the church. They were gladly received. There was much rejoicing at this service, and it was good to be there. May the Lord be praised for His goodness to the children of men.

We feel to believe that the Lord has graciously been with us so far on this trip, and we humbly trust that our trip in this country may do the Lord's little children no harm. We trust that we may have the prayers of the dear brethren and sisters, that the Lord may bless our labors among His dear children, and that He may be with and bless our dear loved ones at home in our absence from them. We received such a sweet letter from our little nine year old boy, Claudis, Jr., in which he said: "Daddy, I hope God will give you liberty to preach good, and the people will be glad to hear you, and will treat you good, give you a good bed to sleep on, and give you good things to eat and to drink. I hope God will bless you and us." This made our poor heart glad. Surely the Lord is good. Bless His holy name forever. C. H. C.

More Good Meetings

---August 29, 1929

Since writing our last little article about some of the meetings we have been in while in North Carolina, we have filled other appointments as arranged for us in North Carolina and Virginia. The last appointment in Elder J. R. Wilson's section was at the Old Mill Church, near Danville, on Saturday and second Sunday in August. We have enjoyed good meetings all the way, and have had good congregations at most every place. The day we were at Sugar Tree (if we have the name of the place correct) there had been rain during the night and raining some that morning. The church is located off the highway or good roads, and the roads to the church were muddy and slick, so that people could hardly get there. On this account the congregation there was small. At the meeting at High Hill one sister was restored to the fellowship of the church. She went away from the church a number of years ago, but came back on the day we were there and confessed her error. She was gladly and joyfully restored to the fellowship and privileges of the church. At the meeting at Lawyer Springs, which was on Saturday afternoon and first Sunday in August, a Sister Stegall came to the church and asked for a home with them. She was joyfully received and is to be baptized at a later date by Elder Wilson, the pastor. There was a large crowd at this meeting. On Sunday afternoon the church went into the communion service and engaged in washing each other's feet. It was a great meeting. Several brethren in the ministry were present. At the meeting at the Old Mill a Sister Puckett came to the church, asking for a home with them. She was gladly and joyfully received. They had meeting on Saturday and an all day meeting on Sunday-the second Sunday in August. A large crowd was present, and an orderly one, too. They had five sermons on Sunday. In the morning the stand was occupied by Elders Oakes, Lewis and Eggleton, and in the afternoon by the writer, followed by Elder J. R. Wilson. It was a great meeting. Several brethren were there from another section, from a distance, some of them being sent there to behold the order of these people and to see what doctrine they contend for. All of them that we heard speak expressed themselves as being satisfied with the principles contended for by those brethren. At every place we went we were kindly received and the brethren were all good and kind to us-so much better than we feel to deserve. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon them, is our humble prayer. We trust they may find it in their hearts to remember us in their prayers to the Lord. Many of them we do not expect to see again in this world of trouble, but we hope, by the grace of God, to meet them in that blessed home beyond, where sorrows, troubles and separations never come. C. H. C.

Romans 6:3-4

---August 29, 1929

Dear Elder Cayce: I am very glad to know we are to receive The Primitive Baptist weekly. I would be glad to have your views on (Romans 6:3-4). Is this water baptism? Can anyone be baptized into Christ's death by water baptism? Come to see us sometime. Please remember us. With best wishes, I remain, your friend, J. E. Tate. Rutherford, Tenn.

OUR ANSWER

(Romans 6:1-4) reads as follows: "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death? Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." In the first verse the apostle asks a question, "Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?" Then he answers the question, "God forbid." Then he asks, "How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?" This question answers itself. It is simply a stronger way of saying that those who are dead to sin cannot live any longer therein. Then he argues and proves this from what they know by experience, "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death?" To baptize is to plunge, dip, immerse, bury. To be plunged into Christ, or immersed into Christ, is not to be immersed or plunged into the water. To be baptized into Christ is to be baptized into the benefits of His death-or into His death and the benefits of the same. This is not done by the preacher, or in the water. "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." -(I Corinthians 12:13). This is a very plain, clear, and positive statement that the baptism into Christ, or into that body, is by one Spirit. The Spirit is the administrator. It is the work of the Spirit. It is not the work of the preacher. In the next verse, verse 4, the apostle says, "Therefore;" this being true; because of this; because this is true-now, "therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death." Verse 3 says baptized into Christ, and verse 4 says "we are buried with Him by baptism." To be baptized with Christ and to be baptized into Him are two different things-they cannot possibly be the same thing. But we are buried with Him by baptism, therefore, for the reason, that we have been baptized into Him. It is absurd to say that one must be baptized with Christ in order to get into Him. If one is baptized with Christ he must of necessity be in possession of Christ before the baptism. He must be in Christ before the baptism in order to be baptized with Him. Those who have been put into Christ and into the benefits of His death should be buried with Him by baptism into death. Such a person has been killed to the love of sin, has been killed to sin, is dead to sin, and for this reason should be buried with Him by baptism into death. "That like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." The person thus baptized, or thus buried with Christ by baptism, is raised to walk in newness of life. There is a new joy and delight and pleasure which he cannot attain to in any other way. Friend Tate should take up his cross and be buried with his blessed Saviour in baptism and rise to walk in newness of life. May the Lord bless these thoughts to your good. C. H. C.

Tour Ended in East

---September 19, 1929

In our issue of August 29 we told about some of the meetings we had attended in North Carolina and Virginia, the last being at Old Mill Church, near Danville, Va., on the second Sunday in August. On Monday, August 12, we left Danville for Manassas, Va., and filled an appointment at that place that night. Had a very pleasant little meeting there. Spent some time in the good home of Brother W. S. Athey, who treated us very kindly. On Tuesday we went to Washington City, and filled an appointment there that night. This is the old home church of Elder C. H. Waters, deceased. On Wednesday night we filled an appointment at Bethel Church, near the city. On Thursday night we attended an appointment in the city for Elder L. V. Hite, of Morral, Ohio, and heard him preach a good discourse, much to the comfort of his hearers. Elder C. W. Miller, Rosslyn, Va., near Washington, was with us at our appointments at Bethel and in the city. On Thursday Elder A. A. Garrett, of Arlington, Ga., came to the city, and we were sure glad to see him. He and Elders R. H. Pittman, C. W. Miller and A. J. Garland were at the meeting Thursday night. We spent the time in the home of Brother Henry L. Lee while in the city. On Wednesday Elder Miller got a young brother whose name we cannot now recall to take him with us over the city to visit some of the points of interest. On Thursday we went with Sister Lee to the station to meet Elder Garrett. Then Sister Lee took us with Elder Garrett to visit points of interest. Among the places we visited while in the city were the Capitol building, the Old Soldiers' Home, Library of Congress, Washington Monument, Lincoln Memorial, Memorial Bridge being built, National Cemetery, Arlington Amphitheater, Unknown Soldier's Grave, Robert E. Lee's old home, Mount Vernon, and the White House. In the Library we saw the Bible on which Lincoln took the oath of office as president on March 4, 1861, and the family Bible which he gave to his wife. At Mt. Vernon we saw the tomb of George and Martha Washington. While there and while at the grave of the Unknown Soldier we had a feeling of solemnity. We could but have a feeling of reverence as we stood by the open vault and looked upon the marble caskets holding the remains of the Father of our country and his wife, Martha Washington. Then when standing by the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, we could but have a feeling of sadness. The identity of this man was lost, when he had made the supreme sacrifice, laid down his life for his country. His relatives know not where he is buried, and the officials of the Government do not know who he was. In some way his identity was lost. Our blessed Saviour laid down His life, but His identity was not lost, and not one will be lost for whom He laid down His life. Though the relatives of this soldier do not know where he is buried, and though the Government for whom he laid down his life, lost his identity, and does not know who he was, yet how great and precious is the truth that our Lord knows. The Lord knows where all His loved ones are buried, and He knows who they are. A soldier is kept on guard duty over this grave all the time, and that tomb is held sacred. Peace be to the ashes of the dead hero, as well as to all the others. On Friday morning we went to Seneca Church, in Maryland, to attend the session of the Kettocton Association, which was the one hundred and sixty-third annual session. The elders present were T. S. Dalton, Baltimore, Md.; A. L. Harrison, Front Royal, Va.; C. L. Funk, Needmore, Pa.; J. T. Power, Martinsburg, W. Va.; R. H. Pittman, Luray, Va.; A. J. Garland, Washington, D. C.; W. J. Green, Gray, Ga.; A. A. Garrett, Arlington, Ga.; C. W. Miller, Rosslyn, Va.; L. V. Hite, Morral, Ohio; J. E. L. Alderton, Washington, D. C.; T. W. Alderton, Fredericksburg, Va.; J. B. Jenkins, Luray, Va.; J. A. Frazier, Marshall, Va.; E. J. Devane, Plant City, Fla., and the writer. Elder Dalton preached the introductory discourse, using the latter part of the forty-eighth Psalm. He preached an able discourse, and we were glad to hear this dear old servant of God once more. He is now about eighty-four years old, we believe, but is still strong in the faith. May the good Lord spare him yet many years, is our prayer. The meeting was good and the preaching a unit. Not a discordant note was sounded in the whole meeting. After the association we filled appointments in Front Royal, Va., on Monday night; Tuesday at Mill Creek, near Luray; Tuesday night at Mt. Carmel, in Luray, and Wednesday at Hawksbill, near Luray. A brother had joined at Hawksbill at a previous meeting, to be baptized on that Wednesday, which was attended to by Elder Pittman, who is the pastor. At the service that day another brother offered himself for membership and was gladly received. He went home to get a change of clothing, and his wife with him. She also brought a change of clothing for herself and offered herself for membership at the water. She was gladly received and was baptized with her husband and the other brother. We have forgotten the names of these parties. All these meetings were pleasant, and the brethren were all good to us-much better than we feel we deserve. Wednesday afternoon Elder Pittman conveyed us to New Market, where we got on a bus and went to Staunton that afternoon. At Staunton we got on a train at 7:27 p. m. for Mt. Sterling, Ky., arriving there at 7:02 Thursday morning. We were met at the train by Sister Florence Chaney and her father. He is not a member, but we think he should be. Then we attended the North District Association, which was held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Liberty Church, near Winchester, Ky. Deacon A. H. Rupert was moderator of this association for a long time. He passed away since the associational meeting in 1928. We had a great desire to meet him once more, but will be deprived of that privilege in this life. We hope to meet him in a better association over yonder. Brother W. R. Rupert was chosen moderator. The elders in attendance were J. W. Anderson, Irvine, Ky.; W. L. Kash, Jackson, Ky.; E. W. Harlan, Connorsville, Ind.; R. H. Wilcox, An-netta, Ky., and the writer. Elder Anderson is pastor of the church there, and was appointed to preach the introductory sermon, which he did very acceptably. This was another good meeting, and the preaching was all a unit. Many of them insisted that we attend the next session, which is to be held with Goshen Church. If it seems that the way is open we may try to comply with their request. On Sunday afternoon we left Winchester for home, and arrived home on Monday afternoon, August 26, at 6:20, and found all well. Our wife and all five of the children met us at the station, and we were glad beyond expression to see them once more. Again we say that the brethren were good to us- much better than we feel we deserve. We never made a trip in life that we felt to enjoy more, and on which we were more heartily received and our poor efforts more heartily endorsed; and we humbly trust that no harm will ever result from the visit and from our efforts to speak in the name of the Master. It is our humble desire to preach peace by Jesus Christ; to try to tell what the good Lord has done for His children, and what He is doing for them, and what He has promised to do for them, and how they should live here in the world to honor and glorify His name and to be mutual helpers of each other here. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon all whom we met and who were so kind and good to us, is our humble prayer; and we trust you will all remember us in your prayers. Pray the Lord to direct us in the right way, and to give us courage and strength to walk therein. And pray the Lord to direct and preserve and keep our dear companion, who is left in loneliness and sadness so much of the time, and who has all the home cares while we are away, and yet who never complains or murmurs, but encourages us to go in discharge of every duty. And pray for our dear children, who are left so much of the time without a father's care and protection. C. H. C.

Matthew 20:16 AND Matthew 22:14

---September 19, 1929

Dear Brother: I have some Scripture on my mind I would like for you to give me your views on, if you have a mind to do so. The Scripture is ((0:16) (Matthew 20:16); (22:14). Wife and I enjoy reading your paper very much indeed. Wishing the good Lord to bless you and yours with His most choice blessing, is our prayer. Please pray for us when you have a mind to do so. Your friends in hope of a better world to come, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Nowell. Headland, Ala.

((0:16) (Matthew 20:16) reads, "So the last shall be first, and the first shall be last: for many be called, but few chosen." (Matthew 22:14) reads, "For many are called, but few are chosen." We suppose the expression, "Many be called, but few chosen," is what the brother wants our views on. To our mind the language simply teaches that there are many who are called out of nature's night and darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God-many are called unto or into eternal life; but few are chosen as special witnesses of God's blessed truth. The Lord has some few chosen witnesses for His blessed truth whom he will not suffer to be deceived by the false and judaizing teachers of the world. "If it were possible they would deceive the very elect" -but it is not possible. God has a very elect, the few chosen witnesses for His truth, that He will not suffer to be deceived. This is our view of the matter. May the Lord bless you. C. H. C.

Associations Attended

---October 3, 1929

We left home on Friday, August 30, in company with Brother W. J. Peterson, to attend the meeting of the Ozark Association to be held with the church at Louisburg, Mo. We had some car trouble, so did not get to Louisburg until Saturday morning. They had preaching Friday night, but the associational meeting began on Saturday morning. The introductory sermon was delivered by Elder D. F. Coones, and he preached a good discourse. The following named ministers were in attendance during the meeting: Elder C. C. Agee, Springfield, Mo.; D. F. Coones, Lebanon, Mo.; D. W. Witt and J. C. Haskins, Combs, Ark.; L. H. Clevenger, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; J. V. Martin, M. T. Cockrel, J. A. Al-berty, Sarcoxie, Mo.; J. G. Taylor, Garfield, Ark.; Walter Cash, St. Joseph, Mo.; W. B. Howard, Freewater, Ore.; Jasper O'Dell, Springfield, Mo.; J. A. Ford, Louisburg, Mo.; M. M. Shumate, Kansas City, Mo.; D. B. Nowells, Winona, Mo.; O. Irwin, Greencastle, Ind., and C. H. Cayce, Thornton, Ark., and Licentiate Arthur Alexander, Marshfield, Mo., and Thos. Crist, Rogers, Ark. They had service each morning, afternoon and night. The preaching was all harmonious, and the Lord graciously blessed the meeting. There were three or four additions to the church by experience and two were restored. It was a good meeting, if we are any judge. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon them. We hope to visit them again some day. We had a little more car trouble returning home, so did not reach home until Tuesday afternoon, September 3. That night we were taken sick, and we were not able to get out of the house again until Saturday afternoon, and not able to get about much for several days. We had expected to attend the Salem Association at Blue Mountain, Ark., but the sickness kept us from it. Our wife wrote them, or the clerk, Brother Joel Loyd, at Blue Mountain, that we were sick and could not be present. Brother Loyd read the letter to the association, and they instructed him to write to us. This made us feel our littleness and insignificance so much, to be so kindly remembered by them. May the good Lord bless them. The association was held on Friday, Saturday and second Sunday in September, and we learn they had a good meeting. The South Arkansas Association was held with the church at Harmony, in Donaldson, Ark., on Friday, Saturday and third Sunday in September, the 13th, 14th and 15th. The visiting ministers in attendance were Elders P. E. Whitwell, A. Woodall, W. H. Lee, B. Isaacs, L. G. Montgomery, R. L. Piles, W. W. Fowler, J. B. Halbrook and W. T. Alderman. The home ministers in attendance were Elders J. W. Guest, A. D. Cencibaugh, E. W. Hargett, John R. Harris and C. H. Cayce. Elder Guest preached a good discourse in the introductory. The Lord graciously blessed the ministers to speak with liberty to the comfort of His humble poor. There were four additions to the church by experience, and the ordinance of baptism was appointed to be attended to on Sunday afternoon by Elder Guest. At the water two more presented themselves for membership and were gladly received. It was a glorious meeting all the way through. On Saturday afternoon, after the regular service was through, there were two colored brethren present- Elders M. W. Thrower and R. M. Lovett. So many expressed themselves as having a desire to hear them preach that they were requested to do so. They went to the stand to comply with the request, and the Lord blessed them to preach wonderfully. They could and did proclaim the riches of God's grace in the salvation of poor sinners with power and in demonstration of the Spirit. May the Lord bless them and keep them in the right and good old way. We left home again on Thursday, September 19, to attend the Predestinarian Association, which was held with Forked Deer Church, in Finger, Tenn., on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 20, 21, 22. We arrived there Friday morning. The introductory sermon was ably preached by Elder D. Hopper. The ministers in attendance were Elders D. Hopper, Jackson, Tenn.; S. E. Reid, Henderson, Tenn.; J. A. Burcham, Bath Springs, Tenn.; D. M. Neisler, Lexington, Tenn.; A. W. DeBerry, Corinth, Miss.; John Grist, Dyer, Tenn.; Commodore Brann, Dresden, Tenn.; J. H. Phillips, Huron, Tenn.; B. D. Bryant, Tiptonville, Tenn.; Harvey Smith, Rutherford, Tenn.; J. L. Fuller, Wildersville, Tenn.; L. D. Hamilton, Humboldt, Tenn.; N. V. Parker, Walnut, Miss., and C. H. Cayce, Thornton, Ark. It was a good meeting and seemed to be enjoyed by all present. Brother Jim Brantley took us home with him (Lexington, Tenn.) Sunday afternoon, where we had supper and then got a train at 6:27 for Memphis. We arrived home Monday morning at 4 o'clock, and found all well, the whole family being at the depot to meet us. We felt thankful to the good Lord for His mercies and blessings. May the good Lord bless the good people who were so kind to us at all these meetings. We trust they may remember us in their prayers. C. H. C.

Matthew 22:30,32

---October 10, 1929

Brother J. T. Payne, Ariton, Ala., asks our views concerning the two verses as above. (Matthew 22:30)reads: For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven. What gave rise to this expression may be seen by reading the verses preceding, beginning with (Matthew 22:23). The Sadducees denied the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, and went to the Saviour with a question which they thought would overthrow that doctrine. They presented a case wherein one woman had had seven brothers for husbands, and after they had all died then the woman died. They asked whose wife she would be in the resurrection. They did not understand or know that in the resurrection earthly ties and relationships are done away. In ((9) (Matthew 22:29) the Saviour said: Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God. Then follows (Matthew 22:30), as quoted above, "In the resurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage." Fleshly ties and relationships are done away. The Saviour here clearly teaches the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. (Matthew 22:31-32) read. But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. It is true that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob had passed out of this earthly mode of existence, yet in spirit they were resting in the presence of God in the better world, with the promise of the resurrection of their bodies from the grave, or from the dead. Mark relates the same circumstance, and we find this language in ((26) (Mark 12:26): And as touching the dead, that they rise: have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spoke unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? Luke also gives his account of the same matter. In ((0:34) (Luke 20:34-38) we have this language: And

Jesus answering said unto them, The children of this world marry and are given in marriage: but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For He is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto Him. To our mind this all teaches the truth of the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, or the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead, and that in the resurrection fleshly ties and relationships will be done away. If there is no resurrection of the dead, then Christ was not raised. If Christ was not raised, then He was an impostor. If He was an impostor, then the Bible is not true. If the Bible is not true, then there is no God, and we do not know where we came from or where we are going. We are at sea without chart or compass. But Jesus was raised a living man. Therefore, the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead is established, and what Moses taught concerning the same is proven true. Then Jesus was not an impostor, and the Bible is true. The Bible being true, then God is, and is the God the Bible describes. All this being true, then God's children will all be raised in the likeness and in the image of the glorified Redeemer, and heaven is their home, and all that it contains will be theirs to enjoy-and that to all eternity, for they cannot die any more. May this be the happy lot of our readers, according to the will of God, is our humble prayer. Sometimes we feel a desire to leave this world of persecution and distress and to cross over the dark river and enter into the joys beyond. We do not know-how it will be when we reach the end of the way, but we feel that we are willing to risk our case in the hands of a merciful and loving Saviour. C. H. C.

Too Much of the World

The following is copied from an article by James A. Allen in the Gospel Advocate, of Nashville, Tenn., of Oct. 17, 1929. Of course what he has said has reference to his own people, but it appears to us that the following is true with reference to the true church to a great extent, or in a great measure. It is deplorable to see the great degree of worldliness among the professed followers of the Lord in this present age. It is distressing and deplorable. We can but wonder what the result will be. May the good Lord help and pity us. C. H. C. There is too much of the world in the churches. The members seek the approval and commendation of the enemies of the truth, instead of forgetting everything else in a single desire to do and preach God's will, as it is revealed in the Bible. Business men, who are making filthy lucre out of the world, want to squash everything in the church that antagonizes the world; and, with the exception of the faithful few, the great majority of the church are so much like the world that outsiders cannot tell the difference. Their religion is little more than a mere form and consists wholly in "going to church" for a few minutes on Sunday morning. As far as other services of the church, or the general work of the church, is concerned, they do not exist. They do not read a line in the Bible for months at a time nor do they regularly and daily engage in those prayers and thanksgivings to God, without which no man can have the strength to resist the world and to do his duty as a Christian. They lay by scarcely anything upon the first day of the week, much less a tenth, or more, as every true disciple finds an inestimable happiness in doing. They do not teach the word of God to their children nor bring their children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Their sons and daughters take degrees in colleges, but they are worth little or nothing to the cause of the Lord. The family altar is never raised in their homes nor do their children know the meaning of family prayers. But, in saying this, am I a "knocker?" Is it the truth? And can reformation be brought about without telling the truth? Is it not a fact that there is so much world in the church that some of its greatest efforts almost bray of "social service," instead of having the old Jerusalem ring of old-time gospel preaching? Truth must be told, come what may. The church can never successfully do the work that God has given it to do as long as its members have a divided allegiance. As long as its members are so worldly-minded as to think they must keep up with the world, and that they must conform to the standards of the world, so long will they be a liability, not an asset, to the cause of the lowly Jesus and to the church, which He purchased with His own blood.

Bible Conference

---October 31, 1929

In the Banner Herald of Sept. 15, 1929, appears the program of the Progressive "Primitive Baptist Bible Conference," which is to be held at Tifton Church October 29, 30, 31, 1929. On the program for Wednesday morning we find that they are to have a discussion, or article, on "The Covenant of Grace and the Relation which the Atonement, Regeneration and the Resurrection Sustain to it," by Elder J. B. Hardy, Hohenwald, Tennessee. Other names on the program at other times are, besides the address of welcome and response: Elders Wm. H. Grouse, T. E. Sikes, S. C. Davis, W. B. Screws, J. Walter Hendrix, W. F. Mims, W. B. Godard, W. W. Childs, D. O. Lewis, J. W. Crane, J. J. Johnston, J. M. Thomas, V F. Agan, S. H. Whatley, Geo. D. Godard, R. H. Jennings and Dr. T. J. McArthur. C. H. A Good Meeting

---October 31, 1929

In the Banner Herald, edited by Elder Wm. H. Crouse, the organ of the Progressives, for October 1, 1929, and in which appears the names of Elders Geo. D. Godard, J. W. Fairchild, J. W. Crane, and W. C. Kick-lighter as associate editors, we have read the following account of a meeting held at Providence Church, near Stringer, Miss. C. H. C. THE ARTICLE We had a splendid meeting at Providence Church, near Stringer, Miss., the week before and including the first Sunday in August. Elder J. B. Hardy did the preaching and every sermon was with love and power. The congregations were large and attentive. They just feasted on the glorious gospel as Elder Hardy so clearly presented it. Ten united with the church-seven by baptism, two by letter and one by relation. The entire country seemed interested, and the interest continues. At our September meeting three joined and were baptized Sunday morning. Also two by letter- one had been received but did not have his letter till this meeting. Elder J. A. Ford was with us and did the preaching Sunday to the comfort of those who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness. After preaching we took the Lord's supper and washed one another's feet. Meeting closed with a song and handshake of love and fellowship. It was good to be there because God's presence was there. J. W. Fairchild.

Call An Old Man

---October 31, 1929

Brother Cayce, do you think that the Lord would call a man to preach in his old days? and me being very unlearned in the Scriptures, and have a poor education, and very poor in this world's goods and a large family to care for? When you pray for yourself and all of God's dear children, please pray for me and mine. May God's richest blessings rest upon you and yours, is my prayer, for Jesus' sake. I am, I hope, your brother in hope of rest after this life is over, F. M. Akers. Dana, Ky.

REMARKS

We only feel a desire to call attention to one or two passages of Holy Writ in commenting on what this dear brother has said. (I Corinthians 1:26-29) "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in His presence." (James 2:5) "Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which He hath promised to them that love Him?" ((3) (Acts 4:13) "Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." We do not know how old the apostles were, nor how old any of the seventy were, when the Lord put them into the ministry. He is as able to call an old man to the work of the ministry as a young man. If one feels an impression of mind in this work we think the best thing for him to do is to try, the best he can, to discharge what he feels to be his duty, and try to labor in the field he feels the Lord has assigned him. May the Lord bless you. C. H. C.

Absolute Powers of Pope Reveled Legislation and Administration of Vatican City Laws Rest With Pontiff

---November 7, 1929

In the Arkansas Gazette, Little Rock, Ark., of Sunday, September 8, 1929, under the above heading the following article, by the Associated Press, appeared on page 10. The claim that Catholics and others made not so long ago that the Pope and the Catholic Church only claim to have rule or control over spiritual matters is now proven to be a false claim. The territory of the Vatican City is turned over to the Pope, and he is the supreme ruler and king in all matters, both state and spiritual. He is the absolute and undisputed master in that territory. The Pope has the absolute power to grant "pardon, amnesty, indults and condonements." The pardoning power is in the Pope alone. All the powers confirmed to the Pope more than 300 years ago in the Canon Law Code of 1607 are reserved. "The power to make particular regulations to cover specific codes may be entrusted by the Pope to the governor of the Vatican state;" "but the governor is responsible to the Pope and no one else, and receives his orders directly from the Pontiff." In judicial matters there are three different courts to exercise power; but the Pope has the privilege of appointing the judges, and he also has the right to remove judges at will. "The Supreme Pontiff, sovereign of the State of Vatican City, has the fullness of the legislative, executive and judicial powers." The Pope designates himself alone as the fountain head of power and the source of law within the new political entity. If all this does not prove, beyond question and without a doubt, that Rome is a menace to our free government, we do not know what they would have to do to prove it. It is high time our people were awake to the dangers that are lurking near, and be on guard and awake to their duty. These things prove clearly that a true Catholic is a subject of a foreign government and power, the supreme head of which is the Pope. What right does a man have to retain allegiance to France, Germany, Spain, Italy, or any other foreign power, and at the same time have the rights and privileges of citizens of the United States? In order to have the rights and privileges of citizens of the United States one must renounce allegiance to the French or German governments, if he is a Frenchman or German. They have as much right to claim citizenship under our government as the subject of any other foreign power. There are many good people in the Catholic Church, but we are afraid of the rulers over them and of their claims. Read the following article carefully, and then do not forget what it says. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

Vatican City, Sept. 7.-The absolute power of the Pope in church affairs is further emphasized by the Fundamental Laws of twenty-one articles promulgated for Vatican City following the ratification of the Lateran Treaties with Italy. By the Fundamental Laws the legislation and administration of Vatican City, together with all judicial powers therein, are made to depend directly and only upon the Pontiff. Pius XI designates himself alone as the fountain head of power and the source of law within the new political entity. Thus the laws with reference to Vatican City bear out the teaching of Canon Law, which holds that the Pope is the Supreme Head of the Church, subject to no control from outside. The College of Cardinals comes into play only in Consistories which approves new cardinals, in the Conclave which elects a new Pope, in councils wherein the Pope proclaims a new doctrine, and in Committees and Congregations appointed for specific duties. Canon Law says that the Pope is infallible when, in conjunction with the College of Cardinals, he proclaims a dogma of faith or morals. The Fundamental Laws start off by saying: "The Supreme Pontiff, Sovereign of the State of Vatican City, has the fullness of the legislative, executive and judicial powers." Should the throne of St. Peter be vacant, the College of Cardinals has power to make laws only during that vacancy; and even then those laws will not continue valid unless confirmed by the succeeding Pontiff. All those powers confirmed to the Pope more than 300 years ago in the Canon Law Code of 1607 are carefully reserved. The powers delegated to other dignitaries are circumscribed and made to hang on the pleasure of the Holy Father. For instance, the power to make particular regulations to cover specific codes may be entrusted by the Pope to the governor of the Vatican state-Commendatore Serafini. But the governor is responsible to the Pope and no one else, and receives his orders directly from the Pontiff. The judicial power is more specifically delegated to other bodies, but even here the Pope retains the upper hand. In civil cases, the judicial power within the Vatican City will be exercised by three courts-a tribunal of first instance, the Roman Rota sitting as a court of appeal, and the Supreme Tribunal as a court of last resort. The privilege of appointing judges of these courts rests solely with the Pontiff. He has also the right to remove judges at will. The pardoning power resides also in the Pope alone. The Fundamental Laws declare that there remain reserved to the Pontiff "the faculty of granting pardon, amnesty, indulgences and condonements." The Fundamental Laws are another step in the centuries old contest of power between the Papacy and the Cardinals. This contest was aired in several Councils of the Church, wherein the Cardinals sought to circumscribe the supreme power of the Pope, and make it depend upon them. In some cases Kings and Emperors, irritated by the vigorous stand of the Pope, sided with the Cardinals. But today the Pope is undisputed master.

1 Timothy 5:9-11

---November 7, 1929

We have been requested to give our views on the Scripture recorded in (I Timothy 5:9-11). You can get your Bible and read it. We do not feel that it is necessary to say more than just a few words concerning the language recorded in the citation given. The apostle is there giving direction as to the poor widow who should be taken under the care of the church and provided for by the church. The qualifications are there laid down. She should be three score years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works, etc. This is all we can get out of the language-that it simply gives the qualifications of the widow who is to be cared for by the church. Hebrews 6:1-6

---November 14, 1929

Brother L. F. Guy, of Bienville, La., has requested our views of (Hebrews 6:1-6). The verses read as follows: Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. And this will we do, if God permit. For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame. By the term, or the word, "leaving" in verse 1 the apostle does not mean to "forsake," but not to continue along that particular line all the time. The principles of the doctrine are not to be lost sight of, but there is something else to consider in addition to that. We should go on in the service of God, and contend for the true and right service of the Lord, and not be along the line of the defense of the doctrine all the time. In order that God be honored and His name glorified by us here in the world it is necessary that we go on in His service, doing the things He has commanded, as well as to remember and contend for the principles of His doctrine. The fundamental principles of the doctrine of God are as a foundation; they serve as a foundation. All true and acceptable service to God must rest upon those fundamental principles of doctrine. But we are not to continue working at the laying of the foundation all the time. Lay the foundation, and then go to work in building on that foundation. The only foundation worth building upon is the doctrine of God our Saviour-and we are not to forget any of the fundamental principles of that doctrine. The blood of Christ applied to the conscience by the Spirit of God is that which purges the conscience from dead works to serve the living God.

See (Hebrews 9:13-14). This is the work of God, and is not to be lost sight of. It is an independent work-that is, it is done independently of the work of the sinner or any human being. This is a part of the foundation, but we are not to talk of that all the time. It should be impressed, and advocated, a part of the time, but not all the time. It is one of the things necessary to be done in order that we be able to go on. The same is true in all the fundamental principles of the doctrine of God our Saviour. It is not necessary here to refer to, or to take up, all the fundamental principles of that doctrine. Suffice to say that five fundamental points of that doctrine, more especially, are, election-God's sovereign choice of sinners of Adam's race to be heirs of glory; predestination (He predestinated His chosen ones to be conformed to the image of His Son); effectual calling (the Holy Spirit effectually calls those chosen ones out of nature's night and darkness and translates them into the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God); final preservation of the saints (they are preserved in Jesus Christ); and, finally, the resurrection of the dead; the bodies of the saints to be changed and made spiritual and to be glorified and made like Jesus, and the bodies of the unjust to be raised to condemnation. {(John 5:25,28-29)} These principles of the doctrine of Christ, or of the doctrine of God, are the foundation upon which true service must be built and upon which the same must rest. Let us not continue to work on this foundation all the time-that is, do not continue all the time in laying the foundation; but let us lay this foundation, and then go on upon that foundation unto perfection. Does he mean to go on unto a state of sinless perfection? No; but to a state of Christian perfection. Sinless perfection is one thing and Christian perfection is another thing. The Scriptures are given" that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." {(II Timothy 3:16)} By building on this foundation- going on in doing the things the Scriptures teach, and leaving undone everything the Scriptures do not teach, we may attain to that state of perfection in the service of God which He requires." Let us go on unto perfection. " It seems to us that the apostle uses this expression as an encouragement to the Lord's little children to strive to this end. Evidently this is not a state of sinless perfection, because He says in (Galatians 5:17) "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." What would you do? Sure you would live above and without and free from sin, but you cannot do that. There is a warfare continually in the child of God as long as he lives in this world of sorrow and trouble, and he cannot attain to a state of sinless perfection in this life. But though this be true, we should "go on unto perfection" -a state of Christian perfection, or state of perfection in service. Let us strive to that end. Let us not be weary in well doing. These things to do in order to that end are the things the Lord has commanded, the things the Scriptures teach, and to leave undone and to let alone all the inventions and commandments of men. "And this will we do, if God permit." Here is a promise of the Lord's help. Let us go on in His service, relying upon Him, trusting Him. Let us not wait to see if men will approve or whether they will condemn. The Lord is a very present help in time of need. The certainty and the infallibility of the work of God is an encouragement here presented for God's little children. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened * * * * if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame." Jesus died for them to redeem them from all iniquity and to bring them to God, that they might live with Him in eternal glory. If one of them should fall away from that divine relationship with Him, then the work of Christ would prove a failure in that case, and He would be put to an open shame. It would become necessary for Him to leave His home in glory and come into this world and die again. He is alive forevermore, and will never die again. His work is perfect. {(Deuteronomy 32:4)} Therefore these persons shall never fall away and be finally lost. This should encourage the Lord's little children to press on in His service and to honor and glorify His blessed name while they live in the world. Let us go on in His blessed and sweet and delightful service. We have here given just a few thoughts in connection with the language recorded in the passage referred to. May the Lord bless the same to the good of our readers. Much more could be said, but we must stop for this time. Pray the Lord to help us to press on in the "good old way." C. H. C.

---November 21, 1929

Elder C. H. Cayce: Dear Brother-Please give your views through the paper on (Jeremiah 23:1-2). Should pastors treat members so cold that they feel it is better to stay at home than it is to go to church? Hope you will give your views on the above Scripture. May God bless you with every needed blessing while you make your stay in this unfriendly world, to enable you to stand for the great cause you are so nobly standing for. I feel from reading after you that you are one of our blessed Father's under shepherds. May our heavenly Father uphold you, is my prayer. When you have remembered all others, please remember poor little me, the weakest of the weak; but when I am weak, He is strong. I am so glad that I, a poor little one, am permitted sometimes to rejoice in His love. Your poor little sister, I hope, Miss Louise Killey. Alvord, Texas.

OUR REPLY

The text referred to above reads as follows: Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the Lord. Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: behold I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the Lord.-(Jeremiah 23:1-2). We hardly know how to even begin to write an article on the above text. The very language itself shows very clearly that there is such a thing as the pastors destroying and scattering the sheep of the Lord's pasture. Because they do this the Lord pronounces a woe upon them. It is a serious and deplorable thing for the pastors thus to do. It has often been said that the preachers are responsible for all, or nearly all, the trouble that arises in the church of God. No doubt this is partly true. Sometimes a preacher advances an idea which another preacher does not endorse, so he takes issue and tries to overthrow the other brother's idea. Then the other brother tries to defend his position, and thus the war begins. Hence they are responsible for the war being begun. If the churches would stop them right then and there, and not let them preach any more until they agree to stop their warfare, then the destruction of the churches and the scattering of the Lord's children would be prevented. Do not stop one and let the other one continue on, but stop them both, and thus show no partiality. Usually such wars begin over trifles, and differences, or seeming differences, are magnified, and they get farther apart instead of getting together. This is a deplorable thing and a bad state of affairs, and the Lord has pronounced a woe upon the pastors or preachers who thus do. Sometimes a preacher may get jealous of his brother in the ministry. For instance, a preacher may come along, who is new in the vicinity. "A new broom sweeps clean," you know. He may present the same truths which have been set forth and advocated there all the time, but he does so in a different way from that which the people have been accustomed to, and they enjoy the preaching. Perhaps they will (some of them) tell the brother how they enjoyed his preaching. This is all right for them to do that. But some of them may say something like this: "If we had such preaching as this our church would grow and prosper." This may be wrong. Perhaps the pastor hears that statement and it may cause him to have a bad feeling toward his brother in the ministry. True, it should not cause him to have such a feeling, but it may do so. If he has a bad feeling toward anyone on account of such as this, it should be toward the one making such a statement, or saying such things. But he should not have a bad feeling toward even that one on account of a thing of this kind. True, it would make him feel discouraged, and that he was not appreciated-and he could not help such a feeling as that. But he should not have ill will toward his brother in the ministry on account of it. And the congregation of brethren and sisters may come up and tell the visiting preacher how much they enjoyed his preaching, and not think to speak to the pastor, and he may be made to feel that he is neglected, and this may arouse in him a dislike for the visiting preacher. It is wrong, however. He may even harbor a little feeling of spite toward his brother in the ministry, and may have a little feeling in his heart that "I wish they would praise me a little, too." Unless he watches himself very closely, and overcomes it, there will be jealousy in his heart, and then matters are in a good condition for a disturbance to begin. Woe unto that man who lets jealousy rule in his heart. Sometimes a preacher may decide that the best way to have room for his own gift is to get another preacher out of the way; and so he may begin to watch for an opportunity to destroy the brother he thinks is in his way. The truth of the matter is that when the Lord's servants labor in the field the Lord assigns to them, and where they should labor, there is not another of the Lord's ministers in his way. There is room for all the gifts from the Lord. "A man's gift maketh room for him, and bringeth him before great men." -((8:16) (Proverbs 18:16). We should all remember this, and not try to make room for ourselves by destroying our brother. When we try to make room for ourselves by destroying another, it brings destruction and scatters the Lord's little ones, and the Lord has pronounced a woe upon us. How careful the Lord's ministers should be to set right examples before the people. He should never say, "Don't do as I do, but do as I tell you to do." Paul never left on record such a statement for our learning. He said, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." -(I Corinthians 11:1). "For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us: for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you." -((Th 3:7) (II Thessalonians 3:7). The preacher who does not take heed to himself to set right examples before the brethren and before the world may, and doubtless will, cause coldness and distress among the Lord's children. The sheep will be scattered. Then woe to that preacher. He loses his influence, and his preaching will not have the influence for right living that it will have if he sets the right examples. Now, a word about the pastor treating a member with coldness. Sometimes a member may think that the pastor has done such a thing when he had no such idea or intention. We should not expect too much of the pastor. One might be feeling cast down and not go to the pastor, and the pastor might feel that the member has treated him with coldness. We should not be too ready to think thus about each other. Remember that "charity thinketh no evil." Let us all try to excuse rather than accuse each other. There are so many things which might be said along these lines that we may have left unsaid the very things which should have been said, but we must stop here. May the good Lord help us all to live in such a way that peace and sweet fellowship may abound among the Lord's dear children. If we would all live as we should, the church would be made an inviting place for the Lord's little ones, and we would see them coming home to the church and asking for a shelter from the world and a place with us in the sweet and delightful service of our heavenly Master. May the good Lord pity us and help us so to live, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Ill Health Prevents Going

We have been requested to attend a meeting of investigation near Smithville, N. C, but we cannot go on account of a failure in our health. Our family physician has said we must not take any more long trips now. We do not know whether we can be restored to health or not, but it is our desire to do all we can to that end. Our physician discovered our condition on October 30, in examining us. Since that time we have been trying to follow his instructions, and have been under his treatment.

For the first week our condition seemed to grow worse, then seemed to improve. We are to go to him again in a few days for another examination. We desire that no one think hard of us for not making any long trips now, and we sincerely ask an interest in the prayers of all the Lord's humble poor. Pray that we may be restored to health, if it can be the Lord's will; and pray that we may be reconciled to our lot and to His will, and that He may bless our dear loved ones. C. H. C.

Health Broken

---December 19, 1929

A few weeks ago we stated that we could not go to North Carolina in answer to a call from some brethren there on account of a failure in our health. A number of good brethren have written good and encouraging letters to us, and expressed much sympathy, and the hope that we might be improving. Well, we cannot say that we are any better. Some days we feel fairly well, and then perhaps the next day we feel very badly. Our physician forbids us making any long trips. He says we should not travel all day- go only what may be called a short distance. He has required that we do no more than half what we have been doing heretofore. He also tells us we must not worry, and that we must take things easy. He does not give us much encouragement as to recovery. If we can do as he tells us we may live for some years yet. Otherwise, we realize our stay here is short, and that we are liable to drop off the stage of action at any time. Now we have been frank to tell you our condition, as we understand it, and from what our physician has told us, as well as from what other physicians have told us concerning the trouble we have. We feel that we want to get well, if it can be the good Lord's will, so that we may go on in His service, as we have tried to do for the past forty years. If this is not His will, we desire to be reconciled to His will, whatever that may be. Please pray for us and our dear family. C. H. C.

Close of Volume 44

---December 19, 1929

This issue of The Primitive Baptist is the close of the forty-fourth volume. For forty-four years this paper has been published without change of ownership. The only change in that respect is that the paper was established by our father, Elder S. F. Cayce, the first of January, 1886, who continued as editor until his death in August, 1905, since which time we have been trying to fill the place as editor. Just before father's death he had a long talk with us, in which he told us he felt that his labors were about done, and that he wanted us to take up the editing of the paper and to carry it on after his death. This we have tried to do with what ability we possessed. At that time the circulation of the paper was about 5,000. The circulation is larger now than it was then, but not as large as it has been at some of the times since. Our experience is the same as that of our brethren who are engaged in editing Primitive Baptist papers, we are sure-and that is that it is a whole lot harder now to keep the circulation of a paper from going down than it used to be. We are sure other brethren have realized this, as well as we have. How well we have succeeded in keeping the paper up to a right standard in publishing and maintaining the truth, and setting forth the true principles of the doctrine that has characterized the true church in all ages is for the brethren and our readers to judge. We are free to confess that we have made mistakes; but we have tried to do our best to publish a paper for the advancement of the Primitive Baptist cause and the advancement of truth. In all these years it has been our desire and our aim to follow the right and to do what was right, and to publish such things as would be for the good of the cause, regardless of what the result might be from a financial standpoint. Sometimes we have been told that unless we would publish certain things, or do certain things, that subscribers would quit taking the paper. We have said that we would try to follow the course which we felt was right, if every subscriber we had should quit on account of it. The primary consideration has not been a matter of financial returns, or whether we would have subscribers for the paper, but to do the right thing, regardless of the result from a financial standpoint. Now, at this time, we are not sorry we have pursued this course. We now feel a peaceful conscience that we have done this, though we are sure that we might have gained financially, at times, by pursuing a different course. We trust that our readers are better pleased now than some of them were when we first changed to a weekly. You will remember that we did not promise to get out a paper during Christmas week, and that is the only week in the year that we expect to miss hereafter. If we live through next year we expect to send the paper out every week during the year, except Christmas week, and that will be fifty-one issues for the whole year. There have not been that many issues this year, because the paper was published only twice a month until June 27. This issue makes thirty-eight for this year. We have given a total of 584 pages of reading matter, and some of the pages extra large. The same amount of reading matter supplied to you in book form would cost you not less than five dollars, perhaps more. Though many have complained that the price is too high, yet we know by long years of experience and from our knowledge of the cost of books and other printed matter, that we have given more reading matter of the kind than could have been had any other place for the price. We believe we would be safe in saying that no other religious publication in the United States gives more reading matter for the money than we do in The Primitive Baptist. It is true that trashy story papers charge a very low price for their papers, but they spend all they get for subscriptions in order to get more names on their list. They want, and must have, a large list-hundreds of thousands-in order to get the large volume of advertising at a high price-and that is the way they make their money. Religious papers do not get the high price for the advertising-what little they do-because they do not have the large list the story papers have. So they have to depend on the subscription receipts to pay the cost of publication. Now, we bid you all farewell for the year 1929. The next issue of the paper will be dated January 2, 1930. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon every one of our readers, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 45

---January 2, 1930

With this issue we begin the forty-fifth volume of The Primitive Baptist. Forty-four years the paper has been published, without any intermission. There have been some rough places and some trials and conflicts along the way, but the Lord has been good to us. We still confess that mistakes have been made. But we desire to forget "the things that are behind, and press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." We desire to not only keep up the standard the paper has attained to, but we desire to make every improvement possible. We do not mean to convey the idea in this statement that we desire to improve on the doctrine which has been maintained in this paper since the first issue, January 1, 1886. The same old principles of doctrine and practice which have characterized the true church in all ages past are still good enough for us. There can be no improvement on true principles, or the principles of truth. Principles are eternal and never change. Recently we received a suggestion from a sister, which we will here state for our readers, and we would be glad to hear from them as to what they think about it. We receive a great deal more matter for the paper than we have room for. We have on file now a large number of good letters sent us for the paper which we do not have room for. Many of them are good, and we would like to publish them; but, as stated, we do not have room. Of course it is also true that we receive a number of letters that we do not think prudent, or best for the cause, for them to be published. We also receive a great many private letters, sent from one person to another, which are sent to us with a request to publish, that are of interest to the parties directly concerned, but not of general interest. Of course the paper is for the general interest of the readers, and frequently we have to lay such letters aside. Now, this brings us to the sister's suggestion, which is this: Have what she calls an honor roll, or give it some other name, in which we publish a list of writers whose articles could not be used. The idea of the one making the suggestion was that the writer and all the readers could know we received an article from the person named on the list, and that thereby some might get in communication with parties they would be glad to get in touch with. Now, write us what you think about this. If a sufficient number would be glad to have a list occasionally we think we could try to give it to you. Another suggestion, made by a brother, was that we publish obituaries of none only ministers. We are frank to say that we do not really believe the brother's suggestion would be the best. It is true that obituaries of some may be published that are not of interest to all our readers, and especially is it true that they are sometimes made too long, but we would not say to leave them out of the paper entirely. Some of our subscribers love to read the obituaries, and get comfort therefrom. We are glad to publish the obituaries for the benefit and consolation of those who are bereaved, and they all have our sincere sympathy. But we would appreciate it if they would make them as short as they well can, and not try to write poetry in them. We think it is seldom necessary to even use poetry in an obituary, much less try to write poetry. Poetry is really more than writing so as to have a rhyme. We confess we do not know much about poetry, but we do know that a lot of matter called poetry is not really poetry at all, as it is written without regard to what is called poetical feet. Now, it is not necessary to try to explain about poetical feet, for it would take too much space, and we do not know enough about it to explain it all, anyway. What we mean above about rhyme is that simply a rhyme is not poetry. Now, we want to make a suggestion ourselves about obituaries, which is this: We do not think it best to publish obituaries of persons who have been dead such a long time. Sometimes we have received obituaries of persons who had been dead several years. We have sometimes given space for them when we really thought it best not to do so. It awakens old sorrows, and brings new pangs to the hearts of some, or else it freshens the old pangs, and causes the old sorrows to revive. It makes the old wounds to become fresh. In some rare instances and under certain circumstances it is all right to make some mention of some who passed away in the years gone by, and some may be made to receive comfort by so doing. But publishing an obituary of one who died some years ago seldom brings such comfort. Let us try to be considerate along this line, as well as along all other lines. We expect, if not providentially prevented, to send out fifty-one issues of the paper during the year 1930. This will give our subscribers 816 pages of reading matter during the next year at a cost of only $2. Do you think you could get a book of 816 pages, the size pages of The Primitive Baptist, for near that price? A book of that many pages, of that size, would cost a great deal more than that. In the present form you can easily preserve your papers and sew them together, and have a good book at the end of the year. Keep all your papers. They will be valuable some day. We are trying to get arrangements made for binders to furnish our subscribers at a very low price, so they can make the papers into books that will be easily preserved, and be very valuable in future years. If we can make the arrangements mentioned, announcement will be made in the paper. We are glad for the brethren and sisters to write for the paper. We trust they will continue to do that, as they may feel impressed of the Lord. If we cannot publish all we get, it will give us a larger supply to select from. We need a variety in the paper, just as we need a variety in preaching. If a man preaches along one line all the time, his congregation would not get the proper variety of nourishment. They would not get "a balanced ration." The result would be that they would be weak along some lines. So we need to give "a balanced ration" in the paper. Since our health is not good, and we cannot go from home on preaching tours now, as we have been doing for all these years, perhaps we can write more for the paper ourselves. We now make the promise that we will try. It is true that several issues during the latter part of 1929 we had no article in the paper. When our health failed we were very far behind with our work of answering letters, and other work. Our wife turned in and helped us out, but we were not physically able to do more, and were trying to catch up with the work first. Thanks for her help, our work along that line is nearer up than it has been for a long time. She will still help us along as she can. Then if our health will admit we hope to do more writing for the paper this year than we did last, and we did more last year than we did the year before, or for several years before. Another thing, now. Unless our health improves we cannot get out among the brethren, as we have been doing. This being true, we will need the help of our brethren to keep up the circulation of the paper. Will you do all you can to get the brethren and sisters and friends to take the paper? Will you help us in this way? Or, will you neglect it, and forget us in our poor health? We have confidence in you to believe you will help us all you can to get subscribers for the paper. We desire to publish such things in the paper as will benefit, comfort and instruct the Lord's dear children, and that will promote the cause of the Master. Newfangled ways and notions will not do that. Efforts to reform and revolutionize the old church will not promote peace and fellowship among the brethren. We do not need any progressive measures. To progress is to leave the old landmarks. But we should be aggressive in the service of our God. Aggression is one thing and progression is another. The matter of progression was fought out in the ranks years ago. We cannot now afford to go back on the stand our people took then. To do so would be to confess that we all did wrong in standing for the old and original principles then. "Woe unto them that go down to Egypt for help." The church of Christ is a separate institution from the world, and is not of the world. We cannot raise the world up to the church by adopting and practicing things in the church that are invented by the world. To endeavor to do so would only bring the church down to the world instead of raising the world up to the church. Let us faithfully and humbly stand upon the same old principles which have characterized the true church in all the ages past. May the Lord help us all to do that, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

2 Timothy 2; 4:22

---January 9, 1930

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.-(II Timothy 2:15). We desire to write just a few lines on this text. It contains more than we can write about in one little article, but we desire to call attention to just a few thoughts contained in the same. Paul was here writing to a young preacher, and giving instruction to him as to how he should live, as well as how he should preach. We are sure that the instruction here given to this preacher would be good for all the Lord's preachers in this present day, as well as in all time to come. He first says, here, to "study." It is necessary for the preacher, as well as others, to study the Bible in order to know what it teaches. He is to "study to shew thyself approved" -not unto men, but "unto God." Unless he lives as he should, he is not approved unto God; that is, God does not approve of his conduct. This is sufficient to show the necessity of the preacher living an honorable and upright life. His character should be above reproach. His life should be such that people have confidence in him as a man. He "must be of good report of them that are without." He must study to show himself approved unto God, "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." We have known some who should be ashamed, if they are not, for the way they have lived. The preacher is to be an overseer. An overseer is one who is to show others how to do. Then the preacher should show others of the Lord's people how to do-not simply tell them, but show them by living right himself. Thus he sets the right example. And the preacher is to be an ensample to the flock. That is, he is to set the right example before them. He should study to do this, and to thus be approved unto God, and not to be ashamed. Next, the apostle says, "rightly dividing the word of truth." Notice that he uses the word rightly. This shows that there may be such a thing as wrongly dividing the word of truth. This does not mean to divide truth from error. But to rightly divide the word of truth will expose error. It is a universal fact that this is so. The word divide here means especially to apply -to make the right application. In order to show the necessity of rightly dividing the word of truth, suppose we here call attention to two different passages of Holy Writ. The first we call attention to is (II Timothy 1:9), which reads, "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." The next passage we call attention to is (I Timothy 4:16) "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine: continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." In the first text the apostle emphatically declares that our being saved is not according to our works. In this all our works, whether good or bad, are excluded from the work of salvation. In the other text the same apostle says that "in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." Doing is working. To do a thing one must work at it. Here the apostle plainly declares that there is a saving which comes as a result of "doing this" -doing what is here commanded. There is no man on earth who can harmonize these two passages without rightly dividing the word of truth-making the right application of each text. This also plainly shows that there is more than one kind of saving spoken of, or else the two passages cannot be harmonized-or, rather, that harmony cannot be shown any other way. In the first text the apostle is telling how one is saved from his sins, brought into divine relationship with God, brought out of nature's darkness and translated into the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God, and also how it is not done. It is not according to our works that one is thus saved and called with an holy calling. It is alone God's doing, and is altogether by His grace. In the second text he was telling one who was already a child of God and a minister of the gospel how he should live, and how he should do and act. And in doing this he would save himself and those that hear him. He would not save himself from eternal ruin by doing this, for that is not according to our works. This shows the necessity of "rightly dividing the word of truth." It shows the necessity of making the right application of the word of truth in every particular. Bear in mind that there is more than one kind of saving spoken of in the Bible. Then when we find the word saved, we should apply it where it belongs. There is more than one kind of justification spoken of in the Bible, and where we find justification spoken of, we should apply it where it belongs. There is more than one kind of faith spoken of in the Bible, and where we find faith spoken of, apply it where it belongs. There is more than one kind of temptation spoken of in the Bible, and where we find temptation spoken of, let us apply it where it belongs. In making the right application of the Scriptures we rightly divide the word of truth. May the Lord help us all to do this. C. H. C.

Many, Many Thanks

---January 16, 1930

We will try to express our thanks to the readers of The Primitive Baptist for their kind words of sympathy and encouragement to Elder Cayce since his health has not been so good. He appreciates each letter, each word of encouragement, so much. Makes him feel like pressing on awhile longer. It does him so much good to know that the readers of The Primitive Baptist are begging the dear Lord in his behalf. We feel that the prayers of the righteous availeth much, so please continue to remember him in your petitions. We also wish to thank each one who so kindly remembered us during the holidays with cards and other remembrances. It makes our poor hearts rejoice to be so remembered. Elder Cayce's condition seems better. The blood pressure is easier controlled now than it was at the first. On last Wednesday night he took the bed with flu. He is now (January 6) in bed, but improving slowly. Time forbids answering the hundreds of letters of sympathy and encouragement. So please, each one, consider this a personal note to you. And when you have a mind to, write to him again. Flowers now are more appreciated than when silent in death. May this New Year bring happiness and joy and prosperity to each reader, is my prayer. While remembering Elder Cayce and all others, please remember me. I feel to need the prayers of God's children. Yours in hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

Price Not High

---January 16, 1930

When the size of the paper was changed to the present form we received some complaint in regard to the reduction in size. Brother W. W. Hollingsworth commented some on that line. This caused us to send Brother Hollingsworth two copies of six other Old Baptist papers, besides The Primitive Baptist, recognized as our sort of Baptists, with the request that he, at leisure time, count all the words in each paper, and to count only reading matter, no advertisements, in The Primitive Baptist; and then to please write us how The Primitive Baptist compares in price with other Baptist papers. And after such a count to please tell us if he thought The Primitive Baptist too high. An article appearing elsewhere in this paper shows how well and thoroughly he has gone into the matter. Having no desire to wound the feelings of any brother editor, or to injure any paper, we do not give the names of any of the papers in Brother Hollingsworth's article. All the desire we have in the matter is to show how utterly without foundation is any complaint that the price of The Primitive Baptist is too high. For it is far cheaper than any other published in the United States or elsewhere. Reading matter at a cost of 21 mills per 1,000 words would give 3,478 words for one cent. Anyone knows this is not a high price for reading matter. So if you do not wish to take The Primitive Baptist, do not tell us it is because the price is too high. But tell us the truth about it, if you are able to take a paper at all, and tell us you do not want it or that you are too stingy to pay for a religious paper. On the other hand, if you are not really able to pay for a paper, do not write us the paper is too high, but tell us your true condition, and you will not have (on account of your poverty) to do without the comfort and enjoyment the paper would give you. If you cannot pay the regular price of the paper, as low as it is, then pay what you can. If you cannot pay anything at all, please be frank and tell us your condition in a private letter, and we will try to see that you will have the comfort and pleasure of reading the paper. We do not want any of the Lord's little ones to be deprived of reading the paper on account of poverty. Please read this article again, and read and re-read Brother Hollingsworth's article. Then tell us if you do not really think that The Primitive Baptist is not the cheapest Old Baptist paper published. This is not said through any disrespect to others or with any disparagement of others; for no doubt they are giving as much reading matter as they can afford, considering the size of their circulation and the cost of production under ordinary conditions. Are you willing now to lend a helping hand, and to do all you can in extending the circulation of The Primitive Baptist, and to show them with these facts that the price of the paper is very low? Now, Brother Hollingsworth, we know this accounting has taken quite a bit of time and thought. We certainly appreciate your valuable article. Elder Cayce is sick in bed with the flu. He suggested some of the foregoing things to write. We will appreciate any help the subscribers may render by sending in new subscribers. If anyone gets a copy of this paper who once took the paper, and not getting it now, don't let your name stay off the list any longer. Send us your subscription at once, and help us to keep the paper going weekly at this extremely low price. Yours in hope, Mrs. C. H. Cayce.

To The Subscribers of The Primitive Baptist

---January 16, 1930

The following article by our precious Brother Hollingsworth, who has since been called to his eternal home of rest, is the article referred to in the foregoing article written by our dear companion. We feel that the readers of this book should have the benefit of the following article; hence we are giving space for it. Consider well what Brother Hollingsworth has done in making the calculations he did, and what he said in regard to the price we get for the reading matter we publish. C. H. C.

THE ARTICLE

About the time Elder Cayce changed The Primitive Baptist from its original makeup, to its present magazine size, there was quite a bit of unfavorable criticism and occasionally dissatisfaction expressed. These expressions led to the thought of making a comparison with other papers of a like nature. The writer got seven of our papers, which appear to represent an average. He carefully counted the words in one copy of each publication, omitting all advertising matter. For the benefit of the subscribers of The Primitive Baptist, and more especially for those who are inclined to be critical, we give below the result of our findings; showing the number of words in a single copy of each publication, the number of issues per year, the subscription price, the number of words each subscriber gets each year, and the price its editor gets for each thousand words; the same being its cost to the subscriber. The primitive baptist Published weekly; subscription $2.00 per year; each copy contains approximately 18,612 words; fifty-two copies gives each subscriber 707,824 words in one year at a cost of each thousand words of about 2½ mills. Paper No. 1. Published monthly; subscription $2.00 per year; each copy contains approximately 12,146 words; twelve copies would give each subscriber 291,504 words at a cost per 1,000 words of about 6½ mills. Paper No. 2. Published semi-monthly; subscription $2.00 per year; each copy contains approximately 11,200 words at a cost per 1,000 words of about 7½ mills. Paper No. 3. Published monthly; subscription $1.50 per year; each copy contains approximately 16,064 words; twelve copies would give each subscriber per year 192,768 words at a cost per 1,000 words of about 7½ mills. Paper No. 4. Published semi-monthly; subscription $2.00 per year; each copy contains approximately 10,757 words; twenty-four copies would give each subscriber per year 258,168 words at a cost per 1,000 words of about 7¾ mills. Paper No. 5. Published monthly; subscription $1.25 per year; each copy contains approximately 12,468 words; twelve copies would give each subscriber per year 149,616 words at a cost per 1,000 words of about 8½ mills. Paper No. 6. Published monthly; subscription $1.75 per year; each copy contains approximately 14,770 words; twelve copies would give each subscriber per year 173,240 words at a cost per 1,000 words of about, or a little over, 10 mills. The reader will notice that The Primitive Baptist gives 1,000 words of reading matter for less than three mills. The next lowest gives 1,000 words for 6½ mills; then they go up to 7½, 7¾, 8¼ and on up to a little above ten mills per 1,000 words. Therefore, it will be noticed that in spite of the reduction in the size of The Primitive Baptist, you are getting from it two to four times the reading matter for the money, in one year, you get from other papers named. Taking time and pains to count the words in these papers and the average number of letters in a word, causes me to ask the reader to think about a person setting up 1,000 words, handling 4,000 pieces of type, furnishing paper, machinery, office clerks and postage for one cent. But, still more astonishing, Elder Cayce has all this done for less than one-third of one cent, or for one cent he sets up over three thousand words and handles over twelve thousand pieces of type, and still some people complain about the price of the paper. My heart goes out in good will to the editors of each of these papers; in fact, I bid every Old School Baptist paper, published by orderly Baptists, "good speed." I wish I could enlist a more liberal support for them; they deserve it and they ought to have it; they are all circulating these papers at a sacrifice; still, many do not know it; others are indifferent and even unconcerned. The old year has almost slipped away from us; we have a very little of it left in which to do the many things we had in mind to do and many we really desire to do. Some we promised ourselves in good faith that we would do, but put off for a more seasonable or opportune time; but the time has not come, so it's gone undone and in many cases it's gone forevermore; many good thoughts have been unexpressed, many kind words not spoken, many good deeds undone, that if had been expressed or done, possibly would have lightened someone's load and revived one's cast down feeling. May the Lord help us and bless us with moral courage and strength to do our duty, and may we use that courage and liberty He has blessed us with in the discharge of our duty and not in shirking it. Let us strive to use more of the efficiency we have been blessed with and use it for good, do a better part by our home, our friends, our community, our church, our preachers and our papers. Written on my birthday, December 30, 1929. W. W. HOLLINGSWORTH. Bessemer, Ala.

Appreciated Letter

Dear Brother Claud: I have for some time had a great desire to write and let all know how I, a poor worm of the dust, enjoy the many sweet articles which appear in the best paper, it seems to me, that is now published in defense of our doctrine. I suppose one main cause is I have known you, dear Brother Claud, so long. I first met you at old Shiloh Church, in Marshall County, Miss., in August, 1895. But when I wanted to say a word I would think of the sweet articles in each issue that were so far superior to anything I could write, until the present issue, the 14th of November, came, and when I read dear old Brother Jimmie's sweet piece, I just had to cry for real joy. God bless you, dear old brother, and may God spare you to write again, for I just know in your sixty years of continual service you could tell us much that would comfort and build us up. Oh, how happy I am that I, too, can use your very words in saying, "I, too, want to register my name as being for peace and unity among God's little children." And, kind old brother, there was a time in my life, after I came to Texas and experienced two sad divisions in the dear old church, that I was so fully in the flesh I took great pride in calling in question the order of such men as Elders Cayce, Duncan, Wallace, Newman, Collings, and many others I could name. I repeatedly said they were all wrong, and, dear Brother Claud, you came and preached in our city and I was so fully in the flesh I made no effort to go and hear you. Oh, my very dear brother, can you forgive me? I am not worthy, but I want to live at your feet. Now, I would feel it a great pleasure to go all the way to Thornton to hear you preach that glorious gospel, salvation through the suffering of Jesus Christ. Dear kindred in Christ, I can remember so well the 14th of May, 1883, when my blessed Saviour (I hope) caused me to feel that He had satisfied the broken law in my room and stead. Now, I can look back to that day and sing, What peaceful hours I then enjoyed, How sweet their memory still; But they have left an aching void The world can never fill. Oh, precious brethren, go on, go on, and preach peace by Jesus Christ. Oh, thank God forever for causing me to attend the first council meeting at Dallas, Texas, merely to see what could be done or what they had to offer, and when those dear brethren came forward so freely and lovingly, confessing in full all they had done that they felt was wrong, I, a poor worm, was completely melted down and was more than willing to say, "If you can bear with me, I can freely and willingly forgive you all." It has been more than three years and we have been drawn much nearer and God has so wonderfully blessed us. We have had great and grand meetings and many coming to the dear old church. I want to say for my own individual self, I esteem Elders Newman and Collings as I do Elders Herriage and Fowler or any that have been with us all the time. Thank God, thank God! I am just expressing my own feelings. Oh, brethren, let me live with you. Let me have a place at your feet, and oh, that my days might be spent in His praise, who has so wonderfully blessed me with a sweet home in His own dear church forty-six years and has given me so many sweet, good brethren, sisters, and friends. Now, to my dear brethren and sisters of Hopewell Association, in Mississippi, should any of you read this, I think of you all often and was made sorry to hear of the death of Brother Reeder-and others. Pray for me. I would be glad to meet you all again, if it be God's will. Now, brother, write on and preach peace by Jesus Christ, and God bless you. Pray for me. Come to see us, Brother Cayce. Your brother, W. F. Jones. R. 1, Box 323, Ft. Worth, Tex. REMARKS Dear and Precious Brother-We do not hold a single thing in this wide world against you. We remember very well being at old Shiloh, Marshall County, Miss., at the time you mention. It was at a meeting of the Tallahatchie Association. It was a great meeting. We have often thought of it. It has been a green spot in our memory. We were just a boy then, both in years and in the ministry. Love and sweet fellowship abounded among the brethren. There were no factions in our ranks then. All seemed to be satisfied with the goodness of God's house, and all were happy. We have loved you, dear brother, all these years, and we still love you dearly. Wish we could see you now. If we are not permitted to meet again in this world of sorrow and trouble we have a sweet hope of meeting you and all God's dear children in a better home beyond the rolling floods. May the Lord's richest blessings rest upon you. Please pray for us and our dear family. C. H. C.

Matthew 3:5-9

---January 30, 1930

Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins. But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation, of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: and think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.-(Matthew 3:5-9). This chapter begins by saying, "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." -(Matthew 3:1-2). This shows that the writer was telling about the work John was doing; and, although the writer says, "Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan," yet there were some that he did not baptize. The Pharisees and Sadducees came and demanded baptism at his hands; but he did not baptize them. It must be true, then, that the expression, "Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan," must be taken in a restricted sense and not in a universal sense-just as many like expressions to be found in the Book. There were some from Jerusalem, and some from all Judea, and some from all the region round about Jordan who were baptized of him in Jordan. The Pharisees and Sadducees gave no evidence of repentance, or a change in life, or reformation of life. They gave no evidence of regeneration. If people are regenerated through the instrumentality of preaching; if people are persuaded by and through preaching to accept the Lord and to become children of God, we have often wondered why John did not go to work on those Pharisees and Sadducees and try to persuade them to become children of God, and thereby escape from the wrath to come. Evidently the Pharisees and Sadducees were in need of salvation-were in need of regeneration. If salvation (regeneration) is procured in baptism, we have often wondered why John did not baptize them. If one is regenerated or born again in baptism, and John refused to baptize those people, then John refused to allow them to obtain regeneration-he refused to do that for them which would make them to be children of God. The doctrine that eternal life, or regeneration, comes through baptism, would put the regeneration of sinners and the peopling of the heavenly world in the hands of puny men, which is a thing God has not done. Some might say that John had warned those people in his preaching to flee from the wrath to come; but he had not done so. He asks them the question, "Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" This is as much as to say that he had not done so. If he had done so-if he had been preaching that way-then they could have consistently and truthfully replied, "You have done so." They could not thus reply; and therefore John had not been warning people, in his preaching, to flee from the wrath to come. Before John would administer baptism to a person he required "fruits meet for repentance." This means that he required fruits answerable to amendment of life. He required evidence of regeneration. True repentance is an evidence of regeneration. "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death." -(0) (II Corinthians 7:10). Sorrow proceeds from the heart. A godly sorrow cannot proceed from an ungodly heart. It necessarily follows, then, that godly sorrow proceeds from a heart that has already been made good, and repentance is an evidence of regeneration, and does not procure it, or is not a condition to be complied with in order to it. Let us take these two Scriptural propositions: First. Those who are led by the Spirit of God are children of God (" For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." -(Romans 8:14)). Second. Those who repent are led to do so by the Spirit of God (" Or despisest thou the riches of His goodness and forbearance and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?" -(Romans 2:4)). Third. Therefore, those who repent are children of God. This conclusion necessarily follows as a result from the two Scriptural quotations. As those who repent are children of God, it follows that repentance is an evidence of regeneration, and cannot be a condition to be performed in order thereto. The Old Baptists are evidently right on this point. On this question their teaching is Scriptural-and every theory contrary thereto is wrong. Many of God's dear children have been taught a wrong doctrine on this question. Those who were baptized by John confessed their sins. They confessed that they were poor sinners. If one realizes truthfully that he is a poor sinner, and that if he is saved it is wholly by the grace and mercy of God, it is an evidence of the work of grace in the heart. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief." -(I Timothy 1:15). Paul never acknowledged this, nor felt it, while he was in an unregenerate state. When and after the Lord arrested him while he was on his way to Damascus to persecute the saints, then he realized this truth and confessed it; but he never realized or confessed it before. Regeneration brings a godly sorrow for sin; and a hatred of sin and a deep desire to be free from it is an evidence of the work of grace in the heart. This being true, then John baptized those who gave evidence that they were children of God. Primitive Baptists are that way yet. It was right for those who felt and confessed that they were poor sinners to be baptized of John in Jordan. Their hope of heaven was not in their own good deeds or in their own righteousness. Their hope was alone in the mercy and grace of God. If it was right for such people to do as they did then, it is right for such people to do that way now. Hence, if you have been made to feel and to know that you are a poor sinner, and your only hope of heaven is in the blood of a crucified and risen Redeemer and the mercy and grace of God, you should do as those people did-you should be baptized by a Primitive Baptist preacher. You should deny yourself, take up your cross and follow your blessed Saviour. He was baptized by John, this Primitive Baptist preacher. You cannot follow Him as you should, unless you do as He did. May the Lord bless these thoughts to the good of our readers, and may He help us to live in a way that will glorify His name, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Chosen and Predestinated

---February 6, 1930

We are well aware of the fact that the doctrine of God's choice and predestination is often called in question and denied by many, especially by the religious world. Although this is true, yet there is nothing more plainly taught in the Bible; and when properly understood there is no truth taught therein that is more consoling and encouraging to the Lord's humble poor. We will try to write a few thoughts concerning this precious truth for the benefit of our readers. We wish, first, to emphasize the fact that God's choice and predestination does not harm or injure anyone, and never has done so. If A is a millionaire, and makes choice of B and predestinates to make him heir to his estate, he does not thereby injure C. A's choice and predestination does not do C any harm, although C is not embraced in the choice and predestination of A. If A was under any obligation to B, then it was not a matter of mercy or grace that he was made heir to A's estate, but a matter of debt or obligation. Some people have charged that the Old Baptists believe that God made some people to save them and others to damn them. This charge is untrue. That is not Old Baptist doctrine or teaching, neither is it Bible teaching. God did not make people to save them or to damn them. Let the Bible answer the question as to what He made them for. "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." -(Acts 17:26). This tells us plainly that God made all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth. That is what He made them for. Let us accept it for just what it says, and take it at its full value. If any are lost it is not because God made them to be lost, but it is on account of sin-the transgression of God's law. Man did transgress God's law. It is not necessary to cite the Scriptures to prove this, as all professed Bible believers will accept that truth, so far as we know. Paul tells us that "we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin." -(Romans 3:9). This shows that all are under sin, both Jews and Gentiles, and Paul says he proved this before. To deny it is no better than infidelity, for it is to deny the plain statement of God's word. Then, as all are under sin, it follows that all are in a lost state or condition, and will remain so, without the intervention of a higher power. Now, seeing that all are, without the intervention of mercy, or a higher power, forever lost, and the Bible plainly teaching that some are saved, let us look into the matter and find whether the Lord has made choice of them or not. First, we ask what the word choice means? And what does the word chosen mean? Choice is the act of choosing; the voluntary act of selecting from two or more things that which is preferred; the determination of the mind in preferring one thing to another; election; selection. Chosen means selected from a number; picked out; in theology, elect. Chosen people, the Israeli ties; see ((Chr 16:13) (I Chronicles 16:13) "O ye seed of Israel His servant, ye children of Jacob, His chosen ones;" (Psalms 33:12) "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; and the people whom He hath chosen for His own inheritance." See also ((7) (Acts 13:17). Chosen, as a noun, is one who is the object of choice or divine favor; an elect person. To know whether any persons are the objects of choice or divine favor, and are elect persons, and whether they were predestinated unto a better state, let us read (Ephesians 1:3-4,5) "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love: having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will," etc. The word us in this text is a personal pronoun, and as a pronoun must have an antecedent, it follows that persons (understood) is the antecedent of this pronoun. Hence, it must necessarily be true that persons (us) were the objects of God's choice. He chose persons- persons were chosen by Him. No man on earth can deny this without denying the plain statement of the Word of God. Not only is it true that God made choice of persons, but He also predestinated those same persons unto the adoption of children; He predestinated that they should be adopted into His heavenly family. To predestinate is to appoint or ordain beforehand by divine purpose or decree; to preelect. These people were appointed beforehand to be adopted into the family of God. God predestinated that this should be done. He predestinated that they should be saved. He appointed them beforehand unto salvation. If you are ever saved, or brought into the family of God, or made a child of God, it is because God appointed beforehand, by His divine purpose, that you should be saved; that you should be brought into and made a member of His heavenly family. "In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." - (Ephesians 1:11). If one obtains an inheritance in Christ it is because he was predestinated unto that end by the Lord Himself, and according to His own purpose; and He works all things necessary to the accomplishment of that end. Nothing in order to the accomplishment of that end is left to rest upon any condition to be performed by others-it is not contingent upon the works of men. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified." - (Romans 8:28-29,30). Here we are plainly told that some persons were predestinated to be conformed to the image of His Son. God the Father predestinated this. Who can object to being predestinated to be conformed to the image of Christ? If you are ever conformed to the image of Christ it is because the Father predestinated that you should be conformed to His image. Can one object to that? "Blessed is the man whom thou chooseth, and caused to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple." -((4) (Psalms 65:4). Who approaches unto the Lord? According to David's language here, it is the man the Lord chooses and causes to approach unto Him. No person has ever yet approached unto the Lord, only that person whom the Lord has chosen and caused to approach unto Him. For one to object to the doctrine of God's choice is for him to object to the very principle upon which a poor sinner may approach unto the Lord. Can you afford to object to a poor sinner approaching unto the Lord? If you cannot afford to object to that, then you cannot afford to object to the principle upon which he may approach unto Him. If you have ever been brought to realize your need of God's mercy and grace in your salvation, and caused to approach unto Him in humble prayer and supplication, begging Him for mercy, it was because God had made choice of you and caused you to approach unto Him; and that is the reason why you will be given to finally dwell in His courts. You will finally be brought into His glorious and holy presence in the heavenly world, and there be perfectly and fully satisfied. You will then be finally and fully glorified, and will dwell in His glorious presence forever. May this be your happy lot, if according to His heavenly will, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

Help Obtained

---February 6, 1930

A short time after our health failed last fall we received a letter from Elder T. L. Webb asking us if we had a place for him in our office. We wrote him and asked that he make a little trip over here, and told him we could talk the matter over. He agreed to come, and we made some appointments for him. When he came to fill the appointments we spent several days with him. We readily came to an agreement. He returned to Tennessee and made arrangements to move in a short time. We felt that it was a providential matter, and feel that way yet. Brother Webb has been working in the office now since before Christmas-a little more than a month. From the time we began making arrangements with him to come and work with us we felt that we wanted his name on our editorial staff. By his consent we are now putting his name there. On the first page of the paper will be found the editorial staff of the paper at present. On account of the failure in our health we feel that we need some help in the office in the editorial work. Brother Webb has kindly consented for his name to go on the staff, and he will help us in this work; but at the present time most of his work is in the mechanical department. While most of his work is in that line at present, yet he will be much help to us in editorial work. We are glad to have Brother Webb located here, and we are glad to have him in the office with us, and we are glad to have his name on our editorial staff. May the good Lord bless his labors among us, and may He bless our association together for the good of His blessed cause and His dear children, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Infant Salvation

A SERMON BY ELDER C. H. CAYCE, PREACHED AT BETHEL PRIMITIVE BAPTIST CHURCH, NASHVILLE, TENN., SUNDAY, JULY 1, 1923

As we have been asked several questions recently on the subject of infant salvation, we have decided to publish in our columns the following discourse which we delivered in Nashville, Tenn., which was taken down by a stenographer and published in the Gospel Trumpet of August, 1923, a paper which was then being published by Elder W. L. Murray. C. H. C. The article Brethren, Sisters and Kind Friends: I am thankful, I trust, for the privilege and the opportunity of being with you at this place this evening to engage with you in the service of our blessed Master, and to try to speak to you for awhile concerning the teaching of His blessed Book. If the Lord will, I desire to try to speak to you more especially on the subject of infant salvation. I have been casting about in my mind for the past few hours as to what I should try to talk about, and I finally decided that I will try to use that for a subject. I wish to read from the tenth chapter of Mark, beginning with the thirteenth verse down to and including the sixteenth verse: "And they brought young children to Him, that He should touch them; and His disciples rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, He was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And He took them up in His arms, put His hands upon them, and blessed them." In connection with that I wish to read from the eighteenth chapter of Luke, beginning with the fifteenth verse, down to and including the seventeenth: "And they brought unto Him also infants, that He would touch them; but when the disciples saw it, they rebuked them. But Jesus called them unto Him and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein." The reason why I read from Luke's writing is because in the King James translation we have the word "infants," and that word is translated from a word that is applied to the child in its earliest age, even in the very beginning of its existence, sometimes even applied to it before its natural birth into the world. And that word applies to one in its earliest childhood only. The word that is used by Mark which is translated "young children" is sometimes used with reference to those who are in their younger age through their infancy, up to young manhood or young womanhood, so that the word which he uses might be misunderstood by us if we do not compare that with what Luke has said in giving his rendering of the account. And as Luke uses a word that is applied only to, and is never used except with reference to, those in their very earliest life, even in their infancy, then we may understand what kind of persons the Saviour had under consideration in the lesson that is given us here. As an especial starting point, I use ((0:15) (Mark 10:15) "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." In connection with it, (Luke 18:17): "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein." In this teaching, or in this expression recorded by Luke, the Saviour said," they shall in no wise enter therein." These two expressions mean the same thing-that the adult must receive the kingdom of God in the same way that the little child receives it. He must enter therein in the very same way that the infant enters therein; and that unless he does enter in that way, unless he receives it in that way, he does not receive it or enter into it at all. The very same way that the adult is saved is the way the little child is saved. And the same way that a little child is saved is the way that the old man is saved. So far as age is concerned, it matters not concerning this point, whether young or old-they are saved the same way. I wish to call your attention to the very wording of the text," Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child he shall not enter therein." The Saviour did not say," Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as this little child," pointing out some special or particular child, but he used the indefinite article, a-a little child. It matters not if it be this little child, or if it be that little child, or any other little child, no matter whose little child, nor where the little child may be. The Saviour is not pointing out some special or particular child, and teaching that you must receive the kingdom of God as this particular child receives it. Just here let me say that our people have been accused from time immemorial of preaching that there are infants in hell not a span long. I wish here to say that the principle, or the system of salvation, or plan of salvation, as taught and believed by the people with whom I stand identified is the only system of salvation on earth that will reach the case of the babe. That may be putting the statement in rather strong terms, you may say; but I wish to examine this evening, in the light of God's blessed truth, and in the light of reason, the system of salvation by grace as well as any other system that may be presented, or that may be taught by men, and see wherein they fail or wherein they stand the test. Suppose we ask how the little child is saved. I am going to say for the people with whom I stand identified that we are sure that every one that has or ever will pass off the stage of action in a state of infancy is saved in heaven. And that old story that has been told on the Old Baptists that they preach infant damnation has become gray-headed, absolutely, and about as near as I have been able to find the man that advocated it, upon a statement of those who would bring the charge is that grandmother said that her Aunt Mary said that her Uncle Tommie said that his grandfather said that his Aunt Susan said that her Aunt Polly said that her grandmother said that her grandfather heard a man preach that, who is dead and gone long ago. It is absolutely untrue; and I have a proposition right here to make, that if any man will prove to me that any Old Baptist has ever yet preached one single infant to hell, I will preach him out again; and if I can't accomplish the task, I will find a man that can, for I am sure that if one man has the power to preach one to hell, some other man has as much power as he had and can preach him out again. Every one that ever has or ever will die in a state of infancy is saved in heaven. Someone will say,"

Well, don't you Old Baptists believe in the doctrine of election?" Yes, we do." Well, do you not believe in the doctrine of eternal and particular election?" Yes, sir, we do." Do you not believe that God made choice of the people He saves, and that this choice was made before time began?" Certainly we do." Well, then, how in the world can you believe that all who die in infancy are saved, and at the same time believe that kind of doctrine?" Well, that is easy. Suppose I show you right quickly how we can do that. Suppose you bring a basket of apples in here, and one-half of them are red and one-half are yellow, and you say to me, "Cayce, take your choice of apples; choose as many of them as you wish." And I take all the red apples and one-half of the yellow apples. What have I done? I have made choice of apples. I chose apples. How many did I take? I took all the red ones and just as many of the yellow ones as I wanted. And so God Almighty, in his sovereign choice of sinners of Adam's race, took all the babies and just as many of the old folks as He wanted. Can you beat it? Now that is easy to explain, how we can believe the doctrine of election and at the same time believe that all babies are saved. You may say God made choice of the infant and saves the infant because of his infantile purity, or that the infant is saved because of his infantile purity. Suppose we examine the idea of infantile purity. I would ask, until what age may he be saved because of his infantile purity? Why, you might answer, "That all depends upon the tuition he receives; it depends upon his education; it depends upon his learning. If he is kept in ignorance, abject, total ignorance, he will not reach the line of accountability until he attains, perhaps, the age of sixteen years; but if he is educated well, if we send him to Sunday school and to the literary schools, and take him to church and give him the proper training and proper education, he may reach the line of accountability at the age of twelve years or younger, depending upon how well taught and how well trained he is." All right, let us try that. Now I am going to say that if I believed in that doctrine, or that theory, I would certainly be opposed to education. I most assuredly would be opposed to education from every standpoint if I believed in that idea. I do not believe in that idea, and therefore I am not opposed to education. I am in favor of education. Education is all right in its place-it is beneficial to us if rightly used. I have heard it said, however, that an educated fool is the biggest fool in the world; but education rightly used, and in its right place, is a good thing, and I wish I was in possession of more learning than I am in possession of, so far as that point is concerned; but if I believed in the other theory, I would be opposed to education. Now, let's see. Suppose that here are two little boys that are the same age-this little white boy and this little negro. They are the same age, born into this world the very same day, and at the same hour of the day. You know that occurs sometimes. And this little white boy is sent to school, and we give him all the training and all the education that it is possible to give him and at the age of twelve years he crosses the line of accountability. But we keep this little negro in ignorance, abject ignorance. We do not let him go to the day school nor to the Sunday school, and he never goes to church; he is reared out in the backwoods; he does not see a Bible, and he cannot read it if he did see it-kept in absolute ignorance, so that he does not reach the line of accountability at the age of twelve years. At the age of thirteen years this little white boy dies, after having crossed the line of accountability at the age of twelve years, and he has not accepted Jesus as his Saviour; he has not fallen in with the overtures of mercy; he has not complied with the terms and conditions of the gospel. What becomes of that little white boy? You are bound to say that he is lost. There is absolutely no escaping it, according to that position, as he has crossed the line of accountability at the age of twelve years, on account of his tuition, on account of his training. So his education has caused him to be lost. But the little negro lives to the age of fifteen years, having been kept in absolute ignorance, abject ignorance, total ignorance, has never heard any preaching, he has never been to Sunday school or to the day school, and has not learned how to read. So he can't read the Bible, and would not know what it was if he should see it. At the age of fifteen, he dies, not having reached the line of accountability, on account of his having been kept in ignorance. What becomes of the little negro? The little negro is saved. Why is the little negro saved? Because of his ignorance. Why is the little white boy lost? Because of his education. There is not a man in all this wide world, there is not a theologian in the universe, I care not who he is, nor what his learning may be, who can get around that necessary conclusion. According to that theory it cannot be overthrown. That conclusion necessarily and inevitably stands, world without end. If I believed that doctrine I would be opposed to education. I would say, let us keep all of them in ignorance; let us keep all of them away from schools; it would be better to burn the Bibles; it would be better to destroy the preachers; it would be better to have no schools of any kind, and keep every person on earth in total, abject ignorance, if that doctrine be true, and let them be saved on their ignorance. But that doctrine is not the truth. But another point I want to examine right here on that supposed line of accountability. This little fellow here comes to the line, and when he gets just half way across the line, suppose he dies? I ask you what becomes of him? Is he saved? No. Why? Because he has not fallen in with the overtures of mercy and complied with the terms and conditions of the gospel. That is the reason why he cannot be saved, after crossing the line, unless he does that and he has got half way across. Well, is he lost? No, he is not lost, for he is only half way across the line. What becomes of him? Is he saved or is he lost? Does God get one-half and Satan get the other half?" Well," you may say," you have no right to suppose he dies when he is half way across the line." I have just as much right to suppose he dies when he is half way across the line as any other man has to suppose there is such a thing as such a line. There is not a semblance of an expression in God's Word, from the first verse of the first chapter of Genesis to the last verse of the twenty-second chapter of Revelation concerning such a line-not a scintilla of proof of any such a thing in the Bible-not a syllable that intimates such a thing. The little child is in possession of the very same life that the adult possesses. There has never been a human being born into this world since the first man violated God's holy and righteous law, but what was born into this world with a life that was poisoned and contaminated with sin, except Jesus. We are all in possession of the same nature, whether young or old, rich or poor, high or low, noble or ignoble, whatever station or condition in life they may be in, they possess the very same nature. There has been a whole lot said of recent years about this so-called scientific theory of evolution, that man sprang from the lower animals, which makes me think of an occurrence once in discussion with a gentleman in the state of Missouri some years ago. I made the statement that we are all Adam multiplied, and the gentleman did not wait until his time to make his speech, but spoke right out and said," I am not." Well," I said," that is all right. I like to agree with a man when I can, and since you deny that you are Adam multiplied, I will agree with you." I said," When I look at the way you act I think possibly you are kin to the monkey tribe, but when I look at you and see how you look, I don't know but what you are kin to the animal that Balaam rode. So tell us which of those animals you are related to-but as for me and us folks, we are Adam multiplied. That is all we are." "Of one blood made He all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." They are Adam multiplied. Just one people. No matter anything about their race, nationality, their age, their condition, or station in life, they all sprang from the same source and from the same man. Perhaps we had better examine that evolution business a little. Suppose I have a little acorn here. I ask you, Where did that acorn come from? You say, From an oak tree, of course. All right. Where did that oak tree come from? It came from another acorn. What kind of acorn was that? Just like this one. Where did that acorn come from? Another oak tree. What kind of oak tree was that? Just like the oak tree this acorn came from. Where did that oak tree come from? From another acorn. Where did that acorn come from? Another oak. And so we follow the line back, back, back, until we come to the first acorn, and I ask you, Where did that first acorn come from? Why, you say, it came from the first oak, of course. Then I ask you, Where did the first oak come from? There is but one answer that can be given. Men, with all their scientific research, and with all their wisdom and their inventive genius and so-called science, can give but one answer to that question, and that is, "God made it." And that oak was just like the oak that this acorn sprang from. So your doctrine of evolution is exploded in the little acorn. There is no such thing as life without antecedent life. Spontaneous life is absolutely unknown. There is no such thing as the lower order of life lifting and raising itself up to the higher order. It is unknown in all the realm of science, in all the realm of nature. The higher order of life reaches down, according to its own will, to the lower order, lifting it up and raising it up and changing it into the higher order, by its own sovereign will, and its own work. Life has always come by a direct, immediate implantation or touch of life; it cannot be given any other way. And as this is true, it matters not whether a man is old, or whether it be the infant in the mother's arms, life is given, and must be given, by a direct and immediate implantation of life. It cannot be any other way. Suppose we go to the fountainhead of the Mississippi River and poison the fountainhead of that stream. When the water shall have flown down the stream to the city of St. Louis, it is the same poisoned water that it was at the fountainhead. When it has flown down the stream to the city of Memphis, Tenn., it is the same poisoned water that it was at the fountainhead. When it has flown down the stream to the city of Vicksburg, Miss., it is the same poisoned water that it was back there at the fountainhead. And when it has flown down to the mouth of the stream and empties into the Gulf it is the same poisoned water that it was back there at the fountainhead. I ask you, how may that water be purified and made fit for use? How may that be accomplished? Suppose we go to the bank of the stream and hold a big meeting there, and we have our evangelists there, and we have our singers there, and we raise a big shout around the stream, begging the water and pleading with it that it become willing to be carried through a purifying process that the poison may be all taken out of it, so that it may be made fit for use, and you should be standing there on the bank of the stream, and all at once the water should cease flowing down stream and begin flowing up stream, become willing to comply with the conditions in order that it might be purified and made fit for use-I will ask you, friends, what would you do if you were there? I freely confess that if I were there, and I was not scared too bad, I would run. I know that it is contrary to every principle of reason, to every principle of science, contrary to every principle of logic, contrary to the teaching of God's Word, and is contrary to common sense for water to cease to flow down stream and flow up hill. How may that water be purified, then, and made fit for use? There is only one way, and that is, a higher power must come to it, and take it out of the stream and carry it through a purifying process that takes the poison out of it, and make it fit for use. That is the only way under heaven it can be done. So the life that we live today, as we are Adam multiplied, is a life that was poisoned and contaminated with sin at its source, and when that life had flown down the stream of time unto Abraham's day it was the same poisoned life that it was back in Adam's day; and when it had flown down the stream of time to Paul's day, it was the same poisoned life that it was at first, and having flown down the stream to our day, it is the same poisoned life that it was at the fountainhead; and at the final windup of all time, it will still be the same poisoned life that it was at the fountainhead. How can one be made fit for the Master's use, and be prepared to live with God in eternal glory? How can that be done? Just one way, and that is, the higher power, the Spirit of Almighty God, must come to where the sinner is, lift him up out of the stream and carry him through a purifying process that takes away the poison and stain of sin, and finally present him before the throne of God in eternal glory, as free from sin, as spotless and pure and white as though there had never been a sin committed. That is the only way it can be done. "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." Does a little child receive the kingdom of God because of his infantile purity, seeing he possesses a life that is poisoned and contaminated with sin? Does a little child receive the kingdom of God because of his infantile purity? If so, and Jesus told the truth when He said, "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein," then the old man must receive the kingdom of God because of his infantile purity; and if he does not receive it on that ground, the Saviour having told the truth, if the child receives it that way, then the adult does not enter therein-except he receives it upon his infantile purity, if the little child does. If the little child enters that way, I ask you, then, can you reach the case of the adult by infantile purity? You know you cannot. You may say the adult cannot be saved because of his infantile purity; he must accept Jesus as his Saviour; he must fall in with the overtures of mercy, and comply with the conditions of the gospel, else he cannot be saved. All right. I ask you, If the adult is saved that way, can the little child be saved that way? Make your terms and conditions ever so simple, ever so easy to be understood and complied with, the little child, the babe in the mother's arms, cannot understand these conditions; he cannot comprehend them, and he cannot perform them or comply with them; and as you cannot reach the case of the little child with your conditions, and the adult is saved as the little child is saved, then you cannot reach the case of the adult with your conditions. The little child cannot be saved upon conditions, and he is saved the same way the adult is saved; then the adult is not saved on conditions. The adult is not saved on his infantile purity, and the adult is saved just as the little child is saved. Then the little child is not saved upon its infantile purity. If no one could be saved in heaven except on that principle, heaven would be a blank, and the other place would be full. I am glad that the Saviour gives us to understand that the very same power that is able to reach the case of the infant in the mother's arms is able to reach the old man and old woman; and the power and Spirit of God Almighty has embraced in His love, every object of His pity and tender compassion, of every age and every class. "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." I remember once in the Western portion of this state, some years ago, that I tried to preach on this same subject, and a preacher was present-it is unnecessary to tell you what he belonged to-and at the conclusion of the discourse he arose in the back part of the house and said, "Well, sir, if you have no objection, I would like to ask you a question." "Well," I said, "so far as I am concerned, I have no objection; but it is with this church and the pastor who sits behind me. If it is all right with them it is all right with me." The pastor said, "You have permission; ask your question." He said, "You say that you believe that all who die in a state of infancy are saved. I believe that too. But I don't think you can prove it by the Bible. I would like for you to give me book, chapter and verse that says so." I said, "Are you through?" He said, "Yes, sir." "Well," I said, "please take your seat. Now," I said, "it seems to me that in one particular we are in the same boat. I believe that all who die in a state of infancy are saved, and you say you believe that, too. So it appears to me that we are in the same boat. But it seems, as you say I cannot prove it by the Bible, that you are uneasy, and are afraid the boat will turn over.

Now, if I was uneasy about it, I would keep right quiet; but I am not uneasy. As I am not afraid, I am at perfect liberty to lean from side to side in the boat, and am at liberty to stand upon my feet, and walk about in the boat, because I am not afraid, at all, that the boat will turn over. I am not uneasy about it. Not only am I at liberty to walk about in the boat, but to place my toes right out on the edge of the boat, and then look over the edge of that boat down into the depths of God's love, mercy and grace, and see how it is that His love and mercy and grace reaches the case of the babe as well as that of the old man, and never feel uneasy about it. The very same principle that reaches the case of the old man will reach the case of the little babe, and if I was uneasy about it, like you, I would keep right still, and not say a word. I am not uneasy about it." Right here, if you will pardon this, I seldom ever tell anything like an antedote, but right here is something that I heard that so well illustrates the point. Some people have a plan or system of salvation that will reach the case of the old man and the old woman, so they think, but the system or plan will not reach the case of the babe; so, then they must get up the plan of infantile purity to reach the case of the babe-must have two ways to get in. That reminds me of the anecdote. I heard one time of an old maid who wanted a house built, and she employed a workman to erect the house. She was very particular and wanted everything just precisely to her notion, and when he had the house completed he called her to come and examine and see if she would accept it; and after going through the whole thing she said, "It is all right except one thing I didn't tell you about." "Well," he said, "what was that?" "Why," she says, "I forgot to tell you that I have some old cats, and I want a hole cut right here in this door for the old cats to come into the kitchen through the hole, without having to open the door to let them in." So the workman cut the hole down there at the bottom of the door to let the big cats in." Now," he said, "lady, is everything all right?" "Yes," she said, "except for one thing more that I forgot." "What was that?" "Well," she said, "I have some kittens, too. I want a hole cut on this side of the door for the little kittens to come in at." "Well," the workman said, "can't the little kitten go in at the same hole that the big cat goes in?" Some folks think the baby can't get into the kingdom of God, or obtain salvation, or be saved, the very same way that the old people are saved. It seems to me that a system of salvation that is broad enough and sufficient to reach the case of the old man will reach the case of the babe, too, without having to hatch up some other plan for them. It looks that way to me. That is the way it appears to me. "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." A little child-it matters not what little child it is-a little child-the indefinite article a. Let this pencil represent one little child; let this pen represent all other little children except that one little child represented by the pencil. Now let's hear the Saviour's language: "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child" -it matters not if it is the one represented by the pencil, or any of those represented by the pen that represents all the others-" he shall not enter therein." Suppose a little child misses the kingdom, and you receive the kingdom of God as a little child, then as certain as God lives you miss it, too. Just as certain as one of the adult family of Adam's race ever enters the portals of eternal glory, just that certain a little child does not miss the kingdom. Every one that ever has or ever will die in a state of infancy enters the portals of eternal glory and basks in the sunlight of God's eternal presence forever and forever-more. And that little child of yours that has crossed the river of death, and has, in spirit, been ushered into the divine presence of God Almighty, will sing the same song of redeeming grace that you sing. Why is the little child saved? Because of its infantile purity? No. He has a life in nature that is poisoned and contaminated with sin. He is Adam multiplied. He cannot be saved that way, for the adult cannot be saved that way. Can the little child be saved by complying with terms and conditions? No; he cannot be saved that way. And, since the adult must be saved the same way the little child is saved, then the adult cannot be saved that way. How, then, is the little child saved? "Jesus took them up in His arms, laid His hands upon them and blessed them." The Lord Jesus never did anything in vain. The very fact that He took them up in His arms and laid His hands upon them and blessed them shows that they needed the blessing. He never did anything that was not needful to be done. He never did a thing that was unnecessary to do. So they needed the blessing in order that they receive the kingdom of God. The little child, then, receives the kingdom of God. Why? Because of the blessing that Jesus bestows. That is the reason why. I ask why the adult receives the kingdom of God? Because of the blessing Jesus bestows. It matters not how young they are, it matters not how old they are, they receive the kingdom of God for the very same reason; and that is because of the blessing that Jesus bestows by His own power. He was able to manifest His power in the case of John the Baptist before his natural birth into the world. He was given to leap for joy by the overshadowing of the Holy Ghost, even before His natural birth into the world. And in this manner God Almighty, by the power of His Holy Spirit, is able to reach the case of the baby and of the aged, the old man. There is none that get too hard for the Lord. Sometimes I hear them say there is one in the community who is such a hard case we cannot do anything with him. Sometimes we hear them say, we will have to leave him in the hands of the Lord. The Lord is able to reach him, take care of him and save him; it matters not what his condition may be, his nationality, his color, or station; it matters not if he be a king on the throne, or the poor beggar that comes to your back door and asks for a morsel of bread. It matters not if it is the little babe that falls asleep in its mother's arms. The Lord is able to save them, to reach them, and raise them up to a higher order of life, to give them the spiritual and divine life, and take them to live with God in eternal glory. How many are saved, then, that die in infancy? All of them. How many of them are saved in adult life? Just as many as God Almighty wanted. You can't get a better platform than that, I don't care what sort you get. Just as many as the Lord wanted. Now, then, I shall conclude. May the rich, reigning grace of God be yours to enjoy all along the pathway of life, and may you study and be given to rejoice in these blessed truths that God is able to reach the poor sinner of every age, and of every clime, young or old, and take them to Himself. Years ago, in my childhood, I stood behind mother's chair, looking over her shoulder, and saw a precious little sister fall in mother's arms in death. In spirit this evening I am sure that sister is in the presence of God. I hope, blessed hope, that some day I shall be permitted to join her on the sunny shores of sweet deliverance, in singing praise unto the adorable Redeemer for my salvation. A few more days of toil, a few more days of trouble, a few more heartaches, a few more distresses, and you shall meet your loved ones on the other shore. Mothers, you who have had your little children taken from you by the cold and relentless hand of death, let me say that, by the power of Jesus Christ, and in the greatness of His love and mercy, that child of yours this evening is in the presence of God, in spirit, basking in the sunlight of His glory, and has missed the sorrows, the trials, the conflicts, the heartaches, and distresses that you have had to endure, and it will not be long until you will see that child again. David lost his child. The servants wondered why David would arise and take refreshment when he saw the child was dead, and they asked him concerning that, and he said, "While the child lived, I did not know but God would be gracious and spare the child." He says, "Now it cannot come to me, but I shall go to it." David had that blessed hope of a better home beyond this life, and he was sure of the fact that the little child had been taken home to glory. If one child may be lost, David's child might have been lost, as any other; but David was assured by revelation and inspiration from God that the little child is taken home to glory by the power and grace and love and mercy of God, and so he said, "It cannot come to me, but I shall go to it." So it will not be long, mothers, until you will join that child on the sunny shores of sweet deliverance in singing the song of redeeming grace. C. H. C.

Elder Fairchild

February 13, 1930

In the Banner Herald, Elder Crouse's paper, the Progressive organ of Georgia, for February 1, we see the following item: Cordele Church will hold her week's meeting beginning Monday before and continuing through fourth Sunday in June. Elder J. W. Fairchild will assist the pastor, Elder Lewis. We understand Elder Fairchild is moving to Georgia soon. He is heartily welcomed by our brethren. We see, also, that Elder Fairchild's name is still on the editorial staff of that paper. True, he had an article in the paper some time ago resigning his position on the editorial staff, but his name remains on. His resignation was not given because of thinking the Progressives were wrong in any of their contentions, but because he was thereby handicapped among our people. But the above notice is sufficient to show where Elder Fairchild stands. In the same paper of December 15, 1929, is an article by Elder Fairchild on the question of divorce and re-marriage. He argues in this that if a couple are married and find that they do not really love each other, and are not congenial, it is all right for them to separate and that they have a Scriptural right to marry again. We would be glad to copy the whole article and reply to it at length, but our space will not admit of it. Such a position is right along the line of the modern infidels in advocating the idea of "companionate marriage." The idea is that they have a right to live together awhile on probation, or on trial. That is what it amounts to. Besides that, if a man and woman unite under the law and live together for a time, and then decide that they do not love each other, then, according to Elder Fairchild, they were not united by the Lord, and therefore were never Scripturally married. If they have children, then the children are illegitimate-they are bastards. We have been asked by a number of persons if we endorse the article by Elder Fairchild. We answer most positively that we do not. It would lead to immorality, more divorces, and the country is filled with bastards- if the idea be true. May the Lord deliver us from such teaching. Elder Fairchild says that the way Old Baptists have settled this question must be wrong because it does not stay settled. The way that Old Baptists have always stood on this question, as a rule, is that no man has a right to put his wife away and marry another only for the cause of fornication or adultery. This has been their position all along the line. The reason why the question continues to cause trouble occasionally along the line is that some man will occasionally do as Elder Fairchild has done in that article-try to raise the question again and deny the plain statement of the Lord of glory and set aside His teaching, and introduce some idea that is contrary to and foreign to what Old Baptists have always taught, and contrary to the teaching of the Master. We regret to have to write this way about these things, but we feel that the cause demands it, and we would be untrue to the cause if we did not speak out thus plainly. May the good Lord deliver us from such teaching. C. H. C.

Acts 9:7 AND Acts 22:9

---February 13, 1930

Some people think that these two passages of Scripture are contradictory-that one contradicts the other. But they do not contradict. They harmonize all right. ((9:7) (Acts 9:7) reads: "And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man." ((2:9) (Acts 22:9) reads: "And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of Him that spake to me." In this last text it plainly says they heard not the voice of Him that spake to Saul; but in ((9:7) (Acts 9:7) it says they heard a voice. It does not say what voice they heard, but it was not the voice of Him that spake to Saul, for he plainly tells us so in ((2:9) (Acts 22:9). Then, as they heard a voice, whose voice was it that they heard? Evidently it was Saul's voice they heard when he said, "Who art thou, Lord?" and when he said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" They saw no man-they did not see who it was that Saul was talking to, though they heard him speaking to some unseen person whose voice they did not hear. The Lord's voice is a still small voice, {see ((Ki 19:11) (I Kings 19:11-12)} a voice not heard with the natural ear. C. H. C.

Another Editor

---February 13, 1930

Elder J. S. Newman, of Stockdale, Texas, has agreed to let us put his name on our editorial staff, at our request. Brother Newman will write for the paper, and will also take subscriptions at any place where he may go. Any of our subscribers may hand their subscription to him, when it is convenient to do so, and this will save them the trouble of sending to us. We all know that Brother Newman is a good writer, and we trust the Lord will bless his labors to the good of His cause and to the comfort and instruction of His little children. We are glad to have Brother Newman associated with us. C. H. C.

Baptist Standard

---February 20, 1930

Somebody sent us the first sheet (pages 1 and 2) from the Baptist Standard of December 19, 1929, published in Dallas, Texas. We do not know who sent it to us. On page 1 we see the statement in an article by W. R. White that "the Hardshells are the Primitive Baptists. Jonah and Peter belonged at one time to their ministry." Here is a plain admission that the people these folks call "Hardshells" are the original Baptists- that they are the Primitives. If they are the Primitives then they are the original Baptists. Since this is admitted, then why will they try to claim that they are the original Baptists? Can they be honest in making such a claim in the face of such an admission? On page 2 we find that these Missionaries (Fullerites) are in a bad row. We find there the statement that "the theological seminaries are graduating men much faster than churches are being organized," and that "there are not churches enough in the class desirable as pastorates to employ those who want churches of that kind." The writer further says that "there is hardly a day that some well educated, worthy man does not come into this office, or go to the headquarters office, to inquire about an available church. It is becoming alarming." What do you suppose is wrong? Wonder if the Lord did not know what He was doing? Wonder if He has called so many into the work of the ministry when there is no place for them, and no room for them? Solomon says that "a man's gift will make room for him." It seems that there is not room for these men that their seminaries are graduating. We wonder if one trouble is not that men are entering the ministry without the divine call, just to get an education without cost to them, or to go into the ministry for a livelihood-just as one would go into the worldly professions. It seems that the seminaries are making preachers so fast that they have the market glutted. Such preachers are not worth much, anyway. There is always room for the preachers the Lord makes-as long as they do the Lord's biddings. On the front page we see that the Baptist Standard promotes ten different itemized things, one of which is the B. Y. P. U. Concerning this B. Y. P. U. the late Elder J. N. Hall said, in the Baptist Gleaner of March 28, 1894, "Fie, fie, you imp of hell. Why should you blaspheme the name of God without rebuke, and arrogate to yourself divinity, when you bear on your forehead the imprint of the pit. Get thee behind me Satan." He further says, "It looks like a genuine vomit from perdition." He also says, "In the name of common sense, how can such staunch, true, tried Baptists become infatuated with this liberal bloat from the pit, when it is so terribly naked, and its true nature so easy to be seen. Dash the thing to earth, brethren, and stamp its blasphemous form back to the pit from whence it came." One more statement from Elder Hall is this: "Another feature of this arrogant abortion is its defiance of divine laws." Just one more statement from his pen: "The B. Y. P. U. of A., together with the whole tribe of societies that is linked to it, is a contrivance of the devil, a slight of hand of crafty liberalists, seeking to paralyze the truth of God, and hinder His cause in the earth." Well, there you are! This Texas paper promotes an imp of hell-so Elder J. N. Hall called the thing-a vomit from perdition; a bloat from the pit; an arrogant abortion; a contrivance of the devil! That's the kind of stuff they promote-according to Elder J. N. Hall. Yes, evidently they are trying to paralyze the truth of God and hinder His cause in the earth. What a pity that they have so many of God's children blinded and deluded. But that is their desire. That is what the devil wants done, anyhow-to have God's children blinded and deluded. All their societies and aids and helps are absolutely unknown to the word of God. Every one of them is absolutely without divine authority. Those who hold to such things have no more right to be called the church of God than a hog has to be called an angel. Many of God's people are blinded and are among them, but they are not in the church the Lord established while here in the world.

We would be glad for them to get their eyes open to the truth, and to see them coming home to the true church of God, which still goes on without using those things invented in the lower regions. We should be satisfied with what the Lord has put here for His children, and let all other things alone. The Bible is given to furnish God's children with all that they should practice religiously, and it is very much wrong to practice what the Bible does not command. C. H. C.

Revelation 11:3,7-8

---February 27, 1930

We have been asked to give our views on (Revelation 11:3,8). We would be glad to publish Gill's comments on these passages, but do not have the space. We will write just a few lines, giving some of our thoughts in a very brief way. (Revelation 11:3) reads as follows: And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth. This thousand two hundred and three score days is twelve hundred and sixty years, and answers to the time the church was in the wilderness. The two witnesses are the church and the ministry-the true ministry of Christ. During these twelve hundred and sixty years they testified to the truth, but were sorely persecuted. They prophesied in sackcloth and ashes; and though they were persecuted by the world, yet the Lord blessed them. At the end of the twelve hundred and sixty years the Reformation came, when Luther came out of Rome and established the Lutheran Church and Calvin established the Presbyterian Church. Then came religious liberty, and the true witnesses were allowed freedom to proclaim the riches of God's grace in a public way without fear of molestation. Now we come to (Revelation 11:7-8): And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. Here is a prophecy that we would do well to take heed to. This beast is generally conceded to be Rome. The beast is to make war against the two witnesses and will overcome them and kill them, and their dead bodies will lie in the streets. Verse nine tells us that "they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves." This severe trial and persecution will last for three years and six months, and it will be the most severe persecution that the world has ever known. It is true that in past ages the true and humble followers of the Master have been put to death and punished in every conceivable way that it seems Satan could invent, and the persecutions have been severe; but this will be the worst. But thanks be to the Lord, it will be of short duration in comparison with the length of time some of our ancestors had to suffer. For some years we have felt sure that we could see the dark clouds gathering, and we still believe we can see those clouds. Rome has been gradually working to gain her lost power, and the pope has been granted territory over which he is ruler in temporal matters as well as church matters. They have been working for years to make America Catholic. They are avowed enemies of our free school system, the bulwark of our freedom. They have always opposed the full and entire separation of church and state. For you to know these things to be true it is only necessary for you to read authentic church history and read what Catholics say in their own papers and publications now. They tried to elect Al Smith president, and all indications are that he will be a candidate next time. With a Catholic president this war on the two witnesses could be made before the Protestant people could have time or warning to help themselves. All papers opposing Catholicism could be put out of business in a few weeks time, and that without remedy. Do we want the trial of such persecution as is here told us about in this chapter? If not, then we should "be up and doing." Let us awake to the dangers confronting us, and awake to the discharge of our every duty. Let us go to God in prayer, that such calamity may not befall us, and then let us do our full duty. In the discharge of our every duty the Lord will bless us. We are not running a political paper, but we feel it to be our indispensable duty to warn all our readers of the impending crisis. May the Lord help us all to awake to the true situation and to do our whole duty. C. H. C.

Remarks to Elder J. R. Wilson

Dear brother, we are so sorry to hear of your health being bad, and beg the Lord that you may be well again. We are glad to say that our health is better. We seem to be improving, and we hope to be well again soon. We hope to see you this summer, and want you to visit our churches. Our people will welcome you among them. We appreciate your kind words more than we can tell, though we feel so unworthy of it all. The Lord's dear children have been good to us-far better than we feel to deserve. True, we have had to endure trials and persecutions; but many have stood by us in our trials, and we trust we appreciate it all. May the good Lord bless every one of them, is our humble prayer. We would be glad to be at your association, but at present we do not see how we can well be there. May the Lord shower down His richest blessings upon you and those dear to you, is our humble prayer. Please continue to pray for us. We are so poor and needy, and we need the prayers of all the Lord's faithful and true children. C. H. C.

Our Meeting

---March 6, 1930

Recently Brother Webb, or someone else, made the statement that there were six additions to our little church here in Thornton at our February meeting. We never thought, then, of the necessity of saying anything further about it. But since then we have thought perhaps some of our readers would like to know who they were and how they joined; so we will give you that information. They were Elder T. L. Webb and wife, Brother Whit Fowlkes and wife, and Brother E. B. Meeks and mother, Sister Mollie Meeks. They all joined by letter. We were all glad to have them cast their lot with us. The little band are all in peace, and the Lord is blessing us with some sweet and delightful meetings. Today is March 1, our regular conference meeting day. We have just been to meeting. Elders Webb and Harris (Elder John R. Harris) were both blessed to preach so sweetly and comfortingly to the Lord's dear children who were present. May the Lord be praised for such noble gifts, and may He help us to appreciate them as gifts from Him. C. H. C.

London Confession

For some little time we have thought we would write a few lines concerning the London Confession of Faith, as the Absoluters seem to be so free to quote a part of it in proof of the doctrine they advocate—that God did, from all eternity, absolutely and unconditionally decree, predestinate and unalterably fix everything that comes to pass, good, bad and indifferent. They always seem ready to quote section 1 of chapter 3, or a part of it, to try to prove that they are in line with those ancient Baptists and that those who do not accept their contention have departed from the faith. Let us here quote chapter 3, section 1: God hath decreed in Himself from all eternity, by the most wise and holy counsel of His own will, freely and unchangeably, all things whatsoever come to pass; yet so as thereby is God neither the author of sin nor hath fellowship with any therein, nor is violence offered to the will of the creature, nor yet is the liberty or contingency of second causes taken away, but rather established, in which appears His wisdom in disposing all things, and power and faithfulness in accomplishing His decree. Please note that in this statement the London Confession says, "Nor yet is the liberty or contingency of second causes taken away, but rather established," etc. The word "contingency" means contingent or conditional. It is bound to be true, then, since they used that expression right there in that very chapter and section, that they believed God predestinated or decreed some things on condition, or that it was contingent on something else. Do the Absoluters believe any of God's predestination was contingent, or that He predestinated to do a single thing on condition of anything else? No, indeed. They not only do not believe that, but they brand those who do believe it as being Arminians and as departing from the faith. Can we prove by the Bible that God has predestinated or decreed to do anything on condition? or that one thing He has predestinated is contingent on something else? Let us read ((9:30) (Psalms 89:30-31,32): If His children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments; then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Here we are told that God says He will visit their transgression with the rod and their iniquity with stripes. He has determined to do this. But did He so determine to thus chastise them unconditionally? He does not say so; but He says "if they forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments; then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes." He has determined to visit their transgression with the rod and their iniquity with stripes. He has not determined to thus chastise them, whether or no; but the chastising of them is contingent upon their disobedience-the forsaking of His law, walking not in His judgments, breaking His statutes, and keeping not His commandments. Thus it is clearly taught in God's inspired word that He has determined to do this on the contingency stated in the text itself. Let us read (John 14:21): He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. Gospel commandments are to God's regenerated children only, and are not to the unregenerate. Surely the Absoluters will not dispute this. They certainly will not deny, either, that some may have the love of God in their hearts and yet not obey the gospel. But those who love God and obey Him manifest that love by their obedience. They love Him in a manifest way. The Saviour here promised that He will love those who keep His commandments. This could not mean that He will love them in that way that He loved all His elect, for He loved them with an everlasting love; and that everlasting love of God is the very foundation of their final salvation and deliverance from all sin and its awful consequences, and is manifested to all the elect alike. This love, then, must be a love in a manifest sense. In order that they enjoy this manifest love of the Father and the Saviour it is necessary that they keep His commandments. Their enjoyment of this manifest love of God is contingent upon their keeping His commandments. God has so decreed it, and the Saviour clearly so teaches in this text, as well as in other places. Let us see what we find in ((9) (Isaiah 1:19-20)) is a text used by many in trying to prove that a child of God may be finally lost and go to eternal torment. If the text does prove that, it proves too much for them; and a text that proves too much is as bad as a text that proves nothing. Those who advocate the doctrine of the possibility of final apostasy tell us that if a child of God does fall away he can be renewed and get back into a saved state by repentance. Now, let us read that text and see just what it says and what it does teach. For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame.-(Hebrews 6:4-6). The text says, "For it is impossible * * * if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance." Thus we see that if the text proves that one may thus fall away, it also proves that it is impossible to renew such a one again; and it thereby proves too much for them. But does the text teach that a child of God may be finally lost? No; but it teaches the very opposite. "If they shall fall away" it is impossible "to renew them again unto repentance." Why? Because "they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame." That is, if they fall away, the Son of God would have to be crucified for them again; and He would thereby be put to an open shame. He died once for the purpose of saving them in glory, and if they fall away and fail to reach heaven, He would be put to an open shame and His work branded as a failure, and He would have to come back and die for them again. Will the blessed and holy Son of God be put to an open shame? Most emphatically, No. Then they shall not fall away; it is impossible, because He cannot be put to an open shame. Will He ever die again? He said, "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore." -(Revelation 1:18). As He is alive forevermore He will never die again, and therefore they shall not fall away and be finally lost. Again, the blessed Saviour said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." - (John 14:19). The reason why they shall live is that He lives. His living is the cause, and they live as the effect. In order that the effect cease, the cause must first cease; but this cause will never cease, because He is alive forevermore. It follows, therefore, that they shall live forevermore. They will live as long as Jesus lives. If Jesus never dies again, then they shall never die. Jesus said to Martha, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" This is the blessed and sure promise of the Lord of glory for His little ones. What a precious promise! How sweet that promise is to the poor pilgrim here. We feel like we have hardly got started with the subject, but our physical strength is giving way from the labors of the day, and we will have to stop for this time. Perhaps we can write some more on this subject next week. Remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Falling From Grace Article No. 2

Last week we promised to try to write some more on this subject this week. In order to try to keep that promise we now try to write a few lines. The idea that a child of God may so apostatize or fall away as to be finally lost would necessarily involve the idea that such a one must cease to be a child of God and become a child of Satan, or that such a child of God goes to eternal torment, or to eternal perdition, which is absurd in the very extreme. No act of a child can possibly cause that child to cease to be a child of its parents and to become the child of another. If one is a child of God, that one has been born of God; born from above; born of the heavenly parentage. God's children may be rebellious and disobedient, which they often are, but that does not sever the relationship. If disobedience and rebellion on the part of the child could possibly sever the relationship existing between parent and child, they could not do so in the case of God's children, because God has sworn that they shall endure (live) forever. Let us read ((9:26) (Psalms 89:26-36): He shall cry unto me, Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation. Also I will make him my first born, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments; then will I visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure forever, and his throne as the sun before me. In this text David is impersonating or representing Christ, the holy Son of God. God says He has sworn by His holiness that He will not lie unto David, or unto His Son; that His seed shall endure (live) forever. If a child of God, then, forsakes God's law, walks not in His judgments; if they break His statutes, and keep not His commandments-will they go to eternal torment on that account? They certainly will not, for God has sworn to His Son that they shall live forever, though they do thus rebel, and yet He will visit their transgressions with the rod and their iniquity with stripes. He has promised that He would chastise them for their disobedience; but He has sworn by His holiness that they shall endure, or live, forever. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." -(Titus 1:2). Here we are told that God cannot lie. As He cannot lie, certainly He could not swear a lie. As He could neither lie nor swear a lie; and as He has promised His Son that His children shall live forever, and then confirmed that promise with an oath, swearing by His holiness, then it is impossible that one of them ever be finally lost. They will certainly live with Him in eternal glory. If one of the Lord's children should ever sink down to eternal night, or go to eternal perdition, it would necessarily follow that God made a promise to His Son which failed of fulfillment, and that He swore falsely. No one can possibly believe God swore truthfully and at the same time believe that a child of God goes to eternal torment. Both cannot be believed at the same time, for the two things are diametrically opposed to each other. If one believes that a child of God may go to an eternal torment, he certainly does not believe the Bible. He may think he does, but he does not; for the Bible tells us that God has sworn that they shall live forever. Could a true and loving mother be satisfied and see her child suffering in torment here in this world? All know very well that she could not. A mother's love for her child is too strong and too tender and great for her to be satisfied and at the same time see her child suffer tortures and torment here. But God's love is greater and stronger than a mother's love. It is far beyond and far greater than any earthly tie. God's love is everlasting and as unchanging and enduring as Himself. God is love. Then how could the blessed Redeemer be satisfied and see one of His children, for whom He suffered, bled and died, suffering the tortures of an endless torment? Such a thought is but a thought that besmirches the very character of that holy and lovely and heavenly Being. "He shall see of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." -(3:11) (Isaiah 53:11). Isaiah was here prophesying of the work of the Son of God, and tells us that He shall "see of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." As He could not be satisfied and see one of the objects of His eternal love suffering the torments of an endless hell, then they shall never sink down to that place of torment. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." - ((3:6) (Isaiah 53:6)). The iniquity of all those people who were His was laid on the Son of God. As all their iniquity was laid on Him, and He put away their sins by the sacrifice of Himself, then sin or iniquity cannot cause one of them to go to eternal torment. The Father certainly will not demand payment of a debt of them which has been paid for them by His holy and spotless Son. What blessed assurances are to be found in the precious old Book for the Lord's dear children who are strangers and pilgrims here. There are troubles and trials and conflicts for them here in this low ground of sin and sorrow; but everlasting joy is in store for them when the troubles and distresses of this life are all over. These blessed assurances comfort and strengthen and encourage us here amidst all our trials and afflictions. We will try to write some more on this subject later on- perhaps next week. C. H. C.

Deacons Ordained

---April 24, 1930

Zion's Rest Church, near Jonesboro, La., requested Cane Creek Church, Thornton, Ark., to send or grant her ordained help to go there for the purpose of helping to ordain two brethren (Irvin Canady and Jesse Swanner) to the office of deacon. Our church (Cane Creek) granted the request. Elder Harris had an appointment elsewhere, so that he could not go, but we went along with Elder Webb. Elder Webb's wife and Sister Cloud went with us to be at the meeting, which was last Saturday and Sunday-the third Sunday in April and Saturday before. We were a little late getting there, the distance being 150 miles, and Elder C. M. Monk, the pastor, was preaching when we arrived. Then Elder Webb preached a sweet and comforting discourse, after which the church sat in conference and agreed to attend to the ordination after recess for lunch. They had dinner spread and all were well fed with the temporal things, after which the congregation assembled again in the house. Then the writer and Elders Webb and Monk and Deacons J. L. McBride and J. M. Wiggins formed themselves into a presbytery and proceeded to set the brethren apart to the office of deacon by prayer and laying on of hands. We had meeting again that night and Sunday. Surely the Lord manifested His sweet presence, and it was an enjoyable meeting. May the good Lord continue His blessings upon them, is our prayer. C. H. Falling From Grace Article No. 3

Last week we promised to try to write some more on the subject of falling from grace, perhaps this week. So we will try to write a few more lines on that question. For the beginning of this article on the subject we will read ((4:9) (Isaiah 54:9-10)). For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee. In this language we have, two covenants brought to our attention. The first one is the covenant God made with Noah and all flesh that He would never again destroy the earth by water, and the other is the covenant of His peace; and one is as the other. The covenant of His peace is as the covenant with Noah; for this is as that. If it is possible for a child of God to so apostatize as to be finally lost, then his final salvation in heaven would depend upon his faithfulness and right living here in the world. If his final salvation in heaven depends upon that, then the covenant of God's peace mentioned in this text would be a conditional covenant, and would depend upon their good deeds or faithfulness for its fulfillment. If the covenant of His peace is thus conditional, then His covenant with Noah that He would never again destroy the earth by water was conditional; for the covenant of His peace is as that covenant with Noah. Was the covenant with Noah a conditional one? Let us read it and see. And God spoke unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying, And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you; and with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle, and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark, to every beast of the earth. And I will establish my covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth. And God said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between me and you and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations: I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth. And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud: and I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh. And the bow shall be in the cloud; and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant, which I have established between me and all flesh that is upon the earth.- (Genesis 9:8-17). This is the covenant which God made with Noah and all flesh that the earth should never again be destroyed by water-that there should never be another flood. Does that covenant depend upon the obedience or faithfulness of any human being on earth for its fulfillment? Most assuredly not. If it had depended upon the righteousness or obedience of mankind for its fulfillment, we know there would have been another flood long before this time. But upon what, then, does it depend for its fulfillment? It depends alone upon the faithfulness of God and His power to fulfill every promise He has made. The Lord put the bow in the cloud as a token of that covenant. Did He place it there so the people could see it and remember the covenant? No; but He said, "I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth." As long and as often as we see the bow in the cloud we know that God remembers that covenant, and that there will not be another flood. There will never be another flood, whether we remember the covenant or not. The fulfillment of that covenant does not depend upon us remembering it. God remembers the covenant which He made, and the apostle says that "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord." -(I Corinthians 1:9). Since God is faithful, He will fulfill the promise He made in the covenant with Noah and all flesh, and there will never be another flood.

Now, the covenant of His peace is like that, for He says, "This is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee nor rebuke thee." The Lord swore to the one just as He did to the other. The one is like the other. And this refers to the covenant of His peace, and He says "neither shall it be removed." This covenant depends, then, upon the faithfulness and power of God for its fulfillment, and does not depend upon the faithfulness and righteousness of men and women for that. As the covenant of His peace is like the covenant with Noah, and the covenant with Noah was an unconditional one, then the covenant of His peace is also unconditional. As it is unconditional, and does not depend upon the obedience of the creature for fulfillment, then not one embraced in that covenant will ever sink down to eternal night. God has sworn in that covenant that "I will not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee." In that covenant He has also sworn that "my kindness shall not depart from thee." What glorious and blessed assurance to the poor trembling pilgrim that eternal peace and unsullied bliss and glory is his to enjoy beyond the sorrows and dark scenes of this life. May these blessed truths comfort your hearts in all your sad trials and distresses. We may write some more yet on this subject-perhaps next week. C. H. C.

Last week we said we might write some more on this question, perhaps this week. So we will try to write a few more lines concerning the final preservation of the saints. Last week we wrote about the covenant of God's peace, as mentioned in ((4:9) (Isaiah 54:9-10)), in connection with God's covenant with Noah and all flesh, which is referred to in this text. In ((4:7) (Isaiah 54:7-8)) we have this language: "For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer." Following this language is the language used in the beginning of our article last week, "For this is as the waters of Noah unto me," etc. Taking all these verses together it is very clear that the language in verses 7 and 8 and the sweet and sure promises contained therein are to the same persons embraced in ((4:9) (Isaiah 54:9-10), the same persons embraced in the covenant of His peace. Those persons are the Lord's little children, who are on their pilgrimage here below. "For a small moment have I forsaken thee." When the poor little child of God here in this world of trouble feels and realizes that he is forsaken of the Lord, all is dark and gloomy then. They forsake the Lord's way sometimes, turn from His sweet service, forget His mercies and kindnesses; then "for a small moment" the Lord forsakes them; "in a little wrath" He hides His face from them for a moment. But it seems like a long time. When the Lord's face is hid, turned from the little child of grace, all is dark and gloomy then. It is a night season with him, and it is not a night of rest, either. There is no peace or rest enjoyed; but he is restless and disturbed, and it seems to him that day will never dawn again. He then begins to inquire, in deep sorrow and trouble, as David did, "Will the Lord cast off forever? and will He be favourable no more? Is His mercy clean gone forever? doth His promise fail forevermore? Hath God forgotten to be gracious? Hath He in anger shut up His tender mercies?" -((7:7) (Psalms 77:7-8,9). In such dark seasons as this, which the Lord's dear children pass through in their journey here below, it seems to them that they are cast off forever; it seems that they can no more enjoy the Lord's divine favor; it appears to them that His mercy is clean gone forever. They feel then that the Lord's gracious and sure and glorious promise does not embrace them. They feel that theirs is an "outside case;" that they are not embraced in the promise of God; that so far as they are concerned the whole matter is a failure. They feel that God will be gracious to them no more; that in His anger with them on account of their great sinfulness He has shut up His tender mercies. What despair! What distress is theirs during these dark hours! How dark is the night, and how long the night seems to be! But the night finally passes and the glorious day dawns again. "The darkest hour is just before day." That darkest hour finally passes, and the glorious and heavenly sunshine of the Lord's blessed manifest presence appears again in all the heavenly glory and sweetness of His sure promise, "but with great mercies will I gather thee;" "but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer." What joy then fills the soul! What peace! What content! What reconciliation! What trust in our Redeemer! Though the way is so rough and rugged here in this sinful world, yet here is God's promise, and that promise confirmed by an oath, in which oath He has sworn by Himself. To argue that this promise will not be fulfilled is to argue that the Lord of glory has not only told a lie but that He has perjured Himself by swearing falsely. If one of His little ones sinks down to eternal night, then God has sworn a lie. Would you rather believe that God swore a lie than to believe in the final preservation of the saints? If you sometimes pass through these dark and gloomy nights, it is but a sure evidence of the fact that you are a child of grace—a child of God; you have the spiritual life. If you did not have that life, you could never feel and realize the darkness; neither could you feel or realize and enjoy the sweetness of the manifestation of the Lord's heavenly presence. In ((4:17) (Isaiah 54:17) we have this language: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." What a glorious promise and assurance for the Lord's poor little children here, where they are surrounded by so many temptations, and where the enemies are so thick and so numerous, and where Satan is continually near, and all his emissaries, with their fiery darts hurling at them. "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." The eternal God Himself will take care of the situation; and He will take care of you. "This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord." This is their heritage, and all the demons of the under world cannot prevent them receiving that inheritance. The Lord Himself is pledged to see that they receive it. "Their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." They have no righteousness of their own, and they realize that fact. They mourn and grieve on account of their unrighteousness, but when they are enabled to realize and to have the assurance that their righteousness is of the Lord, it gives them joy and comfort. "The Lord" is "our righteousness." The Lord Jesus is made unto them "righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." -(I Corinthians 1:30). His righteousness is sufficient. Being clothed with His righteousness they shall be landed safely on the sunny shores of sweet deliverance, and shall dwell forever in the presence of God in glory. Blessed assurance. Hold up your bowed down heads; your sorrows will all end some day, and eternal peace is yours in a better world than this. We may write some more on this same question-perhaps again next week. Remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

---May 15, 1930

We promised last week that we would try to write some more on this question. So we will try to write a few more lines this week. This time we will start with the language of the Saviour recorded in (John 10:27-28,29), which reads as follows: My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. In this text there are some people whom the Saviour designates as His sheep. In (John 10:26) He said to some of the Jews, "But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you." Some of the people were His sheep and some were not. Those the Saviour designates as His sheep hear His voice. In (John 5:25) the Saviour said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." Those who hear His voice and live are those He calls His sheep. They were His because the Father gave them to Him." My Father, which gave them me." The Father gave them to His Son for a possession; and the Saviour, by the power of His Holy Spirit, speaks to them and makes them alive from a state of death in sin. They are thus made alive in Christ." I give unto them eternal life." How can anything die that has eternal life? If one dies a physical or corporeal death, does not the natural life of that person cease, or come to an end? If the natural life was an eternal life, could one die naturally? Would, or could, the natural life ever end, if it was an eternal life? It is absurd to say that it could. But this life which Jesus here says He gives to His people is eternal life. That life is a never ending life. As the life is never ending, their final salvation in heaven is sure. There can be no such thing as one perishing in eternal torment to whom this life has been given. Not only is this true, but the blessed Saviour most emphatically says "they shall never perish." Never means not ever; not at any time; at no time, whether past, present, or future. As "they shall never perish," when will one of them ever perish? The Saviour says not ever. As "they shall never perish," at what time may one of them perish? The Saviour says not at any time. As "they shall never perish," we repeat the question, at what time may one of them perish? The Saviour says at no time, whether past, present, or future. If at no time, whether past, present, or future, one of them shall ever perish, then it is certain that not one of the Lord's children will ever fail to finally enter heaven and eternal glory. We remember one time in public discussion with a gentleman that he said, "If the doctrine you preach- the final preservation of the saints-be true, the devil is the biggest fool ever heard tell of. If he could not get one of the Lord's children, after trying all these years to get one, he would have found out that he could not get one, and would quit trying, if he were not the biggest fool ever heard tell of." We replied by saying that we always liked to agree with a man when we can, and that we would agree with the gentleman that the devil is the biggest fool ever heard tell of, as is proven by the fact that he cannot get one of the Lord's children, and yet he keeps on trying; but, lo, it seems that the devil is not the only fool in the world, for here is another fellow who has not found this out, either. But we (Old Baptists) have found out better. We have learned that the Saviour told the truth when He said, "They shall never perish." Right here we wish to give three Scriptural propositions. First. Jesus prays for His people according to the Father's will. Second. The Father's will is that He should lose nothing. Third. The Father always hears Him. The first, above, is the first premise in the proposition. Let us prove that first premise. (7) (Romans 8:27) "And He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." The saints are the children of God, and the Saviour prays for them according to the Father's will. The second premise is that the Father's will is that the Son should lose nothing. Let us prove that. (John 6:38-39) "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which He hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day." Those the Father gave to the Son are His people, His children; and the Father's will is that not one of them be lost, but that they be raised up again at the last day. The next proposition is that the Father always hears the prayer of His Son. He always hears the Saviour's prayer. Now let us prove that. (John 11:41-42) "And they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up His eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me." The word hearest (or hear) in this text must be in the sense of "to give audience or attention to; to listen to; to heed; to accede to the demand or wishes of; to listen to and answer favorably." This clearly shows that the Father always favorably answers the prayer of His Son. There is not a man in all this wide world who can make it appear that one of the Lord's little children will ever sink down in eternal torment and let these three Scriptural propositions remain true. Here they are again: Jesus prays for His people according to the Father's will. The Father's will is that the Son should lose nothing the Father gave Him. The Father always hears the Son. It follows, therefore, inevitably and certainly, that every child of grace will ultimately be saved in glory. Blessed assurance! Jesus, our loving Saviour, prays for His little ones. Dear child, you often ask those you believe to be God's children to pray for you. They may not know when you need their prayers. But your loving Saviour knows when you are in trouble, in sorrow, in distress, in soul afflictions, when the tempter is near and trying you; and as He prays for you, and knows when you need His prayers, He certainly prays for you when you are in such troubles; and the Father always answers Him favorably-always grants His request. May these sweet and precious truths comfort your poor heart in your sad distresses, is our humble prayer. Pray for us. We may try to write some more on this question, perhaps again next week. C. H. ---May 22, 1930

We promised again last week that we would try to write some more on this question this week. This week we will begin with a text that is sometimes used to try to prove that a child of God may so fall away as to be finally lost. That text is (Galatians 5:4), but we want to quote beginning with (verse 1): Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing. For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law. Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace. If the text here quoted teaches that a child of God may perish in eternal torment, then it contradicts the language of the Saviour used in our article last week, recorded in (John 10:28) "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish." Does the inspired apostle contradict the plain statement of the Son of God? Did the Lord Himself make this plain, positive and unequivocal statement, and then inspire His apostle to write something which contradicts that statement which He had Himself made? Unless the Lord has done this, then the language in (Galatians 5:4) cannot possibly teach that a child of God can be finally lost, or that a child of God may finally land in eternal torment. For one to prove that Paul meant to teach such a thing in this text, he must first prove that the Son of God told a falsehood in the statement above quoted, or that He was mistaken in what He said. Does Paul contradict the teaching, or the plain statement, of the Saviour? Certainly not. Then he does not teach that a child of God may perish in torment, or be finally lost in eternal perdition. Then what is the teaching of the apostle in this text? In the preceding chapter he is treating of the difference between the law service and gospel service. He calls attention to the bondwoman and the freewoman. He says: {(Galatians 4:21-26)} Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law? For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a freewoman. But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise. Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all. This shows very clearly that the apostle had been treating in chapter four of the two covenants, and that Agar represented the law covenant, and he plainly says that the child of Agar was born after the flesh; and that covenant was a covenant of works. Isaac was the son of the freewoman, who represented the new covenant, or the covenant of grace, and he was a child of promise. "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." -(Galatians 4:28). This clearly teaches that the children of Jerusalem, the new covenant, the children of God, are children of promise. The old covenant, or law service, with all its rites and ceremonies, has been done away. The law service served its purpose; but when Christ came it was all fulfilled in Him, and was then done away. "Nevertheless what saith the Scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman." -(Galatians 4:30). Some Judaizing teacher had been among the Galatian brethren and had taught them that they must be circumcised and keep the law in order to be saved-that they could not reach heaven without this. That was a false doctrine which they had imbibed from some false teacher. By embracing that doctrine they had departed from the doctrine of grace. The doctrine of grace, as taught by the Lord and His inspired apostles, is that sinners are saved in heaven, prepared for the service of God here, and prepared and qualified to live with God in heaven, alone by His grace, without works of any kind. "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began." -(II Timothy 1:9). The Galatians had departed from that doctrine of grace; and in that way they had fallen from grace. They had not fallen from eternal life. They had not ceased to be the children of God. The apostle declares them to be the children of promise in (Galatians 4:28), and being the children of promise they were children of God, and God's children "shall never perish," though they depart from the doctrine of grace. There are many children of God who are taught a false doctrine and made to believe the same here in this world; but believing a false doctrine does not cause one to cease to be a child of God. Suppose Mr. Smith is the father of a boy we will call John, and suppose John has been taught that Mr. Jones is his father, and John believes that. Does that make John become a son of Mr. Jones? Does it cause John to cease to be the son of Mr. Smith? Any sensible person knows that it does not. Neither does it cause one to cease to be a child of God and become a child of Satan because he has been led to believe something that is not true. Those Galatian brethren had been led to believe that they were justified by the works of the law, and in turning from the doctrine of grace and believing in the doctrine of works in order to eternal life, they fell from grace. The old law worship and service had been done away, and these Galatian brethren had been taught the truth of gospel worship and service, and for a time had rejoiced in the same. In verse 1 the apostle admonishes them to stand fast in the glorious liberty of gospel worship and service, and to be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage-the bondage of law worship and service. To be entangled in law worship and service is to discard the work of the blessed Son of God. If we have to observe the rites and ceremonies of law service in order to be saved in heaven, then the death of Christ accomplished nothing-it was wholly unnecessary. We could be saved in heaven by observing the law just as well without the death of Christ as with it. That doctrine utterly denies the work of Christ. It utterly denies the doctrine of grace. God's children may, and sometimes do, deny the Lord and His doctrine, and thus, after having believed the truth, fall from grace and from their steadfastness. When they do that the Lord denies them the blessings He has promised His faithful and obedient children. Though He does this, "If we believe not, yet He abideth faithful: He cannot deny Himself." -(II Timothy 2:13). For a child of God to perish in eternal torment the Saviour would have to deny Himself; He would be compelled to deny the efficacy of His work; and this He cannot do. Therefore, a child of God cannot perish in eternal torment. This truth will stand through all ages. What we desire and need is the evidence, the assurance, that we are a child of God. Sometimes the evidences that are laid down in God's word (or some of them) are a sweet comfort and consolation to us; and we are glad of the assurance that though we should be deceived by some false teacher and led by him to believe a false doctrine, yet the Lord will not-cannot-deny Himself; and though we should lose the comfort here that may be enjoyed in believing the truth, yet we shall not lose the joys of the heavenly world and the glory of that heavenly home. This is a consolation and comfort to us. The doctrine of God our Saviour is comforting and consoling to the Lord's children here. Truth makes them free. Truth consoles them in trials and temptations. There is no comfort or consolation to them in the thought that they are liable to fall away and sink down in eternal ruin and despair at last. Therefore, that doctrine is not the doctrine of God. It is not the truth. The old servant of God was commanded thus: "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins." -(0:1) (Isaiah 40:1-2). To tell the Lord's little children, who feel and realize their poverty and their utter dependence upon the Lord for His mercy and grace every day and every hour, that they may so fall away as to be eternally lost at last is no comfort to them. Therefore, one who speaks that way does not speak as the Lord commanded. May the Lord bless the thoughts here given to the comfort and encouragement and consolation of our readers, is our humble prayer. We may try to write some more on this subject next week. Pray the Lord to be with and direct us. C. H. C.

Falling From Grace Article No. 7

---May 29, 1930

We promised again last week that we would try to write some more this week on falling from grace. So we will try to write a few more lines on the subject. This week we will begin with Jude 1, which reads as follows: Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called. In this text we find that Jude, the inspired writer, was addressing his short letter to "them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called." It was the work of God the Father to sanctify them. To sanctify means to make free from sin; to cleanse from moral corruption and pollution; to purify; to make sacred or holy; to set apart to a holy or religious use, etc. It was the work of the Father to set them apart to a holy or religious use. The Father had chosen them, and set them apart to salvation, or to be saved. Sanctification is "the act or process of God's grace by which the affections of men are purified, or alienated from sin and the world, and exalted to a supreme love to God," etc.-Webster. It was the act or process of God's grace by which they were sanctified. God did that work by His grace. The Father had chosen them to salvation, and set them apart to that end; and by His own act in giving them the divine life, He had planted in their hearts a love for Him. Thus they had been sanctified, set apart, exalted to that high state or condition, in which they were brought to hate sin and to love God and holiness. These people were not only thus sanctified, but they were "preserved in Jesus Christ." To preserve is "to keep or save from injury or destruction; to guard or defend from evil; to protect; save; to save from decay by the use of some preservative substance, as sugar, salt, etc.;-to prepare so as to prevent decomposition or fermentation, as by seasoning, canning, etc." -Webster. As these people were preserved in Jesus Christ, they are kept from injury. If they are kept from injury, how could they sink down to eternal night? If one should sink down to eternal night, would he be kept from injury? Would it be an injury for one to sink down to eternal ruin? If it would be an injury for one to sink down to eternal ruin, and if they are kept from injury, then they are kept from sinking down to eternal ruin. They (the Lord's children) are kept from destruction, as to preserve is to keep from destruction. As they are kept from destruction, then they are kept from sinking down to eternal ruin. The inspired writer says they are preserved in Jesus Christ. Did he tell the truth? If he did tell the truth, then how can one of God's children ever be lost in eternal torment, or everlasting destruction, seeing he says they are preserved, and being preserved is being kept from destruction? No man on earth can ever show that one of God's little children will sink down in eternal ruin without first proving that the inspired writer did not here tell the truth. We are inclined to think this would be hard to do. They are not kept from destruction by their own power, nor by the power of the preacher, nor by the power of the church, nor by the power of any set of men, nor by the power of any institution on earth. They are kept by the power of God. See ((Pet 1:5) (I Peter 1:5)). God has the power to keep them, and does keep them from destruction. He keeps them through all the trials and conflicts of this life unto salvation. He keeps them "ready to be revealed in the last time." Since they are kept by the power of God unto salvation, and He has the power to keep them, then not one of them will sink down in eternal ruin. As God has the power to keep them, and He does keep them ready to be revealed in the last time, then they will all finally be saved in heaven.

As to preserve is to save from destruction, and the Lord's children are preserved, then they are all saved from destruction. Not one of them, then, will ever be destroyed in an eternal hell. They will never sink down in everlasting destruction. They are saved from that by the Lord Himself, the inspired writer having told the truth. To preserve is to guard or defend from evil. The Lord Himself guards them and defends them from evil. Satan may tempt and torment them; but the Lord guards them; He defends them. If one of them is ever lost, it must be because the Lord is not able to defend them against Satan, the great enemy of their souls. But the Lord is able to defend them. As He is able to defend them, and does defend them, because He preserves them, then they are securely and effectually protected, defended, from the vicious attacks of their greatest enemy. Being thus defended it is impossible that one of them sink down in everlasting ruin. To preserve is to save from decay. As they are preserved by the Lord, then the Lord saves them from decay. Since they are saved from decay by the Lord of glory, then not one of them can ever perish in eternal torment. All the rottenness and decay that might be or can be caused by sin will be removed from them. They shall be finally made whole, without spot or wrinkle. They are saved by the Lord, and kept from the awful results and consequences of sin. They are preserved; they are kept from decay. They will all finally live with God and Christ in eternal glory. To be preserved is to be kept from decay by the use of some preservative substance. They are kept from decay by the use of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit has taken up His abode in their hearts. The Holy Spirit is a sure preserving substance, and by Him they are kept from ruin and decay. The love of God is shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Ghost. The love of God is a sure preserving substance. By it they are kept from decay unto eternal glory. Sometimes the sisters say, "I lost my preserves;" or, "my preserves spoiled." That is a mistake. Perhaps they lost their fruit; perhaps their fruit spoiled. Why did the fruit spoil? Because they did not have it preserved. They had tried to preserve the fruit; they thought they had the fruit preserved, but they were mistaken. The Lord is never mistaken. He never has thought He had one preserved and was mistaken about it. If He has thought He had one preserved, it was sure that way, for "as I have thought, so shall it come to pass." He is never mistaken; He never makes a mistake. If the good sister had preserved the fruit it would not have spoiled. The Lord has preserved, and does preserve, His people; hence they do not spoil. They will not sink down in eternal ruin. To preserve is to prepare so as to prevent decomposition. The Lord's people are preserved in Jesus Christ. They are so prepared by the Lord for final salvation as that they are prevented from decomposition. As they are so prepared as to prevent decomposition, then they will never be decomposed-they will never decompose. As they will never decompose-having been so prepared as to prevent decomposition-they will never be finally lost. Not one of them can ever sink down into eternal night. They cannot so fall away as to be finally lost. In order that one of God's children so fall away as to be finally lost, he would have to decompose; he would have to decay. But they are preserved-kept from decomposition or decay. Therefore, they are kept from finally falling away and being lost. They are not only preserved, but they are "preserved in Jesus Christ." The sister may have her fruit preserved; but she may have it in a vessel that may be broken. If the vessel should be broken, then her preserved fruit is lost. But Jesus Christ will never be broken or destroyed, and God's children are preserved in Him. Since they are preserved in Him, then not one of them can be lost-unless they are cast out of Him. But Jesus has said that "him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." That is, he shall not, in any case, under no circumstance, be cast out. They are in the hands of Jesus and in the hands of the Father. No one is able to pluck them out of the hand of Jesus, and no one is able to pluck them out of the hand of the Father. See (John 10:28-29). Since they are preserved in Jesus Christ, and shall, under no consideration, be cast out, and no one is able to pluck them out, then they cannot possibly be finally lost. How safe and secure the Lord's dear children are! The storms of persecution may rage; sorrow may sweep down over the soul like billows; temptations may assail them on every hand; poverty and distress may be their portion here in this world of sadness and sin; all the powers of darkness and the demons of the under world may be arrayed against them; but they are still safe and secure, for they are "preserved in Jesus Christ." He is the anointed Saviour. He was anointed to save them, and He saves them. The angel of His presence saves them. Lift up your heads; take comfort in the sweet assurance that your troubles and sorrows will soon end, and eternal joys will soon be yours. We will try to write some more on this question some time-perhaps next week. C. H. C.

Marrying After Divorce In Case Of Adultery

---June 5, 1930

John Owen was born in 1616, and died August 24, 1683. He was an able and eminent minister, and wrote many different works. We copy the following article from "The Works of John Owen," Volume 16, page 254, under the above heading. It is just what the Primitive Baptists have always believed on this question. C. H. C.
THE ARTICLE

It is confessed by all that adultery is a just and sufficient cause of a divorce betwixt married persons. This divorce, say some, consists in a dissolution "vinculi matrimonialis," (of the bonds of matrimony) and so removes the marriage relation as that the innocent person divorcing or procuring the divorce is at liberty to marry again. Others say it is only a separation "a mensa et thoro," (separation from bed and board-not free to marry another) and that on this account it doth not nor ought to dissolve the marriage relation. I am of the judgment of the former; for, First, This divorce "a mensa et thoro," (separation from bed and board) only is no true divorce, but a mere fiction of a divorce, of no use in this case, nor lawful to be made use of, neither by the law of nature nor the law of God; for-

1. It is, as stated, but a late invention, of no use in the world, nor known in more ancient times: for those of the Roman church who assert it do grant that divorces by the law of nature were "a vinculo," (absolute divorce) and that so they were also under the Old Testament; and this Action they would impose on the grace and state of the gospel, which yet makes indeed no alteration in moral relations and duties, but only directs their performance.
2. It is deduced from a fiction,-namely, that marriage among Christians is a sacrament of that signification as renders it indissoluble; and therefore they would have it to take place only amongst believers, the rest of mankind being left to their natural right and privilege. But this is a fiction, and as such in sundry cases they make use of it. Secondly, A divorce perpetual "a mensa et thoro" (separation from bed and board) only is no way useful to mankind, but hurtful and noxious; for,
 1. It would constitute a new condition or state of life, wherein it is not possible that a man should either have a wife, or not have a wife lawfully, in one of which estates yet really every man capable of the state of wedlock is and must be, whether he will or no; for a man may, as things may be circumstantiated, be absolutely bound in conscience not to receive her again who was justly repudiated for adultery, nor can he take another on this divorce. But into this estate God calls no man.

2. It may, and probably will, cast a man under a necessity of sinning: for suppose he hath not the gift of continency, it is the express will of God that he should marry for his relief; yet on this supposition, he sins if he does so, and in that he sins if he doeth not so. Thirdly, It is unlawful; for if the bond of marriage abide, the relation still continues. This relation is the foundation of all mutual duties; and whilst all that continues, none can dispense with or prohibit from the performance of those duties. If a woman do continue in the relation of a wife to a man, she may claim the duties of marriage from him. Separation there may be by consent for a season, or upon other occasions, that may hinder the actual discharge of conjugal duties; but to make an obligation unto such duties void, whilst the relation doth continue, is against the law of nature and the law of God. This divorce, therefore, supposing the relation of man and wife between any, and no mutual duty thence to arise, is unlawful. Fourthly, The light of nature never directed to this kind of divorce. Marriage is an ordinance of the law of nature; but in the light and reason thereof there is no intimation of any such practice. It is still directed that they who might justly put away their wives might marry others. Hence some, as the ancient Grecians, and the Romans afterward, allowed the husband to kill the adulteress. This among the Romans was changed "lege Julia," (in law of Julian) but the offense was still made capital. In the room hereof, afterward, divorce took place purposely to give the innocent person liberty of marriage. So that this kind of divorce is but a fiction. The first opinion, therefore, is according to truth; for, First, That which dissolves the form of marriage and destroys all the forms of marriage doth dissolve the bond of marriage; for take away the form and end of any moral relation, and the relation itself ceaseth. But this is done by adultery, and a divorce ensuing thereon. For the form of marriage consisteth in this, that two become "one flesh," (Genesis 2:24); (Matthew 19:6),-but this is dissolved by adultery; for the adulteress becometh one flesh with the adulterer, (I Corinthians 6:16), and no longer one flesh in individual society with her husband, and so it absolutely breaks the bond or covenant of marriage. And how can men contend that is a bond which is absolutely broken, or fancy a "vinculum" (bond) that doth not bind? and that it absolutely destroys all the forms of marriage will be granted. It therefore dissolves the bond of marriage itself. Secondly, If the innocent party upon a divorce be not set at liberty, then,-
 1. He is deprived of his right by the sin of another; which is against the law of nature;-and so every wicked woman hath it in her power to deprive her husband of his natural right.
 2. The divorce in case of adultery, pointed by our Saviour to the innocent person to make use of, is, as all confess, for his liberty, advantage, and relief. But on supposition that he may not marry, it would prove a snare and a yoke unto him; for if hereon he hath not the gift of continency, he is exposed to sin and judgment. Thirdly, Our blessed Saviour gives express direction in the case, (Matthew 19:9) "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery." Hence it is evident, and is the plain sense of the words, that he who putteth away his wife for fornication and marrieth another doth not commit adultery. Therefore the bond of marriage in that case is dissolved, and the person that put away his wife is at liberty to marry. While He denies putting away and marrying again for every cause, the exception of fornication allows both putting away and marrying again in that case; for an exception always affirms the contrary unto what is denied in the rule whereunto it is an exception, or denies what is affirmed in it in the case comprised in the exception; for every exception is a particular proposition contradictory to the general rule, so that when the one is affirmative, the other is negative, and on the contrary. The rule here in general is affirmative: He that putteth away his wife and marries another committeth adultery. The exception is negative: But he that putteth away his wife for fornication and marrieth another doth not commit adultery. Or they may be otherwise conceived, so that the general rule shall be negative, and the exception affirmative: It is not lawful to put away a wife and marry another; it is adultery. Then the exception is: It is lawful for a man to put away his wife for fornication, and marry another. And this is the nature of all such exceptions, as I could manifest in instances of all sorts.

It is to no purpose to except that the other evangelists {((0:11) (Mark 10:11-12); (Luke 16:18)} do not express the exception insisted on; for,-

1. It is twice used by Matthew, chap. x. 32 and chap. xix. 9, (((0:32) (Matthew 10:32); (19:9)) and therefore was assuredly used by our Saviour.
2. It is a rule owned by all, that where the same thing is reported by several evangelists, the briefer, short, more imperfect expressions, are to be measured and interpreted by the fuller and larger. And every general rule in any place is to be limited by an exception annexed unto it in any one place whatever; and there is scarce any general rule admitteth of an exception. It is more vain to answer that our Saviour speaketh with respect unto the Jews only, and what was not allowed among them; for,-
 1. In this answer He reduces things to the law of creation and their primitive institution. He declares what was the law of marriage and the nature of that relation antecedent to the law and institution of Moses; and so, reducing things to the law of nature, gives a rule directive to all mankind in this matter.
 2. The Pharisees inquired of our Saviour about such a divorce as was absolute, and gave liberty of marriage after it; for they never heard of any other. The pretended separation "a mensa et thoro" only was never heard of in the Old Testament. Now, if our Saviour doth not answer concerning the same divorce about which they inquired, but another which they knew nothing of, He doth not answer them, but delude them;-they ask after one thing, and He answers another in nothing to their purpose. But this is not to be admitted; it were blasphemy to imagine it. Wherefore, denying the causes of divorce which they allowed, and asserting fornication to be a just cause thereof, He allows, in that case, of that divorce which they inquired about, which was absolute and from the bond of marriage.

Falling From Grace Article No. 8

We promised again last week that we would write some more on this subject, perhaps this week. So we will try to write a few lines more. This week we will begin by reading (Hebrews 6:13-20): For when God made promise to Abraham, because He could swear by no greater, He sware by Himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee. And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise. For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of His counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us: which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. In this promise to Abraham, which Paul here referred to, God said, "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." - (Genesis 22:18). And "in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." This is a promise which the Lord confirmed by an oath. As He could swear by no greater, He swore by Himself that He would fulfill the promise. This promise embraces and includes every heir of promise. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." -(Galatians 3:29). If you are a child of God, "If ye be Christ's," then you are one of the promised children, embraced in the promise God made to Abraham. Men always swear by the greater. A man placed on the witness stand is requested to hold up his hand and the person authorized to administer the oath will say, "Do you solemnly swear or affirm that you will tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, in this case, so help you God?" He does not say, "So help you, yourself." But "So help you God." Thus the man swears by the greater. If a person in whom you have confidence-you do not believe he would tell a lie, much less swear a lie-is put on the witness stand, and he testifies under oath that a certain thing is a certain way, you would believe it was that way. That would settle the matter with you. That would be an end of all strife with you. You would be confident the matter was just as the witness stated. That witness might be one who would not lie, but no man is a witness that cannot lie. In this case brought to our attention in our text the one making the promise and who confirmed it by an oath is one who cannot lie-much less swear a lie. Men can, and do, swear by one greater than themselves. But God could not swear by one greater than Himself. Here are two things God cannot do-He cannot lie, and He cannot swear by one greater than Himself. These are the two immutable things. These two things have stood through all the past ages, and will stand to all eternity. They are always the same. As God could not swear by one greater than Himself, because He is the greatest of all beings, then He swears by Himself. What for? That the heirs of promise, His children, might have strong consolation. That they may have double assurance of the certainty of the eternal joys and happiness of every little child of God. There could not possibly be any consolation in the thought that one of the Lord's children may fall away so as to be finally lost-that one of them might sink down into eternal night, or everlasting perdition. Such a thought would be anything else but consoling. Suppose you could have the certain and sure knowledge that you are a child of God today, but also be assured that you may at last sink down in eternal ruin and despair- could that possibly be any consolation to you? Would it not rather be a terror and a matter of distress and dread to you? But it is not the truth. God has sworn by Himself that He will remember every heir of promise. He has given His oath that you may have strong consolation. Christ is formed in His children the hope of glory. The anointed Saviour is the only hope of heaven and immortal glory for His little children. The hope of the Christian, the child of God, "entereth into that within the veil; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus." Jesus is their hope, and that hope is entered within the veil. This hope is an anchor of the soul. This anchor is entered upward, "into that within the veil." This anchor is both sure and steadfast. The vessels that sail over the seas, on the mighty deep, all have anchors. Those anchors enter downward; but this one is entered upward. In time of storm those anchors are cast and go down deep into the sea. As long as the anchor remains steadfast, or sure, the vessel is secure and all the passengers on board the vessel are safe. If the anchor is sure and steadfast it will not give way. Sometimes those anchors give way. When they do give way, it only proves that they were not sure and steadfast. But this anchor is both sure and steadfast. The word sure means "admitting of no doubt, condition, qualification, or the like; indubitable; positive; - said of things; as, sure evidence; a sure success. Entirely trustworthy or dependable; certain not to fail or disappoint expectation." - Webster. This blessed hope is entirely trustworthy; it is dependable. What are you hoping for, dear child of God? Are you not hoping for a better home, a better place, beyond this life, beyond death, beyond the grave? Yes; the hope of the poor little child of God reaches out beyond death and beyond the grave. He is looking beyond these to a better home, a better country-hoping for that. Blessed hope! This hope is entirely trustworthy; it is entirely dependable. It is certain not to fail or disappoint of expectation. There is no doubt about that. If a thing is sure it admits of no doubt; and the apostle says this hope is an anchor that is sure. The safety of the little vessel that is now sailing on the boisterous and stormy sea of life admits of no doubt. It is true that the Lord's dear children have sorrows, trials, troubles, distresses, disappointments, bereavements, sore temptations, and dire conflicts all along the rough and rugged journey. The sea of their lifetime and their journey here below is rough and toilsome. Sorrows sometimes sweep down over the soul like billows. The winds of adversity blow hard and fast; the lightnings of persecution flash vividly; the thunders peal loudly, and sometimes in quick succession. Sometimes the waves of trouble roll so high, and the clouds of sorrows and distresses are so dark and threatening, that the poor little trembling child almost gives up in utter despair. How poor and helpless he sometimes feels! But the anchor is sure and steadfast. The little vessel sailing on this boisterous sea is safe and secure. The anchor is certain not to fail, and as the anchor is certain not to fail, then the little child of God cannot be lost. Blessed hope! Blessed anchor! Blessed assurance! What a strong consolation amidst all the storms and trials of this life! The lightnings of persecution may flash; the waves of trouble and distress may roll high, the clouds may be black, with all their threatenings; Satan, with all his emissaries, may gather together to battle against one of the Lord's dear little ones, but the eternal God has given them an anchor that remains sure and steadfast. He has pledged under an oath, having sworn by Himself, to engage all His omnipotent powers for their eternal security and safety. They are kept by His power unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time. We feel like much more could be said along this same line, but we must stop for this time. May the Lord bless these thoughts to your comfort, and may they bring strong consolation to your poor heart, is our humble prayer. We have received many letters from the Lord's little children telling us they have enjoyed these articles which we have been writing on this subject. Those letters have been much comfort and consolation and encouragement to us, along with the thoughts we have been giving you. Remember us in your prayers. If we still feel impressed that way we will try to write more on this question. C. H. C.

Another Editor

---June 12, 1930

In another column in this paper will be found an article from Elder S. N. Redford, of Valley Springs, Texas, giving his consent for his name to be placed on our editorial staff. We are glad to have Brother Redford associated with us again. Many of our readers will remember that some years ago his name was on the staff, and that he was editor of the Southwestern Department. We have always held Brother Redford in the very highest esteem, and we have loved him dearly all the while as a dear brother in the Lord and as a servant of the Master—even during the divided condition of our people in Texas. We are glad that we can be again associated with this dear brother, as well as with many others. How much better it would be if all our people were together, as they once were, and all walking together to the house of the Lord. May the Lord help us to not only pray for the peace of Jerusalem, but help us to labor to that end; help us to “strive for the things that make for peace.” It is so much better for us to be striving to build up, rather than to tear down and to destroy. Brother Redford will write for the paper, and will be glad to take subscriptions. Again we say that we are glad to have him with us. May the good Lord bless his labors to the good of our readers and to the good of His cause, is our prayer. C. H. C.

Falling From Grace Article No. 9

According to our promise we will try to write a few more lines on this subject—the final preservation of the saints, or the possibility of a child of God being finally lost. This time we want to begin with the language of Paul, the inspired apostle to the Gentiles, as recorded in (Romans 8:28-34), which reads as follows: And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. In this text the apostle declares that “all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose.” This text has often been quoted to prove that all things in existence, and all things that ever transpire, work together for good to them that love God, etc. It is very evident that the apostle means no such thing by this expression, for the simple reason that he tells us in (Galatians 5:17) of two things that do not work together. In that place he tells us “For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.” Here are two things that work against each other. They work in opposition to each other. They are contrary to each other. Therefore, they are not working together, but contrary to each other. This is a condition that exists in the life of every child of grace, so that they cannot do the things they would. What would they do? They would live free from sin and above and without sin. This is the great longing and desire of every child of grace; but they cannot do that, for the simple reason that they still possess the same old sinful nature which they always had. They still have the same fleshly nature to contend with, and on account of still having the same old sinful and fleshly nature, which is contrary to the Spirit, they cannot do the things that they would. They will have this warfare as long as they live in this world. And this warfare within is an unmistakable proof and evidence of the fact that they are in possession of the Spirit, and proves that they are the children of God. It is also true that God and Satan are not working together. Is it true that God and the devil have formed a partnership business and are working together for the accomplishment of one certain end? Is the devil working together with God, and in harmony with Him, for the accomplishment of the eternal happiness and glory of the Lord's children? They must be thus working together, if the expression "all things work together" means all things in existence work together. Nobody but Absoluters believe that expression means that; and, if their doctrine be true, they may ascribe as much glory and honor for their salvation to the devil as to the Father or to Jesus Christ; for, according to their doctrine, the Father, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit and the devil are all working together for their salvation and eternal deliverance-for their eternal deliverance from what? According to their doctrine they are all working together for their final deliverance from the predestination of God; for they say that God predestinated all their sins. Every child of grace knows, when he rightly considers, that this doctrine is not the truth. If the term "all things" always means everything in existence, when it is used in the Bible, then there is nothing under the sun which does not belong to every child of God in the universe, for the apostle says in (I Corinthians 3:21-23) "Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are your's; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are your's; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." If one of the Lord's children should see a stray horse going around he might take the horse up and lay claim to him under the plea that "all things are yours," according to the Absoluters. But we did not begin to write this article to refute the doctrine of the Absoluters. We have digressed, though what we have said is true. The "all things" the apostle had under consideration are described and mentioned in the text. In (Romans 8:31) he says, "What shall we then say to these things?" What things? These "all things" which are working together for their good. What all things are working together for their good, then? God the Father is for them in foreknowledge and predestination; God the Son is for them in atonement and justification; God the Holy Spirit is for them in calling them out of nature's night and darkness into the glorious light and liberty of the children of God. The final end and design to be accomplished by the work of these three divine persons in the Trinity is the glorification of every heir of promise. God the Father knew them in some special sense in which He did not know others. "And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." - (Matthew 7:23). Is there no sense at all in which He knew them? Certainly, He knew them as wicked men, sinful beings; but He did not know them as He knew others. There is a special sense in which He knew others that He did not know these. So, there is a special sense in which He knew this people- the heirs of promise. They were known as His covenant people before the world was; for the covenant was an everlasting covenant. See (Hebrews 13:20-21). The Father not only knew them in the covenant, but He predestinated that they should be conformed to the image of His Son. This is the eternal purpose of the Father. He has purposed it, and He will also bring it to pass. Thus it is clear that God the Father is for them in foreknowledge and predestination. Then God the Holy Spirit is for them in calling. The Spirit calls all that the Father knew in the covenant and predestinated should be conformed to the image of His Son. This is the direct and immediate work of the Spirit, and it is accomplished without any human agency or works of men. Thus, the Father and the Spirit are working together for the final salvation and deliverance of every child of grace. The Spirit not only calls them out of nature's night and darkness, but also preserves and keeps them. God the Son is for them in making atonement, or in justification. The Son works with the Father and the Spirit. They are working together-not at variance. The Son died for all that the Father predestinated should be conformed to His image-all that the Father gave Him for an inheritance. Thus, the three are working together, and all that these three do works together for one end, which is the glorification in heaven of all those who are called according to God's purpose. They are called by the Holy Spirit according to the purpose of the Father. They will finally be glorified in heaven, for the apostle emphatically says, "and whom He justified, them He also glorified." God's children are all justified. They are "justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus." -(Romans 3:24). "What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?" This is a stronger way of saying that no one can successfully be against them. If no one can be against them, successfully, then they must all necessarily be finally glorified with Jesus in the heavenly world. Since God is for them, then all the powers of darkness combined cannot drag one of them down to eternal night. If the Father spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for them, will He not also freely give them all things necessary to their final happiness and glorification in heaven? Surely, since the Father gave His darling Son, the darling Son of His bosom, to suffer and die for them, He will give all things else necessary to land them safely on the shores of eternal bliss and glory. He is going to see to it that not one of them is lost. "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" His elect are those the Father knew in the covenant and predestinated should be conformed to the image of His Son. Since all their sins are charged to the Son, who shall lay anything to their charge? "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." -((3:6) (Isaiah 53:6). Since the Lord has laid all their iniquity on His Son, now who shall lay anything to their charge? Since nothing can be laid to their charge, how can one of them sink down to eternal night? If one of them should be cast down in everlasting darkness and ruin, they would go there without sin or iniquity, and without anything being laid to their charge. God has justified them. Though they were, in nature, ungodly, yet God justifieth the ungodly.-(Romans 4:5). Since they are justified by the Lord Himself, then no one can condemn. The law has been satisfied in the person of Christ for them, and therefore the law cannot condemn one of them. And Jesus is making intercession for them; He is praying for them; and the Father always hears and answers the prayer of His beloved Son. They will all finally be with Him in glory, for Jesus has prayed, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." -(John 17:24). They will all finally be there. We are hoping for that final deliverance. May the Lord bless these precious truths to the comfort of our readers. We may write a little more on this subject next week. C. H. C.

Falling From Grace Article No. 10

According to promise last week, we will try to write a few more lines this week on the question as to whether it is possible for a child of God to so fall away as to be finally lost. A short time ago a fellow in Texas asked for some sample copies of The Primitive Baptist. A copy of a few issues were sent to him containing our articles on this question. It seems that the article "riled" him a little, and he wrote quite a lengthy letter, in which he displayed some temper. He said that we do not have sense enough to pound sawdust into a rat hole. Perhaps not. But gentlemen do not write that way very much. Anyhow, we would rather be a fool for Christ's sake, and believe what the Lord said, than to be a wise man and be a Campbellite. We do not know what this fellow is, but he writes like a Campbellite. If he is not one, then we would apologize to the Campbellites. Judging from the letter the poor fellow needs regeneration. This is all the attention we shall give him, and we say this only to let him know that we received his blatant effusion. We are not writing these articles for the purpose of debating, but for the comfort and consolation of the Lord's little children, to give them assurance from God's blessed word of their security, and of the certainty of their final deliverance from sin and all its dire effects and of their final happiness and glorification with the God of their salvation in the heavenly world. This week we will begin our article by reading (Romans 8:35-39): Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Could language be any stronger than this? If none of these things, nor anything else, shall be able to separate one of God's little ones from His love, then how can one of them be separated from that love? A mother who loves her child would not allow her child to suffer untold tortures and agonies if she could possibly prevent it. The loving mother would unhesitatingly go into the flames and snatch her child from the flames. "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me." -Isa. xlix. 15,16. If the mother would unhesitatingly go through fire to snatch her child from the flames, would not the Lord Himself go into the very flames of hell to take one of His children away from that place, if one should get there, seeing that He loves His children with a greater and stronger love than the love of a tender mother? Could a loving mother be satisfied while seeing her child-the child she bare-suffering agonies and torment? Every loving mother knows that she could not be satisfied while beholding such a sight. "He shall see of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." -(3:11) (Isaiah 53:11). If the mother could not be satisfied to see her child suffering torments, how much more the Lord of glory would not be satisfied to see one of His children, for whom He suffered, bled and died, suffering in eternal torment; for His love is greater than a mother's love. Let us state the matter this way:

1. "He shall see of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied."
2. But He could not be satisfied and see one of the objects of His love for whom He died suffering the torments of hell.

3. Therefore, not one of the objects of His love, not one for whom He suffered, not one of His children, can ever possibly sink down in eternal torment-not one of them can ever go to an eternal hell. Suppose we should admit that none of the things enumerated in the text can separate one of the Lord's children from His love, but make the statement, or claim, that they can go away from Him and from His love, and thus sink down into eternal night. If one of them should thus go away from the Lord, would it not be because of the influence of Satan that they thus go away? And if Satan can thus influence one of God's children to go away from Him, could he not influence others to do the same, if he wanted to? God loves them, and does not want them to thus go away; but Satan influences one to do so, in spite of the Lord. Then, why could he not influence all the others to thus go away from the Lord, if he wanted to do so? It certainly follows that if

Satan could thus influence one of the Lord's children to so depart from the Lord as to be eternally lost, he could so influence every one of them thus to do, if he wanted to. Then, if there should be one that he does not influence to thus depart from the Lord, would it not necessarily be because Satan did not want him? How many, then, would ever be saved in heaven? Would it be any more than just those the devil did not want and would not have? Certainly not. None would ever be saved in heaven, according to that position, only those the devil would not have. We are glad we do not believe such a doctrine, and we are glad the Bible does not teach such. "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" This question is asked in such a form as to admit of only one answer, and that is, No one-none. A proposition stated in the form of such a question is the very strongest way of stating the proposition. Hence, the inspired apostle has said, in the very strongest way of saying it, that none-no one-not one-is able to separate one of the Lord's little children, one of those who have been called out of nature's night and darkness by the Holy Spirit, one who has been born from above, one who has been brought into divine relationship with the Lord- no one is able to separate one of them from the love of Christ; no one is able to separate one of them from the love of God; which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. In our text the apostle mentions tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, and sword. Can Satan do more than to bring these things upon the Lord's dear children? Think of the tribulations of the servant Job; the Hebrew children cast into the fiery furnace; Daniel cast into the den of lions; Joseph tempted by the wife of the king and then cast into prison; think of the saints who passed through the trials mentioned by this great apostle in (Hebrews 11:32-38). Let us read it: And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets: who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection: and others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment: they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; (of whom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth. "In all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us." We remember the day the World War closed. The news was flashed over every country in the world on that day that the armistice was signed, and the firing ceased, and the war ended. There were more glad hearts that day, doubtless, than on any day since the world was made, and perhaps more than will ever be again. Our country and her allies were conquerors. But "in all these things we are MORE THAN CONQUERORS through Him that loved us." Can you imagine how they can be more than conquerors if one of them may sink down into eternal night? Dear child, some-yea, even many-of these trials may be yours to endure and to pass through while you are here in this world of sin, trouble, sorrow, distress, sickness, pain and death-but you are at last more than conquerors through Jesus your blessed and adorable Saviour. "For I am persuaded." The inspired apostle was fully persuaded of this one fact which he here states. He was confident of this. He was sure of this-and sure of it by divine inspiration. Sure of what? "That neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Dear child, whether you live or die, you shall not be separated from the Lord's glorious presence in eternity. You can't ascend so high, or descend so low, as to be separated from Him. If it were possible for you to sink below the depths of the bottomless pits of hell, you cannot sink so low as to be separated from Him. Wherever you may be, the Lord is there; and "in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore." -(Psalms 16:11). Where the Lord is that is heaven for the Lord's little children. If you love the Lord, it is because God loved you first. "We love Him, because He first loved us." - (I John 4:19) "Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee." - (Jeremiah 31:3). Since God's love is everlasting, and He loved you first, then He always has loved you and always will love you; and nothing is able to separate you from Him and from His love. Just as sure as you love the Lord, just as sure, also, as God lives and reigns in glory, just that sure will you, some sweet day, live with Him in the heavenly world-in eternal glory. May that be your happy lot, and may these precious truths comfort your hearts in all your sad distresses here, is our humble prayer. We feel like we could shed tears of joy with you in the sweet assurance of these blessed truths. We do not know that we shall share the glories of heaven with you, but it is our blessed and sweet hope that we shall. Please remember us in your prayers. We may not write any more on this question, as we are just now feeling a desire to take up another line; but we will try to be governed by the way we feel impressed when the time comes to write again. Eternal Life Now

We have been asked whether people receive eternal life while here in this world, or do some just have a promise of it now and receive it in the world to come. Some who have argued, and who take the position, that people do not receive eternal life while in this world have argued that the sinner must comply with certain terms and conditions in order to have the promise of eternal life, and that he must then live in obedience to the commands laid down in the New Testament in order to receive that life in the world to come. In (John 5:24) we read, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." In this text the Saviour emphatically says those who hear His word and believe on the Father have everlasting life. If they do not have everlasting life while here in this world the Saviour did not tell the truth about it. Then He says such a one "is passed from death unto life." The original language in our modern English means "have passed out of death into life." It is in the past tense-something that has already been accomplished. In (I John 5:13) we read, "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God." Here the inspired apostle plainly says he has written that "ye may know that ye have eternal life." Was he trying to get them to know that a thing was true which he knew was not true? Certainly, if people do not receive eternal life while here in this world he knew it. If he knew that to be true, and yet was writing that they might know they have eternal life now, was he not a false teacher? In verse 11 he says, "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son." Verse 12 says, "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." If a man does not have eternal life while he is here in this world, then no man has the Son while here in this world. But some do have the Son, and those who have the Son have life. If a man does not believe that people receive eternal life while here in this world he does not believe the Bible. Many more places could be cited, but these are sufficient. C. H. C.

Acts 2; 28:31

---July 10, 1930

We have been requested to give our views through the paper of ((38) (Acts 2:38), especially the latter part of the verse, "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." The verse reads as follows: Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. This language was addressed to the people present who had heard the preaching of the apostle, and who "were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?" These were the same people who were "amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?" -((7) (Acts 2:7-8). "Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine." -((3) (Acts 2:13). This shows that there were two classes of hearers present that day. (Acts 2:5) says that "There were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven." The word devout in this text is the same word translated godly in (II Peter 2:9), which reads, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." So these people were devout, pious, godly persons. These were the people who were amazed and who were pricked in their hearts. The effect produced by being cut in the heart and being cut to the heart is quite different. The people who stoned Stephen to death were cut to the heart, but not in the heart, by his preaching, and it made them mad, and they stoned him to death. But these people were cut in the heart, and cried out, "What shall we do?" "Then Peter said unto them, Repent." To repent is to turn from the former course of life, to turn from the former way of living, to turn from their former conduct. They were not to repent in order to regeneration, for the simple fact that they were already godly in heart. They had a heart that could be pierced by the words of the apostles; hence they already had "a heart of flesh." The Lord had already performed His promise, "And I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh." -((26) (Ezekiel 36:26). This being true, they were already children of God, but had been walking the wrong way. They are here commanded, or instructed, to turn from that wrong way in which they had been going, and to walk in obedience to the commands of the Master. "And be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." A great many people claim that the apostle meant for them to be baptized for the remission of sins. If this be the meaning of the apostle, then the expression "for the remission of sins" must refer to and modify the word baptized. This cannot be correct, for the simple reason that the modifying word or clause must be placed as near as possible to the word or clause modified. This being true, it follows that if the expression "for the remission of sins" modifies or refers to baptized, then that expression would necessarily immediately follow the word baptized. The sentence would have to read this way: "Repent, and be baptized for the remission of sins every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." But it does not read that way, for the simple reason that it is not that way. It is true that the word Christ is capitalized in our translations, as though it is a proper name, but it is not a noun-that is, the Greek word is not a noun. 'The Greek word, with the letters simply changed into English letters, is Christou. It means anointed. Liddell and Scott's Greek Lexicon, the highest and best known authority on the Greek language, says it is a verbal adjective. If the word is translated into English it would be anointed, or, the anointed. A verbal adjective is a word which denotes action, or being acted upon, and is also descriptive. Jesus was acted upon, by the Father, in that He was anointed with the Holy Spirit above measure. The Holy Spirit was poured out upon Him without measure. So He is described as the anointed one. Jesus was His name; see (Matthew 1:21). Jesus means Saviour. He was the anointed Saviour. He was anointed to save. "He shall save His people from their sins." -(Matthew 1:21). In (Matthew 26:28) we have this language: "For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Literally in our present day English the text would read, "For this is my blood, that of the new covenant, which for many is poured out for remission of sins." The words here translated "for remission of sins" are precisely the same words translated "for remission of sins" in ((38) (Acts 2:38). In this text we have the plain and positive statement by the Saviour that His blood is poured out for remission of sins. Was the pouring out of His blood sufficient to remit sins? If so, then water baptism is not necessary in order to the remission of sins. As the expression, "for the remission of sins," is precisely the same in the original, and the pouring out of the blood of Jesus is sufficient for the remission of sins, then ((38) (Acts 2:38) does not teach that baptism is in order to the remission of sins. The phrase "for remission of sins," in ((38) (Acts 2:38), is an adverbial phrase, and modifies anointed. It tells for what purpose Jesus was anointed. He was anointed to remit sins, or for remission of sins; and the pouring out of His blood was sufficient for that. He was anointed to put away sins by the sacrifice of Himself; "when He had by Himself purged our sins." -(Hebrews 1:3). The language, then, simply means, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus who was anointed to remit your sins." He was anointed for the express purpose of remitting your sins, and you should be baptized in His name. "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." This expression cannot mean here that they shall receive the Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit, as a gift in the sense of being born again, for the simple reason these people were already children of God; they had already been born of God. Then, they "shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" in the sense of the comforting and assuring influence of the same. They will have the witness of the Spirit that they are rendering acceptable service to the Lord, and shall have His approving smiles. They shall enjoy the manifest presence of the Spirit, and be enabled to rejoice in the same. C. H. C.

Rules of Decorum

---July 10, 1930

We received a letter from a sister a few days ago requesting us to print the rules of decorum of the church for her, as she wanted to read them. She said she had been a member of the dear old church nearly thirty-three years, and has never heard the rules read in all her life. Evidently the good sister has either missed being at some of her conference meetings, or else the rules are never read in the church. How can the members ever know what the rules are if the rules are never read in conference? The rules should be read in conference occasionally, not only that the members may know what they are, but so that the friends may also know. When a person unites with the church, generally speaking, that person should have some little idea as to what the rules are. He should have some idea of the rules the members agree to be governed by, for he thereby agrees, in uniting with the church, that he will be governed by their rules. The rules of decorum of the different churches are practically alike in sentiment, but they are not all worded alike. We cannot print the rules for the sister that her church has, for we do not possess a copy of them. They may not be worded just like the rules of our church here in Thornton. We have no idea that they are worded just alike. For the benefit of any of our readers who may be interested we will try soon to publish in The Primitive Baptist a copy of the rules of decorum which we have in our little church here at Thornton. C. Will Not Our People Consider?

---July 17, 1930

In writing for and editing a religious paper it is much pleasanter for one to pursue the even tenor of his way, always writing about those things which please and comfort and which will have the approval of all God's people. When our religious editors depart from this course and take sharp issue with brethren, it is not to their liking, I am sure, but because they feel that in no other way can they be true to the cause they represent. There may be exceptions to this but they are rare. I recently read an article in one of our exchanges which has deeply wounded my feelings and broken my spirit. I have tried to cast it aside and forget it, but I cannot until I have called my brethren's attention to it. This time I have no word of criticism for the brother who sent in the article nor the editor who published it, but I do want to voice my condemnation of those good brethren among us who were responsible for it. It seems that some of our brethren just can't get a vision of our denomination beyond their own little section. They seem to have little consideration for the feelings of others, and the idea that their church can do as she pleases and none have the right to complain has been played to the limit. They will labor for peace and union in the school, in the town, or in the community, but when it comes to our denomination they are unmerciful toward others and seem to prefer their own foolish whims and unnecessary childish toys than the love and fellowship of their brethren. The Banner Herald, under its present management, whether for weal or woe to itself, stands firmly committed against any and all church auxiliaries. She is determinedly opposed to any and all "Aid Societies" as adjuncts of the church. Christ gave us but one organization-the church-and with that we are satisfied. If we may add one, we may add others, and soon the church will be lost sight of and cannot be distinguished from the organizations of the world. It is difficult for us to find words to express our condemnation of such things among Primitive Baptists; suffice it to say, we have no fellowship for them. In this we believe we voice the sentiments of a very large per cent of our people. The article mentioned above carried a clipping from a Georgia secular paper which reads as follows: The Ladies Aid Society of the Primitive Baptist Church held a most enjoyable and profitable meeting Monday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs.-----. A special Christmas program had been arranged by Mrs.-----, who had charge of the meeting. She read the Scripture lesson, the eighth Psalm, and the Lord's prayer was repeated in concert. Song, "Stars of December;" reading, "Christmas Thoughts," by-----. The Christmas lesson was then read by Mrs.----- and comment made by different ladies. Reading, "The Christ Child," by-----. A social hour was enjoyed and Mrs.-----served a lovely salad course, assisted by Mrs.-----. The guests present at the meeting were * * * * To me, this seems unpardonable. These good women knew how many of their brethren feel about such things, but they ignored our feelings and our advice and had their way. This is a good church and there are no better ladies than those mentioned in this notice. The writer feels that they are much better than himself. But for them, by such foolish and unnecessary course, to destroy the labors of months of many of us for peace and union, and at a time when things looked so promising, I repeat, is almost unpardonable. It cuts deep, and we are made to wonder whether or not some are determined to bring us to the parting of the way. Now, there was nothing wrong in these sisters meeting at their sister's home as they did. That is to be commended. There was nothing wrong in serving a salad course, or any other course, if she chose to do so. There was nothing wrong in reading the Bible and commenting on it. There was nothing wrong in any of this. But when they style themselves as an "Aid Society of the Primitive Baptist Church" they go beyond their limit and we feel we have a right to complain. By what authority do they do this? Has the church in conference authorized this society? Has she recognized it as her auxiliary? Does she exercise authority over it and determine the work it is to perform and the manner in which it is to be done? Does this society report to the church in conference? Or does it consider itself independent of the church? Suppose a few of us at Statesboro were to decide to go into the fire insurance business and we advertise our organization as the "Fire Insurance Company of Statesboro Primitive Baptist Church." The public would at once understand that this company was organized by, and was acting under, the authority of the Statesboro Church. And doubtless the church would at once complain and compel us to drop her name in connection with the organization and its work. The same is true of Aid Societies of Primitive Baptist Churches. There are no such things. No church among us has sponsored one. No church has authorized such organization. A few good sisters have met together for social and religious intercourse, and feeling that they wanted to be "up to date" and get themselves before the public as truly "progressive" and having pulled out of the old ruts, someone foolishly gave them the name of the Aid Society of the Primitive Baptist Church. Doubtless it was unthoughted upon their part, but they usurped authority, and their action was in contempt of the church, which alone has all authority in all matters affecting her body. It is a principle in law that an organization is bound by the acts of its agent, and if this aid society is a creature of the church the church is bound by its acts-its acts become hers. We are not complaining because our sisters meet and spend certain hours together. It would be better if they did this more. And if they want to serve refreshments when they are together that's their business, not mine. But we do insist that they shall not, however pure their motives, publish to the world that our CHURCH has "Aid Societies," and thus wound the feelings of good brethren and hinder our labors for the union of our distressed people. While many of us are laboring to unite our broken ranks and bring peace to our distressed people, if others will not feel disposed to help in this great work, may we not at least expect of them that they will not "rock the boat." Brethren, throw all this worldly foolishness to the winds. There is nothing that will insure such joy, peace and prosperity as just being plain, humble, old-time Primitive Baptists. W. H. C. REMARKS The above article by Elder Wm. H. Crouse, editor of the Banner Herald, is copied from that paper of July 1, 1930. The article he refers to is an article by Elder J. S. Newman in The Primitive Baptist of June 5. We are glad to see this article from Elder Crouse, and we want our readers to see it and to know that at least some of those known as Progressives condemn such things as Ladies' Aid Societies. We most heartily approve of the sentiment the brother expressed in the following language: The Banner Herald, under its present management, whether for weal or woe to itself, stands firmly committed against any and all church auxiliaries. She is determinedly opposed to any and all "Aid Societies" as adjuncts of the church. Christ gave us but one organization-the church-and with that we are satisfied. If we may add one, we may add others, and soon the church will be lost sight of and cannot be distinguished from the organizations of the world. It is difficult for us to find words to express our condemnation of such things among Primitive Baptists; suffice it to say, we have no fellowship for them. In this we believe we voice the sentiments of a very large per cent of our people. It is true that Christ gave us but one organization- the church- and it is also true that He put everything in the church that it is necessary to have in it. He was wise enough to know what would be needed in the church in every age; and nothing will ever be needed in the church which He did not place there. We may just as well add one thing in or to the church which Christ did not put there as to add another thing. Let us have nothing but the church, and nothing in the church but what Christ has placed in it. In this we will find just what Elder Crouse states in the following words: "There is nothing that will insure such joy, peace and prosperity as just being plain, humble, old-time Primitive Baptists." We are ready and would be glad to labor for union with all who are ready to be just plain, simple, humble, old-time Primitive Baptists. Let us just be that, and throw to the winds anything we may have that is contrary to that. C. H. C.

Questions On Order

---August 7, 1930

Elder C. H. Cayce: I want your opinion on the following questions: 1st. Would your association accept a member on confession of faith-one who had been excluded from a church in an association in line with your association-without first making peace in the church where he was excluded?

2. Would your association accept as a member on confession of faith one who had been re-baptized into an Absolute Predestinarian Church, who was a minister in that faith and order?

3. Who was a Socialist, and while in that party denounced all Baptists?

4. And was a long time doing evangelistic work for the Missionaries, and was a pastor for that people, dealing in Sabbath schools? Your opinion wanted as early as possible. Yours in hope, G. L. Peters. Lakeland, Fla. REMARKS The churches in our association would not receive a member on confession of faith who had been excluded from a sister church. We would consider it gross disorder to do so. This is really an answer to all the questions above. For a church to receive a member on confession of faith who had been excluded from a sister church while the church that excluded the person is still in existence is simply to deny that said church has the God given right to discipline her own members, and is to deny that she has the right to say who is not entitled to membership in her body. And if one church does not have that right, then no other church has the right. If one gospel church has that right, then every gospel church has the same right. This thing of receiving members on confession of faith who have been excluded from a sister church has caused more trouble and disruption in our ranks, perhaps, than any other one thing. If we ever expect our churches to dwell together in peace, we must quit that way of doing, and respect the right of the churches to discipline her members. C. H. C.

Remarks to Elder W. M. Brecheen

---August 7, 1930

Dear brother, we do not know how to advise you. Advice is cheap, and it is often a very easy matter for people to say we should do this or do that; but to do the thing is another matter. We believe the Lord impresses His children, as well as His ministers, with the duty He requires of them; and we believe it is their duty and best for them in the end to try to follow such impressions, and to discharge the duty He requires of them. We believe they enjoy an ease and peace of mind in the discharge of their duty. "If ye sow to the flesh, ye shall, of the flesh, reap corruption." "God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." May the Lord bless you and your dear companion, and enable you to do your duty as He may require, is our humble prayer. C. H. Trip to Alabama and Mississippi

---August 14, 1930

We left home Wednesday morning, July 16, at 3:20 for a trip to Alabama and Mississippi. We took our family with us, to visit wife's father and mother, B. B. Lawler and wife and the family, at Brownsboro, Ala. It is our desire to see that wife visits them at least once every year, for we know that she will not have them with her always. We took our time and stopped for a rest a couple of times on the trip, and arrived there Thursday morning at about 8 o'clock. Then we rested some Thursday and Friday. On Saturday and Sunday we went to Briar Fork, and were with the church there those two days. We were glad to meet Elders B. G. and G. A. Stephens and J. M. Warren there once more. Several brethren were there from Woodville, and a good crowd present both days. We enjoyed a good and pleasant meeting with those good people. They enjoy going to meeting, and rejoice to hear the truth preached. On Monday and Tuesday we had the pleasure of being with the good brethren at Union Church, near Woodville, once more. Elders H. P. Houk, John Page and Fred Stewart were present. They always have good congregations at this church, and they have good singing, too. Brother E. D. Thomas usually leads the singing, and he sure enjoys singing the good old songs of Zion, and many others enjoy helping, too. It makes the poor minister feel like they are interested in the service to go there and see how they enjoy the song service. They meet an hour or more before preaching time, and then put in the time singing. We enjoyed being with those good people one more time. That is the place where we had the debate a few years ago with I B. Bradley, who represented the Campbellites. It was a very pleasant discussion, and our people say the debate did our cause good in the community. On Wednesday we had the pleasure of being with the brethren at Flint River Church once more. This is the place where our wife united with the church. Her father (B. B. Lawler) is a deacon in this church, and his father was a deacon there when he passed away. This is the oldest Baptist Church in the state. It was organized October 2, 1808. The association met with that church in October, 1908, just one hundred years, to a day, from the time the church was constituted. We attended that meeting, at which time the hundredth anniversary of the church was celebrated. The Fullerites tried to take that celebration away from our folks - a thing they were no more entitled to than the Campbellites or Catholics. B. B. Lawler and his father have served that church in the deacon's office for more than fifty years. This church has never had anything to do with the modern missionary enterprises and inventions of men. They are not large in number as they have been in some of the days gone by, but they still have a few faithful ones who are content with the good old way our fathers trod, and in due time the Lord will reward their faithfulness. The way may look dark sometimes, but the Lord will not forsake His faithful ones. On Thursday we took leave of the dear family, Brother and Sister Lawler and family, and drove to Amory, Miss., near which place we thought the Tombigbee Association would meet the next day. We had got the idea some way that this association would meet at that time with the church at Hatley. We went to the good home of Brother E. R. Pennington, arriving there late Thursday afternoon, July 24, and found then that we were mistaken, but that a union meeting was to be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday with Grub Springs Church, near Aberdeen. Friday morning we went to that union meeting. There we met Elders J. C. Huddleston, W. V McDonald and J. D. Holder. It was an enjoyable meeting. The preaching was all a unit, a oneness, and the Lord's sweet presence was felt among us. It was our expectation to come on home, but, by special request, we agreed to remain over on Monday and be with the church at Hatley. Brother Holder preached there Sunday night, and we, with Elder McDonald, attended the service. On Monday we tried to preach for them. This is a good church, and the brethren enjoy their services. Elder Huddleston is the good pastor of both of these churches, and they esteem him highly and love him as a true and faithful servant. We left Amory early Tuesday morning, July 29, for home, and reached home just before night. We felt very much fatigued, and in need of some rest. In a day or so we felt to be all right again. Our health is much improved since a few months ago, and we feel so thankful that we were able to make this trip and meet with those dear children of God once more. We enjoyed the trip very much, and feel so thankful to the good brethren and sisters for the kind treatment given us and the kind consideration they had for us. We shall never forget their kindness. May the richest blessings of heaven be theirs, is our humble prayer. Please pray the good Lord that our health may continue to improve, so that we may still go among His dear people. C. H. C.

Remarks to W. H. Hancock

---August 14, 1930

We have no fellowship for whisky drinkers. It is a shame and disgrace upon them and the church. They should be excluded. We have no desire or inclination to visit among people who tolerate such practices. We prefer to abstain from-stay away from-such appearance of evil. C. H. C.

Associations Visited

---August 28, 1930

We left home on Friday morning, August 8, in company with Elder John R. Harris and Sisters Cloud and Grubbs, for Atkins, Ark., to attend the Point Remove Association, which was in session on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. When we arrived Elder Lindsay was preaching the introductory sermon. They had service morning, afternoon and night, both Friday and Saturday, and on Sunday morning. Meals were prepared and served in a grove near by. We failed to get a list of the names of the ministers in attendance, and we may not remember all who were there, but those we remember were Elders J. M. Lindsay, J. H. O'Neal, J. C. Haskins, R. L. Piles, W. H. Lee, John R. Harris and the writer, and Brother J. T. George, who is exercising in a public way. The preaching was all a unit, and not a discordant note was sounded. It was a pleasant meeting. Elder Harris returned home from there, and we went on filling some appointments-which had been arranged by Brother Emmett Russell. From Monday to Thursday inclusive we filled appointments at the following named places: Howard school-house, Monday; Denny schoolhouse (we think that is the correct name of the place), Tuesday; Macedonia, Wednesday; Hagarville, Wednesday night; New Providence, Thursday. Elders R. L. Piles and J. C. Haskins were with us at these places, and sometimes one or both of them took part in the service. Elder Haskins preached at Denny schoolhouse Tuesday night. Elder W. J. Jordan lives near this place, and we visited him in his good home. He was present at the service at the schoolhouse. Elder J. J. Brown lives near New Providence and we had a pleasant visit in his good home. Friday morning we went from Elder Brown's home to Friendship Church, near Scranton, where the New Hope Association convened that day and continued over Saturday and Sunday. We did not make a list of the names of the preachers at this meeting, but the best we can remember at this writing the following brethren in the ministry were present: Elders D. W. Witt, J. J. Brown, J. C. Haskins, J. L. McClelland, R. L. Piles, W. H. Lee, John R. Harris, G. W. Reed and the writer, and also Brother J. T. George. There may have been others, but we are writing from memory and may unintentionally overlook some. It was a good and pleasant meeting. They had service morning, afternoon and night on Friday and Saturday and then on Sunday morning. Three sisters came forward on Sunday and asked for a home in the church there, and the ordinance of baptism was to be attended to that afternoon at 3 o'clock by Elder Brown. We did not stay to witness the baptizing, as we had a two hundred mile drive to make to come home that night. We enjoyed the trip all the way. The brethren and sisters were all good to us. They did all they could to make us comfortable, and also to prepare for us such things as our physician had instructed us to eat. We shall never forget their many acts of kindness to us. We have not mentioned all the homes we had the pleasure of visiting, but we remember them, and pray the Lord's richest blessings to rest upon them all. We arrived home at 10:10 Sunday night, August 17, and found all as well as usual, except that wife and one of the children were suffering with some painful boils. We trust we are thankful to get back home feeling as well as could be expected and to find all as well as they were. We shall never forget your kindness, and trust you may remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

James 1:26,27

---September 4, 1930

If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.-(James 1:26-27). Two things we learn from the above text, at least, are that there is a vain religion and also what the pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is. They are not at all alike-and yet they are what people do. So, another thing we learn from this text is that religion is not something people "get," but it is something they do. Religion is what we do, not something we "get." We have heard much said by the world since our early recollection about people "getting religion." Worldly "religionists" have told us for years and years that we must "get religion" in order to be saved in heaven; that we will remain unsaved unless we "get religion." But we see from this text that religion is not something people "get." It is what they do. They may be doing the kind that is vain; and they may be doing the kind that is pure and undefiled before God and the Father. However, we are rather of the opinion that not many are doing the right kind. There is also another religion mentioned in the Bible. Paul said: For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it: and profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.-(Galatians 1:13-14). We learn here that Paul practiced the Jews' religion before he was made a child of God by regeneration- before he was born from above. That religion was to persecute the saints and to destroy the church of God. This is another bad kind of religion to practice. We do not think it has all disappeared from the world yet. Sometimes persecutors even get in the church, and cause trouble and distress there. It is worse for a persecutor to be in the church, or to be identified as a member of the church, than it is for them to be in the world. Better things are expected of the members of the church. It is a bad state of affairs when a member of the church does not bridle his tongue, and thereby practices a vain religion. Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell. For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind: but the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.- (James 3:3-10). This shows something of the vain religion, and what the practice results in. It is deplorable, indeed. The wrong use of the tongue-not having the tongue bridled -defiles the whole body; it is a little fire, but kindles a great conflagration; it brings destruction, sorrow, distress, divisions and misery. It is a fire; it burns deep in the hearts of the Lord's little children, and makes scars in their poor bleeding hearts which they will carry with them to their graves. The scars can never be erased, for the burns were made too deep for the scars to ever be removed while they live in this world of sorrows and troubles. It is a world of iniquity. The unbridled tongue can fill the world with its unholy work! It sets on fire the course of nature. How quickly it can, and sometimes does, set the whole being on fire with madness, venom, and a spirit of destruction and revenge! "It is set on fire of hell." But there is a pure religion-a better kind, which the Lord's little children should be careful to practice. They should be careful to bridle the tongue, first. Say nothing about a person which you would not be willing to say to his face. Be careful, then, even, as to what you say. "Let your words be seasoned with grace." Be sure that you do not exaggerate in your use of words. Then, remember that the pure religion is to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction. That is a part of the pure religion. This does not mean to go to see them and "sponge" on them-to try to get all you can from them. To visit them in their affliction is to minister to them; administer to their necessities. A person that never does anything to help a poor widow along, or never does anything to help the poor fatherless children to fight the battles of life, never visits them in their affliction, no matter how many times he may go to their homes. He may go to their homes and eat some of the provisions they have obtained by their hard labors and toils, but he is not thereby visiting them in their affliction. If you want to enjoy the practice of some of this right kind of religion, try going to see some poor widow or orphan children in your section and administer to their needs; say a few words by way of encouragement to them that will help them to bear their troubles, and that will assure them that they have a true friend who is ready to lend a helping hand. Try this just once, and see how good it will make you feel. We are just as sure it will make you feel good as we are sure God lives and reigns in glory. Another part of this pure and undefiled religion is to keep himself unspotted from the world. No man can keep himself unspotted from the world and at the same time have his garments spotted with the institutions of men. He cannot belong to the institutions of the world and keep himself unspotted from the world. Neither can he keep himself unspotted from the world and have his breath smelling like a rotten whisky jug. He cannot keep himself unspotted from the world and engage in such revelry and wickedness as the world engages in. He cannot keep himself unspotted from the world and use profane language. He cannot keep himself unspotted from the world and visit houses of ill fame, the speakeasies, the grog shops, the picture shows, theaters, and such places as are the gathering places for the wicked and profane. "Birds of a feather flock together." The dance hall is no place to practice the pure and undefiled religion. There are so many ways one may have the spots of the world that we cannot here enumerate them all. How careful we should be as to how we live. Those who have professed the name of Christ should endeavor to live above reproach, so as to have none of the spots of the world, and so as to not bring shame and disgrace and reproach on the cause of the Master. May the good Lord help us to so live. C. H. C.

Remarks to Mrs. Emma V. Smith

---September 4, 1930

Evidently it is the Lord's will that His children be banded together to keep house for Him in a church capacity, or else He never would have set up His kingdom here in the world for them. He most certainly requires His children to go to the church and tell what great things the Lord has done for them. Then He requires them, as His bride, to keep a clean house for Him. One part of the work of the ministry is to gather His children together; to teach them the true doctrine and order of God's house, and to teach them where the true church is to be found. Then it is their duty, when thus taught, to ask for a home in that church, and to labor therein according to the teaching of His blessed word. The Lord's children are commanded to let their light shine as a lighted candle on a candlestick. The candlestick is in the true church. The only way, then, for them to let their light shine as a lighted candle on a candlestick is to have membership in the church, and to endeavor to live as the Lord requires the membership to live. They may have their light on the candlestick, but then the light may be obscured by a dirty life-not walking right-and it would not shine very far. Those of God's children who live righteous lives and walk humbly and circumspectly before Him, enjoy blessings here in this world that His disobedient children do not and cannot enjoy. The home of God's children in heaven, and their happiness in heaven, does not depend upon what they do, either good or bad. That depends wholly and solely upon the finished work of the crucified and risen Redeemer, and they are joint-heirs with Him. Being joint-heirs with Him, they will finally enjoy heaven just as He does. They will have and enjoy heaven with all that heaven means. But those who walk in disobedience will miss much here in this life that they would enjoy by living in humble obedience to Him. When the Lord was here in person on earth He never called a woman to the apostleship. Not one of the seventy He sent out to preach was a woman. The Lord never had a woman for a prophet in the whole of the prophetic age. As the Lord never called and sent out a woman prophet, and never sent out a woman preacher in the early age of the gospel church, we conclude He does not do that now. He does not change. He is the same in every age. No matter what sort of inference we may draw, we know the Bible does not tell us of one woman preacher the Lord ever had. As we have no such example, and the Scriptures teach us everything we should practice in the church, then the Lord's church should not have a woman preacher now. A woman preacher, praying in public, and such like things, reminds us of a crowing hen. If you had a hen in your flock of chickens to begin crowing, you would kill that hen. You would remove her from the flock. If a woman goes to preaching in the church of God, she should be removed from the flock. We have known some persons who had church privileges to "pick up" and move to destitute places where they could have no church privileges. No one is to blame for their destitute condition but themselves. We do not know that God's ministers are under any special obligation in such a case to hunt up such persons to feed them. Some have thus deprived themselves of church blessings and privileges for worldly gain. They are the losers, and they justly suffer for their own doing. But there are many of the Lord's dear children who are deprived of these blessings and privileges through no fault of their own. It is the duty of the Lord's ministers to go to such places and feed and hunt out the Lord's little ones. More of this kind of work should be done, and we believe the Lord would bless such labors. May the good Lord bless you, dear sister, and restore you to health, if it can be His holy will, is our humble prayer for you; and may He sweetly reconcile you to His will, is our prayer. C. H. C.

1 Corinthians 16:24

---September 11, 1930

We have been requested to give our views of (I Corinthians 11:34), which reads, "And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come." If you will get your Bible and turn to the chapter and begin reading with verse 20 you will see that the brethren at Corinth were guilty of converting the sacramental supper into a drunken feast. For this ungodly practice the apostle rebuked them sharply. In thus eating and drinking they did eat and drink condemnation to themselves; they did thus eat and drink unworthily. The Lord's supper should not be eaten to satisfy natural hunger. They should eat at home to do that. If they come together to make a feast of the Lord's supper, they come unto condemnation. It would be better to abandon the sacramental supper altogether than to make a feast of it. It should be observed in remembrance of our Lord and Master, and is a solemn thing. It is a sign of His suffering and death, and should be engaged in, having that in remembrance. We even doubt the propriety of having dinner on the ground at the church on that day, especially having the dinner before communion service. We think that if they are to have dinner on the ground, let the communion service be attended to first. We are aware, however, that in some places, perhaps many, they have the preaching service, then adjourn for dinner, during which hour they have their minds on worldly things, and feast on the dainties that are prepared, then gather together again for the communion service--their stomachs all full and their minds dull, and in poor condition to think on what the bread and wine truly represent. We do not think this is really best. C. H. C.

Mourners Are Blessed

---September 11, 1930

"Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted." -(Matthew 5:4). The Saviour does not here teach that one will be blessed provided they will mourn; but one who is a true mourner is a blessed character. A mourner is one who has been blessed with the light of God's Holy Spirit shining in his heart, which has made known to him the fact that he is a sinner, and shows him the deceitfulness and hatefulness of sin. Having been made to see all this, he begins to mourn on account of sin. One who has been enabled to see these things is in a blessed condition, though he may not know it. But the promise of the Saviour is that "he shall be comforted." The Comforter will come and sweet peace shall fill the heart of every true mourner. The Spirit of God will bear witness with his spirit that he is a child of God. No such true mourner will ever sink down to eternal night, but will finally enjoy heaven with all that heaven means. C. H. C.

Will They Know Each Other?

---September 11, 1930

The above question is one which is not clearly made known to us in the Bible. Some passages may be construed to teach that we shall know each other in heaven, but it cannot be positively proven-so we think. Paul says we shall know as we are known. Fleshly ties and relationships will be done away. All the redeemed will know Jesus as their Redeemer and Saviour, and that they themselves are redeemed from sin, and they will be like Jesus, and will be perfectly happy and glorified -and that will be enough. Communion With Trumpet Folks

---October 30, 1930

We have received a letter from a brother in a certain section asking about such a case as one of our brethren being at a church in line with the Trumpet, Elder J. C. Morgan, editor, and that church going into the communion service, and this brother partaking of the communion service with them. Those churches following Elder Morgan are the ones who are refusing to make peace by adjusting what little differences there may be. It seems to us to be very inconsistent for them to allow our members with them in their communion service, and yet are unwilling to adjust the little differences that may exist and recognize our churches and their work. You brethren who are among the Trumpet faction and want peace can do no better than come on and let us bury our little differences, if there are any, and come together and live in peace as brethren should. Christmas Gift

---December 18, 1930

It is a great custom and habit the people have been engaged in since before our day of giving presents on Christmas time. Much money has been spent very foolishly most every year on this line since we can remember. Some years many people spend money foolishly for presents that are useless and worthless, and that can be of no possible benefit to any person in the world. This is wasteful and extravagant, and teaches our children to be wasteful and destructive. It is wrong and sinful. This year, perhaps, not so much money will be wasted in that way. But it has been instilled in us by precept and example so that we wish to remember our friends and loved ones with some kind of remembrance at this season of the year. This is all well and good, provided we give something that will be of benefit and of some good to the recipient. Do you not think you could do some poor saint much good by making them a present of The Primitive Baptist as a Christmas gift? That would bring comfort and joy to their hearts every week for the whole year of 1931. They would get comfort and consolation from reading its pages many times during the year, when cast down and in distress. Send us the name and $1.50 for a year's subscription to any you wish to send the paper to for a whole year as a Christmas present. If you want us to tell them who sent the paper to them, just ask us to tell them about it. If you do not want them to know, you need not tell us to tell them. We are offering this reduced price to help you give this good present. Another good present would be a Bible or a Testament. Just send us the amount you want to pay for a present of that kind, and we will send the best book we can find for the money. Rush your orders to us so we can get the books to them by Christmas. Thank you. C. H. C.

Are You "Blue?"

---December 18, 1930

If you are feeling "blue," and all cast down, all "down and out," all forsaken, and that you have nothing in the world to come your way but sadness, disappointments, distresses and trials and conflicts-just sit down and begin to count up your blessings, one by one, and see if you do not have employment for quite a long time. Are they not more than can be numbered? "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise Him for the help of His countenance." - \(\(2:5\) \(Psalms 42:5\)\). C. H. C.

Close of Volume 45

---December 18, 1930

With this issue we close the forty-fifth volume of The Primitive Baptist. In many respects this has been a hard year. We have had distressing times, and it seems that it is not yet all over. Yet, we have had many things to be thankful for. True, we had a financial depression which started last winter, and then we had the severe drouth, with such a great crop failure in many parts of the country; and many people are out of work, and can get nothing to do. We have known of some even offering to work for their board. All these distressing things have caused many to have The Primitive Baptist discontinued to their address. Last winter we thought we could see hard times ahead, so we saved up all we could and bought enough paper to run us through the year. Thus we were, in some measure, prepared for the hard times. Still, we have had a struggle to get through; but we have been blessed not to miss an issue during the year, and have been able to get the paper out in the regular size every week. Many other papers have either reduced their size or have skipped several issues. The Lord has been good to us, and we feel thankful, we trust, for His many rich and wonderful blessings. We have tried during the year to do more writing for the paper than we had been doing, but these hard times during the last few months made it necessary for us to cut down expenses, and that made it necessary for us to do other work; and so we have not been writing during the past few weeks as we would like to. We hope, soon, to be doing more writing again. Some time ago we made mention that we had so much good matter on hand for the paper that we do not have room for. Several sent us small contributions to help pay the expense of printing some extra pages. We have not yet been able to do the work, but hope to do that in a few more weeks. Some brethren have complained because we have not recently stated where we stand in regard to some things that have agitated the minds of some of our people in the past. Just here we will say that on all the principles which have characterized our people in the ages past, we stand where we have stood all the while. We stand now just where we stood in the time of the trouble with the Kirklands, Todd, Strickland, and others, and where we stood in the time of the trouble with the whole Progressive move that was agitated among our people some years ago, and which brought trouble and distress in our ranks. We are still satisfied with the "good old way" of our fathers, and as we find taught in God's blessed Book. We still want nothing that we do not have "thus saith the Lord" for.

We do not think it wise to continually "hammer" on the things that have been "threshed out" by our people in days gone by, and upon which they have already spoken in unmistakable terms. When that has been done, the issue should be considered a dead one. That ends it. Then we may let that alone. To let it alone, we mean to let those things be forsaken by our people, and not try to engage in them again, to the hurt and confusion of good brethren. There are differences among our people in local customs, and these things should be matters of forbearance. If everything in the church in all sections of the country were just as we would like to have them, and just as we would have them to be, then there would be no forbearance necessary on our part. There would be no place for forbearance. The Lord knew there would be mistakes made, and differences would arise in these things; and hence we are taught the need of forbearance. We should "let patience have her perfect work" and "forbear one another in love." We now bid you farewell in the Lord, and hope to greet you again in the first issue of the next volume, beginning January 1, 1931. C. H. C.

Introduction to Volume 46

---January 1, 1931

We now begin the forty-sixth volume of The Primitive Baptist, and we are also just entering on a new year. This volume begins with the first day of the new year. This is the day that so many of us make new resolutions. Many of us annually renew our vows and resolutions on the first day of the new year, only to find ourselves again, at the end of the year, about where we were at the beginning of the year-so far as concerns our new resolutions. We still know no more of what is in the future for us than we did a year ago, or even many years ago. No matter what our age or experience may be, we cannot penetrate the future and see what is in store for us. Each year of the past brought its joys and sorrows; and, judging the future by the past, this year will also have its joys and sorrows. But what they may be, no mortal can tell. Many of our readers will, no doubt, cross over the dark river before this year of our Lord, 1931, is past. It may be that the editor will be called to go, too. None of us know about that. "And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God. And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." - (0:22) (Acts 20:22-27). The Holy Ghost witnessed that bonds and afflictions were to be endured by the Apostle Paul. Bonds and afflictions abide every true servant of the Lord, if he is faithful and true to his trust. But in the midst of all these bonds and afflictions there is a peace and calm quietude that is worth more than all this world. The peaceful feeling that we are "pure from the blood of all men," and that we "have not shunned to declare all the counsel of God," is worth more than all the world beside. In this we have the blessed assurance that we shall "finish our course with joy," and "the ministry, which we have received of the Lord Jesus." Let us, then, have our faces turned Zionward, with renewed determination in the beginning of this new year, and the beginning of this forty-sixth volume of The Primitive Baptist, to "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." - (4) (Philippians 3:14). Some of us may feel that everything looks dark and gloomy, and that the prospect for the cause looks gloomy, and that the old church is declining and is destined to go down. We may become discouraged and cast down on account of these things. But the old church is not gone, and it is not going to become extinct.. "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it" -so said the Lord of glory, while He was here on earth. He knew what He was talking about. He was not guessing. He established the kingdom, and His everlasting honor and power are pledged to preserve and keep it. He has allowed the winter seasons to come, and has chastised His people for their wrongs in all ages; and He is doing that yet. After a time of distress, when the distress has been sufficient to bring us to our right places, He will appear again in the manifestation of His mighty power in favoring Zion. In all our sadness and declension we do not need any of the inventions of men to help the old church. We do not need the things the world engages in that we may bring about a revival in the old church. Perhaps we have already gone too much after some of the things of the world and the inventions of men. If we have, it is high time for us to forsake those things and go to God in sackcloth and ashes, in humble prayer to Him, that He would lift up His countenance upon us once more in His heavenly smiles. The world may have their revivals, so-called, and by their efforts work up an interest in their affairs; but the Lord has not instructed the members of His kingdom thus to do. They are instructed to look to Him. "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase." Let us try to do more planting and watering, and leave the matter with the Lord to give the increase. Let us not bring wood, hay, stubble, to build up the gospel kingdom. Let us do more preaching, leaving the result with the Lord. Let us "contend earnestly for the faith that was once delivered to the saints." The Lord has preserved and kept His church here in the world for about nineteen hundred years. He put it here to stay. He has preserved it in spite of our sinfulness and wickedness, and He will still keep it in the world somewhere. "Unto Him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end." -Eph. iii. 21. Here we have it that it is "throughout all ages, world without end." "Unto Him be glory in the church" -not out of it-and this throughout all ages. How can it be throughout all ages, unless the Lord keeps His church standing throughout all ages? It could not be. The identity of the church may be destroyed and the church become extinct in some locality. This, has come to pass in many localities. When this is the case it is on account of our own wrong doing. "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." -Gal. v. 15. That is the reason -or one reason-why the church becomes extinct in a locality-it is because they are consumed one of another. You never knew of a church becoming extinct in any locality where each and every member was doing his duty, and every person standing in his place, round about the camp, did you? Let us all "awake to righteousness, and sin not." -1 Cor. xv. 34. Let us not put in our time as fault-finders. Perhaps some of us have been too suspicious of our brethren. Let us try to lay all these things aside, and beg the Lord for His mercies, and pray Him to prosper Zion. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into His harvest. We have enough idlers already. We need laborers-faithful laborers. Lord, send them, and then help us to esteem them as gifts from thee. C. H. C.

Women Prophets

---January 1, 1931

Sometime ago we wrote an article concerning women preachers and prophets. Some have called our statement in question, that not one of God's prophets or preachers which He sent out in the days of the prophets and apostles were women. They were all men. Some have called this statement in question, and claim that there were women prophets, or prophetesses. Yes, there were women called prophetesses, and there are women in this day called preachers, too. But will you tell us which prophetic book in the Old Testament was written by a woman? What book of the Old Testament was written by a woman? Tell us, also, please, where it says in the Old Testament that the word of God came to a woman, for her to prophesy, as it does concerning Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and others. Is it there? No. Tell us, too, when the Lord sent out a woman, as He sent out the seventy. Tell us where He sent out a woman, as He sent out the twelve, or as He sent Paul. Tell us where He ever said to a woman that she should sit on one of the thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. There is no such thing in the Book. The Lord never had a woman to write a book for the Old Testament, nor for the New Testament. Again we say that a woman preacher is like a crowing hen. C. H. C.

Encouraging Letter

---January 1, 1931

Several days ago we received the following letter. More often we receive some letter of complaint, or finding fault with something we have said, or because we have not said something the writer thinks we should say. Were it not for the fact that we occasionally receive a letter like the following, we feel that we would give up in despair. We often get so discouraged and so cast down that we feel like our efforts and labors are all in vain. We often feel that it is of no use to keep on striving in the service, as we have been trying to do for many years. Perhaps it will not be long until we may receive an honorable discharge from the warfare. We do not want to give up; but we do desire to be enabled, by the grace of God, to continue to "endure hardness, as a good soldier," if it is necessary to endure it in order to continue to fight for the principles of truth as taught in God's blessed Book, and the principles which have characterized our people as distinct and different from the world in all the ages of the past. We do not print the brother's name who wrote the letter, as it was written as a private letter to us. May the Lord bless the dear brother, with all our readers, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

THE LETTER

Dear Brother Cayce: I wish I knew how to comfort you and encourage you. I know that you have spent your life for our dear people, and still they continue to war and fuss about non-essentials, and draw on their imagination, and think evil one of another. I do hope the Lord will give you grace to earnestly contend for the things that make for peace, as you have done all your life. Surely the end is near, and how it will be with me I cannot tell. I feel so sad and lonely of late. I often feel that I have deceived you and all the Lord's dear people, and sadness and sorrow is all I have in this life. O wretched man that I am! I grieve; I mourn; and yet I rejoice at times. I try not to burden anyone with my troubles. If there is not a better day for us here, I am sure there is a beautiful home over yonder for you and all who love Him here. I cut cord wood two days this week, and I just could not get you off my mind. I could see you hard at work for our cause, and likely someone writing you in a way he should not. May God bless you, is my constant prayer.

Wrong At Home

---January 8, 1931

Some brethren seem to have an idea that if a church or brethren do wrong they have gone from home. Wonder if any of those brethren ever had any children to do wrong without leaving home? We note that the different factions of Baptists have been compared to the prodigal son, with the idea that one faction remained at home and all the other factions left home. This has brought us to wonder if the son who remained at home ever did any wrong. It seems to us that according to the teaching of the Book that boy did about as bad as the boy who left home. Anyway, he manifested a very bad spirit when the prodigal returned. Evidently he was actuated by a wrong spirit then. Perhaps some of them are the home son that object to reconciliation. Churches can evidently do wrong without leaving their identity as churches of Christ. So can individuals do wrong without leaving their identity as followers of Christ. If not, then no follower of Christ can go wrong, make a mistake, or commit a wrong. If that does not savor of a claim to sinless perfection in the flesh, we confess that we do not understand things as they are. If churches, as churches, cannot do wrong, then confess their error and repent of it as churches, then the Bible is all bosh, for it teaches that they can. To repent of an error is to quit it. Churches in the New Testament were commanded to repent. If they had ceased to be churches of Christ-had gone off from identity as churches of Christ-then the command for them, as churches, to repent is meaningless, and such commands are a solemn mockery. If a church going into disorder always destroys her identity as a church of Jesus Christ, then she could not repent as a church, and could do no orderly act-there could be no such thing as a church repenting. If she could not do an orderly act while she has disorder in her body, then she could never get in order again. It would be a disorderly act for her to even repent, if she could not do an orderly act after having gone into disorder. Brethren and churches may do wrong without leaving the old home, and when they do they should repent of those wrongs and live in peace and fellowship with each other. C. H. C.

The Progressives

---January 8, 1931

Several months ago, or a few months ago, there was a suggestion in the Banner-Herald for a meeting of the different factions of the Primitive Baptists who are agreed on the fundamental principles of the doctrine to meet together to confer with each other with a view to a union. We have had several letters in regard to the matter, and some have asked us for an opinion in regard to uniting with them. We have endeavored to be as near neutral in regard to such a union as we well could. We think the matter of adjustment of the differences between the "Old Liners" and the "Progressives" is something that more directly concerns the brethren where they had the trouble than the brethren in other sections. We do not want to meddle with it. We do not even wish to encourage a meeting with them to consider the matter of differences if it is likely to cause more trouble among us. Personally, we do not see how it could do any harm for our brethren to meet with them in a kind and right spirit to discuss these matters, and to get their view point as to what they are willing to do, and to give our ideas as to what our own people would be willing to do. All parties should be kind and perfectly frank and honest with each other. Now, what we are writing this for is: We want each one of our readers to write and tell us if you are opposed to such a meeting, or if you wish to have such a meeting, or if you are willing for such a meeting to be held. A postal card will do. Just say, "I am opposed to any meeting with the Progressives," if you are opposed to it. If you are willing for such a meeting to be held just say, "I am willing for our people to meet and confer with the Progressives." If you are in favor of such a meeting just say, "I am in favor of meeting and conferring with the Progressives." If we find that our people are opposed to such a meeting we want to be in position to say they are opposed to it. We do not wish to encourage any meeting of the kind if it would cause trouble. What we mean by this is that we want to know the wish and desire of the brethren where they had the trouble, so we may know what might be their desire as to what we should do. We do not want any controversy over the matter, and will not have any. We want the sentiment of the brethren, so we can tell any who have asked us and who may ask us. Please write us at once. We want to say, frankly, that we are no more in favor of the use of organs in Old Baptist Churches, or of affiliating with secret orders, or any other progressive measure or departure from the principles which our people have stood for in all the ages past, than we were when the trouble came up with the "Progressives." We stand now upon the same principles we have stood upon for more than forty years-ever since we have had a name with the Primitive Baptists. Since there has been some talk of meeting with the "Progressives" to talk over the matters of difference we have been asked if we would attend such a meeting. Now, what we want is to know the mind of the brethren. If they desire it, or are willing for such a meeting to be held, we are willing to attend the meeting, if the brethren wish us to do so. Otherwise, we do not wish to have anything to do with it. We have had enough trouble in our ranks without inviting more. Again we ask you to please write us at once. This means all the brethren and sisters who are in the section where there was trouble and division with the "Progressives." C. H. C.

Many Thanks

---January 8, 1931

We wish we could find words to say how much we appreciate the kind remembrances of us during the holidays. Many sent us cards, all of them nice, expressing wishes for our health, happiness and pleasure-not only for us, but also for our companion, who so faithfully and tirelessly works with us. Several sent substantial remembrances. These acts of kindness and expressions of Christian love and sweet fellowship were all appreciated more than we are able to tell you. May the richest blessings of heaven rest upon every one of you, is our humble prayer. Most every year we have been sending out a few cards, or something, as an expression of our remembrance of some of our good friends and brethren and sisters; but this time we have had to omit that. Our financial condition has been such that we had to cut out that expense, small though it has been. In the financial flurry which has hit our state, as well as some other states, in which so many banks have closed, we have been hurt, along with many others. The little bank here in our town was hit, with so many others, and had to close their doors. This hurt us, but we do not yet know to what extent. Plans are being worked on now for the organization of a new bank to take over the assets of the old bank, which we hope may be accomplished before many more weeks, and we are hoping for a better condition of affairs before many more months. Remember us in your prayers. C. H. C.

Valid Baptism And Some History

---January 15, 1931

The first Baptist Church in Boston was organized May 28, 1665. See Hassell, page 525; History of New England and the Baptists by Isaac Backus, Vol. 1, page 298. Other authorities could be cited, but this is sufficient. On August 10, 1713, Elisha Callender became a member of this church. He was a son of Ellis Callender, who became pastor of the church in 1708. On May 21, 1718, Elisha was ordained as pastor of this church. The presbytery that ordained him consisted of Dr. Cotten Mather and his son and John Webb. These three men were Congregational ministers. See Backus' Church History of New England, page 137; Encyclopedia Britannica, Ninth Edition, Vol. 15, page 631; Backus' History of New England, with Particular Reference to the Baptists, Second Edition, Vol. 1, page 421, and Vol. 2, page 419. Here is a historical fact, that this church, the first Baptist Church organized in Boston, Mass., which was in 1665, had a preacher ordained for them as pastor of the church, on May 21, 1718, by three Congregational ministers. If there was a Baptist preacher in the presbytery the records do not tell us about it-so far as we can find. Arguments may be made for and against a proposition, but facts cannot be argued away. Some brethren are contending that disorder in the line of ordination will make void and invalidate all official work following in the line of that disorder. If their contention be correct, then none of us have any valid baptism, for there are none of us but what follow in the line from this act of the Boston Baptist Church. If you can, suppose you trace your line back and see if you do not find that your ancestors in the church and ministry were not in some way tied on to this disorder. We are not trying to argue that we should practice such as was there practiced by this church, but simply to show the fallacy of the contention of some of the brethren. Callender baptized many persons, no doubt. Then later Samuel Stillman was called as pastor of this church. "A revival of religion began in that church in 1769, which caused the addition of eighty members in three years, to a church which had not seventy members before." -Backus, Vol. 2, page 419. According to the contention of some, this church lost her identity when she had Callender ordained by three Congregational preachers in 1718. Now, if you can trace your line of ordination by succession, suppose you try running the line and see if you do not find yourself springing from that disorder back there-and if you do, then you have no church identity, according to the contention of some; and in this case, you have no valid baptism, and none of the rest of us have it. Now, why do you want to fuss about a thing, when no one has it? Jeremy Condy was ordained pastor of this first Baptist Church in Boston on Feb. 14, 1739. He was pastor of that church when George Whitefield held a revival meeting in Boston. We have been under the impression that Whitefield was an Episcopalian, and really he was that; but he fell in with the Wesleys. The Wesleys embraced Arminian views, while Whitefield was a Calvinist in doctrine, so that from Whitefield's teaching sprang what was known as the Calvinistic Methodists. Whitefield preached in Boston in 1740, under which there was a revival in the city. Some of the members of this Baptist Church were favorable to the revival, and it appears that they took some part in it. This resulted in a division in that church, and the exclusion of those who were favorable to the revival. About a year after this those who were favorable to the revival, and who were formerly members of this Baptist Church, came together and formed themselves into a church and called it a Separate Baptist Church. This church was organized in 1742. See Backus' History, page 177. In 1743 Ephriam Bound was ordained their pastor. "Philip Freeman, member of a Baptist Church in London, came over to Boston, and joined that new church; who sent an account of their principles and conduct to Dr. John Gill, which obtained his approbation, and a considerable present was sent them from London." -Backus, Vol. 2, page 53. From this time those who were opposed to the Whitefield revival began to be called Regular Baptists, and the others were called Separate Baptists. The Regulars and Separates continued to preach in different parts of the country and to organize churches. They had no dealings with each other. Preachers went out from both the Regulars and Separates into the Virginias and the Carolinas, preaching and organizing churches. Remember, too, please, that these Separates originated from this church in Boston which had a man ordained to the ministry by three Congregational ministers-ministers who engaged in and recognized infant baptism, or infant sprinkling, if we are not mistaken, as they sprang from the Presbyterians. At any rate, they evidently practiced sprinkling or pouring for baptism. As to their practicing infant baptism, see Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia, Vol. 1, page 538. As to their springing from the Presbyterians, see Encyclopedia Britannica. At the close of the seventeenth century there were sixteen Baptist Churches in the United States, or the territory now called the United States. See Hassell, page 525. All those churches recognized and affiliated with the church at Boston. Did they all lose their identity as Baptist Churches, on account of affiliating with the Boston Church? Did they all get into such gross disorder that they could not administer gospel baptism? If what was done back there would not cause them to all be in such disorder that they could not administer valid baptism, would it have that result now? If such would destroy identity now, it would have done so then. If it did destroy identity then, it follows that the Primitive Baptists, nor any other Baptists, can administer valid baptism now; and if that be so, then no one now has valid baptism. Then, why are you so strenuous now about baptism-seeing you do not have it, according to your own contention? Remember that we are not arguing that Baptists now should practice what the Baptist Church in Boston did. What we are calling attention to this for is simply to show that a disorderly act does not invalidate baptism. If it would do so now, it would have done so then. If it did invalidate baptism then, none of us have it now. No matter which horn of the dilemma you take, you cannot "get anywhere." The Kehukee Association was formed in 1765. Some of the churches were constituted on the General Baptist order, many of them holding to the doctrine of a general atonement-springing from the General Baptists of England. Those churches of the General Baptist order had been formed previous to 1765. In 1755 many of those churches were reformed in doctrine through the ministry of Elders Vanhorn and Miller. Then in 1765 they formed the Kehukee Association, composed of seven churches of the Regular Baptist order. But many of them engaged in the disorderly practice of immersing people who were unregenerate. They would immerse any who were willing to be immersed, whether they were professors of religion or not. Some years after the formation of the Kehukee Association they made a proposition to the separate Baptist Churches for a union. "The Separates objected to the Regular or Kehukee Baptists in the following particulars:

1. Because they did not require strictly from those who applied for baptism an experience of grace.
2. Because they held members in their churches who acknowledged they were baptized before conversion.
3. Because they indulged too much in superfluity of apparel. There were other objections of minor importance. The most forcible objection of all appeared to be the retention of members who had been baptized in unbelief; and this was admitted on the part of the Regulars to be wrong; on which account several of their churches sought to correct it, by requiring all such of their members to be baptized." -Hassell, pages 697, 698. This caused a division in the association in 1775, which continued until 1777. Take note that the historian says that some, or several, of their churches sought to correct the matter. He does not say that all of them did. From this statement it is very evident that some of them did not attempt to correct the matter. If not, then some of them retained persons as members who had been immersed without being first regenerated. If gospel baptism, in order that it be valid, requires a gospel subject-one who has been born again-then they had members without valid, or gospel, baptism. How do you know but what some of those persons were afterward ordained to the ministry and immersed great numbers of people? And how do you know but what your baptism came through that very channel? Have you got gospel, or valid, baptism, anyway? Can you prove that you have? If so, how? In 1777 ten churches came together in union as the Kehukee Association of United Baptists. Six of those churches were Regular Baptist Churches and four were Separates. See Hassell, page 698; Burkett and Reed's Church History, pages 48-51. Remember that the Separate Baptists started from an excluded faction in Boston, who took part in the Whitefield revival. Did that union of two factions-the Separates and Regulars- put the whole thing in disorder? Did it destroy their church authority, so that they could not administer valid baptism? If such a union of factions would destroy identity now, or put both the uniting parties in such disorder that they could not administer valid baptism, would it not do the same thing then? If not, why not? Do principles ever change? If such a union then did not destroy their right and authority to administer valid baptism, how could it do so now? On pages 302 and 303 of Semple's History of Virginia Baptists we find the following: In 1791 a case was brought before the association (the Ketocton) which produced considerable agitation. James Hutchinson who was born in New Jersey, but raised in Loudon County, Virginia, had gone to Georgia, and there first became a Methodist and then a Baptist preacher. Previous to his joining the Baptists he had been baptized by a Methodist preacher. When he offered to join the Baptists of Georgia it was made a question whether his baptism, being performed by an unbaptized person, was valid. The Georgia Baptists decided that it was valid. In the year above mentioned Mr. Hutchinson came to Virginia to see his relations in Loudon County. While he was there his preaching became effectual to the conversion of many. Mr. Hutchinson baptized them. These things stirred up the question in the Ketocton Association whether the baptism of Hutchinson and his new disciples was valid. The decision here was just the reverse of the decision in Georgia. They determined not to receive either him or those baptized by him, unless they would submit to be re-baptized. After some time they consented, and the ordinance was re-administered. Their proceeding on this occasion was more strict than that of any other association upon the same subject. The question has been before most of the associations at one time or other, and in every other instance they either deemed it unnecessary to re-baptize or left it to the conscience of the party to be re-baptized or not. Here we have the information that this preacher, James Hutchinson, was received by the Baptists in Georgia on his baptism administered by a Methodist preacher. How many persons he baptized in Georgia for the Baptists we do not know. But he returned to Virginia and preached and baptized in the bounds of the Ketocton Association, and the Ketocton would not receive him or his baptism; but the historian informs us that the action of the Ketocton was different from the action of any other association in the state. All the others deemed it unnecessary to re-baptize, or else left it to the individual. Evidently it was the common practice to receive members from other denominations without administering baptism. Now, if this common practice in those days would invalidate their work which might follow, then will you please tell us who has valid baptism now? Remember that we are not arguing or contending that persons should be received from other denominations without being baptized by our people; but we are simply producing these historical facts to clearly show that if disorder in the church, or churches, makes baptism invalid when administered by them, then it necessarily follows that there is no such thing as valid baptism in existence today. No sort of arguments will remove these historical facts. As Baptists, we are all, throughout the entire South and Southwest, descendants of those Virginia and Georgia Baptists. We all have to go back through that line to tie on to the Baptist line in the settlement of this country. Time will not remove the difficulty-but only makes it the worse-for none can now go back behind all that and correct the matter. It has already been done, and cannot be undone. Now, will you "Simon-pure" brethren, who refuse to accept the work of your brethren, please tell us how pure your baptism is? Which is black-the pot or the kettle? If the validity of baptism rests in the person administering the ordinance, and requires that no disorder be in the line, then there is no such thing as valid baptism. The validity of baptism does not rest in the person administering the ordinance, but rests in the church authorizing it. It is the church that does the work, and the person who administers the ordinance is only the agent of the church-is the one through whom the church does the work. It may be done in an irregular way, but irregularity does not invalidate the thing done. A thing may be valid, yet done in an irregular way. The regular way for baptism to be administered is by one who has been set apart by authority of the true church to administer her ordinances. Baptism might be administered by an impostor. Of course, if baptism is administered by such a one, the church would be ignorant of the fact that he is an impostor. But ignorance concerning a matter does not make a good thing of a bad thing. If a thing is not done right, ignorance would not make it right. Hence, if there has been an impostor in the line through which your baptism has been handed down, and if baptism administered by an impostor is not valid, then your baptism is not valid. We all know that there have been impostors in the church and among the ministry all along the line. Such positions concerning the validity of baptism is to simply argue that there is no valid baptism today. May the good Lord help us all to search for the truth, and help us to have the courage to stand upon the same, is our humble prayer. C. H. C.

The Progressives

---February 12, 1931

In The Primitive Baptist of January 8 we had an article concerning a proposed meeting with the Progressives to kindly discuss the differences between them and our people, to see if terms of agreement might be reached for a union. We asked our people to write us and say whether they would favor such a meeting, or if they are opposed to it. We did not ask for a long letter from any containing reasons for being opposed to it or for favoring it. In that article we very plainly said: We want to say, frankly, that we are no more in favor of the use of organs in Old Baptist Churches, or of affiliating with secret orders, or any other progressive measure or departure from the principles which our fathers have stood for in all the ages past, than we were when the trouble came up with the Progressives. We stand now upon the same principles we have stood upon for more than forty years-ever since we have had a name with the Primitive Baptists. Notwithstanding this plain statement some brethren have taken it upon themselves to write us a long letter as though we had written something that sounded like we were in favor of taking in all the new measures the Progressives have or have had. This has only taken our time unnecessarily-to read those long letters telling of the new things the Progressives introduced, and why you could not fellowship this thing or that thing. Nobody asked if you could fellowship this or that measure, and we had plainly stated that we have no use for the new measures. We cannot understand why some brethren will be so forgetful and thus put a lot of unnecessary work on us, and write as though we were trying to get our people to accept some new things that are foreign to the teachings of the Scriptures. Now, when you read this do not write us a long apology, for we are not hurt with you, and it is not necessary to send us a lot more writing that is not necessary to take our time to read. We want you to write us everything it is necessary and beneficial for us to have, but we are overworked already without having unnecessary things to do. We are willing to do everything necessary to be done; and we are willing to do everything our brethren think is necessary to be done, even though it is not really necessary, so far as we are able. But if all would first ask, "Is this really necessary?" they might save themselves and others some time and labor. Do let us try to be considerate. Now, in regard to the meeting. Quite a number have written that they are in favor of having a meeting with the Progressives to discuss the matters of differences in a friendly way. Quite a number have written that they are opposed to such a meeting. Some have assigned their reasons, and some have not. No matter about what their reasons are; this is the way the matter stands. We have had enough to satisfy us that our brethren are not yet in a condition for us to make any effort toward reconciliation with the Progressives. If an effort for reconciliation with them will bring trouble in our own ranks, the only thing to do is to let the matter alone. Not only is this true, but we have heard some from the Progressives, too. Now, some of the Progressive brethren may be ready to lay aside the things that caused the trouble and the division; but it is evident that some of them are not. If any of the Progressive brethren are ready to abandon those things, and want to get in line with our people, no doubt they can do so without the proposed meeting. It is useless to talk about a union with our people unless those things are dispensed with. It seems that the main things that are in the way are musical instruments in the churches, affiliation with secret orders, protracted meetings, Sunday schools, and some societies. These things are all comparatively new among the Baptists, and our people would not be willing to consider a union with those brethren unless these things are abandoned. We would be glad to see all true Primitive Baptists together, but we are not willing to depart from what is recognized as Baptist principles and practice. Let us all lay aside our prejudices and try to labor for the things that make for peace. C. H. C.

Should Forgive

---March 5, 1931

We have been requested to give our views on (Matthew 18:21-22), and (Luke 17:3-4). The citation in Matthew reads thus: Then came Peter to Him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times, but, Until seventy times seven. The citation in Luke reads thus: Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him. It seems to us that these expressions from our Saviour are so plain that they need no explanation. That the

Saviour here teaches His disciples that they are under obligation to forgive each other their trespasses there can be no question. He does not simply teach that they should forgive one trespass, but He teaches that there should be no end to it. Seven in Scripture is generally considered to be a full and complete number. The disciple of Christ is required to forgive, not only seven times, but seventy times seven. There is no end to the matter. In Luke it is plainly taught that the follower of the Lord should forgive seven times in a day-and that means seven times in every day. There is, again, no end to it. Forgiveness is needed all along through the journey of life. It is needed every day. A trespass, however, is one thing and an offense is another thing. A brother may trespass without bringing shame and disgrace on the cause. Therefore, trespasses should be forgiven. When a brother is guilty of committing an offense, he is guilty of a crime which brings shame and disgrace upon the whole church, and upon the cause of the Master. No matter how great one may be considered to be, and no matter how highly he may be esteemed in the church, and no matter how useful he may have been in and to the church, if he commits an offense which brings shame and disgrace upon the church, he should be dealt with. For example, if one is guilty of public drunkenness, swearing, or such like offenses, the church should deal with him. To continue to retain such persons in fellowship as members of the church, is to say to the world that the church condones, favors and harbors such crimes by her members. This brings shame and disgrace upon the church, and brings the church into disrepute. Such things should not be countenanced by the church to any degree. The parties guilty of such should be dealt with just as soon as the church is informed of such conduct. But a brother may trespass against another, or against some rule of the church, and yet not be guilty of a crime that brings disgrace upon the church. For example, when a person unites with the church he thereby subscribes to the covenant and agrees to be governed by the rules of the church. In the rules the members agree to meet together for the public worship and service of God. A brother may neglect that meeting, and thereby transgress, and he thereby becomes guilty of a trespass. If the brother is given to see the error of his way and confesses his wrong, he should be forgiven. We are instructed that "if thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him." If a brother trespasses against us, and we fail to do what the Saviour instructs here, then we have become a transgressor, just as much so as the brother who was guilty of the trespass. If we become guilty ourselves, do we not need to be forgiven, as well as the brother who has trespassed? Then, how does it become us to refuse to forgive? We are taught in the above passages to forgive continually if the trespassing brother repents; that is, if he turns from his wrong and asks forgiveness, as is expressed in (Luke 17:3-4). It is not so expressly stated in (Matthew 18:21-22); but here we are told to forgive until seventy times seven. In ((2) (Colossians 3:12-13)), we have this language: Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; forbearing one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. The word quarrel in this text means a complaint. If you have a complaint against a brother, you are commanded by the inspired apostle to put on bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering; forbearance. If everything was always just as you would like to have it in the church, or elsewhere, there would be no place for you to exercise or to use forbearance. There would be nothing for you to bear with. It is true that the church should not bear with everything. As stated before, they should not bear with things that bring shame and disgrace on the cause. But we should bear with each other's weaknesses, our thoughtlessness, our neglect of the many things which it would be better for us to attend to. Instead of trying to destroy our brother who has made some mistake, and perhaps has neglected some things we think he should have attended to, let us try to help him along to a better way of living. Let us try to encourage him to a more diligent discharge of his duty. Perhaps, after all, he has not done any worse than we have. Suppose the Saviour had never forgiven us until we asked Him to, or until we had repented. Do you think you would have ever been forgiven? What did you do to get the Lord to forgive your many and grievous sins? "Even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye." How about it-do you do that way? Lord, help us to forgive our erring brethren. C. H. C.

General Meeting

---March 12, 1931

For some little time now some of the brethren in Texas have been talking and writing about having a general state meeting of the brethren. Waco has been talked of as a place for such a meeting. That city is near the center of the state, and would be a convenient place, so it seems to us. About the fifth Sunday in May has been suggested as a suitable time for holding such a meeting. We understand the object of the meeting is, first, to worship and serve the Lord; to sing and pray and preach together-to preach the truth as our people have done in the ages past, for the comfort and benefit of the Lord's dear children. Another object would be, as we understand, to try to further the work of peace among our poor and afflicted people-not to try to forsake any principle of right and truth; not to try to see how far apart any of us are, but to try to see how near we are together. If such a meeting is conducted in the right way, and all go there with prayerful hearts, it might result in great good to our bleeding cause. It is a great pity that all our people who are agreed on the great fundamental principles of the gospel are not together. Great forbearance is needed in these dark and distressing and strenuous times. May the Lord help us all to exercise forbearance and strive for the peace of Jerusalem. C. H. C.

Valid Baptism

---March 12, 1931

If we have been rightly informed, and if we are not mistaken, some years ago there was a preacher by the name of Thomas who was excluded from the church in some of the eastern states. We think it was in Tennessee that he was excluded. He went to Texas and joined an Old Baptist Church out there on a forged letter. Later it was found out that his letter was forged. He baptized quite a number of people, we understand. This caused a considerable stir among the churches. Some of the churches had those persons baptized again who had been baptized by Thomas. Some of the churches refused to have persons baptized again who had been baptized by Thomas. Still more stir was caused by this. The churches called for a council to consider the matter. The council said that the baptisms administered by Thomas were valid because administered by gospel and orderly churches. Thus the matter was settled. Now, if we have not been rightly informed, and if we have not correctly stated the facts, will someone who knows the facts, please tell us what the facts are, and cite us to the records? Now, if the foregoing are facts, will some of the brethren in Texas who are so particular about orderly and valid baptism please tell us if they are in line with the baptism administered by this preacher, Elder Thomas, who was excluded from the church? According to the contention of some, baptism administered by Thomas was no good, because he was excluded. Are you not in line with the baptism administered by this excluded preacher? Are you not in line with churches that have baptism, or did have baptism, administered by him-and that work retained by them? Are those churches in disorder because they retained that baptism? If so, and you are in line with them, are you in order? Please answer these questions kindly. No use to get mad and out of humor because we ask about these facts. Which is the blackest, the pot or kettle? Let us be careful not to contend for something that will unchurch ourselves. Let us be consistent. C. H. C.

Why Not Save All?

---March 19, 1931

A few months ago we received the following: Dear Elder Cayce: I have just finished reading, for the second time, the Cayce-Srygley discussion, and fail to find the answer to this question: If God saves without conditions on the part of the sinner, why is not everybody saved? Why does He save a few and not save all? I can't possibly see, for my life, how He could save a few and send the balance to hell and be a just God. It looks like partiality to me. I know I am ignorant and very unlearned and don't understand the Scriptures; but the plan of salvation looks so simple to me; for, if we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. I don't believe that we can do any good thing that will save us; but it looks to me like we've got to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and He will save us and forgive us our sins. If you have time to answer the questions at issue I would appreciate it. I've asked several Primitive Baptists this question, and haven't yet found one able to answer it. Yours in humble hope, E. C. Ward. Pine Valley, Miss.

OUR REPLY

For the satisfaction of Friend Ward we will try to offer a few remarks and comment a little on the foregoing letter. It seems to be a puzzle to the writer as to why God would save some of the race and not save all the race. The question asked would imply that God is under obligation to the sinner to do something for him. If God is under obligation to the sinner to do something for him, then God could not justly condemn the sinner without first doing that something. This would necessarily say that the condemnation of the sinner is not just. If the condemnation of the sinner is not just, then the salvation of the sinner is not a matter of grace-is not by grace. That simply denies that salvation from sin is by grace. It is not a wonder to us why God does not save all the race, but the wonder to us is that He saves any of the race. Friend Ward says it looks to him like "we've got to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and He will save us." How can those people believe on the Lord Jesus Christ who have never heard about Him? If people have to believe on Jesus in order to be saved, then it would be impossible for one to be saved who has never heard about Him. This would condemn to eternal perdition every person who has ever lived and died, or who ever will live and die, without hearing about Jesus. If those who have never heard about Jesus can be saved without believing on Him, then a person does not have to believe on Him in order to be saved. Anything which must be performed, or complied with, as a condition in order to be saved must be absolute, universal, and without exception. That is, if a certain thing must be done by one person in order to his salvation, then that thing must be done by any and every other person in order that they be saved. If a thing is necessary to be done by one person in order that he be saved, then no person can be saved without doing that thing. Hence, if one person of the human race must believe on Jesus in order that he be saved, then no person of the human race can be saved without first believing on Jesus. This would not only lose in eternal torment all who live and die without hearing about Jesus, but it would also inevitably exclude all infants from salvation who die in infancy, because they are not capable of believing on Jesus. Friend Ward says, "I don't believe that we can do anything good that will save us; but it looks to me like we've got to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and He will save us." Is believing on the Lord Jesus Christ doing something good? It is either good or bad. If it is doing bad, and the Lord will not save one unless he believes, then he must do something bad in order to be saved. If believing on the Lord is doing something good, and the Lord will not save one unless he first believes, then we must do something good in order to be saved; and if we can believe on the Lord before He saves us, and believing on Him is doing something good, then we can do something good in order to be saved. But if we must believe on the Lord in order to be saved, and believing on Him is doing something good, and we cannot do anything good in order to be saved, then no one can believe on the Lord in order to be saved. Friend Ward has contradicted himself, and is in a dilemma from which he cannot extricate himself. Every person who says that one must believe on the Lord in order to be saved gets into the same dilemma. If God could not remain just and save some of the race without saving all the race, then He could not be just and allow any of the race to perish. This would imply that God is under obligation to all the race, and would deny that the condemnation of any of the race is just. It would deny that God's law is just-and all are transgressors. All the world are guilty before God. {(Romans 3:19)} All, both Jews and Gentiles, are under sin. {(Romans 3:9)} The law is holy, and just, and good. {((2) (Romans 7:12))} As all are sinners, and the law is just, then all are justly condemned. As all are justly condemned, then God is not under obligation to do anything for any one of the race. As He is not under obligation to do anything for any one of the race, then He may save one or more of the race and not save another, and still His justice remains untarnished. If He could not do this, then the condemnation of the sinner is not just; and if the condemnation of the sinner is not just, then God's law is not just. If God's law is not just, then no one could be justly condemned on account of sin. If God saves one sinner by His mercy and grace, and does not save you, then will you say that God is not just because He does not save you also? Will you say that God is under obligation to save you, because He saves another? Will you deny that you are a justly condemned sinner? If so, then you deny that you are a sinner. If you admit that you are a sinner, a transgressor of God's just law, then you must admit that your condemnation is just. If your condemnation is just, then God is not under obligation to save you because He saves another. If He is under obligation to save you because he saves another, then He would be under obligation to save all the race if He saved one of the race. That being true, in order that He remain just, He must either save all the race or else allow all the race to be lost in hell. But God is just, and is under no obligation to save any. Hence, His justice is not tarnished if He saves some and does not save all. Instead of His justice being tarnished thereby, the fact that He does save some only manifests His mercy and makes His grace shine with effulgent glory. No unregenerate sinner ever Scripturally believes on the Lord. Those who truly believe on Him have already been born of God. "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." -(John 1:11-13). In this text "were born" is in the past tense- something that was done, completed, finished, at some time in the past. "Believe" is in the present tense- something in the present time. They were born of God first, and then believe as a result. There is not a man in all the world who can take this text and apply the rules of language to it and make it appear that belief preceded being born of God. If any man will do so, we will leave the Old Baptists and join his church. No man can make it appear that a thing existing in the present was necessary in order that a thing be accomplished or done in the past. The past is first, and the present follows after. They were born of God, in the past, and they believe in the present, after they were born in the time past. Hence, those who believe were born of God before they believed. This being true, it cannot be true that one must believe in order to be born of God; but it is true that one must be born of God in order to truly believe on the Lord. The Ephesians did not believe on the Lord in order to be saved. They did not do anything good in order to be saved. If one now must believe in order to be saved, then the Ephesians had to believe in order to be saved. Whatever the Ephesians had to do in order to be saved, that is what one will have to do now in order to be saved. If the Ephesians had to do something in order to be saved (believe, or any other condition), if we can find what they were doing when they were saved, then we will have found what they had to do in order to be saved, and we will also have found what every other person must do in order to be saved. What were they doing? Let us read (Ephesians 2:1-2,3), and see: And you hath He quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. Were they believing? What were they doing? They were walking according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air; they were having their conversation in the lusts of the flesh; they were fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; they were by nature the children of wrath. When were they doing these things? All the time prior to the time that the Lord saved them. Did they have to do those things in order that the Lord save them? If not, then they did not have anything to do (not even believe) in order that the Lord save them; for those were the things they were doing all the time until the Lord saved them. But why did the Lord save them? Let us read (Ephesians 2:4-7) and see: But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come He might shew the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus. Again, we ask, Why did the Lord save them? Because He loved them-" for His great love wherewith He loved us." That is the reason why, and not because they believed. The final end of it all is that "in the ages to come He might shew the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." His mercy and grace in the salvation of poor, lost, ruined, hell-deserving sinners will shine with effulgent glory in all the ages of eternity. Praise be to His holy and matchless name for such unspeakable love, mercy and grace. C. H. C.

Valley Of Dry Bones

---April 30, 1931

By request I will write my views on the "valley of dry bones." And should my views be different to yours will you please remember that I am willing to admit I might be wrong. Let that be as it may, it is my views that is asked for and not yours. As I see it, preaching is connected with these dry bones living. The hand of the Lord was upon the Prophet Ezekiel and carried him out "in the Spirit of the Lord, and set him down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones." The Lord caused the prophet to pass by them "round about," and he was asked the question, "Son of man, can these bones live?" Notice his answer: "O, Lord God, thou knowest." These dry bones did not then, and do not now, represent or refer to dead, alien sinners, but to the children of God who are living after the flesh, or have been. The Lord told the prophet to "Prophecy upon these bones, and say unto them, O, ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord." Paul said, "We are laborers together with God." Please notice that the Lord told Ezekiel to say to the dry bones to "hear the word of the Lord." I will quote (verse five) to prove that after the Lord told the prophet to tell these dry bones to hear the word of the Lord, that the Lord Himself spoke to these dry bones, "Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live." It is the Lord's work in the hearts of His disobedient children that causes the gospel to be a savour of life unto life. "And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the Lord." Here is the utility of the gospel ministry, as shown in the next verse. "So I prophesied (preached) as I was commanded; and, as I prophesied, there was a noise, and, behold, a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. Then said He unto me, Prophecy unto the wind, prophecy, son of man, and say to the wind, thus saith the Lord God, Come from the four winds, O, breath and breathe upon these slain, that they may live. So I prophesied as He commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood upon their feet, an exceeding great army. Then He said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel; behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts." Preaching did not have one thing to do in making these bones the whole house of Israel, but it did have something to do with these bones coming together and these "slain, that they may live." The valley of dry bones are the whole house of Israel, though they were not together, but when the prophet began to tell them as he was commanded, there was a noise, and, behold, a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. This is what occurred a few years ago right here in Texas, when stout-hearted and rebellious Israel met at Dallas, Texas. There was a noise heard and a shaking took place. The apples of discord were shaken off and we were all together before we hardly knew it. "And the bones came together, bone to his bone." Take the one stick, and write upon it, for Judah.'Take another stick, and write upon it, for Joseph." Judah was Jacob's son by Leah while Joseph was Jacob's son by Rachel. These were the two bones, families, the whole house of Israel, though divided against each other. The Lord told the prophet to "join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand." This very thing being done is why we are called the "consolidated Baptists." Neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."-(2) (Verse 22). The different tribes of Israel did not lose their identity as Israelites because they were divided against each other. And the different groups of our people have not lost their identity as churches just because they are divided against each other. The tribe of Benjamin was a small tribe, yet it was one of the twelve tribes of Israel and had the same right to function as the other tribes of Israel did. The nations surrounding Israel had no right to function for the Israelites, any more than the Arminian world has a right to do work for us. I am unwilling to look upon the different groups of our people as I do the different Arminian orders. I would love to see our people unite their forces, ground their arms, quit devouring each other and build up the waste places in Zion. Who will join with us in this much needed work? J. S. N. We have been requested to give our views on "The Valley of Dry Bones." The above expresses our views. We do not see where we can improve it any. C. H. C.

Glad Tidings Bought

---May 21, 1931

We have just closed a deal with Elder J. H. Fisher whereby we have bought the subscription list and accounts of the Glad Tidings. All the Glad Tidings subscribers will receive The Primitive Baptist. It will take us some time to go over the list of names on the Glad Tidings list to compare with the list we already had. Some of you may get two copies of the paper until we get all straightened out, but you will not be charged for two papers. That is, if you were taking both papers you may get two copies of The Primitive Baptist for awhile, until we get the two lists combined in one. There may be some families where both papers have been going, one in one name and the other paper in another name. If you get two papers that way, please write us about it and explain the matter as soon as you can, so you may help us get all things straight as they should be. As soon as we can we will send a letter to each subscriber to the Glad Tidings and tell you how we find your subscription marked on the book. Brother Fisher admits there may be mistakes. He agrees with us that we should make any correction the subscriber thinks is right. Each subscriber on the Glad Tidings list will be given full credit on our books for the whole time paid to. What we mean is this: If you are paid a year ahead on the Glad Tidings, we will give you credit for the full year on The Primitive Baptist. If you are behind and owe the Glad Tidings anything, it is coming to us. You can send your remittance to us and be sure to tell us what it is for, so we can find the account and give you proper credit. If you prefer, it will be all right with us for you to send your remittance to Brother Fisher. He will report it to us. We believe it is best for the cause for the two papers to be consolidated. The Glad Tidings subscribers will get a weekly paper now, as The Primitive Baptist is published weekly. Let us all do what we can now for this paper and try to make it a blessing to the cause, and not have our interests divided. Let us all try to work together for the advancement of the blessed cause. We have added the name of Brother Fisher to our editorial staff. We trust he will make use of our columns and that he may be led to write for the comfort and benefit of all our readers. Brother Fisher has sent us some obituaries and other articles he had on hand which we will publish as soon as we can possibly get to them. If any of the Glad Tidings subscribers have missed any copies of the paper, write to Brother Fisher, and he will send you the copies you missed. If he cannot supply them, let us know and we will mark up your time on The Primitive Baptist to make good all copies you have missed. We trust that this consolidation will be for the good of our blessed cause. How many of you will write and tell us you are going to do what you can to help us extend the circulation of the paper and help to make it a blessing to the cause? C. H. C.

Bible Conference

---July 23, 1931

We see in the Banner Herald, the Progressive organ, that they are to hold their "Bible Conference" in Jacksonville, Fla., August 25, 26 and 27, and that Elder J. B. Hardy, of Perryton, Texas, is on the program for an address at 3 p. m. on the 26th. We also see a short article in the same paper from Elder Hardy that he has held a meeting at Childress, Texas, beginning on Friday before the fifth Sunday in May, and that ten ministers attended the meeting, and that there were nine additions. C. H. C.

Elder T. S. Dalton Called Home

---August 20, 1931

In the Advocate and Messenger for August, 1931, we find the sad news that Elder T. S. Dalton has been called to his eternal home. He passed away suddenly on July 30, 1931. He was eighty-five years old June 3. Brother Dalton lived and labored years ago in West Tennessee, Texas and Illinois. No doubt many-or at least some-of our readers in these sections will remember his work in the ministry, and his able defense of the doctrine of grace in discussion with those who opposed the truth. From the Advocate and Messenger we copy the following: As this issue of the Advocate and Messenger goes to press the sad news comes of the sudden death of Brother Dalton, who, on June 3, was eighty-five years old. He died suddenly about 5 a. m. today-July 30. Just a few days ago the editor received from him two excellent editorials, both of which appear in this issue. God blessed him with a strong mind and warm heart until the last-filling his preaching appointments and attending to other religious duties until he heard the summons, "Child, your Father calls, come home." Many hearts will be saddened by Brother Dalton's going. He was my dear friend-I shall miss him so much. Our editorial staff not long since suffered the loss of Elder Hassell. Now Brother Dalton has laid down his pen. Let us pray that God will give us others like them. And pray for his dear devoted wife and children in this time of deep sorrow. An extended notice will appear later. -Editor. Brother Dalton was an able minister of the gospel and will be greatly missed. May the Lord give us more such men. And may His richest blessings rest upon his dear companion and children in this sad hour of distress, is our humble prayer. Most of our old preachers-those who were in the service when we began trying to speak in the name of the Master forty-one years ago-are gone. They have been called from the field of battle and service here below to their long eternal home. Not many more struggles here, and we trust we shall meet them in a better home beyond the dark river. Elder J. H. Phillips Dead

---October 15, 1931

Elder J. H. Phillips passed away on the evening of October 4 at the home of his daughter, Sister Nora Rhodes, near Huron, Tenn. He had been in failing health for some time. We know this is sad news to many of our readers, as it was to us. We had known Brother Phillips from boyhood, and he was our bosom companion in our early ministerial life. We were as brothers, and were brothers. He served many years on our editorial staff. We could not help shedding some tears of sorrow at the news of his going away. He was faithful and true to the cause of the Master-he "was true as steel." He never betrayed a trust. As a man there are none better than Jim Phillips was, and but few equal. His life was honorable and above reproach. In all his life as a servant of God he never brought a single ripple or wave of trouble, yet he was faithful and true and firm for the principles of truth and righteousness. He suffered much privation and toil for the cause we love, and endured much physical suffering for many years. But his sufferings are over now. We grieve for him as for a true and faithful and devoted brother and friend. We loved him more than we can tell. His children have our deepest sympathy. May the good Lord bless them, is our humble prayer. The churches and brethren whom he
